ALPHA.—The mate is a curious one. It is surprising that your leaving the Rook alone did not excite the adversary's suspicion.

DR F ST (Blandford-square).—All the problems, as many as you choose to send, shall be examined.

J T (Chipping Campden).—The term "dual" is applied where White has a choice of moves in reply to any move of Black's in the solution of a problem. In the perfect chess problem White's moves in every variation of the solution is determinate; but there are few perfect problems.

A HINDOO YOUTH (Calcutta).—Your solutions of Nos. 1900, 1901, and 1902 are correct. We have forwarded your proposed improvement of Problem No. 1897 to the author.

C W (Aden Camp).—We are pleased to hear from you again. The problem shall appear next week.

VA (U.S.).—Your solutions of Nos. 1904 and 1905 are correct.

B R F (St. Louis).—Thanks for your paper. We should be glad to receive it occasionally.

J E W (Dewsbury).—Cook's Synopsis of the openings should suit you. Apply to W. Morgan, 28, Great Queen-street, London. We do not know the price.

N M (Cork).—The problem is marked for insertion.

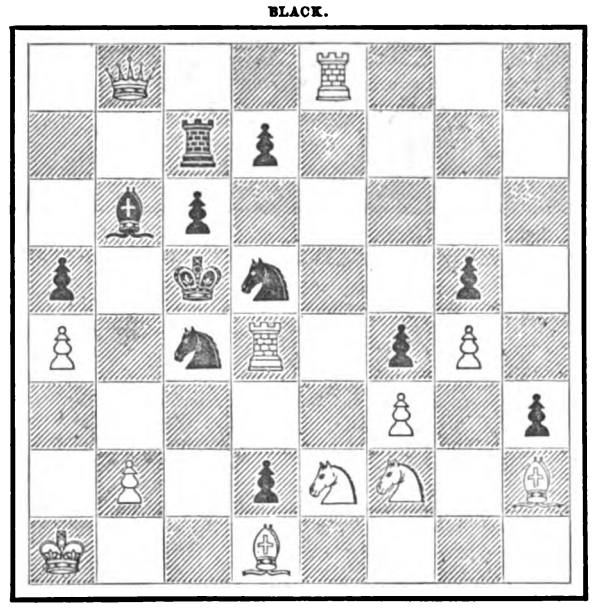
A C E (Regent's Park).—The problem referred to was sent to us from an independent source. Look at No. 1908 again.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1906 received from A Chapman, C E, Emile Frau, M H Moorhouse, James Atkinson, Julia Short, F E Purchas, and G C Baxter.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1907 received from Emile Frau, Ozokerine, James Atkinson, John Tucker, F E Purchas, and G C Baxter.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1908 received from H B, Hereward, A C, Lulu, C Southall, East Marden, Shadforth, B Pierce, J Nepven, Agostino Bozzini, C Oswald, D Templeton, D W Kell, C Darragh, A Kentish Man, An Old Hand, Nerina, L Sharswood, E Sharswood, H Blacklock, Jupiter Junior, N Warner, H Langford, E Elsbury, P Richmond, R Gray, E L G, E P Vulliamy, J Simpson (Edinburgh), G L Mayne, Norman Rumbelow, W Biddle, Franklin Institute, M O'Halloran, E F (Winchester), W D Jones, Ben Nevis, R Ingersoll, W M Curtis, Elsie, Julia Short, James Dobson, Smutch, Queen of Connaught, H Brewster, B L Dyke, A R, M H Moorhouse, J W W, Beatrice, E Louden, Ch Pompé, A W Hale, Dr F St, W P Welch, J Glossop, R Grey, H Barrett, S Farrant, G Fosbrooke, F E Purchas, and G C Baxter.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 1907.



WHITE.	BLACK.
1. R to B 8th	Kt takes B
2. B to B 5th (ch)	K to Q 5th
3. Kt to R 5th	Any move
4. Kt mates

The foregoing is the author's solution; but the problem can be solved in three moves.

PROBLEM No. 1910.

By H. E. KIDSON.

BLACK.

WHITE.

White to play, and mate in two moves.

One of six Games played by Mr. WISKER, simultaneously, and sans voir, at the Melbourne Chess Club.

(Fianchetto.)

WHITE (Mr. Wisker.)	BLACK (Mr. Simpson).
1. P to K 4th	P to K Kt 3rd
2. P to Q 4th	P to Q 4th
3. P takes Q P	Q takes P
This sort of compromise between the open and the close game was probably adopted to trouble the blindfolded player.
4. Kt to Q B 3rd	Q to Q R 4th
5. Kt to K B 3rd	B to Kt 2nd
6. B to K 2nd	P to Q B 3rd
7. Castles	Kt to K B 3rd
8. B to K 3rd	B to B 4th
9. Kt to K 5th	P to K R 4th
10. P to K B 4th	Q to B 2nd
11. B to B 3rd	Kt to R 3rd
12. P to Q R 3rd	P to K 3rd
13. P to Q Kt 4th	Kt to Q 4th
14. Kt takes Kt	B P takes Kt
15. Q R to B sq	Q to B 6th
16. Q to K 2nd	Kt to B 2nd
If he had taken the Q R P, White would have continued with 17. Q to Kt 5th (ch), &c.
17. Q R to R sq	B takes Kt
18. B P takes B	R to Q B sq
19. K R to B sq	P to Q R 3rd
20. Q to Q 2nd	Kt to Kt 4th
21. Q takes Q	R takes Q
22. P to Q R 4th
Black's careful defence gives White a very small chance of obtaining an advantage by this sort of manœuvre.
22.	Kt to R 2nd
Correctly played; if 22. R takes B, then then follows 23. P takes Kt, and White soon gets a passed Pawn.
23. K to B 2nd	K to Q 2nd
24. R to R 2nd	K R to Q B sq
25. B to Q sq	K to K 2nd
26. B to Q 2nd	Q R to B 5th
27. P to Q B 3rd	P to K B 3rd
28. B to K 2nd	Q R to B 2nd
29. P takes P (ch)	K takes P
30. B to B 3rd	Kt to B 3rd
31. R to K sq	B to Q 6th
32. R to K 3rd	B to B 5th
33. R to R sq	R to K B 2nd
34. Q R to K sq	R to K sq
35. B takes Q P
An oversight, which loses the game out of hand. He probably anticipated 35. P takes B, when he would have continued with 36. R to B 3rd (ch), and 37. R takes R.
35.	B takes B
36. P to Q Kt 5th	Kt to R 4th.
White resigned.

A Game played in the West of Scotland Challenge Cup Tourney between Messrs. CRUM and JENKIN, of Glasgow. The notes appended are by Mr. Jenkin.

(Queen's Gambit.)

WHITE (Mr. C.)	BLACK (Mr. J.)
1. P to Q 4th	P to Q 4th
2. P to Q B 4th	P takes P
3. P to K 3rd	P to K 3rd
The best move is 3. P to K 4th.
4. B takes P	Kt to K B 3rd
5. P to Q R 3rd	B to Q 3rd
6. Kt to Q B 3rd	P to Q B 3rd
7. Kt to K B 3rd	Castles.
8. Castles.	Q Kt to Q 2nd
9. Q to Q B 2nd	Kt to Q Kt 3rd
10. B to Q 3rd	Q Kt to Q 4th
This is bad, and ought to have lost the game. In P to K R 3rd is the right move.
11. P to K 4th	Kt takes Kt
12. P takes Kt	B to K 2nd
13. P to K 5th	Kt to K sq
14. B takes R P (ch)	K to R sq
15. B to Q 3rd	P to K B 4th
16. Kt to Q 2nd	P to K Kt 4th
17. P to K B 4th	P to Kt 5th
18. P to K Kt 3rd	P to Kt 3rd
19. R to K B 2nd	P to Q B 4th
20. B to Q Kt 2nd	B to Q Kt 2nd
21. P to K R 3rd	P takes Q P
22. P to Q B 4th
If—
22. P takes K Kt P	P takes Q B P
23. R to R 2nd (ch)	K to Kt sq
24. Q takes P	R to Q B sq
25. Q to Q Kt 3rd	B to Q 4th
26. B to B 4th (best)	B takes B
27. Kt takes B	Q to Q 4th, and Black recovers the Pawn, though with a slightly inferior game.
22.	P takes K B P
23. R to K R 2nd	B to Kt 7th
24. Kt to Kt 3rd	B to R 5th
25. R takes B	P takes R
26. Kt takes P	B takes P
27. Kt takes K B P	P takes Kt
28. P to K 6th (dis. (ch)	Kt to B 3rd
29. Q to K 2nd	Q to K 2nd
30. B takes K B P
If 30. K takes P, threatening 31. R to R sq (ch), Black has a sufficient reply in K to Kt 2nd.
30.	Q to B 4th (ch),
31. K takes P	Q takes B,

and Black wins.

The Globe-Democrat of St. Louis, announces the conditions of a tourney for single three-move problems. The competition will be free to composers of all nations, and the lists will be open for competitors residing in the United States and Canada until Nov. 15, and for all others until Dec. 15 next. The usual conditions referring to sealed envelopes and mottoes are to be observed, and the prizes will be awarded to the best, the second best, and the third best problems contributed. The prizes are—first, two volumes of the American Chess Monthly (1858 and 1859) and the Huddersfield Magazine for 1877; second, "Walker's Art of Chess Play" and the Globe-Democrat for a year; third, "Book of Chicago Chess Congress" and the Globe-Democrat for a year.

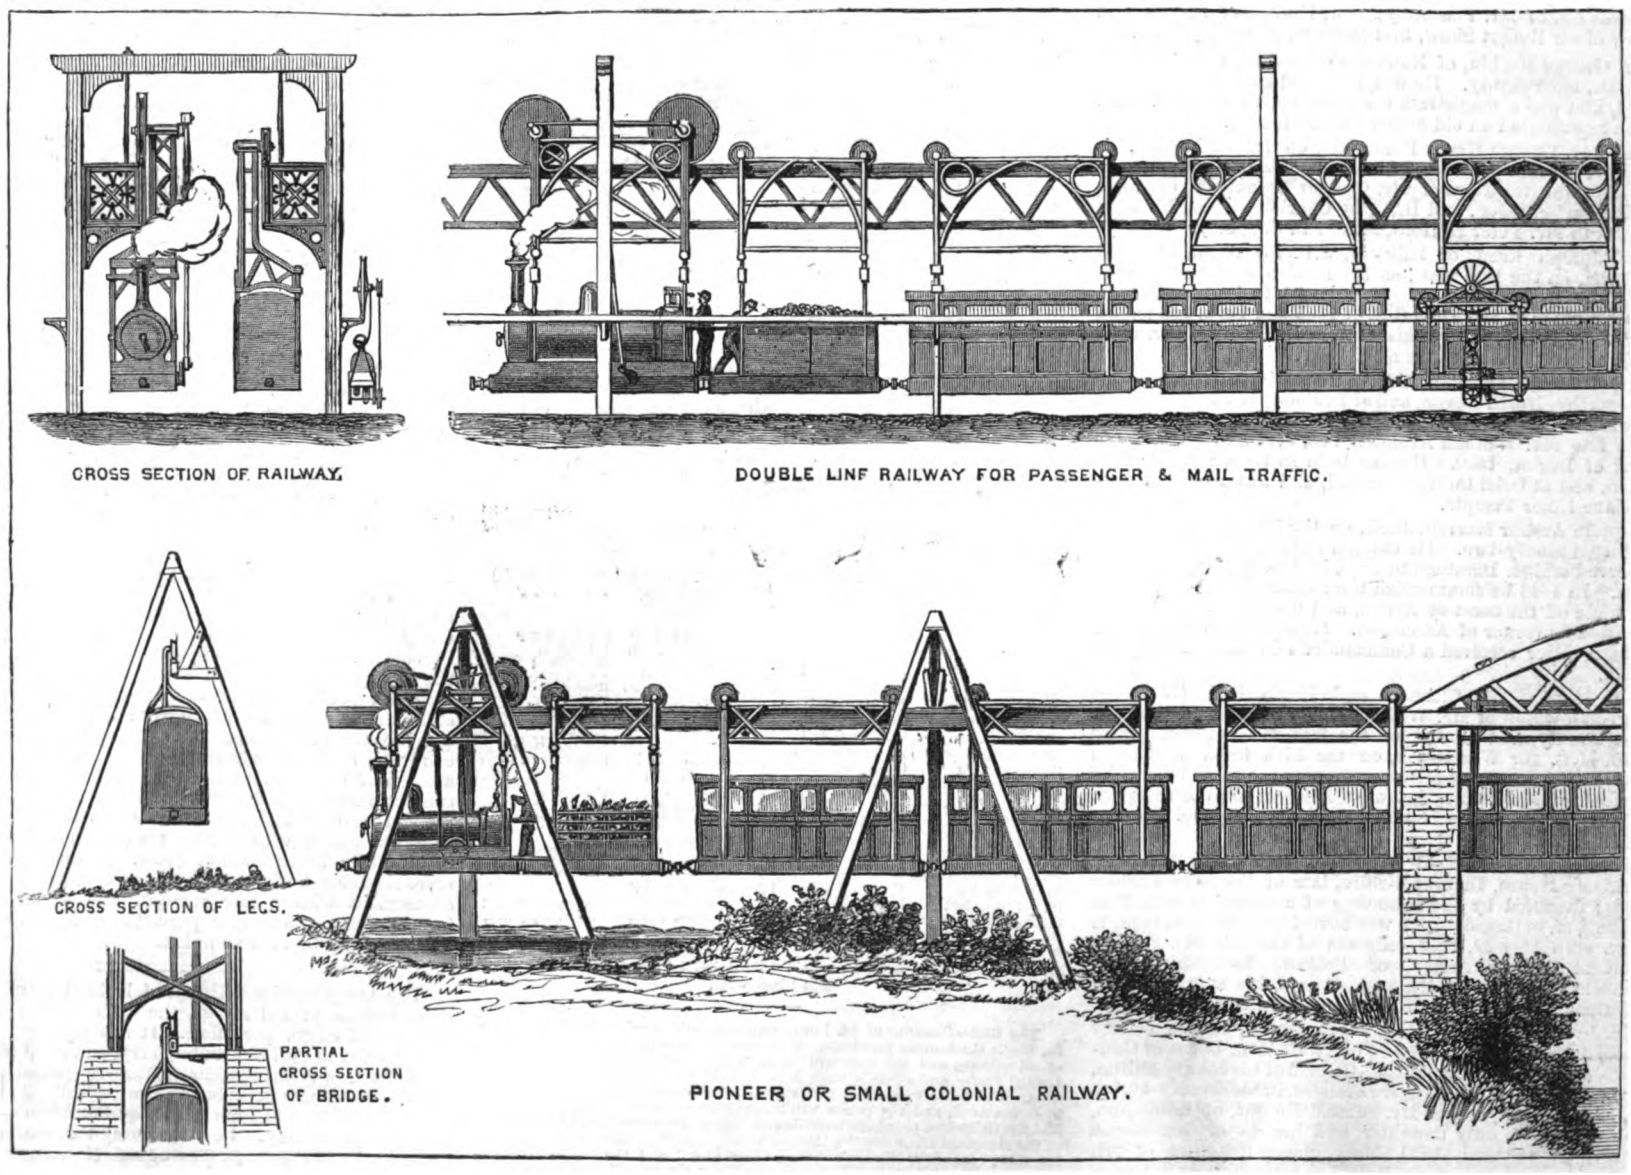
NEW BOOKS.

Scholars will, no doubt, be delighted with The Life and Letters of Marcus Tullius Cicero, by the Rev. G. E. Jeans, M.A. (Macmillan and Co.), and even English readers, who have little or no scholarship, as the term is generally understood, will find in the volume all that they are likely to need or desire, though they may be a little bewildered and irritated by critical discussions of which they will be able to see neither the object nor the importance. The volume, a large and full one, provided with a very useful index, is "a new translation of the letters included in Mr. Watson's selection," with the addition of "historical and critical notes," and of references, whereby the reader is constantly assisted, should a comparison of authorities seem desirable, in what might otherwise be a tiresome search among the most accessible of Cicero's biographers, whether Forsyth, Merivale, Abeken, or Mommsen. The labour expended upon the work must have been enormous; and the attention bestowed upon the minutest details is really astonishing. Everybody knows how plentifully besprinkled with Greek phrases is Cicero's correspondence, especially when he was writing to Atticus, who, as the very name would imply, was "half a Greek in habits and sympathies;" and in this new translation those phrases, to reproduce the effect produced in the original, are rendered almost invariably, if not in every instance, by approximately equivalent French expressions. This extremely conscientious mode of proceeding, even if it were less successful in its results, would be pretty strong evidence of the care with which the text has been prepared. The story of Cicero's life is skilfully interwoven among the different sections into which the letters are divided; and there is an introductory table, chronologically arranged, in which the principal events of that interesting story may be read off in a few brief moments. The translator observes, not without reason, that there is no classical work to be compared with Cicero's letters "for teaching that the Romans were real living men and women, and not mere paper characters, or schoolmaster's puppets"; and at the same time he warns all whom it may concern to remember that "Cicero must be used only with caution and knowledge as a historian," a warning which he justifies by pointing out how doubtful it becomes, from a comparison of letters written upon the same subject under different circumstances, whether "we always have a genuine record of Cicero's feelings." However, this would apply to nearly every public man's correspondence, whether in ancient or modern times; letters may shed a great deal of light upon history, but it is only now and then that they are written in the spirit of the perfect historian. The translation, and the biographical narrative superadded to it, may now be left to the wide circulation they deserve to obtain.

Among clever, original, amusing books of travel a prominent place must be assigned to The Australian Abroad (Second Series): by James Hingston (Sampson Low and Co.), a large, handsome, liberally and strikingly illustrated volume, in which a keen observer and very droll writer records the experiences he sought and found in Ceylon, India, and Egypt. He professes to have offered an almost virgin personality for the reception of impressions, having carefully abstained from enlightening himself by means of books about the countries he intended to visit; and he inferentially recommends the same abstention to others. This is highly disinterested conduct on his part, for, if his advice were followed, nobody, of course, would read his book; that is, nobody with any idea of travelling where he has travelled. And nowadays everybody appears to have an idea of travelling everywhere. Let his advice, therefore, at any rate so far as his own book is concerned, be utterly disregarded; for whoever reads the book may or may not pick up a large amount of useful information, but will certainly find excellent entertainment and enjoy many a hearty laugh. Nor is the writer humorous only; he can be pithy, picturesque, and even eloquent upon occasion. His humour, however, presumably Australian, but very much in the American manner, is his chief characteristic; and it is sometimes irresistible. Sometimes he is simply flippant, as, for instance, when he says: "the actions of the just, we are told, smell sweet and blossom in their dust; but the aroma left about by the dust of a burnt Hindoo, just or unjust, is as nearly as possible that of roast pig." As the proof of the pudding is in the eating, it may be as well to give a taste of our traveller's quality in his capacity of writer, and the following passage, descriptive of one among the many interesting sights he saw in Ceylon, will serve the purpose:—"Horace Vernet's Rebecca goes by with her chatty on her head, in which" [to wit, the chatty, and not the head] "to fetch water from the well, as the like of her did thousands of years ago, and will do for thousands to come. Such prophesying is quite proper in this Eastern part of the world. She looks a grand girl, this Rebecca, and her polished brass chatty is as a golden crown to her stately form and proudly carried head. Her large, flashing eyes return my gaze and squelch me, similarly as the eyes of Sir Simon Simple affected Mould: 'He knows the Latin Grammar and French, and I can't stand his heye!' I felt that this woman, or one of her counterpart great-grandmothers, knew the Eastern world in all its grandeur, and all the great men and glories of the wonderful olden time—knew the East before it had gone to sleep, and so let the white men of the Western world emerge from their yet uncleared forests and swamps to have their feverish day and to die as other nations have done—while this enduring East of unalterable fashions sleeps for its time. She glanced towards me as I sat by the roadside, as an oak of centuries old might regard the fungi about its feet. 'Forty centuries looked down' upon me more effectively from her eyes than they did from the pyramids upon Bonaparte." There may be something strange and incorrect about a picture in which a Cingalese woman is made the modern representative of the ancient Rebecca; but there are sufficient points of resemblance in the eastern type of beauty and the eastern fashions. The passage, in any case, is a fair example of the author's mixed style, in which liveliness, with a touch of humour and not without slang, is tempered by an evident inclination towards serious reflection. In the same manner he deals with the more or less wonderful persons and things he fell in with during his travels in continental India, in Egypt, in Palestine and Syria. A more pleasant book, a more readable book, on the whole, combining a great deal of amusement with a fair amount, one would say, of useful information, is not often published; it is to be regretted, however, that there is no index.

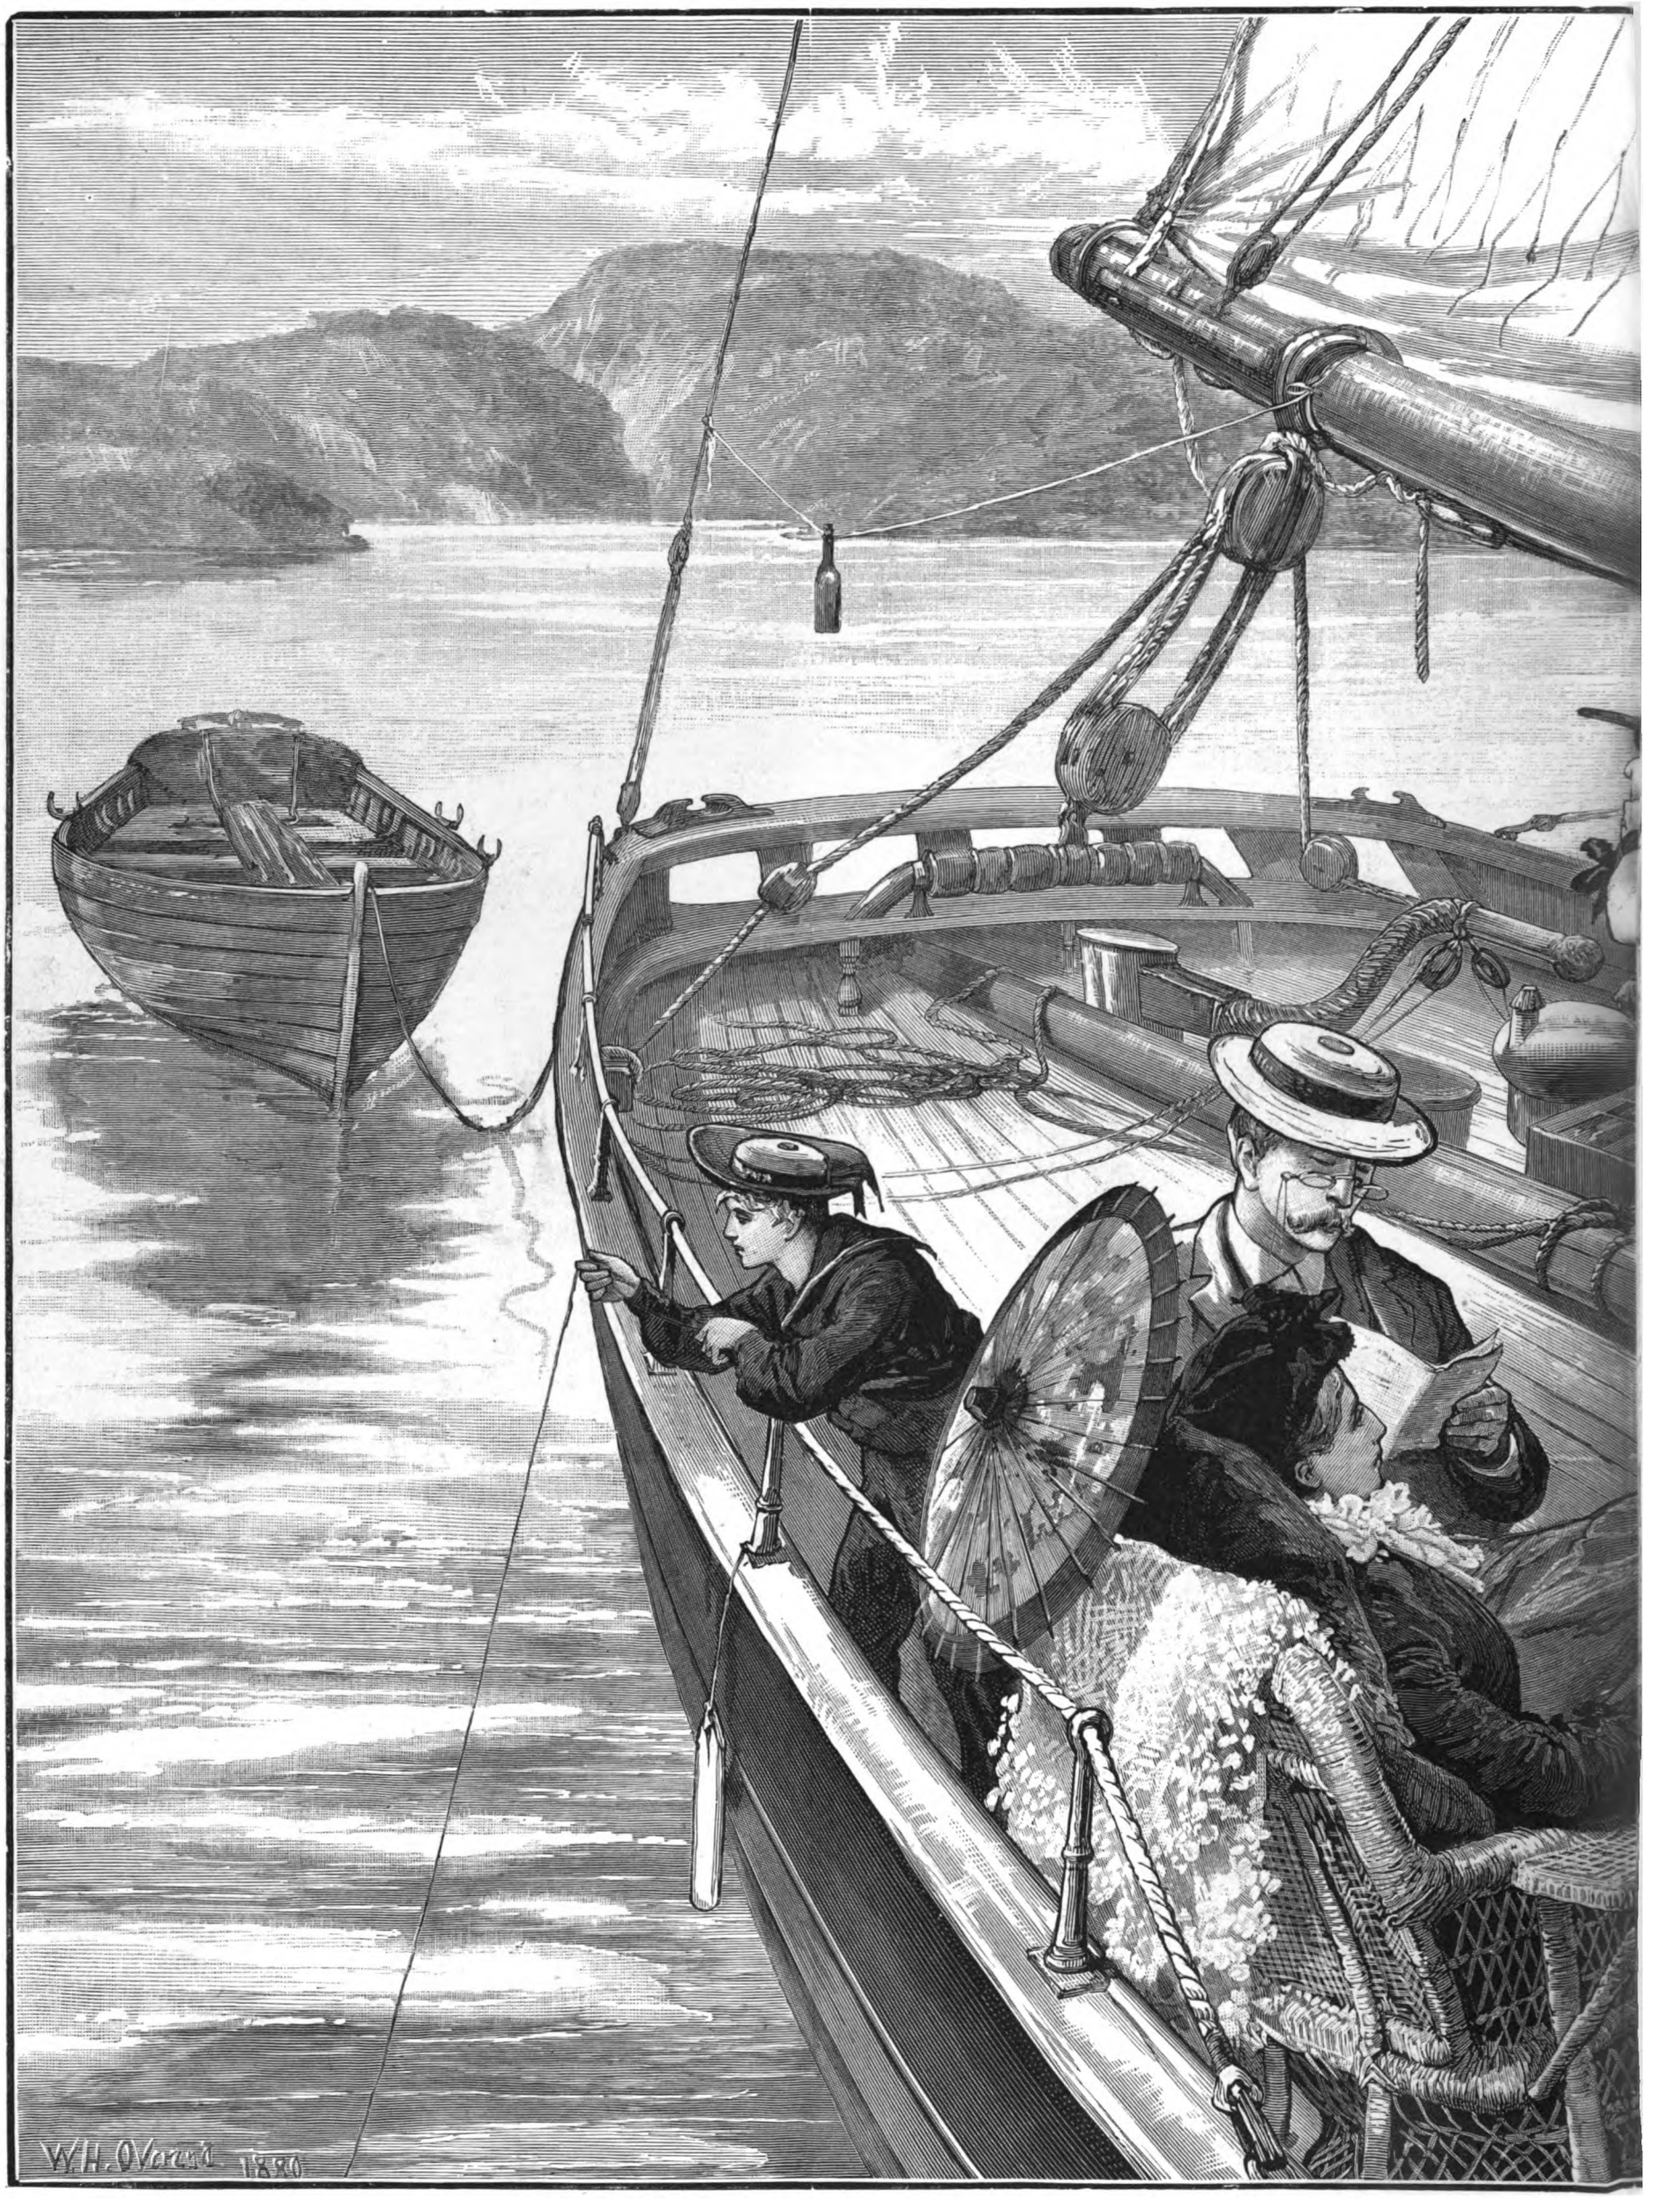
The Congregational Union of Ireland resumed its annual deliberations in Belfast on the 16th inst., the Rev. James Stirling, of Sligo, presiding. It was agreed that the Union should meet in 1881 in Londonderry, and the Rev. John White, of Belfast, was elected chairman.—A special Conference on Irish missions was held during the day with the delegates from the Congregational Union of England and Wales and the Irish Evangelical Society. In the evening the annual sermon was preached by the Rev. A. Thompson, Manchester, and shortly afterwards the sitting of the Union for the year concluded.



Digitized by Google

NEW PUBLIC LIBRARY AND ART-GALLERY, NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.—SEE PAGE 310.

AN ELEVATED SINGLE-RAIL PIONEER RAILWAY.



The system of elevated transit-ways, devised by Mr. J. K. Collett, of Cardiff, is considered by him applicable to provide a cheap kind of railway, and one that could be very quickly constructed, for use in war time, or in countries which cannot bear the cost of an ordinary railroad. His plan is to erect tripods of timber, iron, or other suitable material, at intervals of 20 ft. to 35 ft. apart, as may be found most convenient, with inner projections from two of the legs, and with iron hanging bars from the apex, supporting thereby a horizontal beam, upon which is laid a single line of rail. The train of carriages would be suspended from carrying-wheels overhead, which would run securely along this line of rail, the wheels being double-flanged; the axle of these wheels sustains a wrought-iron carrying-frame, attached to the carriages, which is formed in an arch overhead, and is suspended directly above the line of rail from a cranked hanger on the axis of the carrying-wheels. The weight of a carriage with twelve passengers is estimated at two tons. The carriage is very narrow, giving room for only two persons to sit side by side. A locomotive engine of 20-horse power, to draw the train at the rate of twenty miles an hour, has been designed by the inventor of this system; its weight, with fuel and water, would be about 48 cwt. The stationary engine and wire rope mode of drawing the train could also be adopted; and this would be most convenient in the streets of towns; or the train might be propelled by a gas-engine, compressed air, electricity, or manual power. It is suggested that an elevated rail with locomotive engine alongside of a canal would be an efficient means of drawing boats or barges in the water. For military purposes, as in the transport of stores over a mountain pass, where plenty of timber is at hand, disregarding the ruggedness of the ground, and using a wire rope to draw up the carriages, we should think Mr. Collett's invention likely to answer very well. Our Illustrations represent a double railway of this kind, for passenger or mail traffic, with a cross section of the same; also a single-line railway, of less elaborate construction, suitable for pioneering service.

COLLETT'S SYSTEM OF ELEVATED RAILWAYS.

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

A YACHTING CR

BY W. H

Digitized by Google

UISE—BECALMED.

OVEREND.

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

REGISTERED AT THE GENERAL POST-OFFICE FOR TRANSMISSION ABROAD.

No. 2157.—VOL. LXXVII. SATURDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1880. WITH TWO SUPPLEMENTS } SIXPENCE. By Post, 6½D.

ALBANIAN WAR-DANCE IN THE CAMP NEAR DULCIGNO, DURING THE FEAST OF THE RAMAZAN.

DRAWN ON THE SPOT BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, R. C. WOODVILLE.—SEE PAGE 337.

Digitized by Google

BIRTHS.

On the 21st ult., at Bridge House, Church Minshull, Cheshire, Mrs. A. N. Hornby, of a son.

On the 19th ult., at 7, Laura-place, Southampton, the wife of Edward Cooper, Esq., of Monte Video, of a daughter.

On the 25th ult., at 17, Coates-crescent, Edinburgh, the Lady Balfour, of Burleigh, of a son.

On Aug. 5, at Wellington, New Zealand, the wife of the Hon. G. R. Johnson, of a son and heir.

On the 26th ult., at Douglas Castle, Lanark, the Lady Dunglass, of a daughter.

On the 20th ult., at Wyesham, Monmouth, Lady Mackworth, of a daughter.

On the 27th ult., at Eaton-terrace, the Hon. Mrs. Pakington, of a son.

MARRIAGES.

On the 21st ult., at the parish church, Chiselhurst, Francis Holdsworth Hunt, of 4, Queensborough-terrace, Kensington-gardens, son of Holdsworth Hunt, Esq., of Park-crescent and the Inner Temple, barrister-at-law, to Agnes Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Frederick Halsey Ianson, Esq., of Oakbank, Chiselhurst, and 41, Finsbury-circus.

On the 23rd ult., at St. Jude's Church, Southsea, Herbert Winnington, eldest son of the late Henry Barry Domvile, Esq., to Rose, second daughter of Admiral of the Fleet Sir George Sartorius, G.C.B., and widow of Captain John Winnington.

On the 18th ult., at Penn Church, Bucks, Sir John H. Keane, to Harriet, only daughter of the late E. B. Thorneycroft, Esq.

On the 23rd ult., at All Saints' Church, Margaret-street, Captain W. H. Newenham, to the Hon. Louisa J. Edwardes.

DEATHS.

On the 24th ult., at The Elms, Dulwich, the Lady Elizabeth Murray, aged 77.

On the 25th ult., at her residence, 23, Taviton-street, Gordon-square, in her 84th year, Louisa, widow of the late Colonel Sir George Henry Hewett, of Netherseale, in the county of Leicester, Baronet.

On the 25th ult., after a long illness, at his residence, 58, Warwick-square, S.W., Admiral Sir J. Walter Tarleton, K.C.B., grandnephew of General Sir Banastre Tarleton, G.C.B.

On the 23rd ult., at Ashford Hall, Bakewell, Lord George Henry Cavendish, aged 70.

On the 18th ult., at Gosport, aged 63, Major Alexander Penrose Miller, Governor of the Military Prison, and late of the 92nd Gordon Highlanders, second son of the late Thomas Miller, Yr., of Glenlee and Barskimming (eldest son of Sir William Miller, Bart., Lord Glenlee), and brother of the late Sir William Miller, third Baronet.

On the 23rd ult., at his residence, Curragh Chase, County Limerick, Sir Vere Edmond Pery de Vere, Bart., aged 72.

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, or Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING OCT. 9.

SUNDAY, OCT. 3.

Nineteenth Sunday after Trinity.
Morning Lessons: Ezek. xiv., Eph. iv. 1—25. Evening Lessons: Ezek. xviii. or xxiv. 15, Luke vi. 1—20.
Westminster Abbey, 10 a.m. and 3 p.m.
Savoy, 11.30 a.m., Rev. Henry White, the Chaplain; 7 p.m., Rev. C. J. Ball, Chaplain of Lincoln's Inn.
St. Paul's Cathedral, 10.30 a.m., Rev. T. Teignmouth Shore; 3.15 p.m., Bishop Piers Claughton; 7 p.m., Rev. H. L. Thompson, Rector of Iron-Acton, Gloucestershire.
Whitehall, 11 a.m. and 3 p.m., Rev. V. H. Stanton.
Temple Church, 11 a.m., Dean Vaughan, the Master; 3 p.m., Rev. A. Ainger, the Reader.

MONDAY, OCT. 4.

Photographic Society's Exhibition opens (till Nov. 13), 10 a.m.
Society of Engineers, 7.30 p.m.
Hospital Medical Schools open—Middlesex: distribution of prizes, 3 p.m.; dinner, St. James's Hall, 6.30 p.m.; University College: address by Professor J. Burdon Sanderson, 8 p.m.; Dental Hospital.
City of London Institute, Cowper-street: Beginning of Session—Professor Armstrong on Organic Chemistry, first of thirty lectures on Chemistry, on Mondays, 9.30 p.m.
St. Paul's Cathedral, Harvest Thanksgiving Service, 7 p.m., the Bishop of Bedford.

TUESDAY, OCT. 5.

New Moon, 4.43 a.m.
Christian Knowledge Society, 2 p.m.
Gresham Lectures, 6 p.m. (Mr. T. F. Dallin on Rhetoric; and on 6th, 7th, 8th).
City of London Institute: Professor Ayrton, first of course of lectures on Elect ical Instruments, 8.30 p.m.
Races: Nottingham.

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 6.

National Social Science Association, Congress at Edinburgh (seven days); sermon at St. Giles's; evening, inaugural address by Lord Reay, the President, in the Free Church Assembly Hall.
Entomological Society, 7 p.m.
Obstetrical Society, 8 p.m.
Incorporated Law Society, meeting at Sheffield (two days).
Pharmaceutical Society, 8 p.m. (address by Dr. J. Langdon Down).
Presentation of the Freedom of the City to Sir Henry Bessemer at Guildhall; and dinner at the Mansion House.

THURSDAY, OCT. 7.

Toxophilite Society, extra target.
London Sailing Club: Handicap Race.

FRIDAY, OCT. 8.

British Museum reopens
Quekett Microscopical Club, 8 p.m.
City of London Institute, Professor Ayrton, first of course of lectures on Weighing Appliances, &c., 8.30 p.m.
City of London College, 6 p.m. (Dr. N. Heinemann on Political Economy).
Tunbridge Wells Agricultural Association Show.
Races: Kempton Park.

SATURDAY, OCT. 9.

London Sailing Club; closing cruise.

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE KEW OBSERVATORY OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY.

Lat. 51° 28′ 6″ N.; Long. 0° 18′ 47″ W. Height above Sea, 34 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF Barometer Corrected.	Temperature of the Air.	Dew Point.	Relative Humidity.	Amount of Cloud.	THERMOM. Maximum, read at 10 P.M.	Minimum, read at 10 P.M.	WIND. General Direction.	Movement in 24 hours, read at 10 A.M. next morning.	Rain in 24 hours, read at 10 A.M. next morning.
	Inches.	°	°	°	0-10	°	°		Miles.	In.
19	29·655	50·2	44·0	·81	7	58·6	46·3	WSW. WNW.	239	0·090
20	29·864	54·4	41·1	·67	5	62·0	44·0	WSW. WNW. W.	72	0·020
21	29·907	52·1	51·1	·95	9	60·6	48·2	W. SW. S.	279	0·025
22	29·978	59·0	54·8	·86	9	69·6	49·0	SW. W.	97	0·035
23	30·102	62·4	55·7	·81	9	68·6	59·4	W. NW. NNW.	46	0·010*
24	30·079	58·5	54·7	·88	7	68·7	51·0	WNW. WSW.	84	0·005†
25	30·070	59·1	53·0	·81	8	67·0	53·8	WSW.	48	0·005†

* Dew and rain. † Dew.

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, in order, at ten o'clock a.m.:—

Barometer (in inches) corrected ..	29·643	29·832	29·886	29·969	30·112	30·104	30·070
Temperature of Air	51·8°	55·4°	54·2°	56·8°	62·4°	57·0°	56·8°
Temperature of Evaporation ..	49·1°	49·2°	49·4°	47·4°	50·5°	50·4°	47·8°
Direction of Wind	WSW.	WSW.	SW.	SW.	NW.	WNW.	WSW.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE FOR THE WEEK ENDING OCTOBER 9.

Sunday.		Monday.		Tuesday.		Wednesday.		Thursday.		Friday.		Saturday.
M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A
h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m
1 5	1 25	1 40	1 58	2 15	2 34	2 50	3 8	3 27	3 45	4 7	4 27	4 48	5 10

ST. JAMES'S HALL, PICCADILLY.
EVERY NIGHT AT EIGHT;
MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS, and SATURDAYS, at Three and Eight,
ALL THE YEAR ROUND.
MOORE and BURGESS MINSTRELS,
the oldest established and most successful Entertainment in the world, and
THE ACKNOWLEDGED SUPREME HEAD OF ALL CONTEMPORARY MINSTREL COMPANIES
on either side of the Atlantic, comprising, "as it has done for more than fifteen years past,"
FORTY ARTISTES OF KNOWN EMINENCE.

DORÉ'S GREAT WORKS.—"ECCE HOMO" ("Full of divine dignity."—The Times) and "THE ASCENSION;" "CHRIST LEAVING THE PRÆTORIUM," "CHRIST ENTERING JERUSALEM," with all his other Great Pictures.—DORÉ GALLERY, 35, New Bond-street. Daily, 10 to 6. 1s.

MR. and MRS. GERMAN REED'S ENTERTAINMENT will REOPEN for the AUTUMN SEASON on MONDAY, OCT. 4, with THE PIRATES' HOME, Mr. Corney Grain's Musical Sketch, THE LONDON SEASON, and A FLYING VISIT. A new First Part, and a new Musical Sketch by Mr. Corney Grain, will be produced soon after the opening.—ST. GEORGE'S HALL, Langham-place.

MACCABE'S FAREWELL TO LONDON.—GREAT ST. JAMES'S HALL, Regent-street and Piccadilly.—The immense success which has stamped each representation of FREDERICK MACCABE'S Popular Entertainment, BEGONE DULL CARE, during the past four weeks, renders it only necessary to announce that it will be given EVERY EVENING at Eight, and SATURDAY AFTERNOONS at Three, for a short time only, previous to his retirement. Popular prices—6d., 1s., 1s. 6d., 2s., and 3s. Tickets at Austin's, 28, Piccadilly, and all Agents. Doors open at 7.30; commence at 8. JOHN F. SUTTON, Business Manager.

EGYPTIAN LARGE HALL.—Mr. DUNCAN MILLER'S ROYAL HANDBELL-RINGERS will give a Series of MATINÉES on the days when Maskelyne and Cooke's Entertainment is given in the evenings only. On MONDAY NEXT, OCT. 4, this celebrated company will introduce for the first time, a New Peal of 130 Bells. The bell-ringing will be interspersed with Glee-singing and the blindfold portraiture of Mr. J. W. Benn. Fauteuils, 5s.; Stalls, 5s.; Area, 2s.; Balcony, 1s. Monday Next, Oct. 4, Tuesday, 5th, Thursday, 7th, and Friday, 8th, at Three o'Clock.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—MATINÉE, WEDNESDAY, at Three; Matinée, SATURDAY. Every Evening, at Eight. Extraordinary and unprecedented ovation. Positively Last Three Weeks. HAVERLY'S AMERICAN UNITED MASTODON MINSTRELS. Forty Famous Performers—Forty. Last Three Weeks—Twelve Song and Dance Artists. Last Three Weeks—Twelve Champion Clog-Dancers. Last Three Weeks—Eight End Men; Twelve Banjo Experts; Forty Artists. Great success. DOWN IN A COAL-MINE.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry Irving.—THE CORSICAN BROTHERS (Every Night at 8.30)—Louis and Fabien dei Franchi, Mr. Irving. At 7.30, BYGONES, by A. W. Pinero. Doors open at 7. Special Morning Performances of THE CORSICAN BROTHERS, Saturdays, OCT. 9, 16, 23, 30, at 2.30. Box Office (Mr. Hurst) open 10 to 5 daily. Seats booked by letter or telegram.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON: SATURDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1880.

The Naval Demonstration before Dulcigno has not come off. The concert of Powers is till unbroken, but the question with which it has to deal seems to be changing its character. Coercive measures against the Albanian League are one thing; against the Turkish Empire are another, involving vast responsibility. Riza Pasha, the military representative of the Porte at Dulcigno and its neighbourhood, has given warning to Prince Nikita that he will consider it a casus belli should the Montenegrins pass their frontiers. The Prince is, therefore, naturally anxious to ascertain what help the combined fleet could, or would, give him in case of his coming into collision with Turkish troops, and the Admirals have referred the matter home to their respective Governments.

There would seem to be very little hope that the Sultan will, meanwhile, take counsel with prudence. His tone has gradually shifted from evasion and obstruction to defiance. He lays down conditions for the cession of Dulcigno with all the arrogant assumption of a master of the situation. Of the obligations which he took upon himself as a subscribing party to the Treaty of Berlin he is utterly heedless. The solemn engagements with the Signatory Powers, whereby he escaped from the far more stringent and extensive demands of Russia through the Treaty of San Stefano, are in his eyes, so far, at least, as Montenegro, Greece, and Armenia are concerned, such as he is fully entitled at his will to repudiate. He has contrived to defer the fulfilment of them so long that he is now emboldened to ignore them altogether. His pretexts are, of course, varied. Routed out of one proposition he betakes himself to another. He could not be more exacting if he were an autocrat playing upon the fears and tiring the patience of dependent and subordinate authorities. He does not even now believe in the European concert. He appears to have surrendered himself to the conclusion that by desperate audacity he will create confusion where negotiation has failed him. He stands upon what he calls his sovereign rights, and from them he would have it believed that he has made up his mind never to part with a single iota, now or hereafter, treaty obligations notwithstanding.

Now, it would be a mistake to suppose that the whole question at issue between him and the Signatory Powers is the cession of Dulcigno to the Montenegrins. If this were all, the machinery constructed and about to be put in motion against him is out of all proportion to the supposed object in view. On his part, he sees behind the cession of this miserable port the further cession of extended frontiers to the Greeks, of administrative reforms in Asia, and of improved government in his European Provinces. On the other hand, the European Powers are carrying forward a process, beginning at Dulcigno, designed to substitute for a universal scramble and consequent social anarchy, at the expiration of the Turkish Empire in Europe, the peaceable development of the Nationalities still subject to his sway. What may be the secret hopes, or motives, of the now concerting Powers it is useless to inquire. Nor is it necessary. Of this they are assured in common—that the Turkish Empire in Europe is rapidly yielding to the force of internal decay, and must eventually—probably within a very few years—come to an end. The inheritance which it will leave behind it is a rich one. Who shall possess it? Is it not better to forestall a general conflict by previous agreement amongst themselves that neither of them will assert a claim, but that the land shall be for the inhabitants that occupy it—parcelled among them upon a just consideration of their right, and made over to them, as opportunity may serve, by the sanction and with the goodwill of the European Powers. Such is the theory at present in vogue. And the policy which accords with it aims at the gradual and, as far as possible, silent and peaceful transference of the administrative authority of South-Eastern Europe, at present vested in the Sultan and his Pashas, to appropriate organisations, or autonomies, of the populations now burdened by oppressive Turkish misrule. The experiment is one of far-seeing and provident statesmanship. It may succeed, and, if it should, it will solve the Eastern Question without any abundant effusion of blood. It may fail, but the question it involves will not lose altogether through failure. At any rate, the position assumed, for the present, by the Signatory Powers is one the key to which is to be sought in the public wellbeing of Europe, and not in the narrower and more selfish ambition of individual States.

We should read what is now doing in the Adriatic, and in the diplomacy which is being employed in Constantinople by the Ambassadors of the Signatory Powers, by the light of this ulterior intention. It is (if we may so say) a new departure, adapted, as far as human foresight will allow, to a just and pacific resolution of a problem which might otherwise, and in all probability would, kindle a conflagration the devastating power of which it is impossible to foresee. To take that departure requires the utmost precaution, and will probably draw more largely upon public patience than has been exhibited of late in international affairs. Some of us will remember how the basis of the Kingdom of Belgium, now a contented and prosperous community, was laid by Lord Palmerston—how intricate and involved appeared to be the diplomatic action which terminated at last in such conspicuous success—how serious were the perils which impended over the inception and the realisation of that political experiment. Similar statesmanship, employing similar means, may perhaps succeed in bringing about a similar result in South-Eastern Europe. The Powers are debarred by their several interests and their mutual relations from precipitate action against the Turkish Empire. They are also prevented by the pledges they have already given to the world from letting their show of concert come to nothing. They have within themselves the fullest means of dealing peremptorily with the Porte, in case of the Sultan's continued recusancy. They will use these means, we anticipate, only in the last resort. It is much to be desired that they will not be driven to do so at all. But every step forward which they take in pursuit of the object they have in view will put each of them under a more pressing obligation to take the next step; and, in a matter like this, "ce n'est que le premier pas qui coute." The handing over, with or without fighting, of Dulcigno to the Montenegrins will wonderfully clear the way for the settlement of the other unfulfilled stipulations of the Berlin Treaty.

THE CHURCH.

Mr. Gladstone has sent to the Bishop of Truro £25 towards the erection of Truro Cathedral.

The annual conference of the Evangelical Alliance will be held this year at Nottingham, in the week commencing Tuesday, Oct. 19.

The Church of Allhallows, East India Docks, was consecrated by the Bishop of Bedford on Wednesday, the sermon being preached by the Rev. Dr. Ridding, Head-Master of Winchester College.

It is officially announced that a new archdeaconry in the diocese of Chester has been created, to be named "the archdeaconry of Macclesfield;" and that within the said archdeaconry a new rural deanery, to be called "the rural deanery of Congleton," has likewise been formed.

A fête champêtre, in aid of the Leamington parish church organ fund, took place last week in the grounds of Shrubland Hall. The ordinary features of a bazaar were supplemented by vocal and instrumental concerts, and archery and lawn tennis tournaments. There was a very fashionable attendance.

The Manchester Guardian understands that the Commissioners appointed under the Incumbents Resignation Act, 1871, to inquire into the representations made by Canon Bardsley relating to his resignation of St. Ann's Rectory, have determined to allow Canon Bardsley a yearly pension out of the revenues of the benefice.

In commemoration of the centenary of Sunday schools a demonstration of the schools in the Manchester Cathedral rural deanery was held last Saturday afternoon in Stevenson-square. Upwards of 10,000 children were present. Addresses upon Sunday-school work were given by the Rural Dean (the Rev. Canon Woodhouse), who presided, the Dean of Manchester, and Mr. G. Milner.

The Church Conference at Durham was brought to a close on Wednesday week, when interesting papers were read on "The Present and Future of our Schools," "Church Patronage," and "The Retention of the Young of our Mining Population under Church Influences and Ordinances." Discussions followed, in which the Bishop of Durham, the Dean of Durham, Sir Charles Trevelyan, the Archdeacons of Durham and Northumberland, and others took part.

At a meeting held at Greenwich last Saturday, it was resolved to raise a fund to establish a hospital as a memorial of the late Canon Miller, the founder of Hospital Sunday; and at a meeting held at the Chapter House, St. Paul's Cathedral, on Monday, a committee was appointed for the purpose of raising £10,000 as a memorial to the late Rev. C. F. Lowder, to be expended in completing the works begun by him in connection with St. George's Mission.

The memorial-stones of a new English Wesleyan chapel at Conway were placed yesterday week. Mr. Watkin Williams, Q.C., M.P., expressed his pleasure as a Churchman in finding that so many clergymen who had opposed the Burials Bill were ready to bow loyally to the measure now that it had passed. He trusted that Dean Stanley's desire for the nationalisation of the churches, and their free use by all religious denominations, would soon be an accomplished fact. Mr. Minnies, the member for Warrington, also took part in the ceremony, which was followed by a luncheon in the Guildhall, at which the Mayor (Alderman D. Owen) presided.

Digitized by Google

ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

A correspondent, for whose respectability and sincerity I can vouch, sends me the relation of a curious case of what I may term "Corsican Brotherhood," not by any means "legendary," but bearing on two living persons. I give an epitome of his story, omitting specific mention of names and places:—

There lives in a city in Scotland a well-known artist, a man of singular ability and great force and originality of character. He has a brother, also devoted to artistic pursuits, who is resident in the United States, in one of the Atlantic cities. The brother living in Scotland was an intimate friend of my correspondent's eldest son, who a few years ago, when he was going for the first time to America, gratefully accepted the artist's assurance that every attention would be paid to him by the brother domiciled in the States, to whom he would require no formal letter of introduction. He had written to his brother, he said, telling him the name of the steamer in which my correspondent's son was to take passage, and requesting him to be on the wharf on the day of the vessel's probable arrival. He added, "You will see me standing on the quay." On his arrival at the port of his destination my informant's son looked anxiously along the line of faces on the Custom House wharf; and there, to his amazement, he did see to all appearance the friend with whom he had parted in Scotland. The identity seemed to be complete and perfect. It may be urged that all this may be common enough in the case of twins; but, my correspondent goes on to observe, more remains behind. There is an entire physical and mental sympathy between the two brothers. When one is ill, in body or in mind, the other, without actually experiencing the bodily ailment, is uneasily aware that something is wrong with his brother. It is, in fact, the "legend" of the Dei Franchi family, and the real case of MM. Louis and Charles Blanc over again. Are these instances of exact sympathy, in body and mind, between twins common or not? You will not fail to remember that the Siamese Twins, who were in America when the Great Civil War broke out, took diametrically opposite sides. One was vehemently Northern, and the other as strongly "Secesh" in his proclivities. But then the American Civil War would have divided Castor and Pollux, and made even the Brothers Cheeryble deadly enemies.

Mem.: You have heard, of course, the rumour that the twinship of the Siamese brethren was artificial, and the result of some cunningly Oriental Taliacotian operation to which there is a droll allusion in "Hudibras" and a fantastic reference in Victor Hugo's account of the comprachicos in "L'Homme qui rit."

When the patronage of President Lincoln was solicited by Artemus Ward for his lectures, the wise and humorous "Uncle Abe" replied that it had always struck him that lectures were a kind of entertainment highly pleasant and profitable to those who liked lectures, which he, Abraham Lincoln, failed to do. Notwithstanding the cautious caveat of Mr. Lincoln, all of us, I should say, will derive equal pleasure and profit from reading Dr. Benjamin R. Richardson's excellent lecture on "Woman as a Health Reformer," delivered at the late Sanitary Congress at Exeter. It seems to be the fixed opinion of one of the most indefatigable men of science and one of the most practical and single-minded philanthropists of the age that, if English ladies would only give their minds to the thoroughly sanitative ordering of their households, and the scientific superintendence of the food of their families, not only dust, damp, dirt and discomfort, but disease might be banished from our dwellings, and every home in England might be made a Home in the City of Hygeia. I am the more overjoyed at the prospect held out to us because it happens that I live in an establishment presided over by a notable housewife under whose auspices the broom, the scrubbing-brush, the Bath brick, the whitewashing-brush, the disinfectant, and the Original Little Dustpan are so continually flying about that I sometimes fancy that her sympathies are in unison with the celebrated Dutch vrauw, who, being asked by her pastor to give her idea of Paradise, replied that she imagined it to be a place very clean and tidy and shiny, and where there was nothing but sweeping, scrubbing, scouring, and polishing from Monday morning till Saturday night—for Ever and Ever.

But will Dr. Richardson help us in this dilemma? In the course of his lecture he observes that "where any living thing that ought not to be in a house exists in it, that house is unclean, and in some way uninhabitable for health: for health will not abide with anything that is uncleanly." Now, it happens that I am in the habit of sitting up very late at night; and, in the midst of my vigils, long after the household have gone to bed, the merry brown mice come leaping out of their holes, and give performances on the flying trapèze with the aid of the fireirons in the fender, and run St. Legers and Metropolitan Handicaps over the carpet, and positively swarm up the window curtains, with the desperate intent, as I take it, of gnawing at the tails of the canary birds through the bars of their cages. Set we never so many traps, the mice do not apparently diminish in any appreciable degree; and I fancy that they have entered into a friendly compact with the cat, who lets them alone, as a rule, "for a consideration," and only sacrifices a whiskered scapegoat now and again to keep up appearances. Will Dr. Benjamin R. Richardson assist us in the matter of the mice?

Again, late in the night I often hear strange noises, as of the opening and shutting of doors in the kitchen, and then, armed with a poker (in the remote event of burglars being about) I descend to the lower regions. I find the stone flooring of an exquisitely clean kitchen literally carpeted with black-beetles. I am told that all kinds of noxious substances are administered to these insects with the view of thinning their number, but with no appreciable result. Surely these are among the living things which ought not to exist in an "immaculate" house. Will Dr. Richardson help us in the black beetle difficulty?

Meanwhile, the good and kindly physician tells English ladies what they have to do if they would become Perfect Housewives. They must learn the elements of the anatomy and physiology of the human body (send to Mr. Stanford, of Charing-cross, for Mrs. Florence Fenwick Miller's "Atlas of Anatomy"); they must know all about the circulation of the blood, the nervous system and the visual functions, the phenomena of the digestive organs and the attributes of the membranous expanses. They must be well up in the laws of respiration and aërodynamics. They must be able to distinguish, at a glance, pure from impure water; they must have a practical acquaintance with sanitary engineering, the canons of caloric and refrigeration, and the chemistry of food. Then, but not till then, they may consider themselves to be on the high road to becoming Perfect Housewives.

Francis of Verulam (one of whose last acts on earth was the trial of an experiment in domestic economy, by stuffing the carcase of a fowl with snow to see whether the flesh could be preserved from decay by cold) tells a capital story, with which all my readers may not be acquainted, about good housewifery. It is the two hundred and seventy-eighth of "Bacon's Apophthegms":—

> There was a lady of the West Country that gave great entertainment at her house to most of the gallant gentlemen thereabout, and amongst others Sir Walter Raleigh was one. This lady, though otherwise a stately dame, was a notable good housewife; and in the morning betimes she called to one of her maids and asked, "Is the Piggy served?" Sir Walter Raleigh's bed-chamber was fast by the lady's, and he heard her. A little while before dinner the lady came down into the Great Chamber, which was full of gentlemen; and as soon as Sir Walter Raleigh set eye upon her, "Madam," saith he, "Is the Piggy served?" The lady answered, "You best know whether you have had your breakfast."

She had him there, I think. That was a "notable good housewife" after my own heart.

Among these said Apophthegms (they are dangerous things to refer to while you are writing "copy," for they are so full of wit and wisdom that what should be a minute's reference often swells, in despite of your volition, into an hour's enchanting reading) I also note, under the ninety-seventh head: Alonso of Arragon was wont to say in commendation of Age "That age appeared to be best in four things; old wood best to burn, old wine to drink, old friends to trust, and old authors to read." I should like to know something more about the bibliography of Alonso el Sabio's maxim. Is there any English version of his sayings extant? I remember that a former Prime Minister of Belgium had the "Four Things Commendable in Age" inscribed on the walls of his study; and it is very probable that they may have become proverbial in Flanders from the time of the Spanish domination. But they are also to be found running round the cornice of the divan adjoining the dining-room of a house in Arlington-street, Piccadilly—an old house, recently splendidly restored and decorated—a house formerly inhabited by Horace Walpole, and the salle à manger of which is traditionally supposed to have served as a model to Hogarth for the mise-en-scène of the second tableau in the "Marriage à la Mode."

Now, it is not very difficult to surmise whence the eighteenth century occupant of the house in Arlington-street may have got the Alonso the Wise quotation. "The Four Commendations" are to be found in Dr. King's "Anecdotes of his Own Times;" and the genial Jacobite Doctor probably quoted the words from Bacon. But whence did Francis of Verulam get them? From Gondomar, the Spanish Ambassador?

A lady correspondent, kindly responding to my late abject appeal for a little Pity (in consequence of the heat of the weather and the woful mass of unanswered letters staring me in the face) has written to say that she does pity me sincerely; but, at the same time, would I be good enough "to tell her something about Peg Woffington." Now, really, my dear Madam! I had best refer my fair correspondent to Mr. Charles Reade. I am myself precluded, by a humble but earnest desire to make this page one for family reading, from dwelling on the private life of fascinating, charitable, erring Madam Peg.

Yet, through a pleasant coincidence, I am able to tell my lady correspondent something about Peg Woffington's versatility as an actress. The very same post which brought me the compassionate letter also conveyed to me two numbers of a very old Dublin newspaper, sent me in sheer kindness by some unknown friend. In the advertising columns of "Esdall's News Letter," No. 623, for April 13-15, 1752, I read that on the 16th was to be performed at the Theatre Royal in Smock Alley, "by Command of their Graces the Duke and Dutchess of Dorset," a Comedy called "The Man of Mode; or, Sir Fopling Flutter"—Dorimant, Mr. Sheridan; Sir Fopling Flutter, Mr. Cibber; Loveit, Mrs. Woffington. Between that date and May 4 Peg was advertised in advance to play, for the benefit of divers members of the Smock-alley company, the characters of Charlotte in "The Refusal," Hippolita in "She Would and She Would Not," Silvia in "The Recruiting Officer," Clarissa in "The City Wives' Confederacy," Portia in "The Merchant of Venice," Elvira in "The Spanish Friar," and Mrs. Ford in "The Merry Wives of Windsor." For her own benefit Peg played, by vice-regal command, Phædra in the tragedy of "Phædra and Hippolitus." Sheridan was the Theseus, and Digges the Hippolitus. Most versatile of Pegs! She seems to have been, dramatically, the Sarah Bernhardt of the eighteenth century. This Dublin programme (I miss the part of Sir Harry Wildair from it) seems to comprise the leading features of the Woffingtonian répertoire.

Mem.: Mr. Thomas Sheridan, Manager of the Theatre Royal, Smock Alley, had, when Peg Woffington came to fulfil her starring engagement in Dublin, a baby boy some twelve months old, who had been christened Richard Brinsley. In 1754, the theatre in Smock-alley was wrecked by a political mob, excited to fury by the delivery of a passage in "Mahomet," beginning "Crush, Crush those vipers." The disturbance (which for the time ruined Manager Sheridan) is mentioned in a note to Percy Fitzgerald's "Boswell's Life of Johnson," vol. i., p. 236.

Oddly enough, the social (not the financial) fortunes of the Sheridan family sprang from the wrecking of the theatre in Smock Alley. Manager Sheridan was partially compensated for his losses by Government; he was patronised by Lord Townsend; commissions in the Army were offered to his sons; and his daughters were placed on the Concordatum Fund. Young Richard Brinsley was sent to Harrow, and entered life as what in vulgar parlance is termed "a swell," unfortunately without any money. "Swelldom" without money is a syllogism with false premisses. In the whole melancholy story of Sheridan's life I do not know of a more ghastly episode than that of the bailiff who came to arrest him, when he was on his dying bed, being repulsed and ejected by the footman.

I seriously declare—and I make the declaration with the simple desire to acquire information—that until the other day I did not know that the illustrious author of "The School for Scandal" and "The Rivals" also wrote the burlesque ballad of "Billy Taylor was a gay young fellow." Among the thousands of ditties—amatory, bacchanalian, comic, nautical, and patriotic—in the "Universal Songster" (three vols., Jones and Co., "Temple of the Muses," Finsbury-square: Jones and Co. succeeded, I think, the eccentric bibliopole Lackington) I duly find the ballad of "Billy Taylor," with a superbly funny illustration by George Cruikshank (the bulk of the vignettes are from designs by his brother Robert); but no author's name is given. But in the prefatory remarks by "D— G." to the late Mr. J. B. Buckstone's "Nautical Burlesque Burletta of 'Billy Taylor, or the Gay Young Fellow,'" first produced at the Adelphi Theatre on Nov. 9, 1829, allusion is made to the "Billy Taylor" of Sheridan as "a whimsy thrown off in one of those joyous moments which gladdened the heart of that eccentric genius," "D— G." obscurely hints that Sheridan might have owed his inspiration to some such long obsolete lyrics as "Constant Betty's Garland," "The Young Man's Resolution to Go to Sea by Reason of his False Love," or "The Politic Sailor; or, the London Miss Outwitted." There is a theatrical tradition that the sublime Sarah Siddons was very fond of singing "Billy Taylor." We sadly want a new collection of old (not ancient) popular songs. For years I have not met with a copy of the original "George Barnwell," who was not hanged, you will remember, but escaped to "outlandish parts," and died, I think, in Poland.

"What next—and next?" is a question which I am continually putting to myself in view of the curiously diversified queries addressed to me by correspondents from divers parts of the world. Where is the maxim of "Spare the Rod and Spoil the Child" (so often and so erroneously ascribed to King Solomon) to be found? asks one. The cruel counsel which, mainly because so many people thought it to be Solomon's, has been the cause of woes unnumbered to British childhood, is to be found in "Hudibras," Part II., Canto I., verse 45.

Another correspondent wishes to know the origin of the slang term, "Hookey Walker." "The Slang Dictionary" (New Edition, Chatto and Windus, 1874) gives two derivations of this mysterious expression, one relating to an aquiline-nosed Hebrew, who exhibited an orrery called the "Eidouranion," and at whose gesticulations irreverent audiences used to laugh; and another referring to a magistrate named Walker, whose sharp proboscis earned for him the epithet of Hookey, and conferred the title of "beak" on all his successors. On the other hand, Dr. Cobham Brewer, in his "Dictionary of Phrase and Fable," says sub voce "Hookey Walker," that John Walker was an outdoor clerk at Longman, Clementi, and Co.'s, Cheapside, who was noted for his eagle-nose, whence he acquired the sobriquet of "Old Hookey." "Hookey's" office was to keep the employés to their work, or in case of dereliction of duty to report them to the principals. Dr. Brewer gives the Slang Dictionary of "Jon Bee" as his authority, and adds that "Hookey Walker" still means a tale not to be trusted. My earliest recollection of this very vulgar saying was in the refrain of a song which used to be sung about the streets about 1840, and which runs:—

> He got the coat, but as for the tin,
> 'Twas Walker the New Penny Post Man, oh!

There is yet another suppositious derivation, and which has some connection with a watchmaker at Liverpool named Walker; but I have forgotten its bearings. In slang Americanese to pawn your diamonds is to "Walker your Rainbows."

Mem.: I note in Dr. Cobham Brewer's dictionary an abstruse little paragraph touching the doctrines of Pythagoras and Kepler on the "Music of the Spheres." He might have reminded his readers that the expression is also used by Butler in "Hudibras," Part II., Canto I., verses 17-18—

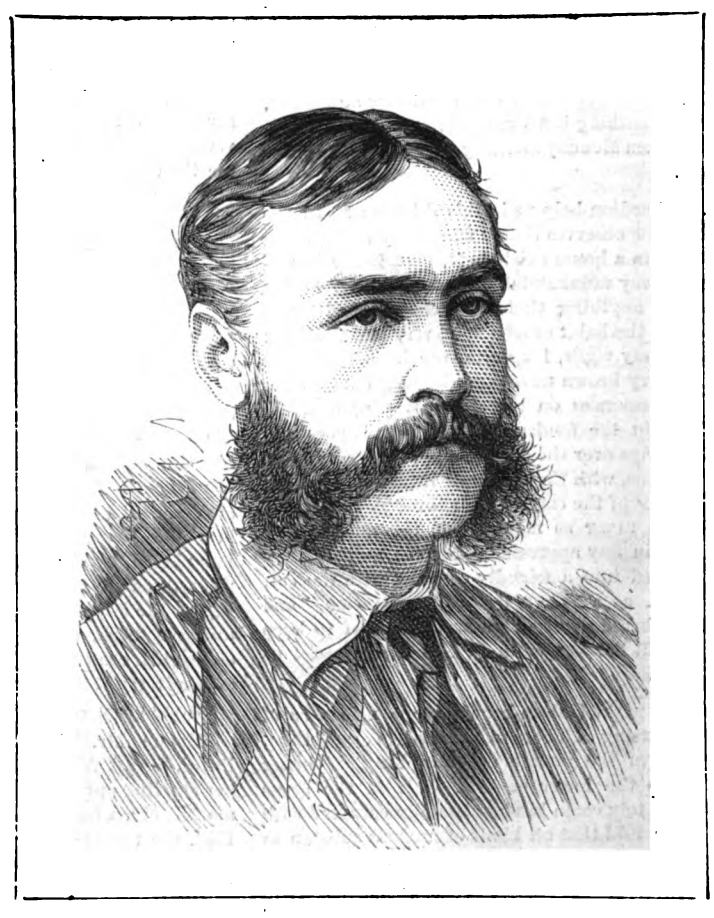
> Her voice the Music of the Spheres,
> So loud it deafens people's ears.

Is it in Shakspeare? To my shame, I have not got a Cowden Clarke's "Concordance."

I am asked to say a good word for St. Andrew's Waterside Mission for Sailors, Emigrants, and Fishermen. I do not know whether any words of mine can do good; but, such as they are, I am glad to use them in saying that the admirable movement to which I am alluding originated some fifteen years ago, when it occurred to an excellent clergyman at Gravesend that some benefit might be done to mariners and emigrants, who often had to pass months at sea without newspapers and with scarcely a book to read, by starting them at the outset of their voyage with a stock of amusing and instructive literature, especially illustrated papers. The first appeal of the estimable clergyman in question was made in the columns of the Illustrated London News, resulting in donations to the Mission of some thousands of books, pamphlets, periodicals, and illustrated papers.

The dépôt of the Gravesend Waterside Mission and the office of the Secretary are at 36, City Chambers, Railway-place, Fenchurch-street, London, E.C.; and the Treasurer is the Rev. Canon Scarth, Holy Trinity Vicarage, Gravesend, Kent. Since the Mission began its kindly, useful work about four thousand ships have been supplied with compact little libraries; and thousands upon thousands of pamphlets and periodicals have been distributed among foreign Seamen's Hospitals and Sailors' Homes, and to fishing fleets and coasting vessels. I would strongly press the claims of the Gravesend Waterside Mission upon members of Parliament and upon my colleagues in Journalism, who often do not know what to do with the piles of miscellaneous papers which accumulate in their houses and offices.

G. A. S



Digitized by Google

THE LATE LORD CHIEF BARON SIR FITZROY KELLY.—SEE PAGE 326.

THE LATE CAPTAIN GEORGE M. CRUICKSHANK, R.E.,
KILLED IN THE SORTIE FROM CANDAHAR.—SEE PAGE 326.

THE LATE MR. G. F. GRACE, THE CRICKETER.
SEE PAGE 326.

Digitized by Google

THE DISASTROUS LANDSLIP IN INDIA.

SEE PAGE 328.

NAINI TAL: THE CHURCH—A PEEP FROM THE UPPER MALL.

NAINI TAL: CAPTAIN BIRNEY'S HOUSE, ABOVE THE HOTEL.

Digitized by Google

PARISIAN SAYINGS AND DOINGS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Paris, Tuesday, Sept. 28.

On Thursday morning the Journal Officiel announced that France had a new Ministry, or rather some new Ministers. The Cabinet is, in fact, composed as follows:—M. Jules Ferry, President of the Council, maintains the portfolio of Public Instruction and Fine Arts; M. Barthélemy St. Hilaire, Minister of Foreign Affairs; M. Sadi Carnot, Minister of Public Works; Admiral Cloué, Minister of Marine; M. Constans remains Minister of Public Worship; General Farre, of War; M. Cazot, of Justice; M. Magnin, of Finance; M. Cochery, of Posts and Telegraphs; and M. Tirard, of Agriculture and Commerce. The only two new names in this Ministry are those of Cloué and Barthélemy St. Hilaire. M. Sadi Carnot was already Under-Secretary in the last Ministry. The wits have discovered in the anagram of Carnot, carton, and in that of Cloué, coulé, and they have jumped to the conclusion that the new Ministry is a Ministère de Carton, and that it is already as good as coulé. The general opinion is that it does not amount to much, but it will probably be able to drag along until the meeting of the Chambers. It announces itself loudly as a Ministry of Peace, and M. Constans is preparing hostilities against the unauthorised religious congregations. We are now told that the famous decrees will be enforced certainly not later than Oct. 10.

I read in La Vérité the following list of the complimentary appellations which have already been bestowed upon the Jules Ferry Cabinet:—Le Décapité, le cabinet Welche-Graeff, le cabinet Ruy-Blas, le cabinet des commis, le cabinet des ganaches, le cabinet des bouche-trous, le cabinet de la fausse-couche, le cabinet de deux-mois, le cabinet de la Vengeance de M. Thiers, le cabinet faute de grives, le cabinet plus ça change, le cabinet par contumace, le cabinet de Sainte-Périne, le cabinet de Charenton, le cabinet rapiécé, le cabinet mort-né, le cabinet de la folie, le cabinet de la paperasserie, le cabinet du gâchis, le cabinet des merles, le cabinet des incapacités, le cabinet des pantins, le cabinet des irresponsables. To this list must be added that of the Ministère Benoïton, so called because, like the heroine of Sardou's play, the Ministers are always "out" at whatever Ministry you may call. M. Gambetta was to follow their example to-day, leaving Paris for Crêtes, on the Lake of Geneva, where he will be the guest of Madame Arnaud de l'Ariège, and where he intends to try to combat his increasing obesity by rowing, fencing, bowls, nine-pins, and other athletic exercises.

According to the Berlin correspondent of the Times, the new Minister of Foreign Affairs is a famous Sanskrit scholar. M. Barthélemy Saint Hilaire is entirely unacquainted with that language. His speciality is Greek, and his opus magnum is a French translation of the works of Aristotle. M. Saint-Hilaire also owns to a verse translation of the "Iliad," made while riding in omnibuses. The regular step of the horses, he said once, used to help him in marking the cadence of the verse. O Pegasus!

Sept. 29, the fête of Saint Michael, will be a great day at Frohsdorff, if we are to believe the Legitimist press. But every year since the fall of the Empire the Legitimist organs have threatened the Pretender with an invasion of his dining-room, and then, when the great day arrived, it has been found that there were twelve or fifteen guests, all told. It was not worth while putting an extra leaf in the dining-table. This year great efforts have been made to get some of the leading commercial men and manufacturers to go down to Frohsdorff, but all in vain. M. Pouyer-Quertier even, in spite of his recent conversion to the doctrine of Divine right, refuses to quit Rouen in order to clink glasses with the King.

The Rappel, which is the journal officiel of Victor Hugo, announced last week that the master was about to publish a poem entitled l'Ane. A few days ago some clever journal discovered that this was a misprint for l'Ame. Thereupon there sprang up a bewildering controversy; and whether the title of the poem be l'Ane or l'Ame is a matter still sub judice. Victor Hugo has written a poem on the toad, why should he not write on the ass? This controversy was a subject of great glee at a dinner at the master's house the other night, and M. Louis Blanc, who was amongst the guests, seized the occasion to pronounce an eloquent panegyric of the ass, whom he compared to the proletariate, always overburdened, and always beaten. "I find in this poor disinherited beast," he said, "none but good qualities. He represents in our eyes the proletariate; and I love to defend him." The shade of Laurence Sterne might have smiled that night on the mellifluous Corsican brother.

Novelties of any importance are still scarce at the Paris theatres. The new manager of the Odéon has re-established the classical Friday nights for the benefit of the students and lovers of letters who still take pleasure in seeing Corneille and Racine well played. At the Château d'Eau an ingenious melodrama of Edouard Philippe has been produced with success. I say ingenious designedly, for the piece seems to contain a résumé of all the tricks of plot and scenic effect which are to be found in the works of Bouchardy, Dennery, and Pixérécourt put together. The Théâtre Français since the departure of Sarah Bernhardt has been very active; the repertory has been revived; several promising young actors have made débuts; and one can now go to the house three or four times a week without being obliged to listen to nothing but the eternal "Hernani" or the irrepressible "Four-chambault."

Apropos of Sarah Bernhardt, it has been calculated that, during her Danish visit and her tour in the French provinces, she made about half a million francs. Her success at Lyons and Marseilles was immense.

The pending lawsuit between the managers of the Gaiety Theatre and M. Coquelin, of the Comédie Française, has been abandoned; and the latter has arranged with Mr. M. L. Mayer to play in London, in June, 1882, in his ordinary repertory, in which he will be supported by artistes of the Comédie Française. This time there will be no danger of M. Coquelin being forced to break his engagement, as it has the written sanction of the administrator of the Comédie Française.

The literary event of the week has been the appearance of a new pamphlet by M. Alexandre Dumas the younger, entitled "Les Femmes qui tuent et les Femmes qui votent." In it M. Dumas speaks of the recent cases of vitriol-throwing and shooting, of which the heroines have been Mdme. de Tilly, Hélène Dumaire, and Marie Bière. Mr. Dumas concludes in favour of the establishment of divorce; and in the second and more interesting part of his pamphlet he argues in favour of giving the suffrage to women, defends polygamy, prophecies a great future for the fair sex by the aid of science, and enounces a dozen pretty and daring doctrines to show what a clever man he is. Dumas's morality, however, is what the Americans call "thin paper," and the defect of his philosophy is that he is constantly anticipating Voltaire and even Aristotle. But his pamphlet is, nevertheless, entertaining enough.

Félix Pyat has opened a fierce campaign against M. Gambetta in his new journal, La Commune. The socialist and democratic party are apparently gaining ground every day, and during the past two months more than a dozen Republican newspapers have abandoned the leader of the Left and joined the bands of the anti-Gambettists. Next month the town of Angers intends to unveil a statue to the great sculptor, David (d'Angers). M. Gambetta has promised to be present, and it is understood that he intends to make a great speech on the occasion, after which his star will probably shine brighter than ever. At least, judging from his past tactics, we may reasonably anticipate that his eloquence will convince people that he is at any rate a great artist, if not a great politician.

The French are great haters not only of the Germans but of each other. How many Frenchmen are there, for instance, who accept the recent amnesty loyally and without arrière pensée? I have in my letters frequently called attention to the violent hatreds that are fostered by the returned Communists, the Anarchists, and the various categories of Socialists, and to the terrible assault that the French proletariate, the Fourth Estate as it calls itself, is actively preparing against the bourgeoisie. But the bourgeoisie is just as violent in its detestation of its political and social enemies. The case of Captain Matuszewicz has shown this in the case of the army. Captain Matuszewicz was condemned for participation in the Commune. He was included in the amnesty. The effect of amnesty is to efface and destroy even the remembrance of the crime and its penalty. By the law of July 11, 1880, Captain Matuszewicz found himself again Captain in the French Army; but in order to put him legally in non-activity, the Minister of War appointed him Captain in the 109th Regiment of the Line, and the same day put him in non-activity par retrait d'emploi. This simple measure, which was absolutely regular and legal, and, indeed, the only measure possible, has caused great excitement in the army and in the reactionary press, and several officers have handed in their resignations in consequence. These "turbulent Gallics" are full of elements of discord. But it must always be borne in mind that if you went down to Dijon, where folk are busy making mustard, or to the Medoc district, where the vintage is going on, you would not hear much about Gambetta or Félix Pyat, or the amnesty, or any other of the burning questions that occupy the passions of the Parisians. T. C.

THE LATE LORD CHIEF BARON.

The late Sir Fitzroy Kelly, Lord Chief Baron of the Court of Exchequer, whose death, at nearly eighty-four years of age, was recorded last week, has been, during more than half a century, a well-known personage among contemporary members of the legal profession, and was long an active politician. He was born in October, 1796, son of Captain Robert Hawke Kelly, R.N., who was killed at Seringapatam. He was called to the Bar in 1824, at Lincoln's Inn, practised on the Norfolk and Home Circuits, and became a Queen's Counsel in 1835. He sat in the House of Commons for Ipswich from 1838 to 1841, and for Cambridge from 1843 to 1847, and in 1852 for Harwich, and afterwards for East Suffolk. He was appointed Solicitor-General by Sir Robert Peel's Government in 1845, and by Lord Derby's Government in 1852, and Attorney-General in 1858. In 1866, he succeeded Sir Frederick Pollock as Lord Chief Baron of the Court of Exchequer. Among his best-remembered performances at the Bar were his defence, in 1840, of Frost and the other Chartists tried for the riots at Newport, in South Wales; his defence of John Tawell, who was tried and hanged for the murder of a woman in Berkshire, in March, 1845, and his prosecution of Dr. Simon Bernard, in 1858, for alleged complicity in the Orsini plot against the life of Napoleon III. He was a diligent and clear-headed Judge, and continued to sit on the Bench to the end of his long life.

The Portrait is from a photograph by the London Stereoscopic Company.

THE LATE CAPTAIN G. M. CRUICKSHANK.

In our recent notice of the late Brigadier-General H. F. Brooke, who was killed in the unsuccessful sortie of the besieged British garrison at Candahar on Aug. 16, we mentioned that he fell in the act of endeavouring to save the life of a wounded brother officer. The officer referred to, who soon afterwards died of his wounds, was Captain George Macdonald Cruickshank, R.E., late executive engineer of the Department of Public Works at Sattara. He was third son of the late Major J. J. F. Cruickshank, of the Bombay Engineers, and was thirty-nine years of age. Having been educated for his profession at Addiscombe and at Chatham, he entered the service in 1860, received his commission as Lieutenant in that year, and was promoted to be Captain in September, 1871; he would have attained the rank of Major in another year from the present time. He was highly distinguished in the service, and had qualified for army-signalling; his exertions during the siege, in preparing the defences of the citadel, were specially commended. The Rev. G. B. Streeten, Chaplain at Sattara, who sends us the photograph of Captain Cruickshank, speaks also of the personal character of his lamented friend, and of his religious consistency as "a true Churchman." Among his comrades, in general, he was much esteemed, and was noted also as a good cricket-player, lawn-tennis player, and gentleman-rider.

The photograph is by Messrs. Lock and Whitfield.

THE LATE MR. G. F. GRACE.

The regretted death, at an early age, of this gentleman, the youngest of three brothers—"the Three Graces"—who are esteemed most highly as proficients in the English manly game of cricket, was mentioned in our last. They all took part in the great match played at Kennington Oval, three weeks ago, by Lord Harris's English Eleven against the Australians. Dr. W. G. Grace, Mr. E. M. Grace, and Mr. G. F. Grace had often played together, and possessed, as it seemed, an hereditary talent in this way; their father, the late Dr. Grace, and their uncle, Mr. Alfred Pocock, being eminent Gloucestershire players. Mr. G. F. Grace was much esteemed personally, and his merits as a gentleman Cricket-player are testified by the writer of our record of "National Sports."

He was buried last Monday at the village of Downend, near Bristol, the place where his family have long resided. The funeral was attended by 3000 persons, amongst whom were all the leading cricket-players of Gloucestershire.

The Portrait is from a photograph by Messrs. J. Russell and Sons, of Chichester.

Sir Spencer Maryon Wilson has subscribed £100 to the Army Coffee Taverns scheme, and Lord Cranbrook has also forwarded a donation. The munificence of members of the present and the previous Government in contributing to this method of improving the condition of the soldier is most satisfactory.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

The news of the death of Mr. G. F. Grace must have been a great shock to his many friends and acquaintances, few of whom had even heard that he was ill. He caught a severe cold in the United South match at Stroud; and, though he thought so little of it that he started to take part in a match at Winchester on the 15th ult., he became so much worse that he was compelled to stop at Basingstoke. Inflammation of the lungs set in; and, though he once appeared to rally and to be fairly on the road to convalescence, a relapse took place, and he died on the 22nd ult. Mr. G. F. Grace was the youngest of the famous family of cricketers, and was in his thirtieth year. At the early age of ten he gave great promise of future excellence, and when he was only sixteen appeared with decided success in several first-class matches. Though in the very first rank, both as a batsman and bowler, he was, perhaps, even more remarkable for the extraordinary brilliancy of his fielding, which has never been excelled, and the magnificent catch with which he disposed of Bonner, in the late contest between England and Australia, at the Oval, was one of the features of the match.

Perfect weather and a better card than we have seen at Newmarket for a very long time, signalised the opening day of the First October Meeting. The Abbot was only opposed by Milan and Edelweiss for the Grand Duke Michael Stakes, and, at last, the luckless little son of Hermit scored a win, and, moreover, disposed of Edelweiss in such easy style that the Fyfield horse retired to a hopeless price for the Cesarewitch. Thebais had only Earl Godwin to beat for the Buckenham Stakes; and then Lamprey won the First Nursery Stakes from a dozen opponents, which included some fair performers in Montrose, Œnone, and Amy Melville. Sir Marmaduke, a "dark" son of Macaroni, was made a very hot favourite for the Hopeful Stakes, while there were some promising reports of Acheron, an own sister to Charon and The Abbot, who also appeared in public for the first time. Both, however, ran badly, while Iroquois, who had a 9 lb. penalty, was last throughout, and the race fell to Maskelyne, a neatly-named son of Albert Victor and Palmistry. Of course the great event of the day was the third meeting of Robert the Devil and Bend Or, in the Second Great Foal Stakes, which was worth nearly £3000. It was run Across the Flat, an easy course, which was decidedly in favour of the Derby winner, and, as the remaining five competitors were of very moderate class, "Robert" was compelled to make his own running. This resulted in an altogether falsely-run race, and, after a very scrambling finish, Bend Or managed to get within a head of his great rival. The partisans of the Duke of Westminster's colt maintain that, but for stumbling in the last couple of strides, he would have won; but if the battle is fought once more, and a strong pace ensured, we feel sure that Robert the Devil will fully maintain his supremacy. Favo easily beat Lord Clive in a match, and a grand day's sport was wound up with a Triennial Produce Stakes, for which odds of 2 to 1 were eagerly laid on Jessie Agnes; but the mare, who has been heavily backed for the Cesarewitch, performed wretchedly, and was unplaced to the very moderate Rycerski, on whom Fordham scored his third victory. Archer also rode three winners during the day.

The North of Ireland Union (Mourne Park) Meeting, which took place last week, proved a great success, and attracted a fair sprinkling of English and Scotch coursers. The Kilmorey Cup was won by Dashaway, by Surprise—Remembrance, who, however, ran two undecideds with Contractor before he could beat him in the final tie. Sapper, by Master Avon—Wide-awake, a very promising puppy, won the Brownlow Cup. Mr. Wentworth judged exceedingly well, and, in the unfortunate absence of Hoystead from illness, Mr. T. Dickson performed the duties of slipper in most professional style.

Australia v. Notts was finished on Saturday afternoon last, the county team winning by one wicket, amid a scene of the greatest enthusiasm and excitement. The ground was very heavy, and the bowlers had matters all their own way, Shaw taking twelve wickets for 95 runs, while Boyle ran him hard with ten for 87. Shrewsbury (21, and, not out, 66) and Barnes (27 and 42) did the whole of the scoring for the Nottingham team, as not one of the remaining nine got into double figures in either innings; and, on the other side, Alexander (40), Murdoch (42), and Bonner (25), were responsible for nearly all the runs. Shrewsbury's second innings was a very fine display of batting, though he gave one chance. The Australians began their last match against the Players of England at the Crystal Palace on Monday. The wicket was very treacherous, and the light so bad on Tuesday that long scores were quite out of the question, and it was as much luck as anything else that gave the colonial team a victory by two wickets. Barnes (39) was the only one of the Players who performed at all well with the bat, and Mycroft's bowling proved far more deadly than Shaw's. On the other side, Palmer took eleven wickets at an expense of only 99 runs; and, though the batting was fairly good in the first innings, in the second the 40 runs which were required to gain a victory were only obtained at an expense of eight wickets.

The billiard-match for £200 a side, between John Roberts, jun., and W. Mitchell, was played at St. James's Hall on Monday evening. The game was 2000 up, Mitchell receiving a start of 400 points. Roberts rapidly made up his leeway, and with breaks of 66 (9 and 16), 60 (16), 46, 59, 207 (16 and 30), and 140 (42), reached 713 to 656. It was then Mitchell's turn, and a splendid break of 319 (100), and another of 123 (40), recovered him nearly all his lost ground. After this, however, he fell off, and only making two more good breaks—151 (46) and 125 (36)—was easily beaten by no less than 541 points. The winner's remaining chief contributions were 99, 236 (76), 70, 103, 130, 60, 87, and 354 (unfinished). The figures in brackets denote the number of consecutive spot strokes. Roberts has never played a more dashing and brilliant game; but Mitchell, though he had the worst of the luck, has often appeared to greater advantage.

The judge of the Southwark County Court on Monday gave a Mr. West, of the Beehive public-house, Warner-street, New Kent-road, a verdict for £9 odd and costs against the Phœnix Company, who had, by cutting off his gas, compelled him to pay that amount which was owing by a former tenant.

A sermon was preached in aid of the Hospital for Consumption and Diseases of the Chest, Brompton, on Sunday morning last, at Holy Trinity Church, West Hill, Wandsworth, by the Rev. Samuel Gilbert Scott, M.A., Vicar of St. Saviour's, Battersea. The collection realised £13 7s. 10d. Mr. Scott observed that the hospital was spending the whole of Miss Read's legacy, and even more, in the erection of a new extension building, which had become necessary on account of the extreme pressure of applicants for admission, there being between 200 and 300 now waiting their turns. To enable the committee to carry out this great additional work, together with the maintenance of the present hospital, an increase of £10,000 a year would be required. The evening offertory was devoted to the same object.

Digitized by Google

THE PLAYHOUSES.

Referring to Mr. Pinero's delicate and graceful comedy or "Bygones," the first performance of which preceded the revival of the "Corsican Brothers" at the Lyceum on Saturday week, and to which in the last "Playhouses" I was unable to notice at length, I scarcely know whether I shall find anybody to agree with me in the opinion that a slight amount of injustice is done both to authors and artistes by the production of a drama of real intellectual merit and dramatic merit as a mere lever de rideau. In all probability, the box and stalls patrons of the Lyceum had scarcely finished their dinners when the curtain rang up for Mr. Pinero's drama. Levers de rideau are often listened to either with impatience or with indifference; but there was so much refinement and so much quiet pathos in "Bygones" that the play soon aroused the interest and ultimately the enthusiastic applause of that part of the audience who had come early; while those who only arrived in time to see the curtain rise on "The Corsican Brothers" lost a very great treat by missing the comedy. Naturally, Mr. Irving is determined that every dish in his bill of fare shall be of first-rate quality, and he may disdain to "play the people in" with a hackneyed "stock farce;" but many playgoers, perhaps, would prefer "Bygones" after instead of before "The Corsican Brothers."

The plot of "Bygones" is very simple and very touching. A beautiful young girl, an orphan, who has been adopted by a benevolent old clergyman, is, owing to some family misfortunes which in no way inculpate her, shunned and ostracised by all and sundry except the good clergyman and an old Italian professor, her tutor. But she is cruelly repudiated by the lover whom she adores. The old Italian professor, after indignantly remonstrating with the faithless swain, avows his own long pent-up love for the deserted young lady, and, informing her that he is the possessor of a noble title, and could at once regain his wealth and honours if he chose to make peace with the Austrian Government, proposes marriage to her. The young lady, in desperation, accepts him; but when her quondam admirer reappears on the scene, all her old love for him revives; and the pair fly into each other's arms on the old and delightful principle laid down in Molière's "Dépit Amoureux." The poor old Italian professor departs in doleful resignation to teach the conjugation of irregular verbs elsewhere. There is just one little touch of similarity between this dénouement and that of John Howard Payne's petite comedy of "Love in Humble Life" (which is from the "Michel et Christine" of Scribe) and the apology made by Howard Payne in his prefatory remarks to his petite comedy for the preference shown by Christine for Carlitz instead of Ronslaus, might serve Mr. Pinero as an excuse for his heroine jilting the Professor and marrying the man who had jilted her. "If women," wrote Mr. Payne, "will be anomalous in their affections, must not dramatic authors paint them as they find them? Besides, had Christine married Ronslaus when she really loved Carlitz, what would have become of that most endearing of female virtues—constancy?" Apart from the slight similarity in a single incident which I have noted, Mr. Pinero's idyll is altogether original, and is full of neat and sparkling writing. He himself played the Italian professor, and in "make up" looked very much as Lord Lytton's Doctor Riccabocca might be supposed to have looked.

The Prince of Wales's Theatre was reopened for the season, under the management of Mr. Edgar Bruce, on Saturday last, with Messrs. Grove and Merivale's subtly vigorous play of "Forget Me Not"—a drama singularly foreign in its construction, "situations," and general sentiment, but which utterly defies you to prove that in any jot or tittle of incident or dialogue it is borrowed, imitated, or even remotely paraphrased from a foreign original. It is throughout a most remarkable example, not only of dramatic but of literary thought and skill; and who that has ever been to Hombourg, or Baden-Baden, or Spa in the old days, or to Monte Carlo in the present ones, will venture to say that the character of the adventuress impersonated with such eloquence, force, and passion by Miss Geneviève Ward, is in the slightest degree exaggerated? This accomplished actress has made the part thoroughly her own—as completely as Mr. Jefferson has made Rip Van Winkle and Mr. Sothern Lord Dundreary so much "personal property;" nay, she has given to the unscrupulous but still to be compassionated Marquise many developments which were, perhaps, not contemplated by Messrs. Grove and Merivale themselves. I see that the excision by Miss Ward of one character from the piece, that of the pretty but wholly uninteresting young widow, has led to sundry legal proceedings in the Court of Chancery, the settlement of which is awaited with lively anxiety, both by dramatic artistes and dramatic authors.

As regards the other dramatis personæ, Mr. Forbes Robertson has been substituted for Mr. John Clayton as Sir Horace Welby; Mr. Beerbohm Tree, who succeeded Mr. J. G. Shore, is still the Italian Prince Malliotti; Mrs. Leigh Murray's Mrs. Foley is as quaint and chatty as ever; and Miss Kate Pattison has full scope for her grace and vivacity as Alice Verney. Mr. Flockton, as Barrato, had he been acquainted with the DeiFranchi family in Corsica, might have had something significant to say on that little matter in dispute between the Colonna and the Orsini. Assuredly Mr. Flockton would not have allowed the vendetta to be reconciled without somebody else being killed.

At the Vaudeville Theatre on this same Saturday, Messrs. Thomas Thorne and David James likewise opened their hospitable doors. The opening piece was an inoffensive and rather pretty little comedy-drama, in one act, by Mr. Joseph J. Dilley, called "Auld Acquaintance." It does not mean very much; but what it means is meant very well indeed; and there are some neat little touches of tenderness towards the close. Middle-aged gentleman marries a young lady to whom he has been attached in the days of "auld lang syne," but whom he had formerly broken his plighted troth to. Tardily compensated bride does not believe that her husband loves her as much as ought to do. Fancies that he loves other lady, and that he is having portrait of "L'Autre" painted by a cousin, to hang in his study. Great scene of jealousy and recrimination. Extra-judicial separation threatened. Friendly and humorous family doctor intervenes to set matters right. Puts jealous wife behind screen. Jealous wife overhears broken-hearted but constant husband soliloquising over portrait which is really that of his lawful spouse, who rushes from behind screen, kneels, sobs, and asks forgiveness. Tableau. Curtain. End. Mr. Grahame was the middle-aged husband; and Miss Bishop the affectionate but suspicious wife; and their daughter Amy was played by Miss M. Abingdon. Mr. Maclean was the humorous and benevolent medical man.

After this agreeable trifle came Mr. E. C. Lankester's farcical comedy of "The Guv'nor," which, having been already criticised in this Journal, needs no fresh analysis on my part; but I had never witnessed it before I went to the Vaudeville last Saturday; and I should wish to add one more to the many tributes of admiration which have been bestowed on all the artistes who sustain the characters in the whimsical piece of drollery in question. The ladies and gentlemen are, in their several ways, all good. Mr. Maclean as the purse-proud and retired confectioner, Mr. Butterscotch; Mr. W. Hargreaves as the retired and inquisitive pickle manufacturer, Mr. Jellicoe; Mr. W. Lestocq as the Yorkshire groom, Gregory; Mr. J. G. Grahame as the medical student, Theodore Macclesfield; Miss Marie Illington as Mrs. Butterscotch; Miss Abingdon as the despotic ex-lollipop-maker's daughter, Kate; Miss Sophie Larkin as Mrs. Macclesfield; and Miss Kate Bishop as Carrie, her daughter, all worked steadily, intelligently, and harmoniously in sustaining the interest and keeping up the fun of a piece which depends almost entirely on the dexterous exposition of character; and they formed a compact and sparkling setting for the two central gems of "The Guv'nor," Mr. Thomas Thorne's Freddy Butterscotch, the stuttering lover of Carrie Macclesfield, and Mr. David James's Old Macclesfield, the deaf boat-builder of Putney. Comparisons are proverbially odious; and possibly Mr. Thorne does not care about being compared with any other comedian. Still, I could not help being reminded, when I saw him play Freddy Butterscotch, of Mr. Sothern twenty years ago. On principle, I object to his stuttering and stammering as much as I do to Mr. David James's wonderful representation of deafness. I have always thought that ridiculous imitations on the stage of the physical infirmities with which Providence has been pleased to afflict some of us is not seemly; but long-established precedent and the custom of the drama are against me. I believe that one of the first farces I ever saw was "Deaf as a Post" ("Le Sourd; ou, l'Auberge Pleine"); and, at all events, I found myself on Saturday impartially roaring with laughter at Mr. James's deafness and Mr. Thorne's impediment of speech. As for Mr. David James's presentment of the Putney boat-builder, quite apart from the farcical assumption of surdity, I look upon it as a wholly original creation, and virtually inimitable. The "old waterside character's" mingled stinginess and joviality, his tyrannical and overbearing disposition, his pig-headed obstinacy, the way in which he bullies his wife and daughter, his joy, his anger, his anxiety and his suspicions, his lurching gait, his self-complacent leer and guffaw when he thinks that he has hit the right nail on the head, are all brought before us with such astonishing breadth of light and shade, absence of mannerism or stage trickery, and absolute verisimilitude by Mr. David James, that, to my thinking, they belong not only to the domain of cultivated talent and capacity, but to that of real Genius.

"Dot," Mr. Dion Boucicault's dramatised version of Dickens's "Cricket on the Hearth," was revived at the Folly Theatre as an afternoon performance on Wednesday last week, with Miss Cavalier as Dot and Mr. Toole as Caleb Plummer. I purpose going to see it this present Saturday afternoon.

G. A. S.

MUSIC.

COVENT GARDEN PROMENADE CONCERTS.

Messrs. Gatti's series of these concerts closed on Tuesday evening, having been carried on with great energy and enterprise since the opening night, on July 31. The last of the classical programmes included very effective orchestral performances of Mendelssohn's overture "Melusine," the "Scherzo" from Schubert's great symphony in C (No. 9), and the whole of Beethoven's eighth symphony (in F). Madame Essipoff gave a brilliant rendering of Schumann's pianoforte concerto in A minor, and vocal pieces were effectively sung by Misses A. Marriott, Orridge, and Damian, and Mr. Santley. The two ladies first named gave Rubinstein's duet, "The Wanderer's Night-song," and Mr. Santley sang Schubert's romance, "Adieu," each with much success. Miss Damian was heard for the first time at these concerts, and her agreeable contralto voice and refined style were advantageously displayed in the old Italian aria of Rossi, "Ah! rendimi." This young lady's efficiency both in oratorio and secular music was recently proved at the Gloucester Festival, and her recent progress has been such as to promise well for her future career. On the Friday an English selection was given, the chief feature having been Mr. F. H. Cowen's cantata, "The Rose Maiden," which was very effectively rendered by Miss M. Davies, Madame Patey, Mr. E. Lloyd, and Mr. Maybrick, and the choruses by Mr. W. Lemare's choir.

The programme of humorous music, which obtained such special success the week before last, has been repeated several times. It was given again at the special concert for the benefit of Messrs. Gatti on Saturday, which was to have been the closing night, and was announced for each of the extra performances of Monday and Tuesday, substituting Haydn's Toy Symphony for that of Bernhard Romberg. The season is said to have been a very successful one—a result that has been thoroughly earned by the many and varied attractions provided. The special excellence of the orchestra, and of the various instrumental soloists, and the plentiful provision of vocal music contributed by many of the most eminent artists, have given peculiar interest to the concerts, which have been most ably conducted by Mr. F. H. Cowen and his occasional deputy, Mr. A. Burnett.

Covent Garden Theatre is to reopen this (Saturday) evening for a series of similar concerts, under the direction of Mr. Samuel Hayes, with Mr. H. Weist Hill as conductor and Herr Gung'l as director of the dance music. A grand orchestra and many renowned solo vocalists and instrumentalists will be engaged, choral music being also included in the scheme.

Mr. Manns's Saturday evening promenade concerts at the Crystal Palace have been carried on with great spirit. At the last but one (last week) the orchestral pieces were Meyerbeer's "Coronation March," Auber's overture to "Le Cheval de Bronze," the march movement from Raff's "Lenore" symphony, Dvorak's "Slavonian Dances" (first set), some extracts from Wagner's "Die Meistersinger," the "Cortége March" from Gounod's "La Reine de Saba," Rossini's overture to "Semiramide," and several light dance pieces. That sterling violinist, Herr Pollitzer (estimable both as a leader and a soloist) played a "Romance" and "Polonoise" of his own (with orchestral accompaniments). Vocal pieces were contributed by Mdlle. Renz, Mr. B. Lane, and Mr. W. H. Burgon. Such concerts as these must be a real boon to inhabitants of Sydenham and the neighbourhood.

The prospectus of the twenty-fifth series of Saturday afternoon concerts at the Crystal Palace has just been issued. There will be, as heretofore, eleven concerts before Christmas, and twelve afterwards, with the customary extra concert for the benefit of Mr. Manns, the conductor. In addition to many standard works already familiar at these performances, the following are announced for probable production. Joachim Raff's symphony entitled "Summer;" an orchestral suite, "Roma," by the late Georges Bizet, the composer of the successful opera "Carmen;" a pianoforte concerto by the late Hermann Goetz, who has become widely known by his fine symphony in F minor and his opera "The Taming of the Shrew" ("Die Widerspänstigen Zahmung"); a symphony by Bandini, which gained the first prize as the best of ninety-two such works at Turin in July last; a symphonic poem, "My Fatherland," by Smetana; a festival overture, "Mors janua vitæ," by Mr. Wingham; some ballet music from Ponchieli's "Le Due Gemelle;" two movements ("Zwiegespräch" and "Carnaval" from Hofmann's "Italian Love Stories;" M. Saint-Saëns's overture to "The Yellow Princess;" a Scottish fantasia for orchestra, entitled "Burns," by A. C. Mackenzie; a symphony (in D) by Schubert, and his overture to "Des Teufel's Lustschloss;" a "Scherzo" and a "Serenade," both for strings, respectively by Cherubini and Mozart; and (it is hoped) a manuscript orchestral symphony by the late Sterndale Bennett. Besides these works, there are promises of Mr. Arthur Sullivan's new sacred cantata, "The Martyr of Antioch" (composed for and to be produced at the Leeds Festival this month); and a new dramatic cantata, entitled "Columbus," composed by Mr. H. Gadsby. Eminent solo vocalists and instrumentalists are engaged, and the arrangements altogether promise well for the interest of the series.

On Saturday Professor Macfarren, Principal of the Royal Academy of Music, addressed the students on the occasion of the beginning of the new academic year. He said they did not come there to study music as an amusement. To be a musician was a great and glorious privilege. Music uttered what was beyond the reach of words; and, whereas speech might describe our feelings, music went beyond the description and produced the feeling itself. The Professor dwelt at some length on the objects of musical study, and the sentiments under which they should be pursued.

Mr. Edwin Holland has been appointed one of the professors of singing at the Royal Academy of Music.

The number of candidates examined in music during the last twelve months by the various English examining bodies is unusually large. Trinity College, London, heads the list with 5669; the University of Cambridge comes next with 1185; the Society of Arts third with 596; and the University of Oxford last, with 281: the combined total being 7731 candidates.

A testimonial is to be presented to Dr. Lloyd Fowle, of Winchester, in recognition of his services to music for a quarter of a century. The Bishop of Manchester, Sir Michael Costa, and Sir George Elvey are among the subscribers to the fund.

The third series of organ recitals at Angell Town Institution, Brixton, begins this (Saturday) evening, and will continue until Christmas.

PHEASANT-SHOOTING.

Pheasant-shooting in October is very pleasant, for as the autumn-shoot of green just tips the oaks, and the tints upon the trees are daily deepening, all the surroundings are so good that your appreciation of them adds to your enjoyment of the sport. There is a glorious combination of colour, then, in the velvet-greens on the wooded knolls, and in the fading ferns and bracken—brown-stained and splashed with hues from gold to purple—which seems to harmonise with the game you seek; and you note it as the cock-bird, with a whir, gets up and rockets—lord of the woods—in all his brilliancy. Pheasants will stick to the woods even when flushed by the beaters; and you can also begin with them as soon as you like; for if you watch where they feed overnight you will find them near there in the morning, except when the night has been wet, when the brood—the "nide"—will take to the hedgerows to escape from the drip of the branches. Pheasant-breeding, however, is expensive work, not only from its belongings, but because, in addition to its natural enemies—weasel, fox, stoat, rat, and hedgehog—the bird is constantly exposed to the wiles of the poachers and to the arts of their set—such as charcoal-burners, earth-stoppers, labourers, woodmen, roadmen, ditchers and drainers, and perhaps a skulking keeper, for trusty men are scarce.

Some sportsmen, when pheasant-shooting, prefer to have with them a steady old pointer or spaniel; but springers are best, as they hunt mute, keep to you; and never tire; and they are good searchers, too, no game or vermin escaping them. There is another advantage with springers, they make each bird rise, and thus they give good shots, which you may not get with a pointer, as the pheasants will constantly run from the shooter, and he then only stalks up to "a hot corner," and gets battue-work—fatal enough to them, but not true sport. Where springers are used, the Clumber ones are best, though some still stick to the Sussex; whilst of pointers, the old Norfolk breed is preferred. Some use cockers—Devonshire or Welsh; as, though they are often mute—like the Clumbers—they generally give tongue, varying their note to the kind of bird flushed by them. The Sussex springers are famous workers; but the Clumber spaniel is soon knocked up. In covert-shooting there is decided sport; but accuracy of fire from ten or twelve crack shots is all that belongs to the battue business.

When the woods to be shot over are large and dense they are very often quartered; but in small copses and plantations it is not required. The shooters and the beaters being duly posted, the latter begin to drive the game, sometimes with a dog or two, but more often without, as the sound of their taps as they hit the trees soon makes the game get up. This beating should be thorough, that no pheasants escape, as in October, while the leafage remains, a whole nide may lie close in a very small compass; though when dogs are used, and they know their business, this will not often happen, as when they own a haunt, quest freely, and double their notes, their master presses forward, for he knows that game is there. At first, when the beaters begin, ground-game is started, when rabbits show their white tails and make for the open, and hares go loppeting through dead leaves, to stop, sit up, and listen, ere, with suddenly dropped ears, they go away at speed. Then as the men advance, the cry "cock over!" comes; and as a shot is heard, in answer to it, down drops the bird. "Well-killed," says somebody; for though you can be sure of your mark with a flying bird, through his own good size and plumage, it is not so easy to settle "a rocketer" when he is high up overhead.

Mr. William Fraser, S.S.C., Assistant Keeper of the Edinburgh Register of Sessions, has been appointed Deputy Keeper of the Records in the Register House.

An important resolution in reference to the threatened strike in the Lancashire cotton trade has been arrived at in Accrington. At a meeting of the Wage Committee and a sub-committee last Saturday it was resolved that the operatives be advised to continue at work for a short time, to give the employers time to carry out their promises. This was ratified by the Strike Committee, which is composed of representatives from every mill.

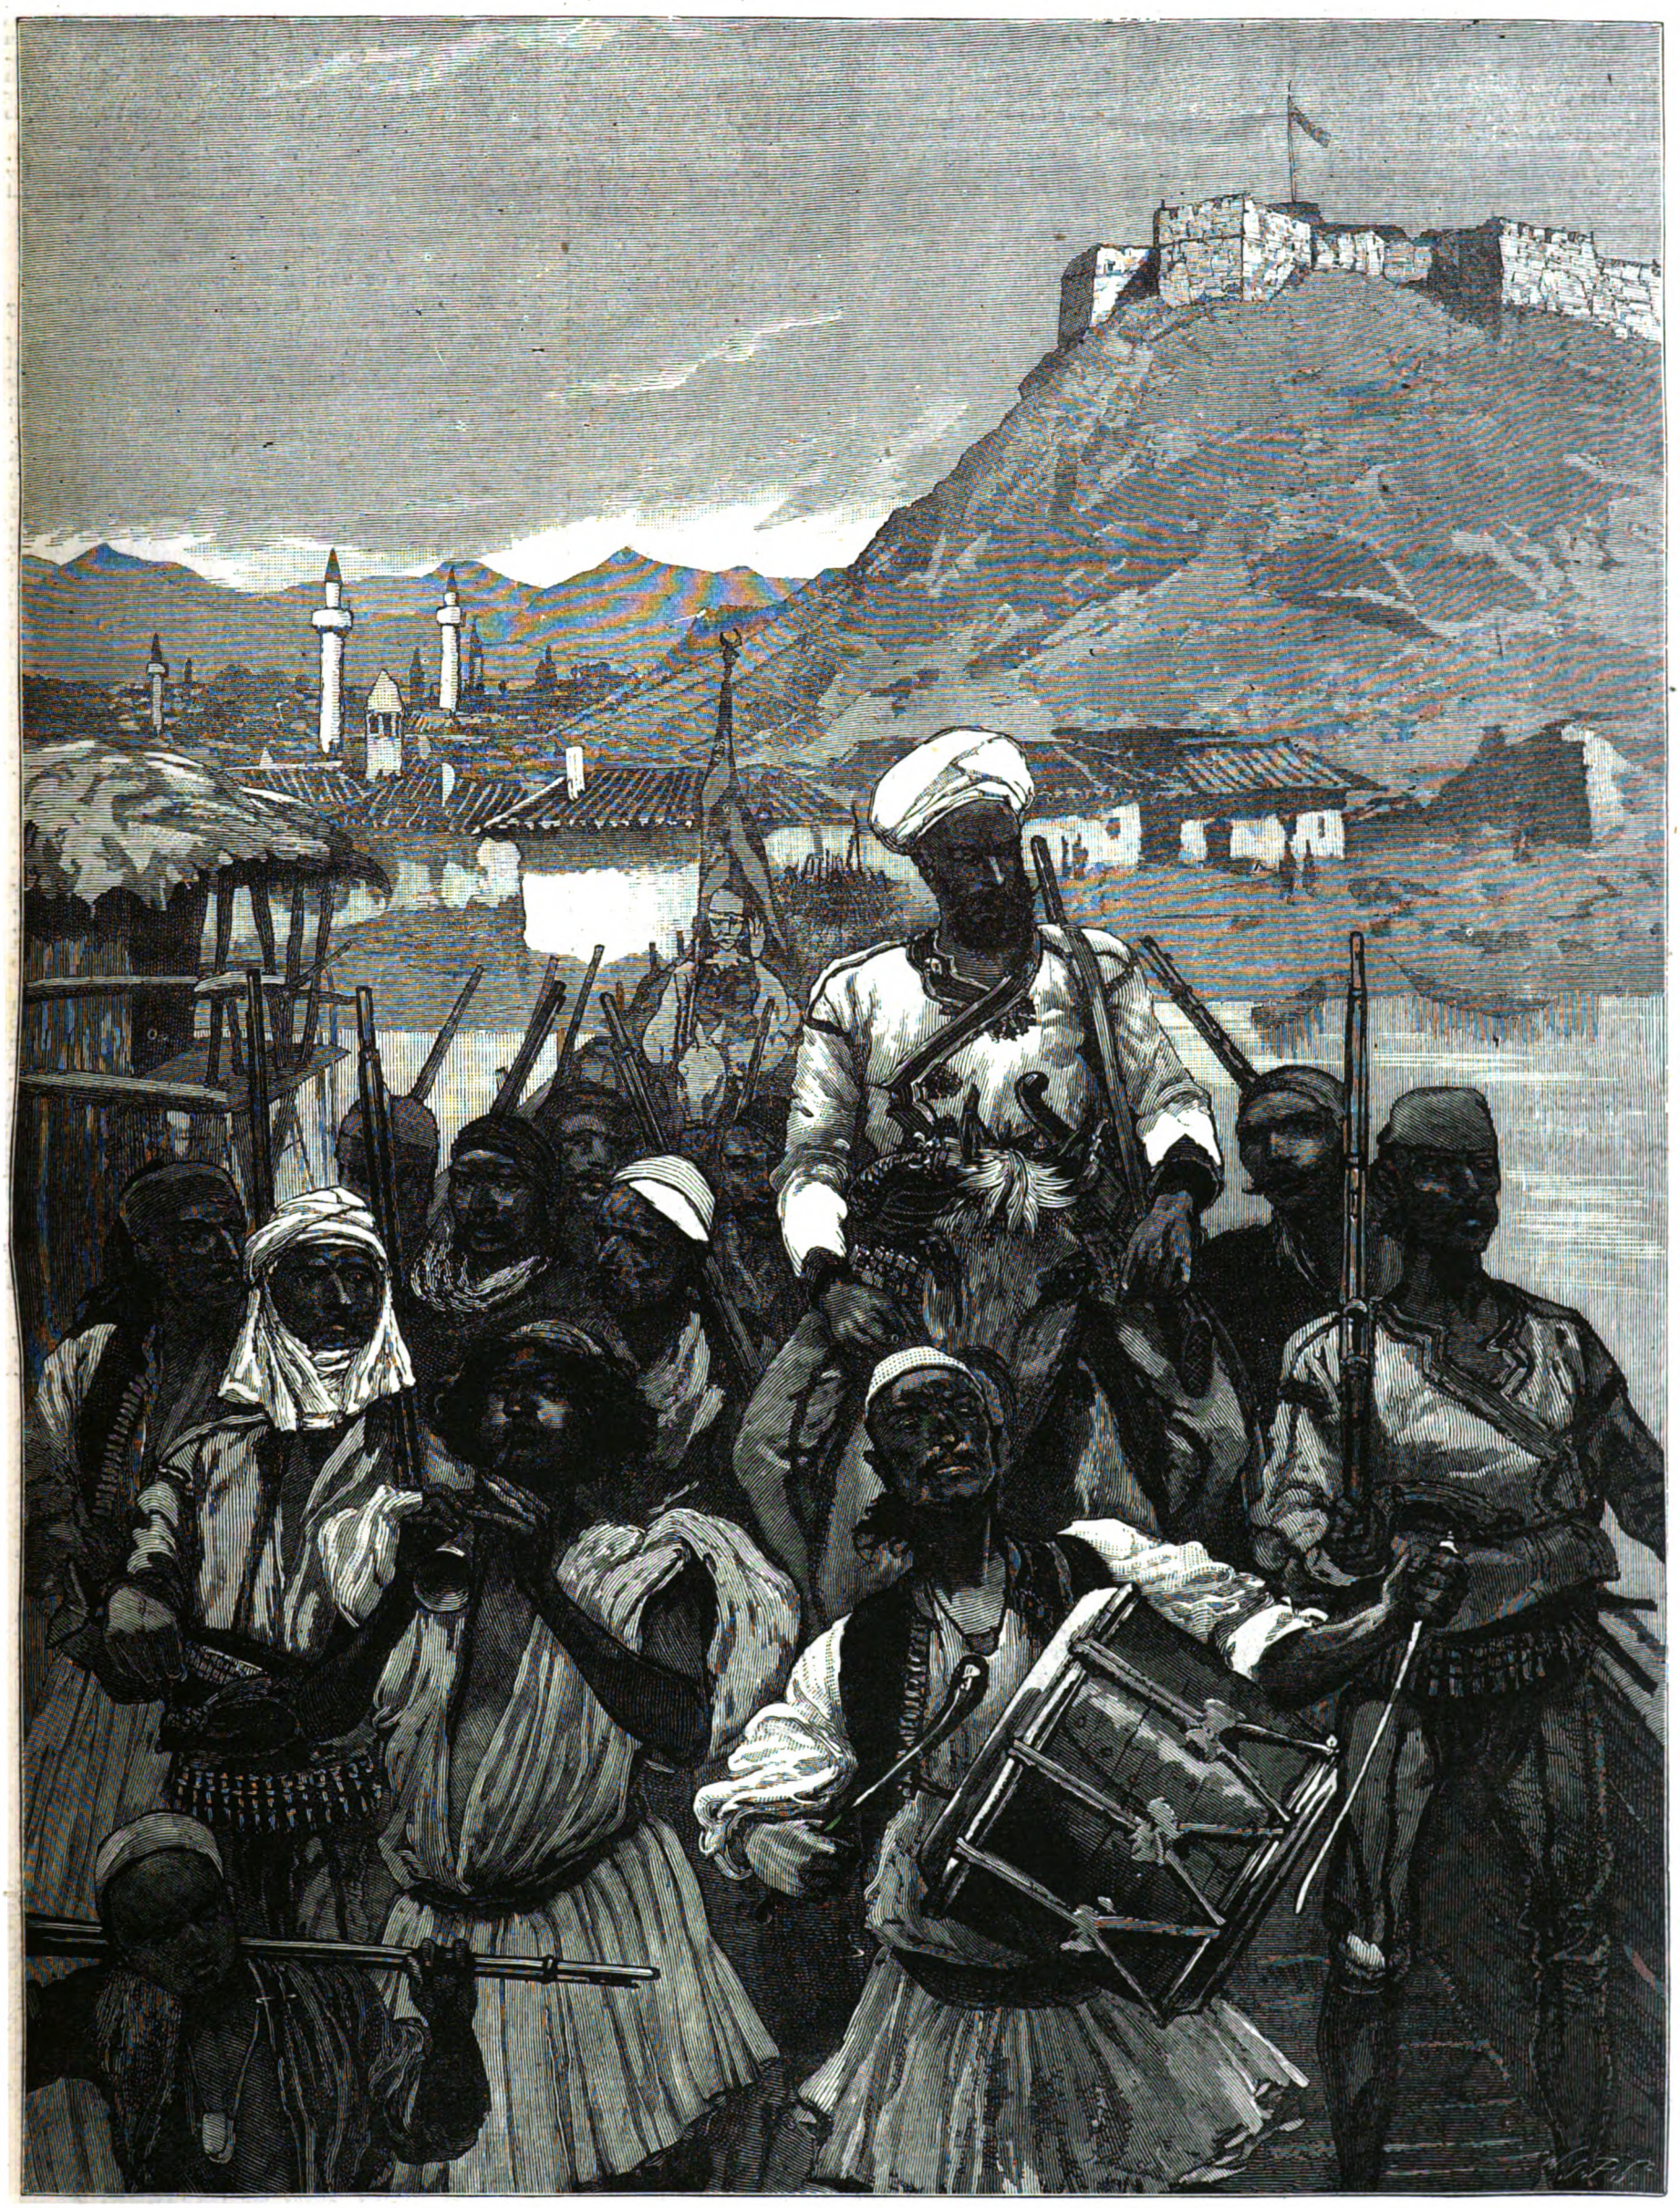
Digitized by Google

THE DISASTER AT NAINI TAL.

The shocking news received last week of the death of nearly forty English people at Naini or Nynee Tal, by the fall of earth from the hillside, overwhelming several buildings in that favourite Indian summer residence, has excited much commiseration. This place is situated among the lower spurs of the Himalayan range, in that part of the mountainous rampart of India which belongs to the province of Kumaon. This district is wholly occupied by mountains and forests, with the exception of a narrow belt or "terai" on its southern edge; and contains some of the loftiest peaks of the Himalaya, the face of the country beyond the "terai" presenting an interminable series of ravines and "khuds" or slopes. In the lower region, it is a tropical jungle, much frequented by tigers. The Prince of Wales went there with a hunting party while he was in India. The hill-station, or sanitorium, of Naini Tal is situated at an elevation of 6520 ft. above sea-level, being the lowest of all the English resorts on the Himalayas. It is approached by an excellent cart-road from Moradabad, a station on the Oude and Rohilcund Railway, and it is connected with Delhi by a telegraph line. The attractions of this spot were discovered soon after the Goorkhas, or Nepaulese, were driven out of this tract of country, in 1816, when Lord Moira (afterwards the Marquis of Hastings) was Governor-General of India. It gradually became known as a place of refuge during the hot season for the Civil officials of the North-West Provinces and their families, and for the military officers then stationed at Oudh. The first church was built here in 1847. Since that time many similar sanitoriums have been established all along the line of the Himalayas, from Nepaul to Afghanistan, of which Simla is the best known; but Naini Tal has always maintained its early reputation. It is the regular summer residence of the Lieutenant Governor of the North-West Provinces, who brings with him every year his large administrative staff. A permanent population has grown up, which is estimated to amount to about 6000 persons, and this number is more than doubled during the season. In the month of September the season is drawing to its close, though not yet finished.

1. Victoria Hotel. 2. Bazaar. 3. Assembly-Rooms and Bathing-Sheds. 4. Cricket and Polo Ground.

NAINI TAL, SHOWING THE HOTEL, ASSEMBLY-ROOMS, AND POLO-GROUND.



The houses are built on the slopes of hills, which rise abruptly from three sides of a beautiful little lake, which overflows on the fourth side in the direction of the plains—only some twelve miles off. The rainy season lasts from about June 15 to the end of September, in which period the rainfall is always considerable; but last year it exceeded anything recorded, amounting to over 150 inches between the dates mentioned. Serious damage was done to many houses; roads were cut up, and social intercourse was often for days entirely put a stop to. On one occasion a huge boulder, weighing many tons, fell from one of the highest points, and, rolling down, crashed through a forest, and went right through a row of servants' houses. The houses are mostly built of stone laid in mud, and faced with lime-mortar, and are roofed with sheet iron. Sites are cut out in the side of the hills, which in many places are very steep. The town is not formed in streets, but in lines of straggling houses stretching out in various directions. These houses are generally composed of only a single storey, and if it were not for the gardens that surround them they would recall Swiss châlets. The distance from one end of the station to the other is considerable, so that it is hardly possible that the whole could be involved in a common calamity. The number of residents and visitors is sufficient to support the usual institutions which Englishmen plant wherever they go. There are churches, clubs, libraries, banks, and, we believe, a brewery. Two newspapers are published, chiefly as a medium for the advertisements of the local shopkeepers. In contrast with the hill stations further west, Naini Tal has always enjoyed a reputation for simplicity of life. Simla is more aristocratic from the standpoint of official rank.

The vast mass of earth which has fallen would appear to have been part of the Lyria Kanta Hill, which, besides being closely wooded in parts, was studded with houses, the lowest being the Victoria Hotel, situated on the face of the slope, and raised only a few yards above the Mall. This building was separated from the lake only by these few yards of slope, the mall itself, and a fringe of willow-trees which grow at the water's edge. Had the landslip, therefore, merely thundered straight down the hill and buried itself in the lake, there

GENERAL VIEW OF NAINI TAL.

Digitized by Google

DEMONSTRATION ON THE ADRIATIC COAST: ALBANIANS FROM SCUTARI CROSSING THE BOYANA TO OCCUPY DULCIGNO.—SEE PAGE 333.
DRAWN ON THE SPOT BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, R. C. WOODVILLE.

Digitized by Google

would have been no indication of any terrific velocity or bulk, for the hillside slopes steeply from its summit to the very brink of the water, and the mountain mass, once loosened and detached, would have naturally found its way as far as the lake. But we find that the Assembly-Rooms also were overwhelmed. The Assembly-Rooms are separated from the foot af the hill by a considerable interval of level ground, and the mass that could force its way across this without exhausting the velocity acquired by its downward rush must have been indeed enormous.

About the middle of the week ending Saturday, the 18th ult., meteorological observers at Calcutta reported that a small cyclonic vortex had formed in the Bay of Bengal, and passed inland in a north-westerly direction. It seems to have caused an abnormal rainfall wherever it passed, notably in the Upper Doab and Rohilcund. Rain began to fall heavily at Naini Tal on the evening of Thursday, the 16th, and continued almost without intermission till noon on Sunday, the 19th. It is said that the gauge showed a fall of 25 in. in forty hours. On Saturday morning the danger first became apparent even to the most careless. A small landslip occurred near the Victoria Hotel, carrying away an outbuilding and killing an ayah and child. Mr. Taylor, Assistant-Commissioner, in charge of the station, with a body of police and a working party from the Dépôt, under Captain Balderston, 34th Foot, Station Staff officer, immediately repaired to the spot and commenced to clear away the débris and to try to divert the course of a torrent which threatened the hotel and some other houses. The hotel was full of visitors, including Mr. Justice and Mrs. Straight, from Allahabad. The warning in the morning gave them all time to seek safety elsewhere, but some, unfortunately, sought shelter in the library, a portion of the Assembly-Rooms building, close to the lake. About half-past one the great disaster happened. An eyewitness thus describes it:—

"A noise, a vision of parting earth and moving trees, a rush of matter towards the lake, a roar of water and of falling material, then a deep brown cloud of dust, rising in slow wreaths through the gloom and furious rain. A great wave of water, caused by the precipitation of part of the Assembly-Rooms and an immense mass of earth into the lake, swept across its length some 5 ft. high. It dashed over the sluice-gates at the entrance of the gorge with such power as to sweep away several persons standing by them. Sir Henry Ramsay, Commissioner of Kumaon, was all but carried away by the wild rush of the waters."

It is a fortunate circumstance that the Mall and the usual places of rendezvous for the ladies and children of the station—namely, the Assembly-Rooms and the open ground in front of Bell's shop—must have been unusually deserted at the moment of the avalanche. As a matter of fact the loss of lives—had it not been for the presence on the spot of the working party of soldiers and the necessary officials and officers—would have been confined to eleven persons inhabiting the houses destroyed. Mr. Leonard Taylor, Assistant Commissioner, was on the spot in the regular course of his duty, as also Mr. Noad, of the police, and Captain Balderston, the station staff officer. The chaplain, the Rev. Mr. Robinson, was there on duty too, as were also Dr. Hannah, in attendance on those wounded by the smaller preliminary landslip, Mr. Morgan, the road overseer, and Captain Haines, of the Engineers. Among the rest who were killed were the working party of soldiers, their sergeants and officers. It will be seen, therefore, that out of the whole list of thirty-eight, twenty-seven were involved in the catastrophe by the fact of having been called to the spot to repair the ravages of the preceding landslip.

A correspondent of the Bengal Pioneer gives a very graphic account, which we abridge as follows:—

"At one o'clock all seemed well, and the working party were busy at their task at the bottom of the precipitous ascent which overhung the hotel. About half-past one Naini Tal was startled by a sudden and sullen roar, louder than the simultaneous crash of heavy guns, followed by a prolonged rumbling as of distant thunder, and then by an ominous silence. Vast clouds of dust rose heavenwards through the murky atmosphere, enveloping in one dense shroud the tract of ground from the hotel to Bell's shop, and onwards to the Assembly-Rooms and the lake. The whole place shook as though an earthquake had passed. The waters of the lake rose in a moment far above their usual limit, and swept in a massive wave toward the weir. Then all was still. From the top of the lower spur, under which the Victoria Hotel had stood a minute before, down to the edge of the cricket-ground, nothing was to be seen but a vast expanse of loose earth, beneath which lay buried hotel and garden, road and orderly-room. It was as though some giant had dropped half a mountain on the spot, blotting out, in a moment, every feature of the scene, filling up the hollows and reducing to one dead slope all that lay below. Deep below lay the working party. Not a vestige of them was to be seen; only the lone hillside, silent and dark. Meanwhile the cricket and polo grounds presented a strange contrast to the gentle sweep above. Towards the pavilion they were intact, save for the streams of water pouring in every direction; but on the other side was simply an enormous mound of vast extent and varying height, a tangled mass of broken walls and roofs, fallen trees and heaped earth. Saddest of all was the spectacle of the few corpses that were visible among the ruins. Never was havoc more sudden, more awful, or more complete. Without a moment's warning, without a premonitory rumble to awaken suspicion, down came the enormous landslip, burying in deadly embrace the hotel and the working party behind, engulfing orderly-room and shop, Assembly-Rooms and library, with almost every living soul they contained. Of the number of people in the shop, all save four, of whom three were women, were swept away. Working parties were at once formed, but progress was slow. Engineers and medical officers gave the opinion that there was not the remotest chance of the survival of any who lay entombed beneath the ruins. Soon darkness overspread the scene like a heavy shroud, and all was silent as the grave, save for the sighing of the wind, the beating of the rain, and an occasional peal of distant thunder. A sadder scene we never saw. It was worse than a battle-field."

The following is believed to be an accurate list of the casualties:—Killed with the working party—Mr. Leonard Taylor, Civil Service: Mr. G. H. Noad, Police; and the Rev. Mr. Robinson; Captain Balderston, 34th Foot; Lieutenants Sullivan and Hackett, 73rd; Carmichael, 33rd; Sergeant-Major Rogers, Sergeant Frood, Lance-Sergeant Grover, Lance-Corporal Trister; Privates Helmonth, Hayes, Turner, Brown, Chisholm, Kinivay, and Burt; Gunner Coleman; Messrs. Tucker and Morgan, clerks; Messrs. Morgan, overseer, and Shields, plate-layer. Killed in orderly-room—Sergeant M'Ewan. Killed in Bell's shop—Messrs. Bell, shopkeeper, Knight, Moss, Drew, and Gray, assistants, and Captain Haynes, R.E. Killed in the library—Major Morphy, 40th Foot, Mrs. Morphy, Mrs. Turnbull, Captain Goodridge, 35th Native Infantry, Surgeon-Major Hannah, and Private Farrance. Colonel Taylor, R.E., consulting engineer to the Government, and Lieutenant Robinson, 23rd Foot, were also killed. The station, as may be supposed, is plunged in the deepest gloom, not unmingled with apprehensions of further accidents of the same kind. But at the date of the latest accounts the rain had ceased for some days, and there seemed no reason to anticipate further danger.

THE RECESS.

Downing-street in St. Martin's Summer! Who can envy her Majesty's Ministers when they were called upon in the middle of a week of fine autumnal weather to forsake their rural retreats for a dull London street? The glades of Hawarden may have yielded infinite solace to Mr. Gladstone, Balmoral's shade may have been inexpressibly welcome to Earl Granville after the toils of the Foreign Office, the Lakes of Killarney may well have recompensed Mr. Childers for his family pilgrimage through the distressful parts of Ireland, Mr. Forster probably found relaxation in change of work in Dublin, and Sir William Harcourt so far reckoned without his host (Ministerial) that he confidently looked forward to gaining further recreation in cruising round the Western Isles of Scotland, and begged the Glasgow Liberal Association to wait for a speech from him till he should return through Scotland at the end of October. But all the Home Secretary's anticipations of restful pleasure amid the romantic scenery to which Mr. William Black has made himself the picturesque guide, all the plans of his colleagues were broken up for the moment by an unexpected summons to a Cabinet Council in the Downing-street abode of the First Lord of the Treasury. With regard to Turkey, at least, it is always the unexpected that happens; and it is the throwing down the gauntlet by the Sultan to the European Powers concerned in the Naval Demonstration which has necessitated this meeting of her Majesty's Ministers.

It may be mentioned that the Secretary for War, who bore so peaceful a message of conciliation to Ireland, stayed with Mrs. and Miss Childers at the seat of the Earl of Kenmare during his brief sojourn at Killarney. Presented with an address by the local authorities of each town at which he stopped, and at Limerick and Killarney as well as the rest, Mr. Childers seems to have made a semi-state progress through Ireland. May his soothing eloquence have a pacifying influence over an excitable population!

The Attorney-General has been the only member of Mr. Gladstone's Administration to make anything like a formal speech of late. Sir Henry James joined with the Solicitor-General, Mr. Herschell, in giving so hearty a Liberal ring to the inaugural utterances of the legal representatives of the Government in the House of Commons last Session, that there could be no doubting what would be the tone of the Attorney-General's speech on Tuesday at Inverness. He spoke at the dinner given to Sir Kenneth Mackenzie to solace him for his defeat by the Conservative candidate for Inverness-shire at the General Election, Lord Lovat being in the chair on the festive occasion. As it happened, Sir Henry James had nothing to say; but he said that nothing with such an air of deep conviction, and buttered his Scottish auditors so much, that he was applauded to the echo.

Ministers are clearly buckling themselves to. Earl Spencer, in order to devote himself wholly to Ministerial work, has resigned the chairmanship of the Northampton Quarter Sessions. The friends of Sir Charles Dilke will be glad to hear he has so far recovered as to render it probable that he will be able in a day or two to pay his usual autumn visit to France, where affairs of State, however, must occupy a large share of his time. Mr. Adam's Scottish admirers are to entertain him at a banquet in the Alloa Corn Exchange on Oct. 20, thus at once commemorating the Liberal victory of which the right hon. gentleman was one of the most active promoters, and speeding the new Governor of Madras on his way to India. Much of his old oratorial force and fire having returned to Mr. Bright last Session, the speech of the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster in November at the opening of the new dwelling of the Junior Liberal Club of Birmingham may be looked forward to with interest. So many domestic events have happened recently within the sphere of the President of the Board of Trade that Mr. Chamberlain will not lack material for his promised speech about the same time in the Birmingham Townhall.

Mr. Parnell cannot be exculpated from the grave indiscretion of speech, to put it mildly, which he was guiltly of on Sunday in addressing a large gathering of tenant-farmers at Irishtown, near New Ross. The leader of the Irish Home-Rule Party was possibly not aware of the foul murder on the previous evening of Lord Mountmorres, who was shot dead on his road home in Galway. But his endeavour to account for the assassination of Mr. Boyd, while he in the same breath deprecated such acts of violence, could hardly fail to have a mischievous effect at a juncture when agrarian disputes lead to such crimes as have lately disgraced Ireland. Coming to the vexed question of "tenant-right," Mr. Parnell (whose own tenants will probably be thankful to him for the hint) favoured this solution of the difficulty:—

> The payment of a fair rent for the space of, say, thirty-five years, after which time there would be nothing further to pay; and in the meanwhile the tenant would have fixity of tenure.

Mr. Parnell advocated the same views at the Dublin meeting of the Land League on Tuesday. Many of his followers have not hesitated to give expression to the wildest language—language suggestive of their being better fit for Hanwell than for Parliament. Speaking at the dinner of the "Wigston Working Men's Conservative Association" on Monday, Mr. Pell, M.P., attributed the misfortunes of Irish farmers to the cultivation exclusively of the potato in many parts.

Meantime, the Irish Land Commission is probably doing the most serviceable work of all by investigating on the spot the causes of distress. Last week the Commission was occupied in profitable inquiry at Belfast, and this week the thread has been taken up in Londonderry, the Commissioners being the Earl of Bessborough, The O'Conor Don, Mr. Kavanagh, and Mr. Shaw.

"The Leaders of "her Majesty's Opposition" have not been altogether silent. Though it will not be stricty correct to include Earl Lytton in that category, it may be remarked, in passing, that the noble Earl, replying to a congratulory address from Hertford, trusted that in time the Indian policy of the late Government would be appreciated. Sir Stafford Northcote dropped in yesterday week at the general meeting of the Sanitary Congress at Exeter. Albeit, in proposing a resolution of thanks to the Mayor and Corporation for their hospitality, the right hon. baronet modestly compared himself with the Wordsworthian character:

> He was an idler in the land,
> Contented only to enjoy
> The things that others understand.

Sir Stafford Northcote yet showed himself by his practical and genial remarks on sanitation to be no unworthy disciple of the noble President, Earl Fortescue, or of that shining light of the Congress, Dr. Richardson. The same evening, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach attended an agricultural dinner at Winchcombe, and relieved his mind of a few bucolic platitudes. Lord Sandon, too, indulging in a post-prandial speech the previous evening for the delectation of the Staffordshire Agricultural Society at Hanley, kept himself to commonplaces in responding for the "House of Commons."

Mr. Joseph Cowen is supposed to have taken another step in the direction of political independence by severing his connection with the Newcastle-on-Tyne Liberal Association. Another prominent member of the Lower House, Mr. Bass, has sadly realised the truth of the proverb that misfortunes never come singly. Hardly had he recovered sufficiently from his late accident to admit of his removal to Rangemore, than the hon. member for Derby heard of the death from cholera of his brother, Mr. William Bass. Mr. Arthur Bass, M.P., who met with an accident in the Highlands, is progressing favourably.

The Election Commissioners—Mr. A. Charles, Q.C., Mr. A. V. Dicey, and Mr. R. S. Wright—opened the ball on Monday at Canterbury; and fresh light was thrown on the cathedral town's partiality for bribery.

ARCTIC EXPLORATION.

RELICS OF THE FRANKLIN EXPEDITION.

The New York Herald of Sept. 23, publishes the following telegram from New Bedford, Massachusetts:—

"The Franklin Search Expedition under the command of Lieutenant Schwatka have returned here. They have discovered and brought southward relics of the two British ships, Terror and Erebus, which sailed from London under Sir John Franklin in May, 1845. The Expedition successfully withstood the greatest amount of cold ever encountered by white men. During sixteen days of a sledge journey extending over a period of eleven months the average temperature was one hundred degrees below freezing point. In the summer and autumn of 1879 the Expedition made a complete search of King William's Land and the adjoining mainland, travelling by the route pursued by the crews of the Erebus and Terror in retreating towards Back's River. They burned the bones of all remaining above ground, and erected monuments in memory of the dead. Their researches have established the fact that the records of the Franklin Expedition are beyond recovery. They have also learned that one of Sir John Franklin's ships drifted down the Victoria Straits and was unwittingly scuttled by the Esquimaux, who found it off Grant point in 1849. The Expedition have brought away the remains of Irving, the third officer of the Terror. From each spot where graves where found a few tokens were selected, which may serve to identify those who perished there. They also secured a board which may be of use in identifying the ship which completed the North-west Passage."

From further details of Lieutenant Schwatka's expedition, it appears that the sledge journey made was over 2819 geographical miles, mostly across unexplored territory, constituting the longest sledge journey ever made, both as to time and distance. The natives related that they saw a small party of officers, believed to be the last survivors of the Expedition, black about the mouth, and with no flesh on their bones, dragging a boat across the ice. They then disappeared from view, and their skeletons were subsequently found under the boat, and in a tent, a prey to wild beasts.

The New York Herald of Sept. 28 publishes the conclusion of the history of Lieutenant Schwatka's journey, together with several maps, showing the extent of his travels. The place where the records of Sir John Franklin's expedition were destroyed was situated to the westward of Point Richardson. The skeletons which were discovered were always incomplete, sometimes nothing but a skull being found in the vicinity of a grave; and, again, often a skull would be missing. At one place could be distinguished four right femora, showing that that number of persons had perished there. The number of persons buried is estimated at from twenty to forty, but no doubt is entertained by those who covered the ground that all the members of Sir John Franklin's expedition were buried. In conclusion, the Herald's correspondent reasserts that the search made by Lieutenant Schwatka has established the fact that the records of the Franklin expedition have been totally destroyed.

Orders have been given to the Arctic exploring steamer Gulnare, which has arrived at St. John's, Newfoundland, to return to Washington, the expedition to Lady Franklin's Bay having been abandoned for this season.

The following telegram has been received in London from Mr. Leigh Smith, dated Hammerfest, Sept. 25: "Reached Franz Joseph Land on Aug. 14. Explored land to the west as far as 45 deg. east and 80 deg. 20 min. north, and sighted land from that point about forty-miles north-west." This is regarded as an important discovery, proving, as Captain Markham has always maintained, that a good steamer might easily reach a very advanced position for winter quarters in the direction followed by Mr. Leigh Smith.

Lady Elcho yesterday week laid the memorial-stone of a new harbour erected at Port, Seton, Haddingtonshire. Her Ladyship was accompanied by the Earl of Wemyss and Lord Elcho. The latter presided at a social meeting in the evening, and, in referring to the advantages of unions, urged that the Scotch fishermen should form such a union among themselves as a Scotch Fishery Chamber, after the model of a Scotch Chamber of Agriculture, to consider questions affecting their own interests and press them upon the attention of the Legislature. Lord Wemyss, besides granting the site on nominal terms, has contributed £2000 towards the construction of the works, which have cost in all £11,000.

Under circumstances which appear to leave no doubt that the crime was agrarian, Lord Mountmorres was shot dead last Saturday evening as he was riding home from a meeting of the local justices of the peace at Clonbacar. The inquest on the body of Lord Mountmorres, held at Eber Hill on Monday afternoon, resulted in a verdict of wilful murder against some person or persons unknown. Evidence was given that when found lying upon the road the wounded man was still living, and was removed to the nearest house, but was refused admission by the owner, named Hugh Flanagan. In answer to a juryman, the constable went into detail. When Flanagan opened the door, the constable asked him to get a light and make a fire, which he did. When he spoke about Lord Mountmorres and made his request for his admission, before Flanagan had time to say anything his wife and daughters rushed down stairs in their nightdresses, and said that Lord Mountmorres should not be brought in. They placed themselves in the doorway, so as to prevent his being brought in. They said nothing about an outhouse or any other place of shelter. The constable suggested they might use the outhouse, but the Flanagans refused to give them the use of one. Lord Mountmorres had to be left in the yard until a car was got, on which he was removed. All they got from Flanagan was a lamp and some fire. A man named Sweeney, who was lately dismissed from Lord Mountmorres's service, has been arrested.

Digitized by Google

THE COURT.

Her Majesty is occupied every day with some out-of-door pleasure, or in making excursions around the district. On Thursday week a cricket-match was played between the Balmoral and Abergeldie Households, at which the Queen and the Princess of Wales, with the various members of the Royal family now in the Highlands, were present. The Earl of Dufferin, who had been on a visit to her Majesty, left for the south.

An excursion was made last Saturday to Loch Callater, the party including the Queen and Princess Beatrice and the Grand Duke and Hereditary Grand Duke of Hesse. The journey was made viâ Braemar; and horses were changed at the opening of the Glenclunie-road, South Castleton, Loch Callater being reached about an hour afterwards. The Royal party took a long walk towards the southern end of the lake, returning in the evening to Balmoral. Earl Granville arrived as Minister in attendance upon her Majesty. The Rev. Principal Tulloch, of St. Andrew's, also arrived at the castle and, with Lord Granville, dined with her Majesty. The gentlemen of the household, including Dr. Profit, her Majesty's Commissioner, were invited to join the Royal circle in the evening.

The Queen, Princess Beatrice, Prince Leopold, and the Grand Duke of Hesse, with his son, attended Crathie church on Sunday, the service being performed by Principal Tulloch. Prince Leopold drove to Mar Lodge in the evening, to visit the Earl of Fife. Her Majesty's dinner party included the Prince and Princess of Wales and Prince John of Glücksburg.

On Monday the Queen drove, with the Princess of Wales, Princess Beatrice, and Princess Irene of Hesse, to Glen Gelder Shiel. Prince Leopold, attended by Dr. Royle, went in the afternoon to Mar Lodge, to attend a torchlight ball given by the Earl of Fife. His Royal Highness went out on a pic-nic excursion at the Falls of Quoich on Tuesday; and in the evening left Mar Lodge on his return to Balmoral.

Princesses Irene and Alice of Hesse frequently accompany Princess Beatrice in her rides and walks, and they have accompanied her Majesty in her drives to the Derry Shiel, to Allah Quoich, and other pleasant localities.

The Grand Duke of Hesse has had very good sport, deer-stalking as well as shooting; he has also paid visits, with Prince Leopold, to the Earl of Fife at Mar Lodge.

The sad occurrence at Naini Tal was deeply felt by her Majesty, who at once telegraphed to the Marquis of Ripon to make known her sympathy with the relatives and friends of those who had lost their lives; and at the same time expressed a desire to be kept informed of all particulars.

Knighthood has been conferred by the Queen upon Dr E. B. Sinclair, of Dublin, chiefly in consequence of his most successful exertions in educating and training women to serve as midwives in the Army.

Tuesday's Gazette announces that the Queen has granted to Clara Maria Money, of Stodham Park, Southampton, widow and relict of James Drummond Money, clerk, and to her only son and heir-apparent, Francis Burdett Thomas Money, of Ancote, in the parish of Weybridge, Surrey, her Royal license that, in compliance with a direction contained in the last will and testament of the Most Noble Harriot, Duchess of St. Alban's, the said Clara Maria Money and Francis Burdett Thomas Money, and his issue, may take and henceforth use the surname of Coutts in addition to and after that of Money, and may bear the arms of Coutts quarterly in the first quarter with those of his and their own family.

Her Majesty has forwarded a cheque for £100 to Major Emmerson, Lord Londonderry's agent at Seaham, in aid of the fund for the relief of the sufferers by the recent explosion.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.

The Prince of Wales and Prince John of Glücksburg passed a few days last week at Invermark Lodge, Forfarshire, the guests of Sir Robert and Lady Harvey. On the journey from Abergeldie the Princes lunched at Glenmuick with Mr. Mackenzie, of Kintail, and afterwards continued their route across the hill by Mountkran to Invermark, a distance of ten miles. The next day (Thursday) the Royal guests, with a numerous party, went out for a deer-drive, the deer being gathered from Hunthill and across the Corry of Cumlaid. The sportsmen, with several ladies, had to walk two miles to reach the shooting-boxes on the north side of the Lee. Although the deer were driven in sight, it was exceedingly difficult to get them within range. Only one stag was killed, which fell to the rifle of the Duke of Roxburghe. Yesterday week was devoted to a grouse-drive over the Rowan Moors, and, the ground having been specially preserved, capital sport was enjoyed. Some fifty beaters assembled at ten in the morning, and shortly after the Prince drove down from the lodge with Sir Robert Harvey, the Duke of Roxburghe, and Lord Colville, the Earl of Breadalbane and Mr. R. Harvey riding on ponies. The sportsmen took up a position on the west side of the Rowan Hill, towards which point the game was driven. At dusk the bag numbered 166 brace of grouse, 36 hares, 13 brace of black game, and 1½ brace of snipe, the game being laid out in front of the house upon the return of the party to Invermark. Prince John of Glücksburg went out deerstalking the same day, and killed a stag weighing 15 st. The Prince, with Prince John of Glücksburg, left Invermark, on Saturday afternoon, crossing Mount Kewe and the intervening mountains to Abergeldie. The Royal family from Abergeldie were at Divine service at Crathie church on Sunday. The Prince and Prince John of Glücksburg went to Mar Lodge on Monday on a visit to the Earl of Fife. A large dinner was given in the evening, followed by a grand ball, at which Prince Leopold and a distinguished company were present, the entertainment including a torchlight procession and dance by the Duff Highlanders. On Tuesday the Prince and Prince John, with Lord Fife and his party, went out deerstalking in the North Deeside Forest. The deer were driven by a large number of keepers, and many stags fell to the rifles.

The Princess, with her daughters, is out riding or driving every day, and pays frequent visits to her Majesty.

A telegram received at the Admiralty on Tuesday states that her Majesty's ship Bacchante, with the Royal midshipmen, Princes Albert Victor and George of Wales, on board, arrived at Ferrol on Monday, and sails for Vigo to-day (Saturday).

The Prince has given the living of Berkhampstead St. Mary, otherwise Northchurch, vacant by the death of Sir John Culme Seymour, to the Rev. Augustus J. Birch, Vicar of Edlesborough, Bucks.

Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein has promised to open a bazaar in the Royal Pavilion, Brighton, on the 20th inst., in aid of the Female Orphan Asylum in that town.

The Duke and Duchess of Connaught, attended by Sir Howard and Lady Elphinstone, arrived in town on Monday from the Continent. In the evening their Royal Highnesses, accompanied by Lord and Lady Downe and Major Lane, went to the Lyceum Theatre. The Duke and Duchess left Buckingham Palace on Tuesday for Bagshot. His Royal Highness assumed the command of the 3rd Infantry Brigade at Aldershott on Wednesday.

The Duke of Cambridge has passed a short time at Frankfort-on-Maine, on his way home from Berlin and Dresden. The Emperor of Germany has conferred upon his Royal Highness the Grand Cross of the Royal Order of the House of Hohenzollern. The Duke arrived in London on Wednesday, and paid a visit to the War Office.

The Duke and Duchess of Teck, with their children, Princess Victoria, Prince Adolphus, and Prince Francis, arrived in Edinburgh on Monday from Hopetoun House, where they have been paying a visit. They were accompanied by the Earl of Hopetoun and his mother, the Countess of Hopetoun, and party. In the early part of the day the Duke of Teck paid a visit to Lady Mary Hamilton, at Archerfield. After luncheon in the London Hotel the party visited the Hopetoun monument, in front of the Royal Bank, the Scott monument, and other places of interest in the city. After having tea at the London Hotel they returned to Hopetoun. Count Andrassy paid a visit to the Duke and Duchess at Hopetoun House on Tuesday.

According to the Morning Post, the Empress Eugénie has bought the Farnborough Hill estate, in Hampshire, on the borders of the county of Surrey, for £50,000. The estate was the property of the late Mr. Longman, the well-known publisher, and consists of about 257 acres, with a picturesque mansion, erected by the late owner about eighteen years ago. The Empress intends to build on the property a memorial chapel to receive the bodies of the Emperor and the Prince Imperial. The Empress's lease of Camden Place expires next Lady Day.

His Excellency Count Münster, accompanied by his daughter, Countess Marie Münster, has arrived at the German Embassy, Carlton House-terrace, from his Excellency's estate in Germany, to resume his diplomatic duties. He dined with Prince Lobanoff on Tuesday at the Russian Embassy.

The first visit of Lord Algernon Percy and his wife to Mount-Edgcumbe since their marriage was made a high festival last Saturday, the tenantry and residents all turning out to give them welcome. At the park gates the horses were taken out, and the carriage drawn by numerous hands to the mansion, where the Earl of Mount-Edgcumbe and his daughters, the Ladies Edith and Albertha, awaited them on the steps, the terraces being occupied by visitors and the choir of Maker church and Sunday-school children. The Vicar of Maker expressed the hearty good wishes of the tenantry to Lord and Lady Algernon Percy.

The coming of age of Sir Massey Lopes' son, Mr. Henry Yarde Buller Lopes, was celebrated last week by a dinner to the tenantry at Sir Massey's residence at Maristow, when the tenants presented Mr. Lopes with a handsome silver centre-piece and an address.

The christening of the Hon. Arthur Annesley, infant son and heir of Viscount Valentia, of Bletchington Park, Master of the Bicester Hounds, took place at Bletchington church on Monday. The sponsors were Miss D. L. Popham, of Littlecote, the Earl of Clarendon, and Viscount Cole, the two last being represented by proxies.

FASHIONABLE MARRIAGES.

At the marriage of Lady Beatrice Pelham Clinton and Mr. Cecil E. Lister Kaye, the bride's brother, the seventh Duke of Newcastle, gave her away; and her sisters, the Ladies Emily and Florence Pelham Clinton, were the bridesmaids. Sir John Lister Kaye, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Only a few members of both families were present. The newly-married couple went to Clumber for the honeymoon.

Viscount Newark and Miss Shaw Stewart, daughter of Sir Michael and Lady Octavia Shaw Stewart, were married on Tuesday at Ardgowan, near Greenock, by the Rev. John T. Thorn, Vicar of Stoneleigh, assisted by the Rev. C. R. Linton, Chaplain at Ardgowan. Among the guests assembled at Ardgowan for the marriage were the Duchess Eleanor of Northumberland, Earl and Countess Manvers and Lady Mary Pierrepont, the Earl and Countess of Stair and Lady Anne Dalrymple, Earl and Countess Beauchamp, and a large party.

The marriage of Mr. Basil Montgomery, second son of Sir Graham Montgomery, of Stobo Castle, Peeblesshire, and Miss Mary Monereiffe, youngest daughter of Lady Louisa and the late Sir Thomas Monereiffe, is arranged to take place in London at the end of the month.

The marriage between Mr. J. M. Gladstone, son of Mr. Steuart Gladstone, of Capenoch, N.B., and Miss Bayley, daughter of the Hon. Justice Bayley, of the High Court of Bombay, will be celebrated at the private chapel of Maxwelton House, N.B., on the 6th inst.

A marriage is arranged between Sir Reginald Cathcart, Bart., late Coldstream Guards, and Mrs. Gordon, of Cluny.

HOME NEWS.

Oyster-fishing has begun at Orkney. Some boats have taken 40,000 oysters in a day.

The British Museum, which was closed yesterday, will be open to the public next Friday morning.

The French Jesuits have bought, and are to open as a college, Hales Place, Canterbury, on the 28th inst.

A new bridge over the Medway is to be built at Rochester. The Rochester Bridge wardens have agreed to vote £12,000 towards the cost.

Further exploration of the Seaham colliery has resulted in the finding of four bodies. An official inspection of the pit was made on Monday. The relief fund amounts to £3000.

The Corporation of Manchester are engaged in the erection, in Deansgate, of a new branch free lending library, to take the place of the old Campfield Library. It is estimated that the building will cost £12,200.

The Court of Common Council has agreed to contribute 100 guineas out of the City's cash severally to the Atalanta Relief Fund and the Risca Colliery Relief Fund, now being raised at the Mansion House.

A dinner took place last Saturday evening at the Albion Hotel, Aldersgate-street, in commemoration of the entry into Lucknow of the force under Generals Havelock and Outram. Lieutenant-General Cromnelin, C.B., presided.

Mr. Stewart Cumberland, indefatigable in exposing the tricks of the "Spiritualistic" medium, will give at Steinway Hall, next Monday and Tuesday evenings, his amusing lecture explaining how "the manifestations" are produced.

It is stated that the office of Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer will be abolished, and an extra Puisne Judgeship established in its stead, the occupant of which will fulfil the duties formerly appertaining to the disused appointment.

A requisition, signed by twenty-eight of the forty-one members of the Town Council of Edinburgh, has been presented to Lord Provost Boyd, asking him to offer himself for re-election to the civic chair; and Mr. Boyd has acceded to the request.

Rumours of a plot to destroy the Czar's yacht, the Livadia, which is almost completed in the yard of Messrs. John Elder and Co., at Govan, have been current at Glasgow. Warning of the alleged plot was anonymously conveyed to the Russian Embassy in London.

Dr. Diplock held an inquest last Saturday afternoon upon the body of Charles Green Humphreys, who lost his life in the accident which took place at Teddington Weir on Friday last. The jury found the death to have been accidental, but accompanied their verdict by an expression of blame against the Thames Conservancy for not taking measures to prevent the occurrence of such accidents at the weir.

A conference of delegates representing the Young Men's Christian Associations of the Midland and Yorkshire district, which comprises Sheffield, Derby, Huddersfield, Leeds, Nottingham, and York, was held at Lincoln on Monday, and was well attended. Last evening the Sheriff of Lincoln presided over a public meeting in connection with the conference. Next year's conference is to be held at Derby.

The Secretary of the Society of Arts writes, as to a statement that James Barry's series of yet unframed pictures in the great room of the Society of Arts constitutes practically a disjointed panorama, that "they were painted by Barry for the meeting-room, and for the positions which they now occupy," and that, so far as he (the secretary) can ascertain, "the frames in which they now are, are the same as those in which they were first placed."

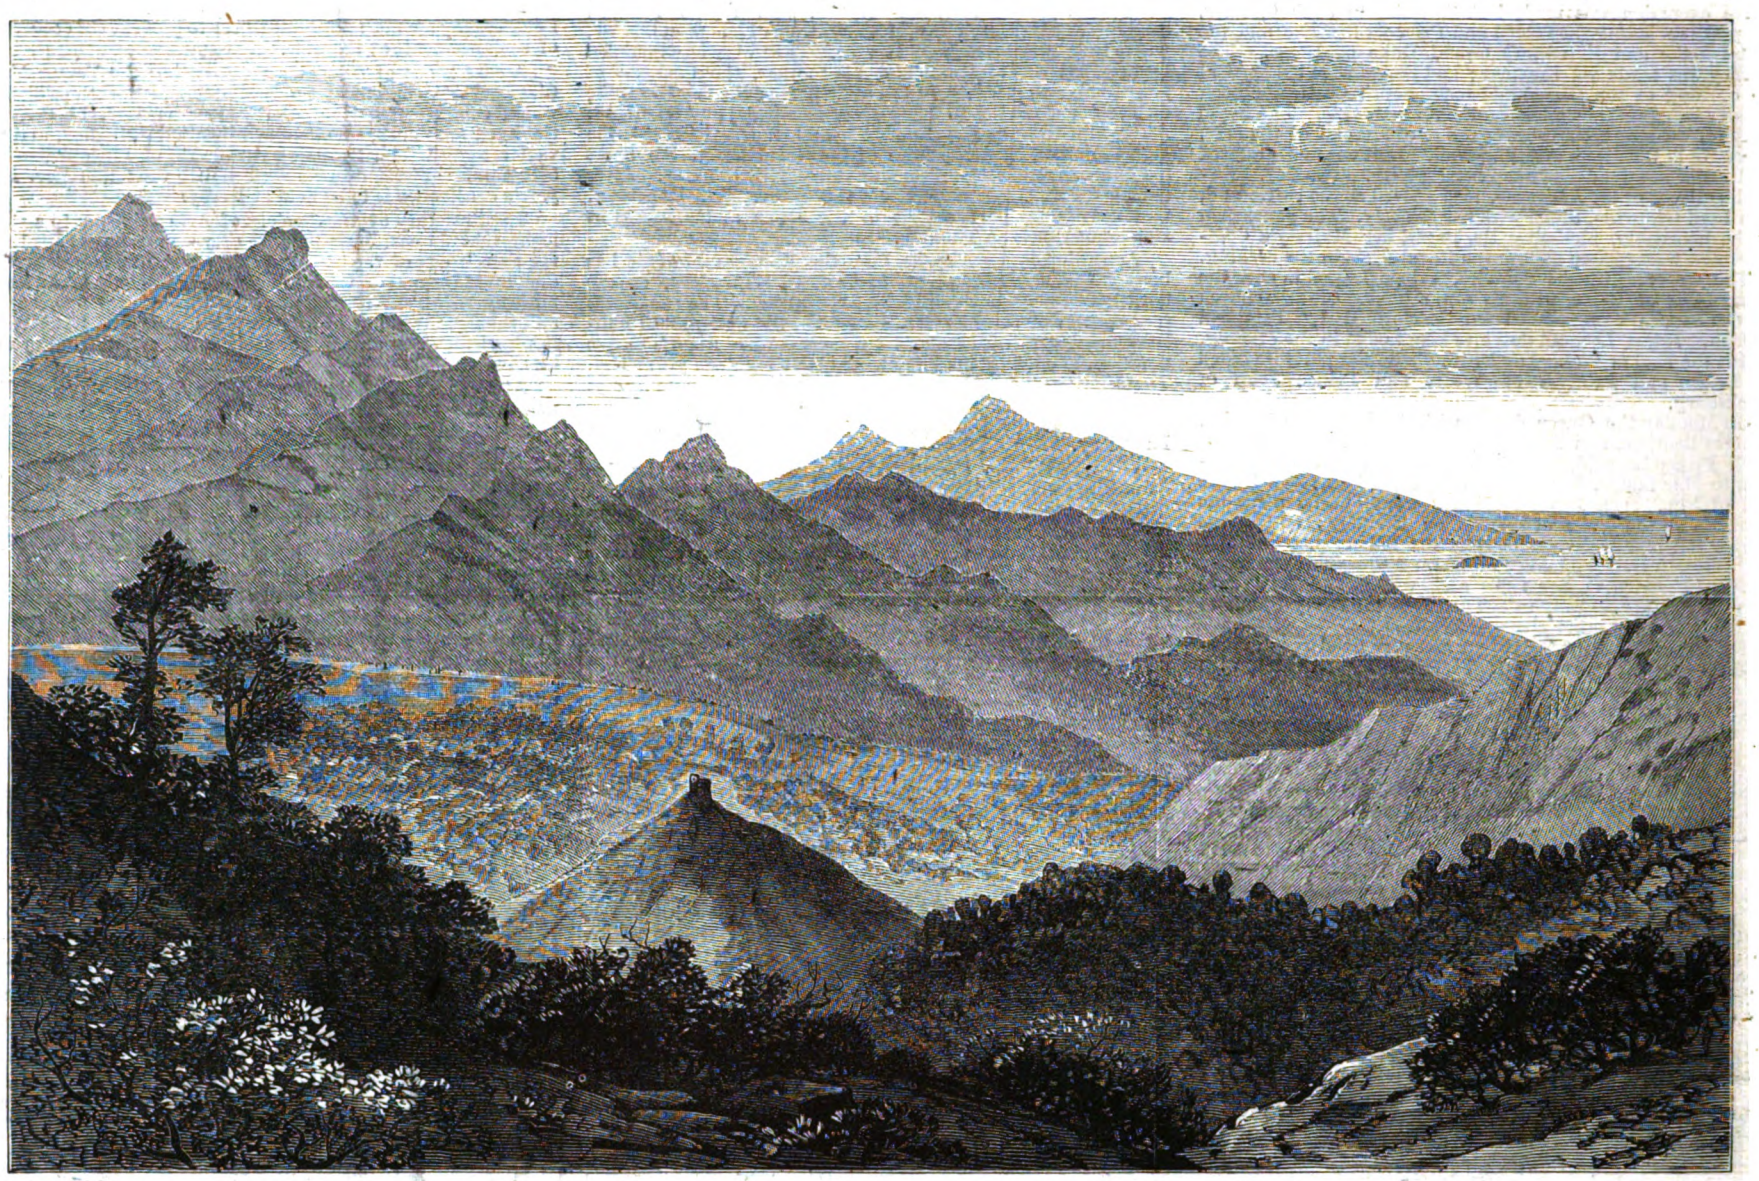
At the request of the Board of Trade, the Mayor of Falmouth has presented Mr. D. Clarke, mate of the schooner Frank, of Hayle, with a second-class gold medal, awarded him by the French Government for his services in saving a shipwrecked sailor belonging to the French steamer Valentine, of Dieppe. Mr. Clarke put off, in a tremendous sea on Feb. 9 last, and rescued the exhausted sailor from a boat in which he was drifting.

Mr. Alderman Robert Nicholson Fowler, M.P., and Mr. Herbert J. Waterlow, were inaugurated as Sheriffs of London and Middlesex for the ensuing year on Tuesday at the Guildhall with the usual ceremonies; and on Wednesday afternoon the liverymen of the City guilds met at the Guildhall to elect the Lord Mayor for the ensuing year. Mr. Alderman M'Arthur, who stood next in rotation for election to the office, being unanimously chosen.

Mr. Carter, Coroner for East Surrey, on Monday concluded the inquiry into the circumstances leading to the deaths of several persons who were killed in the railway accident near Nine Elms, on the South-Western Line, on the 11th ult. Some further evidence was adduced, and the jury, after deliberating an hour, stated that twelve out of the fourteen were unanimous in finding a verdict of "Accidental death," and discharging every one from criminal negligence. The Coroner accepted this decision.

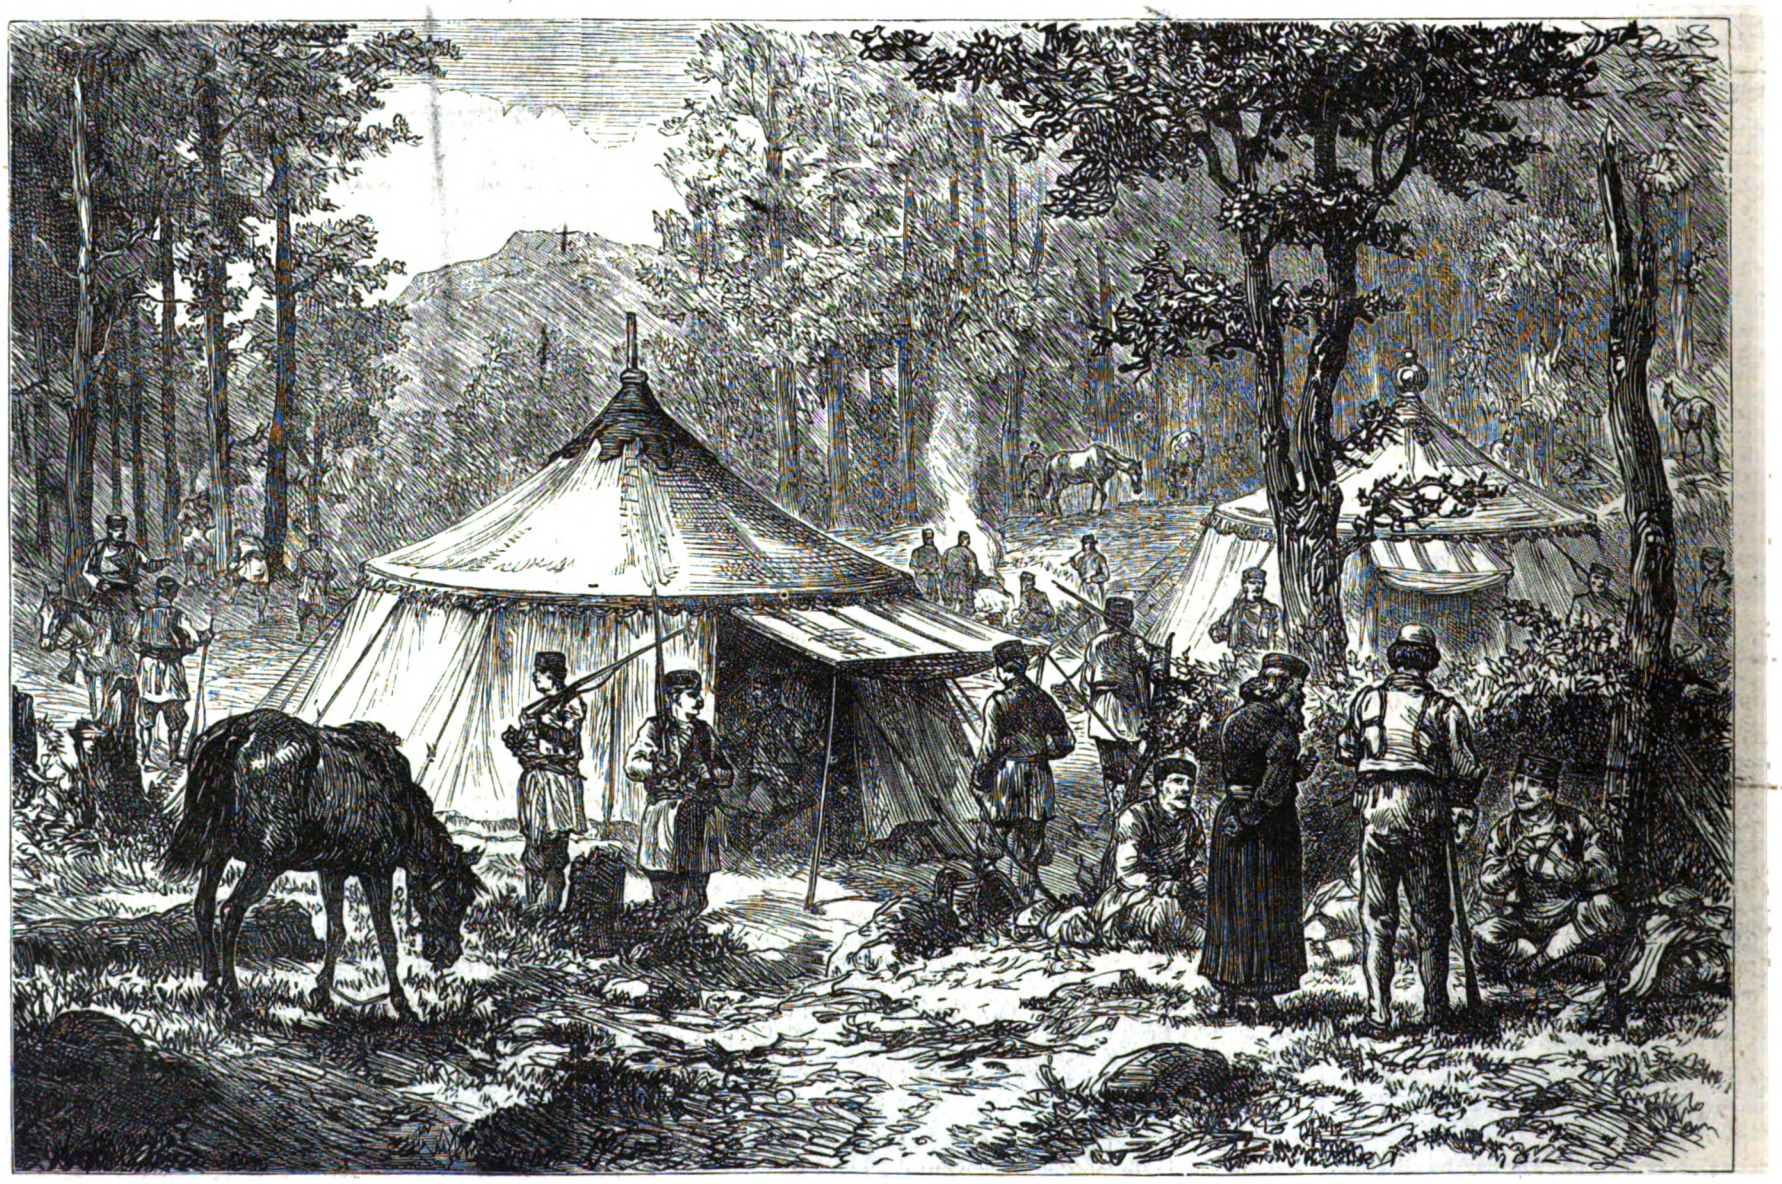
The largest attempt yet made at electric lighting was on Monday night inspected by a number of gentlemen who were invited to the Royal Albert Dock at Silvertown, which is an extension of the Royal Victoria Docks. The practical value and efficiency of the electric light for lighting the vast area of the docks was fully demonstrated. During the visit a heavy fog drifted across the dock, and while it continued the lights exhibited great penetrative power, though, of course, they lost much of their useful effect.

The Irish criminal and judicial statistics for 1879 recently issued show a diminution of 8702 arrests for drunkenness, which Dr. Hancock attributes to the Sunday-Closing Act. The decrease is practically in Ulster, Leinster, and Munster. In Connaught, where there has been the greatest distress, the diminution is trifling, only 53 in the whole year; while in Galway there was an increase of 417, and in Sligo of 190. The counties of Leitrim, Mayo, and Roscommon show a decrease of 660. The reduction in the crimes intimately connected with drunkenness was 3560 cases.



Professor E. C. Pickering, director of Harvard University, has made a discovery in stellar physics. In the ordinary telescope a star appears as a point of light, brighter, but not larger than when looked at with the naked eye. When a prism is placed between the object-glass and the eyepiece the light of a star is drawn out into a continuous band. When, however, the telescope with the prism is directed to a planetary nebula, the light is collected into a starlike point without any band. Thus the astronomer can easily distinguish between a star and a planetary nebula. This principle has already enabled Professor Pickering to discover several nebulæ.

At a meeting of the Court of Common Council, on Thursday week, reference was made to the erection of a memorial on the site of Temple Bar. Mr. Bedford, the Chairman of the City Lands Committee, defended the erection of the memorial on several grounds. All the authorities, he said, interested were unanimous as to its desirability—there would be room for two carriages on each side to pass at the same time; it would be a useful refuge to people crossing the street; it would be a beautiful work of art; and the cost would be about £5000.—With reference to this memorial, Mr. G. E. Street writes to express his regret that the whole of the space of the proposed memorial—five feet—has been taken out of the foot pavement on the north side of the road, which will now be reduced to 10 feet in width, to the great damage of the appearance of the New Courts of Justice and to the great inconvenience of the public. The right place for a refuge, he considers, is undoubtedly about 100 feet to the west of the memorial.



The annual report of the Howard Association contains a large amount of information on various matters relating to the treatment and prevention of crime. Parliamentary action, the report states, has been greatly interfered with by the recent elections and the consequent change of Administration, which will make it necessary for the Association to go over some of its labours again. The late Government had done good service by the passing of the Prison Act of 1877, which facilitated improvements in the prison system; the Summary Jurisdiction Act of 1879, which diminished the number of imprisonments, especially of young children; the Matrimonial Causes Amendment Act of 1878, which afforded better protection to married women; the Justices' Clerks Act of 1877, removing incentives to petty convictions; the Prosecution of Offences Act, by which some of the advantages of a Public Prosecutor had been provided for; the Habitual Drunkards Act, at present a tentative measure; the License Amendment Act of 1879, imposing restrictions upon the granting of outdoor licenses for the sale of liquors; and the Penal Servitude Amendment Act, 1879, diminishing difficulties in the way of the reformation of discharged convicts. The strenuous though unsuccessful labours of the late Government to procure the enactment of the Criminal Code Bill were the initiation of a most important desideratum in British legislation. Mr. Tallack, the secretary of the Association, had made a further series of visits to prisons, and had brought to light many evils of the present gaol system. Greater facilities should be given for independent visitations with a view to the moral improvement of prisoners. A considerable portion of the report is devoted to advocating the abolition of capital punishment.

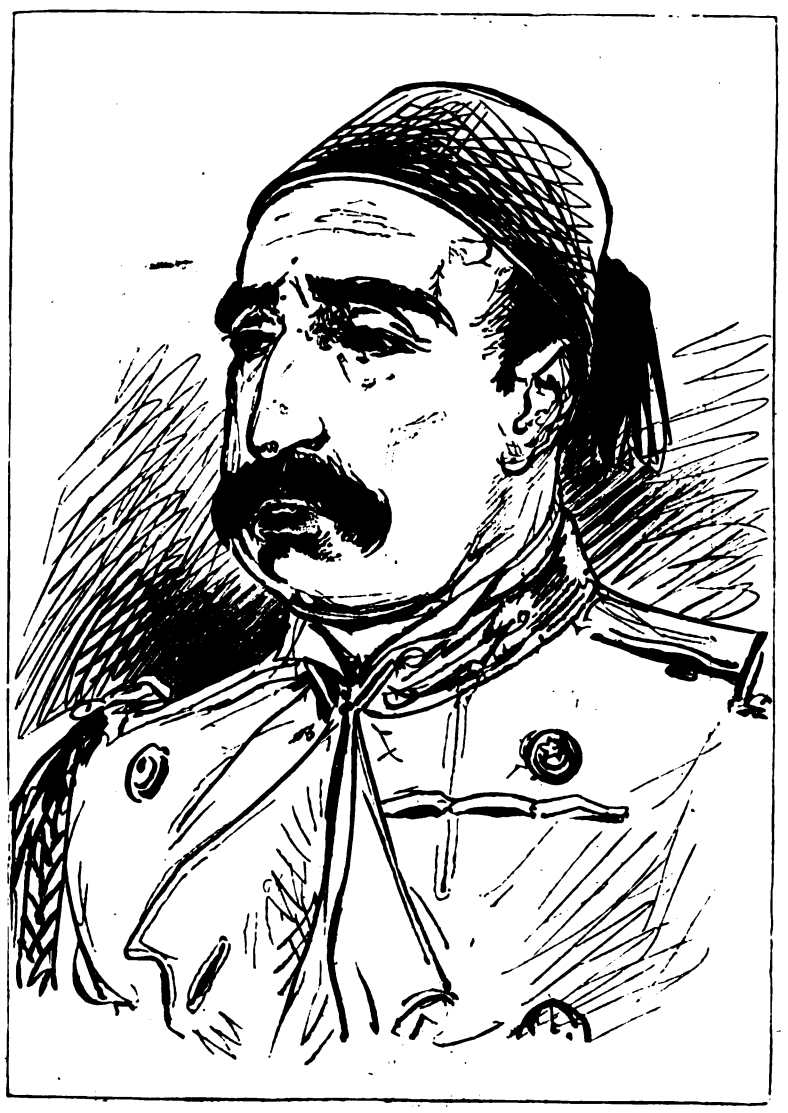
Digitized by Google

THE EUROPEAN NAVAL DEMONSTRATION ON THE ADRIATIC COAST.

VIEW FROM THE MONTENEGRIN CAMP TOWARDS THE ALBANIAN FORTIFIED POSITION OF MAZURA, COVERING DULCIGNO.
FROM A SKETCH BY CAPTAIN J. W. GAMBIER, R.N.

HEAD-QUARTERS AND CAMP OF BOZO PETROVITCH, COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF THE MONTENEGRIN FORCES.
FROM A SKETCH BY CAPTAIN J. W. GAMBIER, R.N.

Digitized by Google



THE EUROPEAN NAVAL DEMONSTRATION ON THE ADRIATIC COAST.

ALBANIA AND MONTENEGRO.

The issue raised between the Montenegrin and Albanian populations of the countries on the east shore of the Adriatic is not a new one; but is a renewal of a secular struggle, in which the two nationalities have ebbed and flowed over the shores of the Scutari Lake and to the Drin. The whole of what is now Ghegaria or Northern Albania was, previous to the Turkish conquest, in undisturbed occupation of the Serbs of the Zeta, of which kingdom Scutari was at one time the capital. Five hundred years ago, and down to the moment of the great crisis of the struggle between the Servian and Turkish Empires, marked by the battle of Kossovo, the whole of the country north of the Drin was subject to Servia. The greater part of the tribes on the north are, in fact, of Slavonic stock, the Miridites alone probably representing the Skipetar pure blood. The Wassoiwichi and Kutchi remain as purely Serb in language and religion as their Montenegrin kindred; while the Hassi, Hotti, Clementi, Kastrati, Gruda, Skreli, and all the villages of the plain of Podgoritza, are of original Slavonic stock. This last has yielded to the joint influences of Turkish domination and Catholic proselytism, and the Dukadgini, with the Sciochi and Sciala tribes (the latter considering themselves as Dukadgini), are largely mixed with Slavonic elements. The Drin is probably the boundary of the true Skipetar clans. We refer to the Map on the back page of our Supplement this week.

The League of Albanian tribes, which is resolved to resist Montenegro, as well as Greece, with respect to the transfer of Albanian territory decided upon in Berlin, has only existed for a short period of time. It was founded by the Mohammedan clans in Northern Albania, and, from its very commencement, was favored by the Government at Constantinople. This latter foresaw the occupation of Bosnia and the Herzegovina by the Austrians, and regarded it as the first great stride of the advance to Salonica, to which it was the Porte's object to oppose an insurmountable barrier in the shape of an Albania carefully organised for vigorous resistance. Nor was Montenegro forgotten in the Porte's combinations. Moreover, it was considered expedient to utilise, as promptly as might be, the Albanians' aspirations towards independence, lest others should do so for their own purposes. Therefore the Porte readily consented to the formation of the League of Prisrend, which commenced its operations entirely under Ottoman Government influence. It received from the Porte not only arms and military officers, wherewith to organise the national defences, but officials of Albanian nationality for the civil administration of the country. The Albanian Nizams and Redifs who had completed their terms of army service were sent home, where they forthwith placed themselves at the disposal of the League. It would, therefore, be an error to assume that the troops of this Confederation consist exclusively of wild Bashibazouks. Besides the very large number of irregular forces arrayed under its banners, the League is in a position to place at least ten thousand well-trained and disciplined soldiers in the field. Nor is its army devoid of artillery. The Mussulman element, accustomed to dominion and arms, is naturally most bellicose, and most averse to the proposed aggressions of Montenegro. It is especially obnoxious in the districts of Gusinje and Plava, which geographically and ethnologically, would belong to Montenegro, the Catholic movement having an insignificant result there. The proportions of the population of the respective districts are as follows:—Gusinje and Plava, 7000 Mussulmans and 4000 Orthodox; Lower Wassoiwich, 8500 Orthodox; Grenciarova, 650; Turkish, 150. All the more northerly districts are entirely Orthodox; the sum total of Orthodox and Mussulman population in the disputed districts north of the Sem being 9850 Mussulmans and 8450 Orthodox. The district of Podgoritza has a population of 12,500 Orthodox, and 7700 Mussulmans, and a few Roman Catholics.

The Albanian League at Prisrend, when invited the other day to associate itself with the resistance offered by the Bosniaks to the Austrian occupation, declined to do so, not choosing to make Austria-Hungary its enemy, or to squander its means in a hopeless enterprise which no way concerned Albania. But the leaders of the League, later on, acted otherwise with respect to both the questions of Gusinje and Plava, although most of the inhabitants of these districts were not Albanians, but Slavs. This was because they had good reason for what they did. In the first place, Montenegro was not a Power of the same calibre as Austria-Hungary. Secondly, some 1500 Albanians were concerned in the transfer of the districts in question. Thirdly, strategic considerations decided the League

RIZA PASHA, COMMANDER OF THE TURKISH FORCES AT DULCIGNO.
DRAWN FROM LIFE BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, R. C. WOODVILLE.

ANTIVARI, ON THE ADRIATIC COAST, NEAR DULCIGNO.
FROM A SKETCH BY CAPTAIN J. W. GAMBIER, R.N.

Digitized by Google

to take action. The Kom mountain, which, together with the Glieb, constitutes the watershed between the Adriatic and the Danube basin, and is of paramount military importance, is situate within the Plava district. This mountain barrier, attaining a height of 8500 ft. above the sea level, forms a natural wall to the northward of the Albanian Highlands. It to a certain extent compensates Albania for the disadvantage she suffers from the opening that exists between her mountain ranges and the Lake of Scutari.

It was for these reasons that the Albanian League threatened such resistance to the original scheme of territorial settlement provided by the Treaty of Berlin two years ago—that is to say, the cession of Gusinje and Plava to Montenegro. As an alternative plan, it was next proposed, by Italy, at the Conferences of the Foreign Powers, that the district of Tusi, bordering on the north-east shore of the Lake of Scutari, should be given to Montenegro. But this was resisted in turn by the Clementi and Hotti tribes, and by the Miridites generally, whose habitations are in that quarter. The Conference of this year at Berlin, therefore, resorted to a third arrangement. It was resolved that Montenegro should be put in definitive possession of the seaport town and district of Dulcigno, on the west side of the Lake of Scutari, forming the strip of land between that lake and the Adriatic. The Montenegrins had indeed captured Dulcigno, as well as Antivari and Spizza, during the late war, but had been induced to relinquish the first-named place at the time of the Congress of Berlin. As for Spizza (written "Spiça" in our Map) it has been appropriated by Austria. The Turkish Government formally agreed to the cession of Dulcigno, but the Albanian League has since prevented the execution of that agreement. This is the real occasion of the present difficulty, as is further explained in a separate article.

The greatest uncertainty still prevails—at the hour when this notice is written, on Wednesday evening—with regard to the combined action of the Six Great Powers of Europe, and the continued employment of their united naval squadrons in the Adriatic, to support their diplomatic resolutions at the late Berlin Conference, and to overcome the resistance of the Sultan and the Albanians, in the matter of the cession of Dulcigno to the Principality of Montenegro. It is positively certain, however, that the Albanians now rely upon the assistance of the Turkish troops commanded by Riza Pasha; and that the Montenegrins, finding their own strength inadequate to cope with the Turks and Albanians together, have demanded that the foreign squadrons should land some portion of their forces to aid in military operations on shore. Each of the foreign Admirals has felt himself obliged hereupon to ask the further instructions of his own Government. It will next be shown whether or not the several European States, Great Britain, France, Russia, Germany, Austria, and Italy, are disposed to proceed in joint action to such an extremity, which would involve nothing less than declaring war against the Turkish Empire.

The Sultan has announced that he will not surrender Dulcigno unless the Naval Demonstration is abandoned and a promise given that there shall be no repetition of it, in the Gulf of Volo or elsewhere, to enforce the cession of Epirus and Thessaly to the Kingdom of Greece. The Foreign Powers decline to give this pledge, and the Sultan will therefore consider any advance upon Dulcigno as an act of war. This has been notified to the Prince of Montenegro, who now understands that he will be in danger of having his own territory assailed by a Turkish army if he does not leave Dulcigno alone. The question at this moment is whether any of the Great Powers would give him effectual protection by going to war against Turkey. Some of them would much prefer to retire from the naval demonstration and from the diplomatic concert, even with the mortifying defeat of the resolutions of the Berlin Conference. It remains to be seen what will come of all this; but the issue cannot be long delayed.

The Porte signified its decision to the foreign Governments represented at Constantinople in the middle of last week. A Note was issued on the 22nd ult., which recapitulates all the discussions that have taken place on the subject of the cession of territory to Montenegro, and continues as follows:—

"The Powers, without taking into consideration the painful position of the Ottoman Empire, resolved upon a naval demonstration, which tends still further to embarrass the Porte. The latter, consequently, finds itself compelled to subordinate the evacuation of Dulcigno to obtaining from the European Cabinets formal assurances that they will observe these three conditions:—The abandonment of the naval demonstration in connection with any question whatever, present or future; the guaranteeing of the lives, property, honour, religion, and rights of Mussulmans who may either emigrate from or remain in the ceded territory; and, finally, the acceptance of the status quo, to the exclusion of any further demands in favour of Montenegro.

"The Porte cannot submit to the painful sacrifices involved in the evacuation of Dulcigno until it has received formal assurances respecting these conditions. If the Powers pass them over in silence, reject them, continue to exercise pressure, or proceed with the naval demonstration, it will be impossible for the Porte to order the local authorities at Dulcigno to evacuate the place. If the Powers should persist in exercising pressure, it would naturally not be upon Turkey that the responsibility for the complications which would ensue would fall."

The Note concludes with an appeal to the friendship and sense of justice of the European Powers, and the expression of a hope that the conditions of the Porte will be well received.

In reply to the above, a joint Note from the Ambassadors of the European Powers was delivered to the Porte on Monday last. It firmly rejects the demand of the Porte for the abandonment of the Naval Demonstration, and also the second condition relative to the maintenance of the status quo to the east of Lake Scutari. The third condition, demanding guarantees concerning the property of Mohammedans, is accepted. The Ambassadors, in conclusion, declare that the responsibility for what may occur will fall upon the Porte.

The combined fleet at Gravosa, under command of Vice-Admiral Sir F. Beauchamp Seymour, was ordered to sail for Dulcigno last Monday afternoon at half-past two o'clock. On Sunday the British despatch-boats Helicon and Falcon, having on board Vice-Admiral Seymour, Rear-Admirals Cremer and Fincati, commanding the Russian and Italian squadrons; Commander Neuta, of the Austrian ironclad Custozza; Captain Valois, of the German ironclad Victoria; and Captain Manfredi, of the Italian ironclad Palestro, besides a number of British officers, left Gravosa to make a reconnaissance in Albanian waters. The officers in command of the French squadron did not take part in this reconnaissance.

Early on Monday morning, the fleet received counter-orders, that its sailing for Dulcigno was postponed till Wednesday, and a further postponement has since been notified. This was occasioned by the arrival from Cettinje, the capital of Montenegro, of M. Radonich, the Montenegrin Minister of Foreign Affairs, with an urgent communication to Admiral Seymour. The news he brought to our naval commander was that the Porte had sent warning to the Prince of Montenegro that Turkey will go to war with him if he advances to seize Dulcigno. Admiral Seymour called a council of the other Admirals, who were each separately visited by the Montenegrin Minister; and they all telegraphed to their respective Governments, to ask what they should do.

It is understood at Paris that the French ships have orders not to join in any act of hostility, bombardment, or attempt at disembarkation. The Constitutional Law of July 16, 1875, which declares, in Article 9, that "The President of the Republic cannot declare war without the previous assent of the two Chambers," imposes this abstention on the Government, which is, besides, determined to observe it. The instructions given to Admiral Lafont are given in this sense, and will be rigorously obeyed.

The Albanian League has threatened to arrest the foreign Consuls resident in Albania as soon as the fleet arrives before Dulcigno and commences hostilities. Mr. Kirby Green, the British Consul-General, has left Scutari, and has gone up to Montenegro.

We present, in this Number of our Journal, a Map of the whole region of the Lake of Scutari, with the Adriatic shore from Cattaro to Dulcigno and the river Boyana, and with the Montenegrin and Albanian frontiers, showing the different proposed boundary lines, which are clearly explained in the accompanying text. The Map was drawn, expressly for this Journal, at the geographical establishment of Mr. E. Stanford, Charing Cross. Several of the Sketches, by our Special Artists, illustrative of the present crisis and impending struggle, with historical and descriptive notes upon the subject, will be received at this moment with particular interest by the majority of our readers.

The Constable of the Tower has appointed a committee to investigate the objects of interest in the Tower, and frame regulations for the future admission of visitors.

It is announced from the India Office that, owing to the return of troops from Afghanistan, the Government of India has been able to reopen the grant of furlough, on private affairs, to British officers.

According to an official document recently issued, the sums remitted to the Chancellor of the Exchequer in the year ending March 31 last by sundry persons for conscience sake amounted to £5801 19s. 4d. In the preceding year the amount was £6732 10s. 3d.

The secretary to the Royal Commission for the Australian International Exhibitions has received through the office of the Government of Victoria a telegraphic despatch from Sir Herbert Sandford informing him that the Melbourne Exhibition surpasses his highest hopes, the general condition of many of the courts being far advanced, that great assistance is being rendered to British Exhibitors by the British Committee, of which the Hon. Mr. Casey is chairman, and that he (Sir Herbert), as representing the Royal Commission, had been very cordially received.

The readers of this Journal have long since made pleasant acquaintance with Miss Kate Greenaway, the artist whose bright and humorous fancy, inspired by a true womanly kindness for children, has cleverly created a multitude of pretty, funny, quaint little folk, as natural as life, engaged in all manner of infantile occupations. Her "Birthday Book for Children," just published by Messrs. G. Routledge and Sons, is a square little volume, measuring four inches each way, containing nearly 400 designs, twelve of them, one for each month, printed in colours by Mr. Edmund Evans, the rest of them vignetted on the margin of every page. And every day of the year has its own amusing little picture, with the accompaniment of a four-line verse written by Mrs. Sale Barker. This makes up a treasury of sweetly comical illustrations. The opposite pages, neatly ruled with lines of pale green, afford spaces for the young possessor of this manual to record the dates of all his or her friends' birthdays, which is, to some of our young people, an affair of the highest importance.

The Archbishop of Canterbury continued his visitation at Canterbury on Wednesday week, and was met in the cathedral by a numerous assembly of the clergy and laity of the diocese. The Archbishop delivered a charge of considerable length. Referring to certain Ritualistic practices, his Grace observed that the Bishops were bound to see that the ritual of the Church was not altered in a manner calculated to interfere with its general teaching, but he thought that if the clergy were permitted to more freely state their private opinions from the pulpit, rather than through symbols of public worship, no great harm would arise. Care, however, must be taken in order to prevent contradictory statements to the formularies being made. An address from the pulpit appealed to the reason and the conscience, and no one was bound to give unqualified assent to statements made in this way. In common worship, however, where everyone took a part, it was unfair, and beyond the Church's warrant, to ask one to join in or give adhesion to that which he believed had not been sanctioned by the Church to which he belonged.—The Archbishop held his visitation of the Dean and Chapter of the cathedral last Saturday. Referring to the work of the Royal Commission of Inquiry into the condition of the Cathedral bodies, of which the Archbishop is president, he said it would be the duty of the Commission to recommend a readjustment of the statutes, with provision for altering them from time to time to suit the requirements of the age.—The Archbishop concluded his visitations at Maidstone on Tuesday. Having shown the impossibility of living a spiritual apart from a secular life, his Grace gave an exhortation to the clergy and laity to work harmoniously as far as possible, and to dutifully refer their disputes to the constitutional authorities, and next dwelt at great length on educational preparation for the Church.

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

MISS BRADDON'S NEW NOVEL.
Now ready, at all Libraries, in 3 vols.,
JUST AS I AM. The New Novel. By the Author of "Lady Audley's Secret," &c.
London: J. and R. Maxwell, Milton House, Shoe-lane, E.C.

MR. FREDERICK TALBOT'S NEW NOVEL.
Now ready, at all Libraries, in 3 vols.,
THE SCARSDALE PEERAGE. The New Novel. By the Author of "Lottie's Fortune," &c.
London: J. and R. Maxwell, Milton House, Shoe-lane, E.C.

MYRA'S JOURNAL is the cheapest Fashion Journal in the World. Price 6d.; by post, 8d.

MYRA'S JOURNAL gives advice upon Dress Alterations, and teaches how to make and alter Costumes, Dresses, Mantles, and Underclothing.

MYRA'S JOURNAL is a Complete Guide to Ladies upon the care of Children's Wardrobes, Household Economies, the Cuisine, Fashion in Furniture, Social Etiquette, New Books, Music, Health and Personal Attention, and Miscellaneous Information.

MYRA'S JOURNAL for OCTOBER contains:—A BEAUTIFULLY COLOURED FASHION PLATE; CUT-OUT PAPER PATTERN, the Modjeska Mantilla: Diagram Sheet, containing Full-size Models for cutting out—1. The Bartet Corsage; 2. The Hortense Mantle; 3. The Cecilia Matinée; 4. Dressing Coiffure; 5. Reticule. Costumes—Walking, Morning, Travelling, and Children's. Toilettes—Visiting, Reception, and Dinner. Costumes for Children. New Mantles, Paletots, Waterproofs, Chapeaux, Coiffures, Parures, and Lingerie. Needlework—Embroidered Wall-pocket, Border in Berlin Woolwork, Designs for Darning on Net, Drawnwork, Designs for Knitting, Crochet, and Embroidery.
The Last News from Paris; Spinnings in Town.

Subscriptions—Yearly, 8s.; Half-Yearly, 4s.
GOUBAUD and SON, 39 and 40, Bedford-street, London, W.C.

Fourth Edition, cloth, post-free, 13 stamps,
DR. BARR MEADOWS on Homœopathy.
"A clever exposé of the system."
G. Hill, 154, Westminster-road.

Eighth Edition, cloth, post-free, 33 stamps,
DR. BARR MEADOWS on Skin Disease.
Remarks on the Abuse of Arsenic, and specifics.
G. Hill, 154, Westminster-road.

JUST PUBLISHED. Post-free, Two Stamps.
DYSPEPSIA and the SEVERER FORMS OF INDIGESTION. A Small Pamphlet on those distressing complaints and their complete cures. Published by the Author, Richard King, Esq., Staff Surgeon, R.N., 23, Warwick-st., Rugby.

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

NEW STORY.—Just published, price 5s.
CAUGHT IN A TRAP.
A Tale of France in 1802.
By ESME STUART, Author of "Mimi," "The Good Old Days," &c. With a Frontispiece, introducing Napoleon I. and another character in the Story.
Marcus Ward and Co., 67, Chandos-street, Strand, W.C.

Now ready (One Shilling), No. 250.
THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE for OCTOBER. With Illustrations by George du Maurier and W. Small.
CONTENTS.
Washington Square. By Henry James, jun. (With an Illustration.) Chapters XXV.—XXIX.
Notes on Water-Colour Art. I.—The Early Masters. By Harry Quilter.
Country Parsons.
The Pavilion on the Links. (Part II.) Chap. V.—Tells of an Interview between Northmour, your Mother, and Myself. VI.—Tells of my Introduction to the Tall Man. VII.—Tells how a Word was cried through the Pavilion Window. VIII.—Tells the Last of the Tall Man. IX.—Tells how Northmour carried out his Threat.
The Homes of Town Poor. By the Rev. Harry Jones.
Foreign Orders.
Falling in Love.
Venetian Folk-Songs.
To a Friend Recently Lost. By George Meredith.
White Wings: A Yachting Romance. (With an Illustration.) Chap. XLVII.—After the Gale. XLVIII.—"A Good One for the Last." XLIX.—Adieu!
London: Smith, Elder, and Co., 15, Waterloo-place.

Now ready, 25th Edition, 8vo, cloth, pp. 1102, price 16s.,
HOMŒOPATHIC DOMESTIC MEDICINE. By J. LAURIE, M.D. Completely re-arranged, revised, re-written, annotated, and brought down to the present time, with a copious introduction, by R. S. Gutteridge, M.D. The present edition contains many important new chapters and sections, with new features and matter pertaining thereto, including the specific characteristic effects of all the new American remedies, the symptoms and treatment of all general diseases, including those of women and children. Diseases of Tropical Climates are fully considered, and the volume may be pronounced of the greatest value to families, emigrants, and missionaries.
Of this work a Physician of high standing writes:—
"I have gone pretty well through your Edition of Laurie's Domestic Homœopathic Medicine, and I can truly say that it is the most perfect work of its kind ever published; in fact, it is, to my mind, too good for the general public, as it enlightens them too much in the art and mystery of medicine and surgery. For young medical beginners such a work is invaluable, as it would save them a great amount of reading. It is really superior to any Domestic yet published. I have the First and Second Editions of Laurie, and your Edition only shows what the work has developed into."

Just out, Thirtieth Edition, post 8vo, cloth, price 5s.,
EPITOME OF THE ABOVE WORK.
By R. S. GUTTERIDGE, M.D.
This edition contains notices of most of the new medicines, and is brought down to the present time.
Leath and Ross, 5, St. Paul's-churchyard; and 9, Vere-street, W.

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

Price One Shilling, Illustrated,
BELGRAVIA for OCTOBER.
Contents:—A Confidential Agent. By James Payn. Illustrated by Arthur Hopkins—The Archaic Ages. By the Rev. W. Downes, M.A.—The Dilettant. By Austen Dobson—Our Old Country Towns.—X. With Four Illustrations. By A. Rhimer—Mr. Earl's Investment: A Tale of Old China—The Fair and Feast of St. Pantelemon. By R. M. Craig—On Tramp—The Leaden Casket. By Mrs. Alfred W. Hunt.

Price One Shilling,
THE GENTLEMAN'S MAGAZINE for OCTOBER.
Contents:—Queen Cophetua. By R. E. Francillon—A Relic of Dryden. By Algernon C. Swinburne—The Science of Likenesses and its Meanings. By Andrew Wilson, F.R.S.E.—A New Study of "Love Labour's Lost." By S. L. Lee—Hospitaller Work at St. John's-Gate in 1880. By Major F. Duncan—James Russell Lowell, as Poet. By the Rev. H. R. Haweis, M.A.—Court, Rolls. By John Amphlett—Science Notes. By W. Mattieu Williams—Table Talk. By Sylvanus Urban.
Chatto and Windus, Piccadilly, W.

Just published. Price 1s. 6d.; postage free, 1s. 8d.,
DECORATIVE PAINTING (A Practical Guide to), containing Instructions for Decorating the Walls of any Apartment, with directions for Painting Panels, Screens, and Terra Cotta. By W. RUNDLE HARRISON.
London: Wm. Barnard, 119, Edgware-road.

PRACTICAL LESSONS in Painting on China, &c., by Mdme. LA BARONNE DELAMARDELLE. Translated by GUSTAVE A. BOUVIER. Price 1s.; post-free, 1s. 1d.—Lechertier, Barbe, and Co., 60, Regent-street, W., Agents for Lacroix's Ceramic Colours.

NOSE and THROAT DISEASES, and their Local Treatment by Medicated Sprays. By GEORGE MOORE, M.D., 1s.; by post, on receipt of 12 stamps.
James Epps and Co., 170, Piccadilly.

Third Edition, 1s., post-free,
THE new ELECTROLYTIC TREATMENT of CANCER and of simple Tumours. By G. EDGELOW, M.D.—Nelson and Co., 23, Duke-street, Grosvenor-square, W.

PHOTOGRAPHS.
THE ENGLISH CATHEDRALS, the English Lake District, Yorkshire, Derbyshire, the Isle of Wight, Warwickshire, Cambridge, South Coast, Devonshire, Cornwall, North Wales, Paris, the French Cathedrals, Switzerland, Belgium, Vienna, Nuremberg, Innsbruck, Salzburg, Norway, Constantinople, Italy, South of France, Algiers, America, India, Spain, Portugal, and Japan.
3000 Photographs of Italy and its Treasures, photographed in detail. Size, 10 in. by 8 in. Price 1s. each. A very fine collection for Students.
Collections of Photographs, Prints, Drawings, &c., cleaned, mounted, titled, and put into order, and bound into convenient volumes or portfolioed.
Photographs Enlarged, Coloured, and Framed.
MARION and CO., 22 and 23, Soho-square, London.

VITREMANIE, superseding Diaphanic. An easy and inexpensive method of decorating windows in churches, public buildings, and private houses, by which may be produced the rich colouring and beautiful designs equal in appearance to real stained glass. Handbook of Designs and full instructions, 1s. 1d. Boxes, comprising designs, &c., at 2s., 3s. 6d., 42s. Particulars post-free. Sole inventors, J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street, London, W.

CHROMOPHOTOGRAPHY. (KRAUS' PROCESS.)
The New Art (enabling any person without previous knowledge of either Painting or Drawing) to Colour Photographs on convex glasses, in imitation of China and Enamel Painting. Boxes containing every requisite, 2s. and 3s. Particulars post-free, and specimens shown on application at the Sole Agents, J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street, London, W.

CHARMING CRAYON PORTRAITS. Send Photo and 10s. 6d. to A. and J. BOOL, Artists (from Royal Academy, National Medallist), 36, Warwick-street, Pimlico, London, who will return photo with faithful Crayon Drawing from it, 15 by 10 inches, post-free, home or abroad. 100 testimonials. Tinted Crayons, 21s.; Water-colour, 21s.; Oil, two guineas; Life-size highly-finished Crayon, £5 5s. On Paris Français.

WHAT IS YOUR CREST and WHAT IS YOUR MOTTO? Send name and county to CULLETON'S Heraldic Office. Plain Sketch, 3s. 6d.; colours, 7s. The arms of man and wife blended. Crest engraved on seals, rings, books, and steel dies, 8s. 6d. Gold seal, with crest, 30s. Solid Gold Ring, 18-carat, Hall-marked, with crest, 42s. Manual of Heraldry, 400 engravings, 3s. 8d.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

VISITING CARDS, by CULLETON. Fifty best quality, 2s. 8d., post-free, including the Engraving of Copper-plate. Wedding Cards, 50 each. 50 Embossed Envelopes, with Maiden Name, 13s. 6d.—T. CULLETON, Seal Engraver, 25, Cranbourn-street, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

CULLETON'S GUINEA BOX of STATIONERY contains a Ream of the very best Paper and 500 Envelopes, all stamped in the most elegant way with Crest and Motto, Monogram, or Address, and the engraving of Steel Die included. Sent to any part for P.O. order.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

SCRAPS for SCREENS and SCRAP-BOOKS (Coloured).—Immense variety of Flowers, Figures Birds, and Landscapes, from 1s. per sheet; 1 doz. assorted, 10s. 6d.
London: Wm. Barnard, 119, Edgware-road.

WANTED.—Bound Volumes of "Illustrated News," from 1844 to 1849 inclusive. R. D., care of Rastall and Son, Ebury-street, S.W.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS.
GOLD MEDAL,
PARIS,
1878.

FARM of MODERATE SIZE to be LET. Rent low. Valuation small. Rates light. Entry this Michaelmas. Near rail, and good markets.—Apply to the Agent, Titchfield Estates Office, Fareham, Hants.

Digitized by Google

NATIONAL ART TRAINING SCHOOL, South Kensington.—The Winter Session will commence on MONDAY, OCT. 4.

Public Art Classes in connection with the Training School, open to the Public on payment of Fees, are established for Students of both sexes. The studies comprise Drawing, Painting, and Modelling as applied to Ornament, the Figure, Landscape, and still life.

Candidates for admission who are not already registered as students of the school must pass a preliminary examination in freehand drawing of the second grade.

Special admission examinations will be held at the school at frequent intervals during the session.

The first admission examination for the forthcoming session will be held on Tuesday, Sept. 28, at 10 a.m. and 6.45 p.m.

Application for information as to fees, &c., and for admission should be made in writing to the Secretary, Science and Art Department, or, on and after Oct. 4, personally to the Registrar at the School, Exhibition-road, South Kensington, S.W.

By order of the Lords of the Committee of Council on Education.

PIANOFORTES for HIRE or for SALE, from 25 guineas upwards.—JOHN BROADWOOD and SONS, 33, Great Pulteney-street, Golden-square, W. Manufactory, 45, Horseferry-road, Westminster, W.

BUTLER'S MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS. Violins, Concertinas, Harmoniums, Flutes, Clarionets, Flageolets, Guitars, Banjoes, Accordeons, Fluthins, Cornets, Drums, Fifes, and Musical Instruments of every description, at BUTLER'S, 20, Haymarket, London. Illustrated Catalogue (50 pages) post-free.

DIAMONDS. SAPPHIRES. CATS'-EYES. OPALS. EMERALDS.

Mr. STREETER, 18, New Bond-street, W.

INTRODUCER of 18-CARAT GOLD JEWELLERY and ENGLISH LEVER WATCHES, (MACHINE-MADE.)

BRANCH ESTABLISHMENT, COLOMBO, CEYLON.

WALKER'S CRYSTAL CASE WATCHES are superseding all others. Prize Medals—London, 1862; Paris, 1867. Silver Watches, from £4 4s.; Gold, from £6 6s. Price-Lists sent free.—77, Cornhill; 220, Regent-street; and 76, Strand.

CHARLES FRODSHAM and CO. By Appointment to her Majesty. THREE GOLD MEDALS for CLOCKS and WATCHES. Only Address, 84, Strand, London, W.C.

DENT'S WATCHES, CLOCKS, and CHRONOMETERS.—Illustrated Catalogue sent free.—Apply to 61, Strand, or 34, Royal Exchange, London.

THE FINEST WATCHES MADE. SEWILL'S KEYLESS WATCHES, Prize Medals, London, Paris, and Philadelphia. Damp and Dust-proof, 18-carat cases, adjusted and compensated for all climates, £10 10s., £14 14s., and £25; Ladies', £7 7s., £10 10s., and £18 10s.; in silver cases, for Ladies or Gentlemen, £5 5s., £6 6s., and £8 8s. Forwarded on receipt of remittance.—J. Sewill, 30, Cornhill, London; and 61, South Castle-street, Liverpool.

ORIDE GOLD ALBERT CHAINS, 5s., 7s. 6d., 10s. 6d. Links, Solitaires, or Studs, 2s. 6d. Brooches, 4s. 6d. to 8s. 6d. Earrings, 3s. 6d. to 7s. 6d. Lockets, 4s. 6d. to 12s. 6d. Free by post. Opinions of the Press and Price-Lists post-free.—C. C. ROWE, 92, Brompton-road, London, S.W.

JEWEL ROBBERIES PREVENTED.—J. TANN'S RELIANCE SAFES have never failed to resist the attempts of the most determined burglars. Fire-Resisting Safes, £5 5s. Lists free.—11, Newgate-street, E.C.

PRETTY FLOWERS, Bridal Bouquets, Bridesmaids' Bouquets, Baskets of Flowers, Loose Cut Flowers, Funeral Wreaths. Prices on application.—WILLIAM HOOPER, 88, Oxford-street, W.

NEW SHADES AND NEW MIXTURES, 1880.
Under the direct patronage of the
ROYAL COURTS OF EUROPE.

EGERTON BURNETT'S SERGES

Maintain their Unrivalled Excellence for YACHTING, SEASIDE, and TRAVELLING WEAR. Proof against Salt Water or Rain. Prices, 1s. 2½d. to 4s. 6d. per yard. "The Queen" says:—"Mr. Burnett has gained a very high reputation for the ROYAL SERGES." Orders are daily arriving from all parts. Pattern Books post-free. Carriage paid to London, Bristol, Glasgow, or Belfast. Any length cut. Goods packed for exportation.

Address—
EGERTON BURNETT, SERGE WAREHOUSE, WELLINGTON, SOMERSET.
N.B.—He has no connection with any Company or other London or Provincial Firm whatsoever. NO AGENTS.

EGERTON BURNETT'S "IMPERIAL VELVETEEN,"
"PATENT FAST PILE."
In the most Fashionable Colours.
Le Follet says:—"The dye is said, by competent judges, to be the most permanent ever brought out. Their finish is superb." Ladies must see that my name is branded on the back, without which none are guaranteed. Any length cut.
Patterns post-free on application to
EGERTON BURNETT, WELLINGTON, SOMERSET.
No Agents.
Carriage paid to any town in England, Ireland, Scotland, or Wales on orders over 40s.

MOURNING. Messrs. JAY'S experienced Assistants travel to any part of the Kingdom, free of expense to purchasers. They take with them dresses and millinery, besides materials, all marked in plain figures, and at the same price as if purchased at the Warehouse in Regent-street. Funerals at stated charges.
JAY'S, REGENT-STREET.

NEW MILLINERY.—"It may be that the report so recently promulgated implying a falling off in the inventive faculty of the Parisian artistes has stimulated inventions." Messrs. Jay believe their French Milliner has never before selected so many novelties in Ladies' Hats, Bonnets, and Caps as they have recently imported.
JAY'S, REGENT-STREET.

PATTERNS FREE.
BLACK VELVETEENS.—Almost equal in appearance to good black velvet. As black velveteen is likely to be much worn during the autumn and winter seasons, Messrs. JAY have had manufactured special qualities of black velveteen, fast colour. These Velveteens are confidently recommended to their customers.
JAY'S,
THE LONDON GENERAL MOURNING WAREHOUSE, REGENT-STREET, W.

THE "MANCUNIUM" VELVETEEN.
WARRANTED FAST BLACK.
Registered October, 1879.

The "Queen" of Dec. 20, 1879, says:—
"The manufacturers of the Mancunium Velveteen have eminently succeeded in producing a deeper and richer black than has hitherto been introduced in this material."
"La Mode Illustrée" of March 1, 1880, says:—
"The Mancunium combines with the richness of Genoa Silk Velvets the substance and durability of a good Lyons Velvet. It is absolute perfection, and may be worn by ladies of haut ton."
Stamped in white on the back of every yard with the trade mark and name.
Sold by all first-class Drapers.

PRATT'S LADIES' BELTS AND ABDOMINAL SUPPORTS
ARE CONFIDENTLY RECOMMENDED AS THE MOST COMFORTABLE AND EFFICIENT EVER MADE.
Apply to the Ladies' Attendant,
J. F. PRATT,
420, OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.

CHAPMAN'S, NOTTING-HILL.
PATTERNS OF ALL GOODS POST-FREE.

LYONS SILK DRESS VELVETS, 5s. per yard under value. Pure Lyons Silk Gown Velvets 8s. 11d. per yard. Good Black Silk Velvet, 19in. wide, 3s. 11d., 5s. 11d., and 7s. 11d. per yard; Coloured Gown Velvets, 19 in. wide, 5s. 11d., 6s. 11d., and 8s. 11d. per yard.

SILKS CONTINUE AT DESPERATE PRICES.
THE BEST AND CHEAPEST IN LONDON.
The present low market value of Silk is becoming a serious matter to all concerned in the manufacture. Many of the large Lyons weaving firms are working their mills at a loss. This condition of things should be eagerly seized by the public.

Corded Silks, of good sound quality, at less than	s.	d.
the value of woollen goods	1	9	per yard.
An extra quality of the same make	2	9	"
Handsome Gros Grain, equal in value to many that are sold at 4s. 6d., for	3	9	"
Very rich quality, at	4	9	"
A superb Faille	5	11	"

In better times the latter quality is sold at 7s. 11d.
I have bought very largely during this depression, and secured an immense stock of all qualities, in value over £20,000.

LOUIS VELVETEEN, which is sold by me at the wholesale tariff, by the box of about 35 yards—viz., 1s. 10½d., 1d. per yard extra for cutting short lengths. All qualities kept in stock up to 4s. 6d. Genoa, Fast Pile, &c.

COLOURED CORDED VELVETEENS, For the Autumn and Winter Seasons. Made in all the Newest Colours. 26 in. wide, 1s. 11½d. per yard.

NEW DRESS GOODS, 10,000 PATTERNS TO SELECT FROM.

CASHMERES and MERINOS, among Plain Woollen Fabrics, will be, if possible, more popular than ever. These genuine favourites are produced for the autumn in many new and beautiful colours; some fine tones in Blue, Greys, Heliotropes, and Reds are special features among the New Patterns.
The quality at 1s. 6¾d. is of excellent value.
At 1s. 11½d., an extra width, and equally good.
That at 2s. 3d., made of the best long staple wool, is superior in weight to any yet sold at the price; and the finest produced is 2s. 11½d. per yard.

VIGOGNE DE L'INDE. This is a Specialité of mine, of the real Indian Chuddah Cloth appearance, which is sold at 11s. 6d. per yard. I particularly wish to draw attention to the beautiful quality of this Cloth. It is remarkably soft, and has a light woolly surface, is very durable, and most agreeable wear. To many ladies, who have a horror of a heavy dress, this will be a most acceptable material. 25 in. wide, 1s. 11½d. per yard.

CASHMERIENNE. This is an exquisitely fine Woollen Fabric, with a marked twill on either side; is particularly pure both in quality and dye, and specially adapted for "demi-saison toilettes." The colours are very good, including the new shade, called "Sand of the Desert," also Heliotrope, and twelve other new and choice shades. The width of this capital cloth is 26 inches, and the price 13½d. per yard.

TWILLED LLAMAS. For cheap House Dresses a most desirable material. All good useful colourings, and very durable. For children's wear is particularly recommended, making strong useful School Dresses; 26 inches wide; 9d. per yard. In Plain and Heather Mixtures.

SERGES, for giving away, reduced to 6¾d., stout or fine; usual price... 9s. 8¾d.
Welsh serge, in all colours, reduced to 7d.; good quality, Welsh House-spun, reduced to ... 9s. 9¾d.
Estamene serge, reduced to 1s.; sold everywhere at ... 1s. 6d.
Devon-hire Serge, reduced to 1s. 3d.; sold everywhere at 2s. 0d.
Esquimaux serge, reduced to ... 1s. 2d.

TWELVE MONTHS OLD.—About 3000 yards of last Summer's WASHING TEXTURES, such as Grebe Cloth, Ribbed Sateen Cloth, Idra Stripes, Fancy Oatmeals, and various material, which were sold at 9d., 1s., and 1s. 3d., will be cleared out at 6d. per yard. Complete Sets of Patterns free.
1, CASTLE-TERRACE; and 1, 3, and 5, PORTLAND-ROAD, W.
Wholesale; Shipping and Export Merchant.

CHAPMAN'S, NOTTING-HILL, W.

NICHOLSON'S NEW COSTUMES, 50 Illustrations free.

NICHOLSON'S NEW MANTLES, 50 Illustrations free.

NICHOLSON'S NEW AUTUMN DRESS FABRICS.
Patterns post-free.
VELOUR CLOTH, at 10½d., 18½d., and 1s. 11½d. per yard.
NEW SERGES, at 13½d., 18½d., and 23½d. per yard.
GRAMPIAN HOMESPUNS, 1s. 7½d. per yard.
NEW POPLINS, from 6½d. per yard.
NEW MELTON CLOTHS, 2s. 3d. per yard.
FRENCH MERINOS, at 1s. 11d., 2s. 9½d., and 3s. 3d. per yard.
BLACK VELVETEENS, from 1s. 9½d. to 5s. 11d. per yard.
COLOURED Ditto, from 2s. 11d. to 3s. 6d. per yard.
BROCADED Ditto, from 2s. 6d. to 3s. 6d. per yard.
Patterns of Black and Coloured Silks post-free.
D. NICHOLSON and CO., 50 to 53, ST. PAUL'S-CHURCHYARD, LONDON.

NUDA VERITAS.—GREY HAIR restored by this valuable specific to its original shade, after which it grows the natural colour, not grey. Used as a dressing, it causes growth and arrests falling. The most harmless and effectual restorer extant. One trial will convince it has no equal. Price 10s. 6d., of all Chemists and Hairdressers. Testimonials post-free.—R. HOVENDEN and SONS, London.

GOLDEN HAIR.—ROBARE'S AUREOLINE produces the beautiful Golden Colour so much admired. Warranted perfectly harmless. Prices 5s. 6d. and 10s. 6d., of all Perfumers. Wholesale, HOVENDEN and SONS, 5, Great Marlborough-street, W.; and 93 and 95, City-road, E.C. London. Pinaud and Meyer, 37, Boulevard de Strasbourg, Paris; 31, Graben, Vienna; 44, Rue des Longs Chariots, Brussels.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY for the HAIR. If your hair is turning grey, or white, or falling off, use "The Mexican Hair Renewer," for it will positively restore in every case Grey or White Hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting the growth of the hair on bald spots where the glands are not decayed. "The Mexican Hair Renewer" is sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere, at 3s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE. For the Teeth and Breath. Is the best Liquid Dentifrice in the world; it thoroughly cleanses partially-decayed teeth from all parasites or living "animalculæ," leaving them pearly white, imparting a delightful fragrance to the breath. The Fragrant Floriline removes instantly all odours arising from a foul stomach or tobacco smoke, being partly composed of honey, soda, and extracts of sweet herbs and plants. It is perfectly harmless, and delicious as sherry. Sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere, at 2s. 6d. per Bottle.

THROAT IRRITATION.—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice. For these symptoms use EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES. Glycerine, in these agreeable confections, being in proximity to the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of sucking, becomes actively healing. Sold only in Boxes, 7½d. and 1s. 1½d., labelled "James Epps and Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London." A letter received:—"Gentlemen,—It may, perhaps, interest you to know that, after an extended trial, I have found your Glycerine Jujubes of considerable benefit (with or without medical treatment) in almost all forms of throat disease. They soften and clear the voice. In no case can they do any harm.—Yours faithfully, GORDON HOLMES, L.R.C.P.E., Senior Physician to the Municipal Throat and Ear Infirmary."

JUST PUBLISHED, Gratis and Post-free, OETZMANN and CO.'S NEW CATALOGUE—"A Guide to House Furnishing"—contains price of every article required in completely furnishing a house of any class, also "Hints on House Furnishing and Decoration," and is considered to be by far the best furnishing guide extant. The prices have been reduced wherever it was found compatible with maintaining the same excellence of style, quality, and workmanship, and will be found from 5 to 25 per cent below those charged at Co-operative Stores. Members should write for Catalogue and Patterns, and compare prices and quality. A minimum saving of 5 per cent is guaranteed. Those residing at a distance inconvenient for a personal visit, would do well to avail themselves of O. and CO.'S "Postal Order Department," full particulars of which will be found page 379 in Catalogue.—OETZMANN and CO., 67 to 79, Hampstead-road, near Tottenham-court-road.

FURNISH THROUGHOUT.
SUBSTANTIAL ARTISTIC FURNITURE (Regd.)
OETZMANN & CO., HAMPSTEAD-ROAD, NEAR TOTTENHAM-COURT-ROAD.

FURNISH THROUGHOUT.—OETZMANN and CO., 67, 69, 71, 73, 77, and 79, HAMPSTEAD-ROAD, near Tottenham-court-road. CARPETS, Furniture, Bedding, Drapery, Furnishing Ironmongery, China, Glass, Paper Hangings, Pictures, Bronzes, Clocks, Pianos, &c., and every other requisite for completely furnishing a house throughout. Lowest prices consistent with guaranteed quality.
OETZMANN and CO.

THE "CANTERBURY" EBONIZED CHIPPENDALE DRAWING-ROOM SUITE, SIXTEEN GUINEAS, consisting of a handsome Cabinet, with two bevelled plates in backs, and decorated panel on door; an Octagon Centre Table; Six Chairs and Two Arm-Chairs, with circular cushioned seats, covered in Silk Plush, Roman Satin, or Tapestry. Illustrations of this suite post-free on application.
OETZMANN and CO.

CABINET and UPHOLSTERY DEPARTMENT.—Best Plate Chimney-Glasses, in double-gilt frames, elegant patterns, large size, 2 guineas; magnificent ditto, from 5 to 20 guineas; Black and Gold Early English ditto, from 2 to 20 guineas. Handsome Black and Gold Early English Cabinets, from £3 3s. to 50 guineas. Mahogany Sideboards, from 6 guineas upwards; noble ditto, in Early English and other handsome designs, from 20 to 100 guineas. Easy-Chairs, from 1 guinea upwards. Drawing and Dining Room Chairs, from 10s. 6d. upwards.—OETZMANN and CO.

CARPET DEPARTMENT.—Stout Tapestry Brussels Carpet, 1s. 3½d.; handsome pattern ditto, from 1s. 9d. to 2s. 5d. per yard. Good Brussels, new designs, from 2s. 4d. upwards. Good Axminster, from 4s. 9d. Good Wilton, super quality, from 5s. 11d. per yard. These prices are much below value. Kidderminster Carpets, all wool, 1s. 11d. per yard. Patent Rock-Dye Felt Carpeting, handsome designs, double-width, 1s. 9d. per yard. Excellent Stair Carpet, from 6d. per yard; all-wool ditto, 1s. per yard.—OETZMANN and CO.

DOWN QUILTS.—OETZMANN and CO.'S EIDER and ARCTIC DOWN QUILTS and CLOTHING combine the greatest amount of warmth attainable with the least possible weight, and are warranted pure. O. and CO. sell only the best make—BOOTH and FOX'S. See Trade-Mark on each article. Prices will be found much below those usually charged for this favourite make. Reduced Price-Lists post-free.
OETZMANN and CO.

DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE, post-free.
OETZMANN & CO., HAMPSTEAD-ROAD.

ALFRED B. PEARCE, 39, Ludgate-hill, INVITES INSPECTION of all that is new and beautiful in useful and ornamental CHINA and GLASS, including

Dinner Services ("Cottage"), 50 pieces			£0 13 6
Dinner Services for 12 persons (108 pieces)			1 15 0
Gilt China Dessert Services for 12 persons			0 17 0
Gilt China Tea Services, 40 pieces, 12s.; 28 pieces			0 8 6
China Breakfast Services for 6 persons			0 11 0
Toilet Services (for washstands), 6s. 6d., 5s. 6d., and			0 3 9
White Stone Jugs, "The Grecian," set of three			0 1 3
All really excellent patterns.
Quart Decanters, cut, good quality	per pair		0 5 0
Claret Decanters (with handle)	each		0 4 0
Plain light Claret Glasses, Burgundy shape	per doz.		0 8 0
Wine Glasses, plain or cut, Ports and Sherries	"		0 1 9
Engraved Wine Glasses	do	do	0 3 6
Hock Glasses, ruby bowl, 6s. per doz.; green bowl	"		0 3 0
Half-pint Cut Tumblers	per doz.		0 3 3
Plain light Finger-Glasses, taper shape	"		0 6 6

Other articles proportionately cheap.
Descriptive Catalogue post-free.
39, LUDGATE-HILL. Established 1760.

PLATE.—GOLDSMITHS' ALLIANCE, Limited, Manufacturing Silversmiths, 11 and 12, Cornhill, London.
The best wrought SILVER SPOONS and FORKS.
Fiddle Pattern, 7s. 2d. per ounce; Queen's Pattern, 7s. 6d. per oz. Many other patterns, plain or highly ornamented.

Fiddle Pattern.	oz.	£	s.	d.	Queen's Pattern.	oz.	£	s.	d.
12 Table Spoons	30	10	15	0	12 Table Spoons	40	15	0	0
12 Dessert ditto	20	7	3	4	12 Dessert ditto	25	9	7	6
12 Table Forks	30	10	15	0	12 Table Forks	40	15	0	0
12 Dessert ditto	20	7	3	4	12 Dessert ditto	25	9	7	6
2 Gravy Spoons	10	3	11	8	2 Gravy Spoons	14	5	5	6
1 Soup Ladle	9	3	11	8	1 Soup Ladle	10	3	15	0
4 Sauce ditto	10	3	16	8	4 Sauce ditto	12	4	16	0
4 Salt ditto, gilt		1	0	0	4 Salt ditto, gilt		2	2	0
1 Pair Fish Carvers		4	18	0	1 Pair Fish Carvers		6	2	0
12 Tea Spoons	10	3	16	8	12 Tea Spoons	14	5	12	0
1 Pair Sugar Tongs		0	15	0	1 Pair Sugar Tongs		1	2	0
Set of Fiddle Pattern		£57	6	4	Set of Queen's Pattern		£77	9	0

A Pamphlet illustrated with 300 Engravings, containing the prices of articles required in furnishing, gratis and post-free on application.
For the use of committees a work has been published, with large lithographic drawings of plate kept ready for presentation.

NOTICE.—SPOONS and FORKS, in SILVER and in ELECTRO-PLATE. ELKINGTON and CO., as the result of important improvements in the above manufactures, are able to offer their guaranteed qualities at such prices as, while fully maintaining their acknowledged superiority, place them within the reach of all classes. Revised Illustrated Price-Lists free by post on application. Purchasers of Silver Spoons and Forks obtain the advantage of any fluctuations in the silver market.
Address—ELKINGTON and CO., 22, Regent-street, London, or 42, Moorgate-street, City.

GARDNER'S DINNER and TABLE GLASS SERVICES. Free, graceful, and original designs, of unequalled value. Dinner Services, from 21s. Table Glass Services, of the best Crystal, for twelve persons, complete, 63s. Cash discount, 15 per cent. Coloured Photographic Sheets and Illustrated Glass Catalogues post-free.
453 and 454, West Strand, Charing-cross.

D. HULETT.—GASELIERS in CRYSTAL GLASS and ORMOLU or BRONZE. Mediæval Fittings. A large Stock always on View. Every article marked with plain figures.—Manufactory, 55 and 56, High Holborn.

DUPLEX LAMPS.—The New Patterns. The light of twenty-four sperm candles at a cost of less than one farthing per hour; a pure and healthy flame, not injuring the choicest works of art. Engravings post-free.
Drawing-room Lamps, China and Glass, £5, 7os., 85s., 95s., 40s.
Dining-room Lamps, Bronze and Ormolu, 40s., 55s., 22s., 22s.
Cheap Table Lamps, 10s. 6d., 14s. 6d., 18s., 19s. 6d., 25s.
Refined Rock Oil supplied by Dean and Co., 1s. per gallon.
DEANE and Co., 46, King William-st., London-bridge. A.D. 1700.

EPPS'S CHOCOLATE ESSENCE. Product of a special refining process, it is Chocolate devoided of its over richness and substantiality. Sugarless, and, when made, of the consistence of coffee. An afternoon Chocolate. Sold only in packets labelled JAMES EPPS and CO., Homœopathic Chemists, 48, Threadneedle Street, London.

WILLS' "WESTWARD HO!"
WILLS' "WESTWARD HO!"
NEW SMOKING MIXTURE.
"When all things were made, none was made better than Tobacco; to be a lone man's Companion, a bachelor's Friend, a hungry man's Food, a sad man's Cordial, a wakeful man's Sleep, and a chilly man's Fire. There's no Herb like it under the canopy of Heaven."—Kingsley's "Westward Ho!"
In 1 oz., 2 oz., and 4 oz. Packets, lined with tinfoil.
WILLS, W. D. and H. O.

DELACRE'S "LA PLATA" EXTRACT OF BEEF COMPANY, Limited. Incorporated under the Companies' Acts, 1862 to 1879, whereby the liability of each shareholder is limited to the amount allotted to him. Capital £100,000, in 10,000 shares of £10 each; payable £1 on application, £1 on allotment, £3 three months later, and the balance at a further interval of not less than three months.
DIRECTORS.
W. R. Barker, 143, New Bond-street, W.
Ch. Delacre, Brussels.
A. E. Edge, Odessa House, Upper Norwood.
Chas. Wright, Wirksworth.
H. K. Edge, 36, King William-street, E.C.
With power to add to their number.
Manager—Professor Attfield, F.R.S.
Bankers—London Joint Stock Bank, Princes-street.
Solicitors—Messrs. Badham and Williams, 3, Salter's Hall-court, Cannon-street.
Secretary—J. S. Newlyn.
Offices—48, King William-street, E.C.
ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.
This Company is formed for the purpose of acquiring a business heretofore carried on by Mr. Charles Delacre, of Ixelles, Brussels, and recently purchased from him by Mr. H. K. Edge, and now being continued at New-cross, London, consisting of the Manufacture and Sale of Extract of Beef, well known under the mark of Delacre's "Bœuf Concho."
This brand has been in existence since 1869, and, besides having gained many Prize Medals, it has obtained the First Prize at the Sydney Exhibition of 1879-80.
It was adopted and used during the Franco-German War, 1870-1.
The Board confidently assert that there is every reason to believe that the result of the early future will be to equal the success of the only other well-known brand, which last year declared in dividends and bonus the sum of £168,000, or more than 45 per cent on its capital; its shares of £20 standing in the Stock Exchange at the price of 36 to 38. It is not implied by this that any keen competition must be waged; on the contrary, the daily augmenting consumption of, and demand for, really fine brands of this article, permit an almost indefinite amount of supply.
The Directors have succeeded in securing a very valuable property and factories in the Argentine Republic, upon the most advantageous terms for purchase. The accounts of the last returns from these factories show that a net result was obtained of over 20 per cent upon the Saladero business alone, which comprises killing the cattle for dried meat, hides, bones, tallow, guano, &c., so that with this important addition to the Extract of Beef Factory far larger results may be relied upon.
The services of a most competent and skilled manager of many years' experience have been secured, and he will leave immediately to conduct the business in South America.
To insure the maintenance of the high standard of quality of the Extract, Professor Attfield, F.R.S., will, at intervals and without notice, visit the Company's warehouses and select samples for analysis, the reports on which he will from time to time submit to the Directors.
The recent Proprietor, Mr. Charles Delacre, retains a considerable share in the Company, is also a Director, and their Agent for the sale of the Extract in Belgium.
The concern is made over to the Company as a thoroughly going business; and the services of the staff of the London Depôt are secured, together with the valuable Factory at New-cross, and all the advantages resulting from efficient and responsible agents on the Continent and elsewhere.
The Directors have so much confidence in the success of the company that they and their friends have subscribed for £15,000, besides the interest held by Mr. Delacre and the vendor respectively.
The only agreement entered into by the company is dated July 23, 1880, and made between Mr. H. K. Edge (the vendor), of the one part, and Mr. A. E. Edge on behalf of and for the Delacre's "La Plata" Extract of Beef Company, Limited, of the other part.
The directors will not take any fees until sufficient profit is realised for the payment of a good dividend to the shareholders.
The preliminary expenses will be only those strictly necessary for printing, advertising, registration, and other minor costs, incidental to the formation of the Company, and no promotion-money has been or will be paid.
Copies of the Memorandum and Articles of Association, and of the above Agreement, can be inspected at the offices of the Company, and of the Solicitors, where also copies of the full Prospectus can be obtained.
Application for Shares to be made forthwith, on the Form accompanying the Prospectus.

THE ESSEX FLOUR and GRAIN COMPANY, Liverpool-road, London, N., supply the best goods only. Flour: Whites for Pastry, per 56 lb., 9s. 4d.; Households, for Bread making, 8s. 8d.; Wheaten Meal for Brown Bread, 8s.; Best Scotch Oatmeal for Porridge, per 14 lb., 3s.; American Hominy, 2s.; Barley, Buck Wheat Maize, and Mixed Corn for Poultry, per bushel, 5s.; Middlings, 2s.; Bran, 1s.; Pearl Split Peas, per peck, 3s.; Split Egyptian Lentils, 3s.; Meat Biscuits, per 14 lb., 2s. 6d.; Barley Meal, per 48 lb., 5s.; Lentil Flour, per 1 lb. tin, 8d.; per 14 lb., 6s. All other kinds of Grain and Seeds. Price-List on application. Special quotations for large orders. P.O. Orders and Cheques to be made in favour of George Young.

FRY'S COCOA. GOLD MEDAL, PARIS, 1878. FRY'S CARACAS COCOA. A choice prepared Cocoa, most delicious and valuable article."—Standard.

FRY'S COCOA. GUARANTEED PURE. FRY'S COCOA EXTRACT. Pure Cocoa only, the superfluous oil extracted. J. S. FRY and SONS.

SCHWEITZER'S COCOATINA. Anti-Dyspeptic Cocoa or Chocolate Powder. Guaranteed Pure Soluble Cocoa, with excess of Fat extracted. Four times the strength of Cocoas Thickened yet Weakened with Arrowroot, Starch, &c. The faculty pronounce it the most nutritious, perfectly digestive Beverage for "BREAKFAST, LUNCHEON, or SUPPER." Keeps in all Climates. Requries no Cooking. A teaspoonful to Breakfast Cup, costing less than a halfpenny. Samples gratis. In Air-Tight Tins, at 1s. 6d., 3s., &c., by Chemists and Grocers. H. SCHWEITZER and CO., 10, Adam-street, London, W.C.

EPPS'S COCOA. GRATEFUL and COMFORTING. "By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operation of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.
JAMES EPPS and CO., HOMŒOPATHIC CHEMISTS.
Also, EPPS'S CHOCOLATE ESSENCE, for Afternoon Use.

CHUBB'S PATENT SAFES, FIRE AND THIEF RESISTING.

CHUBB'S SAFES FOR JEWELS, DEEDS, PLATE, BULLION, &c.

CHUBB'S LOCKS AND LATCHES, CHESTS, BOXES, &c.

CHUBB'S ILLUSTRATED PRICE-LISTS POST-FREE.

CHUBB and SON, 128, Queen Victoria-street, E.C.; and 68, St. James's-street, London.

THE ART OF DECORATING THE FLOOR.

A HISTORICAL SKETCH OF THE MATS AND FLOOR-COVERINGS OF ALL NATIONS, with an ESSAY, WHETHER TO HAVE CARPETS OR RUGS.

PRICE ONE SHILLING, published by TRELOAR and SONS, 69, Ludgate-hill.

MOZAMBIQUE FANCY GRASS CLOTHS. Five Thousand Pieces of this beautiful fabric, made by the natives of Mozambique, having been purchased much below cost, are now offered at the following low price for cash.
They are made of a very fine fibre or grass, and are used by the natives as a dress or Toga.
Here they are useful for many purposes, such as Crumb Cloths, Floor Rugs, and for throwing over drawing-room and other furniture. The grass being a non-conductor, renders their use for this latter purpose very pleasant.
The size is about 7 ft. 8 in. long, and 4 ft. wide.
Price 10s. 6d. each.

TRELOAR and SONS, 89, Ludgate-hill.

Digitized by Google

NEW MUSIC.

Just published,

OLIVETTE. New Comic Opera, now being performed at the Strand Theatre with enormous success. Adapted by H. B. Farnie; Music by AUDRAN.

Vocal Score	8s. net.
Pianoforte Solo	2s. 6d. ,,
Olivette Waltz. D'Albert	2s. ,,
Olivette Quadrille. D'Albert	2s. ,,
Olivette Polka. D'Albert	2s. ,,
Torpedo Galop. D'Albert	2s. ,,
Torpedo Song	2s. ,,

Sung by Miss St. John and Chorus.

Bob Song. Sung by Miss St. John 2s. ,,

Romance—"Nearest and Dearest." Sung by Miss Violet Cameron 2s. ,,

Franz Nava's Gems from Olivette (Nos. 1 and 2) each 1s. 6d. ,,

Franz Nava's Farandole 1s. 6d. ,,

Audran's "Nearest and Dearest" 2s. ,,

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

Now ready,

VOLUME TWO OF CHAPPELL'S OLD ENGLISH DITTIES. Handsomely bound in cloth and gold. Price 10s. 6d. net.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

TERMINATION of the HIRING SEASON.
CHAPPELL and CO. have now on view an immense stock of PIANOFORTES by all the best makers, AMERICAN ORGANS by Clough and Warren, and ALEXANDRE HARMONIUMS, returned from hire, to be sold at greatly reduced prices for cash; or may be purchased on the Three-Years' System by Twelve Quarterly Instalments.
50, New Bond-street, W.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S THREE-YEARS' SYSTEM of HIRE of PIANOFORTES, HARMONIUMS, and AMERICAN ORGANS, by which the Instrument becomes the property of the Hirer at the end of the third year, provided each quarter's hire shall have been regularly paid in advance. Pianofortes, from 2 gs.; Harmoniums, from £1 4s.; and American Organs, from £2 10s. a Quarter.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S PIANINOS, from 20 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S COTTAGES, from 27 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S GRANDS, from 50 guineas.

CHICKERING PIANOFORTES, from 120 guineas, with American discount.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S ALEXANDRE HARMONIUMS, for Church, Schools, or Drawing-Rooms, from 5 to 150 guineas; or, on the Three-Years' System, from £1 5s. per quarter.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S IMPROVED AMERICAN ORGANS, combining Pipes with Reeds, Manufactured by Clough and Warren, Detroit, U.S.A. The immense advantages these instruments possess over the Organs hitherto imported have induced Messrs. Chappell and Co. to undertake the sole Agency of this eminent Manufactory. A large variety on view, from 25 to 250 guineas. Price-Lists on application to CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S Favourite ORGAN. Compass, five octaves, ten stops, four sets of reeds, two of two and two thirds octaves and two of two and one third octaves, knee swell, elegant carved Canadian walnut case, price 25 guineas. With twelve stops, sub-bass octave coupler, and two knee pedals, 35 guineas. Illustrated Price-List free by post.
Sole Agents, CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

INSTRUMENTS by ALL MAKERS may be HIRED or PURCHASED on the Three-Years' System.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

A LARGE DISCOUNT TO PURCHASERS FOR CASH.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

NEW DANCE MUSIC.
SUCCESS OF THE SEASON.
AMITIE VALSE. By H. R. CALLCOTT. 4s.
TOUT EST FINI GALOP. By H. R. CALLCOTT. 4s.
AVANT SOUPIR GALOP. By H. R. CALLCOTT. 4s.
Half price post-free.
ALDERSON and BREWTNALL, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

ANNABEL LEE. New Song. By C. SWINNERTON HEAP. Sung by Mr. Maas at the Gloucester Festival. Price 2s. net.—NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

JOSEPH WILLIAMS'S LIST.

LES CLOCHES DE CORNEVILLE.
Vocal Score, English Words, 10s. net, and 4s.
Piano Score, complete, 2s. 6d. net.

PIANO SELECTIONS.

WILLIAM KUHE.

Grand Fantasia	4s. 0d.
Grand Paraphrase	4s. 0d.
Third Fantasia	4s. 0d.

BRINLEY RICHARDS.

Chanson du Mousse, Barcarolle	3s. 0d.
Rondo Valse, Solo or Duet	3s. 0d.
Valse Brillante, Solo or Duet	3s. 0d.

HENRI CRAMER.

Selection of Airs, Books 1 and 2	Each 3s. 0d.

FLORIAN PASCAL.

Grand Fantasia	4s. 0d.

EUGENE MONIOT.

Brilliant Fantasia	3s. 0d.

HAROLD THOMAS.

Bouquet de Mélodies	4s. 0d.

J. RUMMELL.
(Easy Arrangements.)

Valse	2s. 6d.	Quadrille	2s. 6d.
Polka	2s. 6d.	Galop	2s. 6d.
Polka Mazurka	2s. 6d.	Rondo Valse	2s. 6d.
Selection of Airs, Piano Duets, 3 Books			Each 4s. 0d.

WILLIAM SMALLWOOD.
(Very Easy Arrangements for Small Hands.)

Coquets des On dit	1s.	Allegro de Bailes	1s. 0d.
Rondo Valse	1s.	Chanson du Mousse	1s. 0d.
Grand Selection of Airs		(C. Godfrey)	4s. 0d.

As performed by the Royal Horse Guards' Band.

Fantasia on Airs	(J. C. Hess) 4s. 0d.
Fantasia on Airs	(J. B. Duverney) 4s. 0d.
Fantasia on Airs, Violin and Piano	(A. Herman) 4s. 0d.

Selection, Violin and Piano (Henry Farmer).

DANCE MUSIC.

Quadrilles, Solo and Duet	(O. Métra)	4s. each.
Quadrilles, Solo and Duet	(Arban)	4s. each.
Quadrilles, Solo and Duet	(C. Coote, jun.)	4s. each.
Lancers, Solo and Duet	(Arthur Grenville)	4s. each.
Valses, Solo and Duet	(O. Métra)	4s. each.
Valses, Solo	(E. Deransart)	4s. 0d.
Polka, Solo	(Arban)	3s. 0d.
Polka Mazurka	(E. Natif)	3s. 0d.

ORCHESTRA, 2s. SEPTET, 1s. 4d.

Quadrille	C. Coote, jun.
Valses	O. Métra.
Polka	Arban.
Lancers	A. Grenville.

Halberstadt's Selection for Full Orchestra, 4s. net.
ORDER EVERYWHERE, OR POST DIRECT.

HENRY FARMER'S PIANOFORTE TUTOR, considerably Enlarged and Fingered by the Author. 100th Edition. 4s.
"Decidedly the best and most useful instruction book we have seen."—Musical Review.

JOSEPH WILLIAMS,
24, Berners-street, W.; and 123, Cheapside, E.C.

CIRO PINSUTI'S LATEST SUCCESS.
THE BUGLER.
In D, for Bass; F, Baritone; and G, Tenor. Post-free, 2s. net.
London: B. WILLIAMS, 60, Paternoster-row.

Just out,

DAISIES. New Song.
By CHARLES ED. JERNINGHAM.
Words by Vincent Amcotts. Post-free, 24 stamps.
Horwood and Crew, 42, New Bond-street, W.

NEW MUSIC.

THE CUCKOO. Vocal Waltz. By ARTHUR THOMAS. Sung by Miss Robertson at her provincial Concerts in October and November. 2s. net.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

SECOND THOUGHTS. By RANDEGGER. Sung by Miss Robertson and Miss Mary Davies throughout the provinces. 2s. net.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

ANTOINETTE WALTZ. By CHARLES COOTE, jun., on Cowen's popular Songs, with portrait of Madame Antoinette Sterling. Performed at the Promenade Concerts. 2s. net. Orchestra, 1s. This day.—BOOSEY and Co.

NEW NUMBERS OF THE
CAVENDISH MUSIC BOOKS.
37. CALLCOTT'S HANDEL ALBUM. Part 1. Fifty Sacred Airs.
38. CALLCOTT'S HANDEL ALBUM. Part 2. Fifty Secular Airs.
36. SCHUMANN'S DUET ALBUM for Young Performers.
39. OVERTURES AS DUETS—"Zampa," "Fra Diavolo," and "Poet and Peasant."
35. HUMOROUS SONGS FOR THE DRAWING-ROOM.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

J. VARLEY ROBERTS'S (Mus. Doc., Oxon) FAVOURITE SONGS. Published only by Messrs. ROBERT COCKS and CO.
Mr. Roberts does not put Mus. Doc., Oxon, after his name without affording ample evidences of his right to the title. His melodies are simple and gracefully allied to effective accompaniments, as the following Songs will show:—
I'M THINKING OF THE PAST. 3s.
THERE'S A ROSE LOOKING IN AT THE WINDOW. 3s.
HOME AND FRIENDS. 3s.
HAPPY MOMENTS I REMEMBER. No. 1 in F, No. 2 in E flat. 3s. each.
OPPOSITE. No. 1 in C, No. 2 in B flat. 3s. each.
All post-free at half price in stamps.
London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

SONGS FOR LITTLE SINGERS. Composed by A. S. GATTY. No. 1, "The Poodle;" No. 2, "Puff;" No. 3, "Walrus and the Carpenter;" No. 4, "The Whiting and the Snail;" No. 5, "The Sparrow on the Tree," and "May Day." 2s. 6d. each; post-free at half price in stamps.
London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

A SINGING QUADRILLE for the Pianoforte. Composed by COTSFORD DICK. Illustrated Title. 4s. Piano Duet, 4s. Also, THE CUCKOO QUADRILLES for the Piano. Composed by STEPHEN GLOVER. 3s. Ditto, Piano Duet, 4s. All post-free at half price in stamps.
London: Sole Publishers, ROBERT COCKS and Co.

OPERATIC LEAFLETS.—An admirable selection of favourite Operatic Airs, arranged and fingered for the Piano by GEORGE FREDERICK WEST. Twenty-five Numbers, post-free for 15 stamps each; twelve Numbers as Piano Duets, 18 stamps each.
London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street.

CLASSICAL EXTRACTS from the GREAT COMPOSERS. Arranged and fingered for the Pianoforte by J. DUVAL. Six books, at 3s. each; post-free at half price.
London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street.

THE HOUR OF REST. New Song. By F. E. WEATHERLY and J. L. ROECKEL. Post-free, 2s. Harmonium and Violin or Violoncello Accompaniments may be had. DUFF and STEWART, 2, Hanover-street, W.

GOOD-BYE. COTSFORD DICK'S New Song. The poetry by G. J. Whyte-Melville, one of the most charming songs in words and music produced for some time. Post-free, 2s.—DUFF and STEWART, 2, Hanover-street, W.

COWEN'S GREATEST SUCCESS.
THE CHILDREN'S HOME. By COWEN; B flat, C (compass, C to E, and E flat. Post-free, 24 stamps. W. MORLEY, Jun., and Co., 70, Upper-street, London, N.

THE MUSICAL TIMES for OCTOBER contains:—A French View of Wagner—The Father of Symphony—The Great Composers: Spohr—Musical Doctors—The Gloucester Musical Festival—Occasional Notes—Reviews, Foreign and Country News, &c. Price 3d.; post-free, 4d. Annual subscription, 4s., including postage.

THE MUSICAL TIMES for OCTOBER contains:—"Hurrah, for Merry England;" Chorus by H. H. PIERSON. Price separately 1½d.
London: NOVELLO, EWER, and Co., 1, Berners-street, W.; and 80 and 81, Queen-street, E.C.

CHARLES HALLÉ'S PRACTICAL PIANOFORTE SCHOOL.
Section I.—No. 1, Pianoforte Tutor. Also 67 Numbers of CHARLES HALLÉ'S MUSICAL LIBRARY are now ready.
Catalogues and all particulars may be had from
FORSYTH BROTHERS, London, 272a, Regent-circus, Oxford-street; Manchester, Cross-street and South King-street; and all Musicsellers.

DOMINION ORGAN COMPANY,
Bowmanville, Ontario, Canada.
The best and cheapest 25 Guinea Organ in the Trade.
"PRINCESS LOUISE,"
Ten Stops, including Octave Coupler.
Sole Agents for the United Kingdom,
FORSYTH BROTHERS,
London: 272a, Regent-circus, Oxford-street.
Manchester: Cross-street and South King-street.
Complete Catalogues post-free.

£20 SCHOOL-ROOM PIANO (Co-operative price for cash). Seven octaves—strong, sound, and substantial. Adapted for hard practice. Carefully packed free, and sent to any part. Drawings gratis.
THOMAS OETZMANN and CO., 27, Baker-street.

£35.—There is nothing in London—nor, in fact, in all England—to be compared to the elegantly carved
DRAWING-ROOM TRICHORD COTTAGE PIANOFORTE, with Cabriole Truss Legs, which is sold for £35, by
THOMAS OETZMANN and CO., 27, Baker-street, Portman-sq.

REBUILDING SALE.—PIANOFORTES, £15; Broadwood Pianos, £20; Erard Pianos, £26; Collard Pianos, £28; Harmoniums, £5; American Organs, £10.
THOMAS OETZMANN and Co., 27, Baker-street, Portman-sq.

REBUILDING SALE.—Purchasers who can pay cash will do well to take advantage of this exceptional opportunity of obtaining thoroughly good instruments at extraordinary low prices. The Hire and Three-Years' System business carried on as usual during the Rebuilding.—THOMAS OETZMANN and CO., 27, Baker-street, exactly opposite Madame Tussaud's.

D'ALMAINES' PIANOS HALF PRICE.
In consequence of a change of partnership, the whole of this splendid stock, perfected with all the modern improvements of the day by this long-standing firm, of 100 years' reputation, and in order to effect a speedy sale. The easiest terms arranged, with seven years' warranty. Trichord Cottages from hire, or taken in exchange, £10 to £12.
Class 0, £14 | Class 2, £20 | Class 4, £30 | Class 6, £35
Class 1, £17 | Class 3, £23 | Class 5, £27 | Class 7, £40
American Organs from £5.—91, Finsbury Pavement, Moorgate Station, E.C.

P. J. SMITH AND SONS'
IRON-STRUTTED PIANOS.
"The best and most substantial instrument produced."
3 and 4, PRINCES-STREET, OXFORD-STREET, W.

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS' Newly-Patented SOSTENENTE GRAND and UPRIGHT PIANOS have gained the two First Prizes and only Special Mention above all competitors at the Sydney International Exhibition, 1879-80. Lists free.—11, Wigmore-street, London, W.

PLEYEL WOLFF and CO.'S PIANOS.
The NEW MODELS, painted Cases, style Louis XVI., are now ready, Cottage or Oblique. Pianos for SALE or HIRE, or on the Three-Years' System.—Sole Agency, 170, New Bond-st., W

FINE-ART PARCEL of ENGRAVINGS for 21s.—Having purchased a large STOCK of first-class ENGRAVINGS, I have determined to SELL them at an immense reduction, comprising a pair of Turner's, pair of Landseer's, pair of Wilkie's, pair of Poole's, and a pair of Frith's, ten in all, in first-class condition, for 21s. Sufficient to furnish dining-room and library.—REES, 41, 42, 43, Russell-street, Covent-garden, opposite Drury-Lane Theatre.

NOTICE. — For PETER ROBINSON'S Court and General Mourning Warehouse, "REGENT-STREET" is the only one address.

FAMILY BEREAVEMENTS.
UPON RECEIPT OF LETTER OR TELEGRAM, PETER ROBINSON'S Experienced Dressmakers and Milliners Travel to all parts of the COUNTRY, FREE OF EXPENSE to purchasers, with Dresses, Millinery, and a full assortment of made-up Articles of the BEST and most suitable description. Also materials by the Yard, and supplied at the SAME PRICES as if purchased at the Warehouse in Regent-street.
Mourning for Servants at unexceptionably low rates, at a great saving to large or small Families.
Funerals conducted in Town or Country at stated charges.
Address ONLY to 256 to 262, REGENT-STREET, LONDON, PETER ROBINSON'S.

THE BUYERS
of PETER ROBINSON, of REGENT-STREET, have just returned from Paris with a new and choice collection of MANTLES, CLOAKS, and JACKETS, MILLINERY, COSTUMES, in SATIN and SILK, COSTUMES in NEW MATERIALS, EVENING DRESSES, OPERA CLOAKS, and Novelties in every department.
PETER ROBINSON, of REGENT-STREET, respectfully solicits a visit to THE REGENT-STREET SHOP,
Nos. 256 to 262, Regent-street.

BLACK VELVET-VELVETEENS,
new and superior makes,
in appearance equal to Silk Velvet,
at 2s. 6d., 2s. 11d., and 3s. 6d.
Also the guaranteed fast Pile Velveteens, at 2s. 11d. and up to 5s. 11d.
For patterns, please direct only to 256 to 262, Regent-street,
PETER ROBINSON'S.

BLACK VELVET-VELVETEEN
COSTUMES, at 3 guineas, and up to 7 guineas.
BLACK SERGE COSTUMES, from 2 guineas.
NEW AUTUMN MATERIAL COSTUMES, from 2 to 7 guineas.
Perfectly New Styles.
At PETER ROBINSON'S, of REGENT-STREET, Nos. 256 to 262.

EVENING DRESSES.
A New and very Choice Collection for this Season, at 1 guinea and up to 7 guineas.
Illustrations and Descriptions, with Patterns, sent on application.
Address only to 256 to 262, Regent-street.
PETER ROBINSON'S.

BLACK SILKS.
DURING THIS MONTH,
we shall sell
Messrs. BONNET et CIE. and JAUBERT et CIE.
BLACK SILKS
at Manufacturers' prices,
and Cheaper than they have ever before been supplied.

Bonnet's	No. 1 Quality, 4s. 3d.	}	from 1s. 6d. to 4s. per yard under fair value.
	No. 2 ,, 5s. 3d.
	No. 3 ,, 6s. 0d.
	No. 4 ,, 7s. 0d.
Jaubert	No. 1 Quality, 3s. 3d.	}	from 1s. to 4s. per yard under their fair value.
	No. 2 ,, 3s. 11d.
	No. 3 ,, 4s. 9d.
	No. 4 ,, 5s. 3d.
	No. 5 ,, 6s. 0d.

To be obtained only at
PETER ROBINSON'S
REGENT-STREET SHOP,
Nos. 256 to 262, Regent-street.
For Patterns please be careful in the address.

"LOUIS"
IN ALL THE NEWEST AND MOST FASHIONABLE COLOURS.

"THE QUEEN" of Sept. 11, 1880, says:—
"As this is to be a velvet season, it may be as well to point out some eminently novel features in
LOUIS VELVETEEN,
"LOUIS." now an established favourite for Dresses. The REDS are particularly rich; indeed, so are the many PLUMS and PRUNES, and we have also OLD GOLD (no less than four shades), PEACH, PORCELAIN BLUE, and many DARK GREENS of the WILLOW and MYRTLE tones. The pile, which is both erect and fine, is asserted to be permanently fast.

LE FOLLET says:—
"The Louis Velveteen is a very close and admirably wearing material, with a lustrous silky surface, draping richly and softly, and the brilliant blue light on the folds cannot be surpassed by the best silk velvet. For every purpose to which black velvet can be applied, "LOUIS." we can recommend the Louis Velveteen; and a dress of this material would be a most elegant and useful addition to any lady's wardrobe, successfully representing, as it does, a silk velvet at more than four times the cost."

THE ENGLISHWOMAN'S DOMESTIC MAGAZINE says:—"This Velveteen costs no more than ordinary velveteen, and is worth at least double, so that purchasers should be sure that it is the Louis Velveteen that they get. It is stamped with the words 'LOUIS "LOUIS." VELVETEEN' upon every yard of the fabric."
Ladies are respectfully informed that on and after this date all Louis Velveteen, both Black and the New Autumn and Winter Colours, have stamped on the back plain instructions for removing all creases, folding-marks, &c., made in conveyance by rail, post, or other causes.

WHOLESALE AGENTS,
who will send on inquiry, post-free, the names of the nearest Drapers from whom the genuine "LOUIS" VELVETEEN can be obtained:—
"LOUIS." J. H. FULLER, 92, Watling-street, London, E.C.
JOHN FREEMAN, 20, Wicklow-street, Dublin.
WILLIAM FIFE, 52, Glassford-street, Glasgow.

INDIAN EMBROIDERY of the most Elegant and Fashionable Designs—viz., Christening Robes, 21s. and 42s. each; Ladies' Handkerchiefs, 35s. and 45s. the half dozen; Babies' Bibs, 20s. the dozen; Children's Frocks, 15s. each; Petticoats, large size, 28s. each; Ladies' Necktics, 28s. the dozen; Children's Capes, 12s. 6d. each; Narrow Edging, 1s. per yard; Ditto, Wide, 3s. 6d. per yard. The above sent post-free to any address in Great Britain, the United States, and Canada. Remittances to be crossed "Agra Bank," and made payable to J. KENYON and CO., 19, Strand, Calcutta, East Indies.

WINTER DRESSES—THE BEST VALUE IN LONDON.—Vicuna Foule Serges, the Fashionable Material for the Season. Price, 8½d. per yard. Patterns free.
JOHN HOOPER, 28, Oxford-street, W.

TO LADIES.—THE SHREWSBURY WATERPROOF TWEED CLOAKS, SKIRTS, and JACKETS, in every variety of shape and colour, are supplied by the original Makers, E. W. and W. PHILLIPS, 37, High-street, Shrewsbury. Patterns and Prices on application.

THE LADIES' HAWICK COSTUME
TWEED, in all the newest colourings, 1s. 6½d. per yard.
Patterns free. Parcels over 20s. carriage paid.
WM. KEDIE and CO., Warehousemen, Hawick.

BREIDENBACH'S WOOD VIOLET.
Fresh as the flower itself. Price 2s. 6d., 5s., 10s. Bottle. Sold at all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the Universe; or Breidenbach and Co., Distillers of Wood Violet to the Queen, 157a, New Bond-street, W. Trade-Mark, the "Wood Violet."

PARIS.—M. HAVET succeeds M. AUBERT as Proprietor and Director of the Institution Aubert-Savary (Established 1804), 84, Avenue Kleber, Trocadero. The pupils attend the Classes of the Lycee Fontanes, or are taught privately in the Institution. M. Havet admits a few English pupils.

SMART'S WRITING INSTITUTION, 97B, Quadrant, Regent-street (entrance in Swallow-street). Open from Ten till Nine daily. Persons of all ages received privately, and taught at any time suiting their own convenience. Lessons one hour each. No classes. No extras. Improvement guaranteed in eight to twelve easy lessons. Separate room for ladies. Apply to Mr. Smart, as above.

BANK OF NEW ZEALAND
(Incorporated by Act of General Assembly, July 29, 1861).
Bankers to the New Zealand Government.
Capital subscribed and paid up, £1,000,000.
Reserve Fund, £555,000.

DIRECTORS.
Hon. James Williamson, M.L.C., President.
G. B. Owen, Esq. | J. C. Firth, Esq.
Wm. Innes Taylor, Esq. | S. Browning, Esq.
C. J. Stone, Esq.

LONDON BOARD.
Sir Penrose G. Julyan, K.C.M.G., C.B. | Rt. Hon. A. J. Mundella, M.P.
Falconer Larkworthy, Esq. | Robert Porter, Esq.
Thomas Russell, Esq., C.M.G.
Head Office—Auckland.

BRANCHES AND AGENCIES.
In Australia—Melbourne, Sydney, and Newcastle.
In Fiji—Levuka.
In New Zealand—Auckland, Blenheim, Christchurch, Dunedin, Invercargill, Napier, Nelson, New Plymouth, Picton, Wellington, and at eighty-six other towns and places throughout the Colony.
The Bank grants Drafts on all their Branches and Agencies, and transacts every description of banking business connected with New Zealand, Australia, and Fiji on the most favourable terms.
The London Office RECEIVES FIXED DEPOSITS of £50 and upwards, rates and particulars of which can be ascertained on application. F. LARKWORTHY, Managing Director.
No. 1, Queen Victoria-street, Mansion House, E.C.

FIVE PER CENT DEBENTURES.
AUSTRALASIAN AGENCY and BANKING CORPORATION (Limited).
Capital £1,250,000. In 125,000 Shares of £10 each.
Subscribed in the Australian Colonies, £242,350; in London, £200,000. Reserve Fund, £25,000.
LONDON DIRECTORS:
Abraham Scott, Esq. | Harry Hankey Dobree, Esq.
Frank C. Capel, Esq. | Joseph Cockfield, Dimsdale, Esq.
BANKERS:
Messrs. Dimsdale, Fowler, Barnard, and Dimsdales.
SOLICITORS:
Messrs. Freshfields and Williams.
The Company are now issuing Debentures at the above rate for four, five, or six years. Forms of application can be obtained at the Office of the Company, 64, Austin Friars.

HOME HOSPITAL (SELECT) for LADIES, Bolton House, 182, Clapham-road, Surrey. Established 1857. A Private Home, where Patients suffering from serious diseases, and requiring special supervision, can obtain the best Medical and Surgical Treatment without incurring anxiety in their own homes. Treatise of successful cures forwarded for 12 stamps. Terms from 4 guineas per week. Physician, DAVID JONES, M.D. Consultations daily, Eleven till One (Tuesday and Friday excepted), at 15, Welbeck-street, London.

MITCHAM LAVENDER.—PIESSE and LUBIN.

LAVENDER, Sweet Lavender.—PIESSE and LUBIN are now distilling, at their Flower Farm, the famed MITCHAM LAVENDER. Samples may be had either at the Stillery, Mitcham-road, Surrey, or at the Laboratory, 2, New Bond-street, London.

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.
ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.
ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.
ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.
ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.
ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT. Trade Mark, "Anti-Fat" (Registered), is purely vegetable, and perfectly harmless. No change of diet required. Will reduce from 2 lb. to 5 lb. a week. Acts upon the food in the stomach, preventing its conversion into fat.

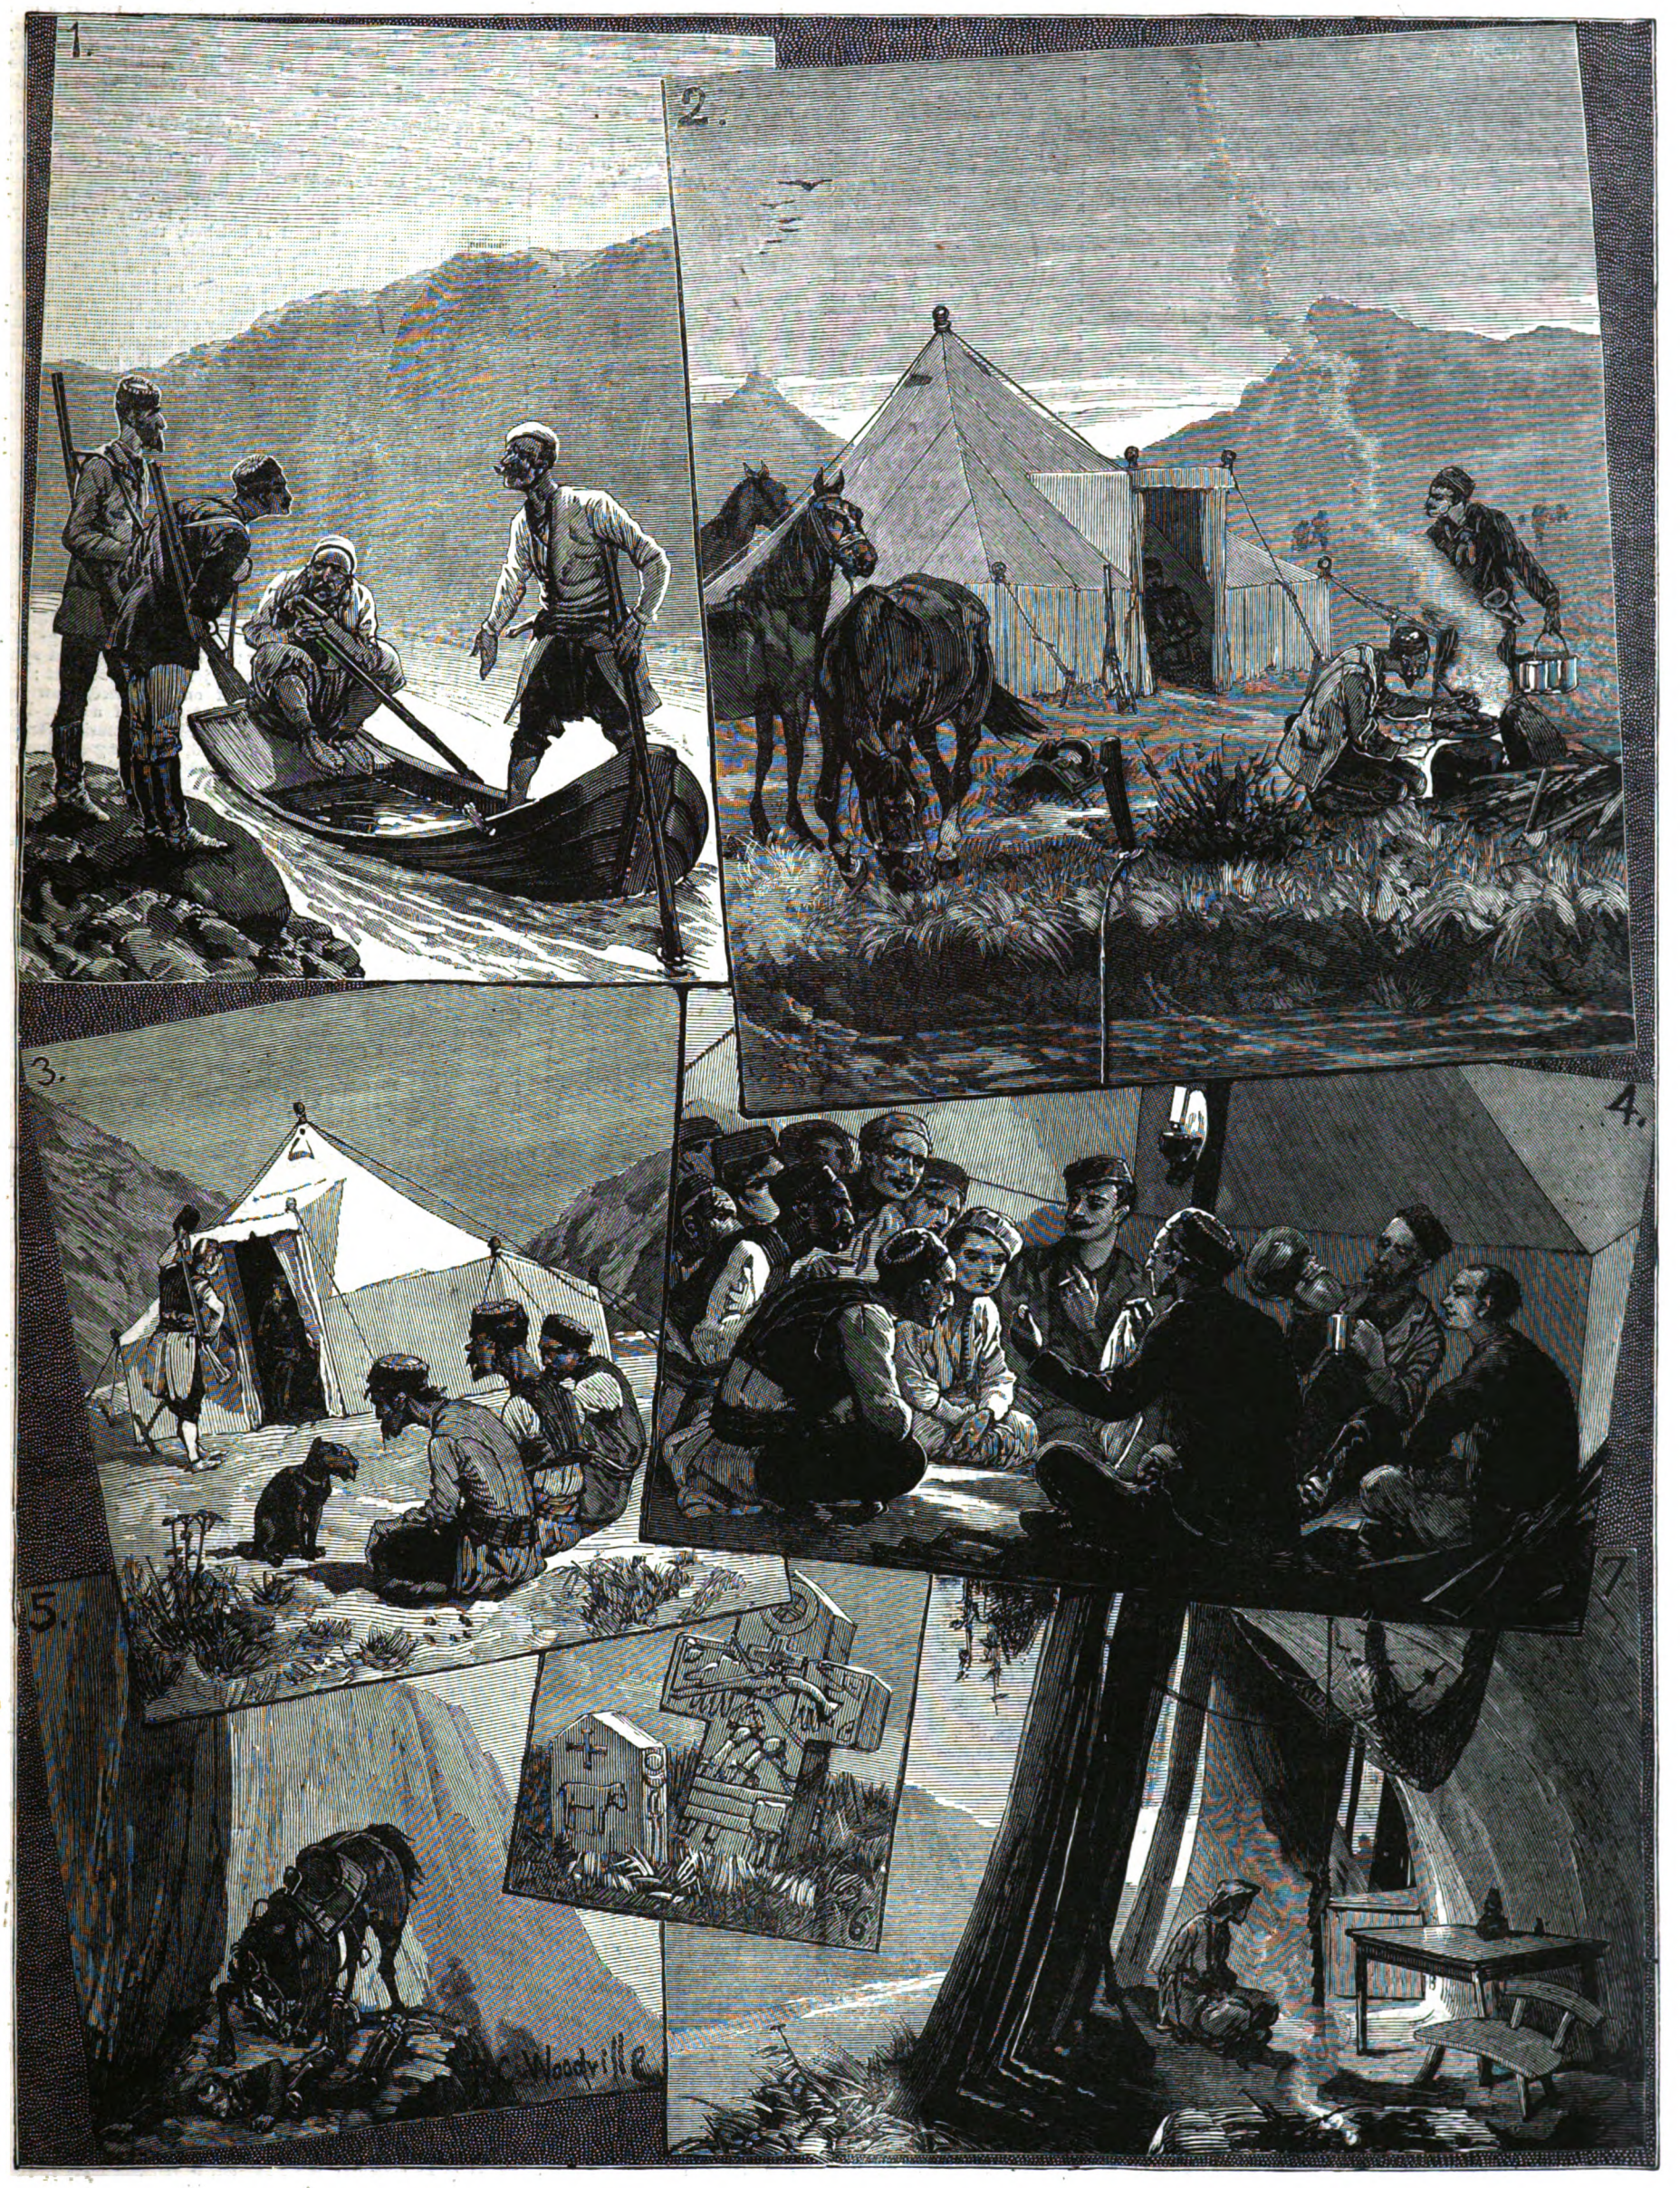
ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT is endorsed by those eminent in the medical professional.
The late THOMAS FAIRBANK, M.D., of Windsor, Surgeon to Her Majesty the Queen, referring to ANTI-FAT in the "British Medical Journal" of June 7, 1879, says:—
"I gave some of this extract (Fucus Vesiculosus) to a very corpulent lady, who in three months lost three stones in weight without any change of diet. Since then I have frequently given it for reducing weight depending on the accumulation of adipose tissue, and have never found it fail."

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT Reduces 61 lb.
"Pratville, Ala., July 20, 1878.
"Botanic Medicine Company.—Gentlemen,—About three months ago I commenced using your 'Anti-Fat,' at which time my weight was 219 pounds. By following your directions carefully I have succeeded in reducing my weight to 158 pounds.—Yours truly, "GEORGE BOYD."
Hundreds of letters similar to the above have been received.

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT. Sold by Chemists everywhere, at 6s. 6d., or delivered free on receipt of price. Send stamp for Pamphlet.
Address, BOTANIC MEDICINE COMPANY, 493, Oxford-street.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT.
The Pills purify the blood, correct all disorders of the liver, stomach, kidneys, and bowels. The Ointment is unrivalled in the cure of bad legs, old wounds, gout, and rheumatism.

FITS.—EPILEPSY, or FALLING SICKNESS.—GIDDINESS. SENSATIONS—FAINTS.—A certain method of CURE has been DISCOVERED for these distressing complaints. Full particulars of the remedies will be sent by post free of charge.—Address, Mr. WILLIAMS, 10, Oxford-terrace, Hyde Park, London.



BLAIR'S GOUT PILLS,
THE GREAT
REMEDY FOR GOUT AND RHEUMATISM.
Sold by all Chemists, at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. per Box.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."
CLARKE'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE is warranted to cleanse the Blood from all impurities, from whatever cause arising. For Scrofula, Scurvy, Skin and Blood Diseases, its effects are marvellous. In Bottles, 2s. 6d. each, and in cases, containing six times the quantity, 11s. each, of all Chemists. Sent to any address for 30 or 132 stamps, of the Proprietor, F. J. CLARKE, Chemist, Lincoln.

ELECTRICITY IS LIFE.
PULVERMACHER'S "GALVANISM, NATURE'S CHIEF RESTORER OF IMPAIRED VITAL ENERGY."
In this Pamphlet the most reliable proofs are given of the vast and wonderful curative powers of Pulvermacher's Patent Galvanic Chain-Bands, Belts, &c., in Rheumatic, Nervous, and Functional Disorders. Sent post-free for three stamps on application to
J. L. PULVERMACHER'S GALVANIC ESTABLISHMENT, 194, Regent-street, London, W.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by GEORGE C. LEIGHTON, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1880.

Digitized by Google

1. The Ferry over the Moracha. 2. Our Camp at Dioclea. 3. The Robbers and their Captors. 4. An Evening Entertainment. 5. An Awkward "Cropper." 6. A Christian's Grave. 7. A Hut in the Cliff.

THE EUROPEAN DEMONSTRATION ON THE ADRIATIC COAST: CAMPING OUT IN MONTENEGRO.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

DRAWN BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, R. C. WOODVILLE.

Digitized by Google

THE MONTENEGRIN FRONTIER QUESTION.

The Map which we have prepared for this week's publication, though simply entitled "The Country Round Dulcigno," represents all those portions of the Montenegrin and Albanian frontiers, and the three different lines of boundary successively proposed for their settlement by the European Congress at Berlin in July, 1878, and by the subsequent Conferences of the parties to that Congress, with the recommendations of the International Commission. The reader, having first perused our brief historical notice of recent Border disputes and negotiations, and of the ancient strife between the North Albanians and the Montenegrins, will bear in mind the diverse composition of the Albanian population, comprising not only the Mohammedans of the province of Scutari, the Skipetars of the Gheg race, which is a branch of the Arnaout nation, kindred to the Tosks of Epirus or South Albania, but also the Miridite tribes of Clementi, Hotti, and Gruda, who are Roman Catholics, dwelling north-east of the Lake of Scutari. All these people are found equally hostile to the idea of being incorporated with the Principality of Montenegro, which is, like that of Servia, in ecclesiastical connection with the Orthodox or Russo-Greek Church. On the other hand, the geographical position of Montenegro, shut in from the sea by the Austrian coast provinces of Dalmatia, lately farther extended to Spizza, must be regarded as a grievous hindrance to its internal prosperity, and to the improvement of civilisation among the poor inhabitants of those barren, rocky highlands collectively named the Tschernagora, or Montenegro, that is to say, "The Black Mountain." It is clearly a desirable object, if it could be attained peaceably and with due regard to equity, or with the free consent of the neighbouring tribes, as well as of the Sultan, to bestow on Montenegro a moderate addition to its territory, giving free access both to the navigable Lake of Scutari, and to the Adriatic Sea.

This is the political problem which has to be solved by the collective wisdom of European statesmanship. We sincerely wish that its consideration had been approached in a fair and impartial spirit, without the prejudices and animosities that have been aroused by the late war between Russia and Turkey, and by the supposed interests of other European Powers, Great Britain, Austria, Italy, and possibly even France and Germany, in supporting one or another view of the final disposal of the Turkish dominions. The portions of territory here directly concerned are of such insignificant extent and financial value, and their small populations are in such a backward social condition, so destitute of the elements of industrial wealth and military power, that it ought to have been easy to provide means, in the way of pecuniary compensation, or of assisted emigration and comfortable settlement in new homes at a convenient distance, whereby all legitimate interests might have been amply satisfied. This idea, unhappily, does not seem to have been suggested to the diplomatic counsels of the Great Powers, though it is one which might, for the sake of humanity, have been deemed more worthy of Christian Europe in the nineteenth century, than that of enforcing an arbitrary, a peremptory decision, by an exhibition of naval and military force, provoking renewed ferocities of warfare along the remote frontiers of half-barbarous races who are ever too ready to indulge in acts of rapine and bloodshed. We cannot but regret that this course has been adopted, whoever may be responsible for it, while still awaiting the explanations that ought not to have been so long withheld from Parliament and public opinion in our own country.

The steps hitherto taken by European diplomacy, so far as Ministers of State have yet been pleased to reveal them, may be illustrated by a glance at our Map, with its three dotted lines of proposed new frontier. The first is that stipulated by Russia, and Montenegro, as the ally of Russia, at the Treaty of San Stefano, when Turkey lay vanquished before them. The second is that which was settled by the Congress of Berlin three or four months later, mainly through the influence of Great Britain, Germany, and Austria. The third is a short thick line behind the Mazura Hills, at the back of Dulcigno, to the river Boyana, inclosing with that river a small piece of land on the seacoast hardly ten miles long and four miles wide. This is the piece of land just now in dispute, which has been allotted to Montenegro by the International Commission, in lieu of Tusi, and of a portion of the Dinosh and Gruda districts, up the course of the rivers that flow into the Lake of Scutari at its north or upper end, towards Podgoritza. The Montenegrins had, in the late war against Turkey, actually overrun and conquered all these places, as far as the Boyana; and it was admitted that they were to retain a large moiety of the shores of the lake, and some part of the seacoast. They were also to be left in possession of the Gusinje and Plava districts, which are situated to the north-east, beyond the limits of our Map, on the skirts of the Kom mountain range. In the article entitled "Albania and Montenegro," on page 333 of this Number, we have noticed the obstacles that soon arose, from the resistance of the Albanians and Miridites, to the execution of these clauses of the Treaty of Berlin. The Albanians, valuing the Kom mountain districts for the strategical defence of their own frontier, refused in their national Confederate League to permit the surrender of Gusinje and Plava to the Montenegrins. The Miridite Catholic tribes of Hotti, Clementi, and others were equally determined not to give up Tusi, on the shore of the Lake, or the districts of Gruda and Dinosh, on the river Sem, which were proposed as an alternative. It was therefore arranged by the European Conference this summer, with the assistance of a joint International Boundary Commission, that, instead of either of the former allotments of territory—namely, Gusinje and Plava in the first instance, and the districts occupied by Miridite tribes in the second—Dulcigno should, after all, be annexed to the Montenegrin Principality.

The Sultan's Government then signified its consent to this mode of settlement; and Riza Pasha, with a force of regular Turkish troops, was sent from Constantinople to Scutari, as Special Commissioner of the Ottoman Porte, ostensibly for the purpose of directing its peaceable execution. But the Albanian chieftains, the Begs and Aghas of the Skipetar nation, acting in pursuance of the resolutions of their national League, recently took possession of Dulcigno, unopposed by the Turkish military garrison, and have constructed a fortified camp of defence on the Mazura Hills, where they bid defiance to the small Montenegrin army preparing to advance from the Suttorman Pass, through Zubci and Antivari, along the seacoast road. The Turkish regular force, now greatly augmented, is encamped on the high ground towards Goritza (or Gorica, as printed in our Map), so as to be ready to support the Albanians. Their joint strength would amount to not less than 16,000 men, well armed and furnished with artillery. The Montenegrin force at Suttorman, commanded by Bozo Petrovitch, cousin to Prince Nikita or Nicholas of Montenegro, is by no means sufficient to engage the combined Turkish and Albanian forces, whose position seems to be very strong, commanding the road from Antivari to Dulcigno for several miles. One of our Illustrations is the "View from the Montenegrin Camp looking towards the position of Mazura now occupied by the Albanians." The distance to those farther hills shown in our Artist's Sketch would not much exceed eight or nine miles in a south-easterly direction. To the right hand, in the sea, or an inlet of the sea, very near the shore (marked "V. Kruci" in our Map), is a little islet or rock, which is in a line with the seaward extremity of the boundary-line that was proposed by the Treaty of Berlin. The insignificant seaport town of Dulcigno, which lies four miles beyond this point, with the small harbour of Noce Bay to the north of Dulcigno, was described in our paper last week. It was reconnoitred last Saturday by H.M.S. Helicon, which found plenty of room for a large fleet to anchor in the open roadstead, with ten fathoms' depth of water, within half a mile of the Turkish fort; but there is no shelter for the ships in case of a northerly gale, which may be expected any day at this season.

The reader may find in our Map the situation of several other places which have lately been mentioned, or which have been made the subjects of our Illustrations. Antivari, of which a view is sketched by our Special Artist, was a flourishing mercantile town, Italian by history, in the time of the mediæval City Republics. But it has dwindled and languished for ages past; and now, since the late destructive war of Montenegro against Turkey, it is reduced to mere desolate ruins. It was stormed and captured by the Montenegrins with a terrible amount of slaughter, faring worse even than the town of Dulcigno. But these local conflicts and calamities of warfare did not attract much notice three years ago, while the great Russian and Turkish armies were contending in Bulgaria and in Asia. The town of Podgoritza, which, together with Spuz, has been ceded to Montenegro in consequence of that war, is likely to become henceforth the capital of Prince Nikita's dominions, which are not half the size of Wales, but rather more mountainous. His present capital, which will also be found in our Map, is Cettinje, a mere village in appearance, reached by a very steep and winding path up the cliffs from the Austrian seaport of Cattaro. These remarks are intended chiefly to help the understanding of topographical details concerning the Montenegrin Frontier Question. The most recent news of its political and military aspects, to the latest hour of preparing our Journal for the press on Wednesday evening, must obtain notice on another page of this Number. We shall continue the series of Illustrations next week, having engaged the assistance of Special Artists, both on board the fleet of the combined Naval Powers, and on the Albanian or Turkish side; though it is still hoped, and by ourselves most earnestly and devoutly, that there may be no actual hostilities between them.

CAMPING OUT IN MONTENEGRO.

Our Special Artist, Mr. R. C. Woodville, who is now with the Albanians at Scutari or at Dulcigno, and who furnishes the Sketches of Albanians crossing the Boyana, and of their wild war-dance in camp during the nocturnal festivities of Ramazan, was in Montenegro but a few months ago; and some of his Montenegrin Sketches, illustrating the manners and customs of that highland country, have already been published in this Journal. A page filled with six or seven Engravings is now presented, which contains his delineations of some incidents belonging to the experiences of a couple of English travellers in Montenegro, where Mr. Woodville was accompanied by Mr. Athol Mayhew, the writer of some vivid and forcible descriptions of Montenegrin social and domestic life. They are shown entering what seems a very "crank" sort of ferry-boat, to cross the rapid stream of the Moracha; we next find them cooking their evening meal beside their tent, in the encampment at Dioclea; and subsequent adventures, such as the arrest of three thieves by Montenegrin police, and their appearance in safe custody before the foreign tourists whom they had robbed, are depicted with a certain touch of humour. This quality is not less perceptibly felt in the scene of "an evening entertainment," at which the strangers are present as invited guests, and where the company appear listening to a clever story-teller or speech-maker, whose eloquence holds them in delighted attention. One of the occasional mishaps of horsemanship on a rough and slippery mountain road, but with a fearful precipice at its side, which might have been fatal to the unlucky rider, occupies the next place among these Sketches of Montenegrin travel. Mr. Woodville has also paid some regard, as Mr. Simpson and other Special Artists have done, to the monumental relics of past generations in that historic and romantic land; a curious specimen of which is the old tombstone, probably of no very high antiquity, carved with figures of the pistols and other weapons belonging to a deceased Montenegrin chieftain. A domestic interior, if such name can befit the half-open hut or shielding on the bleak summit of the cliff, is the subject of the last of these Sketches in Montenegro.

ALBANIANS AT SCUTARI AND DULCIGNO.

Our Special Correspondent writes as follows, with reference to the two Illustrations of this subject:—"Europe has decided that Dulcigno must be given up to the Montenegrins; but Europe has addressed its mandate to the Turks, and not to the Albanians or Skipetars, as they call themselves. Anyone of the latter nation here sees no reason why he should surrender his land to his hereditary foe, when he has not been beaten in fair fight, but merely because it has been so decided in a city of which he knows nothing, by people who are nothing to him. Politics may demand that Skipetar land should be given to the Slavs; and, of course, the sooner these disturbances are quicted the better for Europe and for Albania, as well as for Montenegro. But the impartial observer cannot help sympathising with a brave people, who resist a decision in which they have had no voice and upon which their opinion has not been asked. Only their anomalous position is to blame for this; for, though a separate and distinct nationality, the fact of their still being considered a part of Turkey unfortunately imposes upon them the portion of the vanquished.

"On the last day of the Mohammedan festival of Bairam the Scutari levies marched to defend their frontier; and Mr. Woodville has chosen the moment when they crossed the bridge over the Boyana, to make his sketch of their marching array. Crossing this bridge in force is by no means a slight achievement; for it is a structure of wood, that is regularly carried away by the rapid stream of the river every winter, and is built up again in the spring, if the state of the finances permit of such an outlay. At the head of the column march the Zingari, playing their wild music on a sort of fife and drum; and just behind them rides a stalwart Hodja, clad in full mountain costume, even to the yataghan and pistols, and with no sign of his sacred office but the full white turban on his head. The Begs and their retainers follow, also dressed in mountain costume; for the splendid white fustanella, in which they delight to swing along the streets of Scutari, is too full and cumbersome for service in the field. They present a fine warlike appearance, these tall straight men, with their sharply cut features, blue eyes, and long fair moustaches and to the stranger there is something very attractive in their bold martial bearing, and their somewhat English look.

"Across the bridge, and rising straight up from the Boyana and the Bazaar, is the grey craggy rock on which is perched the old castle of Scodra, or Scutari, frowning down on the three rivers and the plains, and guarding the outlet of the beautiful lake. Below the castle, on the left, lies the city itself, half hidden among the many trees of its gardens and courtyards, with little more than the stately minarets and broad red-tiled roofs showing above the sea of green tree-tops. To the left of the bridge, and in the middle of the stream, are huts made of hurdles and supported on piles, in which the fishermen of the Boyana pass the night, exercising their trade during the fishing season.

"The other sketch is a scene of dancing the war-dance in the camp. While keeping watch and ward on the frontier, the Faithful among the Skipetars will not omit the strict ceremonial of their great fast of Ramazan, though by the letter of the law they can claim exemption. After the prescribed fast, lasting from dawn to sunset, is over for the day, and when the evening meal is finished, the Moslem makes merry in his staid fashion, with music and dancing. The scene here depicted is truly picturesque. The Skipetars are squatting in a circle, with the dancer in the middle, barely lighted up by the scant rays of the lanterns, and in the background is the Adriatic, on which they expect soon to see the ships of the six Powers of Europe. The dancer performs his steps with solemn precision, to the sound of the queer-looking guitar of Albania, whose wire strings emit a plaintive and subdued melody. Both love-songs and war-songs among the Skipetars have the same plaintive melancholy rhythm. But the poor dress of the dancer does not please his patrons, and there is a cry for a better costume. Daoud Agha, a prominent member of the League, at once sends for his heavy, many-folded fustanella; and another chieftain, Ibrahim Castrati, strips off his gold-embroidered waistcoat that Aali Beg of Gussinje gave him, with his cunningly worked gaiters. A third chief gives his long silk scarf; and, attired in these borrowed plumes, the dancer recommences his task. He holds a large handkerchief stretched in both hands above his head as he paces round the ring, with a slow, polka-like step, balancing his body from side to side, following the rhythm of the music. This is the introductory step; and then, getting more excited, he throws away the handkerchief and spins round the circle, with a short, jerking movement; or, changing his step, throws himself on one knee, now and then, bounding up again after the fashion of a bare-back rider of the equestrian circus. Suddenly, the music changes, and the dancer walks slowly round, stopping to borrow from Ibrahim Beg and the chief next him their yataghans, splendid with silver-gilt filigree handles, and having keen blue-steel blades, inlaid with verses from the Koran. These he draws from the chased silver scabbards, and, placing the bare points in his girdle, with arms outstretched resumes his dance, quickening from his slow polka step until he is wildly springing round in the centre, with the gleaming blades stretching from his hands to his waist. Again there is a pause, and then he executes another figure. This time the blades are placed under the armpits, and in this position the dancer goes through the process of bumping, first on one knee, then on the other, round the ring of lookers-on, now and then giving a sly kick in passing to the stolid musician, who sits with his feet curled under him, calmly brushing the wires with the little bit of cherry-bark that does duty as the plectrum of his instrument. Faster and faster grows the dance, till, disdaining to fall any more on his knees, the performer spins wildly in the middle of the ring, and so continues until music and dancer stop suddenly, and one of the on-lookers vouchsafes a 'Well done!' as the only applause due to what is really a most arduous performance."

W. A. D.

ASTRONOMICAL OCCURRENCES IN OCTOBER.

(From the Illustrated London Almanack.)

The Moon is near Mars on the evening of the 4th, Mercury on the 5th, and Venus on the 6th. She is near Jupiter throughout the night common to the 16th and 17th, and near Saturn throughout the night common to the 17th and 18th. She is nearest the Earth on the morning of the 8th, and most distant from it on the morning of the 24th. Her phases or times of change are:—

New Moon	on the	4th	at 43 min.	after	4h.	in the morning.
First Quarter	,,	11th	,, 35	,,	0	,, morning.
Full Moon	,,	18th	,, 26	,,	4	,, morning.
Last Quarter	,,	26th	,, 0	,,	7	,, morning.

Mercury is an evening star, setting on the 4th at 5h. 49m. p.m., or 20 minutes after sunset, which interval steadily increases to 23m. by the 9th, to 26m. by the 14th, to 29m. by the 19th, to 31m. by the 24th, and to 34m. by the 29th, the planet setting on the last-named day at 5h. 11m. p.m. He is in his descending node on the 2nd, near the Moon on the 5th, and at his greatest distance from the Sun on the 12th.

Venus is an evening star, setting at 6h. 6m. p.m. on the 7th, at 5h. 52m. p.m. on the 17th, and at 5h. 42m. p.m. on the 27th, being 44m., 52m., and 1h. 2m. after sunset on these evenings. She is near the Moon on the 6th, and in her descending node on the 11th.

Mars sets on the 7th at 5h. 35m. p.m., or 13 minutes after sunset; on the 17th at 5h. 8m. p.m., or 8 minutes after sunset; on the 27th the planet and Sun set nearly together; and from this time he sets in daylight. He rises at sunrise on the 25th, and a few minutes before the Sun at the end of the month. He is due south on the 1st at 0h. 19m. p.m., on the 15th at 11h. 59m. a.m., and on the last day at 11h. 37m. a.m. He is near the Moon on the 4th, and near the Sun on the 25th.

Jupiter rises on the 7th at about the time of sunset, and from this day he rises in daylight. He sets nearly at the time of sunrise on the 8th; at 5h. 27m. a.m., or 1h. 4m. before sunset, on the 18th; and at 4h. 40m. a.m., or 2h. 9m. before sunrise on the 28th. He is due south on the 1st at 0h. 19m. a.m., on the 15th at 11h. 12m. p.m., and on the last day at 10h. 2m. p.m. He is in opposition to the Sun on the 7th, and near the Moon on the 17th.

Saturn rises on the 6th at 5h. 55m. p.m., or 30 minutes after sunset; on the 17th at 5h. 10m. p.m., or 10 minutes after sunset; on the 22nd he rises at sunset; and after this day he rises in daylight. He sets at about sunrise on the 18th, and at 5h. 48m. a.m., or 1h. 1m. before sunrise on the 28th. He is due south on the 1st at 1h. 3m. a.m., on the 15th at 0h. 4m. a.m., and on the last day at 10h. 52m. p.m. He is near the Moon on the 18th, and in opposition to the Sun on the same day.

A free library and museum, to cost £10,000, is in the course of erection at Cardiff by the Corporation. The Marquis of Bute has leased the site of the old theatre in Crockherbotown, with liberty to arch over the stream of water supplying the Bute Docks. It is intended to build on the site of the old theatre a public hall, at a cost of £12,000, to seat 2000 persons, and to have an orchestra for 200 performers.

A large steamer, the Cupid, employed on the passenger traffic between London and Woolwich, was run down and sunk last Saturday evening, near the scene of the Princess Alice disaster. The screw steamer D. S. Ward cut into the other vessel just astern of the funnel, and she sank in a few minutes. Fortunately, there were only a few persons on board the Cupid at the time of the occurence, and they were rescued.

Digitized by Google

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

ITALY.

The Italian permanent squadron and the English turret-ships Monarch and Thunderer left Naples on Tuesday for Castellamare, to be present at the launch of the monster frigate Italia. King Humbert witnessed the ceremony.

General Garibaldi and his son Menotti have resigned their seats as deputies. The reason alleged by General Garibaldi is that Italy is misgoverned, and he advocates the claim for universal suffrage.

An international exhibition of seed-sowing machines will be opened on the 20th inst. at Pisa, when prizes of gold and silver medals will be conferred by the Minister of Agriculture for the best machines.

HOLLAND.

The Dutch-Indian Budget for 1881 was presented on Thursday week to the Second Chamber of the States-General. Both the revenue and the expenditure are estimated in round numbers at 144,000,000 gulden, there being an actual deficit of about one third of a million, against one of three millions in 1879-80, thus showing a considerable improvement in the finances of the colony. The expenditure in most of the departments is increased, but as a set-off there is a diminution of rather more than three millions in the war charges.

In the Second Chamber, yesterday week, the Home Budget for 1881 was introduced by the Minister of Finance. The expenditure was estimated by him at 126,333,000 gulden, and the revenue at 105,000,000 gulden, thus showing a deficit of about 21,000,000. He proposed to meet this deficit for the time being by the issue of Treasury bills, and ultimately by a fresh loan of sufficient amount to include the outlay necessary for the improvement of canals. The Government, at the same time, deem it requisite to provide for a permanent increase of revenue by the imposition of a tax on rentes.

M. Dullert has been re-elected President of the Second Chamber. The First Chamber has voted the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne. The address points out that the present condition of the Dutch finances necessitates a reduction of expenditure.

GERMANY.

The Emperor William has gone to Baden, where the Empress's birthday was celebrated on Thursday. His Majesty has conferred upon the Duke of Cambridge the Grand Cross of the Royal Order of the House of Hohenzollern.

Prince Bismarck announces that he proposes to invite the representatives of commerce, industry, agriculture, and the various trades, to a Council, which will give its opinion on the Government bills relating to questions of political economy.

DENMARK.

The King and Queen have been to Gmünden on a visit to the Duke of Cumberland.

A formal meeting of the Rigsdag has been summoned for the 4th inst., when the House will be further prorogued.

RUSSIA.

The first stone of the University of Tomsk, in Siberia, was laid on Sept. 7.

An exciting scene was witnessed on the Neva on Monday afternoon. A barge laden with hay caught fire, and the flames spread to upwards of thirty lighters, which were cut adrift and allowed to float away down the stream towards the Gulf of Finland. No casualties are reported.

AUSTRIA-HUNGARY.

The Emperor was present on Thursday week at the manœuvres of the Hungarian army at Czegled. Numerous foreign officers, including Lieutenant-Colonel Primrose on behalf of England, also witnessed the spectacle. The Emperor and all present spoke in terms of the highest praise of the way in which the Honved cavalry acquitted themselves.

At the final Ministerial Council at Pesth, which was presided over by the Emperor in person, and lasted four hours, the next Budgets of Austria and Hungary, which are to provide for an increased military expenditure during the coming year, were finally agreed upon. At the same time, the opening of the Delegations was fixed for the 19th inst.

The Emperor has returned to Vienna from the military manœuvres. He remained there for a day to receive the King and Queen of Greece on their passage. He left Vienna on Monday for his hunting-seat in Styria. The King of Saxony arrived in the morning to take part, on the invitation of the Emperor. The party started at noon. Previous to this the King of Greece went to the Schönbrunn to take leave of the Emperor. The correspondent of the Times says that during the tour in Galicia the general significance of the spontaneous outburst of loyalty silenced almost entirely all speculation as to the possible effect of the tour on the course of home politics and the future of the two Parliamentary parties in the Austrian Reichsrath.

A conference of members of the Liberal party in the Hungarian Diet was held at Pesth yesterday week, and the previous President and Vice-Presidents of the party were re-elected. Baron Perenyi brought forward a resolution in favour of electing a central committee for the purpose of promoting a firmer organisation of the party. M. de Trefort, Minister of Public Instruction and Worship, approved the resolution, but requested the conference to postpone its decision upon such an important matter until the return of M. Tisza, the President of the Council. The Hungarian Diet met on Saturday last for its third and last Session before the general election, which takes place next summer. According to old custom, it was but a formal meeting, a sort of first gathering of the members.

The revenue of the dual Monarchy of Austria-Hungary for the first eight months of the present year exceeds that of the corresponding period of last year by the sum of four millions four hundred thousand florins.

AMERICA.

A telegram from New York states that the Presidential Election struggle, so far, has not been marked by any exciting incidents. Large meetings are held from time to time, and both parties are working hard to secure the return of their candidates. The contest promises to be a close one, but less bitterness and acrimony have been shown up to the present than at the same stage of any previous Presidential Election.

General Grant presided on Tuesday, for the first time, at a Republican mass meeting at Warren, Ohio, when he made a long political speech, in which he declared himself to be a Republican, because the Republican was the National Party, and aimed at the greatest good of the greatest number.

A letter from General Hancock, the Democratic candidate for the Presidency, is published, strongly denouncing the Southern war claims, and stating that the Federal Government can never pay the debt nor grant any pension or reward of any sort for war waged upon its own existence. Nobody, adds the letter, expects or wants such unnatural action. General Hancock says, in conclusion: "If President, I would veto all legislation for the payment of claims of any kind for losses or damages by persons who were in rebellion, whether pardoned or not. The obligations of the Government to its defenders are lasting and sacred, but, owing to the lapse of time, Union war claims may fairly be considered as barred, or, if entertained, should be subjected to the strictest scrutiny."

General Weaver, the Greenback candidate for the Presidency, has issued a circular declaring General Hancock and Mr. English, the Democratic candidates for the Presidency and Vice-Presidency respectively, to be opposed to the Greenback policy, and denouncing as a traitor any Greenbacker who seeks to transfer Greenback votes to the Democratic or Republican candidates.

The Irish-American Republican Convention of New York State have adopted resolutions endorsing the Chicago platform, and expressing confidence in General Garfield, the Republican candidate for the Presidency. They also declare in favour of Protection, asserting that British emissaries are working for General Hancock, the Democratic candidate, in the interest of Free Trade.

The Commission, in conformity with the Franco-American Treaty of Jan. 16, 1880, for the adjustment of the claims of French subjects who suffered during the war of secession, has been appointed.

Memphis had a celebration on the 23rd ult. to commemorate its freedom from yellow fever this summer. The streets were decorated, and two triumphal arches were raised, one of which was formed of cotton bales. A procession three miles long, composed of civic societies and trades, marched through the chief streets, large crowds assembling to witness the ceremony. The Governors of Kentucky, Tennessee, and Arkansas attended.

The Pan-Presbyterian Council was opened at Philadelphia on the 23rd ult., delegates attending from all parts of the world. A reception was given to the delegates at the Academy of Fine Arts on the previous evening. Addresses of welcome were given to them by the Governor of Pennsylvania and the Mayor of Philadelphia. Speeches were also made by Dr. John Cairns, of Edinburgh, and others. The Delegates' Council was opened on Thursday. The delegates marched in procession to the Academy of Music, which was packed with people. The Rev. Principal Rainy, of Edinburgh, offered the opening prayer, and the Rev. William Paxton, of New York, preached the introductory sermon. The regular business of the session began in the afternoon in the Horticultural Hall. Yesterday week the Rev. Dr. Watts, of Belfast, gave an address on the Scripture doctrine of inspiration. The Council, in five-minutes' speeches, discussed this address, and also the papers which were read on Thursday. Other papers were afterwards read by American clergymen. Among the papers read in the evening was one by the Rev. Dr. Blaikie, Scotland, on the "Influence of the Gospel on Employer and Employed." On Saturday the Rev. Professor Calderwood, Edinburgh, read a paper on the "Relations of Science and Religion." Discussions followed the reading of the various papers. Foreign ministers preached in the Philadelphia churches. Several papers were read on Monday, including one on Agnosticism by the Rev. R. Flint, of Edinburgh. The Pan-Presbyterian Council has decided to hold its next session at Belfast in 1884.

During the month of August, according to the report issued by the Bureau of Statistics at Washington, the number of immigrants into the United States reached a total of 50,000, including 6239 from England, 1737 from Scotland, 6157 from Ireland, 11,918 from Germany, and 13,506 from Canada.

SOUTH AFRICA.

The telegrams from Cape Town occasion grave misgiving as to the condition of affairs in Basutoland. Twelve hundred Basutos, it is announced, made an attack upon our forces on the 20th ult., and on the following day another attack was made by a different body numbering 5000. Both attacks were repulsed after fighting at each place had continued the whole day. The Cape correspondent of the Times telegraphs some particulars of the attack made by the Basutos on Mafeteng. The correspondent says the Basutos, 7000 strong, repeatedly charged the Cape Mounted Rifles' camp at Courthouse, held by a magistrate and volunteers, but were repulsed at all points, leaving one hundred dead. One of Letsea's sons was killed. Our own loss was three men wounded.

Brigadier-General Clarke estimates that the colonial force required for Basutoland is 3000 Europeans. That force is now en route.

Sir George Strahan has arrived at Cape Town, and been sworn as Administrator.

The excitement consequent on the discoveries of new diamonds in the Free State, according to latest intelligence from Kimberley, had not abated in intensity. Three new rushes have been reported. A magnificent gem of the first water, weighing 50 carats, and worth £6000, had been unearthed at the Jagersfontein diggings.

AUSTRALIA.

A telegram from Sydney states that Sir Henry Parkes, the Premier of New South Wales, while returning from Melbourne, whither he had accompanied Sir Hercules Robinson en route for England, was entertained at a public banquet at Albury. Sir Henry made a speech, in which he quoted statistics to show the rapid progress which New South Wales was making. Referring to the question of federation, the Premier said that he was willing to give up much to effect the union of all the Australian colonies, and should be very happy if he could do anything to bring about such a result.

INDIA.

An official telegram from the Viceroy of India, dated Saturday last, says that Colonel St. John reports all to be quiet at Candahar. The march of the columns returning to India is unopposed. The brigade sent to Maiwand has returned, having buried the bodies found on the field of action. Another telegram from the Viceroy, dated from Simla, Sunday, says it is reported from Candahar that the Cabul troops, who fled after the action of the 1st, had reached Ghazni, on the road towards Cabul. The Ghilzai soldiers had dispersed to their homes, and Ayoub had gone to Herat.

The Indian correspondents of the Times send some particulars of the situation in Afghanistan. The Candahar correspondent says that some side issues of General Burrows's disaster were officially investigated last week, with the result that two officers are under arrest. According to news from Cabul which had reached Simla, the defeat of Ayoub has caused the Ameer the greatest satisfaction, and has had a most quieting effect on the country. The Candahar correspondent of the Daily News says that Brigadier-General Sir C. Ross, with the last of the Bengal troops, starts for India on Tuesday. General Phayre (the correspondent adds) is ordered to increase his division to a strength of ten thousand, pointing to the probability of a garrison at Candahar for the next few months. The Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphs that the latest advices from Cabul state that the officers and men of the Cabul regiments of Ayoub's defeated army have reached Cabul and made their submission to the Ameer, who has accepted it. Ayoub's defeat has reassured the country. Ayoub is said to have fled to Seistan. The Candahar correspondent of the Standard says there are rumours of fresh gatherings of the tribes in the Zemindawar country.

THE BIRTH OF A SPANISH INFANTA.

The young Queen of Spain, as our readers are informed already, gave birth to her first child, a little girl, on the 11th ult., in the Royal Palace at Madrid. In the afternoon of that day it became apparent that the expected event was really at hand. The Austrian Dr. Roedel, her Majesty's private physician, sent notice to the High Chamberlain of the Palace, the Duke de Sesto, that the invited company of witnesses should be summoned without delay. Half an hour later the well-known Ministerial liveries were seen looming through the fast-gathering darkness, and with a hundred other carriages bearing the numerous guests hurrying at a hand gallop towards the Plaza de Oriente. In less than an hour all those entitled to be present were assembled.

In the meantime were gathered in the chamber of the young Queen her mother, the Archduchess Elizabeth, the Queen Mother Isabella, and Dr. Roedel; the Marchioness of Santa Cruz, the First Lady of Honour to her Majesty, being in attendance, while King Alfonso, whose pale face and anxious look contrasted somewhat strangely with the gorgeous Captain-General's uniform, which etiquette compelled him to wear, passed continually in and out of the room, now addressing an affectionate word of encouragement to his suffering consort, now conferring eagerly with the Austrian doctor. In the ante-chamber were the several ladies in waiting of the Royal household, and the English nurse specially engaged for the care of the Royal infant.

The bed-chamber of the Queen was a very large and handsome room, furnished in light blue and white. In a niche between magnificent carved rosewood bedsteads was a large ivory crucifix, at the front of which were placed the wreath of orange-blossoms worn by the young Queen at her wedding last year, and a small wreath of white roses which she wore on the occasion of her first communion; before this was placed an antique "prie-dieu" chair. A temporary altar had been erected in the room, upon which were laid various sacred relics brought from their resting-places all over the country to "assist" at this important event. The altar was brilliantly lighted with wax tapers.

The invited guests to the number of about 200, consisting of Commissions of both Houses of Parliament, representatives of the grandees of Spain, members of the Order of the Golden Fleece and of the various military orders, deputations of the Supreme Court of Judicature, provincial deputations, the Chief Magistrate of the city and members of the Town Council, and the foreign diplomatic body, all in full uniform, were assembled in the saloons. Nearly two hours of expectation and anxiety dragged slowly and solemnly away, during which the clergy, at the head of whom were the Papal Nuncio, the Archbishop of Toledo, and Cardinal Benavides, Patriarch of the Indies, offered up their prayers in the Chapel Royal below. Constant telegraphic communication was kept up with the Court of Vienna and the Vatican. The crowd outside the palace was quite orderly, the silence that reigned being occasionally broken as some official entered or left the palace. All eagerly watched the flagstaff upon which should appear either a red light or white light, which was to announce the arrival of a future King, or only to add one more to the female representatives of the Royal house of Bourbon.

In the meantime intense silence reigned in the chamber and ante-chamber of the Royal patient. The pent-up anticipation of the brilliant crowd in the saloons was becoming almost unbearable, when at a few minutes before half-past eight a slight commotion observed in the ante-chamber produced an immediate silence; every whisper was hushed, and every eye eagerly turned towards the door. A moment more, and the whisper spread like an electric spark, "Es una niña!" "It is a girl." Immediately the Duke de Sesto, as Grand Chamberlain, entered the room, and announced that her Majesty the Queen had been happily delivered of a daughter. A few minutes later the young King Alfonso appeared at the door of the saloon bearing his newly-born heiress, enveloped in cambrics and laces. The Prime Minister, Señor Canovas del Castillo, advanced to the King and raised the lace covering which concealed the child, and the Minister of Grace and Justice, as Chief Notary of State, stepping forward, made the necessary official declaration. All those assembled then passed before and bowed their respects to his Majesty and his august daughter. The child was then handed over to its natural guardians, first being enveloped in the swathing clothes which had been specially blessed and sent by the Pope.

Saturday last, Sept. 25, the fête day of Santa Mercedes, was kept as an official holiday and gala day in the palace in honour of the Infanta Mercedes. Her Majesty left her bed on the Friday for a few hours. She and King Alfonso gave an audience to the Papal Nuncio, who presented, in a splendid marble and ebony casket, the gift of Pope Leo XIII. to the Infanta Mercedes, which was a very rich satin robe covered with lace, and displaying the escutcheons of Spain and the Pope on the skirt. This robe was made and embroidered by ladies of the Roman nobility at the request of the Pope.

A first list of subscriptions for the creation of a National Society in Aid of the Industrious Blind in France is published, amounting to the sum of 12,769f.

The thirty-ninth and last representation of the Ober-Ammergau Passion Play took place on Sunday. There were 3500 persons present.

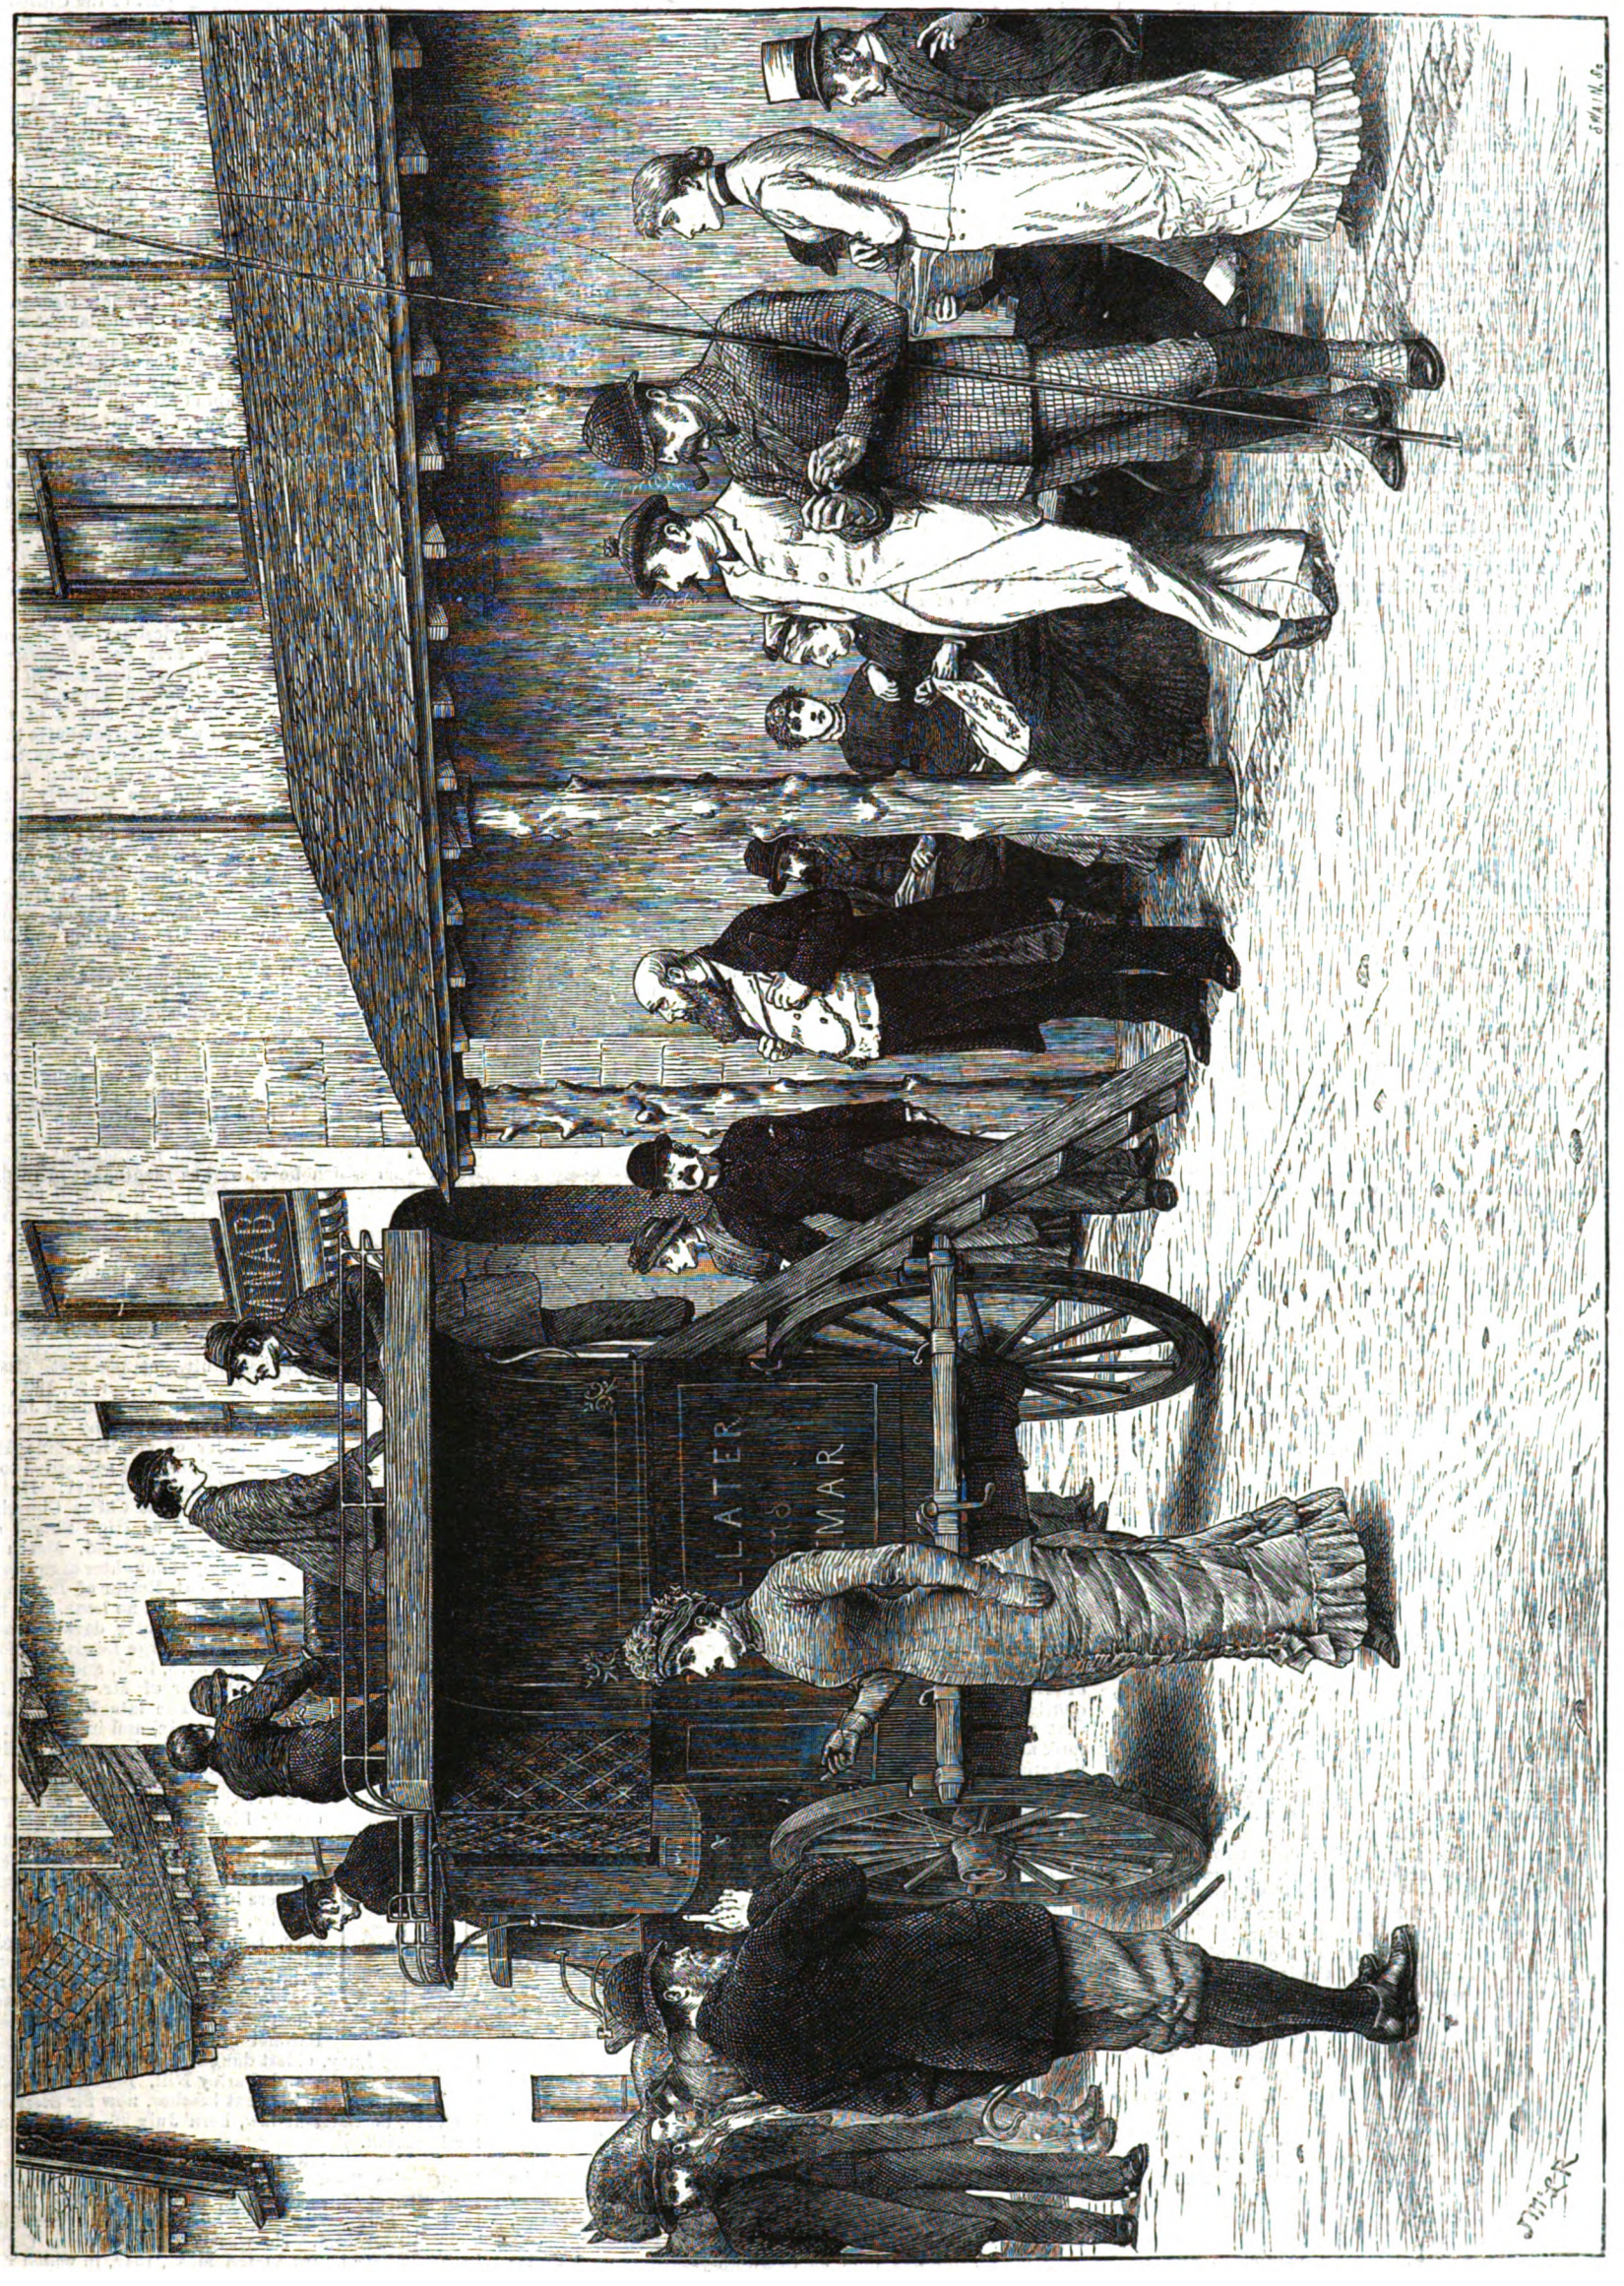
An earthquake happened at Valparaiso on the 13th ult., and another at Illapel, in the interior of Chili. Two hundred persons in all are said to have perished.

The International Commission has terminated the inspection of the St. Gothard line, and, according to its estimate, the entire works, so far, have cost 86,609,282f.

The appointment of Mineralogical Surveyor to the Government of Natal has been conferred upon Mr. F. W. North, who has been instructed to submit a scheme for the development of the coal-fields of the colony.

The annual prize instituted by the King of the Belgians will be awarded in 1881 for the best essay on the means of improving ports established on low and sandy coasts such as those of Belgium. The competition is open to authors of all nations. Essays must be sent in to the Minister of the Interior this year.

The Maharajah of Jeypore, head of one of the oldest Rajpoot houses, and himself one of the most noteworthy and enlightened of Indian Princes, died on the 18th ult. He has left no son, but he nominated a successor whom, it is said, all the nobles except one have agreed to accept.



It appears from the report of the Secretary of State for India in Council on Railways in India for the year 1879-80, issued yesterday, that, at the commencement of the year 1879, the length of railway open for traffic was 8216 miles, of which 6044 were in the hands of guaranteed companies, and 2172 were under direct State management. During the year a further extent of 395½ miles—including the section of 133½ miles of the Candahar line opened in January last—has been completed. The present open system consists of 8611½ miles. Twenty-two miles have been added to the guaranteed 353 miles to the State, and 20½ to the native State lines.

Digitized by Google

THE BIRTH OF A SPANISH INFANTA: PREPARING FOR THE EVENT IN THE ROYAL PALACE AT MADRID—THE KING SHOWING THE BABE TO THE FOREIGN AMBASSADORS.
SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

Digitized by Google

SKETCHES IN SCOTLAND: ARRIVAL OF THE COACH AT THE FIFE ARMS, BRAEMAR.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

Digitized by Google

FINE ARTS.

In some, if not all, of the designs exhibited years ago in competition for the New Law Courts—Mr. Street's among the number, if our memory serves us—a covered bridge of one arch, a viaduct, a Rialto-like structure (except that instead of gondolas gliding, cabs and omnibuses were to rattle beneath), was proposed to be thrown across Fleet-street—taking the place of Temple Bar, being also a memorial thereof—to serve as a way for pedestrians to or from the new Palace of Justice, the Temple, and Messrs. Child's bank. The bridge was of course made to harmonise with the architecture of the Law Courts, and its effect was in all cases as striking as it was novel, being entirely free from the unsightliness of the engineer's architecture usually adopted for a similar purpose by the railway companies. And the convenience of increased facility of transit which such a structure would afford commended itself to one's common-sense as much as its picturesqueness to one's æsthetic perceptions, for bringing the Law Courts where they are would of necessity largely increase the number of passengers to and from the Temple. Why this every-way excellent feature was suppressed we have never learnt, any cannot understand. In any case, however, it was necessary to widen Fleet-street itself in order to relieve the alreadd congested traffic. Accordingly, the Law Courts were set back from the street where the old Bar stood, and Messrs. Child and Co. have, in the erection of their new premises, gratuitously sacrificed valuable space for the benefit of the public. But then step in the Civic authorities with a plea for their effete privileges and childish rites. At first, however, it was proposed to erect merely an ornamental lamp-post, or some very modest memorial. That, however, was not enough. As we have already announced, the City Lands Committee and Commissioners of Sewers determined to nullify much that had been done for the public convenience, and to stultify even themselves by erecting, at a cost of several thousand pounds, a so-called "Memorial" of the obsolete and crazy old Bar (that ought to have been carted away ages ago), and which said Memorial is to occupy the centre of the newly enlarged roadway, and several feet of its width. A pretty sample, truly, of civio vanity and obstructiveness. A nuisance is clung to as long as possible, and no sooner is it removed than another nuisance is found to take its place. It will naturally be supposed that, for the sake of good taste and common courtesy at least, these City authorities consulted with the architect of the Law Courts respecting the style of the intended memorial that is to be brought into juxtaposition with his work. But not so; Mr. Street declares in a letter to the Times that "he has never had a chance of seeing the design for the new memorial." Nor has the design of the City architect been submitted to public judgment at all, so far as we can ascertain. Surely a "hole and corner business, this, with certain City officials," as it is pronounced to be by another correspondent of the Times. It appears that, not to narrow the roadway, the whole of the space for the memorial—five feet—has been taken out of the foot pavement on the north side, which will now be reduced to ten feet; and Mr. Street very justly remarks that this "will be to the great damage of the appearance of the new Courts of Justice, and to the inconvenience of the public." This north pavement or base, as it were, to the Courts, "was intended to be 15 feet in width—not an inch too much for a pavement which has to accommodate not only the crowd ordinarily passing along the Strand, but also the people having business in, and the inevitable loungers in front of, the Courts of Justice when the Courts are sitting. The right place for a refuge is undoubtedly about 100 feet to the west of the memorial. The roadway at this point, being wider, would admit of a larger refuge, and it would much better serve the convenience of passengers to the most important entrance of the new Courts." Moreover, so far as we can judge from the published verbal description, the intended memorial—however sumptuous in material it may be, and ornate in form, and even if seen alone, it should prove to be "a thing of beauty," as it is fondly described by Mr. J. H. Bedford, the Chairman of the City Lands Committee—it cannot certainly harmonise with anything surrounding it; nor will it be enshrined, as it were, in isolation, like the columns at Rome were. A structure 37 ft. high, and only 5 ft. wide, must assume the general form of an extremely narrow turret, campanile, or obelisk, corresponding with nothing in its neighbourhood; it should have posts and chains about it, not only for its protection, but to give it an aspect of stability (which would take at least 4 ft. more from the roadway), and, even so, it must look ridiculous when seen springing from the roofs of omnibuses and cabs. If the City Common Council and its agents are not acting in a spirit of self-glorification and self-seeking; if they simply wish to signalise their sentimental and archæological interest in old Temple Bar, why do they not re-erect the time-worn and grimy old stones—say close by, in the Temple, as near as possible to their former site?

The Royal Academicians propose, it is said, shortly to bring under consideration a long-needed and much-called-for reform—i.e., the reduction of the works admissible for exhibition at Burlington House to four for Academicians, three for Associates, and two for outsiders. If this reform be carried out, about 300 more oil-paintings may be accommodated, and the whole tone of the exhibition will be raised, for only each painter's best works would be sent in. In the enormous galleries of the Paris Salon only two works are allowed from the greatest artist in France. There seems to be a desire also to take some measures to check the mischief from many points of view of the increasing size of the canvases sent in. Only one work beyond stated moderate dimensions should be admissible from any artist, and certainly only one full-length portrait. The size also of the larger works should be restricted, except in very exceptional cases, such as that of a monumental or public work. In many instances a whole or half-length figure or figures lifesize would be seen to greater advantage hung somewhat higher than the present line, so as to admit of a row of small cabinet works beneath. The dado in all the rooms, but especially in the Great Room (where it is highest), should also be lowered.

The Institute of Art, 9, Conduit-street, which was established for the exhibition of art-work of all kinds, especially by ladies, announces a winter exhibition, to open on Nov. 1 next; and exhibits are to be forwarded a fortnight before the opening. For the privilege of exhibiting, membership is necessary in the first instance. "Instructive objets d'art," not the production of the exhibitor, are also eligible for exhibition and sale. Particulars may be had of the secretary, Captain Oswald B. Niven. The institute has made considerable progress in its recent exhibitions, and its lists of distinguished lady "patronesses" and council are much extended.

The school of art for ladies, established so successfully by Mrs. E. M. Ward at 6, William-street, Lowndes-square, will open for the winter term on the 15th inst. The visitors who have consented to attend during the ensuing three months are Messrs. Millais, Calderon, and Frith.

A fine marble bust of the first Duke of Marlborough, by Rysbrach, the gift of the Rev. Thomas William Webb, Vicar of Hardwick, Herefordshire, to the British Museum, has been placed in the entrance-hall.

A technical college for the north of England was inaugurated in Newcastle-on-Tyne yesterday week.

A portrait of the late Dr. Fairbank, surgeon to her Majesty, has been executed by Mr. Charles Hollis for the committee of the Albert Institute, Windsor. The picture is of lifesize, and will be hung in the hall of the institute.

Mr. Ford Madox-Brown has completed the second of the mural paintings with which he was commissioned for the decoration of the Townhall at Manchester. The subject is "The Romans building a fort at Mancenion."

Our sober Yorkshire friends will be in a state of unwonted excitement this month. The triennial Musical Festival at Leeds, from the 13th to the 16th inclusive, promises to come off with unprecedented éclat. And the Jubilee of the Halifax Literary and Philosophical Society will be celebrated by the president, Mr. J. W. Davis, and council from the 26th to the 29th inst. inclusive, with proceedings and entertainments ranging from a lecture by Dr. Spottiswoode, President of the Royal Society, to a ball in the Drill Hall, which will be elaborately decorated for the occasion. The most novel part of the arrangements will be the exhibition, in the museum and other rooms, of a collection of fine oak furniture of the seventeenth century, in which the parish is rich, together with tapestry, pictures, pottery, and other objects. The pillory and executioner's axe, which for many generations have been preserved at Wakefield, will be lent by the lady of the manor. The collections will remain open to the public a fortnight after the 29th.

The committee of the New South Wales Academy of Art have purchased pictures in the English Court at the late Exhibition in Sydney of the value of £4660.

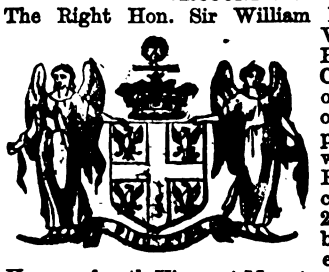
The death, at the early age of forty-two, is announced of M. Jules Jacquemart, best known by his admirable paintings and etchings of still-life; many of the latter illustrate his father's books on furniture, &c.

The execution of the grand public monument to be erected in Rome to Victor Emmanuel is to be subject to competition, to be open to sculptors of all nations. No conditions as to design, style, or selection of site are imposed, the only stipulation being that the total cost of the monument when completed shall not exceed 9,000,000f. The models, which may bear the name and address of the sculptor or a motto on the cover of a sealed letter, are to be sent in, addressed to the Secretary of the Royal Commission at the Ministry of the Interior, not before Aug. 25, and not later than Sept. 25, 1881. Three prizes of 50,000f., 30,000f., and 20,000f. will be given respectively to the authors of the three best models, which are to remain the property of the State; but the Royal Commissioners do not bind themselves to give the commission for the monument to any of the prize-winners.

The Science and Art Department lately decided to depute an officer to India to make purchases of Indian art-objects to complete the collections exhibited at the India Museum, South Kensington. It is announced that Mr. Caspar Purdon Clarke has been appointed to this mission, and that he will leave for India on the 7th inst. A fund of about £8000 has been placed at his disposal, of which £3000 has been contributed by the India Office, this sum being the unexpended balance of the money received on account of the exhibition of the Prince of Wales's Indian presents in 1876, and reserved by his Royal Highness for the purpose of promoting the interests of Indian art.

SKETCHES AT BRAEMAR.

Braemar, which is that part of Deeside, or the valley of the Dee, lying above the Balmoral district, extends from the junction of the Garry-alt or Garrawalt, near the Bridge of Dee, below the forest of Ballochbuie, to the opening of Glen Ey and Glen Lui on either side, in the direction of east to west. The river, about the centre of this spacious valley, having received the tributary streams of the Linn of the Quoich and of the Cluny, becomes wider, deeper, and more tranquil, while the green strath expands to a considerable breadth; yet barred on the east side by the steep bank, partly overgrown with pines, from which the sharp granite peak of Craig Cluny rises directly above the high road. Invercauld House, with its lofty and massive tower, backed by the wooded hill, stands on the left bank of the Dee, and Braemar Castle, an ancient mansion of Scottish nobility, erected four centuries ago, and still, though rebuilt in later times, preserving its original character, with the old fashion of embattled turrets, is situated on the right or south bank of the river. A little above the castle, which belongs to the Earl of Fife, is the village bearing the name of Castleton of Braemar, shown in our Illustration, from a photograph by Mr. G. W. Wilson, of Aberdeen. It is a convenient place for the head-quarters and rendezvous of tourists, and it often happens that the Queen and her family, or the visitors of high rank at Balmoral Castle, pass through this place on their way to various excursions among the mountains and glens, in the Forest of Mar to the north-west, or Blair Athol and Glen Tilt in a south-west direction. There are two good hotels at Castleton, the Fife Arms and the Invercauld Arms, which share the Royal patronage, we are told, upon these occasions; her Majesty, with considerate kindness, being accustomed to change horses, in going up the road, at one of these houses, and at the other house when she comes back, so as to avoid giving any excuse for jealousy, or even a feeling of disappointment. We desire to be equally fair and impartial, though our Artist's sketch of the arrival of the stage-coach at Castleton of Braemar represents that vehicle stopping at the Fife Arms, where some of the visitors appear to have been made to feel quite at home. The distance from Ballater is about eighteen miles, and the fare by the coach is four shillings; it arrives daily at half-past twelve, passing Balmoral, and starts on its return journey at half-past four in the afternoon. There is a short line of railway from Ballater to Aberdeen.



Professor Tyndall is to deliver the presidental address at the establishment of the Glasgow Sunday Society. The object of the society is to secure the opening of museums, art-galleries, libraries, and gardens on Sunday.

A goat show was held at Brighton yesterday week under the auspices of the local branch of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, the exhibits being confined to goats worked in the small chariots plying for hire on the Marine front. With the exception of five only, the whole of the licensed goats were entered, and the first prize carried with it a handsome collar with brass bosses and a plate inscribed "Prize Goat, 1880" to be worn by the animal to which it was awarded." Prizes were also awarded to the goat-boys for cleanliness and kindness.

OBITUARY.

VISCOUNT MOUNTMORRES.

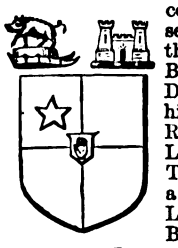
The Right Hon. Sir William Browne de Montmorency, Viscount Mountmorres and Baron Mountmorres, of Castle-morres, in the county of Kilkenny, in the Peerage of Ireland, a Baronet of that part of the United Kingdom, was murdered, near his seat, Ebor Hall, Clonbur, in the county of Galway, on the 25th ult. His Lordship was born April 21, 1832, the eldest son of the Very Rev. Hervey, fourth Viscount Mountmorres, Dean of Achonry, by Sarah, his wife, daughter of William Shaw, Esq., of Temple Hill, and succeeded his father Jan. 23, 1872. He was educated at Kilkenny College, and at Trinity College, Dublin, where he graduated B.A. in Science honours, 1853. He was a magistrate for the county of Galway, and it was on his way home from attending the Court of Petty Sessions that he was barbarously assassinated. Lord Mountmorres married, Nov. 12, 1862, Harriet, second daughter of the late George Broadrick, Esq., of Hamphill Stubbs, and granddaughter of Sir R. Fletcher, Bart., and leaves a young family of two sons and two daughters. The principal estates of the Lords Mountmorres were carried into the Pratt family through the marriage of the Rev. Joseph Pratt, of Cabra Castle, in the county of Cavan, with Sarah, daughter of Hervey, Viscount Mountmorres. Their second son, Hervey Pratt, took the surname of De Montmorency on succeeding to the property of his maternal ancestors. The result was that the male heirs were deprived of their estates, and the ill-fated nobleman whose death we record succeeded to an almost landless title.

LORD GEORGE HENRY CAVENDISH.

Lord George Henry Cavendish, of Ashford Hall, late M.P. for North Derbyshire, J.P. and D.L., died on the 23rd ult. His Lordship, born Aug. 19, 1810, was the second son of William Cavendish, M.P. for Aylesbury, by Louisa, his wife, eldest daughter of Cornelius, first Lord Lismore, and was grandson of George Augustus Henry, first Earl of Burlington, who was third son of William, fourth Duke of Devonshire, K.G. Lord George was thus next brother of the present Duke of Devonshire, K.G., on whose succession to the Peerage, in 1858, he obtained a patent of precedence as the younger son of a Duke. He received his education at Eton and Trinity College, Cambridge, and was formerly Captain 2nd Derbyshire Militia. He was also Hon. Colonel 3rd Battalion Derbyshire Rifle Volunteers, and sat in Parliament for the northern division of that county from 1834 until the dissolution this year. His Lordship married, July 4, 1835, Louisa, youngest daughter of Henry, second Earl of Harewood, and leaves surviving issue one son, Captain James Cavendish, R.A., and two daughters, the Hon. Mrs. Egerton and Mrs. Henry Robert Brand.

LORD FRANCIS CONYNGHAM.

Lord Francis Nathaniel Conyngham, J.P. and D.L., died on the 14th ult., at his residence, Muirshiel, Lochwinnoch, Renfrewshire. He was born Sept. 24, 1832, the younger son of Francis Nathaniel, second Marquis Conyngham, K.P., G.C.H., P.C., by Lady Jane, his wife, daughter of Field Marshal Henry William, first Marquis of Anglesey; and was married, Sept. 28, 1857, to the Hon. Georgina Charlotte, fifth daughter of Charles, first Lord Tredegar. He was educated at the Royal Naval College, and in 1846 entered the Royal Navy, from which he retired as Lieutenant in 1860. During the war with Russia he served in the Baltic at Bomarsund, and also took part in the operations against Sebastopol and at the capture of the Kinburn forts. He represented the county of Clare in Parliament from 1857 to 1859, and again from 1874 to 1880. In politics he supported the Home-Rule party.



SIR R. E. WILMOT-HORTON, BART.

Sir Robert Edward Wilmot-Horton, fourth Baronet, of Osmaston, in the county of Derby, D.L., died on the 22nd ult., at his seat, Catton Hall, Derby. He was born Jan. 29, 1808, the eldest son of the Right Hon. Sir Robert John Wilmot-Horton, third Baronet, by Anne, his wife, eldest daughter of Mr. Eusebius Horton, of Catton, Derbyshire, and succeeded to the title at his father's death, in 1841. He was educated at Eton, and at Christ Church, Oxford. In 1846 he served as High Sheriff of Derbyshire. Sir Robert married, March 20, 1842, Margaret, youngest daughter of the Rev. Andrew Kersteman, of Brenchley, Kent, Rector of Bermondsey, and widow of Mr. Robert Algeo, but had no issue. The baronetcy, created Oct. 10, 1772, has consequently devolved on his only surviving brother, the Rev. Sir George Lewis Wilmot-Horton, fifth Baronet, who was born Nov. 8, 1825, and married, July 24, 1849, Frances Augusta, daughter of Mr. Henry Pitches and Lady Amelia Sophia Boyce. The late Baronet assumed in 1842 the surname of Wilmot only, and in 1871, on the death of his mother, resumed the additional surname of Horton.

SIR VERE EDMOND DE VERE, BART.

Sir Vere Edmond De Vere, third Baronet, of Currah Chase, county Limerick, died on the 23rd ult. at his seat near Adare. He was born Oct. 12, 1808, the eldest son of Sir Aubrey De Vere, second Baronet (who assumed the surname of De Vere in lieu of that of Hunt), by Mary, his wife, elder daughter of Stephen Edward Rice, Esq., of Mount Trenchard, county Limerick, and received his education at Trinity College, Cambridge. Sir Vere was a Magistrate and Deputy Lieutenant for Limerick, and succeeded his father as third Baronet July 5, 1846. He married, Jan. 9, 1838, Mary Lucy, eldest daughter of Rowland Standish, Esq., of Scaleby Castle, and Farley Hill, Berks, but had no issue. The title passes to his next brother, now Sir Stephen Edward De Vere, barrister-at-law, born July 26, 1812, formerly M.P. for Limerick.

MR. GEORGE BROWNE, Q.C.

Mr. George Browne, Q.C., Recorder of Ludlow, died on the 19th ult., at Calverley Park, Tunbridge Wells. He was born in 1825, in Jamaica, of which island his grandfather was Attorney-General. He was educated at Jesus College, Cambridge, where he graduated M.A., 1849, in which year he was called to the Bar at the Inner Temple. Mr. Browne joined the Oxford Circuit, was appointed Recorder of Ludlow in January, 1873, and was made a Q.C. in the present year. He married, in 1869, Eliza, youngest daughter of J. Greatorex, Esq., of Cleveland-square, Hyde Park. He was author of several legal treatises.

We have also to record the deaths of—

Lady Cooper (Anne), widow of Sir William Henry Cooper,

Digitized by Google

Bart., of Chilton Lodge, Hungerford, who died in 1836, and daughter of Colonel Kemeys-Tynte, M.P.

Colonel John Watkins, late 5th Native Cavalry, on the 16th ult., at 1, Montpelier-square, S.W., in his ninetieth year.

The Rev. John Frampton, Honorary Canon of Gloucester, and Vicar of Tetbury, to which he was appointed as far back as 1828, in his eighty-second year.

The Hon. Alfred Hood, formerly of the 5th Foot, on the 14th ult., aged thirty-four. He was youngest son of Samuel, third Viscount Hood, by Mary Isabella, his wife, daughter and heiress of Richard John Tibbits, Esq., of Barton Seagrave, and was brother of the present Viscount Hood.

Mr. Serjeant Augustine Sargood, of Norfolk-terrace, Brighton, and Crown Office-row, Temple, on the 14th ult., at Frankfort, aged sixty-five. He was called to the Bar in 1846, and was formerly the leading Counsel in the Bankruptcy Court. He obtained the dignity of the coif in 1868.

Mr. Emanuel Hutchins, of Ardnagashel, in the county of Cork, J.P., on the 9th ult., at 95, Lower Leeson-street, Dublin, aged fifty-seven. He was eldest son of Samuel Hutchins, Esq., of Ardnagashel and Fortlands, J.P., by Frances Camac, his wife, second daughter of Mr. Arthur Robert Camac Newburgh.

Lieutenant-Colonel Morton Parker Eden, late Royal Artillery, on the 18th ult., at Fulham, aged forty-four. He was elder son of Lieutenant-General Morton Eden, by Louisa Anne, his wife, daughter of Mr. George Robert Eyres, and was descended from Sir Robert Eden, first Baronet, Governor of Maryland.

Assistant-Commissary-General Henry Clutterbuck Lewis, commissariat officer in charge of the home district, at the age of forty-three years. He entered the service in 1854, and served throughout the Eastern campaign, including the siege of Sebastopol, and also the China expedition, for which he was awarded the Crimean, Turkish, and China medals.

Mr. G. F. Grace, the youngest of the three brothers, the celebrated cricketers. Mr. Grace played only recently in the match with the Australian team, and since then in other leading matches. He was but twenty-nine years of age, and his loss is universally regretted, his geniality of character having rendered him very popular.

Mr. Basil Sparrow, of Gosfield Place, near Halstead, Essex, J.P. and D.L., head of the Chelmsford banking firm of Messrs. Sparrow, Tufnell, and Co. He was second son of Mr. John Goodeve Sparrow, of Gosfield Place, by Dorothy, his wife, eldest daughter of the Rev. Basil Beridge, of Algarkirk, Lincolnshire. He married, 1846, Julia, daughter of Mr. John Scratton, of Prittlewell Priory, Southend.

Boswell Middleton Jalland, Esq., of Holderness House, Hull, J.P. and D.L., on the 22nd ult., aged ninety-one. He was elder son of John Jalland, Esq., by Mary, his wife, daughter of Boswell Middleton, Esq., of Boroughbridge. He married, April 10, 1851, Emily, only child of John Williams, Esq., of Penlee, Devon; and leaves three sons and one daughter.

Major Alexander Penrose Miller, Governor of the Military Prison, Gosport, late 92nd Highlanders, on the 18th ult., aged sixty-three. He was son of Mr. Thomas Miller, of Glenlee and Barskimming, by Edwina, his wife, daughter of Sir Alexander Penrose Gordon-Cuming, Bart., and was brother to the late Sir William Miller, Bart., of Glenlee. He married Julia Monica, daughter of Mr. S. Shiel, of Ballyshannon, and leaves issue.

Mr. John Templeton Lucas, at the early age of forty-four. The eldest son of the late John Lucas, whose popularity was achieved by his successful portraits of the Royal family and the late Duke of Wellington, Mr. Lucas was an exhibitor in the Royal Academy and the Society of British Artists, and was the author of a farce called "Brown the Martyr," produced at the Court Theatre, and of a little volume of fairy tales called "Prince Ubbely Bubbles."

Miss Geraldine Jewsbury, well-known in the literary world, on the 22nd ult., in Burnwood-place, Edgware-road, in her sixty-ninth year. She was authoress, amongst other novels, of "Zoë, or the History of Two Lives," "The Half Sisters," "Marian Withers," "Constance Herbert," "The History of an Adopted Child," "The Sorrows of Gentility," "Right or Wrong," and of a story for children, "Angelo, or the Pine-Forest in the Alps." She also co-operated with Lady Morgan in her literary labours.

William Holland Bickford Coham, Esq., of Dunsland and Coham, North Devon, and Treveddoe Manor, Cornwall, J.P. and D.L., on the 22nd ult., at the first-named seat. He was elder son of the Rev. William Bickford Coham, of Coham and Dunsland, by Augusta Mary, his wife, eldest daughter of Joseph Davie Bassett, Esq., of Heanton Court and Watermouth, and was educated at St. John's College, Cambridge. He married, Sept. 3, 1857, Dora Elizabeth Louisa, youngest daughter of the late General Sir Hopton Stratford Scott, K.C.B., of Woodville, Lucan, in the county of Dublin.

Alderman Sir Sydney Waterlow, M.P., on Monday presided at a council of the Metropolitan Hospital Sunday Fund, when the suspension of the grant of £525 to the Eastbourne Convalescent Hospital, owing to the charges of Dr. Glover, was discussed. After hearing both sides, the following decision was arrived at:—"This committee, having heard a statement made by Dr. Glover, with reference to his complaints against the Eastbourne Convalescent Hospital, and having been attended by a deputation from that hospital, are of opinion, for the following reasons, that the grant originally recommended by them should be confirmed—(1) That the complaints made by Dr. Glover refer to facts which occurred at the end of 1876, which were entirely disapproved of by the acting authorities; and (2) that although, as admitted by the deputation, the hospital has not been managed by a committee of the character contemplated by Rule 4 of the fund, having hitherto been controlled by trustees, yet the hospital authorities now promise to appoint for the future a properly constituted committee."

An appeal on behalf of the objects of the General Domestic Servants' Benevolent Institution is being made by the president, Lord Ebury, and the committee, to masters for a larger amount of support. The society was instituted to afford to domestic servants of good character such assistance in old age, sickness, or misfortune as their case required. The association was also formed as a benevolent society for servants, which was to give pensions and occasional assistance to the extent that the funds at the disposal of the committee would allow. It is shown that during the thirty-one years of its existence it has afforded pensions to 165 individuals, seventy-four of whom are now in the receipt of sums varying from £15 to £20 per annum, and it has given temporary assistance to a much greater number who have required small sums to tide them over unavoidable temporary difficulties. It has, besides, maintained registration, which has been the means of obtaining situations for several thousand servants out of place, and a sum of £17,000 has been accumulated.

CHESS.

T G (Smethwick).—The solution of the Brunswick problem is not commonplace, but the only defence you notice, 1. P to B 3rd, is so. You are right as regards No. 1906. Look at No. 1908 again.

L C (Malta).—In Problem No. 1906, the answer to your proposed defence, 1. P takes B, is 2. P to Q 4th. Mate.

G de C (Ross).—The "touch and move" law is not applicable to the case. The move made must be retracted and the King moved out of check, or a piece or Pawn must be interposed. Checkmate is possible without either party having lost a piece: witness the "Fool's Mate":—

1. P to K Kt 4th — P to K 4th
2. P to K B 4th — Q to R 5th. Mate.

H H (Broadmoor).—The key move of No. 1906 is 1. R to K B 8th. The problem is not the composition of the gentleman named in your letter.

P J (Broadmoor).—The solution is given below.

F J K (Vienna).—All very acceptable. Thanks.

W B (Caversham).—The three-move mate is effected by 1. B to B 4th (ch), 2. B to Kt 4th, and 3. P to B 3rd (checkmate).

J R H (Halifax, N.S.).—In the position described, the Pawn advanced can be captured en passant. Your solution of No. 1904 is correct.

E G.—There is no error in your solution of No. 1906.

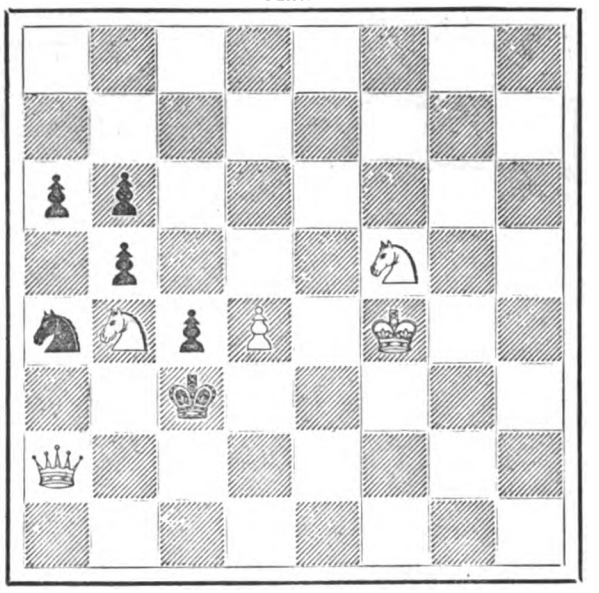
H B (Prestbury) and DUKE.—There are several solutions besides the author's:—1. B takes P (ch), 1. B to Q sq, and 1. B to Q B sq, all equally effective.

J T (Kingussie).—Thanks for your note. The problem shall have early insertion.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1907 received from T Guest, Pierce Jones, K Halton (Odessa), B S P (Marseilles), H Jameson, S Wilton, and J W Lawrence.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1908 received from Emile Frau, W Burr, J Bumstead, Lincopensis (Sweden), Jack and Dan, B F, A Snellen, H Hampton, Pierce Jones, S Wilton, and J W Lawrence.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1909 received from H B, East Marden, Lulu, Julia Short, Shadforth, L Sharswood, S Farrant, Ernest Sharswood, Nerina, N Warner, R Gray, M O'Halloran, E Elsbury, R Ingersoll, B Jessop, C S Coxe, T Greenbank, G L Mayne, An Old Hand, H Blacklock, R S P, Kitten, S Wilton, J W Lawrence, Ben Nevis, D Templeton, C Oswald, A Kentish Man, D W Kell, C Darragh, Jupiter Junior, H Langford, Elsie, B L Dyke, H Barrett, G Fosbrooke, T Guest, W Biddle, Louis Spencer, Emile Frau, E Fleetham, Carioca, Alpha, W Burr, J Nepven, E Louden, J Glossop, Julia Short, R H Brooks, Smutch, E F (Winchester), A C Edwards, J W W, A Rowley, C T B (Manchester), W M Curtis, Norman Rumbelow, H F K, F Reyner, James Dobson, Pierce Jones, R S P, and S Wilton.



SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 1908.

WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Kt to Q 4th	Any move
2. Mates accordingly.

PROBLEM No. 1911.

By C. W., of Sunbury.

BLACK.

WHITE.

White to play, and mate in three moves.

Played at Simpson's Divan, between the Rev. S. W. EARNSHAW and Mr. MASON.—(Ruy Lopez.)

WHITE (Mr. E.)	BLACK (Mr. M.)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th
2. Kt to K B 3rd	Kt to Q B 3rd
3. B to Kt 5th	B to B 4th
A defence that is somewhat, if not altogether, out of fashion, but which leads to a livelier game than the line of play now adopted.
4. P to B 3rd	K Kt to K 2nd
5. P to Q 4th	P takes P
6. P takes P	B to Kt 5th (ch)
7. Kt to Q B 3rd	P to Q 4th
8. P to K 5th	Castles
9. Castles	P to B 3rd
10. P takes P	R takes P
11. B to K Kt 5th	R to B 2nd
12. B takes Q Kt	P takes B
13. Kt to K 5th	R to B 4th
14. Kt takes P	Q to K sq
15. B takes Kt	B takes B
16. R to K sq	Q takes Kt
17. R takes B
White has a Pawn to the good after these exchanges.
17.	R to Kt 4th
18. Q to B 3rd	Q to K Kt 3rd
19. Q R to K sq	B to Kt 5th
20. Q to K 3rd	Q R to K B sq
21. R takes Q B P	B to B 6th
22. P to K Kt 3rd	Q to K R 4th
23. Q to K 6th (ch)	K to R sq
24. P to K R 4th
Down to this point White has conducted the game with spirit as well as judgment, but here he fails. If he had now played 24. Q to B 7th, Black must have struck his colours.
24.	Q takes R P.

White resigned.

Played between the Rev. G. A. MACDONNELL and another Amateur. (Sicilian Defense.)

WHITE (Mr. M.)	BLACK (Mr. A.)
1. P to K 4th	P to Q B 4th
2. Kt to K B 3rd	Kt to Q B 3rd
3. Kt to B 3rd	P to K 3rd
4. B to Kt 5th	K Kt to K 2nd
5. Castles	P to Q R 3rd
6. B takes Kt	Kt takes B
7. P to Q 4th	P takes P
8. Kt takes P	B to B 4th
9. B to K 3rd	Q to K 2nd
10. Q to Q 2nd	Castles
11. Q R to Q sq	P to B 4th
12. P takes P	B takes Kt
13. B takes B	R takes P
14. P to B 4th	P to Q Kt 4th
15. P to K Kt 4th
This somewhat risky attack, converting a dull opening into a lively game, is quite in Mr. Macdonnell's style.
15.	R to B 2nd
16. B to B 2nd	B to Kt 2nd
17. Q R to K sq	Q R to K B sq
18. P to B 5th	Kt to Q sq
19. Kt to K 4th	P to Q 4th
20. B to B 5th	Q to R 5th
21. Q to Kt 5th
Securing the exchange and preventing any counter-attack on the part of the adversary
21.	Q to R 3rd
22. Q takes Q	P takes Q
23. B takes R	P takes Kt
24. B takes P	P takes P
25. K R takes P	R takes R
26. P takes R	Kt to B 2nd
27. B to B 4th	K to Kt 2nd
28. R to Q sq	B to B 3rd
29. K to B 2nd	K to B 3rd
30. K to K 3rd	R takes P
31. R to K Kt sq	B to Q 4th
32. P to Kt 3rd	P to Q R 4th
33. R to Kt 5th	P to R 5th
34. R to Q Kt 8th	B to B 3rd
35. P to B 4th	P takes Kt P
36. R P takes P	P takes P
37. P takes P.

White eventually won with his passed pawn.

A match, to be conducted by telegraph, is arranged between the clubs of Liverpool and Calcutta, all the difficulties suggestive of expense having been surmounted by a signal code framed to meet every conceivable emergency, and invented by an ingenious Liverpudlian. There was one word omitted from the code for which the inventor declined to provide an equivalent. It was "resigns," and when reproached with the omission, he owned he had not thought of it. This looks promising. The Liverpool Chess Club, we are pleased to record, is in a highly flourishing condition. The members are provided with a spacious room, and a library superior in completeness to that of any chess club in England of which we have had experience; it consists of 136 volumes, and comprises complete sets of the Illustrated London News, the old Chessplayers' Chronicle (Staunton's, Brien's, and Löwenthal's), the Westminster Papers, Palamede, an original Ruy Lopez, all modern works upon the game, besides innumerable cuttings from newspaper chess columns.

The Brunswick problem, published in our issue of the 4th ult., appears to have exercised the minds of many of our correspondents; but it is noteworthy that this week all the successful solvers acknowledge that they have been obliged to resort to the aid of the board and movement of the pieces. Even so regarded, the problem is by no means easy of solution, as the number of failures sufficiently testify. In compliance with the request of our readers we give the solution here:—

WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Q to Kt 7th	Kt to K B 4th
2. Q to Q 5th	Kt takes Q
3. R to K 4th (ch)	K takes R
4. R to K 6th. Mate.

If Black play 1. Kt to K 3rd, White must then continue with 2. Q to K 4th (ch), 3. R to B 5th (ch), and 4. R to Q 5th, mates. If 1. B to R 5th, then 2. R from B 6th to Q 6th, B takes P; 3. Q to K 4th (ch), and mates next move.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will (dated June 16, 1879) with a codicil (dated July 2, 1880) of the Right Hon. Charles Hugh, Baron Clifford, late of Ugbrooke Park, Chudleigh, Devon, who died on Aug. 5 last, was proved on the 14th ult. by Lewis Henry Hugh, Lord Clifford, the son, the sole executor, the personal estate being sworn under £180,000. The testator bequeaths to his wife pecuniary legacies amounting together to £2500, and the dividends of £23,000 for life; to his two younger sons, Walter Joseph Hugh and William Charles Ignatius, £20,000 each, and a further sum of £10,200 each on the death of their mother; to his three daughters, Bertha Mary Agnes, Cecilia Mary, and Emma Mary Agnes, £10,000 each, and £2200 each on the death of their mother; and he provides that if, before attaining twenty-five, either of his said sons take holy orders or become professed in religion, or either of his said daughters become professed in religion, in the Roman Catholic Church, the portions of such sons are to be reduced to £5000, and of such daughters to £2500; and to his daughters Mary Lucy Constance and Edith Teresa Mary, £60 per annum each, in addition to what he gave them on their becoming professed in religion. All the family diamonds, plate, pictures, books, furniture, and ecclesiastical plate, vestments, and furniture are to go, devolve, and remain as heirlooms with Ugbrooke House. The deceased peer devises all his real estate to his eldest son, and, subject to the employment of £20,000 in the payment of any charges on the family estates, gives him his residuary personal estate absolutely.

The will (dated Jan. 27, 1875) of Sir William Mordaunt Milner, Bart., late of Nun Appleton Hall, Tadcaster, Yorkshire, who died on April 13 last at Cairo, was proved on the 15th ult. by Sir Frederick George Milner, Bart., the brother and sole executor, the personal estate being sworn under £7000. The testator leaves to Mr. Newcomb Mason his half share in the horse Royalist, if it should belong to him at his death; and all other his real and personal estate to his said brother.

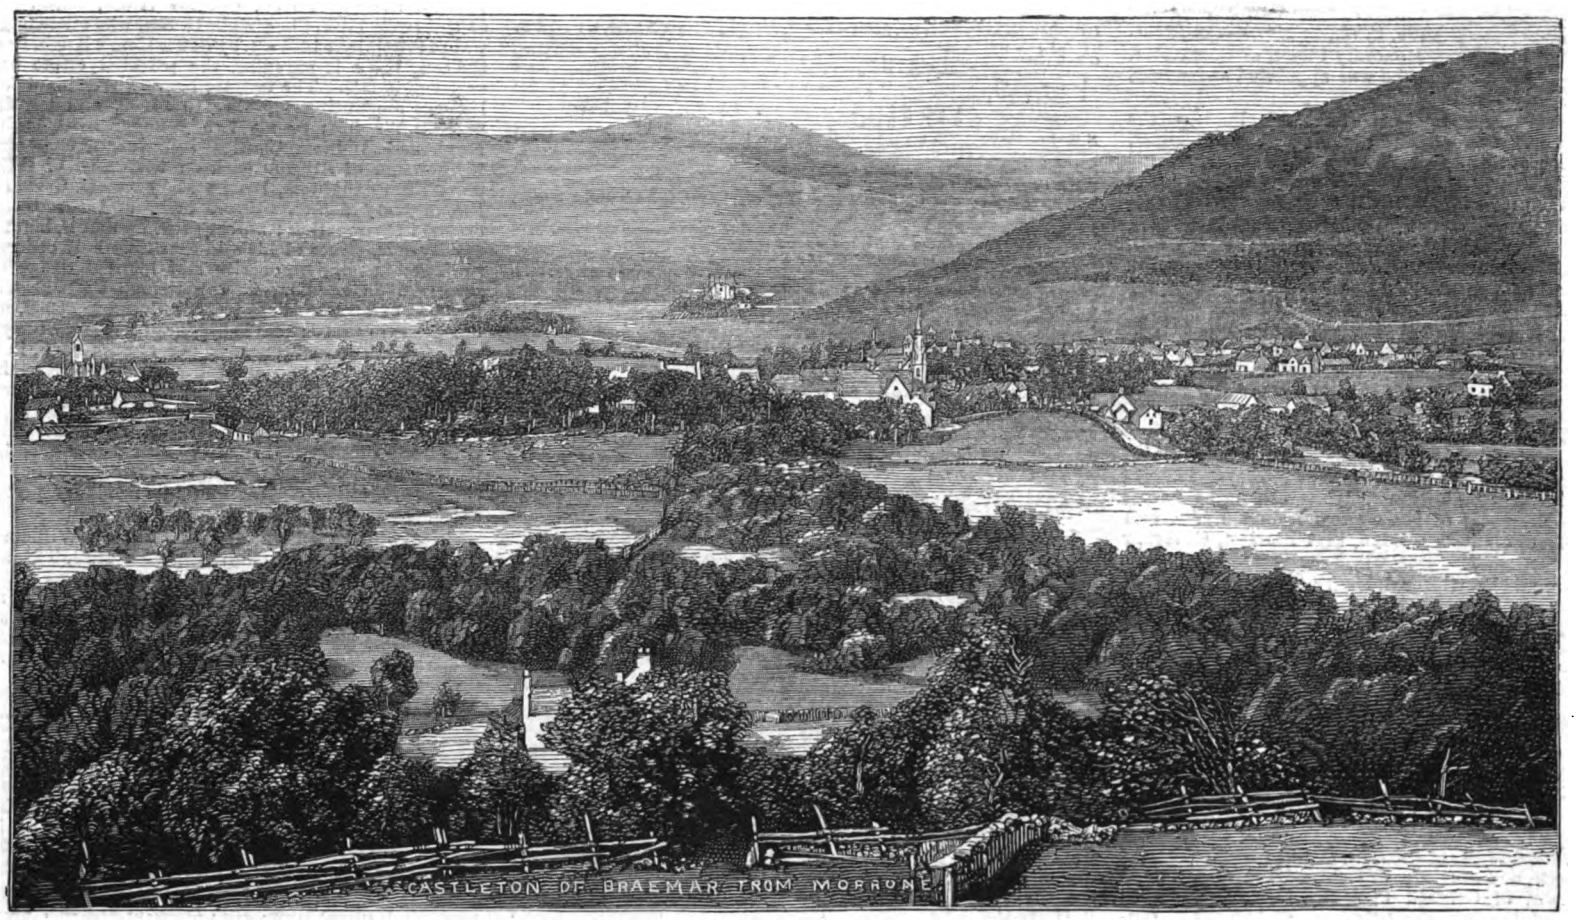
The will (dated Oct. 23, 1879) of Mr. William Udal, late of Park Mount, Edgbaston, Warwickshire, who died on July 26 last, was proved on the 8th ult. by William Udal, the son, Daniel Symonds, and Thomas John Pitfield, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £200,000. The testator leaves to his daughter Jane £3000, the same as he had already given to his other children; to his executors £200 each; and the residue of his real and personal property upon trust as to one sixth equal part for each of his children—Mrs. Mary Anne Pitfield, William Udal, Mrs. Honoria Timmis, John Symonds Udal, Edward Udal, and Miss Jane Udal.

The will (dated March 21, 1879) of Mrs. Eliza Hamerton, late of No. 17, Clarendon-square, Leamington, who died on July 7 last, was proved on the 8th ult. by the Rev. Barwell Ewins Worthington Bennett and Thomas Salt, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £30,000. Subject to a few legacies, the testatrix gives all her real and personal estate to her son, Lawrence Collingwood Hamerton.

The Irish probate, granted on Aug. 9 last, at Kilkenny, of the will (dated Dec. 31, 1879) with a codicil (dated June 28, 1880) of Mr. George Leopold Bryan, M.P., late of Jenkinstown, Kilkenny, who died on June 24 last, granted to Edmund Mansfield, the sole executor, has now been sealed in London, the aggregate personal estate within the jurisdiction of the High Courts of Justice of England and Ireland being sworn under £25,000. The testator leaves to his executor £500; to Miss Mary Kelly an annuity of £500; to his nephew, the Hon. Richard Eustace Bellew, the fourth son of his sister, Baroness Bellew, a rentcharge of £300 per annum, to be increased to £500 per annum on the death of Lady Elizabeth Georgina Bryan. Subject to this rentcharge, he devises all his lands and hereditaments in Ireland and England to his nephew, the Hon. George Leopold Bellew, the third son of his said sister; and the residue of the personalty is to go in the same manner.

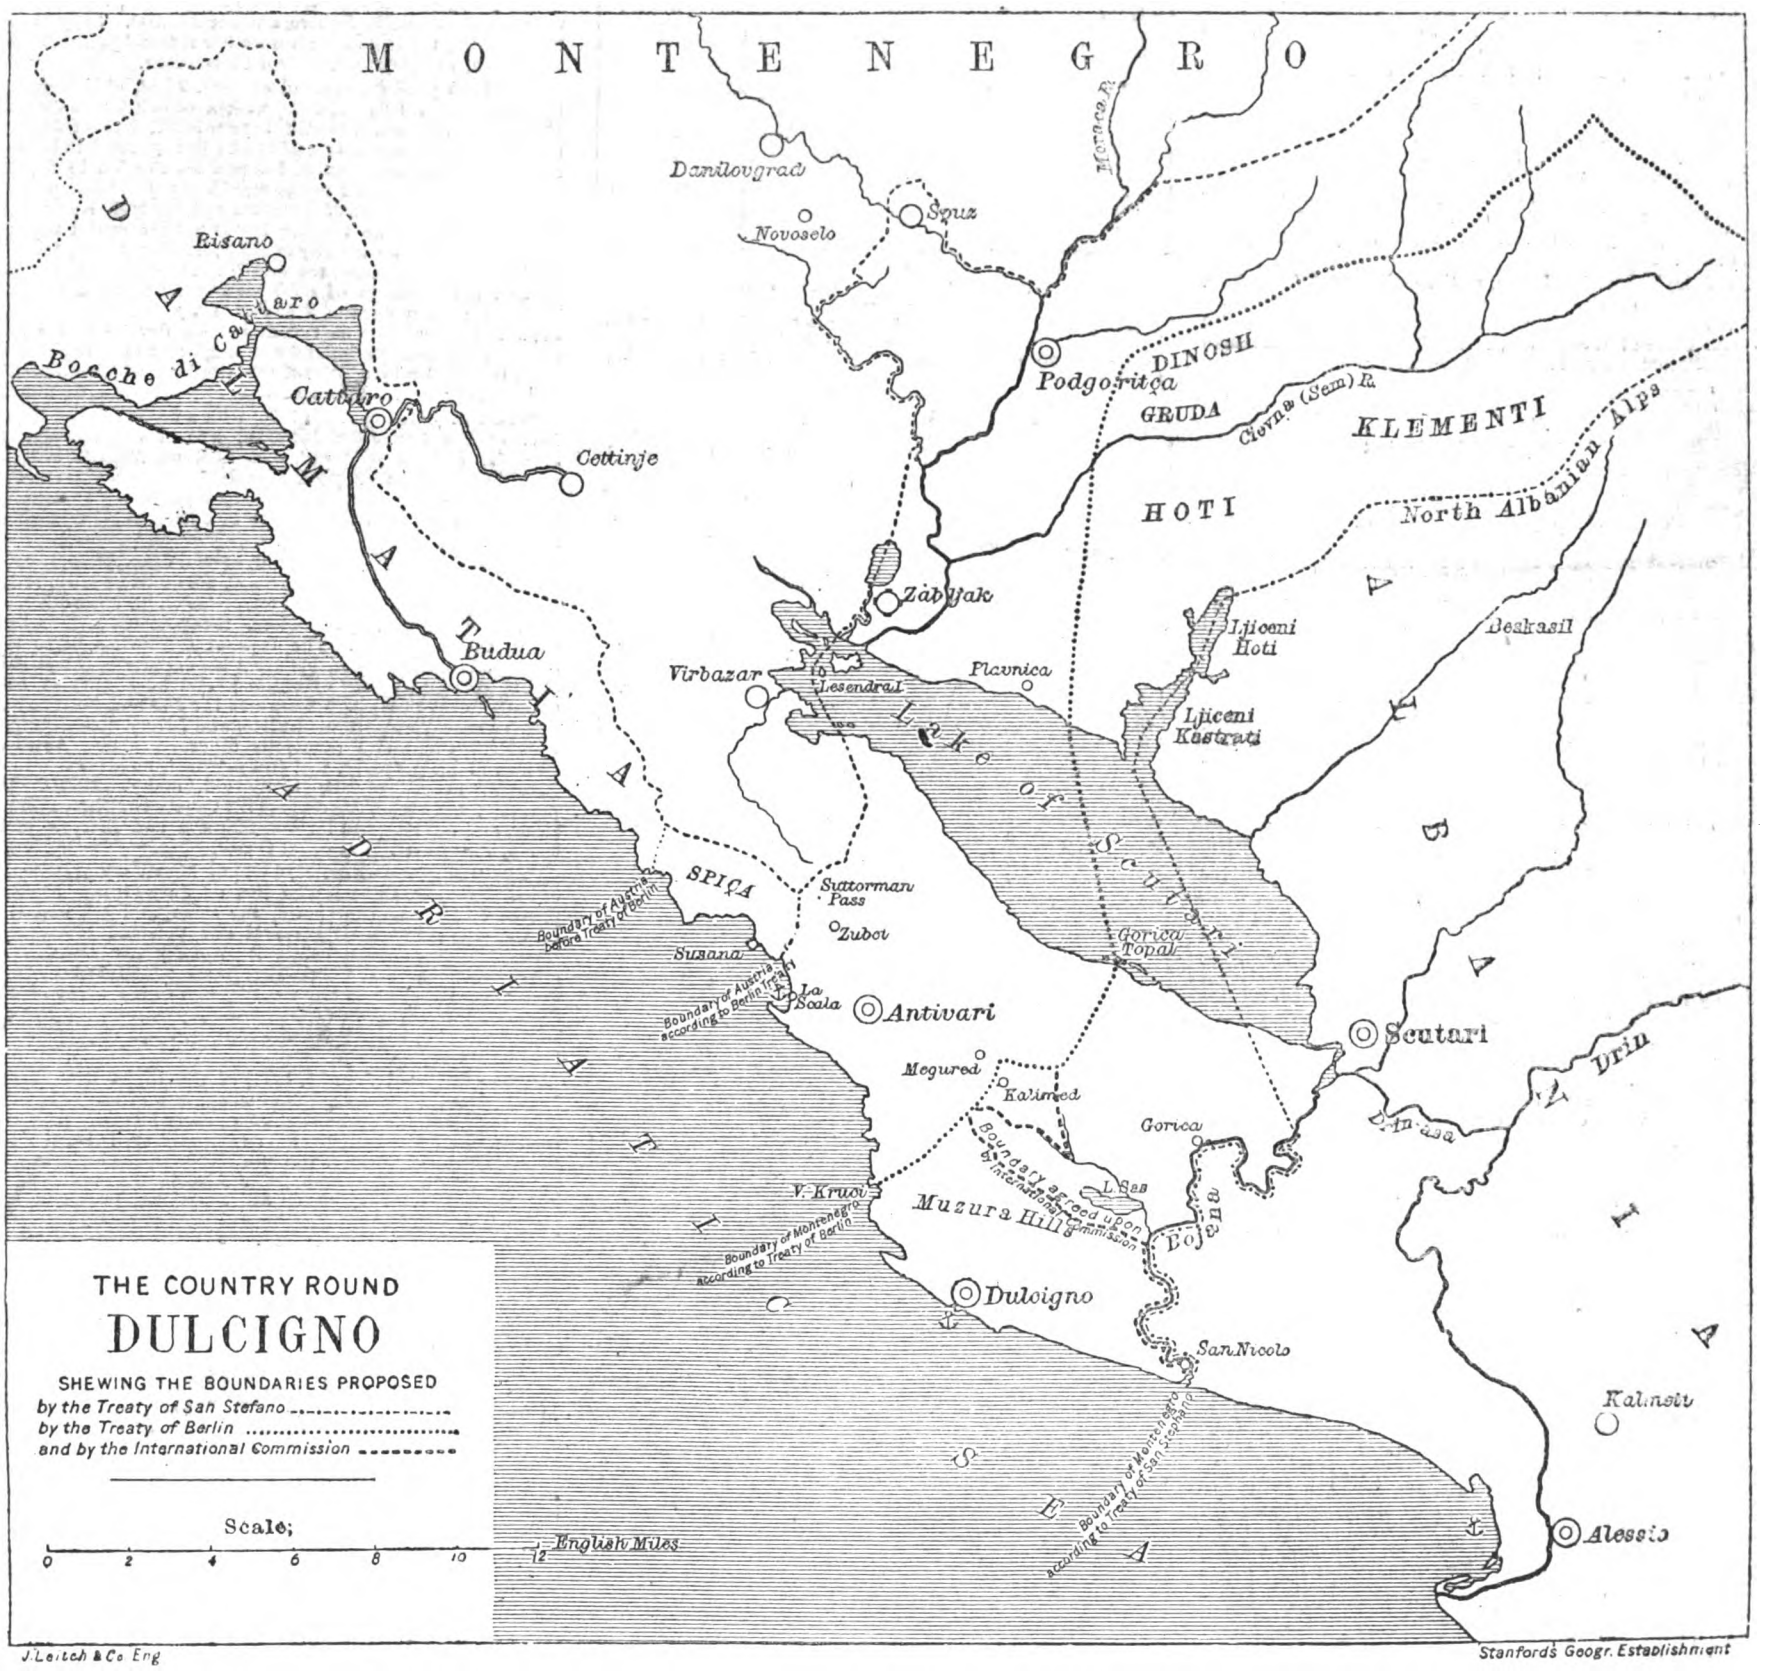
The will (dated Oct. 21, 1875) with a codicil (dated May 11, 1877) of the Rev. John Harman, late of the Vicarage, St. James's, Enfield Highway, who died on Aug. 16 last, was proved on the 1st ult. by Ferdinand Antonio Echalaz and John Harman, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £20,000. The testator desired to be buried in his cassock and surplice.

The will (dated May 17, 1880) of Mr. John Holloway, late of Brunswick Lodge, Brixton-road, who died on Aug. 11 last, was proved on the 4th ult. by Cornelius Quin, John Kirk, and Mrs. Dinah Kirk, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £14,000. The testator directs his horse to be destroyed so soon as possible after his decease in the presence of one or more of his executors; and he bequeaths £5000 Consols to the institution known as the Job and Postmasters', Coach Proprietors', Horse-dealers, and Livery Stable-keepers' Provident Fund, and numerous other legacies. As to the residue of his property, real and personal, he gives £50 to the Brixton, Streatham-hill, Herne-hill, and Tulse-hill Dispensary; and subject thereto for the Cancer Hospital, Fulham-roam, and the Hospital for Consumption and Diseases of the Chest, Fulham-road, in equal shares.



The will (dated Nov. 30, 1872) of Miss Mary Windle, late of Stanley Villa, Oxford, who died on July 11 last, has been proved by Miss Sarah Windle, the sister, and sole executrix, to whom she leaves all her real and personal estate absolutely. The personal estate is sworn under £9000. The charitable bequests which have been announced in some of our contemporaries were only given in the event of Miss Sarah Windle, the universal legatee, predeceasing the testatrix; but as this event did not happen, these bequests do not take effect.

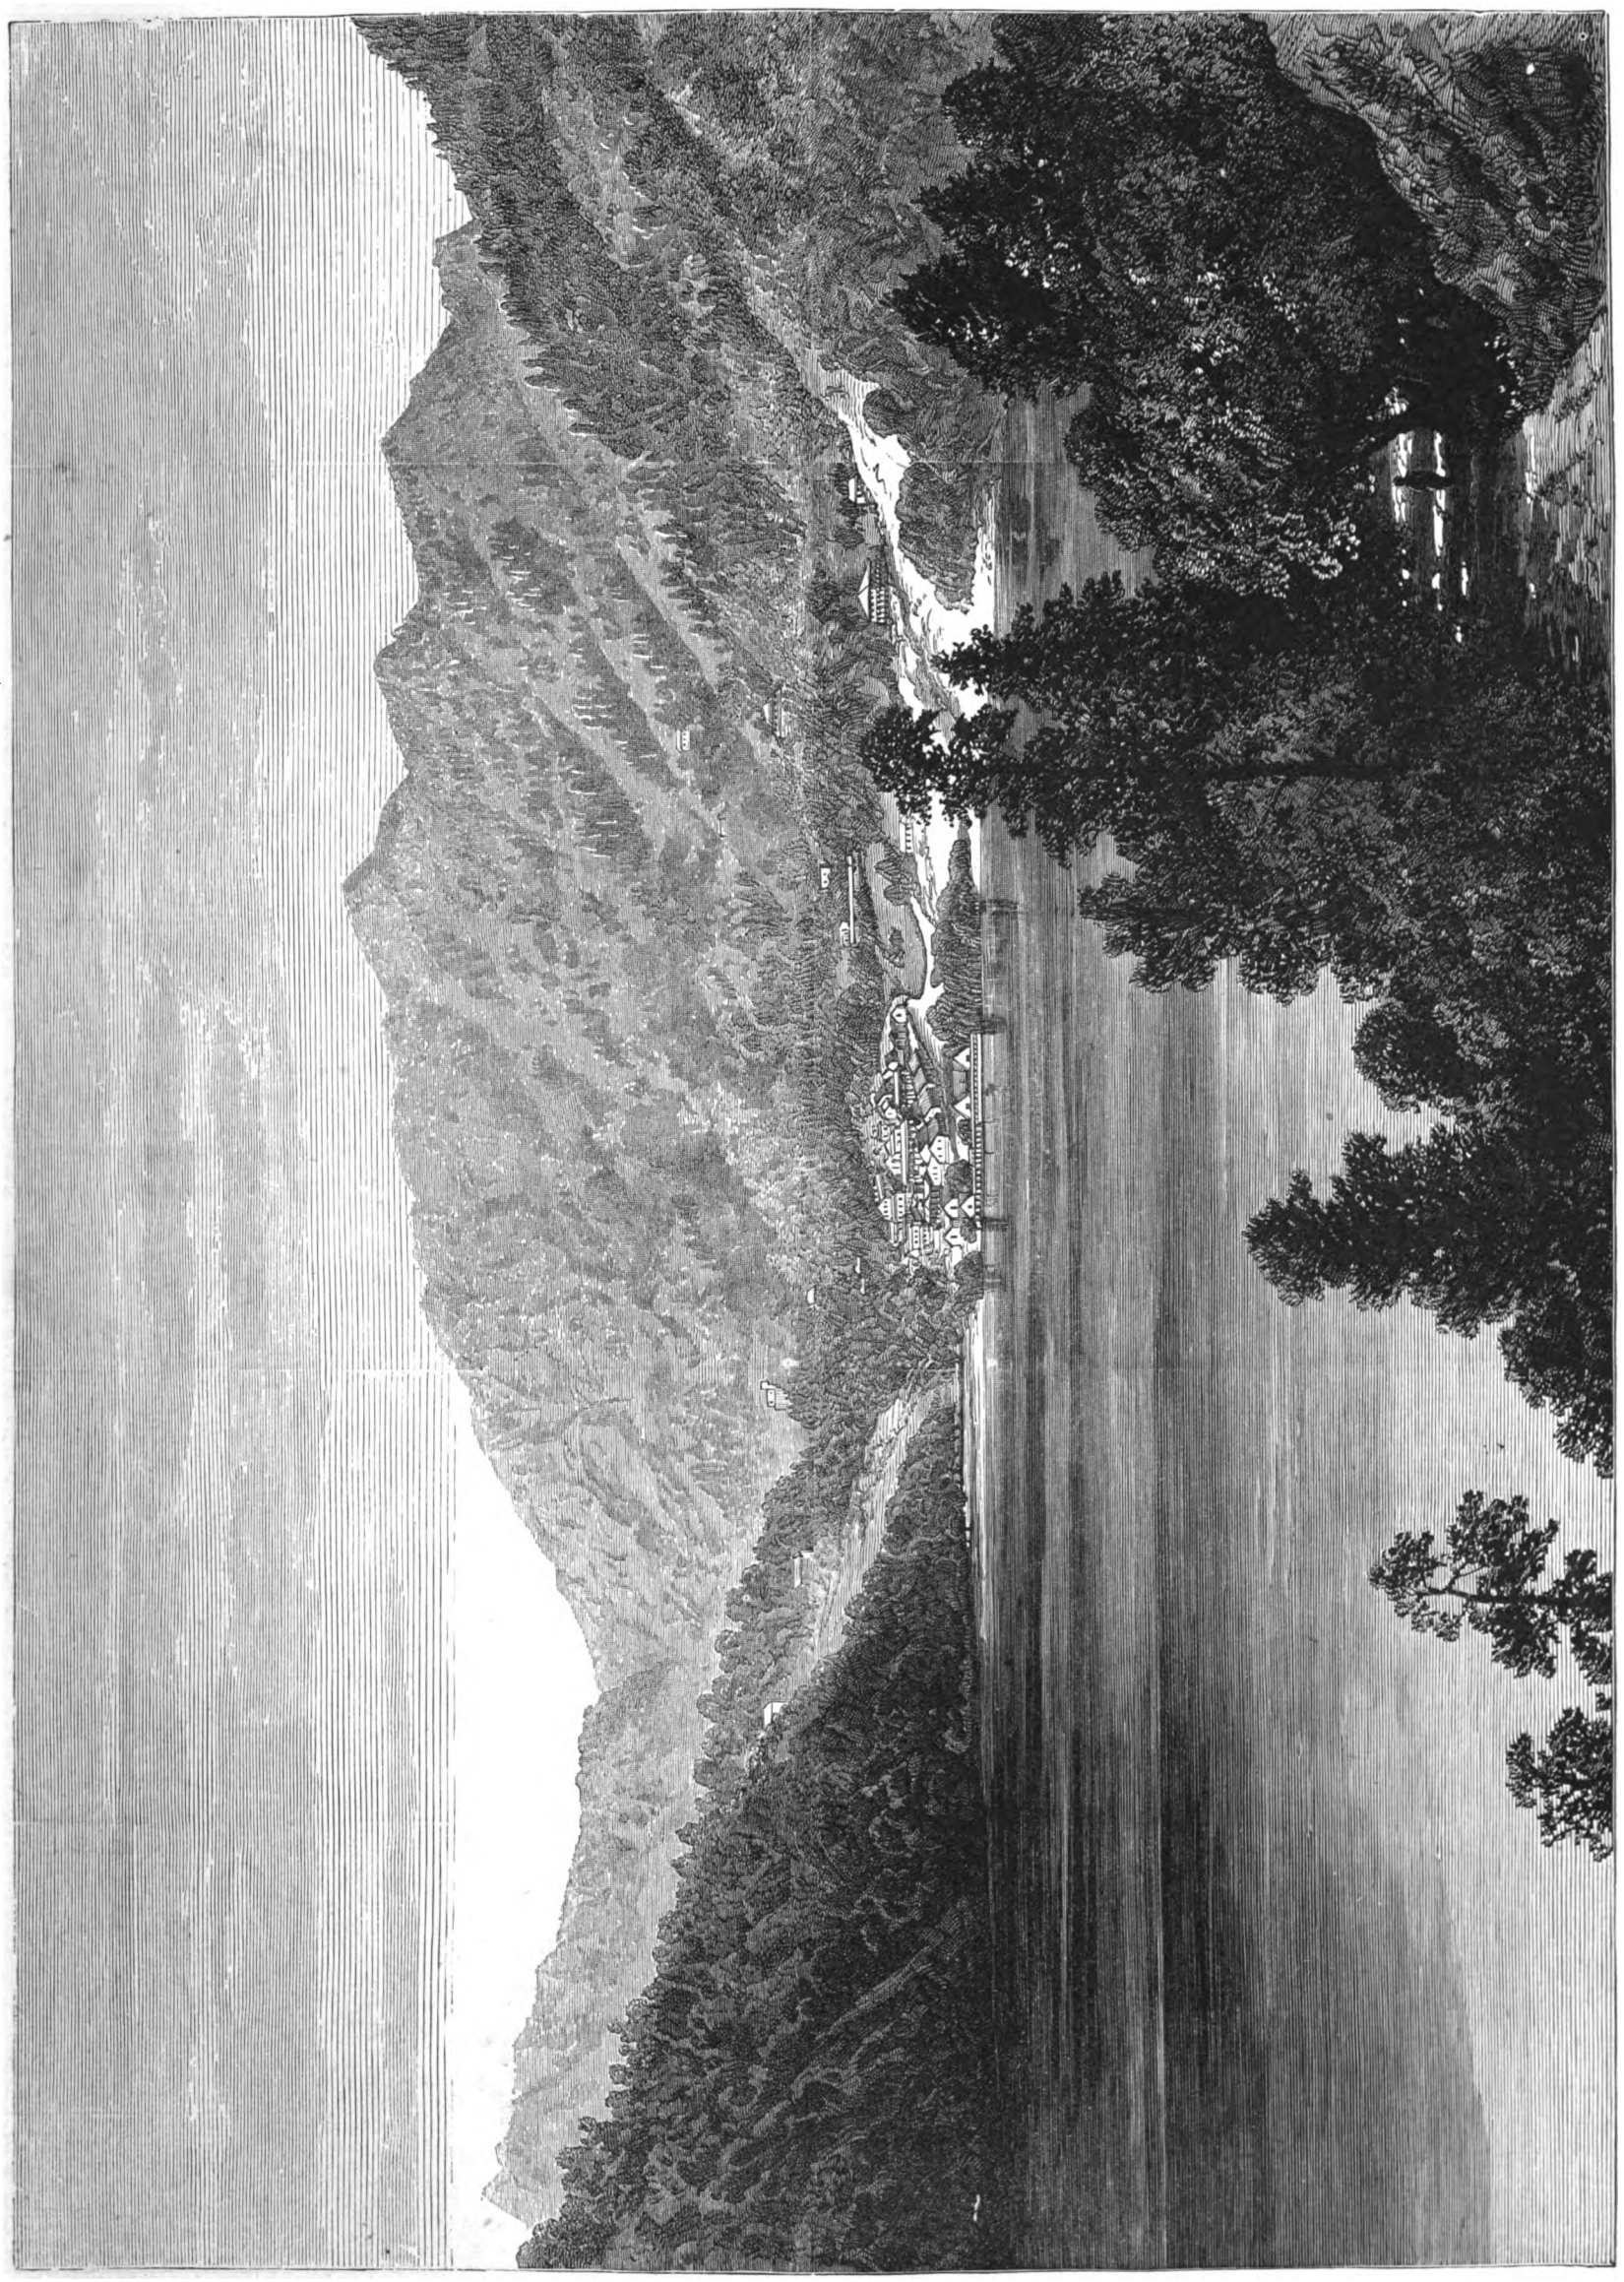
The will (dated Jan. 31, 1877) of the Right Rev. Thomas Brown, D.D., Roman Catholic Bishop, late of Lower Bullingham, near Hereford, who died on April 12 last, was proved on the 2nd ult. by the Right Rev. John Hedley, D.D., the Rev. Peter Lewis, and the Rev. William Williams, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £6000. The testator gives and bequeaths all his freehold, copyhold, leasehold, and personal property to his executors as joint tenants.



A return has been issued, as a Parliamentary paper, of the fees received by the Registrars of Deeds and Wills for the county of Middlesex in 1878 and 1879, the expenses of the office, and the net amount paid to the surviving Registrar and to the Queen's Remembrancer. The present Registrars are Lord Truro and the Queen's Remembrancer, the latter of whom never attends to official duties at the Registry. Lord Truro superintends the office and staff, and attends whenever his services are required. The fees in 1878 amounted to £14,657 0s. 5d., and in 1879 to £15,381 4s., making a total of £30,038 4s. 5d.; the expenses in these years amounted to £10,271 9s. 10d.; leaving £20,766 14s. 7d. to be divided between Lord Truro and the Queen's Remembrancer.

Mr. Paynton Piggott has been elected chief constable of Norfolk, vacant by the resignation of Colonel Black. Mr. Piggott was the deputy chief-constable of the county.

Digitized by Google



SKETCHES IN SCOTLAND: CASTLETON OF BRAEMAR, FROM MORRONE.—SEE PAGE 342.

THE EUROPEAN DEMONSTRATION ON THE ADRIATIC COAST: MAP OF THE ALBANIAN AND MONTENEGRIN FRONTIER.—SEE PAGE 338.

Digitized by Google

THE DISASTROUS LANDSLIP IN INDIA: NAINI TAL: GENERAL VIEW FROM NEAR BUTTRESS CASTLE.

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

REGISTERED AT THE GENERAL POST-OFFICE FOR TRANSMISSION ABROAD.

No. 2158.—VOL. LXXVII. SATURDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1880. WITH TWO SUPPLEMENTS } SIXPENCE. By Post, 6½d.

ENGLISH SPECIAL CORRESPONDENTS GOING TO THE MONTENEGRIN CAMP: A GOOD BIT OF ROAD.—SEE PAGE 350.
FROM A SKETCH BY CAPTAIN J. W. GAMBIER, R.N.

Digitized by Google

BIRTHS.

On the 30th ult., at Holkham, the Countess of Leicester, of a son.

On the 26th ult., at Moor Park, Rickmansworth, the Hon. Mrs. Grosvenor, of a daughter.

On the 30th ult., at Wimbledon, Lady Blomefield, of a daughter.

On the 5th inst., at Egremont Lodge, Ryde, the wife of Hugh Meares, Esq., of a son.

MARRIAGES.

On the 30th ult., at St. John's Church, Deptford, in the county of Kent, by the Rev. Charles Walford, Gustaf Svensson, of the I.M. Customs Service, China, youngest son of Olof Svensson, to Grace Martha Owen, youngest daughter of David Owen.

On the 30th ult., at St. Peter's Church Cranley-gardens, Piers Egerton Warburton, M.P., for Mid-Cheshire, to the Hon. Antoinette Elizabeth Saumarez, daughter of Lord de Saumarez.

DEATHS.

On the 1st inst., at the West Hall, High Leigh, suddenly, the Lady Elizabeth Leigh, the beloved wife of Egerton Leigh, of the West Hall, and Jodrell Hall, Cheshire, and eldest daughter of the Earl of Bantry.

On the 2nd inst., at 40, Marina, St. Leonard's-on-Sea, Philadelphia Laetitia Cotton, daughter of the late Admiral Sir Charles Cotton, Bart., in her 92nd year.

On the 2nd inst., at Florence, Ida, Duchesse de Talleyrand Perigord, aged 80.

On the 4th inst., at the Forest, Walthamstow, Essex, Sophia Harriet, widow of the late Rev. Thomas Legden Ramsden, M.A., and last surviving daughter of the late Lieut.-Gen. Sir Henry Oakes, Bart., aged 73.

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, or Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING OCT. 16.

Sunday, Oct. 10.

Twentieth Sunday after Trinity.
Morning Lessons: Ezek. xxxiv.; Philip. iv. Evening Lessons: Ezek. xxxvii. or Dan. i.; Luke ix. 28—51.
Westminster Abbey, 10 a.m. and 3 p.m.
Savoy, 11.30 a.m., Rev. Henry White, the Chaplain; 7 p.m., Rev. Dr. Stokoe, Head Master of King's College School.
St. Paul's Cathedral, 10.30 a.m., the Bishop of Bedford; 3.15 p.m., Bishop Piers Claughton; 7 p.m., Rev. H. Wace, Preacher of Lincoln's Inn.
Whitehall, 11 a.m. and 3 p.m., Rev. Canon Wordsworth.
Temple Church, 11 a.m., probably Dean Vaughan, the Master; 3 p.m., Rev. A. Ainger, the Reader.

Monday, Oct. 11.

Oxford Michaelmas Term begins.
Moon's first quarter, 0.35 a.m.
Masonic Institution for Boys, general court, noon.
Aristotelean Society, 8 p.m., Dr. Shadworth H. Hodgson on Philosophy in Relation to its History.
International Balloon Contest, Crystal Palace.
Trinity College, London, opening of session; address by the Warden.
Races: Newmarket.
Stratford-on-Avon Poultry and Dog Show (two days).

Tuesday, Oct. 12.

Gresham Lectures, 6 p.m., Dr. Symes Thompson on Physic (and on 13th, 14th, 15th).
West London Scientific Association, 8 p.m.

Wednesday, Oct. 13.

Leeds Triennial Musical Festival (four days), the Duke of Edinburgh, president—11.30 a.m., Mendelssohn's "Elijah"; 7.30 p.m., Barnett's new cantata "The Building of the Ship," Mozart's Symphony in G minor, &c.
Gaelic Society, 8 p.m., Dr. R. Mac-Donald, Short Stories from Skye.
Amateur Mechanical Society, 8 p.m.
Merthyr Tydvil Poultry and Dog Show (two days).
Food Exhibition, Agricultural Hall (till the 20th).
Microscopical Society, 8 p.m.
Hunterian Society, 8 p.m.
Toxophilite Society, Major Lewin's prize.

Thursday, Oct. 14.

Leeds Musical Festival: 11.30 a.m., Beethoven's Choral Symphony, No. 9; Bennett's "May Queen," &c.; 7.30 p.m., Handel's "Samson."
Evangelical Protestant Union, annual conference at Manchester.
Toxophilite Society, autumn handicap.

Friday, Oct.

Leeds Musical Festival, 11.30 a.m., Mr. A. Sullivan's new sacred cantata, "The Martyr of Antioch," Beethoven's Mass in C, Schubert's "Song of Miriam;" 3.30 p.m., organ recital by Dr. Spark; 7.30 p.m., Bach's cantata "O Light Everlasting," Mendelssohn's "Loreley," &c.
City of London College, 6 p.m., Dr. N. Heinemann on Political Economy: Causes of Production.
Prince Alfred of Edinburgh born, 1874.
Society for Propagation of the Gospel, 2 p.m.
New Shakspeare Society, 8 p.m., Mr. Furnivall, Forewords; Dr. Tanger on Editions of Hamlet.
St. James's Institute, Holloway, evening, Professor H. Morley, first of six lectures on the Characteristics of English Literature.

Saturday, Oct. 16.

Leeds Musical Festival: 11.30 a.m., Spohr's "Last Judgment," Haydn's "Creation," parts 1 and 2; 3.30 p.m., Organ Recital by Dr. Spark.
Historical Society: Dr. Zerffi, first of thirty lectures on the Science of General History; South Kensington Museum, 3 p.m.
South London Athletic Club.

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE KEW OBSERVATORY OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY.

Lat. 51° 28′ 6″ N.; Long. 0° 18′ 47″ W. Height above Sea, 34 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF Barometer Corrected.	Temperature of the Air.	Dew Point.	Relative Humidity.	Amount of Cloud.	THERMOM. Maximum read at 10 P.M.	Minimum read at 10 P.M.	WIND. General Direction.	Movement in 24 hours, read at 10 A.M. next morning.	Rain in 24 hours, read at 10 A.M. next morning.
	Inches.	°	°	%	0–10	°	°		Miles.	In.
Sept. 26	30·164	61·0	54·7	81	8	69·8	53·2	WSW. SSW.	48	0·000
27	30·294	64·8	51·5	75	8	72·0	57·2	SSW. SE.	92	0·010
28	30·421	56·3	54·9	95	2	67·8	50·5	SE. ENE.	56	0·005*
29	30·438	53·0	51·0	93	6	61·3	49·4	ENE. NE.		0·005*
30	30·3.2	53·6	43·9	85	6	61·0	45·5	NE. N.	36	0·000
Oct. 1	30·15	55·7	50·3	83	8	64·2	50·6	N. SW.	73	0·005*
2	29·87	50·8	45·6	84	7	57·8	44·5	SW. WSW. NW.	204	0·290

* Dew.  Instrument cleaning.

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, in order, at ten o'clock a.m.:—

Barometer (in inches) corrected ..	30·149	30·281	30·430	30·472	30·384	30·248	29·905
Temperature of Air	62·0	65·2	55·0	55·2	55·3	56·8	60·0
Temperature of Evaporation ..	58·8	59·6	51·1	52·5	51·6	55·0	55·5
Direction of Wind	WSW.	ESE.	SE.	ENE.	NE.	N.	WSW.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE

FOR THE WEEK ENDING OCTOBER 16.

Sunday.		Monday.		Tuesday.		Wednesday.		Thursday.		Friday.		Saturday.
M h m	A h m	M h m	A h m	M h m	A h m	M h m	A h m	M h m	A h m	M h m	A h m	M h m	A h m
5 51	6 5	6 35	7 7	7 47	8 30	9 15	10 0	10 38	11 15	11 45	—	0 10	0 35

ST. JAMES'S HALL, PICCADILLY.
EVERY NIGHT AT EIGHT:
MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS, and SATURDAYS, at Three and Eight, ALL THE YEAR ROUND.
MOORE and BURGESS MINSTRELS, the oldest established and most successful Entertainment in the world, and THE ACKNOWLEDGED SUPREME HEAD OF ALL CONTEMPORARY MINSTREL COMPANIES
on either side of the Atlantic, comprising, "as it has done for more than fifteen years past,"
FORTY ARTISTES OF KNOWN EMINENCE.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—MATINÉE, WEDNESDAY, at Three: Matinee, SATURDAY. Every Evening, at Eight p.m. Extraordinary and unprecedented reception. Positively Last Week of HAVERLY'S AMERICAN UNITED MASTODON MINSTRELS. Forty Famous Performers—Forty. Last Week—Twelve Song and Dance Artists. Last Week—Twelve Champion Clog-Dancers. Last Week—Great End Men; Twelve Banjo Experts; Forty Artists. Great success. DOWN IN A COAL-MINE.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry Irving.—THE CORSICAN BROTHERS Every Night at 8.30—Louis and Fabien dei Franchi, Mr. Irving. At 7.30, BYGONES, by A. W. Pinero. Doors open at 7. Special Morning Performances of THE CORSICAN BROTHERS, Saturdays, OCT. 9, 16, 23, 30, at 2.30. Box Office (Mr. Hurst) open 10 to 5 daily. Seats booked by letter or telegram.

MR. and MRS. GERMAN REED'S ENTERTAINMENT. THE PIRATES' HOME, Mr. Corney Grain's Musical Sketch, THE LONDON SEASON, and A FLYING VISIT. A new First Part, and a new Musical Sketch by Mr. Corney Grain, are in active preparation, and will shortly be produced.—ST. GEORGE'S HALL, Langham-place.

DORÉ'S GREAT WORKS.—"ECCE HOMO" ("Full of divine dignity."—The Times) and "THE ASCENSION;" "CHRIST LEAVING THE PRETORIUM," "CHRIST ENTERING JERUSALEM," with all his other Great Pictures.—DORÉ GALLERY, 35, New Bond-street. Daily, 10 to 6. 1s.

SCIENCE and ART DEPARTMENT of the COMMITTEE of COUNCIL on EDUCATION, SOUTH KENSINGTON. NATIONAL ART TRAINING SCHOOL.
FORTY LECTURES on the HISTORICAL DEVELOPMENT of ORNAMENTAL ART, with special reference to Æsthetics, and the General Courses given during the last two Sessions, will be delivered by Dr. G. G. ZERFFI, F.R.S.L., F.R.Hist.S., in the LECTURE THEATRE of the SOUTH KENSINGTON MUSEUM, during the two Sessions, 1880 and 1881, on TUESDAY EVENINGS, at Eight o'Clock, commencing TUESDAY, OCT. 12, 1880.
The public will be admitted on payment of 10s. for each sessional course of twenty lectures, or 15s. for the complete annual course of forty lectures, or 1s. each lecture.

PROFESSOR TENNANT'S LECTURES on MINERALOGY, applied to GEOLOGY and the ARTS, at King's College. Two Courses are given, one on Saturday Mornings from 10.30 to 11.30, and the other on Thursday Evenings from Eight to Nine. The public are admitted on paying the College fees. The Lectures begin SATURDAY, OCT. 9, and terminate at Easter. They are illustrated by a large series of specimens, chiefly from his private collection. Persons unable to attend Public Lectures can have Private Instruction in Mineralogy and Geology of Professor Tennant at his residence, 149, Strand, W.C. Terms, 7s. for Lesson of one hour.

THE BRIGHTON SEASON.
Frequent Trains from Victoria and London Bridge.
Also Trains in connection from Kensington and Liverpool-street.
Return Tickets, London to Brighton, available for eight days.
Weekly, Fortnightly, and Monthly Tickets, at Cheap Rates.
Available to travel by all Trains between London and Brighton.
Cheap Half-Guinea First Class Day Tickets to Brighton
Every Saturday, from Victoria and London Bridge.
Admitting to the Grand Aquarium and Royal Pavilion.
Cheap First Class Day Tickets to Brighton every Sunday,
From Victoria at 10.45 a.m., and London Bridge at 10.55 a.m.
Pullman Drawing-Room Cars between Victoria and Brighton.
Through Bookings to Brighton from principal stations
On the Railways in the Northern and Midland districts.
A Special Train for Horses, Carriages, and servants,
From Victoria to Brighton, at 11.15 a.m. every Weekday.

GRAND AQUARIUM AND PAVILION.—Military and other Concerts EVERY SATURDAY AFTERNOON, for which the above Saturday Cheap Tickets are available.

NEW ROUTE to WEST BRIGHTON by the DIRECT LINE, PRESTON PARK to CLIFTONVILLE.
A Morning Up and Evening Down Fast Train Every Weekday between London Bridge and West Brighton.

PARIS.—SHORTEST, CHEAPEST ROUTE.—Via NEWHAVEN, DIEPPE, and ROUEN.
CHEAP EXPRESS SERVICE Every Week Night—First, Second, and Third Class.
From Victoria 7.50 p.m., and London Bridge 8.0 p.m.
Fares—Single, 30s., 24s., 17s.; Return, 55s., 39s., 30s.
Powerful Paddle-steamers, with excellent cabins, &c.
Trains run alongside steamers at Newhaven and Dieppe.
SOUTH OF FRANCE, ITALY, SWITZERLAND, &c.—Tourists' Tickets are issued enabling the holder to visit all the principal places of interest.
HAVRE.—Passengers booked through by this route every week night from Victoria and London Bridge as above.
HONFLEUR, TROUVILLE, CAEN, &c.—Passengers booked through from Victoria and London Bridge, via Littlehampton, every Monday and Wednesday.

TICKETS and every information at the Brighton Company's West-End General Office, 28, Regent-circus, Piccadilly; at the Grand Hotel Office, Trafalgar-square; and at the Victoria and London Bridge stations.
(By Order) J. P. KNIGHT, General Manager.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.
LONDON: SATURDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1880.

Not gloom—that is too strong a word—but a hue which may be described as sombre overspreads the firmament of public affairs in this country, and, indeed, all over Europe. Here and there, dark spots threaten mischief if they be not dispersed; but, on the whole, discomfort arises, where discomfort exists, rather from leaden than from stormy skies. There is no laughing sunshine; nothing to exhilarate the spirits of men; and such disasters as occur, physical or political, occurring as they very often do in clusters, take a deeper hold upon the public mind than is usual, chiefly on account of the increased susceptibility which surrounding conditions have produced. People have come home from their holidays less refreshed, owing to their brevity, than commonly has been the case with them. A twinge of wintry weather, an earlier prevalence—in the Metropolis, at least—of fogs, and in the country an absence of that October sparkle and crisp atmosphere for which the month is distinguished have tempered with remarkable sobriety the cheerfulness raised by a good harvest. In politics we are entering upon an uncertain future, in which it is far from impossible that evil may predominate over good; but, as to which, it is not unlikely that apprehensions of national and international disturbances may prove to have been less reasonable than facts would warrant. Nothing around us has yet assumed an aspect which would justify depression; but it must be confessed there is not much that is calculated to incite a brisker will in the public mind.

Since our last issue nothing of obvious importance has transpired affecting the differences that have obtained between the European Powers and the Government of the Sultan. The motives of the Porte and the intrigues by means of which it seeks to evade its Treaty obligations, are perhaps somewhat clearer than they were, and closer acquaintance with them does not tend to raise the credit of Turkish placemen—we can hardly call them statesmen—in the estimation of Europe. There is in them a mixture of cleverness and audacity which, however it may give trouble to the Powers intent upon enforcing the Treaty of Berlin, can only weaken the stability (or perhaps it would be more correct to say augment the instability) of the Ottoman Empire. The Cabinet of her Majesty's Government have met and have again dispersed. It is plain that they have no intention of rushing into war; it is plain, too, that they do not interpret Turkish recalcitration as a fixed element in the problem they have undertaken to solve. They know what it means. They know how it must end, if the concert of the Signatory Powers can be maintained. They can wait, if needs be, until the Sultan and his satellites come to a better mind. But, for the present, their action, so far at least as is visible to the public, is held in suspense, and the only conclusion of which we can be assured is that the influence of England is being employed to do what must be done without running the risk of a general war.

The news from beyond the North-West Frontier of India cannot, all things being considered, be deemed unsatisfactory. Whether the Troops, British or Native, of the Indian Government can be wholly withdrawn from Southern Afghanistan, or whether the city of Candahar is to be temporarily occupied in the interests of order and of a permanently established government, the authorities, even if they have decided the question for themselves, have not yet seen fit to disclose to the public. So far as can be reasonably inferred from the military movements that are taking place, the desire of the Viceroy and his Council is to withdraw from the entire country as soon as may be, and then to bring to a close, without discredit to our arms, but signally to the discomfiture of bygone statesmanship, a chapter of history which should never have been written. Be this, however, as it may, there remains no obtrusive cause for uneasiness in that part of the globe. We wish that so much could be justly said of South African politics; but the spirit of the Cape Government and the attitude of the discontented Native tribes of Basutoland, are such as may well disturb the equanimity of her Majesty's Colonial Secretary.

The darkest trouble, however, is far nearer home. Ireland, not as a whole, but in large sections of her social area, is entering upon one of those periods of spasmodic discontent which, albeit likely to be followed by wise legislation, is, and always have been, characterised by much immediate fear and distress. A kind of terrorism is abroad, threatening now, as it has done before, to cow the holders of landed property. Outrages, both upon property and upon person, are becoming far too frequent, and the administration of the law, with whatever firmness and promptitude, fails to put an end to these agrarian offences. The Land League agitation greatly exasperates the half-ruined tenant farmers and peasantry in all the districts pervaded by agricultural destitution. The state of things closely corresponds with Mr. W. E. Forster's prevision. He did not anticipate anything approaching to an insurrection of the Irish people; but he deemed it possible that, during the coming winter, individual lives and families might be exposed to intolerable dangers. All this we have seen before. Even worse than this has been recorded of certain parts of the Emerald Isle. It is disheartening, no doubt. It is the more so because it is also extremely perplexing. A certain perversity of the popular will has grown up, owing partly, if not mainly, to British misgovernment, which can only be dealt with successfully by slow remedial agencies. There is no panacea for Ireland, any more than there is for any other country. Nothing will speedily extirpate the mischief which has been wrought into her system by successive political blunders spreading over many generations. But justice and the patient and considerate application of really sound measures have done, are doing, and will do, not a little to extricate Ireland from the slough into which she has been thrown. Her time of general prosperity may not be close at hand. But it will be England's fault if it should be deferred to any very remote period in the future. She has not yet paid to her unhappy sister nation the whole debt incurred by her in times that have gone by. She has returned to her, it is true, substantial instalments of it. But it would seem that constantly accruing interest will put to a crucial test her patience, her prejudices, and her sense of equity.

The Lord Lieutenant and Countess Cowper gave a dinner party last Saturday evening at the Viceregal Lodge, Dublin.

Mr. Chamberlain, in his capacity of President of the Board of Trade, is about to pay an official visit to Heligoland.

Lord Norton opened an art-exhibition at Leek, Staffordshire, on Monday. In his address he dwelt on the advantages of art-education to workmen.

The Lord Chancellor has appointed Mr. Kenneth Muir Mackenzie Principal Secretary in his Department, and Mr. Carington Francis Secretary of Commissions.

Major Atkinson, of the 1st Punjaub Cavalry, and Captain Barlow, of the 10th Bengal Cavalry, have been recommended for the Victoria Cross for distinguished gallantry in Afghanistan; and the Victoria Cross has been bestowed on Sergeant (now Lieutenant) Robert George Scott, of the Cape Mounted Rifles, for conspicuous gallantry during an attack on Moirosi's mountain in April, 1879.

It is announced in Tuesday's Gazette that her Majesty has appointed Sir Sandford Freeling to be Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the colony of Trinidad and its dependencies; and Mr. George William Des Vœux, to be Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the colony of Fiji.

Sir Bartle and Lady Frere, with their two daughters, arrived at Southampton on Tuesday night. In reply to an address presented to him approving of his South African policy, his Excellency said he had no misgivings as to the permanent success of a policy which he felt sure would ultimately prove to be founded on the broad principles which her Majesty's Government and the colony desired to be recognised in the administration of South Africa.

Sir Stafford Northcote, M.P., on Thursday week distributed the prizes in connection with the Government Schools of Art and Science at Tiverton. He dwelt upon the impetus which modern progress has given, not only to the development of primary education, but to that of the middle and higher classes.

Digitized by Google

ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

Jingoism, which some fondly hoped to be extinct, has broken out again, but happily in a very mild form. On Monday evening the "Men of London," in response to an agitated summons, met at the Duke of Wellington's Riding School at Knightsbridge to display their indignation at the "un-English policy" of Mr. Gladstone in promoting the European Concert and assembling an international ironclad fleet in Adriatic waters. The Pall Mall Gazette says that the Knightsbridge indignation meeting was "a miserable fiasco." Whether this were the case or not, the perusal of the report of Monday's proceedings in the Riding School has filled me with Hope and Joy. A distinguished anti-Gladstonian, who was one of the speakers at the meeting, made the generous announcement that he intends to offer two prizes of one hundred pounds and fifty pounds for the two best essays on "Liberalism and its Demoralising Effects on the National Religion and Liberties of Europe." I intend to compete for one of those prizes; and I hope that the bigger of the two will be awarded to me.

Yes, I must compete; butcher's meat is fearfully dear; and the kitchen-maid is threatening to resign unless her wages are raised. My bookbinders have all sent in their little bill; and they are all stern men who will brook no delay, and insist on prompt payments (I wish they would not keep my books for so unconscionably long a time when they take them away for binding). But they must be settled with; and I will compete. The demand for local rates will be coming in soon; and I am told that the bell-wires all want "seeing to," and that the cook must positively have a new set of stew-pans. I will compete. Business is bad. The publishers refuse to look at my epic poem (the Siege of Ticonderoga, in Twenty-Four Cantos); the manager of the Hilarity Theatre declines the suggestion to turn my (unjustly still unacted) five-act tragedy into a burlesque extravaganza for Christmas. I have had three acrostics and two conundrums "returned with thanks" lately by the comic papers and altogether things are going muy mal a la casa—as a Spanish beggar once diplomatically put the matter of his impecuniosity to me. I will compete.

I have the subjects, the divisions and the subdivisions, the exordia, arguments, and perorations; the facts, fancies, figures, and fudge of a prize essay "On the Demoralising Effects of Liberalism" at my fingers' ends and my tongue's tip. The Turpitude of Catholic Emancipation; Shocking Tergiversation of the late Sir Robert Peel; Awful Results of the French Revolution of July, 1830: Dreadful Criminality of the Reform Bill of 1832; Pernicious Outcome of the Abolition of the Corn Laws; Widespread Desolation Caused by the Expulsion of the Austrians from Italy; Anarchy at Naples; The Beneficence of Bomba Frustrated by the Guilt of Garibaldi; Ineffaceable National Humiliation due to the Battle of Navarino; Depravity of Town Clerks and Deep-dyed Profligacy of Beadles, arisen solely from the Repeal of the Test and Corporation Acts; Our Splendid Legal System Undermined by the Suppression of the Palace Court, the Reform of Chancery, the Establishment of County Courts, and the Abrogation of Imprisonment for Debt under the writ of capias. A glorious programme! I will proceed to compete forthwith.

That is to say, I will begin my essay on the "Demoralising Effects of Liberalism" (alas! too true! You can form no idea how demoralised I became when the Ballot Act was passed, and the Jews were admitted to Parliament) as soon as ever I have done with the Black Beetles. With those creeping things are bound up a number of really important sanitary questions; and I am heartily glad that the large number of correspondents who have written to me on the subject have taken the question which I put to my good friend Dr. Richardson quite au sérieux, and have replied to it in a practical manner, instead of attempting to turn me and my black beetles into derision. The loud laugh which "proclaims the vacant mind" is never so offensive as when it takes the concrete form of a would-be sarcastic anonymous letter.

A solicitor writing from West Brighton, Cheshire, advises cutting a hole in the floor of the kitchen near the fireplace large enough to contain a moderately sized pie-dish, the rim of which is to rest on the boards. The receptacle is to be half filled with a mixture of beer and water, with a pinch of brown sugar. The beetles go to drink at this dark beer pool, tumble in and are drowned. But, the floor of my kitchen is of stone. Am I to take up an entire flag to form a miniature Black Sea of beer for the beetles to fuddle and drown themselves in? I asked Mrs. Cook if she had ever tried the beer-and-sugar process. "Often," she said. But, the prising up of the stone flooring being inexpedient, she had surrounded her beer beetle-snare with little sticks sloping from the rim of the dish to the ground, serving as inclined planes for the beetles to crawl to their destruction. My thanks to the solicitor at West Brighton.

But my lady correspondent, "Zoë," writing from Dursley, and in a wonderfully well-formed, decided, and legible hand, is even more exhaustive in her communication headed "In re Verminibus." "Get a dozen or more small smooth basins," writes "Zoë," "fill them to about an inch from the top with a mixture composed of half a pint of water and a tablespoonful of beer. At night set these basins close to the kitchen walls or to some wooden erection up which the creatures can climb. They will sometimes be seen hanging by their hind legs as they drink; but if the liquid be too high in the basins, or not strong enough to intoxicate the beetles, they will escape, and give effectual warning to others." The idea of the partially intoxicated blackbeetles serving as "shocking examples" to their yet "undemoralised" or unbeersoddened fellows is certainly diverting; but who shall say that it is not based on a subtle perception of truth?

> I will not ask Jean Jacques Rousseau
> If birds confabulate or no.

writes the poet. That birds do "confabulate" seems tolerably certain; and why should there not be a regular (although to us inscrutable) system of intercommunication between black beetles?

"Zoë" goes on to say that an average of between forty and fifty beetles may be caught each night in one of these beer-basin traps; but that after a week or two, if the plan is not found effectual, the kitchen grate must be taken out, when probably three pints of black beetles' eggs will have to be removed and burned. This observation fills me simply with horror. It is far less the "three pints of black beetles' eggs" that I am thinking of, than the irruption into the kitchen of the Builder and his Men, with the subsequent Ironmonger, culminating in the Plasterer, and indignant threats of legal proceedings for unnecessary disturbance from my next-door neighbours to "cap the climax of my catastrophe."

My correspondent at Dursley fills four whole pages with wise and womanly counsels; but I venture to think that she errs in the expression of her opinion that not before the year 2280 will people be in a position to reduce Dr. Richardson's precepts to practice. "At present," she remarks, "Hygeia is unattainable." Not so—or nearly so. If all British housewives showed as much practical knowledge and commonsense as "Zoë" does, the city of Hygeia might be removed from the region of Utopia to the shores of England (you know how they move cities in the United States, by contract, on the jack-screw system), at a much earlier date than at present we are apt to think.

But those black-beetles. "Have that nice, cheery little fellow the cricket in," writes another sympathising correspondent. The crickets chirp on my hearth all night long; and I believe that the black-beetles waltz to the shrill music even as the ragged children in the slums dance to the strains of the organ ground by the brown alien from sunny Italy. "Try a hedgehog," writes another adviser. I have tried a hedgehog, baked, in Spain; and found his flesh very good eating. I think I will send for one, in view of the black-beetles; but gratitude and prudence will alike prevent my eventually devouring him. Finally, I. D. H. (Middlesbrough) writes me tersely and defiantly. "You are making a stir about a very small matter. I like black-beetles."

Meanwhile my poor dwelling is full of noxious substances in tins and cardboard boxes and paper packages, sent me through the post by commiserating (and advertising) tradesmen. I begin to think that I am Mithridates, who fed on poisons. Mrs. Cook on being consulted on toxicology as applied to black beetles, replied that she had made frequent use of Somebody's Vermin Powder, and that the black beetles "seemed to prosper on it."

After the black beetles, naturally the Juvenile Offenders. We have been treating those unhappy little humans pretty much as though they were vermin for unnumbered years. At the great public meeting at Manchester on Tuesday the two most remarkable speeches were those delivered by the Earl of Derby and Lord Houghton. The latter was one of the earliest movers for legislation with regard to juvenile offenders; but his first attempt to introduce a measure for the establishment of reformatories and industrial schools met with little more acceptance in Parliament than did Wilberforce's first endeavours to persuade the House of Commons seriously to consider the feasibility of abolishing the Slave Trade. Lord Houghton is the president of the admirable Philanthropic Society, whose school—it is the English Mettray—at Red Hill has, I believe, during its long career of usefulness entirely reclaimed and rendered respectable members of society an average of eighty per cent of criminal boys.

Mind, criminal boys—not naughty ones. The merely Naughty Boy—the orchard-despoiling, flower-plucking, window-breaking, stone-throwing, and generally mischievous, turbulent, and troublesome urchin—is a far more important factor in the juvenile offender question than is generally thought. The criminal boy may be, perhaps, by means of wise laws, universal education, and the purification of the dwellings of the poor, gradually weeded out; but how are we to get rid of the "young Turk," the "nineter," the idle, brutal, scampish, disorderly truant? "Flog him!" cry the county justices and the "disciplinarians." But Lord Derby seems to be far from decided in his mind as to the efficacy of corporal punishment in all cases of juvenile delinquency. Flogging may do good, and it may do harm. George Barrington, the notorious pickpocket, who, after his transportation to New South Wales, rose by good conduct to a position of the highest respectability, and eventually (if I remember aright) became a magistrate, was wont to ascribe his first lapse into crime to an exceptionally merciless scourging which he had suffered for some boyish offence at school. His self-respect was shattered by the agony and degradation of the chastisement; and he ran away from school, and "went to the dogs." Fortunately for himself, he ultimately repented, and came back from canine company.

Mem.: An analogous story is related of Johann Buckler, nicknamed "Schinderhannes," the famous Robber of the Rhine, whose career furnished the late Mr. Leitch Ritchie with the groundwork of a stirring romance. An anecdote to the same effect is related of Cartouche, the noted French bandit. Flogging may deter some small offenders; but it may harden others, irrevocably. But where are we to find the Golden Mean? To complicate the question, it often happens that the Naughty Boy—the truant, the apple-pilferer, the window-breaker, the stone-thrower, the performer with the catapult and the pop-gun—is the child of quite respectable parents. Would such respectable parents like to have their boys taken to a police-station to be birched by the gaoler?

At the same time, some of my correspondents are quite angry with me because I last week pointed out that Solomon never said textually "Spare the Rod and Spoil the Child," and tha these precise words are to be found not in the Proverbs, but in "Hudibras;" which is simply the fact. "T. D." expresses an ironical hope that "some considerate old lady has already forwarded me a copy of the Scriptures with the passages marked in which Solomon commends the corporal chastisement of children"—as though the Old Testament were some recondite book which only the "serious classes" habitually studied. I believe that I know three fourths of the thirty-one chapters of the Book of Proverbs by heart; and I have so known them these forty years past. Over and over again, as a boy, was I set to learn by heart a chapter of Proverbs as a penal task. The infliction was, so far as I was concerned, judicious; for I usually "improved the opportunity" by getting by heart, on my own account, a couple of chapters, in addition to the one penally prescribed to me.

The curious circumstance to which I wished to draw attention was this: That probably nine tenths of the excellent persons who are of the same mind with the Wise Man as to severity to children are firmly convinced that Solomon did "somewhere" literally say "Spare the Rod and Spoil the Child," and that they prefer to quote as a proverb the antithetical and alliterative paraphrase of what Solomon did say (Prov. xiii. 24; xxiii. 13; and xxix. 15) by the profane author Butler. How deeply this delusion is rooted in the popular mind is shown in the letter of a correspondent signing himself "Reader," who almost triumphantly quotes some doggerel which, he says, has been familiar to him since childhood:—

> Solomon said, in accents mild,
> Spare the rod, and spoil the child:
> Be he man, or be she maid,
> Whip 'em and wallop 'em, Solomon said.

This doggerel was, if I remember correctly, cited at the Social Science Congress last year, and gave rise to some indignant comments from Miss Lydia Becker. In the versified paraphrase of the lines in Hudibras it is obvious that Butler's meaning has been amplified, and the actual text of Solomon has been even more widely departed from. Solomon's recommendation of chastisement applies solely to sons; and he makes no reference whatever to the correction of daughters. Yet, I have not the slightest doubt that, were I to write on this subject until my hair grew through my hat and my toe-nails grew through my boots, there would be still some hundreds of thousands of people invincibly persuaded that King Solomon did "somewhere" write the exact words, "Spare the Rod and Spoil the Child," and that all the Cruden's Concordances in the world would not induce them to alter their opinion.

Mem.: I am rapidly arriving at the conclusion that (from a business point of view) it is unprofitable and injudicious to tell people what they did not know before. Tell them what they do know, and they feel flattered by a once-familiar thing being recalled to their minds, and think you a very clever fellow. But tell them something they did not know, and that they do not wish to know, and they denounce you as an impertinent. English people like to think that Mrs. Glasse, in her Cookery Book, wrote "First Catch your Hare;" that the story of Casabianca ("The Boy Stood on the Burning Deck") is true; that Charles the Second knighted a sirloin (or rather sur-loin) of beef; and that Queen Elizabeth was eating roast goose when the news of the defeat of the Spanish Armada was brought to her; just as Frenchmen like to believe that Cambronne, at Waterloo, exclaimed "The Guard Dies, but Never Surrenders;" and that the Vengeur went down with her colours nailed to the mast and all hands shouting "Vive la République!"

The recollection of a paragraph which I lately penned concerning "clerical humourists," leads me to read with interest an extract from a Yorkshire contemporary (its name I am, unfortunately, unable to decipher), in which it is stated that Sir George Wombwell has just taken steps to perpetuate the memory of the fact that the author of "Tristram Shandy" lived for a time in Yorkshire. Shandy Hall, where Sterne resided for seven whole years, is a picturesque old house on Sir George's estate at Coxwold; but, hitherto, there has been nothing about its outward appearance to identify it with the erratic genius who gave My Uncle Toby and Corporal Trim, the Widow Wadman and Dr. Slop, the "foolish fat scullion," and the Story of Le Fèvre to enduring English letters. The popular Yorkshire Baronet whom I have named has caused a suitable tablet to be prepared for insertion over the gate of Shandy Hall, with this inscription:—

> Here dwelt
> LAURENCE STERNE,
> Many years Incumbent of Coxwold.
> Here he wrote "Tristram Shandy" and the "Sentimental Journey."
> Died in London, 1768; aged 55 years.

Bravo! Sir George Wombwell. Have we anywhere in England any mural mementoes of Henry Fielding or of Tobias Smollett?

In a lengthy and interesting communication, much too long to print, "A. E." states that the Mr. Walker who exhibited an orrery under the title of the "Eidouranion," was not a Hebrew, and had not a hook nose, and consequently could not have had anything to do with the origin of the slang expression "Hookey Walker." I am not in any way responsible for the Eidouranion Walker story, which is related in Hatton's "Slang Dictionary," p. 335, and is there quoted from "Notes and Queries," IV., 425.

Mem.: "The Music of the Spheres" in Hudibras. A host of correspondents quote "Twelfth Night," Act III., Scene I.,

> I had rather hear you to solicit that
> Than music from the spheres.

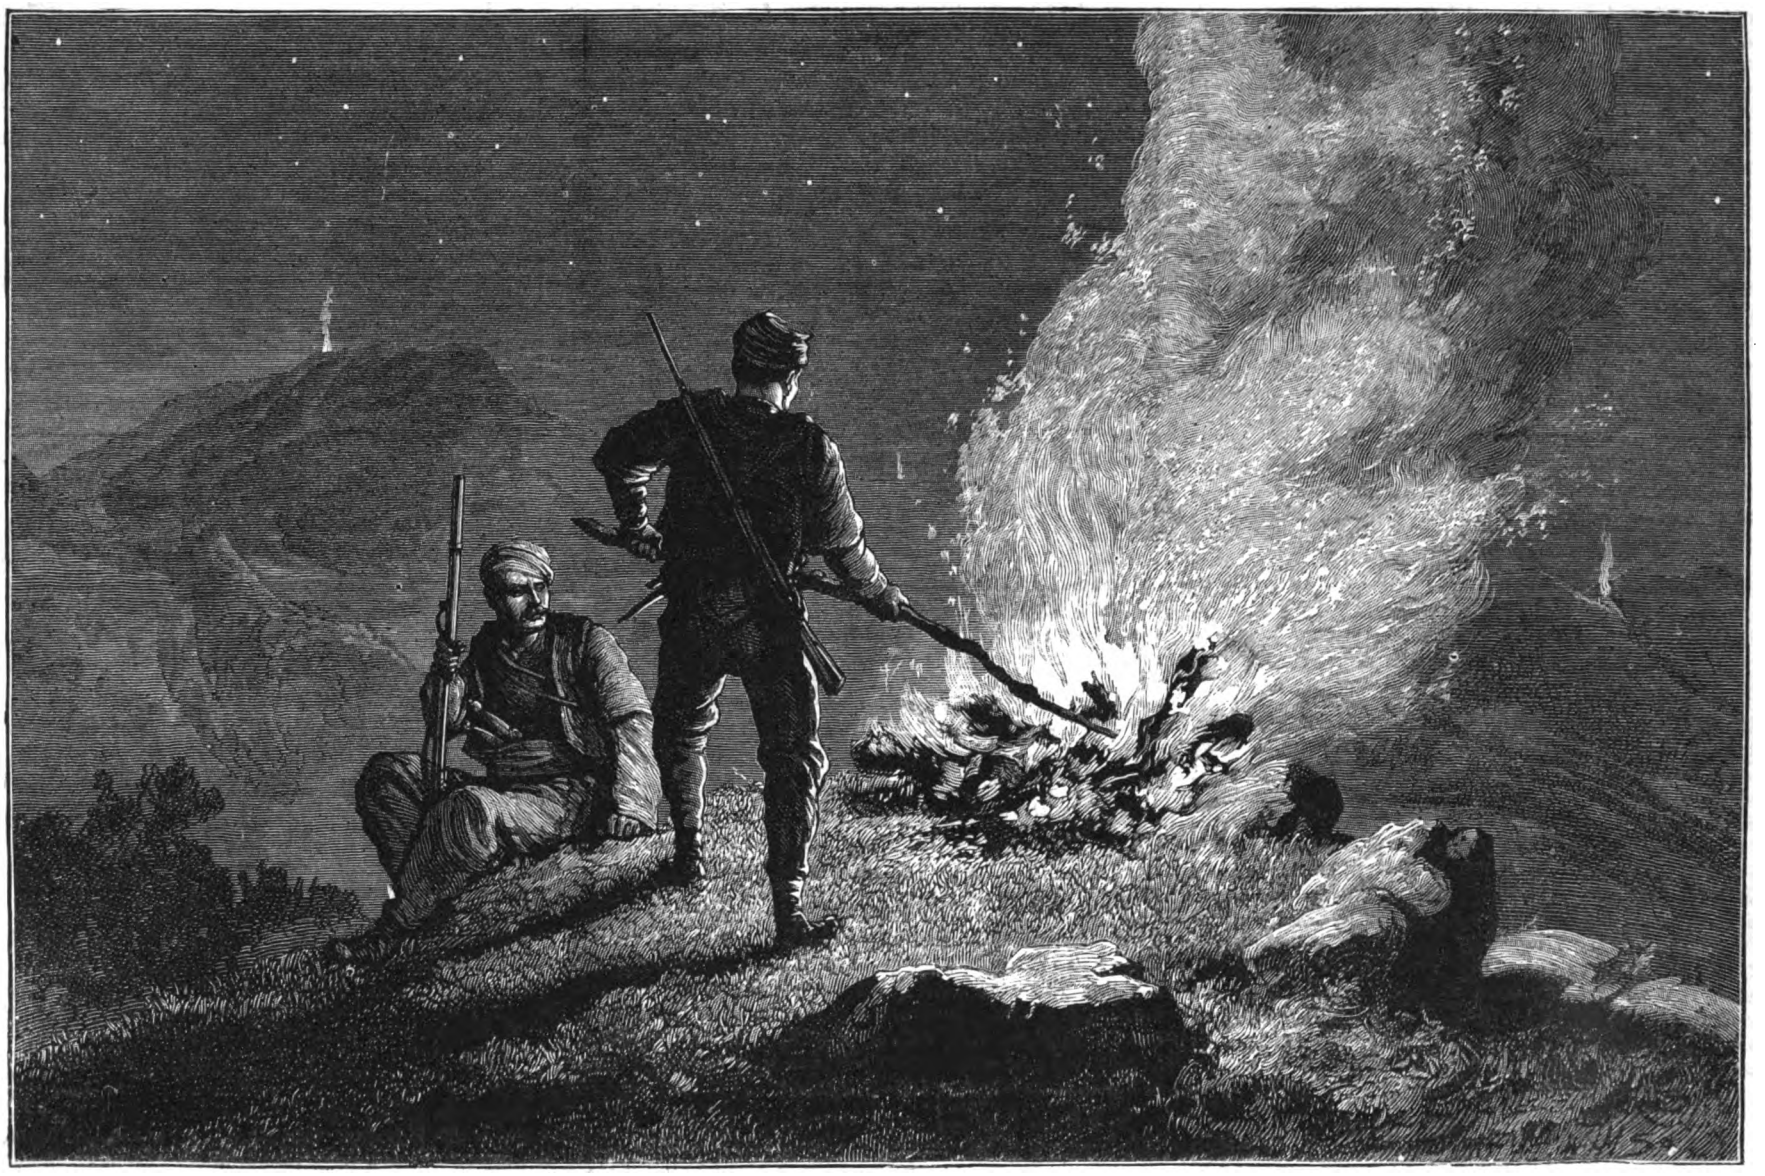
A smaller number of correspondents quote the exquisitely implied but not literal allusion to such music in "The Merchant of Venice," Act V., Scene I. Lorenzo to Jessica:—

> There's not the smallest orb that thou behold'st
> But in his motion like an angel sings,
> Still quiring to the young-eyed cherubins,
> Such harmony is in immortal souls.



It is possible (but not possible to determine conclusively) that Butler, who is entitled to be classed with Bishop Andrews as "a gulf of learning," and who was curiously versed in mathematics and astronomy, took his image of the Music of the Spheres, not from Shakspeare, but from Kepler's "Harmonia Mundi," published in 1619, in which the German Philosopher enlarges on the strange musically-spherical doctrine of Pythagoras.

G. A. S.

Digitized by Google

A SKETCH IN THE MONTENEGRIN CAMP, NEAR ANTIVARI, BY CAPTAIN J. W. GAMBIER, R.N.

SIGNAL FIRES IN THE MOUNTAINS OF MONTENEGRO.—SEE PAGE 350.

Digitized by Google

DULCIGNO, WITH ENCAMPMENT OF TURKISH REGULARS: VIEW FROM THE SOUTH. SKETCHED BY CAPTAIN GAMBIER.

DULCIGNO, FROM THE NORTH. SKETCHED BY CAPTAIN GAMBIER.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

Digitized by Google

PARISIAN SAYINGS AND DOINGS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Paris, Tuesday, Oct. 5.

The movements of the combined squadron of the six Christian Powers in Eastern waters has perhaps been the chief topic of conversation during the week. Last Sunday a meeting was to have taken place at the Cirque Fernando to protest in favour of peace, under the patronage of Citizens Blanqui, Henri Rochefort, and Félix Pyat. This protestation à la façon anglaise against the manifestation against Dulcigno was advocated by all the Republican and Radical Press, with the exception of the Gambettist organs. At the last moment the Government prohibited the meeting on the strength of the Imperial decree of March 25, 1852. It appears that at present, and until the Senate shall have passed the Bill on public meetings already adopted by the Chamber, public political meetings are regulated by the articles of the penal code relative to illegal associations. No explanation was given to the organisers of the meeting for the refusal of the Ministry to authorise it. The indignation of the press is almost unanimous at this subterfuge, and the Ferry Cabinet will not have improved its position in public opinion by having recourse to a decree of the Empire in order to prevent a public meeting in the tenth year of the Republic. Matters were made worse on Sunday by the dissolution of a meeting of the Free-thinkers Society of the twelfth arrondissement. This meeting had been authorised, and Citizen Amouroux was delivering a lecture on the question of the religious congregations. In the course of his remarks, he very naturally referred to the Dulcigno affair and to the prohibition of the meeting de la paix at the Cirque Fernando. Soon afterwards a commissaire de police, wearing his tricolour sash, blustered into the room, and declared the meeting to be dissolved, exactly as under the Empire.

A Cabinet Council was held this morning, but the Ministers had separated before the note of the Porte became known. M. Constans was not present, and consequently no decision was taken with regard to the decrees against the religious orders. It was rumoured on the Boulevards this afternoon that M. Constans had gone to confer with M. Gambetta at the Château of Crêtes. At any rate, he left Toulouse last night, and he was expected to attend the Council this morning.

A considerable time has passed since Beaumarchais said, Les sottises imprimées n'ont d'importance qu' aux lieux où on en gêne le cours. This is an aphorism the truth of which many Governments have undertaken to prove. The Government which France now enjoys is continuing the task, and, thanks to the continual prosecutions and fines to which they are constantly subject, the pornographic journals which inundate the boulevards are being sold by the thousand. Each condemnation is an advertisement, and, thanks to the assiduity of the public prosecutor, one of these indecent sheets can guarantee a circulation of upwards of 120,000. New papers of this sort are coming into existence every week.

Captain Lavergne de Cerval, one of the gentlemen who were dissatisfied with the conduct of the Minister of War towards Captain Matusewicz, whose case I related in my letter last week, has been imprisoned for sixty days by order of General Farre. This punishment will be completed by M. de Cerval being sent before a Conseil d'enquête. The irate Captain carried his indignation and his breach of discipline so far as to write a letter, which was published in the Figaro.

Jacques Offenbach died at four o'clock this morning at his house, 8, Boulevard du Capucines.

It appears that 1240 people, high-born and low-born, celebrated the fête of St. Michael in Paris last Wednesday. In the various banquets an address was passed round and signed. The effect of it was to assure Henri Cinq of the immutable loyalty of his humble subjects, who continue to believe that he alone can give them peace and liberty. In some of the provincial towns, especially in Normandy and Brittany, and in the South, less indifference was shown towards the anniversary of the birth of the Comte de Chambord. Amongst the minor celebrations of the day may be noticed the appearance of a new weekly royalist satirical journal, La Trique.

Jouaust, whose editions are dear to bibliophiles, has just published a volume called le Sottisier de Voltaire, which has hitherto lain hidden in manuscript in the Imperial library at St. Petersburg, being one of the manuscripts of the library of Voltaire, which Catherine II. bought of Madame Denis, through the intermediary of Grimm. It is a common-place book of things heard and noted, of rapid reflections, bons mots such as delighted the people of the eighteenth century.

Mdlle. Theresa, the famous singer of the days of the Empire, was admitted member of the Caveau last Friday. The Caveau is a society which meets at dinner once a month, whose members write and sing songs. The society traces its origin back to 1737, when the original Caveau was founded by Collé, Piron, Crébillon the younger, who presented David Garrick and, I believe, Sterne and John Wilkes. Hitherto no woman, except Virginie Dejazet, was ever admitted to the Caveau. Dejazet was admitted on the very thin pretext that she was not a human being. "Ce n'est pas un homme," said her sponsor; "c'est un diable." Théresa was admitted on the ground that she was the incarnation of the chanson, which is the exclusive cult of the members of the Caveau.

On Saturday night the Gymnase Theatre reopened under the new management of M. Koning, the manager of the Renaissance. The theatre has been repaired and redecorated, and the only objection that can now be found against it is that the spectators are rather cramped. The opening pieces were "Nina la Tueuse," which was only a pretext for allowing the public to review the actresses of the company, and a revival of Sardou's "Papillonne," which failed so ignominiously at the Théâtre Français in 1862. Curiously enough, in spite of the utter improbability of the plot and situations, the revival proved a decided success, thanks to the admirable acting.

Great preparations are being made at the Théâtre Français for the celebration of the two-hundredth anniversary of the foundation of the theatre. Special performances are to be given during a whole week, beginning with the "Impromptu de Versailles" and ending with a splendid revival of the "Bourgeois Gentilhomme," with the ballet and full Turkish ceremony.

Augier, Dumas, and Sardou are all at work on pieces for the Comédie Française. Augier will probably be ready first. He is finishing a piece in collaboration with M. Foussier, called "Les Deux Marriages." The principal rôle of which is intended for Mdlle. Croizette.

The State has bought for 63,000f. a picture of Ribeira representing an episode of the Spanish war in Franche-Comté. This picture was discovered in the apartment of an old lady at Batignolles, who did not know its value.

On Saturday night a fire broke out in the Pavillon de Flore in the Tuileries, in the apartment occupied by the Préfect of the Seine. Much damage was done, but the artistic parts of the building were not damaged.

Since the prohibition of the peace meeting the Cabinet has acquired yet another nickname. It is called the gag Ministry—Ministère du bâillon.

T. C.

THE MONTENEGRINS AND DULCIGNO.

There have been no active military or naval operations, as yet, for the purpose of putting the Montenegrins in possession of this little seaport town on the Adriatic coast, which the Albanians, probably relying on the Turks for support, hitherto refuse to surrender. The combined squadrons of the six European Powers have moved from Gravosa down to the Bocche di Cattaro, only forty miles distant from Dulcigno, and close to the mountain village of Cettinje, which is the capital of the Principality of Montenegro. But the Montenegrin army, under comuand of Bozo Petrovitch, cousin to Prince Nicholas or Nikita, is still encamped at Suttorman, on the hill-sides above Antivari, and it is doubtful whether it can be made strong enough to advance upon Dulcigno with a tolerable chance of success.

We are indebted again to Captain J. W. Gambier, the Times correspondent, for several opportune Sketches, the first of which serves to illustrate the rough travelling in that country; for this specimen is to be deemed a comparatively "good bit of road," and the bad bits are left to our imagination. Four English travellers—namely, Captain Sale, R.E., of the late International Frontier Commission, with Lieutenant Caillard, R.E., Captain Gambier, and Mr. Arthur Evans, author of two instructive books concerning Bosnia and Herzegovina, and of other writings upon Illyrian matters, are riding together up this stony path to the head-quarters of General Bozo Petrovitch. It is to be hoped that their horses' feet are sure and sound, but riding up must be less dangerous than riding down again. The next Illustration to which we would refer is that of the lighting of signal fires on the mountains along the frontier of Tchernagora; an ordinary accompaniment of Border warfare. Captain Gambier's Sketch in the Montenegrin encampment shows the laborious female relatives of those highland warriors, bringing loads of firewood and provisions to supply the lack of home comforts, while their temporary lodging is provided for by the rude huts they have erected in the hill-side forest. A second view of Antivari, which was the subject of one of our Illustrations last week, and two different views of Dulcigno, from opposite sides, are furnished also by Captain Gambier. Some description of both these decayed and half-ruined little towns, which are of Venetian foundation, but are now chiefly inhabited by Mussulman Albanians, has already been given to our readers. They were besieged and stormed by the Montenegrin army three years ago. Dulcigno was held more than a twelvemonth by the Montenegrins, during which time most of the leading Mohammedan townsmen went into exile. It was relinquished by Prince Nikita in accordance with the original scheme of territorial settlement devised by the Congress at Berlin. As it was then to be restored to Albania, and to remain part of the Turkish Empire, its former Mussulman inhabitants did not hesitate to return to their homes and property. Now, as we see, they are unexpectedly called upon, by the more recent arrangements of the Conference this summer, to become subjects of Montenegro, and they refuse to give up their town, relying on the assistance of the Albanian League at Scutari, with the tacit connivance of the Sultan's Government.

The number of Albanians at and near Dulcigno is estimated by one authority at 4000, all armed with breech-loading rifles, under Youssuf Socovitch; and the total number of Ottoman troops at 6000. The disposition of the Turkish forces is as follows:—One battalion and eight guns at Goritza; one battalion at Bjelara; one battalion distributed along the Boyana river; one in detachments between the Boyana, Dulcigno, and Scutari; whilst on the seaboard there are twelve battalions, and on the other side of Lake Scutari there are large masses of troops. At Scutari, there are three batteries of artillery, and fresh stores of rifles and cartridges have arrived.

Montenegro does not intend to provoke war with Turkey, and relies on united Europe, and with special confidence on England. Six thousand Montenegrins, with six guns, are concentrated between Antivari and Lake Scutari, under Bozo Petrovitch's leadership, and 4000 men, with a few guns, stand near Podgoritza, under Urbiza's command, to watch Hodo Bey's Albanian troops. Together they form exactly one half of the army on full war footing. The other half could not be called together for want of provisions or money.

THE TURKISH NOTE.

The Turkish Note, which was presented to the Ambassadors of the Great Powers at Constantinople on Monday, is of unusual length, and covers the whole ground of the controversy between the Porte and the European Powers. It begins with a review and recapitulation of the proposals made by the Turkish Government in its former Note, and re-states in substance the reply made by the Ambassadors in rejecting those conditions. The Note then speaks of the Naval Demonstration and of the preparations which the combined fleets of the Great Powers are making on the Albanian coast. These preparations are ostensibly confined to action for the purpose of securing the delivery of Dulcigno to Montenegro. But the Note goes on to urge there are grounds for supposing that similar demonstrations by the combined squadrons might be made for the purpose of bringing to a settlement the other points in dispute between Turkey and the Powers. The Note mentions specifically the questions of the Greek frontier, the projected reforms in Armenia, the service of the public debt, and the payment of the indemnity due to Russia. With a view to obviating the necessity of such demonstrations of force on these subjects, the Note undertakes to state one by one, and in detail, the measures which the Porte will be prepared to adopt with regard to them.

First, with respect to Dulcigno, the Porte demands from the Powers the assurance, which it asked for in its last Note, and which were then refused, pledging the Powers to abandon all naval demonstrations on all questions present or future. On these assurances being given, the Imperial authorities will use all the means of persuasion which are in their power to induce the population of the district to be ceded, either to emigrate or to submit to the transfer. If they should fail in their effort to bring about this peaceful acquiescence, the Turkish troops, with the local authorities, will withdraw to the frontier. Having done this, the Imperial Government will not, the Note goes on to declare, hold itself responsible for such complications as may subsequently arise.

In the second place, the Note speaks of the question of the Greek frontier. The Porte renews the expression of its determination not to surrender the four places, the cession of which it had already refused. Instead of the boundary settled by the Berlin Conference, it proposes a line of frontier starting north of Volo on the east, running south of Larissa, Metzovo, and Janina, and then following the course of the Arta to the sea. The Porte undertakes to cede the territory comprised within this line to Greece within a hundred days, on the same conditions as those which it lays down for the surrender of the Dulcigno district.

The Note then speaks of the proposals which the Porte had before made with regard to reforms in Armenia, repeating them at considerable length. With respect to the service of the public debt, it offers to enter into negotiations with the representatives of the creditors, but declines to allow, in this matter also, of any intervention on the part of the Powers. It further demands, in fulfilment of the Berlin Treaty, the demolition of the Danubian fortresses, and insists upon the exercise by the Ottoman troops of the right to occupy the Balkans.

THE RECESS.

What next, and next? Turkey's unyielding reply to the joint message of the Allied Powers rendered another Cabinet Council in Downing-street inevitable. The prolonged Ministerial sitting of Sept. 30, attended by every Cabinet Minister save Lord Spencer, who could not return from the Continent in time, was succeeded by consultations between the Prime Minister and his colleagues. Mindful, perhaps, of the insalubrious reputation of his official residence—probably the humblest abode offered by any European Power to its First Minister—the Premier spent the Sunday with Earl Granville and Lord Northbrooke at the Dorking seat of the Hon. Leveson Gower. On Monday Mr. Gladstone held an informal Council in Downing-street; and the Foreign Secretary received Count Münster, Prince Lobanoff, and M. Challemel-Lacour, with Count Menabrea, at the Foreign Office. A telegraphic summary of the Sublime Porte's answer is supposed to have been under consideration. Be that as it may, several of her Majesty's Ministers were freed for the time being from all except departmental cares.

The Marquis of Hartington left for Balmoral, and arrived there on Monday evening in time to dine with the Queen, remaining as Minister in attendance upon her Majesty. Mr. Forster returned to Dublin and to a sea of Irish troubles. As for the youngest member of the Cabinet, Mr. Chamberlain, he got on his sea legs, and set sail in the Trinity yacht Vestal to resume his inspection of the lighthouses on the east coast. And the rumour goes that the waves paid scant respect to the President of the Board of Trade, sending him ashore with a complexion far from ruddy. Birmingham will make amends. On the 26th inst. the City of which Mr. Chamberlain is one of the shining lights will present him with an address of congratulation on his accession to a Ministerial office.

The "Man in the Moon," sometimes assuming the prosaic name of "Pegler," otherwise known as "Charles Matthews," has been a familiar personage on the scene during the past week. It appears beyond a doubt that he still deigns to haunt this sublunary sphere, his favourite mode of descent being amid a shower of gold, and the time and place being at the height of an election contest in a warm borough. At Oxford, to wit, on Monday, Mr. Walsh, the Conservative agent, owned before the Election Commissioners to the soft impeachment that £3000 was sent down from London in a tin box in charge of this Mr. Matthews, and that a portion went to defray illegal expenses. Various other curious electioneering secrets were divulged at Oxford by Mr. Walsh on Tuesday. The same day, Mr. Butler-Johnstone, rather severely examined by the President on one or two points, permitted the public to see behind the scenes at Canterbury Election by relating his political experience therewith from 1862 to the present year. Tuesday was likewise the opening day of the Sandwich inquiry; and flags, banners, ribbons, and committee-rooms were made answerable for a vast expenditure of the coin of the realm. The frank admissions of Mr. George Godwin, who had apparently renounced the silk trade for electioneering, occasioned much merriment at Macclesfield on Tuesday, the adroitness of Mr. Merewether's leading questions bringing about the majority of the candid answers. Without referring to the Knaresborough inquiry, which is also proceeding, we may remark that in all the boroughs whose election manners and customs are being searchingly investigated, the wire-pullers of both political parties have exhibited remarkable elasticity of conscience in lavishly expending money for purposes of bribery.

The movement in favour of holding public meetings to protest against the coercion of Turkey cannot be said to prosper. It was not inappropriate to hold the first of these meetings on Monday in the Wellington Riding School, Knightsbridge. That was the scene of the banquet given to Lord Beaconsfield and the Marquis of Salisbury when their Lordships brought back "Peace with Honour" from the Berlin Conference. It is to carry into effect the recommendations of the Berlin Treaty and Protocol that the Great Powers have sent the Allied Fleet to the Adriatic. But neither Colonel Malleson, C.S.I., who presided at the meeting, nor Sir Henry Drummond Wolff, who sent a letter supporting the objects of the gathering, deemed it politic to present this, the Ministerial, view of the crisis.

Sir William Harcourt has not yet relaxed his hold of the question of juvenile offenders. The Home Secretary has addressed another letter to the Mayor of Manchester on the subject; and, the communication having been published verbatim in the Times of the 1st inst., the just and considerate advice of Sir William Harcourt will, doubtless, be well weighed and acted upon in other quarters. The Earl of Derby, speaking on the question in the Manchester Townhall on Tuesday, threw the weight of his influential experience into the scale in support of the Home Secretary's official recommendations, and moved a humane resolution antagonistic to sending youthful offenders to gaol.

The usual file-firing has been practised by some of our legislators, and their scores have been fully recorded in what is rather incongruously called "Parliament Out of Session." No particular hit has been made by Sir Stafford Northcote in his pleasant social discourses in Devonshire; nor can the Marquis of Bath be fairly said to have distinguished himself at the Frome Agricultural Society. If Mr. Gladstone contemplates creating a separate Minister of Education, Sir Charles Reed proved himself a capable candidate for the office by his lucid review of the ten-years' work done by the London School Board. Norwich may with reason consider itself not much the wiser for the oracular deliverances of its members. Alighting for the nonce from his Eastern hobby, Sir Drummond Wolff on Monday favoured his Portsmouth friends with an after-dinner speech on home affairs. Mr. Bradlaugh has been emphatically demanding a reform of the Land Laws in Glasgow. Mr Parnell was equally emphatic at Kilkenny on Saturday, and at Cork on Sunday, in calling for a peasant proprietary in Ireland. A widely different class of member, Mr. Walter, on Tuesday evening resumed his favourite rôle of a country squire; and a congenial audience in Maidenhead, belonging to the Royal East Berks Agricultural Association, listened approvingly to his amiable post-prandial utterances in replying to the toast of "The County Members."

Mr. Cowen, M.P., on Thursday week unveiled a monument which has been erected by public subscription in Elswick Cemetery, Newcastle-on-Tyne, to the memory of Mr. Charles Larkin, a northern orator and reformer. Mr. Cowen made an eloquent speech on the oratory of the period in which Mr. Larkin's public life was passed.

Digitized by Google

THE PLAYHOUSES.

This has been an extremely busy week in the world theatrical, and next week promises to be even a busier one. On Tuesday I went to the Royalty to see Mr. H. J. Byron's new and original three-act comic drama entitled "Bow Bells." It was very enthusiastically received. Of the originality of Mr. Byron's latest production there cannot be the remotest doubt; and, although the idea which underlies the plot of a cockney retiring into the country in the hopes of finding rural peace, simplicity, and innocence, and discovering that such qualities as vice, fraud, and imposture are to be found in rustic regions quite as frequently as they may be found in a great city, has been more than once dramatically treated, Mr. Byron's plot, incidents, "situations," characters, and dialogue are all unmistakably his own. Stay; there is one character in "Bow Bells"—the intoxicated butler, Boozer—who is not for a dramatic age, but for all time. No playwright can claim copyright in him; and all the drunken butlers on the stage—their name is legion—own a common progenitor in Trinculo. In truth, I have been severely taxing my memory in the effort to remember whether I have ever seen a sober butler behind the footlights. I have seen, it is true, a good many in real life.

"Bow Bells" is something less than a comedy and something more than a farce in three acts; therefore its experienced author acted wisely in calling it a "comic drama." There is, indeed, some stirring melodramatic interest towards the conclusion of the third act, when a pseudo "Captain Basil Bagot," late of "the Mexican Cavalry," is exposed and denounced as one Brandon, an absconding debtor, a forger, and a swindler. But Mr. Byron, apparently, did not deem it worth his while to give a symmetrical finish to the dramatic construction of his play. He is content to bring the comic and sentimental side of the play to a happy conclusion by uniting two temporarily estranged pairs of sweethearts, and by rescuing Mr. Geoffrey Twinklehorn, the retired City man, who has sought rural felicity in the swampy region of Sloshington-le-Willows from the matrimonial clutches of a certain Mrs. Percival, the sister of the sham Captain Basil Bagot, and who has already a husband of her own. But the detective, forger, and swindler is not punished; and is allowed to light his cigarette and lounge jauntily in an arm-chair until the fall of the curtain. Perhaps Mr. Byron felt reluctant to bring in the hackneyed detective, who produces the conventional warrant and handcuffs and takes off the outlaw to gaol. That detective has been brought on the stage, in Act the Last, Scene the Last, positively to the nauseating degree of frequency. But there is another way. The detected swindler can always be kicked down stairs. That is the American fashion. I have witnessed the performance of several dramas of Transatlantic extraction during the last few months, and nearly every one of them has ended by the kicking down stairs of the exposed and baffled villain.

Mr. Edward Righton, who made his first appearance since his recent severe accident, was very droll as the kind-hearted but obstinate vulgarian, Twinklehorn. One or two little touches of pathos, which mark the character towards the end, were rendered with great delicacy. Mr. Twinklehorn is presented to us as an amusingly vulgar man, who plays strangely fantastic tricks with the Queen's English, and indulges us in several wonderful "derangements of epitaphs;" but in Mr. Edward Righton's hands he is not coarsely vulgar; and his diverting grammatical solecisms contrast very artistically with the gross illiterateness of the inebriated butler, Boozer, played (and very well played) in an unmitigated style of broad farce by Mr. T. P. Haynes. The light-comedian hero, Dick Sycamore, was rendered in an easy and gentleman-like manner by Mr. Frank Cooper; and "Charles his Friend"—I mean Fred. Latham—was vigorously impersonated (it falls to Fred's lot to unmask and denounce the villain) by Mr. H. Kelsey. Effie and Bessie, Mr. Twinklehorn's two pretty nieces, were capitally played by Miss Kate Lawler and Miss Emma Ritta. The latter, as an amiable ingénue, has not much to do beyond looking graceful and saying neat things upon occasion; but Miss Kate Lawler has a much stronger part, and in the scenes of her quarrels with and her reconciliation to Dick Sycamore exhibited considerable dramatic power. Miss Maggie Brennan's Mrs. Percival, the intriguing pseudo widow, was a finished study of character, most sparkling and yet most refined. Mr. Philip Day was highly entertaining as the sham Captain of Mexican cavalry, and his by-play was especially good; but, for some reason or another, he chose to vary the lower notes of his voice with a high falsetto—so high that it occasionally rose to the shrillness of a screech, and split the ears of the groundlings. Nor surely was there any need for Mr. Francis Wyatt, as the indolent and insolent gardener Sloggs, to "make up" in the guise of a wife-kicking rough from the mining districts. "Bow Bells" was preceded by an agreeable trifle called "Wild Flowers," and was followed by a droll piece of lyrical absurdity entitled "Popsy Wopsy," by Mr. Sydney Grundy and Mr. Edward Solomon. This "New and Original Musical Folly" afforded ample scope for the versatility of Mr. Edward Righton, Miss Maggie Brennan, Miss F. Lavender, and Miss Kate Lawler.

To the Folly on Saturday afternoon to see "Dot," Mr. Boucicault's dramatised version of Charles Dickens's "Cricket on the Hearth." The pretty little house in King William-street was crowded. "Dot" was preceded by poor J. B. Buckstone's good old farce (from the French) of "A Kiss in the Dark," in which Mr. E. W. Garden played with great aplomb the part of Pettibone; and Miss Roland Phillips was very good indeed as Mrs. Pettibone. I confess that I was somewhat nervous as to what I should think, or the Folly audience might think, of "Dot." Thirty years have passed since I first saw the dramatisation of Dickens's Christmas book at the Theatre Royal, Brighton. Popular manners and popular feeling have changed a good deal since then. The Dickensonian chord of sentiment has been harped upon until it has fallen somewhat out of tune; and, as the Bishop of Manchester told his hearers at the meeting on the juvenile offenders question on Tuesday, this age has grown to be a hard, a selfish, and an impatient one. 'Twas the prevailing sentimental element in "Dot" that troubled me; for "Dot" without its sentimentality is nothing. It came out all right, however. Nobody seemed to think Mr. Billington's alternate humour and pathos in the part of John Peerybingle, the carrier, overstrained; Miss Lilian Cavalier's wifely tenderness and submissiveness in "Dot" and her tasteful singing of "Auld Robin Gray" were warmly appreciated; and Miss Effie Liston as Bertha Plummer, the blind girl, won all hearts. Miss Emily Thorne made the character of Mrs. Fielding stand out in conspicuous and artistic relief; in Tilly Slowboy Miss Eliza Johnstone achieved a real triumph. She was intensely and consistently comic; but she was never either in speech or gesture outrée; and, in particular, her song at the Christmas party in the second act should be marked with a white stone in the chronicles of well meant but dolorous imitations. Mr. Toole's most pathetic, yet, in parts, most mirth-moving impersonation of the meek-spirited and compassionate drudge of that abominable old toy-dealing drudge Tackleton (played with appreciative repulsiveness by Mr. G. Shelton) was the Caleb Plummer of Charles Dickens, pure and simple. A young playgoer from America or from Australia, who had looked in at the Folly some evening to shake with laughter at Mr. Toole's waggeries in "The Upper Crust," might be astounded to mark the much higher things, in the dramatic art, Mr. Toole shows himself to be as capable of in Caleb Plummer, which he has made a cabinet picture, painted, "in the Dutch manner," in loyal but not servile fidelity to the illustrious original in the "Cricket on the Hearth." Quietly and equably sustained, without a scintilla of the mawkish in sentiment, or of stage trickery or clap-trap, Mr. Toole's Caleb Plummer is throughout the delineation of a master of his good and ennobling art.

Away from the Folly that self-same afternoon to the Imperial (late Aquarium) to see Mr. Robert Reece's entirely new version of his burlesque, produced some time since at the Mirror Theatre, of "The Half-Crown Diamonds." Mr. Reece's extravaganza was greeted throughout with uproarious laughter and applause. It is, in truth, a very amusing piece of buffoonery, in parts very graceful, owing to the capital dancing of Miss Nelly Farren, Miss Kate Vaughan, and Miss C. Gilchrist; in other parts intolerably vulgar and slangy. If the British public were more familiar with Auber's delightful comic opera of "Les Diamants de la Couronne," of which an English version was first produced at the old Princess's some seven-and-thirty years ago, with the famous Anna Thillon in the principal rôle, and which many years afterwards was brought out during the Pyne and Harrison management at Covent Garden, with Miss Louisa Pyne as Caterina. Mr. Reece's drollery at the Imperial might not be, as regards its plot, altogether caviar to the general; but the plot in question is normally obscure, and, even in the original Opéra Comique, I could never make out with entire satisfaction to my mind why the Queen of Portugal should have misappropriated her own Crown Diamonds. In the "Half-Crown Diamonds," Miss Nellie Farren (who was superbly and most gracefully attired) sustained with inimitable archness and frolicsome abandon the part of that dashing young caballero Don Henriquez; Miss Kate Vaughan acted, sang, and danced with much refinement as the queenly Caterina (the Queen of Spain, according to the proverb, has no legs, but Miss Kate Vaughan proved to an admiring audience that a Queen of Portugal may have very neat ankles); and Miss C. Gilchrist was a paragon of pages in pink satin, and danced with her accustomed nimbleness. Mr. E. W. Royce's Ribolledo was an extravagantly comic caricature of a Brick-lane gauffer, combined with a Whitechapel costermonger, transplanted to Lusitanian soil. In his first incarnation as a coiner and contrabandista, and his subsequent disguises as a footman of the "Jeames" order and a Spanish grandee, Mr. Royce was irresistibly funny; and his burlesque singing and dancing were of the very highest order of grotesque merit. That very able comedian, Mr. J. J. Dallas, has been told ere this that it was not necessary for him, in the part of Count de Campo Mayor, the Minister of Police, to disfigure his face into the likeness of a vampire suffering from hypochondriasis, or of the Ghost in Punch and Judy; and by this time, it is to be hoped, the Aquarium management have cut out a detestable music-hill ditty, sung (and very well sung) by Miss Nellie Farren, and called "When Noah Hung Out in the Ark." It is a vile piece of vulgarity, and an insult to persons who hold Scripture in reverence.

By the midnight train on Monday Mr. Irving (fresh from his arduous labours in "The Corsican Brothers" at the Lyceum) went down to Birmingham, and on the following morning he opened, in the Townhall of the Midland metropolis, a bazaar in aid of the funds of the Perry Bar Institute, the first offshoot of the Birmingham Midland Institute. Of the Perry Bar affiliated Institute I was for two years president. After delivering an eloquent and impressive address, the distinguished tragedian returned by the two p.m. train to London, and played the same night at the Lyceum. "Wonderful thing, this steam, Sir"——; and it can be turned, when there is a [illegible] into the way of doing a great many useful and charitable thing.

Mr. Henry J. Byron, who, for his part, is always trying to help his less fortunate brethren in the profession of which he, both as a dramatist and a comedian, is so bright an ornament, has asked me to record an appeal which he made in last Saturday's Era on behalf of Mr. W. J. Turner, formerly a well-known actor, but who now, at the age of seventy-five years, is reduced to utter indigence. Those who can remember the first performance of "Martin Chuzzlewit," under the Keeley management, at the Lyceum, may be able to recall the "hit" made by Mr. W. J. Turner in the part of Nadgett, the "inquiry agent" of the Anglo-Bengalee Assurance Company. Mr. Turner has been making small "hits" ever since; but now age and decrepitude have overtaken him, and he can make "hits" no longer. Mr. Byron generally points out that this is no case of a famous actor whose income during many years has been a splendid one, and who, after squandering his money, appeals, when he can earn no more, to the public for help. Mr. Turner never received more than a "bread-and-cheese" salary, and he is seventy-five, and infirm and helpless. Please not to send me any money for this poor gentleman. I have no time to read a single additional letter, nor to acknowledge a single remittance. But if any old playgoers who remember Mr. W. J. Turner can spare a trifle for him, let them send their donations to Mr. Edward Ledger, Editor and Proprietor of the Era newspaper, 49, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C.

That stirling tragedian Mr. Creswick, laden with freshly gathered Australian laurels, has reappeared at his old Thespian home, the Royal Surrey Theatre, and has made a palpable "hit" in Virginius. I shall proceed to witness Mr. Creswick's Virginius at Mr. Holland's house anon.

G. A. S.

THE PRINCE OF WALES IN THE FOREST OF MAR.

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, with the Grand Duke of Hesse and Prince John of Glücksberg, has been on a visit to the Earl of Fife, at Mar Lodge, enjoying good sport with the deer. One of the Artists connected with this Journal has been permitted to accompany the shooting party. There was a grand deer-drive on Tuesday week, when his Royal Highness killed four, and the other gentlemen of the party two; Lord Claude Hamilton and Lord Rowton were with them. Our Illustration shows the Prince and Lord Fife, attended by two men to load their rifles, seated among the rocks while the deer were running past. His Royal Highness is in the act of making a successful shot.

One of the tanks employed for supplying the fountains at the Crystal Palace burst on Thursday week. Considerable damage was done to the grounds, but no one was injured.

MUSIC.

COVENT GARDEN PROMENADE CONCERTS.

Another series of these performances began last Saturday evening, closely following the termination of Messrs. Gatti's season. The concerts now going on are instituted by Mr. Samuel Hayes, the conductor being Mr. H. Weist Hill, with Herr Gung'l as director of the dance music. The band numbers about one hundred skilful performers, with Mr. Palmer as principal first violin. The excellence of the orchestra was at once manifested in the opening piece of the programme, Rossini's overture to "Guillaume Tell," which was given with great spirit and brilliancy—the incidental solos well played by Mr. A. P. Vivian (flute), M. Le Bon (oboe), and Mr. Libotton (violoncello). Another orchestral specialty was the interesting Suite, by the late Georges Bizet, entitled "L'Arlésienne," which was first performed in England at one of Madame Viard Louis's concerts, directed by Mr. Weist Hill. M. Bourgault-Ducourdray's graceful "Gavotte" in F, Herr L. Engel's melodious bagatelle "Elle et Lui," and a selection (adapted by Mr. Weist Hill) from the music of the ballet of "Alma" were included in the first part of the programme. The Ballet was produced nearly forty years ago for the celebrated dancer Mdlle. Cerito, Signor (now Sir Michael) Costa having been the composer of the music, which is pleasingly melodious and effectively instrumented. The selection given on Saturday (a little too long, perhaps) formed a good climax to the first part of the concert, which comprised Herr Gung'l's very pretty waltzes, "Soldaten Lieder," and his piquant polka "Schön Suschen," the former of which had to be repeated. This celebrated dance composer directs the performance of his music with his violin bow, using the instrument occasionally in association with the band. He met with a very cordial reception.

Madame Mary Cummings was encored in her delivery of Mr. Arthur Sullivan's well-known song, "The Lost Chord," as was Mr. W. H. Woodfield in Wallace's "Let me like a soldier fall;" the other vocal pieces in the first part having been Balfe's "I'm a merry Zingara," pleasingly rendered by Madame Zimeri, and John Barnett's trio, "This magic wove scarf," in which Madame Rose Stuart, Mr. F. Wood, and Mr. W. Clifford were associated.

The second part of the programme included dance pieces by Herr Gung'l, and vocal performances by Madame Cummings, Mr. F. Wood, and Mr. W. Clifford—having opened with Jullien's "British Army Quadrille," in the peculiar effects of which the orchestra was reinforced by several military bands.

The large attendance on the opening night augurs well for the success of Mr. Hayes's concerts.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

As already announced, the autumn season of Italian opera performances at this establishment begins on Monday evening, Oct. 18, under the direction of Mr. Armit. The list of engagements (which will probably be hereafter extended) includes the first appearances of Madame Giovannoni Zacchi, Mdlles. E. Widmar and De Bressolles; and Signori Cantoni and Quintili-Leoni; the list of vocalists also comprising the names of Madame Trebelli, Mdlles. Rosina Isidor, Olga de Morimi, and Mathilde Bauermeister, Miss Purdy, Signori Runcio, Zenari-Conti, Vizzani, Bertocchi, Foli, Pantaleone, Ordinas, Ghilberti, and Pro, and Mr. G. Fox.

A "grand dramatic opera," entitled "Maria di Gand," is to be produced, for the first time in England, under the superintendence of the composer, Signor Tito Mattei, the well-known pianist, who is adding recitatives to Vincent Wallace's "Maritana," which is to be given in Italian for the first time here—with Mdlle. Isidor in the title-character, that of Signor Mattei's opera being sustained by Madame Zacchi.

Signor Li Calsi is to be the conductor, and Mr. Carrodus the leading and solo violinist, the band being nearly the same as in the regular season. These are very satisfactory announcements, as is that of an entirely fresh chorus, consisting of upwards of sixty voices, selected from La Scala and other Continental sources. The ballet arrangements are—as before—under the able direction of Madame Katti Lanner.

There are to be morning performances on Saturdays, beginning on Oct. 30.

The reduction of prices, the earlier hour of commencing the performances, and the abolition of the usual restrictions as to evening dress will be widely welcome, and will probably aid in securing a successful season.

The Tonic Sol-Fa Festival took place on Saturday at the Alexandra Palace, 1500 certificated singers having contributed to a varied programme. An interesting feature was the successful accomplishment of the test of sight-singing by the performance of a part-song entitled "Autumn," which had not been seen by the singers until the distribution of the music to them on the platform. Mr. Proudman conducted.

We have already given an outline of the arrangements for the twenty-fifth series of Saturday afternoon concerts at the Crystal Palace, which begins this week. The programme of the opening concert includes the first performance in England of Joachim Raff's ninth orchestral symphony, entitled "In Summer-time."

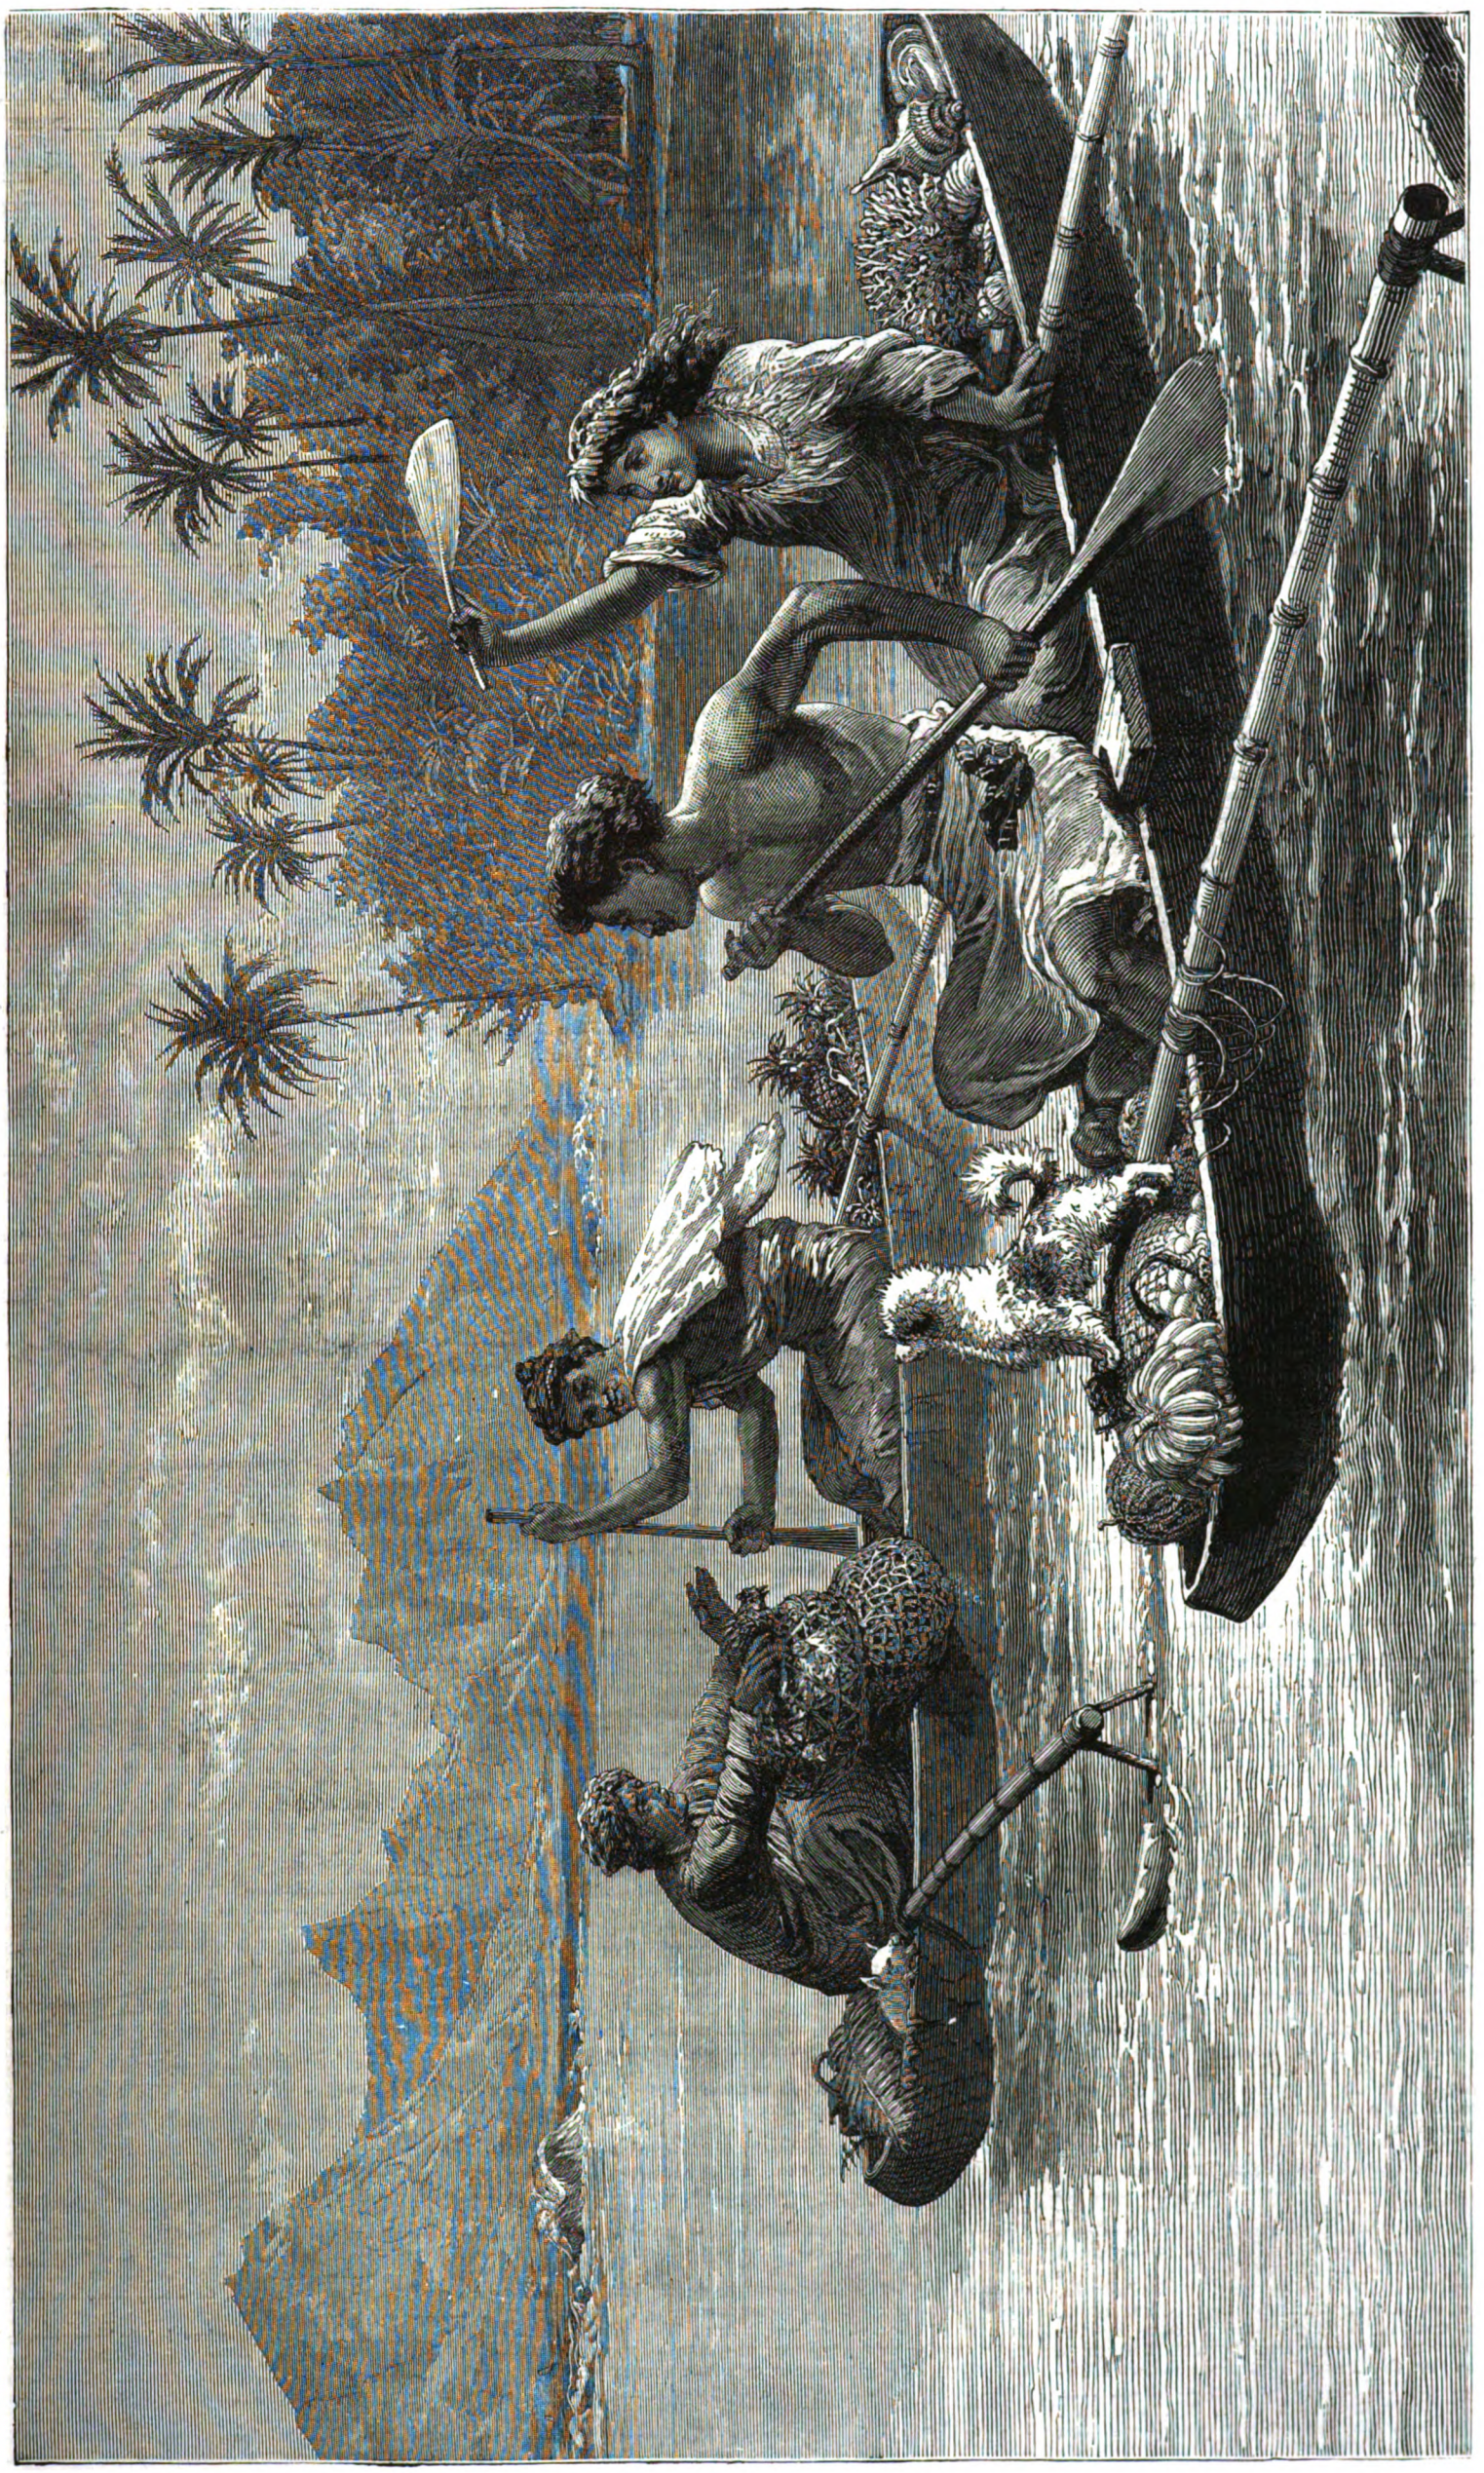
The Royal Albert Hall Choral Society—conducted by Mr. Barnby—will begin its tenth season on Nov. 11, with a performance of Handel's "Judas Maccabæus." At the second concert, on Dec. 2, Mendelssohn's "Elijah" is to be given, with Madame Albani as the principal soprano.

We have previously referred to the principal features of the forthcoming Leeds Festival, which opens on Wednesday next. Further details as to the arrangements and performances must be reserved for next week. The preliminary London rehearsals took place at St. George's Hall, Langham-place, on Tuesday and Wednesday, when the new compositions—Mr. Sullivan's sacred cantata, "The Martyr of Antioch," Mr. J. F. Barnett's cantata, "The Building of the Ship," and Mr. Wingham's festival overture—and other works intended for performance, were rehearsed.

The new season of the Hackney Choral Association's concerts, at the Shoreditch Townhall, will begin on Nov. 23—the three remaining concerts being fixed for Jan. 25, March 22, and May 10, 1881.

A meeting of gentlemen interested in promoting the study and practice of music was held in Edinburgh yesterday week. A Scottish Musical Society was formed, with the Duke of Buccleuch as president.

The advanced choir of the South London Choral Association had its opening concert on Tuesday. This association, which was established in 1869 for the practice of vocal music by means of the Tonic Sol-Fa Notation and Method, has taken a lease of the Surrey Masonic Hall, Camberwell New-road, for the purpose of carrying on and extending its operations.



The musical critics of Prague speak highly of a new opera produced there entitled "A Night in Florence." It is the composition of Mr. Zavertal, an esteemed professor, now a resident of Glasgow. The plot of the opera is taken from a novel by the elder Dumas, and the music is said to have been received with special favour.

Digitized by Google

THE PRINCE OF WALES AT A DEER-DRIVE IN THE FOREST OF MAR.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

Digitized by Google

A RACE TO THE MARKET, TAHITI, SOCIETY ISLANDS.—SEE NEXT PAGE.
FROM THE PICTURE BY N. CHEVALIER.

Digitized by Google

"MARKET-BOATS OF TAHITI."

The picture by N. Chevalier, a French artist not unknown to the readers of this Journal, reproduced in one of our Engravings, represents a race, for the earliest arrival at the market, among some of the native boatmen and purveyors of vegetables, fruit, yams, plantains, and other commodities, brought for sale to the chief town of Tahiti. The recent news of the formal annexation of that island to the territories of the French Republic is not an event of much political significance, as the French Protectorate over the Society Islands, with the exercise of actual rule there, has been established thirty-five years. This group of islands, with several neighbouring groups, the Austral Isles to the south, including Tubuai, the Low Archipelago to the east, and the Marquesas to the north-east, are now all under French protection. They are situated in the eastern Polynesian region of the South Pacific, between the 135th and 155th degrees of longitude west of the Greenwich meridian, and nearly midway from the American to the Australian coasts. The Society group consists of eleven islands, one of which, Tahiti or Otaheite, is actually occupied by a French colony, while the others have small missionary or mercantile stations, leaving a certain degree self-government to the native tribes. Tahiti has an extent of of 600 square miles, with a population of 14,000, but less than a thousand Europeans. The chief town and port is Papiti, which has two thousand inhabitants, and carries on a respectable amount of maritime traffic, exporting some cotton and sugar, cocoa-nuts, and mother-of-pearl to France and Germany, and some other native produce to California and to China. Its French townsfolk, in remembrance and imitation of Paris, have named its principal street the Rue de Rivoli, and it has a Roman Catholic Cathedral, and Government Offices, bearing titles similar to those of public buildings in the capital of France. The native race, with whom Captain Cook's voyages made us familiar a long time ago, are handsome brown people, with curling black hair and agreeable faces, more especially beautiful in the female sex. It is said, however, that they are much addicted to laziness, drunkenness, and other forms of licentiousness, and that their numbers have diminished since they came under European direction. But the same result has been observed in the Hawaiian or Sandwich Islands, notwithstanding the benevolent efforts of American Protestant missionaries to save that interesting variety of mankind.

THE COURT.

Her Majesty has continued to take long drives during the past week, although the weather has been cold and stormy, with snow lying on the mountains. Among her excursions the Queen has visited the Linn of Dee, Glengeldie Lodge, the Gelden Shiel, the Glassalt Shiel, and other notable localities in the district. Her Majesty has been accompanied by some, or all, of the members of the Royal family now at Balmoral.

Yesterday week the return cricket-match of the Balmoral and Abergeldie households came off, and the Queen, with Princess Beatrice, Prince Leopold, the Grand Duke of Hesse, and his three children, went to Abergeldie to witness it. Prince Leopold stayed to dinner at Abergeldie.

Last Saturday her Majesty walked out in the morning with Princess Beatrice and Prince Leopold and her three Hessian grandchildren. Princesses Louise, Victoria, and Maud of Wales paid a visit to the Queen and the Royal family. In the afternoon, her Majesty, accompanied by Princess Beatrice and Princesses Irene and Alice of Hesse, drove to Abergeldie Mains and visited the Duchess Dowager of Roxburghe. Prince Leopold and the Hereditary Grand Duke of Hesse also visited the Duchess.

Divine service was performed at the castle on Sunday by the Rev. Archibald Campbell, of Crathie, the Queen being present with her family and guests and the young Princesses of Wales. The Prince of Wales visited her Majesty in the afternoon, attended by Captain H. F. Stephenson, C.B., R.N. Captain Stephenson was received by the Queen previous to his departure with the Flying Squadron in command of her Majesty's ship Craysfort.

The Marquis of Hartington arrived as Minister in attendance on Monday, and dined with the Queen.

The Princess of Wales pays frequent visits to Balmoral, and has dined with her Majesty. Lord Colville and Miss Knollys have been invited to join the Royal dinner circle.

The Grand Duke of Hesse, accompanied by Prince Leopold, has paid various visits to the Earl of Fife at Mar Lodge.

The Hon. Mary Lascelles has arrived as Maid of Honour in Waiting to the Queen; and Mr. Royle has left and Dr. Marshall arrived at the castle.

The following changes have been made in the Royal Chaplaincies:—The Rev. William Barker, M.A., Vicar of St. Mary's, West Cowes, and Honorary Chaplain to the Queen, to be Chaplain in Ordinary to her Majesty; the Rev. James Fleming, B.D., Canon Residentiary of York, Vicar of St. Michael's, Chester-square, and Honorary Chaplain to the Queen, to be Chaplain in Ordinary to her Majesty; and the Rev. Edward Capel Cure, M.A., Rector of St. George's, Hanover-square, is appointed Honorary Chaplain to her Majesty.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.

The Princess of Wales paid a visit to the Earl of Fife one day during the Prince of Wales's stay at Mar Lodge. Her Royal Highness drove in a waggonette from Abergeldie to Braemar, where horses where changed, and the drive continued to Mar Lodge. Prince Leopold and the Grand Duke of Hesse arrived shortly after from Balmoral. Subsequently the Prince and Prince John of Glucksburg, with their host and a large party of his other guests, joined the Princess and the other Royal visitors, and drove to the Falls of Quoich for a pic-nic excursion; the weather was most genial, and a long ramble was enjoyed. The Prince returned home yesterday week, and on Saturday went deer-shooting in Ballochbuie Forest, killing three fine stags. Prince John of Glücksburg killed two stags, and the Grand Duke of Hesse one, a handsome royal stag weighing 16 stone. The Grand Duke dined with their Royal Highnesses at Abergeldie. On Monday the Grand Duke of Hesse joined the Prince in a deer-drive in Abergeldie woods. In the evening the Queen, with Princess Beatrice, Prince Leopold, the Grand Duke of Hesse, the Hereditary Grand Duke, Princesses Irene and Alice of Hesse, attended by the ladies and gentlemen of the household, came to a gillies ball given by the Prince and Princess at Abergeldie. The Earl of Fife, Mr. G. Forbes of Newe, Mrs. Gerald Leigh and party from Birk Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Mackenzie, with Mr. and Mrs. Faucett and party from Glen Muick, were invited. Admiral Carr Glyn and Colonel Teesdale arrived at the castle. On Tuesday the Prince, accompanied by Prince John of Glücksburg, drove to Mar Lodge to visit Colonel Napier Sturt, who is lying there seriously ill. The condition of the gallant Colonel is so critical that Sir William Gull had been telegraphed for from town. After a stay of two hours, their Royal Highnesses returned to Braemar, and then drove to Invercauld Lodge, where they have been the guests of Colonel Farquharson for some days. Wednesday was devoted to a deer drive in Invercauld Forest.

The Prince, as Grand Master of Freemasons, has accepted an invitation by the Lord Mayor of London, who is the Junior Grand Warden of the craft, to a Masonic banquet at the Mansion House, on the 25th inst.

The letters which have reached Plymouth from her Majesty's ship Bacchante, which arrived at Ferrol on the 27th ult., say that the voyage to that port was attended with fine weather, and Princes Albert Victor and George of Wales were reported to be in excellent health.

The Duke of Edinburgh passed the last few days of his sojourn in Germany on a shooting excursion with the Duke of Saxe Coburg and Gotha in Tyrol. The Duchess of Edinburgh, with her children, left Coburg yesterday week en route for England. The Duchess was met at Calais by her husband, and the Royal party travelled viâ Dover to Eastwell Park. The Duke has been in town a day or two during the week.

Prince and Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein are expected to return to England next week. Their children have already arrived at Windsor from the Isle of Wight.

The Duke of Connaught has consented to lay the memorial-stone of an Army Coffee Tavern at Woolwich at an early date.

His Royal Highness the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, accompanied by his Staff, left London on Monday for the purpose of making inspections of the troops at Chatham, Dover, and Shorncliffe.

The Duke of Teck visited Edinburgh yesterday week, and had luncheon in the London Hotel with the officers of the 21st Hussars from Piershill. The Duke afterwards proceeded to Powder Hall grounds, where he witnessed the annual sports of the Hussars. On Saturday the Duchess of Teck and her husband, with their hostess the Countess of Hopetoun and the Earl and a large party, paid a visit to Stirling, where they were received at the railway station by Provost Anderson. The party drove first to the Golden Lion Hotel, where luncheon was served, and afterwards visited the castle, a Royal salute from the guns in the Half-moon Battery welcoming Princess Mary. Colonel De la Poer Beresford and the officers of the 58th Brigade Dépôt attended the visitors to all the places of interest, including the Victoria Lookout and Prince Alfred's Lookout. The Bruce monument on the Esplanade was also visited, and the party drove down through the town before returning by train to Linlithgow, whence they drove to Hopetoun House.

The Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Mecklenburgh-Schwerin, who have been staying several weeks in England in the strictest incognito, left yesterday week on their return to Germany. They dined with the German Ambassador at the Embassy the evening before their departure.

His Excellency the Danish Minister has arrived at the new residence of the Danish Legation, Connaught-place.

FASHIONABLE MARRIAGES.

Mr. Piers Egerton Warburton, M.P. for Mid-Cheshire, son of Mr. Egerton Warburton, of Arley Hall, Northwich, was married to the Hon. Antoinette Elizabeth Saumarez, daughter of Lord and Lady de Saumarez, on Thursday week, at St. Peter's Church, Cranley-gardens. The bridesmaids were the Hon. Eleanor Saumarez, her sister; the Hon. Alice Irby, her niece; Miss Hervey Bathurst, and Miss Halford. Mr. Robert Bateman was best man. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. George A. Robins, Rector of Hedsor, Bucks, assisted by the Rev. J. F. Downes, Curate of St. Peter's. The wedding breakfast was given at Lord and Lady de Saumarez's house, Prince's-gate. The bride and bridegroom left for Coombe Wood, Lord Brabazon's residence, near Wimbledon.

The marriage of Viscount Newark and Miss Helen Shaw Stewart, briefly noted last week, was the occasion of rejoicing to all interested in the bride's family. At the wedding the corridor leading from the house to the private chapel at Ardgowan was lined by the labourers and their wives on Sir Michael's estate. The bridesmaids were Miss Agnes Stewart, her sister; Lady Mary Pierrepont, sister of the bridegroom; Lady Anne Dalrymple and the Hon. Agnes Leigh, cousins of the bride; Lady Mary Campbell, and the Hon. Emily Ormsby Gore. Mr. Francis Lloyd (Grenadier Guards), was best man. The bride's dress was of pearl white Gothic satin, covered with deep flounces of Brussels point, quillings of satin, and wreaths of orange-blossom and myrtle. The old Brussels point veil, an heirloom in Sir Michael's family, was fastened to her hair by diamond stars, the gift of Earl Manvers; and pearl and diamond spray, given by Lady Octavia Shaw Stewart; and her other jewels included a pearl and diamond locket, the gift of Countess Manvers; a pearl and diamond bracelet, the present of the Earl and Countess of Stair; and a diamond bracelet, given by the Hon. Mrs. Bruce. The bridesmaids wore princesse dresses of white cashmere façonnée and white satin, trimmed with point Victoria lace and turquoise blue satin ribbon, with overskirts of white satin, trimmed with lace and blue satin; wreaths of Scotch roses and white heather, and long tulle veils. Each wore an arrow brooch with the initials of the bride and bridegroom in pearls and turquoises, and pearl coronet above, the gift of the bridegroom. After the breakfast Viscount Newark and his bride started in an open carriage and four for Duchal, one of the family seats near Port Glasgow, escorted by one hundred of Sir Michael's tenantry, mounted, all wearing wedding favours, and headed by Sir Michael's factor. The bride's travelling dress was of sapphire Lyons velvet, trimmed with marabout feathers and Valenciennes lace, with bonnet to match. At different points of their journey lively demonstrations were made, and on nearing their destination the tenantry of the district escorted them to Duchal Lodge. After the departure of the bride from Ardgowan, a dinner was given to Sir Michael's employés and their wives, and the school children had tea; after which there was a display of fireworks and bonfires on the hills. Last Tuesday Sir Michael and Lady Octavia Shaw Stewart entertained all their tenantry in the county at a ball and supper at Ardgowan, provision being made for 750 guests. The bride's presents were of great value; among the noteworthy being, from members of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, gold bracelet set with diamonds; from the directors of the Glasgow Agricultural Society, gold bracelet with diamond centre; from her father's tenants and employés, a tiara of pearls and diamonds; from his several households' servants, a silver tea service; the ladies of the congregation of St. John's, Greenock, silver déjeuner service and tray; and other valued gifts from the tradespeople, school children, and teachers. Viscount Newark also had valuable gifts of plate from his brother officers, his tenantry, and from all those who are connected with his estates.

The marriage of Miss Adeline Denison and Sir Frederick Milner is to take place at Nun Appleton, Yorkshire, on the 19th inst.; that of Lady Constance Hay, eldest daughter of the Earl and Countess of Kinnoull, with Mr. Walter H. Hadow is fixed to take place at Dupplin Castle on the 28th inst.; of Lieut. R. Joynes, R.A., to the Hon. Mary Neville will take place about the end of the month; and that of Mr. J. Murray Bannerman, of Wyastone Leys, Herefordshire, with Miss Wheeley, youngest daughter of the late Mr. Robert Wheeley, The Pentre, Abergavenny, will take place early in November.

A marriage is arranged between the Hon. Thomas Cochrane, second son of the Earl and Countess of Dundonald, and Lady Gertrude Boyle, eldest daughter of the Earl and Countess of Glasgow.

THE CHURCH.

PREFERMENTS AND APPOINTMENTS.

Bennett, Edward, Rector of Dalby, to be Vicar of Lancham, Notts.
Birch, Augustus J.; Vicar of Edlesborough, Bucks; Rector of Berkhampstead St. Mary (or North Church). Patron, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.
Boniface, Thomas; Surrogate.
Claughton, Piers Leopold; Rector of Hutton, Essex.
Dowling, R. B.; Chaplain to the Bishop of Bedford.
Elwyn, Richard, Hon. Canon of Canterbury; Vicar of East Farleigh.
Gerratt, W. J.; Vicar of Gannon, Burley.
Haumer, Edmund Calvert; Curate of Fillongley.
Heanley, R. M., Rector of Wainfleet; Honorary Secretary of the Universities' Mission to Central Africa.
Henderson, John; Vicar of Ashampstead, Berks.
Hughes, D., Curate of Llangian, Pwllheli; Vicar of Llanegryn.
Inge, W.; Examining Chaplain to the Bishop of Lichfield.
Lennard, D. B., Curate of Hodnet; Rector of Aldham, Suffolk.
Lester, John Moore; Vicar of Stoney Stratford, Bucks.
Little, Charles Hardy; Chaplain to the English Church at St. Petersburg.
Lyttelton, W. H.; Canon of Gloucester Cathedral.
Mansfield, A., Vicar of Shirehampton; Vicar of Elberton.
Massey, Edwyn Reynolds; Vicar of Merton, Oxon.
Penny, E. L.; Chaplain to her Majesty's Land Forces on Boaz and Ireland Islands.
Penney, W. H., Vicar of Northmoor; Organising Secretary of the Universities' Mission to Central Africa.
Roberts, Griffith; Rector of Dowlais.
Sullivan, E. C.; Vicar of St. Michael, Hulme Walfield, Cheshire.
Symonds, G. Davey; Rector of Coryton, Devon.—Guardian.

The Bishop of Bedford consecrated the Church of St. Clement's, situated in the City-road, on Wednesday.

Dr. Joshua Hughes, Bishop of St. Asaph, gave his triennial charge in the cathedral on Monday. There was a considerable attendance of clergy.

The Old Testament Company of Revisers finished their sixty-fifth session yesterday week. The first revision of Job was finished, and that of Proverbs carried as far as chap. xii. 16.

Yesterday week the new Bishop's Hotel for theological students at Lincoln was formally dedicated by the Lord Bishop of Lincoln, the service being attended by the Bishop of Truro and a great number of the clergy of the diocese.

The Rev. J. Williams, Vicar of Llanguin, near Carmarthen, died suddenly on Thursday week. He was riding on his pony to Llanguin church to assist in a marriage, when he fell to the ground dead. Heart disease is the supposed cause of death.

The parish church of Chideock, in Dorset, was reopened on Thursday week after restoration at the cost of nearly £1300, raised principally by voluntary contributions. Bishop Wilkinson, late of Zululand, was the preacher at the opening service.

On Monday night a harvest thanksgiving service was held in St. Paul's Cathedral, at which about 250 members of the Church of England Working Men's Society were present. The building was filled in every part. The sermon was delivered by the Bishop of Bedford.

The new church of St. Elizabeth, in the parish of Ashley, was consecrated last week by the Bishop of Chester. The church has been built from the designs of the Hon. Wilbraham Egerton, M.P., and, together with the site, is the gift of Lord Egerton, of Tatton Park. The edifice has been erected at a cost of over £3000. All the seats are free.

Allhallows church, East India Docks, was on Wednesday week consecrated by the Bishop of Bedford. It will seat about 900 persons. In the afternoon there was a children's flower service—the flowers brought to be sent to the hospitals—a congregational tea and meeting in the Bow-lane schools, and evensong at the church.

On Tuesday week the Bishop of Oxford consecrated a new church, which has been built in the hamlet of Dunthrop by Mr Albert Brassey, of Heythrop, the ancient edifice having for some time been found to be too small for the requirements of the population. The edifice has cost about £6000 to erect, and, in addition, Mr. Brassey has built a rectory, at an expense of about £4000, besides having some years since provided a commodious school-room and master's house. The old church was dedicated to St. Nicholas, and the new church will be called by the same name.

The thirty-sixth annual report of the Church of England Sunday-School Institute for the year 1879-80, which has been issued, states that although the committee are not able to record any large addition to their income, it is a matter for deep thankfulness, considering the severity of the recent commercial depression, that the institute has been enabled to maintain its position in regard to the various departments of its work. The subscriptions to the general fund received during the year amounted to £2226, which is slightly in excess of the previous year's receipts. The total gross receipts for the year from all sources amounted to £16,205.

At the general meeting of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, on Tuesday afternoon, in their new building, Northumberland-avenue, the report, read by Mr. W. H. Grove, secretary, drew particular attention to St. Katherine's College, Tottenham, where, under the direction of the society, one hundred students are trained for schoolmistresses, and where there are practising schools for 400 children. The report dealt also with the internal management of the society, financial matters, literary work, and future prospects. The agency has now been in existence 180 years, and continues to occupy a flourishing position. The meeting was presided over by Archdeacon Hessey.

A meeting was held in Christ Church Schoolroom, Perry Barr, near Birmingham, last week, to set on foot a memorial to the Rev. C. B. Snepp, the late Vicar of that parish, and the editor of the well-known hymn-book, "Songs of Grace and Glory." The Hon. A. C. G. Calthorpe presided, and suggested that the memorial should take the form of a fund for its endowment. Resolutions embodying this proposal and providing for the necessary steps to be taken were then unanimously agreed to. At the close of the meeting subscriptions to the amount of £230 were promised. Mr. Richard Tilsley, the treasurer, of Perry Bar, near Birmingham, will receive subscriptions.

A memorial window has lately been erected in the south aisle of the Church of St. Mary Abbotts-Ann, Andover, to the memory of John and Lucy Maton, formerly of that parish, by their son, Mr. William Maton, of 151, Gray's-inn-road, London. The subject of the picture, taken from the parable of the Prodigal Son, is clearly illustrated by Mr. Alexander Gibbs, of Bloomsbury-street.—St. Andrew's Church, Walcot, Bath, one of Sir Gilbert Scott's last works, has been adorned with several stained-glass windows by Messrs. Burlison and Grylls. Amongst them is a rose-window in memory of Mr. William Whittaker Barry, of Lincoln's Inn, barrister and author, who was lost upon the Tyrol snow mountains at Michaelmas, 1875.—Much interest has been excited in Burslem, Staffordshire, by the presentation to St. John's parish church of a costly Munich window by Mr. H. Parker, in memory of his wife. The large centre opening represents the Sermon on the Mount, and two side lights Acts of Charity. The artists are Messrs. Mayer and Co.

Digitized by Google

The well-known "Greek" edifice, St. Pancras Church, in Euston-road, has been reopened for service after considerable repairs and renovation. For the last two months the church has been in the hands of Messrs. Grace, who have succeeded in imparting an aspect of warmth and refinement to an interior which certainly lacked those qualities. The Vicar, the Rev. and Hon. Canon Spence, who succeeded the present Bishop of Rochester, has actively promoted the works, which will cost over £2000. The necessary funds are being raised by a committee of the congregation. St. Pancras Church was built in 1820-22, from the designs of Inwood, at a cost of over £76,000.

The Free Church Presbytery of Edinburgh has appointed Tuesday, the 19th inst., as a day of thanksgiving for the abundant harvest.

In opening a Wesleyan Bazaar and Industrial Exhibition at Kidderminster on Tuesday, Mr. Brinton, M.P., as a Churchman, commended to the religious world the lay system of the Wesleyan body as a means of creating among the laity an enthusiasm in the work of the Church.

The twelfth anniversary of the Agricultural Hall services for the working classes was held on Sunday afternoon last, there being from 2000 to 3000 persons present. The Rev. Thain Davidson, D.D., who presided, referred to the pleasant indications at the recent Church Congress at Leicester of a general and growing desire for a closer union and co-operation among Christians.

At the Clifton Conference of Christians of all denominations, attended on Tuesday by a large number of the Evangelical clergy, the Rev. J. Bennett, of London, contrasted that conference with the recent Church Congress, and deprecated the spectacle shown at the latter, where men of God met with those whose theology was the theology of Rome, whose touch was that of the rankest unbelief—men who dared to dishonour God by discussing with those the communion of saints.

A number of gentlemen met on Tuesday night in private conference, at the residence of Cardinal Manning, to forward a scheme which is on foot for founding in London a Catholic middle-class school for boys. The main features of the scheme are that a body of Catholic shareholders, say 500, should contribute £10 annually, making an income of £5000 a year; that a committee of management, partly clerics and partly laymen, should be chosen by ballot from among these shareholders, and that they should give their services gratis in the management of the school. The institution is to be totally independent of the Government or any other body outside the Catholic ecclesiastical authorities and the shareholders.—It is announced by the Essex Telegraph that the Rev. Samuel Farman, M.A., Cam., Vicar of St. John's District Church, Colchester, has seceded from the Church of England and has joined the Church of Rome, into which he has been accepted at the Oratory, Brompton.

The autumnal session of the Baptist Union of Great Britain and Ireland was inaugurated on Sunday by services in various metropolitan churches. Foundation-stones of two new houses, in extension of Mr. Spurgeon's Orphanage for Girls, were laid on Monday by Mr. Palmer, M.P. for Reading, and the Rev. Hugh Stowell Brown, of Liverpool, the buildings being called after the towns named, each having largely contributed towards the outlay involved. The Rev. Mr. C. H. Spurgeon, the president of this Orphanage, was unable to be present on account of ill-health. Following this stone-laying ceremony, to which by Mr. Spurgeon the delegates were specially invited, tea was provided at the Metropolitan Tabernacle, after which a largely-attended public meeting was held, for the purpose of designating a number of missionaries just leaving England under the auspices of the Baptist Missionary Society. Mr. Joseph Tritton presided, and was supported by a number of the leading ministers of the denomination. A missionary meeting of the Union was held on Tuesday in Bloomsbury Chapel, under the presidency of Mr. T. Coats, of Paisley. A paper written by Mr. Bompas, Q.C., on "Missionary Organisation in Church and School," was read by Mr. A. H. Baynes; and the Rev. Dr. Landels read a paper upon Missionary Consecration. Mr. Barran, M.P., was among those who took part in the discussion thereupon. A resolution was passed expressing regret that the missionary efforts of the churches were so inadequate to the demands of the work, and recommending a larger liberality for missionary purposes. In the evening a public missionary meeting was held in Exeter Hall, under the presidency of Mr. Barran, M.P., and among the speakers was the Rev. E. E. Jenkins, president of the Wesleyan Conference. On Wednesday the Rev. Dr. Treshan gave, in Bloomsbury Chapel, the presidential address, upon the Moral Tendency and Influence of Infidelity.

THE CHURCH CONGRESS.

The Church Congress at Leicester opened on Tuesday week. The opening address was delivered by the Bishop of Peterborough, who, setting aside the old plea for Church Congresses, endeavoured to find a better and deeper reason for their existence. The idea of the present gathering was that the Church of England is, for her Master's sake, the servant of the English nation, and they were there to show what the Church was doing to justify that high claim on her part. The one great Church question of the time was the indifference or hostility of the masses of the great town populations and the scattered units in country parishes, and her path of duty in this matter was also her path of safety.

On Wednesday the members again divided into sections. The subjects discussed in the morning embraced no less than seven of Church interest, and included the present condition of upper and middle class education and the means of promoting its religious character. In the afternoon the subject was the responsibility of the Church toward Dissent, with special regard to home reunion. A paper was read by the Rev. Professor Plumptre, in which he regarded the prospect of home reunion as not very definite nor yet very bright. An animated discussion followed.

In Thursday's discussions the principal subjects debated were speculative unbelief, Church organisation, and the marriage laws. The working men's meeting in the evening was a great success. Over 3000 people crowded into the Congress Hall, and an overflow meeting was held to accommodate those who could not obtain admission. The Bishop of Peterborough, the President of the Congress, presided, and the speakers were the Archbishop of York, the Bishop of Carlisle, the Bishop of Liverpool, and Mr. Mark Knowles.

At the morning meeting yesterday week, the Bishop of Peterborough presiding, papers were read on the subject of the Communion of Saints. In the afternoon the subject of discussion was, Popular Recreations: How to Improve Them. This raised the question of theatrical performances, and considerable interest was shown in the debate. The concluding meeting, in the evening, was signalised by the presentation of an address to the congress from the Nonconformist ministers of Leicester. The address was spoken to by a minister, and was acknowledged by the president as a fitting close to the welcome which had been already accorded in many a Nonconformist home. The members of the congress were entertained by the Mayor of Leicester (Mr. T. Bennett), a Nonconformist, at a conversazione in the evening.

Newcastle-on-Tyne has been fixed upon as the place of next year's meeting.

HOME NEWS.

Colonel North, M.P., has again returned fifteen per cent of their rents to his tenants.

Heavy gales, accompanied by torrents of rain, prevailed on Tuesday over nearly the whole of England and Ireland.

A show of dogs, poultry, and pigeons is to be held on Monday and Tuesday, next week, at Stratford-on-Avon.

Mr. R. W. Ford, solicitor, has been elected clerk of the peace at Portsmouth, in the place of his deceased brother.

The seventh annual provincial meeting of the Incorporated Law Society was held in Sheffield on Wednesday and Thursday.

During the first half of the financial year, while the revenue was £36,632,500, the expenditure amounted to £40,350,301. The balance in the Bank of England is returned at £1,792,394.

A bazaar and fancy fair in aid of the Local Literary and Scientific Institute, School of Art, and Museum at Berwick-on-Tweed, was opened there yesterday week by Earl Percy.

The Lady Mayoress (Lady Truscott) will hold her final receptions at the Mansion House on Tuesdays, Oct. 19 and Nov. 2, from three to five o'clock.

An exhibition of machinery and appliances used by brewers, malsters, licensed victuallers, aerated-water makers, cigar manufacturers, &c., has been held in the Agricultural Hall.

There was an attractive show of horses and stock in connection with the the Abergavenny Agricultural Association on Thursday week. The attendance was very numerous.

The Photographic Society of Great Britain is holding its annual exhibition of photographs at the Society's gallery, Pall-mall, East. It will remain open until Nov. 13.

Knaresborough Election Commission opened on Monday, and that of Sandwich on Tuesday. The inquiries at Canterbury, Oxford, and Macclesfield have been continued.

The foundation-stone of a public market-hall at Darwen was laid last Saturday. The building will be erected at a cost of about £20,000. The Mayors of Bury, Bolton, and Clitheroe, were present.

An exhaustive report on the Scotch harvest shows that the average yield of cereals is 10 per cent above the average in quantity and generally satisfactory in quality. The potato and turnip crops are heavy.

The result of the Earl of Jersey's experiment at Middleton-Stoney of letting land for small farm cultivation has been so satisfactory that his Lordship has decided to increase the quantity of land to be so let.

The introductory lecture to the course of metallurgy at the Royal School of Mines was given on Monday by the new professor, Mr. W. Chandler Roberts, F.R.S., chemist of the Mint.

The Royal Handbell Ringers have this week been performing at the Egyptian Hall in the afternoon, on the days when Messrs. Maskelyne and Cook give their entertainment in the evening only.

Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, M.P., yesterday week formally opened at Lechlade a working-men's club and coffee room, the establishment of which had been suggested by Lord and Lady de Mauley.

An exhibition of the Prince of Wales's Indian presents was opened yesterday week at Aberdeen, in presence of a large company. Provost Jamieson and Dr. Farquharson, M.P., were among the speakers.

Sir Charles Reed, M.P., presided on Thursday week at the first meeting of the School Board for London after the summer recess, and, in accordance with a custom originated by him, made a detailed statement of the operations of the board and the results which have so far accrued.

The Metropolitan Board of Works met yesterday week for the first time after the autumnal recess. In the course of the business a discussion arose upon the subject of the Temple Bar Memorial, and a resolution was adopted referring the whole matter to the Works Committee for inquiry and report.

The Liverpool School of Science, claiming to be the largest school of science in the provinces connected with the Science and Art Department, held its annual prize distribution yesterday week in the presence of a meeting which completely filled St. George's-hall, and was presided over by the Mayor.

On the great Denny Estate, in County Kerry, which includes the town of Tralee and the country for many miles around, a circular has been issued stating that the owners—Sir E. Denny and Mr. R. A. Denny—are prepared to join in executing leases for ever to the occupying tenants.

The American Consul at Sheffield has completed the commercial returns which show a vast improvement in the condition of Sheffield trade with the United States. The total exports of Sheffield goods to America in the present year amount to £1,966,411, compared with £559,733 in the previous year.

The arrivals at Liverpool of live stock and fresh meat from the United States and Canada last week were much below those of the previous week; the total being 1964 cattle, 855 sheep, 384 pigs, 4418 quarters of beef, 450 carcases of mutton, and 117 dead pigs.

At a conference of Yorkshire schoolmasters held at Skipton last Saturday, under the presidency of Sir Matthew Wilson, M.P., a resolution was passed condemning the imposition of artificial restrictions on the education given in public elementary schools.

A conference of the Railway Servants' Association has been held this week at Cardiff. The annual report which was presented stated that intense satisfaction was felt throughout the service at the passing of the Compensation Act, but urged that there was a pressing necessity for a reduction in the hours of labour of railway servants.

Mr. Stewart Cumberland, the gentleman who has become known by his recent exposure of a notorious spirit medium, lectured on this subject last Monday evening at Steinway Hall, Lower Seymour-street. He may fairly claim to have successfully exposed some of the tricks of so-called spirit mediums and others.

The annual prize competition of the 17th (late 29th) North Middlesex Rifles, No. 8 (Islington) company, took place at Wormwood-scrubbs on Monday. Amongst the numerous prizes presented for competition by the officers and inhabitants of Islington was a handsome silver cup, given by the Mohawk Minstrels, of the Agricultural Hall.

A meeting of the committee of the Risca Explosion Relief Fund was held at Newport last Saturday, when it was reported that the total fund reached £12,000, and that harvest thanksgiving collections were coming in remarkably well. Further sums were expected from this source. About £3000 more is required to continue the allowances to widows and orphans.

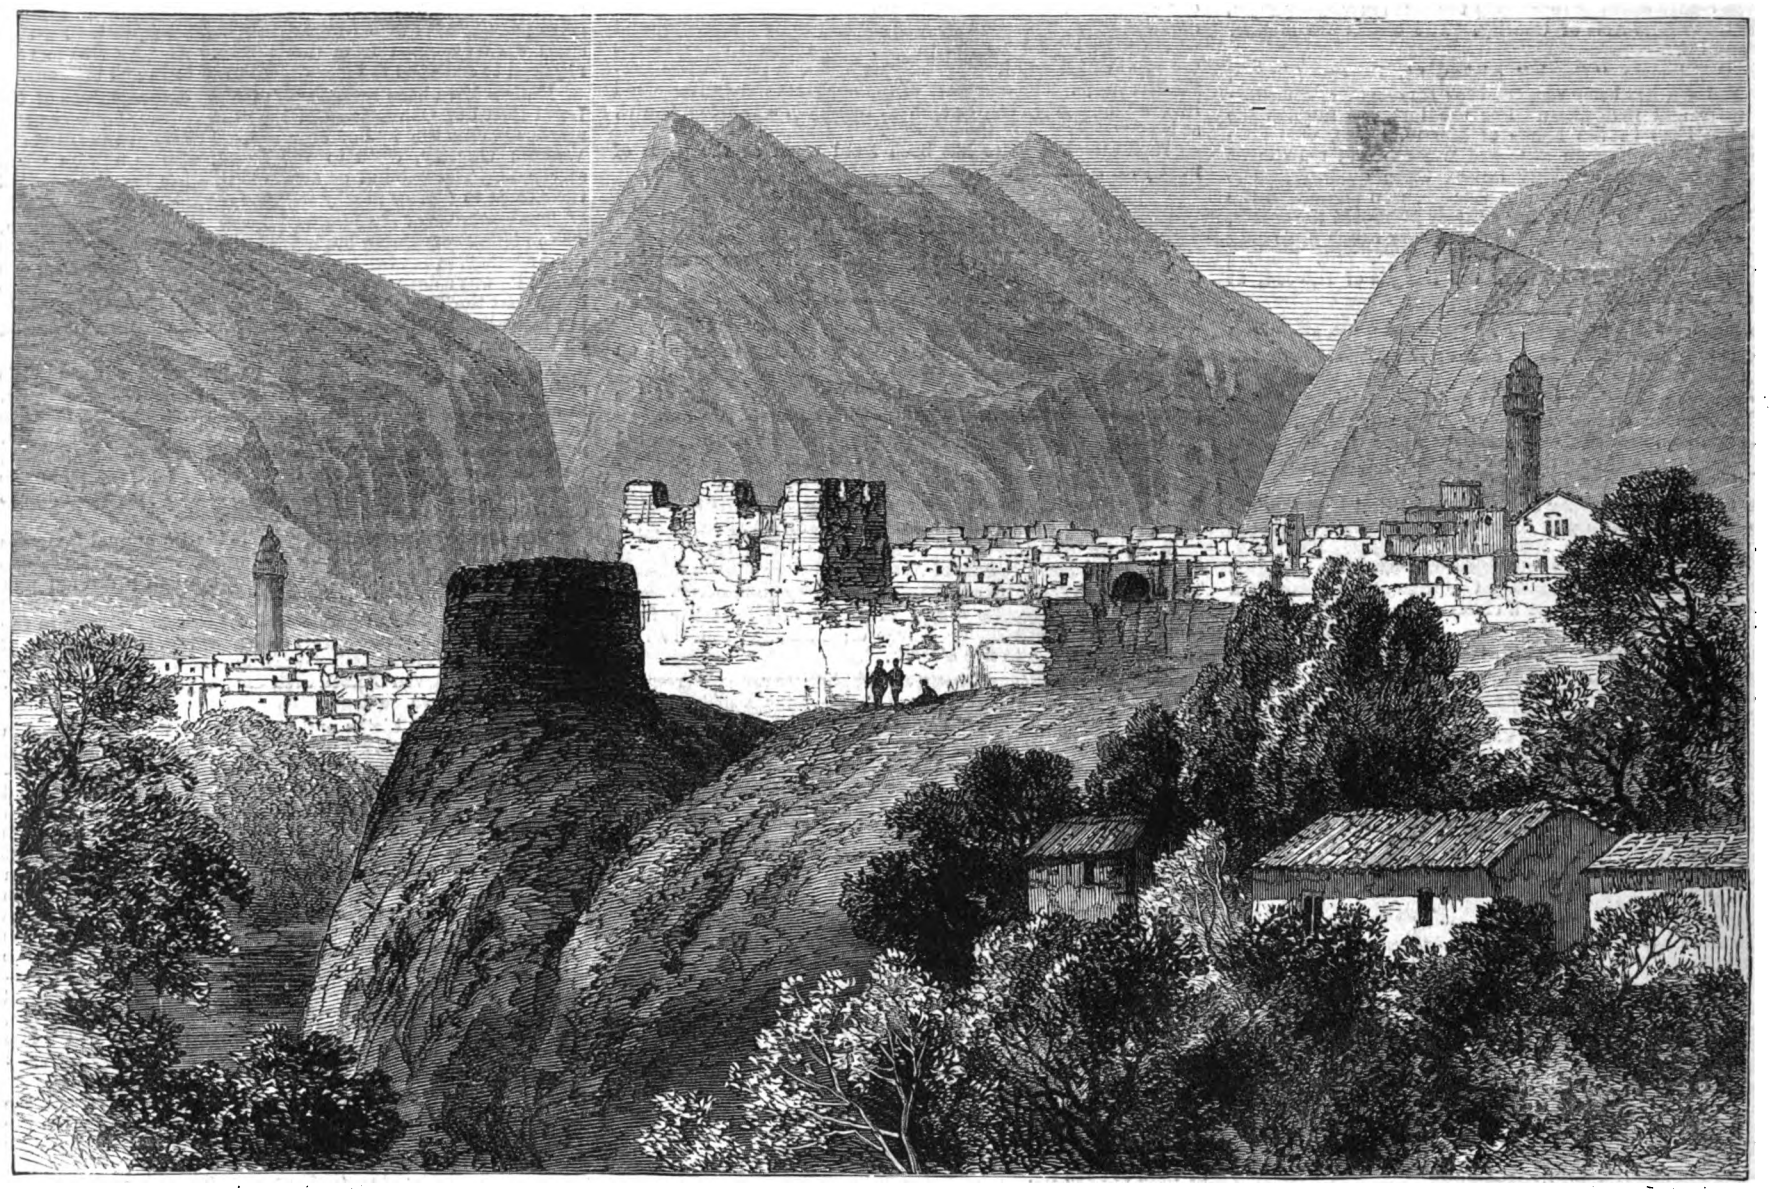
Notices have been served upon twenty-one members of the Local Board of Oswaldtwistle, East Lancashire, holding them responsible for the loss of over £38,000 through the frauds of William Gourley, clerk to the board, who is now in penal servitude. The ground of action is that the board permitted their clerk to borrow money without sufficient investigation.

The residence of Sir James Oldknow, Mayor of Nottingham, was on Monday morning broken into by burglars. His Worship was surprised in his bedroom, which was entered by the thieves whilst he was asleep. He at once sprang out of bed and gave chase, but the burglars made their escape. Several rooms in the house had been ransacked, and the valuable contents placed on the lawn ready to be taken away.

The Lord Provost of Edinburgh presented silver medals and sums of money to three police-constables and four firemen, in acknowledgment of their exertions in saving life at a fire in Earl Grey-street on Aug. 3 last. The police-constables, named James Martin, Thomas Mitchell, and Henry Christie, were each presented with a silver medal and £5, while the firemen, James Chessar, Henry Kegie, John Dyce, and Thomas Graham, received a medal and £1 each.

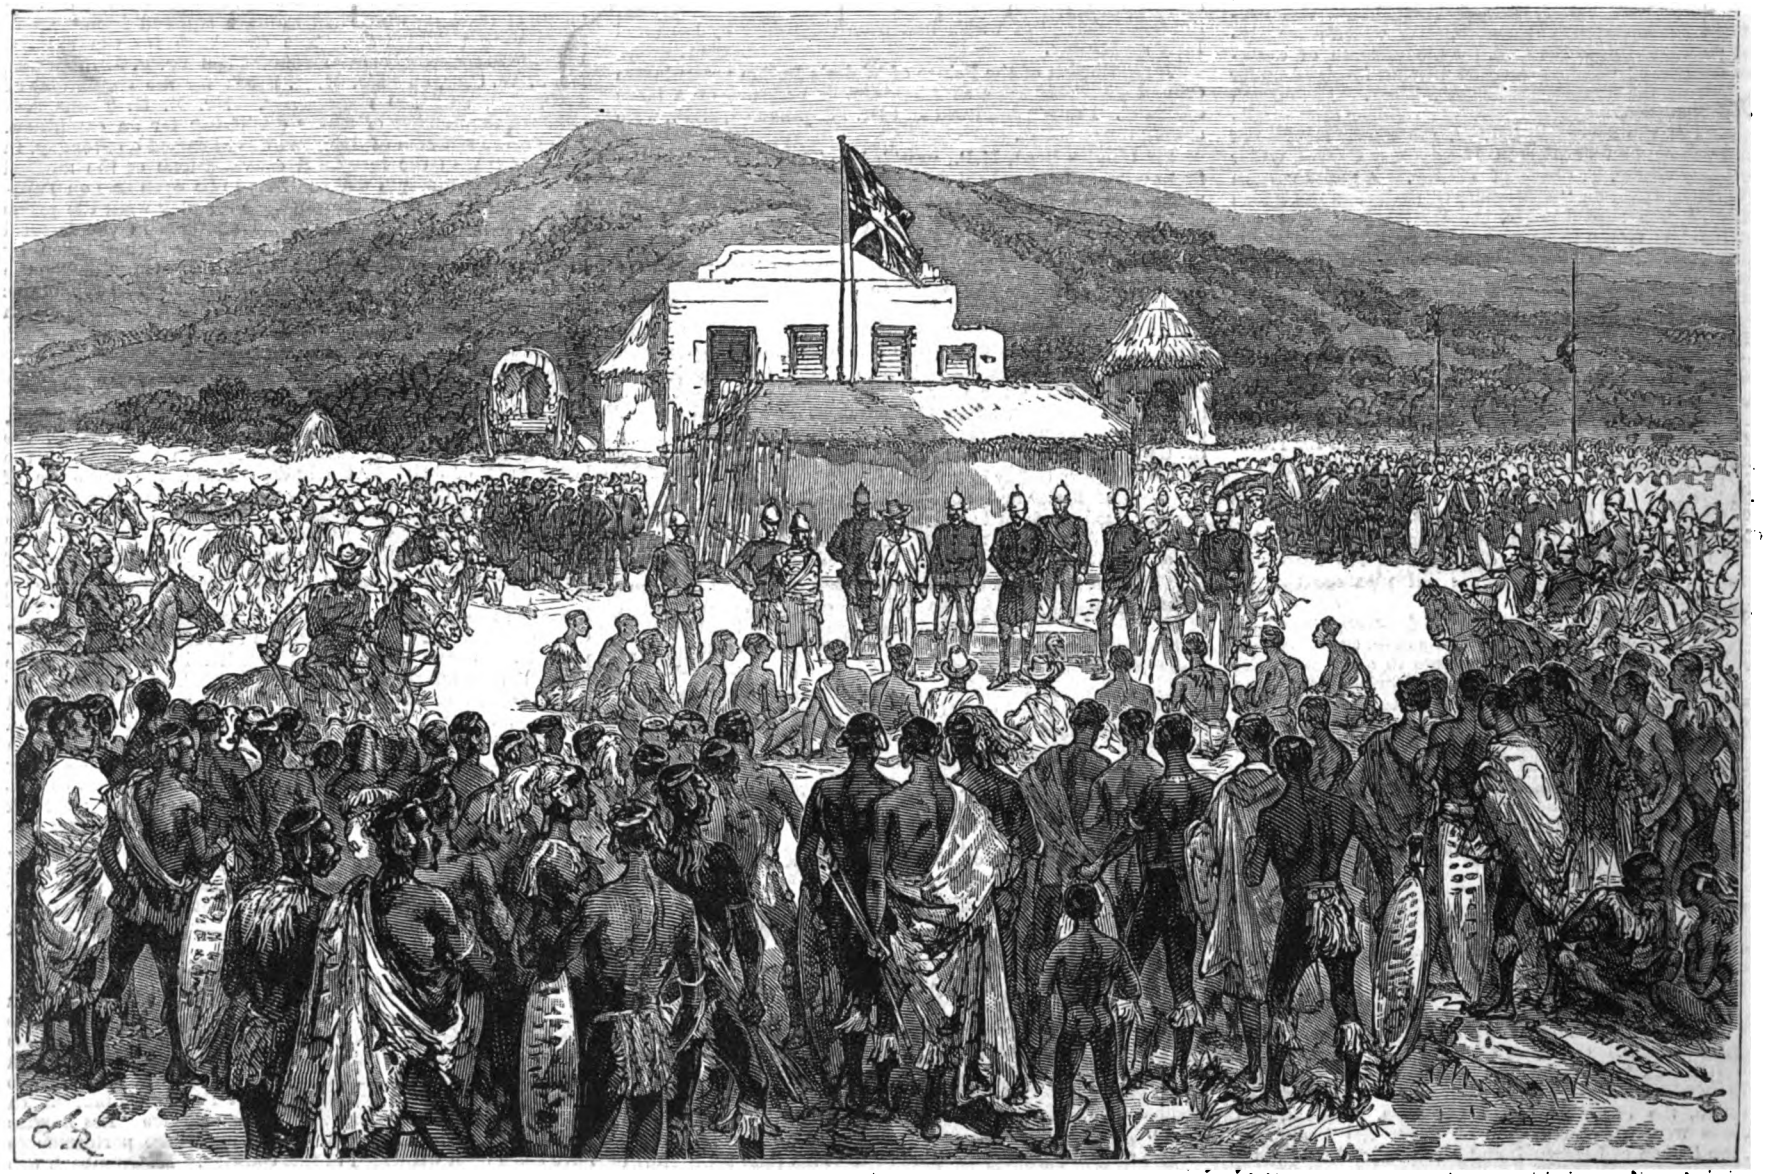
The Social Science Association holds its annual Congress this year in Edinburgh. On Wednesday morning there was special service in St. Giles's Cathedral, when a sermon was preached by the Rev. J. Cameron Lees, D.D. In the evening the president, Lord Reay, delivered the opening address in the Free Assembly-hall; and there, each morning, the presidents of departments gave their addresses before the work of the sections, which meet at eleven o'clock each day, began. Of this department there are five.

Last week 5776 births and 3571 deaths were registered in London and twenty-two other large towns of the United Kingdom. In London 2453 births and 1353 deaths were registered. Allowing for increase of population, the births exceeded by 32, whereas the death were 7 below, the average numbers in the corresponding week of the last ten years. The deaths included 2 from smallpox, 12 from measles, 61 from scarlet fever, 10 from diphtheria, 20 from whooping-cough, 17 from different forms of fever, and 110 from diarrhœa; thus to the seven principal diseases of the zymotic class 232 deaths were referred, against numbers declining from 522 to 528 in the nine preceding weeks. These 232 deaths were 21 below the corrected average number from the same diseases in the corresponding week of the last ten years. The deaths referred to diseases of the respiratory organs, which had been 124, 153, and 174 in the three preceding weeks, further rose to 199 last week, and exceeded by 10 the corrected weekly average: 121 resulted from bronchitis, and 51 from pneumonia.



A majority of the medical schools in connection with the metropolitan hospitals were opened yesterday week, when the usual addresses were delivered—by Dr. Donkin, at Westminster Hospital; Dr. Cavafy, at St. George's; Dr. George Johnson, at King's College; Dr. Ord, at St. Thomas's; Mr. Walter Pye, at St. Mary's; Professor Tuson, at the Royal Veterinary College; Dr. T. A. Norton, at the London School of Medicine for Women; and Dr. Andrew Clark, at the London Hospital.—On Monday afternoon Dr. J. Compton Burnett gave the annual Hahnemann address to the students at the Homœopathic Hospital, Great Ormond-street.—At University College the medical session was opened on Monday evening by an address delivered by Professor Burdon-Sanderson. The occasion, he said, was a special one. It was rendered so by the opening of the new science wing, in which three departments of teaching which had hitherto suffered from want of space were provided for. The examiners for the Medical Entrance Exhibitions have recommended Mr. P. J. Edmunds, Mr. J. W. Carr, and Mr. H. E. Brock for the exhibitions of £100, £60, and £40 respectively. Mr. E. H. Thane also obtained the number of marks qualifying for an exhibition. The Parkes Museum of Hygiene was reopened on Monday, in connection with the inaugural conversazione of the medical school. The museum will continue to be open free on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays.—Yesterday week the prizes were distributed to the successful students in the medical department of King's College, the chair being taken by Professor George Johnson, M.D., F.R.S.—On Monday the anatomy class-room in the new Edinburgh Medical School was opened for the use of the students, this being the first portion of the new buildings made available for class work.

TRANSVAAL NATIVE CHIEFS.

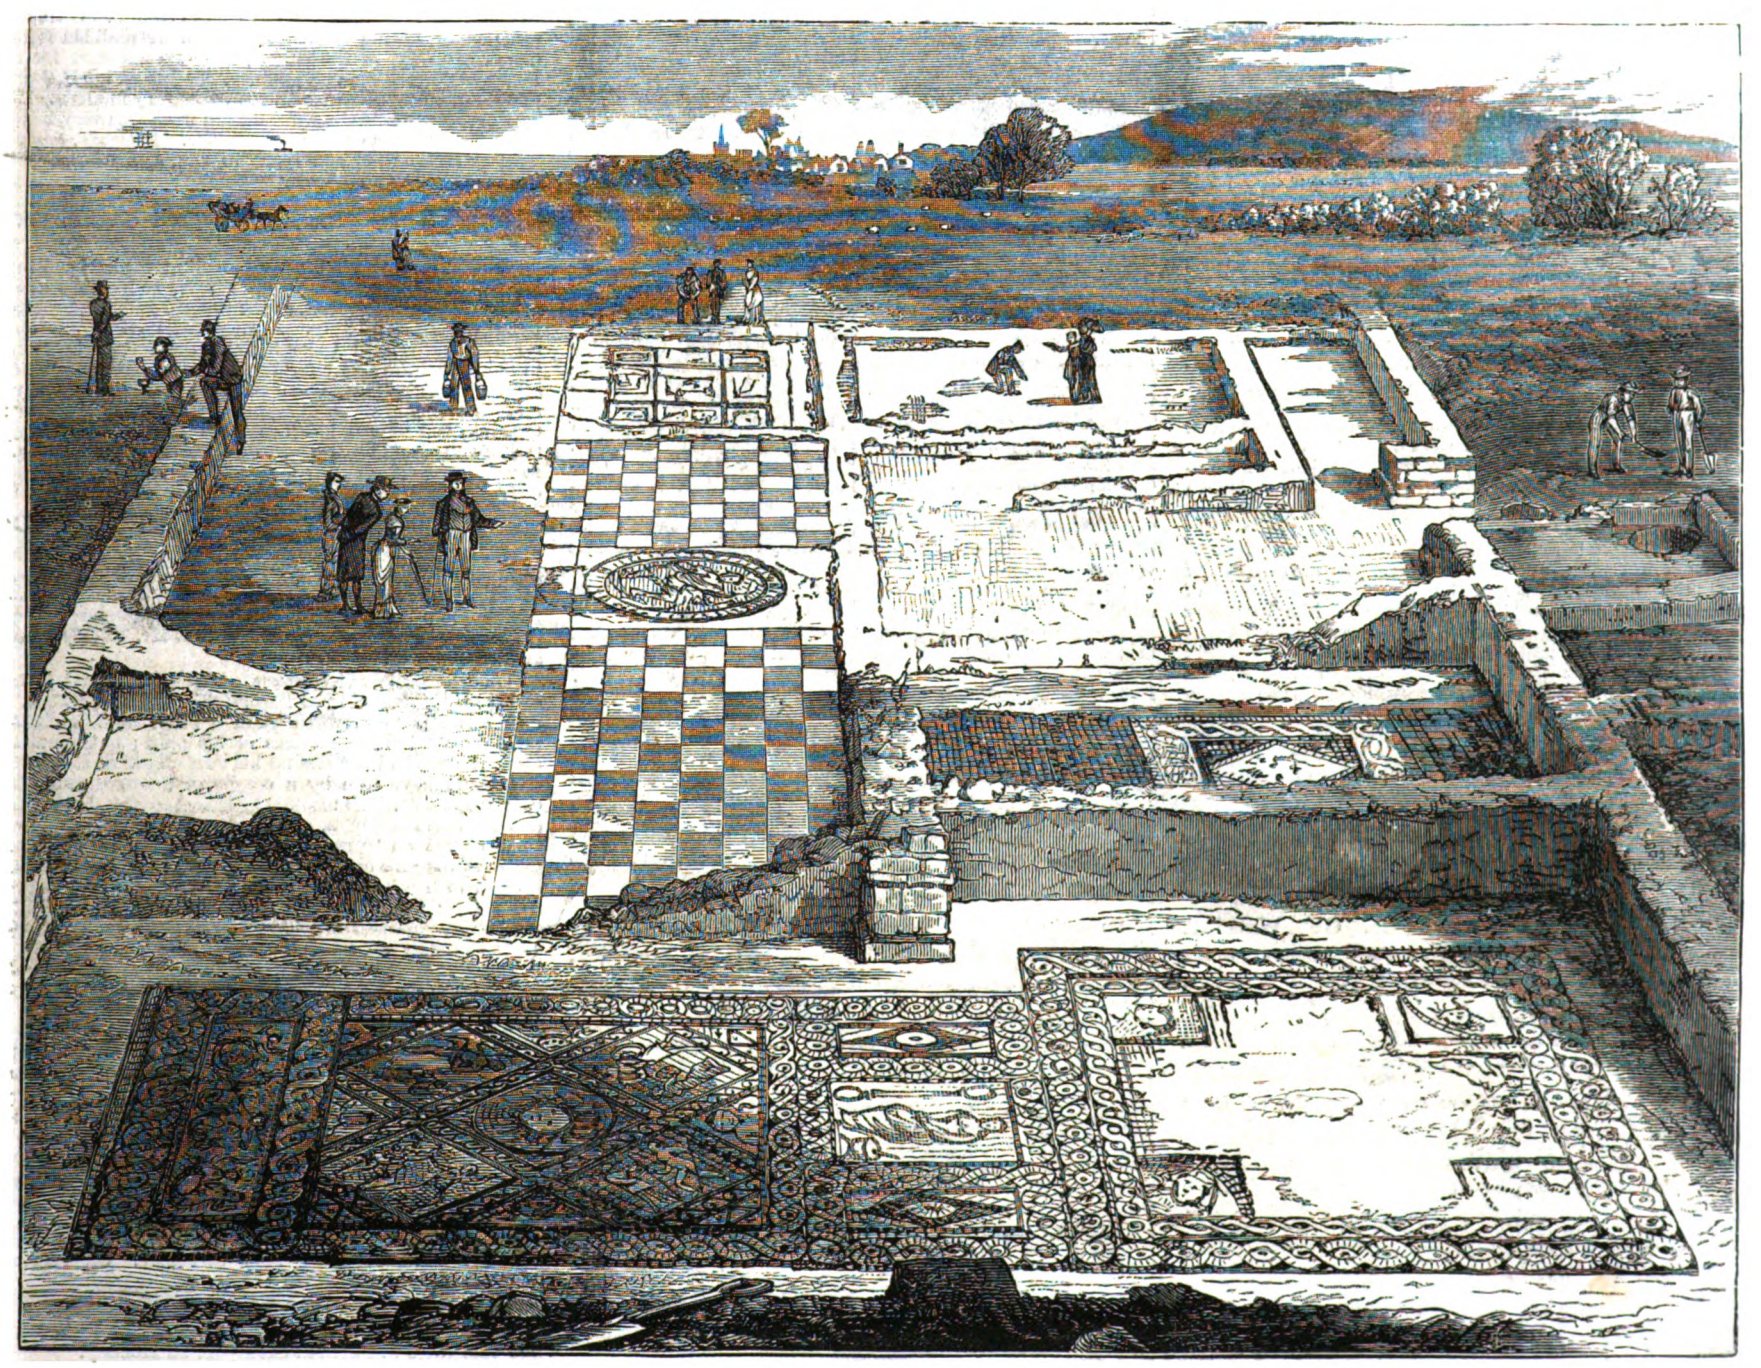


The British Administrator of the Transvaal, Sir Owen Lanyon, K.C.M.G., C.B., visited the district of Zoutpansberg, the most northerly part of that South African province, in the latter part of July. At Klipdam Farm, the residence of Captain Dahl, Commissioner for native affairs in that district, on July 22, his Excellency received thirteen of the Makatee and other chiefs of the neighbouring tribes. Among these were Maraba, Zebedill, Mapastella, and Makapan, rulers of some of the largest native communities. Each brought a white ox as a present to the English chief and as a token of homage to the Queen of England. The Hon. Mr. Shepstone, Commissioner for Native Affairs in the Transvaal, accompanied Sir Owen Lanyon, and assisted in interpreting the mutual assurances and explanations. The Administrator and his staff had an escort composed of a troop of mounted infantry, formed out of the 94th Regiment, under command of Lieutenant Carden. Our Illustration of the scene is from a sketch by Captain F. Campbell, of the 94th, commanding the troops in the fort at Marabastadt. He informs us that Mr. Shepstone has had no difficulty in collecting the tax imposed on the natives and sending the amount to Pretoria. The Boers also, in that district, are now settling down quietly, and paying taxes to the British Government. Sir Owen Lanyon is the first Governor of the Transvaal who has ever visited that remote part of the country, having gone as far as the Spelonken, where he met some other native chiefs; and his visit is likely to do much good.

The popular composer, M. Offenbach, died at Paris on Tuesday morning, after twelve hours of acute suffering. He was born at Cologne on June 21, 1819. After completing his musical studies at the Paris Conservatoire, he was engaged (in 1847) in the orchestra of the Théâtre Français, and became known by setting to music some of La Fontaine's fables. In 1855 he obtained a license for the new theatre "Les Bouffes Parisiens," where he formed a company whose performances have since been witnessed in this country. M. Offenbach was decorated with the Legion of Honour in 1861. His best-known musical works (in London as in Paris) are "La Belle Hélène," "Orphée aux Enfers," "La Barbe Bleue," "La Grande Duchesse," "La Perichole," "Roi Carotte," and "Un Voyage dans la Lune."

Digitized by Google

ANTIVARI, FROM A SKETCH BY CAPTAIN J. W. GAMBIER, R.N.—SEE PAGE 350.



INTERVIEW BETWEEN SIR OWEN LANYON AND NATIVE CHIEFS OF ZOUTPANSBERG, TRANSVAAL.

SEE PRECEDING PAGE

Digitized by Google

SIR JOSIAH MASON'S SCIENCE COLLEGE, BIRMINGHAM.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

ROMAN VILLA DISCOVERED NEAR BRADING, IN THE ISLE OF WIGHT.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

Digitized by Google

The Extra Supplement.

"SETTLING A FRONTIER DISPUTE."

This fierce duel or conflict between a typical pair of Border warriors—not to call them Border ruffians—on the verge of a mountain precipice, in the highlands above the east shore of the Adriatic, may illustrate the character of those inveterate Montenegrin and Albanian hostilities, which are now singularly complicated with European policy by the recently attempted Naval Demonstration. Our Special Artist, Mr. R. C. Woodville, has both in Montenegro and in Albania had ample opportunities of studying the pictorial aspects of the subject; and his delineation of these wild figures respectively, of their costumes and action, not less than of the scenery of the Tchernagora and of the neighbouring mountain ranges, may be relied on as correct. The Albanian, or Skipetar, as he calls himself, is recognised by his dress, with the wide fustanella, or stiff white petticoat, the scarf wound about his waist, and the peculiar head-gear, a close skull-cap, the head being shaved, all but one long tress of thick hair, floating loosely behind. He has now grasped the hair of his enemy, and is trying to cut off his head, while the Montenegrin strives to hurl the other from the edge of the cliff. It is unnecessary again to remind the reader that, during many past ages, these irreconcilable national enemies, still further exasperated against each other by religious animosity, and by the continual efforts of the Turkish Empire to subjugate Montenegro, have striven with unabated ferocity in the patriotic work of mutual destruction, which is the only work that men in those parts of the world think it worth while to do. A grand impulse has lately, however, been given to the renewal of such "anti-human," or perhaps only too human, performances by the diplomatic patronage of the Great Powers undertaking to recommend a fresh distribution of territory, in the upland valley of the Lim, about Gusinje, or on the shores of the Lake of Scutari, or finally along the seacoast around Dulcigno. These disputed tracts of land seem to be equally well calculated to furnish the bone of contention for wild beasts to fight over, and there is a good deal of the wild beast in such warlike and half-savage races of mankind, unredeemed by Western civilisation.

SIR JOSIAH MASON'S SCIENCE COLLEGE, BIRMINGHAM.

The opening of this institution was celebrated on Friday, last week, with an address by Professor Huxley in the Townhall, a luncheon at the Queen's Hotel, and a soirée in the rooms of the College. The buildings have been five years and a half in construction. The foundation-stone was laid on Feb. 23, 1875, that being the eightieth birthday of Sir Josiah Mason, the founder. The site comprises about an acre of ground, but only half of the area is at present occupied by buildings. The front elevation, in Edmund-street, as will be seen by the Engraving we publish, is of a very imposing character. It is in the Gothic style of the thirteenth century, with details and embellishments of an elaborate design. The edifice, with its hundred rooms and 370 windows, rises to a height of 122 ft. In the apartments assigned to the use of the several professors, every provision is made for scientific teaching; all the principal science colleges of this country and of the Continent having been inspected by the architect before the plan was passed by Sir Josiah Mason and the trustees.

The foundation deed specifies that the instruction provided in the college shall consist of mathematics, physics, chemistry, geology, mineralogy, metallurgy, botany, zoology, physiology, the English and French and German languages, with such further extension as the trustees may consider desirable. There are at present six trustees, appointed by Sir Josiah Mason, who himself holds the title of Bailiff; but in future the number is to be eleven, and five are to be nominated by the Town Council of Birmingham. The object of the institution is to afford a thorough scientific education, especially with reference to manufactures, and to mines and metallurgy, and to the laws of health. At present four professors have been appointed, in the departments of mathematics, physics, chemistry, and biology; but an extension of the scheme may be expected when the results of the first term have been ascertained.

Sir Josiah Mason has endowed the college with property consisting of freehold land and houses in Birmingham, yielding upwards of £3000 a year, and has paid all the expense of building and fittings, likely to reach about £60,000. As he founded and endowed, some few years ago, an orphanage near Birmingham, at a cost of more than a quarter of a million, an idea may be formed both of his wealth and of his beneficence. Although of such advanced age, Sir Josiah Mason has personally superintended the building, from first to last, engaging no contractor for any part of the work, but relying entirely on his own judgment and the skill and experience of Mr. Cossins, the accomplished architect. On the occasion of laying the foundation-stone, he gave some account of the incidents in a career which had enabled him to confer such large benefits on his fellow-men. It was mentioned that he came from Kidderminster to Birmingham a poor lad, in search of a living; that he worked at a variety of trades; that he devoted his first savings to making steel pens (then selling from the manufactory at a shilling apiece) under the auspices of Messrs. Perry; that his works grew to become the greatest pen factory in the world; and that he subsequently engaged in the electroplating and copper trade with Messrs. Elkington, and in the German silver trade, which he still carries on. The pen trade of Sir Josiah Mason is now transferred to the joint-stock company of Perry and Co. We gave a portrait of Sir Josiah Mason some years ago.

ROMAN VILLA IN THE ISLE OF WIGHT.

The discovery, by Captain Thorp, of Yarbridge, of Roman remains at Morton Farm, near Brading, in the Isle of Wight, has led to further researches of considerable interest. The Roman villa, at first but partially disclosed, is now being fully explored. In the Illustration given this week we are enabled to show the more important of the discoveries which have been made.

The extended excavations are on the estate of Lady Oglander, of Nunwell, who has generously afforded every facility for investigation. So likewise has the present occupier of the land, Mr. Micah Cooper, of Morton. The works have now been continued three weeks, under the direction of a Committee of Antiquaries, who are Messrs. Cornelius Nicholson, F.S.A., of Ventnor; John E. Price, F.S.A.; and F. G. Hilton Price, F.G.S., of London. They propose to raise by public subscription the funds which will be requisite to ensure a complete exploration and the protection hereafter for the remains uncovered. Although several interesting chambers have been opened up, there are many indications of others which yet lie buried. It is impossible at present to describe the extent of the villa, or the purposes to which the respective apartments were adapted. The walls, none of which are known to be external, are mostly uniform in thickness. They are 2 ft. wide, and from 3 ft. to 4 ft. high, which are the usual dimensions of such walls. This affords further testimony to the opinion that the foundations only of Roman domestic buildings were of solid masonry, and that upon them was reared a superstructure of wood and plaster, with a roof of slate or tiles.

The walls are of flint, chalk, and rubble, bonded in the Roman manner with slabs, in courses, of stone taken from the locality, and probably from the shore near Bembridge. They are faced with squared blocks; here and there are intervening piers for the support of doors and columns, finely worked in like material. These walls have been lined with stucco, painted in tasteful patterns, and much of which has been preserved.

The mosaic floors as yet disclosed already present wide field for study and conjecture. Two of them form part of a tesselated corridor or passage, upwards of 60 ft. in length, paved in a chequered pattern, the alternating squares being white and red. Upon the first of these mosaics is a composite design, grotesque in character, possibly symbolical, which may be connected with ancient mythology, or with the early introduction of Christianity. The meaning or intention of the strange figures which make up this combination is not yet ascertained. In the second pavement, the design is such as can be readily explained. It is a compartment of about eight feet square, with a tasteful border of the guilloche pattern, formed of tesseræ of varied colours. Inclosed by a circle is a figure of Orpheus playing on his lyre, and attracting around him a monkey, a fox, some birds, and other animals. Some of the tesseræ which form the plumage of the birds have been tastefully and artistically selected. This room or corridor leads to the largest apartment which has yet been cleared. This is nearly 40 ft. long by about 18 ft. wide. Midway are two piers of masonry for the support of columns.

At the western end is a mosaic, which, though much injured, will, like that more perfect one in the eastern division, bear comparison with any similar remains yet discovered in Great Britain. The designs are mostly of a mythological and pastoral character; figures of the Seasons, of the fable of Perseus and Andromeda, and some connected with the pursuits of agriculture, together with groups engaged in dancing and playing on pipes and tambourines; Mercury-looking figures blowing the buccina or horn of spiral twists, such as were used by the ancient neatherds to collect their flocks. In the centre is a bearded figure, apparently an astronomer, surrounded by objects connected with his profession. In an adjoining room is a pavement of a coarser character, with a plain geometrical pattern formed of inch-sized tesseræ, grey, white, and red.

Upwards of a dozen chambers have been examined, but their uses are not yet understood. Flues and furnaces, showing the way in which the rooms were warmed, and adapted to habitation, are in course of excavation. Some pottery, pieces of glass, bones of domestic and other animals, fresco paintings, ridge and roof tiles, together with quantities of iron nails, belonging to the slabs which once formed the roof, have been taken from the débris.

The coins, also one of the most interesting features of the work, point to the period when the buildings were occupied: they at present illustrate the reigns of Gallienus, Victorinus, Tetricus, Carausius, and Constans; the last bringing the date down to the early part of the fourth century.

It is hoped that the committee of explorers will be so encouraged and assisted as to be able to complete their work, which has already attracted a large number of visitors to the island.

Mr. Henry Irving opened a bazaar at the Birmingham Townhall on Tuesday morning in aid of the Perry Barr Institute, the first offshoot of the Birmingham Midland Institute, of which he was president for two years. The Townhall was crowded, in spite of the bad weather, and Mr. Irving was enthusiastically received. He has offered, if invited, to give a reading for the benefit of the institution.

Autumn is now with us, bringing sensations of pensive regret, though mixed with hope for next year, to the lover of "Sylvan Spring." This title, pregnant with significance, has been chosen by Mr. Francis George Heath, the favourite writer upon ferns and woodland trees, for a beautiful new volume, which Messrs. Sampson Low and Co. have recently published. It is adorned with twelve coloured plates, drawn by Mr. F. E. Hulme, F.L.S., and printed by Messrs. Leighton Brothers, which represent floral groups characteristic of the vernal season. There are many wood engravings, also, drawn by several of our best artists for landscape, or for animals and plants. Mr. Heath's work is a charming, as well as a strictly correct, description of the aspect of rural nature in our English springtime. We mean to set it by us for winter reading, as a study of consolatory promise. February or March will perhaps do for its perusal: in the mean time let us say that it is an excellent book of its kind.

The new session of the City of London College, with its evening classes for young men, began last Monday. On glancing through the prospectus just issued, we observe that several new classes have been added to the curriculum—viz., Physiography, Biology, Acoustics, Light, and Heat, Principles of Agriculture, &c. The opening address of the session was delivered on Thursday evening by Mr. Edward Clarke, Q.C., M.P.—On the same day began the session of the Birkbeck Literary and Scientific Institution, of the North London Branch of the London Society for the Extension of University Teaching, of the Quebec Educational Institution, and of the technical classes in connection with the Artisans' Institute.—The class-list of the Working Men's College, Great Ormond-street, has been issued, with a report showing the progress made by the college for the last few years. The classes are most comprehensive, and to a great extent taught by members of the Universities. At the opening meeting on Thursday an address was given by the United States Minister, the Hon. Russell Lowell.—Yesterday week there was a large gathering of the friends and members of the Young Men's Christian Association, in their head-quarters in Aldersgate-street, on the occasion of the distribution of prizes to the successful students in the evening classes by Mr. Hugh Matheson.—Yesterday week the twenty-first session of the Ladies' Division of the Crystal Palace School of Art, Science, and Literature, was opened, with a goodly list of students, equalling in number that of any previous session. The inaugural address was delivered in one of the University lecture-rooms, by the Rev. Robinson Thornton, D.D., on the Study of English and of English Literature.—The Rev. Edward White, who has succeeded the late Dr. Raleigh as Merchants' Lecturer at the Weigh House Chapel, Fish-street-hill, delivered his first address on Tuesday morning, there being a large attendance.—Professor Henry Morley has undertaken to deliver a course of six lectures on Characteristics of English Literature, at the St. James's Lecture Hall, Eden-grove, Holloway. The opening lecture will be given on the evening of the 15th inst.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

After all the excitement engendered by the third meeting of Robert the Devil and Bend Or, the remainder of the racing at Newmarket last week seemed rather tame, even though the card upon each day was decidedly above the average of a First October Meeting. The weather, too, was nothing like so fine as on the first day, for a nasty haze hung about the heath, and made it difficult to distinguish the various colours at any distance from the stand. The Thirty-second Triennial Produce Stakes brought out a very good field on the Wednesday, though Mask and Zealot were the only ones backed with real spirit, the former having a slight call in the betting, in spite of having undergone a gingerly preparation for the last few weeks. Even with this disadvantage, however, he looked to be winning cleverly about fifty yards from home, and must have stopped in the last few strides, as, to the surprise of everyone, the verdict was in favour of Zealot by a head. Muriel again ran well, and finished third; but Elizabeth once more found a mile and a quarter quite beyond her compass, and should never be asked to travel even a mile, except on a very easy course, like those at Epsom or Brighton. Joseph Cannon's stable seemed quite at cross purposes over the Great Eastern Railway Handicap, as, after Fire King (6 st. 4 lb.) had been backed down to a comparatively short price, he receded to 10 to 1, and Hackthorpe (8 st. 12 lb.) was made nearly as good a favourite as anything. However, first thoughts proved the best; for this once speedy "sprinter" seems to have lost most of his dash, and Fire King won as he liked from the luckless Sword Dance (7 st. 2 lb.), who is constantly getting placed, but never seems quite good enough to win. It may be remembered that Fire King was talked of as a likely outsider for the Derby, but met with some accident during his preparation for that race, in which he naturally did not figure to any advantage. The Granby Stakes was noticeable for the first victory of Mr. J. R. Keene, the American sportsman, who has a team of horses at Bedford Lodge, and his two-year-old, Bookmaker, beat Lady Chelmsford so cleverly, that he must be a pretty good one.

The Thursday was remarkable for the repeated successes of Fordham and Constable, as the former rode four winners and the latter three, leaving one race for Archer. All Constable's victories were obtained in Lord Rosebery's colours, and must have been specially gratifying to him, as he trains his Lordship's horses as well as rides them. The Second Nursery Stakes was the most important of his three races, and he won this upon Myra (8 st. 11 lb.), the newly-named filly by Doncaster-Czarina. She must be really smart, as she gave weight to everything in the race, and conceded no less than 12 lb. to Amy Melville, who has proved that she can gallop on more than one occasion. The Thirty-third Triennial Produce Stakes fell to Thebais, a filly who has improved wonderfully since she made her debut, and who does great credit to Hermit. Certainly there was nothing very grand among her thirteen opponents, still Lemonxlove and Kühleborn, who finished second and third respectively, have both shown themselves able to win good races. On the strength of his having beaten Lord Clive in such style two days previously, Favo (8 st. 7 lb.) was made a hot favourite for the October Handicap, and ran very well for about a mile, when his roaring stopped him; and Elf King (8 st. 6 lb.), who was not at all fancied by the stable, as the distance was considered too far for him, had little trouble in beating Lancaster Bowman (7 st. 8 lb.). On the Friday, Exeter had a very easy task in the Rosebery Plate; and, of course, Bal Gal cantered home for the Rous Memorial, in which the unlucky Montrose was once more second. Owing to the same error in his nomination which disqualified Apollo for one or two races in the spring, he could not start for the St. Leger Stakes; and, in his absence, Sportsman made short work of Milan, Incendiary, and three other very moderate animals. The Cesarewitch betting during the week was very heavy, and some important changes took place. Isonomy, having met with an accident, is not likely to run, and Chippendale and Dresden China also go very badly in the market. At the time of writing, the first three in the St. Leger are the reigning favourites; whilst Ulster, Petronel, and Caroline have also plenty of supporters.

A highly successful coursing meeting was held at Plumpton last week, in spite of the weather being so hot that one could hardly help fancying that, owing to some mistake, coursing was being carried on in July. A very large entry was obtained for the Derby and Oaks Stakes, the former being for dog puppies, and the latter for those of the opposite sex. After some excellent trials, Glen Oscar, by Fugitive—Mary Hill, and Sailor, by Minatto—Stephanotis, divided the Derby; and the Oaks was shared between Palm Bloom, by Ptarmigan—Gallant Foe, and Glen Oban, own sister to Glen Oscar. Mr. Brice judged exceedingly well, and the duties of slipper were divided between Nailard and Wilkinson. The Brompton Club Meeting suffered somewhat from a scarcity of hares, while some of the trials were decidedly fluky. The Brompton Cup, for all ages, fell to Mr. Hyslop's Hook, who beat Commerce in the final tie. Rebecca and Portinscule were the last pair left in the Naworth Castle Stakes, for puppies, and the former, possessing a trifle more pace than her opponent, just gained the award. It need hardly be said that Mr. Hedley's decisions gave general satisfaction.

On Monday last H. Thomas, of Brentwood, and J. Cannon, of Kingston, sculled from Putney to Mortlake for £380. The pair met last year, when Cannon made a grand fight of it until deprived of the services of his pilot; but, on this occasion, Thomas had matters all his own way from start to finish, and could have won by a couple of hundred yards had he chosen to do so. The meeting of Elias Laycock, the Australian, and Thomas Blackman, of Wandsworth, who sculled over the same course on Tuesday, naturally excited far more interest than did the race of the previous day. Laycock, though much inferior to Trickett, is decidedly the second best man in the Antipodes; while Blackman, though he has done little to support it, possesses considerable reputation. To all appearances—though we fancy the colonist had the measure of his man throughout—the race was a very close one for about two miles, when Blackman was rowed to a standstill, and gave up the struggle.

The Australian cricketers were entertained twice on Monday. After luncheon at the Holborn Viaduct Hotel, Mr. Sargood, a member of the Council of Victoria, presented to them silver tankards, on behalf of the colonists resident in London, and in addition a loving cup was given to Mr. Murdoch. In the evening the Australians dined at the Mansion House, by invitation of the Lord Mayor, who congratulated them heartily on the success they had achieved in England. In replying, Mr. Murdoch expressed the gratification the members of the team felt at the fact that the difficulties which presented themselves at first in the way of a representative match being played had been overcome. On Tuesday the Australians left London for Venice.

The annual meeting of the Worcestershire Union of Clubs and Institutes was held at Stourport on Monday.

Digitized by Google

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON, and CO.'S NEW LIST.

JEAN INGELOW'S NEW STORY is SARAH DE BERANGER. 3 vols. [Ready.

Now ready, small post 8vo, cloth extra, price 8s. 6d.,

MOUNTAIN AND PRAIRIE: A Journey from Victoria to Winnipeg, vià Peace River Pass. By the Rev. DANIEL M. GORDON, B.D., Ottawa. With Maps and Illustrations.

A BOOK FOR BOYS.

DICK CHEVELEY: His Adventures and Misadventures. By the late W. H. G. KINGSTON. An entirely New Story. Square crown 8vo, cloth extra, with Illustrations. 7s. 6d.

JULES VERNE'S NEW BOOK IS

THE TRIBULATIONS OF A CHINAMAN. By JULES VERNE. Square crown 8vo, cloth extra, illustrated. 7s. 6d.

Now ready, 4to, in wrapper, price 1s. 6d., No. 58, Vol. V.,

MEN OF MARK for OCTOBER. Containing permanent photographs from life, with Biographical Notices, of Joseph Chamberlain, M.P., Sir Henry Besseiner, C.E., and George Alexander Macfarren, Mus. Doc.
London: SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON, SEARLE, and RIVINGTON.

Now ready, by the Author of "The Wreck of the Grosvenor," "John Houldsworth, Chief Mate," &c.,

A SAILOR'S SWEETHEART. By W. CLARK RUSSELL. 3 vols., crown 8vo, 31s. 6d.

A NEW WORK FOR ART STUDENTS.

A TREATISE ON ETCHING. Texts and Plates by MAXIME LALANNE. Translated by S. R. KOEHLER. With Notes. Royal 8vo, cloth extra, 12s. 6d.

JACK AND JILL: a Village Story. By LOUISA M. ALCOTT, Author of "Little Men," "Little Women," &c. Small post 8vo, cloth extra, gilt edges, 5s.

A BOOK FOR BOYS.

THE HEIR OF KILFINNAN: a Tale of the Shore and Ocean. By the late W. H. G. KINGSTON. An entirely new story. Square crown 8vo, cloth extra, with Illustrations, 7s. 6d.

BEATRICE MELTON'S DISCIPLINE. By MAUD JEANNE FRANC, Author of "Marian," "Minnie's Mission," &c. Small 8vo, cloth gilt, price 4s.
London: SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON, SEARLE, and RIVINGTON.

ART.

THE MAGAZINE OF ART for OCT. 2, ENLARGED,

AND TO BE PUBLISHED AT

ONE SHILLING MONTHLY.

THE STRIKING SUCCESS which has attended the publication of THE MAGAZINE OF ART is so continuous and gratifying as to justify the proprietors into developing the Magazine into the form which, from the commencement, they had hoped it might ultimately reach. They therefore beg to announce that with the PART published OCT. 25, not only will the number of pages be still further extended, but the size of the page will be also considerably enlarged, and the general character of the Magazine so far improved as to more than justify—it is believed—the increased price (One Shilling) at which it will be published.
CASSELL, PETTER, GALPIN, and Co., London.

ART, THE MAGAZINE OF.—The First Part of the New and Enlarged Series of "The Magazine of Art" (price 1s.) will contain an Etching entitled "The Trio," from a painting by Erskine Nicol, A.R.A., Etched by Lalauze. Prospectuses of the enlargement of the "Magazine of Art" at all Booksellers, or post-free from
CASSELL, PETTER, GALPIN, and Co., Ludgate-hill, London.

MISS BRADDON'S NEW NOVEL.
Now ready, at all Libraries, in 3 vols.,

JUST AS I AM. The New Novel. By the Author of "Lady Audley's Secret," &c.
London: J. and R. MAXWELL, Milton House, Shoe-lane, E.C.

MR. FREDERICK TALBOT'S NEW NOVEL.
Now ready, at all Libraries, in 3 vols.,

THE SCARSDALE PEERAGE. The New Novel. By the Author of "Lottie's Fortune," &c.
London: J. and R. MAXWELL, Milton House, Shoe-lane, E.C.

AN ENTIRELY NEW WORK.
Just ready, crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 5s.,

THE LIFE AND WORK OF JESUS CHRIST.
By the Rev. F. A. MALLESON, Vicar of Broughton-in-Furness, Editor of "Paley's Evidences," "Horæ Paulinæ," "Butler's Analogy," &c., in "The Christian Knowledge Series;" and of Mr. Ruskin's Letters to the Clergy on the Lord's Prayer and the Church.
WITH NUMEROUS ENGRAVINGS.
"The well-known but ever-fascinating story is here told in graceful and flowing language."—The "Scotsman."
London: WARD, LOCK, and Co., Salisbury-square, E.C.

SELF CULTURE FOR ALL.
WARD AND LOCK'S

UNIVERSAL INSTRUCTORS. A Complete Encyclopædia of Learning. Profusely illustrated. In Weekly Numbers, 1d.; and Monthly Parts, 6d. Prospectuses post-free from the Publishers.

WARD AND LOCK'S

UNIVERSAL INSTRUCTOR; or, Self Culture for All. No. 1 will be published on Oct. 1st, price 1d.; Part I. on Oct. 25, price 6d.
With Part I. will be presented, Gratis, a valuable Chart of the History of the World, printed in Colours.
London: WARD, LOCK, and Co., Salisbury-square, E.C.

NEW STORY.—Just published, price 5s.,

HOW THEY WERE CAUGHT IN A TRAP. A Tale of France in 1802.
By LESME STUART, Author of "Mimi," "The Good Old Days," &c. With a Frontispiece, introducing Napoleon I. and another character in the Story.
MARCUS WARD and Co., 67, Chandos-street, Strand, W.C.

8vo, pp. 724, cloth, 8s.; or half bound, 10s. 6d.,

HOMŒOPATHIC DOMESTIC PHYSICIAN. By Drs. HULTE and EPPS. Revised, with important additions and many new remedies, by WASHINGTON EPPS, L.R.C.P.
CONTENTS:—General Diseases—Casual Diseases—Cutaneous Diseases—Fevers—Affections of the Mind—the Head—the Eyes—the Ears—the Nose—the Face, Lips, and Jaws—the Teeth, Gums, and Mouth—the Windpipe and Chest—the Stomach and Bowels—the Urinary and Genital Organs—Diseases of Women—Treatment of Children—Anatomy and Physiology—Hygiene and Hydropathy—Materia Medica—Homœopathic Surgery—Medical and Surgical Appliances—Dislocations and Luxations—Fractures.
London: JAMES EPPS and Co., 48, Threadneedle-street.

Third Edition, 1s., post-free,

THE new ELECTROLYTIC TREATMENT of CANCER and of simple Tumours. By G. EDGELOW, M.D.—NELSON and Co., 23, Duke-street, Grosvenor-square, W.

JUST PUBLISHED. Post-free, Two Stamps.

DYSPEPSIA and the SEVERER FORMS OF INDIGESTION. A Small Pamphlet on those distressing complaints and their complete cure. Published by the Author, RICHARD KING, Esq., Staff Surgeon, R.N., 23, Warwick-st., Rugby.

Fourth Edition, cloth, post-free, 13 stamps,

DR. BARR MEADOWS on Homœopathy. "A clever exposé of the system."
G. HILL, 154, Westminster-road.

Eighth Edition, cloth, post-free, 33 stamps,

DR. BARR MEADOWS on Skin Disease. Remarks on the Abuse of Arsenic, and specifics.
G. HILL, 154, Westminster-road.

THE Treatment of Cancer, Tumours, and Ulcers, by CHIAN TURPENTINE, and all other Methods. Addressed to sufferers by ALEX. MARSDEN, M.D., senior Surgeon to the Cancer Hospital, London. Post-free, 1s.
London: WYMAN and SONS, Great Queen-street, W.C.

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

THE NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.
Now ready, at all the Libraries,

ROY AND VIOLA. By Mrs. FORRESTER, Author of "Viva," &c. 3 vols.
LORD BRACKENBURY. By AMELIA B. EDWARDS, Author of "Barbara's History." SECOND EDITION.
STRICTLY TIED UP. 3 vols.
ST. MARTIN'S SUMMER. By SHIRLEY SMITH, Author of "His Last Stake," &c. 3 vols.
A VERY OPAL. By C. L. PIRKIS. 3 vols.
CHEAP EDITION of YOUNG MRS. JARDINE. By the Author of "John Halifax." 3s., bound.
HURST and BLACKETT, Publishers, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

NEW NOVELS AT ALL LIBRARIES.

ADAM AND EVE. By the Author of "Dorothy Fox." In 3 vols. [On Tuesday next.
JOHNNY LUDLOW. Second Series. By Mrs. HENRY WOOD. 3 vols.
THE WELLFIELDS. By JESSIE FOTHERGILL. 3 vols.
A RED RAG. By R. MOUNTENEY JEPHSON. 2 vols (Immediately).
RICHARD BENTLEY and SON, New Burlington-street.

Just published, Illustrated, post-free, 1s. 8d.,

DECORATIVE PAINTING. A Practical Guide to Decorating the Walls of any Apartment, Painting Panels, Screens, and Terra Cotta. By W. R. HARRISON.—WM. BARNARD, 119, Edgware-road, London,

THE NEW FASHION-BOOK.

DEBENHAM and FREEBODY beg to announce the publication of the Twenty-second Number of their NEW FASHION-BOOK. The Book is enlarged to forty-eight pages, and contains numerous Illustrations of selected Models in Costumes, Mantles, Millinery, Evening Dresses, and Lace Goods, with Descriptive Articles, Estimates, Prices, &c.
"It is a complete index to the fashionable novelties of the day, in regard to colour and make, furnishing made-up costumes of all that is choicest and newest, with every article in the respective materials, so that ladies may SHOP AT HOME."

THE NEW FASHION-BOOK Post-free for twelve stamps.
DEBENHAM and FREEBODY, Wigmore-street, Wellbeck-street, London, W.

F. H. COWEN'S GREATEST SUCCESS.

THE CHILDREN'S HOME. By COWEN (Words, Weatherly).
They played in their beautiful gardens,
The children of high degree:
"Brighton Times" of April 16 says:—"The music is touching in its simplicity, while the air is rendered all the more effective by some rich phrasing which Mr. Cowen has introduced in the accompaniment."
With Piano and Harmonium (ad lib.) Accompaniment.
In B flat, C (compass, C to E), and E flat. Post-free, 24 stamps.
W. MORLEY Jun., and Co., 70, Upper-street, London, N.

MALVERN COLLEGE.
The ANNUAL EXAMINATION for SCHOLARSHIPS and ENTRANCE EXHIBITIONS will be held on DEC. 7 and 8.

T. J. B. will be glad to receive from his Southampton correspondent the date of the transaction referred to.

FINE-ART PARCEL of ENGRAVINGS for 21s.—Having purchased a large STOCK of first-class ENGRAVINGS, I have determined to SELL them at an immense reduction, comprising a pair of Turner's, pair of Landseer's, pair of Wilkie's, pair of Poole's, and a pair of Frith's, ten in all, in first-class condition, for 21s. Sufficient to furnish dining-room and library.—REES, 41, 42, 43, Russell-street, Covent-garden, opposite Drury-Lane Theatre.

WHAT IS YOUR CREST and WHAT IS YOUR MOTTO? Send name and county to CULLETON'S Heraldic Office. Plain Sketch, 3s. 6d.; colours, 7s. The arms of man and wife blended. Crest engraved on seals, rings, books, and steel dies, 8s. 6d. Gold seal, with crest, 25s. Solid Gold Ring, 5-carat, Hall-marked, with crest, 42s. Manual of Heraldry, 400 engravings, 3s. 9d.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

VISITING CARDS, by CULLETON. Fifty best quality, 2s. 8d., post-free, including the Engraving of Copper-plate. Wedding Cards, 50 each, 50 Embossed Envelopes, with Maiden Name, 13s. 6d.—T. CULLETON, Seal Engraver, 25, Cranbourn-street, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

CULLETON'S GUINEA BOX of STATIONERY contains a Ream of the very best Paper and 500 Envelopes, all stamped in the most elegant way with Crest and Motto, Monogram, or Address, and the engraving of Steel Die included. Sent to any part for P.O. order.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

SAMPLES GRATIS.

PAPIER MARION.—The Finest Writing Paper. Apply to 23, Soho-square, W., for Specimen Sheets and Envelopes. Sent gratis per post. To be had of all Stationers; and wholesale only of the Manufacturers, MARION and CO., London.

VITREMANIE, superseding Diaphanie. An easy and inexpensive method of decorating windows in churches, public buildings, and private houses, by which may be produced the rich colouring and beautiful designs equal in appearance to real stained glass. Handbook of Designs and full Instructions, 1s. 1d. Boxes, comprising designs, &c., at 21s., 31s. 6d., 42s. Particulars post-free. Sole Inventors, J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street, London, W.

CHROMOPHOTOGRAPHY. (KRAUS' PROCESS.)
The New Art (enabling any person without previous knowledge of either Painting or Drawing) to Colour Photographs on convex glasses, in imitation of China and Enamel Painting. Boxes containing every requisite, 26s. and 21s. Particulars post-free. Specimens shown on application at the Sole Agents, J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street, London, W.

WHY NOT MAKE YOUR OWN LANTERN SLIDES? (TRANSFER PROCESS.)
A Box containing a sheet of Twelve 3¼-inch VIEWS, Glasses, Roller, Brushes, Varnishes, New Frame, Masks, and Book containing full Instructions, 1s. Particulars and Price-Lists post-free.—J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street, London, W.

WHITE WOOD ARTICLES for Painting, Fern Printing, and Decalcomanie, Blotting-Books, Card Plates, Cigar-Cases, Screens, &c. New Patterns just received. Priced List free.—WM. BARNARD, 119, Edgware-road, London.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS. GOLD MEDAL, PARIS, 1878.

CHARLES FRODSHAM and CO. By Appointment to her Majesty. THREE GOLD MEDALS for CLOCKS and WATCHES. Only Address, 84, Strand, London, W.C.

WALKER'S CRYSTAL CASE WATCHES are superseding all others. Prize Medals—London, 1862; Paris, 1867. Silver Watches, from £4 4s.; Gold, from £6 6s. Price-Lists sent free.—77, Cornhill; 220, Regent-street; and 76, Strand.

THE FINEST WATCHES MADE. SEWILL'S KEYLESS WATCHES, Prize Medals, London, Paris, and Philadelphia. Damp and Dust-proof, 18-carat cases, adjusted and compensated for all climates. £10 10s., £14 14s., and £25; Ladies', £7 7s., £10 10s., and £18 10s.; in silver cases, for Ladies or Gentlemen, £5 5s., £6 6s., and £8 8s. Forwarded on receipt of remittance.—J. Sewill, 30, Cornhill, London; and 61, South Castle-street, Liverpool.

JEWELLERY.—The GOLDSMITHS' ALLIANCE (Limited) respectfully solicit an inspection of their extensive STOCK, which contains a beautiful assortment of the following articles:—

Bracelets, from	£6 to £200	Pendants, from	£2 to £50
Brooches, from	£2 to £30	Chains, from	£3 to £50
Lockets, from	£2 to £30	Pins, from	£1 to £5
Earrings, from	£1 to £20	Studs, from	£1 to £5

To obviate the difficulty which is so often experienced in choosing suitable gifts, the Goldsmiths' Alliance (Limited) have prepared a new edition of their Illustrated Pamphlet, and will be happy to forward the same gratis and post-free on application.—11 and 12, Cornhill, London, opposite the Bank of England.

OROIDE GOLD ALBERT CHAINS, 5s., 7s. 6d., 10s. 6d. Links, Solitaires, or Studs, 2s. 6d. Bracelets, 4s. 6d. to 7s. 6d. Earrings, 3s. 6d. to 7s. 6d. Lockets, 4s. 6d. to 12s. 6d. Free by post. Opinions of the Press and Price-List post-free.—C. C. ROWE, 92, Brompton-road, London, S.W.

NICHOLSON'S NEW COSTUMES, 50 Illustrations free.

NICHOLSON'S NEW MANTLES, 50 Illustrations free.

NICHOLSON'S NEW AUTUMN DRESS FABRICS.

Patterns post-free.

VELOUR CLOTH, at 10½d., 18½d., and 1s. 11½d. per yard.
NEW SERGES, at 15½d., 18½d., and 2½d. per yard.
GRAMPIAN HOMESPUNS, 1s. 7½d. per yard.
NEW POPLINS, from 6½d. per yard.
NEW MELTON CLOTHS, 2s. 3d. per yard.
FRENCH MERINOS, at 1s. 11d., 2s. 9½d., and 3s. 3d. per yard.
BLACK VELVETEENS, from 1s. 9½d. to 5s. 11d. per yard.
COLOURED Ditto, from 2s. 11d. to 3s. 6d. per yard.
BROCADED Ditto, from 2s. 6d. to 3s. 6d. per yard.

Patterns of Black and Coloured Silks post-free

D. NICHOLSON and CO., 50 to 53, ST. PAUL'S-CHURCHYARD, LONDON.

JAY'S, REGENT-STREET.

FAMILIES returning to TOWN will find at Messrs. JAY'S a very large and carefully-selected Stock of BLACK GOODS suitable for the present season.
JAY'S, Regent-street.

PATTERNS FREE.

BLACK VELVETEENS.—Almost equal in appearance to good black velvet. As black velveteen is likely to be much worn during the winter season, Messrs. JAY have had manufactured for themselves special qualities of black velveteen, fast colour. These Velveteens are confidently recommended to their customers.
JAY'S, REGENT-STREET.

LADIES' HATS and WIDOWS' BONNETS, unequalled in style, and entirely new forms. Illustrations of these and other fashions are being engraved, and may be had in a few days on application.
JAY'S, Regent-street.

PATTERNS FREE.

ESTAMENE SERGES, from One Shilling per yard.
JAY'S,
THE LONDON GENERAL MOURNING WAREHOUSE, REGENT-STREET, W.

ULSTER CLOTHS, Sealskins, and other Materials for Ladies' Jackets, at very moderate prices, for ready money only.
CHARLES MEEKING and CO., Woollen Warehouse, 5, Holborn-circus, corner of Hatton-garden, London.

AEGIDIUS. — The only non-shrinking Flannel Shirt. Warm as wool, soft as silk, and very elastic. Patterns and self-measure free.
R. FORD, 41, Poultry, London.

FLORILINE. For the Teeth and Breath. Is the best Liquid Dentifrice in the world; it thoroughly cleanses partially-decayed teeth from all parasites or living "animalculæ," leaving them pearly white, imparting a delightful fragrance to the breath. The Fragrant Floriline removes instantly all odours arising from a foul stomach or tobacco smoke, being partly composed of honey, soda, and extracts of sweet herbs and plants. It is perfectly harmless, and delicious as sherry. Sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere, at 2s. 6d. per Bottle.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY for the HAIR. If your hair is turning grey, or white, or falling off, use "The Mexican Hair Renewer," for it will positively restore in every case Grey or White Hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting the growth of the hair on bald spots where the glands are not decayed. "The Mexican Hair Renewer" is sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere, at 3s. 6d. per Bottle.

MRS. S. A. ALLEN'S WORLD'S HAIR RESTORER

THE ADMIRATION OF THE WORLD. Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Restorer is perfection for its wonderful life-giving properties to faded or falling hair, and quickly changing grey or white hair to its natural youthful colour and beauty. It is not a dye. It requires only a few applications to restore gray hair to its youthful colour and lustrous beauty, and induce luxuriant growth, and its occasional use is all that is needed to preserve it in its highest perfection and beauty. Dandruff is quickly and permanently removed. Sold by all Chemists and Perfumers.

MITCHAM LAVENDER.—PIESSE and LUBIN.

LAVENDER, Sweet Lavender.—PIESSE and LUBIN are now distilling, at their Flower Farm, the famed MITCHAM LAVENDER. Samples may be had either at the Stillery, Mitcham-road, Surrey, or at the Laboratory, 2, New Bond-street, London.

NUDA VERITAS.—GREY HAIR restored by this valuable specific to its original shade, after which it grows the natural colour, not grey. Used as a dressing, it causes growth and arrests falling. The most harmless and effectual restorer extant. One trial will convince it has no equal. Price 10s. 6d., of all Chemists and Hairdressers. Testimonials post-free.—R. HOVENDEN and SONS, London.

GOLDEN HAIR.—ROBARE'S AUREOLINE produces the beautiful Golden Colour so much admired. Warranted perfectly harmless. Prices 5s. 6d. and 10s. 6d., of all Perfumers. Wholesale, HOVENDEN and SONS, 5, Great Marlborough-street, W.; and 93 and 95, City-road, E.C. London. Renaud and Meyer, 37, Boulevard de Strasbourg, Paris; 31, Graben, Vienna: 44, Rue des Longs Chariots, Brussels.

ROWLANDS' ODONTO

Whitens the Teeth, Prevents Decay, and gives a pleasing Fragrance to the Breath. It is the purest and most fragrant Dentifrice ever used, and contains no mineral, acid, or gritty substances.

ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL,

known for the last eighty years to be the best and safest preserver and beautifier of the hair; it contains no lead or mineral ingredients, and is especially adapted for children's hair. Sold by all Chemists, &c., in usual four sizes, 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d. (family bottles, equal to four small), and 21s.

BREIDENBACH'S WOOD VIOLET. Fresh as the flower itself. Price 2s. 6d., 5s., 10s. Bottle. Sold at all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the Universe; or Breidenbach and Co., Distillers of Wood Violet to the Queen, 157a, New Bond-street, W. Trade-Mark, the "Wood Violet."

EXTRAORDINARY TESTIMONIAL. "For 30 years I have tried all the various soaps that have been recommended, and I candidly state that the ALBION MILK and SULPHUR SOAP has no equal in soothing the irritation of the skin."—J. M'Gregor Croft, M.D., M.R.C.P., late Staff Surgeon to her Majesty's Royal Army Hospitals, May 1, 1880. N.B.—Dr. Croft has great pleasure in sending, unasked, his opinion of the Albion Milk and Sulphur Soap.—By all Chemists, in Tablets, 9d. and 1s. Chief Dépôt, 532, Oxford-street, London.

TOTLAND BAY, ISLE OF WIGHT, near Freshwater.—TOTLAND BAY HOTEL. Magnificent sea views. Strongly recommended by the Medical Profession for its dry and bracing air. Special arrangements, on moderate terms, for the autumn and winter. Billiard-room. Loose boxes for hunters. Foxhounds in the immediate neighbourhood.—Apply to Miss FLEMING, Manageress (late of the Langham Hotel).

SMART'S WRITING INSTITUTION, 97B, Quadrant, Regent-street (entrance in Swallow-street). Open from Ten till Nine daily. Persons of all ages received privately, and taught at any time suiting their own convenience. Lessons one hour each. No classes. No extras. Improvement guaranteed in eight to twelve easy lessons. Separate room for ladies. Apply to Mr. Smart, as above.

FIVE PER CENT DEBENTURES.

AUSTRALASIAN AGENCY and BANKING CORPORATION (Limited).
Capital £1,250,000. In 125,000 shares of £10 each.
Subscribed in the Australian Colonies, £962,350; in London, £300,000. Reserve Fund, £25,000.
LONDON DIRECTORS:
Abraham Scott, Esq. | Harry Hankey Dobree, Esq.
Frank C. Capel, Esq. | Joseph Cockfield, Dimsdale, Esq.
BANKERS:
Messrs. Dimsdale, Fowler, Barnard, and Dimsdales.
SOLICITORS:
Messrs. Freshfields and Williams.
The Company are now issuing Debentures at the above rate for four, five, or six years. Forms of application can be obtained at the Office of the Company, 64, Austin Friars.

SUN FIRE OFFICE.
Threadneedle-street, E.C. Charing-cross, S.W.
Oxford-street (corner of Vere-street), W.
Established A.D. 1710.
Home and Foreign Insurances Effected.
Sum insured in 1879, £252,462,461.
FRANCIS B. RELTON, Secretary.

DELACRE'S "LA PLATA" EXTRACT OF BEEF COMPANY, Limited. Incorporated under the Companies' Acts, 1862 to 1879, whereby the liability of each shareholder is limited to the amount allotted to him. Capital £100,000, in 10,000 shares of £10 each; payable £1 on application, £1 on allotment, £3 three months later, and the balance at a further interval of not less than three months.
DIRECTORS.
W. R. Barker, 143, New Bond-street, W.
Ch. Delacre, Brussels.
A. E. Edge, Odessa House, Upper Norwood.
Chas. Wright, Wirksworth.
H. K. Edge, 31, King William-street, E.C.
With power to add to their number.
Analyst—Professor Attfield, F.R.S.
Bankers—London Joint Stock Bank, Princes-street.
Solicitors—Messrs. Badham and Williams, 3, Salter's Hall-court, Cannon-street.
Secretary—J. S. Newlyn.
Offices—48, King William-street, E.C.
ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.
This Company is formed for the purpose of acquiring a business heretofore carried on by Mr. Charles Delacre, of Ixelles, Brussels, and recently purchased from him by Mr. H. K. Edge, and now being continued at New-cross, London, consisting of the Manufacture and Sale of Extract of Beef, well known under the mark of Delacre's "Bœuf Concentré."
This brand has been in existence since 1869, and, besides having gained many Prize Medals, it has obtained the First Prize at the Sydney Exhibition of 1879-80.
It was adopted and used during the Franco-German War, 1870-1.
The Board confidently assert that there is every reason to believe that the result of the early future will be to equal the success of the only other well-known brand, which last year declared in dividends and bonus the sum of £168,000, or more than 45 per cent on its capital; its shares of £20 standing in the Stock Exchange at the price of 34 to 36. It is not implied by this that any keen competition must be waged; on the contrary, the daily augmenting consumption of, and demand for, really fine brands of this article, permit an almost indefinite amount of supply.
The Directors have succeeded in securing a very valuable property and factories in the Argentine Republic, upon the most advantageous terms for purchase. The accounts of the last returns from these factories show that a net result was obtained of over 20 per cent upon the Saladero business alone, which comprises killing the cattle for dried meat, hides, bones, tallow, guano, &c., so that with this important addition to the Extract of Beef Factory for larger results may be relied upon.
The services of a most competent and skilled manager of many years' experience have been secured, and he will leave immediately to conduct the business in South America.
To insure the maintenance of the high standard of quality of the Extract, Professor Attfield, F.R.S., will, at intervals and without notice, visit the Company's warehouse and select samples for analysis, the reports on which he will from time to time submit to the Directors.
The recent Prospector, Mr. Charles Delacre, retains a considerable share in the Company, is also a Director, and their Agent for the sale of the Extract in Belgium.
The concern is made over to the Company as a thoroughly going business; and the services of the staff of the London Depot are secured, together with the valuable Factory at New-cross, and all the advantages resulting from efficient and responsible agents on the Continent and elsewhere.
The Directors have so much confidence in the success of the company that they and their friends have subscribed for £15,000, besides the interest held by Mr. Delacre and the vender respectively.
The only agreement entered into by the company is dated July 23, 1880, and made between Mr. H. K. Edge (the vendor), of the one part, and Mr. A. E. Edge on behalf of and for the Delacre's "La Plata" Extract of Beef Company, Limited, of the other part.
The directors will not take any fees until sufficient profit is realised for the payment of a good dividend to the shareholders.
The preliminary expenses will be only those strictly necessary for printing, advertising, registration, and other minor costs, incidental to the formation of the Company, and no promotion-money has been or will be paid.
Copies of the Memorandum and Articles of Association, and of the above Agreement, can be inspected at the offices of the Company, and of the Solicitors, where also copies of the full Prospectus can be obtained.
Application for Shares to be made forthwith, on the Form accompanying the Prospectus.

THE ART OF DECORATING THE FLOOR.

A HISTORICAL SKETCH OF THE

MATS AND FLOOR-COVERINGS

OF ALL NATIONS, with an ESSAY,

WHETHER TO HAVE CARPETS OR RUGS.

PRICE ONE SHILLING, published by TRELOAR and SONS, 69, Ludgate-hill.

MOZAMBIQUE FANCY GRASS CLOTHS.
Five Thousand Pieces of this beautiful fabric, made by the native of Mozambique, having been purchased much below cost, are now offered at the following low price for cash.
They are made of a very fine fibre or grass, and are used by the natives as a dress or Toga.
Here they are useful for many purposes, such as Crumb Cloths, Floor Rugs, and for throwing over drawing-room and other furniture. The grass being a non-conductor, renders their use for this latter purpose very pleasant.
The size is about 7 ft. 6 in. long, and 4 ft. wide.
Price 10s. 6d. each.

TRELOAR and SONS, 89, Ludgate-hill.

EPPS'S COCOA. GRATEFUL and COMFORTING. "By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operation of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.
JAMES EPPS and CO., HOMŒOPATHIC CHEMISTS.
Also EPPS'S CHOCOLATE ESSENCE, for Afternoon Use.

CHUBB'S PATENT SAFES, FIRE AND THIEF RESISTING.

CHUBB'S SAFES FOR JEWELS, DEEDS, PLATE, BULLION, &c.

CHUBB'S LOCKS AND LATCHES, CHESTS, BOXES, &c.

CHUBB'S ILLUSTRATED PRICE-LISTS POST-FREE.

CHUBB and SON, 128, Queen Victoria-street, E.C.; and 68, St. James's-street, London.

Digitized by Google

NEW MUSIC.

Just published,

OLIVETTE. New Comic Opera, now being performed at the Strand Theatre with enormous success. Adapted by H. B. Farnie; Music by AUDRAN.

Vocal Score	8s. net.
Pianoforte Solo	2s. 6d. ,,
Olivette Waltz. D'Albert	2s. ,,
Olivette Quadrille. D'Albert	2s. ,,
Olivette Polka. D'Albert	2s. ,,
Torpedo Galop. D'Albert	2s. ,,
Torpedo Song	2s. ,,

Sung by Miss St. John and Chorus.

Bob Song. Sung by Miss St. John 2s. ,,

Romance—"Nearest and Dearest." Sung by Miss Violet Cameron 2s. ,,

Franz Nava's Gems from Olivette (Nos. 1 and 2) each 1s. 6d. ,,

Franz Nava's Farandole 1s. 6d. ,,

Audran's "Nearest and Dearest" 2s. ,,

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

KISMET WALTZ. By Lady ARTHUR HILL. Played at the Promenade Concerts with great success. 2s. net.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-st.; City Branch, 15, Poultry.

Now ready.

VOLUME TWO OF CHAPPELL'S OLD ENGLISH DITTIES. Handsomely bound in cloth and gold. Price 10s. 6d. net.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S THREE-YEARS' SYSTEM of HIRE of PIANOFORTES, HARMONIUMS, and AMERICAN ORGANS, by which the Instrument becomes the property of the Hirer at the end of the third year, provided each quarter's hire shall have been regularly paid in advance. Pianofortes, from 2 gs.; Harmoniums, from £1 4s.; and American Organs, from £2 10s. a Quarter.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S PIANINOS, from 20 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S COTTAGES, from 27 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S GRANDS, from 50 guineas.

CHICKERING PIANOFORTES, from 120 guineas, with American discount.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S ALEXANDRE HARMONIUMS, for Church, Schools, or Drawing-Rooms, from 5 to 150 guineas; or, on the Three-Years' system, from £1 8s. per quarter.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S IMPROVED AMERICAN ORGANS, combining Pipes with Reeds, Manufactured by Clough and Warren, Detroit, U.S.A. The immense advantages these instruments possess over the Organs hitherto imported have induced Messrs. Chappell and Co. to undertake the sole Agency of this eminent Manufactory. A large variety on view, from 25 to 220 guineas. Price-Lists on application to CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S Favourite ORGAN. Compass, five octaves, ten stops, four sets of reeds, two of two and two thirds octaves and two of two and one third octaves, knee swell, elegant carved Canadian walnut case, price 25 guineas. With twelve stops, sub-bass octave coupler, and two knee pedals, 35 guineas. Illustrated Price-List free by post.
Sole Agents, CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

INSTRUMENTS by ALL MAKERS may be HIRED or PURCHASED on the Three-Years' System.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

A LARGE DISCOUNT TO PURCHASERS FOR CASH.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

NEW DANCE MUSIC.
SUCCESS OF THE SEASON.
AMITIÉ VALSE. By H. R. CALLCOTT. 4s.
TOUT EST FINI GALOP. By H. R. CALLCOTT. 4s.
AVANT SOUPER GALOP. By H. R. CALLCOTT. 4s.
Half price post-free.
ALDERSON and BRENTNALL, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

CIRO PINSUTI'S LATEST SUCCESS.
THE BUGLER.
In D, for Bass; F, Baritone; and G, Tenor. Post-free, 2s. net.
London: B. WILLIAMS, 60, Paternoster-row.

THE MUSICAL TIMES for OCTOBER contains:—A French View of Wagner—The Father of the Symphony—The Great Composers: Spohr—Musical Doctors—The Gloucester Musical Festival—Occasional Notes—Reviews, Foreign and Country News, &c. Price 3d.; post-free, 4d. Annual subscription, 4s., including postage.

THE MUSICAL TIMES for OCTOBER contains:—"Hurrah, for Merry England;" Chorus by H. H. PIERSON. Price separately, 1½d.
London: NOVELLO, EWER, and Co., 1, Berners-street, W.; and 80 and 81, Queen-street, E.C.

HANDSOME NEW EDITION OF
THE GREEN CATALOGUE. Containing a valuable List of New Vocal and Pianoforte Music, suitable to all Teachers.
Post-free.—London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

BRINLEY RICHARDS'S NEW PIANOFORTE PIECES:—

Titania Valse. 4s.	We Two (Blumenthal). 3s.
Chant Gondole. 3s.	Other Days (Antrefois). 3s.
Das Alpenhorn. 3s.	The Child's Dream. 3s.

Post-free half price in stamps.—London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

HAMILTON'S MODERN INSTRUCTIONS for the PIANOFORTE has been thoroughly modernised and made progressive. The improvements will be found practical and useful, and calculated to strengthen its position and increase its world-wide popularity. Post-free for 28 stamps. Appendix to ditto, by G. F. WEST, 5s.; post-free at half-price.
London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

THE UNFORGOTTEN SONG, in which is introduced a few strains of "Home, Sweet Home." Composed by O. BARRI. 3s.
LOVE NEVER DIES. A. SCOTT GATTY. 3s.
THE PAPER SHIP. A. SCOTT GATTY. 3s.
All post-free at half price.
London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

TWO NEW SONGS by THEO. MARZIALS. BUTTERCUP QUEEN. Words by Mrs. W. K. Clifford; and IN SUMMER TIME. Poetry by "Rea." "Without doubt will be ranked among his most popular songs." 3s. each; post-free at half price.—London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

CLASSICAL WALTZES. Arranged and Fingered for the Pianoforte by GEORGE FREDERICK WEST. Post-free at half price. Beethoven's Waltzes, Books 1 to 6, 3s. each; the same, as Piano Duets, 4s. each. Mozart's Three Waltzes, Books 1 to 3, 3s. each. Schubert's Waltzes, Books 1 to 3, 4s. each. All post-free at half price.
London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street.

CHARLES HALLÉ'S PRACTICAL PIANOFORTE SCHOOL.
Section I.—No. 1, Pianoforte Tutor. Also 67 Numbers of CHARLES HALLÉ'S MUSICAL LIBRARY are now ready.
Catalogues and all particulars may be had from FORSYTH BROTHERS, London, 272a, Regent-circus, Oxford-street; Manchester, Cross-street and South King-street; and all Musicsellers.

DOMINION ORGAN COMPANY,
Bowmanville, Ontario, Canada.
The best and cheapest 25 Guinea Organ in the Trade.
"PRINCESS LOUISE,"
Ten Stops, including Octave Coupler.
Sole Agents for the United Kingdom,
FORSYTH BROTHERS,
London: 272a, Regent-circus, Oxford-street.
Manchester: Cross-street and South King-street.
Complete Catalogues post-free.

NEW MUSIC.

JOSEPH WILLIAMS'S LIST.
ALL MUSIC POST FREE AT HALF PRICE.

FOLI'S GREATEST SUCCESS.

THE RAFT. Descriptive Fantasia. By PINSUTI. In E and G, free, 24 stamps. Now being sung by Signor Foli with the greatest success at all his concerts. Decidedly the finest baritone (or bass) song extant.

I LOVE MY LOVE. PINSUTI'S most celebrated Song, in A flat and B flat; free, 24 stamps. This the most effective Drawing-room Song ever written, is continually sung by all the leading vocalists, both soprano and contralto.

THREE JOLLY BRITONS, or the ENGLISH, IRISH, and SCOTCH.
New National Song.
"Long may our good Queen on her Throne
O'er her subjects keep a watch,
For the three will fight for her as one,
Though English, Irish, and Scotch.
Words and Music, G. WARE. Post-free, 18 stamps.

SHALL I WEAR A WHITE ROSE? New Song. By EMILY FARMER; poetry by Saville Clark. This charming Song is now being sung by Madame Trebelli at her Provincial Concerts with perfect success. Published in E flat and G, for soprano or contralto. Post-free, 24 stamps.

JOHN GILPIN. Cantata. By GEORGE FOX. 2s. 6d. net. Easy and effective. A liberal discount allowed to choral societies for copies.

LES CLOCHES DE CORNEVILLE.
Vocal Score, English Words, 10s. net, and 4s.
Piano Score, complete, 2s. 6d. net.

HENRY FARMER'S PIANOFORTE TUTOR, considerably Enlarged and Fingered by the Author. 1000th Edition. 4s.
"Decidedly the best and most useful instruction book we have seen."—Musical Review.

JOSEPH WILLIAMS,
24, Berners-street, W.; and 123, Cheapside, E.C.

GOOD-BYE. COTSFORD DICK'S New Song. The Poetry by G. J. Whyte-Melville. One of the most charming songs in words and music produced for some time. Post-free, 24.—DUFF and STEWART, 2, Hanover-street, W.

ONE GOLDEN HOUR. Song by VIVIAN BLIGH. Sung by Miss EDITH BRANDON in "The Pirate's Home," at St. George's Hall. Editions in E and G, 2s. net.—DUFF and STEWART, 2, Hanover-street.

ANNABEL LEE. New Song. By C. SWINNERTON HEAP. Sung by Mr. Maas at the Gloucester Festival. Price 2s. net.—NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

ERARDS' PIANOS.—Messrs. ERARD, of 18, Great Marlborough-street, London, and 13, Rue de Mail, Paris, Makers to her Majesty and the Prince and Princess of Wales. CAUTION the Public that Pianofortes are being sold bearing the name of "Erard" which are not of their manufacture. For information as to authenticity apply at 18, Great Marlborough-st., where new Pianos can be obtained from 50 guineas.

ERARDS' PIANOS.—COTTAGES, from 50 guineas.
OBLIQUES, from 65 guineas.
GRANDS, from 125 guineas.

P. J. SMITH AND SONS'
IRON-STRUTTED PIANOS.
"The best and most substantial instrument produced."
3 and 4, PRINCES-STREET, OXFORD-STREET, W.

PIANOFORTES for HIRE or for SALE, from 25 guineas upwards.—JOHN BROADWOOD and SONS, 33, Great Pulteney-street, Golden-square, W. Manufactory, 45, Horseferry-road, Westminster, W.

D'ALMAINES' PIANOS HALF PRICE.
In consequence of a change of partnership, the whole of this splendid stock, perfected with all the modern improvements of the day by this long-standing firm, of 100 years' reputation, and in order to effect a speedy sale. The easiest terms arranged, with seven years' warranty. Trichord Cottages from hire, or taken in exchange, £10 to £12.

Class 0, £14	Class 2, £20	Class 4, £30	Class 6, £35
Class 1, £17	Class 3, £23	Class 5, £27	Class 7, £40

American Organs from £5.—91, Finsbury Pavement, Moorgate Station, E.C.

REBUILDING SALE.—PIANOFORTES, £15; Broadwood Pianos, £20; Erard Pianos, £25; Collard Pianos, £28; Harmoniums, £6; American Organs, £10.
THOMAS OETZMANN and Co., 27, Baker-street, Portman-sq.

REBUILDING SALE.—Purchasers who can pay cash will do well to take advantage of this exceptional opportunity of obtaining thoroughly good instruments at extraordinary low prices.

REBUILDING SALE. — The PIANOFORTE HIRE and THREE-YEARS' SYSTEM BUSINESS carried on as usual during the Rebuilding.—THOMAS OETZMANN and CO., 27, Baker-street, exactly opposite Madame Tussaud's.

BUTLER'S MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS. Violins, Concertinas, Harmoniums, Flutes, Clarionets, Flageolets, Guitars, Banjoes, Accordeons, Flutinas, Cornets, Drums, Fifes, and Musical Instruments of every description, at BUTLER'S, 28, Haymarket, London. Illustrated Catalogue (50 pages) post-free.

THE ESSEX FLOUR and GRAIN COMPANY, Liverpool-road, London, N., supply the best goods only. Flour:—Whites for Pastry, per 56 lb., 9s. 4d.; Households, for Bread making, 8s. 8d.; Wheaten Meal for Brown Bread, 8s.; Best Scotch Oatmeal for Porridge, per 14 lb., 3s.; American Hominy, 2s.; Barley, Buck Wheat Maize, and Mixed Corn for Poultry, per bushel, 5s.; Middlings, 2s.; Bran, 1s.; Pearl split Peas, per peck, 3s.; Split Egyptian Lentils, 3s.; Meat Biscuits, per 14 lb., 2s. 6d.; Barley Meal, per 48 lb., 6s.; Lentil Flour, per 11 lb. tin, 8d.; per 14 lb., 6s. All other kinds of Grain and Seeds. Price-List on application. Special quotations for large orders. P.O. Orders and Cheques to be made in favour of George Young.

SEASONABLE DELICACY.
BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR
AS BLANCMANGE WITH STEWED FRUIT.

SEASONABLE DELICACY.
BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR
AS CUSTARD WITH STEWED FRUIT.

SEASONABLE DELICACY.
BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR
AS BAKED PUDDING WITH STEWED FRUIT.

SCHWEITZER'S COCOATINA.
Anti-Dyspeptic Cocoa or Chocolate Powder.
Guaranteed Pure Soluble Cocoa, with excess of Fat extracted. Four times the strength of Cocoas Thickened yet Weakened with Arrowroot, Starch, &c.
The faculty pronounce it the most nutritious, perfectly digestive Beverage for "BREAKFAST, LUNCHEON, or SUPPER." Keeps in all Climates. Requires no Cooking. A teaspoonful to Breakfast Cup, costing less than a halfpenny. Samples gratis. In Air-Tight Tins, at 1s. 6d., 3s., &c., by Chemists and Grocers.
H. SCHWEITZER and CO., 10, Adam-street, London, W.C.

GOLD MEDAL, PARIS, 1878.
FRY'S COCOA. FRY'S CARACAS COCOA.
A choice prepared Cocoa.
most delicious and valuable article."—Standard.

GUARANTEED PURE.
FRY'S COCOA. FRY'S COCOA EXTRACT.
Pure Cocoa only,
the superfluous oil extracted.
J. S. FRY and SONS.

HORNIMAN'S TEA for Forty Years—has commanded a large sale, because it can always be relied on for strength, flavour, and cheapness. It is the best tea imported. Sold only in Packets.

DR. DE JONGH'S
KNIGHT OF THE ORDER OF LEOPOLD OF BELGIUM KNIGHT OF THE LEGION OF HONOUR)
LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL.
THE PUREST. THE MOST EFFICACIOUS.
THE MOST PALATABLE. THE MOST DIGESTIBLE.
Proved by thirty years' medical experience to be
THE ONLY COD-LIVER OIL which produces the full curative effects
CONSUMPTION AND DISEASES OF THE CHEST, THROAT AFFECTIONS, GENERAL DEBILITY, AND WASTING DISEASES OF CHILDREN.

SELECT MEDICAL OPINIONS.

SIR G. DUNCAN GIBB, Bart., M.D.,
Physician to the Westminster Hospital.
"The value of Dr. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL as a therapeutic agent in a number of diseases, chiefly of an exhaustive character, has been admitted by the world of medicine; but, in addition, I have found it a remedy of great power in the treatment of many Affections of the Throat and Larynx, especially in Consumption of the latter, where it will sustain life when everything else fails."

DR. SINCLAIR COGHILL,
Physician Royal National Hospital for Consumption, Ventnor.
"I have convinced myself that in Tubercular and the various forms of Strumous Disease, Dr. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL possesses greater therapeutic efficacy than any other Cod-Liver Oil with which I am acquainted. It was especially noted, in a large number of cases in which the patients protested they had never been able to retain or digest other Cod-Liver Oil, that Dr. DE JONGH'S OIL was not only tolerated, but taken readily, and with marked benefit."

DR. HUNTER SEMPLE,
Physician Hospital for Diseases of the Throat and Chest.
"I have long been aware of the great reputation enjoyed by the LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL introduced into medical practice by Dr. DE JONGH, and have recommended it with the utmost confidence. I have no hesitation in stating my opinion, that it possesses all the qualities of a good and efficient medicine. Its taste is by no means disagreeable, and might even be called pleasant. I have found Dr. DE JONGH'S OIL very useful in cases of Chronic Cough, and especially in Laryngeal Disease complicated with Consumption."

JOSEPH J. POPE, Esq., M.R.C.S.,
Late Staff Surg., Army, Prof. of Hygiene, Birkbeck Institution.
"I found during my Indian experience that the worth and character of Dr. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL remained unchanged by tropical heat or foreign climate, and it was, from its uniformity of character, particularly adapted for long-continued administration. The value of "hydro-carbons" in all debilitated states of the system is now becoming thoroughly recognised; and it is, without doubt, from the animal oils and fats, rather than from their vegetable substitutes, that we may hope to derive the surest benefit. The Oil of Dr. DE JONGH places in everyone's reach a reliable and valuable remedy, one that cannot be too widely recognised."

DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL is sold ONLY in capsuled IMPERIAL Half-Pints, 2s. 6d.; Pints, 4s. 9d.; Quarts, 9s.; by all respectable Chemists and Druggists throughout the World.
SOLE CONSIGNEES,
ANSAR, HARFORD, and CO., 77, STRAND, LONDON.

"AND TEETH LIKE ROWS OF PEARLS."
JEWSBURY and BROWN'S Exquisite Compound,
THE ORIENTAL TOOTH-PASTE.
The celebrated original and only genuine Oriental Tooth-Paste is signed "JEWSBURY and BROWN, Manchester. Established 50 years." PEARLY WHITE and SOUND TEETH, a healthy action of the gums, producing that firmness and rosy brightness of colour so essential to beauty, and fragrant breath, are all insured by the use of this most perfect Dentifrice. Pots. 1s. 6d.; double, 2s. 6d. All Perfumers and Chemists

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."
CLARKE'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE is warranted to cleanse the Blood from all impurities, from whatever cause arising. For Scrofula, Scurvy, Skin and Blood Diseases, its effects are marvellous. In Bottles, 2s. 6d. each, and in cases, containing six times the quantity, 11s. each, of all Chemists. Sent to any address for 30 or 132 stamps, of the Proprietor, F. J. CLARKE, Chemist, Lincoln.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT.
The Pills purify the blood, correct all disorders of the liver, stomach, kidneys, and bowels. The Ointment is unrivalled in the cure of bad legs, old wounds, gout, and rheumatism.

BLAIR'S GOUT PILLS,
THE GREAT
REMEDY FOR GOUT AND RHEUMATISM.
Sold by all Chemists, at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. per Box.

ALLEN AND HANBURYS'
"PERFECTED" COD-LIVER OIL
is free from disagreeable taste and smell, and causes no nausea, or after-taste. Of all Chemists, in capsuled bottles only.

COLDS CURED BY
DR. DUNBAR'S ALKARAM, or
Anti-Catarrh Smelling-Bottle.
ALKARAM. COLDS.
ALKARAM. COLDS.
ALKARAM. COLDS.
IF inhaled on the first symptoms, ALKARAM will at once arrest them; and cure severe cases in half an hour. Sold by all Chemists, 2s. 9d. a Bottle. Address, Dr. Dunbar, care of Messrs. F. Newbery and Sons, 37, Newgate-street.

THE NEW REMEDY FOR CONSUMPTION.
TISSUE PHOSPHATE
has been so successfully used in the treatment of Consumption Chronic Cough, Inflamed Lungs, Debility, Emaciation, Nervous Exhaustion, and all Wasting Diseases, that it is now regarded as a real and positive cure for these complaints. A Pamphlet, descriptive of a large number of cases of which careful notes have been taken in every stage of disease, may be had free on application; and the TISSUE PHOSPHATE SYRUP may be obtained through any Chemist, price 3s. 9d. per Bottle, or carriage-paid, from ANDERSON and CO., 80, Gray's Inn-road, London, on receipt of P.O. order.

TOOTH-ACHE.
INSTANT CURE.
FORMS A STOPPING.
SAVES THE TOOTH.
J. Hounsell, Esq., Surgeon, Bridport, writes:—"I consider HUNTER'S NERVINE a specific for Toothache. Very severe cases under my care have found instantaneous and permanent relief."
Of Chemists, 1s. 1½d. per Packet.

ELECTRICITY IS LIFE.
PULVERMACHER'S "GALVANISM, NATURE'S CHIEF RESTORER OF IMPAIRED VITAL ENERGY."
In this Pamphlet the most reliable proofs are given of the vast and wonderful curative powers of Pulvermacher's Patent Galvanic Chain-Bands, Belts, &c., in Rheumatic, Nervous, and Functional Disorders. Sent post-free for three stamps on application to
J. L. PULVERMACHER'S GALVANIC ESTABLISHMENT, 194, Regent-street, London, W.

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS' Newly-Patented SOSTENENTE GRAND and UPRIGHT PIANOS have gained the two First Prizes and only Special Mention above all competitors at the Sydney International Exhibition, 1879-80. Lists free.—18, Wigmore-street, London, W.

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.
PARIS, 1878.
THE HIGHEST HONOURS—
THE CROSS OF THE LEGION OF HONOUR;
Also the GOLD MEDAL, &c.,
have been accorded to

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
18, WIGMORE-STREET, LONDON, W.,
For the superiority of their Pianos
exhibited at the
PARIS INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION of 1878.
"There is but one class of Gold Medals for the Exhibition, and the DECORATION OF THE CROSS OF THE LEGION HONOUR
CONSTITUTES A SUPERIOR RECOMPENSE."
Extract from the Special Report signed M. A. PETIS, Official Reporter.
The value of this Award is still further enhanced by the that the Decoration was CONFERRED ON NO OTHER British Pianoforte Manufacturer.

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.
The principal of the previous honours gained by the BRINSMEAD PIANOS are:—
THE DIPLOMA OF HONOUR and GOLD MEDAL, South Africa, 1877.
THE GRAND MEDAL OF HONOUR and DIPLOMA OF MERIT, Philadelphia, 1876.
THE DIPLOMA OF HONOUR, Paris, 1878, and the HONORARY MEMBERSHIP OF THE NATIONAL ACADEMY OF FRANCE.
THE GOLD MEDAL, Paris, 1870.
THE DIPLOMA OF EXTRAORDINARY MERIT, Netherlands International Exhibition, 1869.
THE MEDAL OF HONOUR, Paris, 1867.
THE PRIZE MEDAL, London, 1862, &c.

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
SOSTENENTE PIANOS,
for Extreme Climates,
With the Perfect Check Repeater Action,
Patented 1840, 1868, 1871, 1875, and 1879,
throughout Europe and America.

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.
"Paris, Nov. 4, 1878.
"I have attentively examined the beautiful pianos of Messrs. John Brinsmead and Sons that are exhibited at the Paris International Exhibition of 1878. I consider them to be exceptional in the ease with which gradations of sound can be produced, from the softest to the most powerful tones. These excellent pianos merit the approbation of all artists, as the tone is full as well as sustained, and the touch is of perfect evenness throughout its entire range, answering to every requirement of the pianist.
"CH. GOUNOD."

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.
"Paris, Sept. 8, 1878.
"We, the undersigned, certify that, after having seen and most conscientiously examined the English Pianos at the Universal Exhibition of 1878, we find that the palm belongs to the Grand Pianos of the house of Brinsmead.
"NICOLAS RUBINSTEIN,
"D. MAGNUS,
"Chevalier ANTOINE DE KONTSKI, Court Pianist to the Emperor of Germany."

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.
"I have pleasure in expressing my opinion that the Paris Exhibition Model Grand Pianofortes of Messrs. John Brinsmead and Sons are unsurpassed. The tone is deliciously sweet, sustained, and extraordinarily powerful; the touch responds to the faintest and to the most trying strains on it, and the workmanship is simply perfect.
W. KUHE."

JOHN. BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.
"Illustrated London News."
"The French papers have been unanimous in their expressions of admiration of these splendid instruments. The grands especially have enchanted the Parisian professors and amateurs of music by their noble sonority their enormous power, and the sympathetically voice-like quality of tone. The touch is so beautifully light, elastic, and certain, that many pianists of every nation, from the Abbé Liszt downwards, who have tried these instruments, have highly complimented the enterprising manufacturers on their success."

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.
"Daily Chronicle."
"In tone the instrument is exceedingly rich and sweet, and in touch the very perfection of lightness. Messrs. Brinsmead may certainly be congratulated upon their success."

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.
"Morning Advertiser."
"The Legion of Honour, in addition to the other distinctions awarded to Messrs. John Brinsmead and Sons at the Paris Exhibition of 1878, the founder of the firm has been created Chevalier of the Legion of Honour."

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.
"Daily News."
"A new Pianoforte, recently manufactured by Messrs. John Brinsmead and Sons, claims notice, not only on account of its beauty and richness of tone, but specially for some ingenious mechanical novelties, the most important being the addition of a third pedal, by means of which the sound of any note or notes may be almost indefinitely prolonged at the will of the player. Thus these notes may be sustained after being struck by the left hand, which may then be taken away, and, with the right hand, may execute the most brilliant staccato passages, thus giving almost the effect of four hands. The patent 'check-repeater action,' a specialty of Messrs. Brinsmead, enables the performer to command with ease the most rapid reiteration of the same note; the facility of the key movement in general being such that glissando passages can be executed with such perfect ease as to render them practicable with the lightest touch. The volume of tone is intensified by a peculiar construction of the sounding-board, another improvement being the system of bridging, by which the vibrations are increased and rendered sympathetic. The Pianoforte is capable of all degrees of delicacy and power, its massive structure rendering it less liable to get out of tune than usual; and the instrument is altogether calculated to extend the reputation of its makers."

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PIANOS
may be obtained of all the principal Musicsellers.
Prices from 35 guineas to 350 guineas.

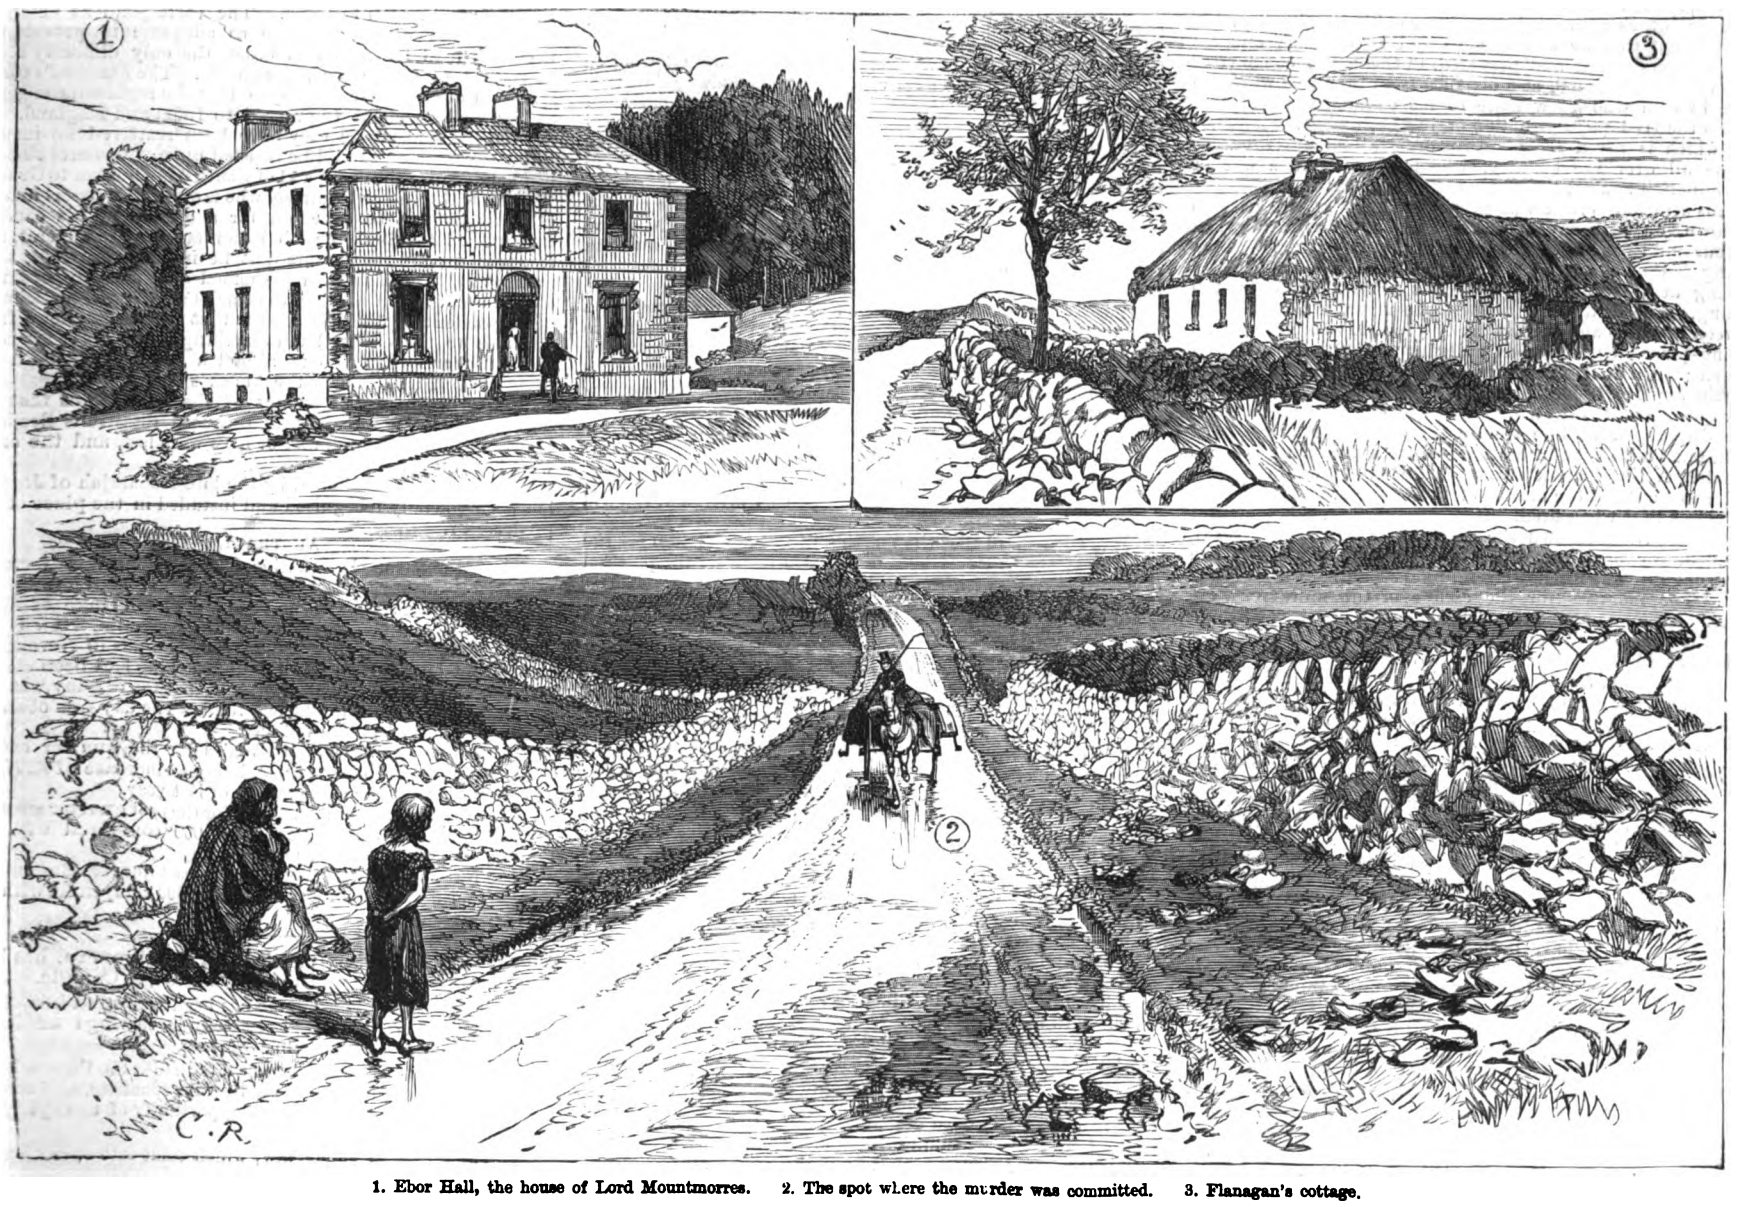
18-20, WIGMORE-STREET, LONDON, W.,
and
THE "BRINSMEAD WORKS,"
GRAFTON-ROAD, KENTISH TOWN, N.W

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by GEORGE C. LEIGHTON, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY OCTOBER 9, 1880.

Digitized by Google

THE LATE LORD MOUNTMORRES, MURDERED AT CLONBUR, COUNTY GALWAY.

THE LATE LIEUTENANT F. P. F. WOOD, 7TH FUSILIERS, KILLED IN THE SORTIE FROM CANDAHAR.



THE LATE LIEUTENANT F. P. F. WOOD.

This promising young officer, Lieutenant Frederic Philip Forster Wood, of the 7th Royal Fusiliers, was killed in action in the sortie from Candahar on Aug. 16 last. He was twenty-three years of age, and was the elder son of the Rev. Frederic Wood, Rector of Erwarton-with-Woolverstone, Suffolk; his mother was a daughter of the late Mr. John Pratt, J.P., of Adderstone and Melkington, Northumberland. Lieutenant Wood was great-nephew of the late General William Frederic Forster, K.H., formerly Military Secretary to the Commander-in-Chief. He was educated at Rossall and Bury St. Edmunds; at the latter grammar school he twice gained Lord Francis Hervey's prize for English verse, by composing poems of considerable promise, and likewise Mr. Greene's and Mr. Hardcastle's prizes for English literature and English composition. He obtained his commission through the Royal Military College at Sandhurst, and was gazetted to the 33rd Foot in January, 1878, but exchanged shortly afterwards to the 7th Royal Fusiliers. He was sent out in December, 1878, to join his regiment at Bombay. He accompanied the Fusiliers in January last to Candahar, and his letters home were full of cheerfulness and pleasure at the prospect of seeing active service and winning a medal.

The portrait is from a photograph by Mr. W. Vick, Ipswich, taken in March, 1878.

THE MURDER OF LORD MOUNTMORRES.

The moral guilt of murder, where its motive has been a commonly prevailing animosity in the breasts of an ignorant and passionate people, is largely shared by those educated and elect politicians, who, publicly speaking in the neighbourhood, and within a few days after the crime was perpetrated, ostentatiously withheld the due expression of just reprobation. They are, virtually, accessories after the fact, and they have doubtless as much to answer for as the actual murderers of Lord Mountmorres; but there are some criminal practices that seem beyond the reach of law. "Wicked and cowardly," as the Chief Secretary for Ireland has said of one of them, is

1. Ebor Hall, the house of Lord Mountmorres. 2. The spot where the murder was committed. 3. Flanagan's cottage.

THE MURDER OF LORD MOUNTMORRES.

Digitized by Google

the conduct of these persons, whose names we all know too well.

An Irish nobleman, of ancient family and title, but of extremely impoverished estate, resided in a lonely district of Galway with his wife and children; one of the poorest of country gentlemen, living in the plainest style, hopeless of improving his fortunes, and deprived by comparative indigence of the enjoyment of social pleasures and honours befitting his legitimate rank. Of a quiet, homely, studious disposition, and willing to do any good among his humblest neighbours, he had acquired some medical skill on purpose that he might practise gratuitously for their benefit, and thus, by his personal exertions, make up for his inability to give or spend money in the relieving of their frequent needs. He had but few tenants, and these had ever found him a considerate and indulgent landlord. But his position, not his personal character or conduct, made him a mark for the class hatred systematically provoked and organised to deeds of blood, in these unhappy days, by the infamous conspirators of the Land League; and this is the man who has recently been singled out for the treacherous infliction of a violent and cruel death. No fouler deed has stained the history of the most barbarous and savage nation, in the worst ages and the wildest regions of the world.

The late Viscount Mountmorres, Sir William Browne de Montmorency, Bart., Baron Mountmorres, of the Peerage of Ireland, was born April 21, 1832, and succeeded his father, as fifth Peer and eleventh Baronet, in January, 1871. He was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, and took his degree. The father was a clergyman of the Protestant Church, and Dean of Achonry. The late nobleman's mother was Sarah, daughter of Mr. William Shaw, of Temple Hill. The Montmorency lineage is of ancient Norman race, but the founder of this distinguished family was Hervey Morres, a Captain of horse in Cromwell's army, and afterwards a member of the House of Commons in the reign of Charles II. The peerage was conferred by George III. They once possessed more valuable estates in Kilkenny, which they somehow lost, and that which remained to them in Galway was of insignificant extent. In the narrow strip of rocky moorland that separates two considerable lakes, Lough Corrib and Lough Mask, forming a sort of natural bridge to reach the westerly peninsula of Connemara, is situated the obscure little hamlet of Clonbur. Here lay the unprofitable lands owned by Lord Mountmorres, whose rent-roll is said to have numbered but fifteen tenants, and these of small holdings. His Lordship's whole income from the land was £300 a year. His dwelling was a modest house called Ebor Hall, with a space of lawn and wood around it on the slope of the hill, overlooking the beautiful expanse of Lough Corrib and its multitude of picturesque islands. Here lived the poor half-ruined, well-intentioned nobleman, endeavouring to do his duty as a county magistrate, and to keep up friendly relations with all classes of the people about him. He had married, in 1862, Harriet, second daughter of the late Mr. George Broadrick, of Hamphall Stubbs, near Doncaster, and had four children, two boys and two girls, whose education was the object of his care.

Lord Mountmorres, we are told, never evicted any of his tenants for nonpayment of rent, though he must have wanted the rents badly to support his moderate household expenses. He lately had some fault to find with a herdsman in his employment, and dismissed the man from service, requiring him, at the same time, to quit the cottage allotted for the herdsman's dwelling. This man, however, claimed to be an agricultural tenant, and to have a right to hold the cottage and bit of ground. In order therefore to settle the question regarding the legal character of a piece of property, Lord Mountmorres sued for a formal decree of eviction, which was granted upon sufficient evidence. But the decree was never put into execution, and it is said that his Lordship had no intention of doing so; the man was allowed to stay, owning himself to be a servant and not a tenant. We have not yet heard by what perversion of the fact, or under what calumnious pretexts, Lord Mountmorres was denounced to the Land League Vehmgericht, as a grasping persecutor of Irish peasantry. It is very likely that he was accused and condemned, and his assassination decreed and prepared, in the secret conclave of some villanous tribunal, at a distance from the place where he lived, by men who knew little of his character and affairs. Such is the Irish popular notion of justice, under the instruction which is given by platform orators and unscrupulous writers all over the country, who have declared a war of extermination against the whole class of landlords.

This atrocious crime was perpetrated, by several persons unknown, on Saturday, the 25th ult., on the road between Clonbur and Ebor Hall. The unfortunate nobleman was alone, driving his own car, on his way home from a magistrates meeting at Clonbur. It was about eight o'clock in the evening. The distance is about three miles, the road lying between low hills and broken rocky ground, which afforded a lurking-place. Uneven stone walls bound the narrow road on each side. On an eminence about a mile from Clonbur the assassin appears to have been waiting, and as Lord Mountmorres drove past, within arm's length of the wall, six shots were discharged at him from a revolver, all taking effect. Death must have been instantaneous, from the nature of the wounds. A black mark surrounded the wound in the forehead, showing that the muzzle of the weapon must have been quite close to it when fired. It is inferred from this that, the first shots having thrown the deceased off the car mortally wounded, the assassin advanced closer and discharged the sixth shot into his forehead, sending the bullet through the skull. The facilities for the escape of the murderer were ample. A range of mountains rises about a quarter of a mile from the road on the one hand; while on the other hand a stretch of rocky, undulating ground sweeps down to the shores of Lough Corrib, about half a mile, across which he could escape in a boat, as in the case of Lord Leitrim's murderer.

When Lord Mountmorres fell off, the horse continued on its way, and reached the lodge, where it stopped. The gate was opened, and the horse and car brought in, but there was no driver. At first this did not cause any apprehension, as it was thought his Lordship might have got off to walk down the hill. But, some minutes having passed without his appearing, the servants went out in search of him with a lamp. When they had gone about two miles they discovered his body lifeless and riddled with bullets on the roadway in a pool of blood. The revolver which he carried was found in his breast-pocket; three chambers were loaded and two unloaded, but the latter did not appear to have been recently discharged. He had evidently not had a chance of defending himself.

A shocking token of the state of feeling in the neighbourhood is the conduct of Hugh Flanagan and his family, who lived in a house 200 or 300 yards from the scene of the murder. Two hours later, the servants having fetched the constables, a medical man, Dr. Hegarty, was called to look at the body, still lying in the road. There might be life in it. Dr. Hegarty, after examining the body, thought he detected a pulsation, and directed that the body should be removed to the nearest house. It was therefore taken to Flanagan's, but it was refused admission. Flanagan gave as his reason that "if they admitted it, nothing belonging to him would be alive that day twelve months." The people in this house must have heard the shots fired, but the constables found them all in bed. When Flanagan opened the door, the constable asked him to get a light and make a fire, which he did. When he spoke about Lord Mountmorres and made his request for admission, before Flanagan had time to say anything his wife and daughters rushed down stairs in their nightdresses, and said that Lord Mountmorres's body should not be brought in. They placed themselves in the doorway, so as to prevent its being brought in. They said nothing about an outhouse or any other place of shelter. The constable suggested they might use the outhouse, but the Flanagans refused. The body of Lord Mountmorres had to be left in the yard until a car was got, on which it was removed to Ebor Hall.

Lady Mountmorres and the rest of the family were absent from home; she was at Edinburgh, and could not arrive till the Monday. She was then joined by her brother, Major Broadrick, and the Hon. Arthur Montmorency, a medical man, brother of the deceased. In the meantime, on the Sunday, an open-air meeting of the Land League agitators was held at Clonbur, accompanied by a band of music, which played the "Dead March in Saul." The speakers at this meeting said the Land League was not responsible for the murder. On the same day there was a great meeting at New Ross, which was addressed by Mr. Parnell, M.P., and he did not allude to the death of Lord Mountmorres. But, with reference to the shooting of Mr. Boyd, he said it was owing to the want of organisation among the tenants for the protection of their rights. Not the least sympathy or compassion for the victims of assassination, still less any decided censure of these horrible deeds, has come from this faction of desperate political adventurers, trading on the disturbed social relations of Ireland for purposes of party ambition. The Roman Catholic clergy, to their great credit, have generally denounced such crimes; and one parish priest has called upon his whole congregation, kneeling together in the chapel, to swear that they will have nothing to do with the murder of landlords.

The body of Lord Mountmorres was removed from Galway to the metropolis last week. It was interred on Thursday week in the old Monkstown churchyard, at Dublin. Besides the two brothers of the deceased, a force of policemen, and the undertaker, no person accompanied the hearse to the grave; but in the chapel at Monkstown a few friends had assembled, to whom the Rev. G. Mahaffy delivered a short address. The Dublin Gazette offers a Government reward of £1000 for such evidence as shall lead to the conviction of the murderer or murderers of Lord Mountmorres, and the reward and a free pardon to any accomplice who shall give such evidence. The herdsman above-mentioned, whose name is Sweeney, has been in custody, but there is no real evidence against him. A young mason, named Francis Gannon, has also been arrested on suspicion. But all the country people, as usual, have tacitly conspired to defeat justice, and to screen the murderers from that impartial administration of law, which cares equally for the life of peer and beggar.

We have copied the portrait of Lord Mountmorres from a photograph by Mr. Fradelle, of Regent-street, London. The views of the scene of the murder were taken by a local photographer.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

ITALY.

The King and Queen of Greece arrived at Milan last Saturday in strict incognito. They dined in state with King Humbert and Queen Margherita at Monza on Monday evening, and on Tuesday they left for Florence. The meeting of the Sovereigns of Italy and Greece has been most cordial.

The Minister of the Interior has addressed a circular to the Procurators-General enjoining the strict enforcement of all existing laws against the Jesuits. The Jesuits near Loretto have already had orders to quit within five days, and have replied that they will yield only to force.

General Garibaldi arrived at Genoa on Monday, and, as might have been expected, received an enthusiastic welcome. The principal streets through which he passed from the place of disembarkation to his daughter's house were thronged with people, and the General was accompanied along the route by working-men's societies and the representatives of other organisations. There was, says the Standard Correspondent, some groaning under the windows of the Municipal Palace, but, with this exception, the proceedings were orderly. Another correspondent says that Garibaldi appeared very feeble, and had a worn and weary look. He seemed as if he had come to find a grave in Genoa rather than to disturb a kingdom. He proceeded in an open carriage to his daughter's house, where he retired to rest, remaining in seclusion the remainder of the day. The authorities had taken the precaution to obstruct the approaches to the prison where Signor Canzio, the General's son-in-law, is confined, but there was no popular demonstration beyond the hearty welcome to the General. On Tuesday General Garibaldi paid a visit to his son-in-law. A large crowd accompanied the General to and from the gaol. The distinguished visitor said to his relative, "You were right not to ask for pardon, and I shall not ask it for you."

SPAIN.

The King and the Duke of Montpensier arrived at Madrid on Tuesday.

It is announced that the meeting of the Association for the Reform of the Customs Tariffs will also consider the position of the wine trade with England.

HOLLAND.

The Second Chamber has voted the address to the King in reply to the Speech from the Throne by 51 votes to 16, after rejecting motions brought forward by MM. van Houten and Keuchenius to insert a paragraph recommending a revision of the electoral law.

GERMANY.

The Crown Prince, accompanied by the Crown Princess and Prince William of Prussia, arrived on Wednesday, last week, at Kiel, and, having embarked on board his Majesty's yacht Hohenzollern, went out to meet Prince Henry, the second son of the Royal couple, on his return from a two-year's voyage round the world. On boarding the Prinz Adalbert the Crown Prince read two Imperial orders—one expressing his Majesty's satisfaction at the return of his grandson and the success of his voyage; and the other, promoting Captain M'Lean, the commander of the vessel, to the rank of Rear-Admiral, and Lieutenant Seckendorf, the young Prince's tutor, to that of Corvette-Captain.

The German Federal Council has been summoned to meet on the 20th inst.

AUSTRIA-HUNGARY.

An autograph letter of the Emperor Francis Joseph was read in the Lower House of the Hungarian Diet last Saturday summoning the Delegations to meet at Pesth on the 19th inst. M. Tisza, the Hungarian Premier, replying to an interpellation in the Lower House, said that the delay granted to the Porte proves that no Power manifests any intention of making war against Turkey. He could not foretell what will yet be done; but, according to the instructions received by the commanders of the squadrons, a disembarkation of troops will not be effected.

On Monday the Finance Minister, Count Szapary, introduced the Hungarian Budget for 1881 in the Lower House. It shows a deficit of 24,765,381 fl., for covering which 7,800,000 fl. of Rente not yet issued are still available. The result of the new taxes and duties is estimated at 6,500,000 fl.; and the remaining deficit of 10,500,000 fl. will be covered by an issue of new gold Rente.

DENMARK.

The Rigsdag was opened at Copenhagen on Monday, but immediately afterwards prorogued until Nov. 9, when the regular session will begin.

AMERICA.

President Hayes has visited several towns in Oregon, where he has been warmly welcomed. He inspected the Government Indian School, and expressed himself strongly in favour of the education and civilisation of the Indians.

Mr. Evarts, Secretary of State, speaking at New York last week, declared that since the war with the South the country had five times refused to give the Democrats power, and that there was less reason now than ever for a change of Government.

A despatch received in New York states that eighteen Victoria Indians have been killed in an engagement with the American troops under General Carr. These Victorias, an Indian band on the Rio Grande, although surrounded by 3000 Mexican, Arizonan, and Texan troops, eluded pursuit. They slipped out by dividing into two bands—one going to the Candelaria Mountains, 200 miles distant; the other doubling on General Buell's column and attacking Fort Cummins, his head-quarters. They stole some cattle, but were repulsed. General Buell is now pursuing the band, which has gone to the Candelaria Mountains.

The correspondent of the Times states that the Philadelphia Court has forfeited the charters of the Eclectic Medical College of Pennsylvania and the American University of Philadelphia for selling bogus diplomas. These were the medical colleges managed by Dr. Buchanan, who is now awaiting his trial.

The Presbyterian Pan Council closed last Saturday.

MEXICO.

Intelligence received at New York from Mexico announces that the Mexican Congress was opened on the 16th ult. by President Porfirio Diaz, who in his speech on the occasion expressed great satisfaction at the political and moral progress made by the Republic. The President stated that the negotiations for the re-establishment of diplomatic relations with France had had a satisfactory result, and in conclusion expressed the hope that Congress would settle the difficult question of the National Debt, and place the credit of the country on a solid basis.

SOUTH AFRICA.

Mr. W. H. Surmon, resident magistrate of the Thaba Bosigo district, was attacked by 3000 Basutos at Mohales Hoek on the 25th ult., but succeeded in beating them off.

A telegram from Capetown states that the relieving force has arrived at Mohales Hock, and, in conjunction with the garrison, has succeeded in dispersing the Basutos with trifling loss.

Colonel Clarke, Commandant-General of the Colonial Forces, has been appointed to the command of the reinforcements which are concentrating at Weppener for the relief of Mafeteng.

Lieutenant-Colonel Bayly remains at Maseru, where an attack from the insurgent Basutos is expected.

Sir Bartle Frere has been elected Chancellor of the Cape University.

INDIA.

The Indian correspondents of the Times send particulars of the situation in Afghanistan. The Candahar correspondent says that the Government have apparently decided to retain a strong division there for the winter. It is supposed that General Phayre will remain in command and that General Primrose will return to India. The correspondent describes the resources of the province as adequate to provide the necessary food for man and beast, the only difficulty being in respect to forage for the animals. The Standard's correspondent at Candahar telegraphs that the regiments engaged at Maiwand are about to proceed to India and England, and he suggests that before they have been scattered an inquiry into the campaign should be insisted upon. General Roberts has handed over the command of South Afghanistan to General Phayre, and General Primrose, who is ordered to report himself at Bombay, will be called on for a defence of his conduct during the late crisis. Ayoob Khan has arrived at Herat, and it is rumoured in the bazaars that he intends returning with more guns, in alliance with Mahomed Jan, and supported by a contingent from Ghuznee, to attack Candahar. The Calcutta correspondent of the Times says that the latest news from Cabul is to the effect that everything is quiet. It is stated that a Mohammedan who murdered a Hindoo goldsmith has been blown from a gun by the Ameer's orders.

The Calcutta correspondent of the Times states that the heavy rains of a fortnight ago caused disastrous floods in Rohilkund. A large number of lives were lost, and the crops were much injured.

The successor nominated by the late Maharajah of Jeypore has been officially recognised and installed in the place of his predecessor.

AUSTRALIA.

The Melbourne International Exhibition was formally opened on Friday, Oct. 1, by the Governor of Victoria, the Marquis of Normanby, in the presence of the Duke of Manchester and the Governors of South Australia, New South Wales, and Western Australia. The Marquis of Normanby, in reply to an address, said the undertaking had been carried out in a most creditable manner, and that the display was one of which any country might be proud. The day was observed in Melbourne as a public holiday.

The revenue of New South Wales for the quarter ending Sept. 30 amounts to £1,224,000, being an increase of £297,000 as compared with the same period of last year.

The revenue of South Australia for the past quarter amounts to £496,000, or an increase of £87,000 compared with the September quarter of last year.

The revenue of Queensland for the past quarter amounts to £484,000, showing an increase of £81,000 compared with the same quarter of 1879.

The Rev. Dr. Cleary, parish priest of Dungarvan, has been appointed by the Pope Bishop of Kingston, in Canada.

The remains of a lake village has been discovered in a marsh at Regnate, near Milan. They include shavings of flints, apparently cut with bronze instruments.

In an Encyclical letter, dated the 30th ult., the Pope adverts to the solicitude of the Popes for the Slav countries, and thanks Providence for affording him the opportunity of testifying his paternal affection for them.

The new French sugar law, which came into operation on the first of the present month, creates a bounty of upwards of 2s. 6d. per cent upon the export of moist refined sugars of all descriptions. Hitherto, in France, the bounty has been given only upon loaf sugar, on which it is now reduced nearly one half.

Digitized by Google

The commander of the United States steamer Alert reports the discovery of a submarine volcano near San Alessandro, an island in the Pacific.

An ordinance has been issued by the Chief Burgomaster of Bruges suspending the Chief Commissary of Police for having given the assistance of his men to enforce the expulsion of the Brethren of the Christian Doctrine from their houses.

THE MAGAZINES.

Mr. Henry James has never displayed more perfect mastery of his art than in the chapters of "Washington Square" now appearing in the Cornhill Magazine. The skill with which the action is supported, and the interest fully maintained by only four dramatis personæ, is most remarkable, as is also the delicacy of analysis in the portraiture of the personages themselves. The drawback is the extreme disagreeableness of two of them, and the unsatisfactory position of the heroine, who seems to have no alternative but to waste her life, do what she will. We must confess ourselves relieved that Mr. Black's "White Wings" should be furled at last. They have borne him across a wide ocean of talk, sometimes as bright and buoyant as the wave itself, but always as aimless and desultory. The concluding part of "The Pavilion on the Links" succeeds fairly in keeping up the excitement and curiosity inspired by the first part; but the incidents are less ingeniously contrived, and more distinctly melodramatic. The tardy self-sacrifice of the old banker is out of keeping with his character. "Falling in Love" is a very pretty essay, replete with tender and graceful feeling. "Venetian Folk Songs" make an interesting chapter in the great volume of popular literature. The sketch of "Country Parsons" is kindly and accurate. Mr. Quilter commences a series of "Notes on Water-Colour Art," in the course of which he astonishes us with the discovery that "a pupil of Cox's named William Bennett may be said to have determined the direction of landscape art for at least twenty years." "After him," it is added, "the deluge," which appears to have washed him out so thoroughly that few have heard of him.

Mr. James's versatility, no less than his talent, is attested by the new fiction he commences in Macmillan's Magazine, under the not very felicitous title of "The Portrait of a Lady." While the family likeness to his other works is unmistakable, there is as yet no sign of repetition or of the working up of old material. The heroine promises to be a charming personage, and the whole is much brighter and more attractive than the writer's more artistic fiction in the Cornhill. The chief drawback, a frequent one with Mr. James, is the disproportion of dialogue and description to incident. Mr. Schuyler concludes his entertaining account of the Turkish historian of the disastrous war with Russia which terminated by the treaty of Kainardji. The Turk is sufficiently severe on the obstinacy and stupidity of own countrymen, and some of his observations might be advantageously pondered at Stambul at this day. Mr. E. A. Freeman, in a discourse on "Glastonbury, British and English," points out the unique position of Glastonbury as the only link with the Romano-Christian era of Britain left unbroken by the Saxon conquest.

Fraser opens with a sensible paper by Mr. Cliffe Leslie on "Easy Methods," deprecating the tendency to such short cuts towards the solution of Irish problems, and more particularly the endeavour to introduce peasant proprietorship where even proprietorship will not enable a man to support himself. Mr. Julian Hawthorne's fairy tale is too capriciously fanciful, without artistic unity or moral purpose. Mr. A. C. Ewald follows a recent German writer in detailing the circumstances of Henry the Eighth's sister's love-match with the Duke of Suffolk, after the death of her first husband, Louis XII. of France. Mr. Blackley, in the guise of an attack on the Poor Law, returns to his favourite subject of compulsory insurance. There is an entertaining article on Dax in the Pyrenees, and a searching examination of the individual items that make Oxford education so costly. The most remarkable contribution, however, is an anonymous study entitled "A Greek Hamlet," a powerful retelling, after Herodotus, of the tragic tale of the son of Periander, tyrant of Corinth, whose situation, indeed, was more like Hamlet's than his character, but who presents sufficient affinity in both respects to justify the parallel instituted by the writer.

The most readable contributions to a not very brilliant number of Blackwood are the continuation of "Dr Wortle's School," by a hand it is impossible to mistake, and a hearty invective against "The Stump Ministry," in the good old Blackwood style. The Athenians would have thought it odd to hear an orator seriously impeached for being more eloquent than his antagonists, and on that account more addicted to addressing the public assembly. "Bush Life in Queensland" is concluded. "The Roof of the World" is an interesting summary of Lieutenant Wood's exploration, in 1838, of the River Oxus's "high mountain cradle in Pamir." "The Enchanted Bridle" is a very fair imitation of the old weird style of Scotch ballad.

Mr. O'Brien's contribution in the Fortnightly Review to the Irish Tenant question is needlessly one-sided in tone—needlessly, for few will dispute the justice of his proposition, that the tenant should benefit by the improvements he has himself made. How far improvements are generally made by the tenant is a subject for inquiry; and even should this prove to be the case, it will be fair to remember that Irish landlords have little encouragement to improve. Mr. Swinburne's criticism of Dryden and Pope is so just and pointed as to make it matter of marvel how such manly substance comes to be allied with so pretentious a style. Affectation also interferes with the enjoyment of Mr. George Meredith's highly characteristic "Modern Comedians." It is as full of brilliant things as a comedy of Congreve's; but, as with Congreve, one wearies even of witty conversation at such perpetual high pressure. "Are We Englishmen?" by Grant Allen, is a paradoxical attempt to prove that England owes her characteristic qualities to the Celtic element in her people, the extent of which Mr. Allen prodigiously overrates. The other articles are not remarkable.

In the leading article of the Nineteenth Century, Lord Sherbrooke discusses the question whether it be a greater evil that talkers for talking sake in the House of Commons should be stopped or that the debate should be entirely given up to them, and very sensibly decides in favour of the former course. Mr. Frederic Harrison's anathema upon all creeds but his own shows how liberally even a Positivist may be endowed with the odium theologicum. The candid tone of the Bishop of Carlisle's study of the philosophical and theological aspects of the structure of a crayfish is refreshing in comparison. The Lord Chief Justice's paper on the history and laws of the chace is chiefly interesting as an illustration of the venerable writer's perennial freshness and energy of mind. The translation of a portion of a Chinese Envoy's diary of his mission to England is important in more ways than one. The writer is a Conservative mandarin who dreads above all things the extension of the railway system to China. His exposition of the grounds on which even enlightened Chinese prefer their civilization to ours is highly suggestive, and contains not a little which Europeans might profitably lay to heart. Lord Lymington's short account of the management of the Portsmouth property in Ireland is most satisfactory in itself, and affords valuable hints towards a solution of the Irish difficulty.

The only contribution of much weight to the Contemporary Review, the Duke of Argyll's disquisition on "Man's Place in the Unity of Nature," is also very abstruse, and, being a portion of a series, must be necessarily interpreted by what is yet to follow. "Theology and Materialism," "The Origin of Music," and "Recent Speculations on Primitive Religion" are also too abstract for most readers; the last-named, however, contains a lively account of the singular theory of Caspari, which associates early religious ideas with the discovery of fire. Lady Verney's collection of legends respecting swords famous in romance, whether purely mythical, like Arthur's Excalibur, or historical, like the Cid's Tizona, is, on the contrary, highly entertaining. "Through Siberia," the record of a summer tour, gives a highly favourable account of the resources of Southern Siberia in fish, game, and the fruits of the earth. Mr. Grant Allen, whose ambition it seems to be to have a paper in every magazine, and a paradox in every paper, propounds the question, "Why Keep India?" Were anyone to answer, "For the sake of the holders of Indian securities," it does not appear what reply Mr. Allen would return, for this primary consideration is not once adverted to by him.

The Atlantic Monthly has one of those studies of American life in Europe which Mr. James is rendering fashionable. "A Florentine Experiment" is quite in his manner, and not unworthy of him. The other contributions are fully up to the average standard, and that of the poetry is even unusually high.

The leading feature in Scribner's Monthly, in the eyes of its conductors, is, apparently, the life of the great peasant painter Millet, somewhat too literally translated from the French of A. Sensier. The numerous illustrations adequately render the peculiar intensity which constitutes the most definite note of Millet's art; but we can scarcely imagine that they do him full justice in other respects. In point of literary merit, nothing in the number approaches "Miss Stotford's Specialty," by Philip Bourke Marston. This little tale is a perfect triumph of character painting. Miss Stotford is a real creation, a finished miniature of a woman who, painted at full length, might have occupied the foreground of a three-volume novel. "A Group of Poems" includes some very pretty pieces. "Porpoise-Shooting" and "In the Mammoth Cave" are capital illustrated papers in this magazine's characteristic style. "The Grandissimes" is concluded, "Peter the Great" continued, and "The New South" holds forth a prospect for the Southern States as the possible seat of small farms, in contrast to the great food factories of the West.

The best contributions to Minerva are, as they should be, those treating of Italian matters. Among them may be mentioned papers on Roman malaria and on the river on which Naples anciently stood, but which seems to have vanished as completely as the Fleet or the Tyburn.

Temple Bar, besides its serial tales, has well-written memoirs of the painter Romney and "Monk" Lewis; and a capital burlesque of Macaulay's ballad style, entitled "Orange Sauce." Mr. Payn's "Confidential Agent" keeps up the prestige of Belgravia, which has also a very good short tale entitled "Mr. Earl's Investment," and some very life-like experiences related by a ci-devant tramp. There is nothing to notice in Time except "Violet Fane's" clever and eccentric "Sophy." The most interesting contributions to the Gentleman's Magazine are essays in criticism. Mr. Swinburne points out "possible and probable" traces of Dryden's hand in a generally inferior comedy entitled "The Mistaken Husband." Mr. S. L. Lee ingeniously identifies the principal characters in "Love's Labour's Lost" with the contemporary leaders in French politics; and Mr. Haweis contributes a very fair criticism of Russell Lowell's poetry. Mr. Mattieu William's monthly notes on science are also a feature, not only from their intrinsic interest, but from their independence of "scientific orthodoxy."

The University Magazine as a quarterly is very like the University as a monthly. The most interesting contributions are two on Jewish subjects, "The Talmud" and "A Very Remarkable Interview." The Antiquary, as usual, is full of excellent papers. No one can be better qualified to write on the revival of Gothic architecture than Mr. Parker, or on bookbinding than Mr. Wheatley. It is only to be regretted that these essays are in general too short.

Among Messrs. Cassell, Petter, and Galpin's excellent serials are the Magazine of Art (a new and enlarged series of which will be commenced with the next monthly part), Family Magazine, Quiver, Old and New London, Technical Educator; Longfellow's Poetical Works, Illustrated; Science for All, Illustrated; Familiar Wild Flowers, with Coloured Plates; and an Illustrated Book of the Dog.

We have received the Serial Issue of Mr. Heath's Fern Paradise and his serial issue of Gilpin's Forest Scenery, Tinsley's Magazine, London Society, Churchman, St. James's Magazine, Argosy, Good Words, Victoria Magazine, Colburn's New Monthly, Scribner's Monthly (the closing number of the twentieth volume), St. Nicholas (completing the seventh volume), Science Gossip, Men of Mark, Covent-Garden Magazine, Welcome, Kensington, the Month, Golden Hours, Peep-Show, Animal World, Mission Life, and Chatterbox. Among the Fashion Books are Le Follet, Ladies' Gazette of Fashion, Myra's Journal, Myra's Mid-Monthly, Weldon's Ladies' Journal, and Illustrated Household Journal. We have also received Monthly Parts of All the Year Round, Once a Week, Leisure Hour, Sunday at Home, Sunday Magazine, Gardeners' Magazine, Gardening Illustrated, Day of Rest, Social Notes, Boy's Own Paper, Girl's Own Paper, Young England, Union Jack, the Daisy, the Christian Age, the Library of Romance, and the House Decorator.

We have received the third part of a reproduction by heliogravure on a large scale of the marvellous series of designs by Makart for the Procession in Celebration of the Silver Wedding of the Emperor and Empress of Austria at Vienna, the originals of which were lately exhibited at the Hanover Gallery, Bond-street. The present number, which, like the whole series, illustrates some of the trade guilds of Austria, in conjunction with legends relating thereto, includes The Historical Hunt of Joseph Fuchs, the Mountain Building of Alois Greil, the tale of the Spangler by Rudof Geyling, and that of the Bronzeworker, melter and smelter, by the same. This is one of the most important and successful applications of heliogravure we have seen.

BRAEMAR AND ITS CATARACTS.

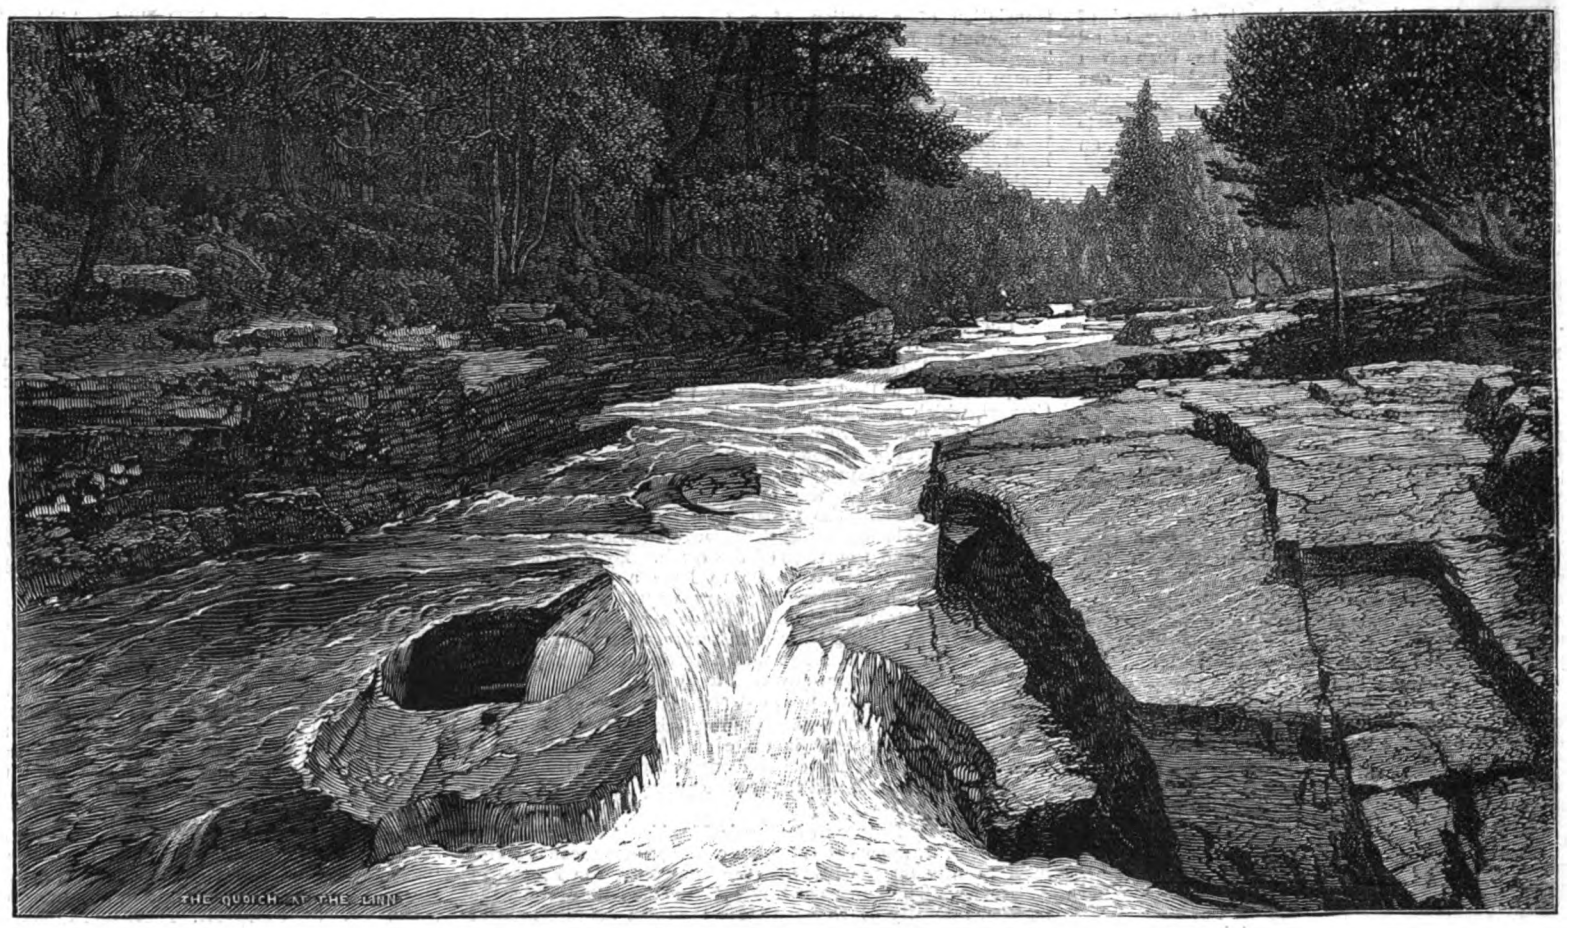
The first week of "Chill October" has already brought, even to the southern parts of Great Britain, warning signs of the end of outdoor holiday lounging and sauntering, though sportsmen are still busy with the gun, and are now looking forward to the greater business of the chase. Snow has been seen on Scottish mountain tops; but the valleys and straths between the Grampian ranges continue to afford pleasant resort to the lingering sojourners and tourists in that romantic Highland region. The Queen stays at Balmoral through this last month of autumn.

We present Views of two of the picturesque bits of Highland river scenery found in the Braemar district, of which we lately spoke, and which is the upper valley of the Dee, with its tributary streams, immediately above Balmoral. The stream of the Garry-alt, or Garrawalt, as the name is often spelt, comes down the declivity of the Ballochbuie pine-forest, issuing from that group of mountains, in the south, which comprises Lochnagar, overlooking Balmoral, Cairn Taggart, and the Cairn of Corbreach. It flows northward, to enter the main river near the Bridge of Dee, five miles below Castleton of Braemar, and eight or nine from Balmoral Castle. The Falls may be approached by a road turning off the highway at the Bridge of Invercauld, and are quite worthy of a visit. Here the water pours over several rocky shelves, which, though not perpendicular, are of considerable height; and, when the stream is in flood, the whole of its stony, sloping, broken bed is filled with a foaming and thundering torrent. The View that we have engraved, from a photograph by Mr. G. W. Wilson, of Aberdeen, represents the Garry-alt waterfall in a milder summer mood. There is a rather handsome wooden bridge crossing the stream just above this cataract.

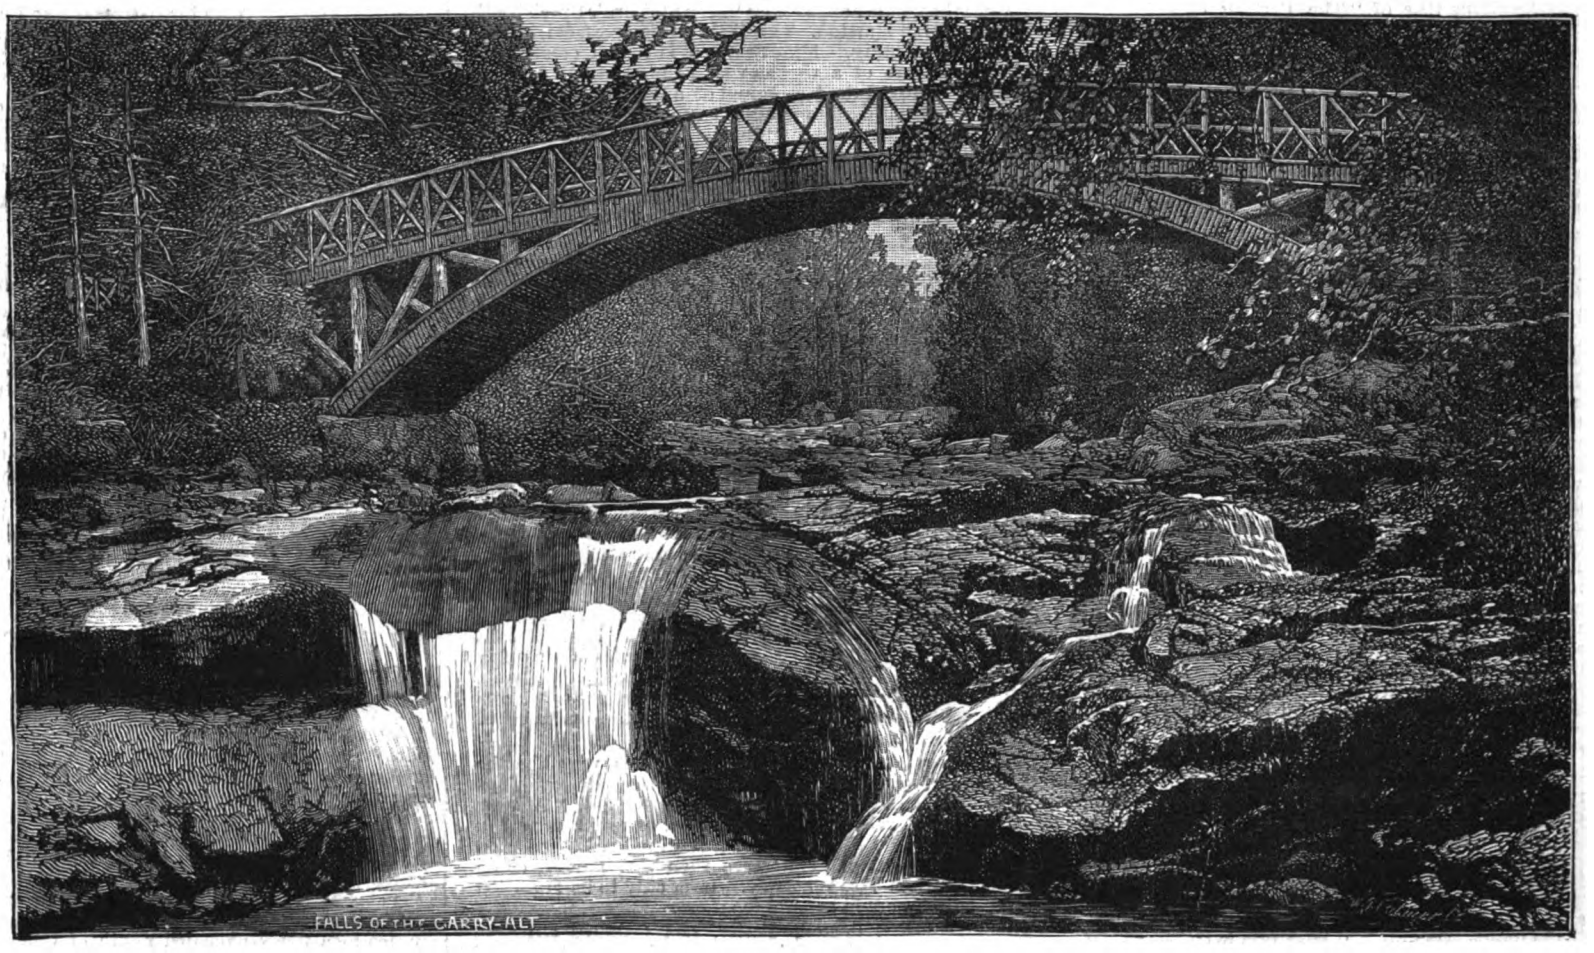
Two or three miles above Castleton of Braemar, on the way to Old Mar Lodge, the residence of the Earl of Fife, is a "linn" or cataract, which is named "the Linn of Quoich." This is a stream flowing into the Dee from the north-west, where it descends from Ben-na-Bourd across the Forest of Mar. The schist rock of its bed is perforated in many places with deep circular holes, one of which has the shape of a huge cup, or "quoich;" and hence the name bestowed on this "linn." A view of that singular feature, likewise from one of Mr. G. W. Wilson's photographs, appears on the same page with that of the Garry-alt. There are, besides these cataracts, the Falls of Corriemulzie, a few miles west of Castleton, which are very beautiful, the ravine being overgrown with creeping plants and overhung with birch-trees. The Linn of Dee, an hour's walk farther on, is remarkable for the deep and narrow passage which the water has cut for itself through the rock.

A RELIC OF THE CABUL MASSACRE.

The little Chinese pug-dog, a female named Patty, which is figured in one of our Engravings, belonged to that lamented and distinguished officer, Major Sir P. Louis N. Cavagnari, the late British Resident Envoy at Cabul. She was with him during the first campaign of the Afghan War, when he accompanied, as Political Commissioner, the Peshawur column of the army, commanded by Sir S. Browne, from Ali Musjid through the Khyber Pass, to occupy Jellalabad and proceed to the negotiations of the peace at Gundamuk, where our Special Artist, Mr. W. Simpson, made acquaintance with Patty, as well as with her gallant but unfortunate master. When Major Cavagnari, immediately afterwards, went to Cabul as Resident Envoy, he took this little favourite animal with him, and she must have been present at the massacre of the Englishmen in the Residency, in the September of that year. She was found by an Armenian spirit-seller disconsolately wandering about the city; and when General Roberts entered Cabul with his avenging army, she was given up to the British Staff, and has been sent home to Lady Cavagnari. We are told that Lady Cavagnari first had this little creature in India, about six years ago, as a gift from the late Major Wigram Battye, who was killed in the late war.

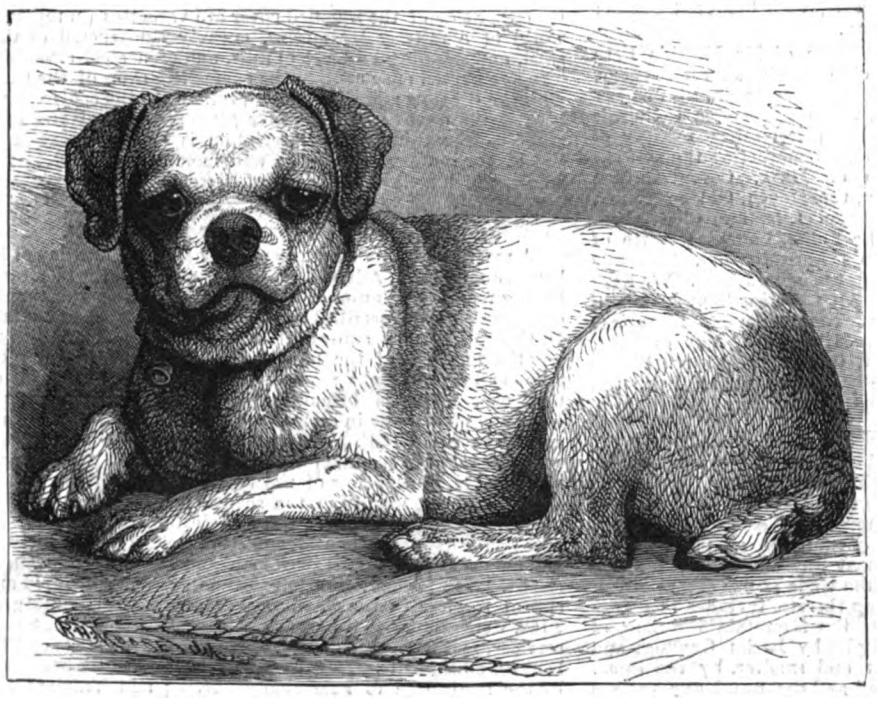


SIR HENRY BESSEMER.



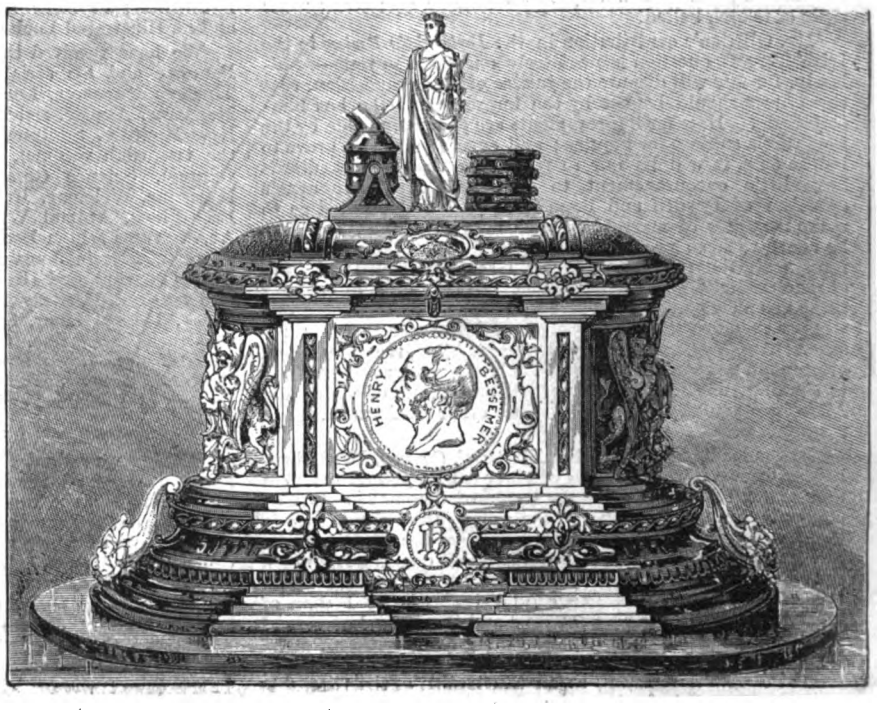
The Common Council on Wednesday presented the freedom of the City of London to Sir Henry Bessemer, as a token of esteem for his merits in the invention of great improvements in the manufacture of steel, and in other branches of productive industry. The proceedings took place in the Council Chamber at Guildhall, and were presided over by the Lord Mayor; who in the evening entertained Sir Henry and Lady Bessemer and a company numbering about 300 guests at the Mansion House. The gold casket, specially designed and manufactured by J. W. Benson, of Ludgate-hill, illustrates the process of the conversion of iron, from the raw material, to the application of the Bessemer steel to engineering and constructive purposes. It is of solid English design, surmounted by a finely-modelled figure of Commerce, standing between a stack of pig-iron and the furnace used for the Bessemer process. She commends the invention on account of the impetus that cheap steel gives to commercial enterprise. The overflowing cornucopia at the base signify this success. On either side of the rounded cover are vignettes (in repoussé work) of a railway locomotive, entirely constructed of this steel, and standing on its steel rails, and of a steel-clad ship. The two curved ends contain the enamelled arms of the City, with the dragons modelled in high relief. On the centre panel is the medal that Sir H. Bessemer gives annually at the Iron and Steel Institute. The inscription is on the reverse side. Shields for the Bessemer arms and monogram complete the whole, which rests on a plateau of Bessemer steel.

ROYAL NATIONAL LIFE-BOAT INSTITUTION.



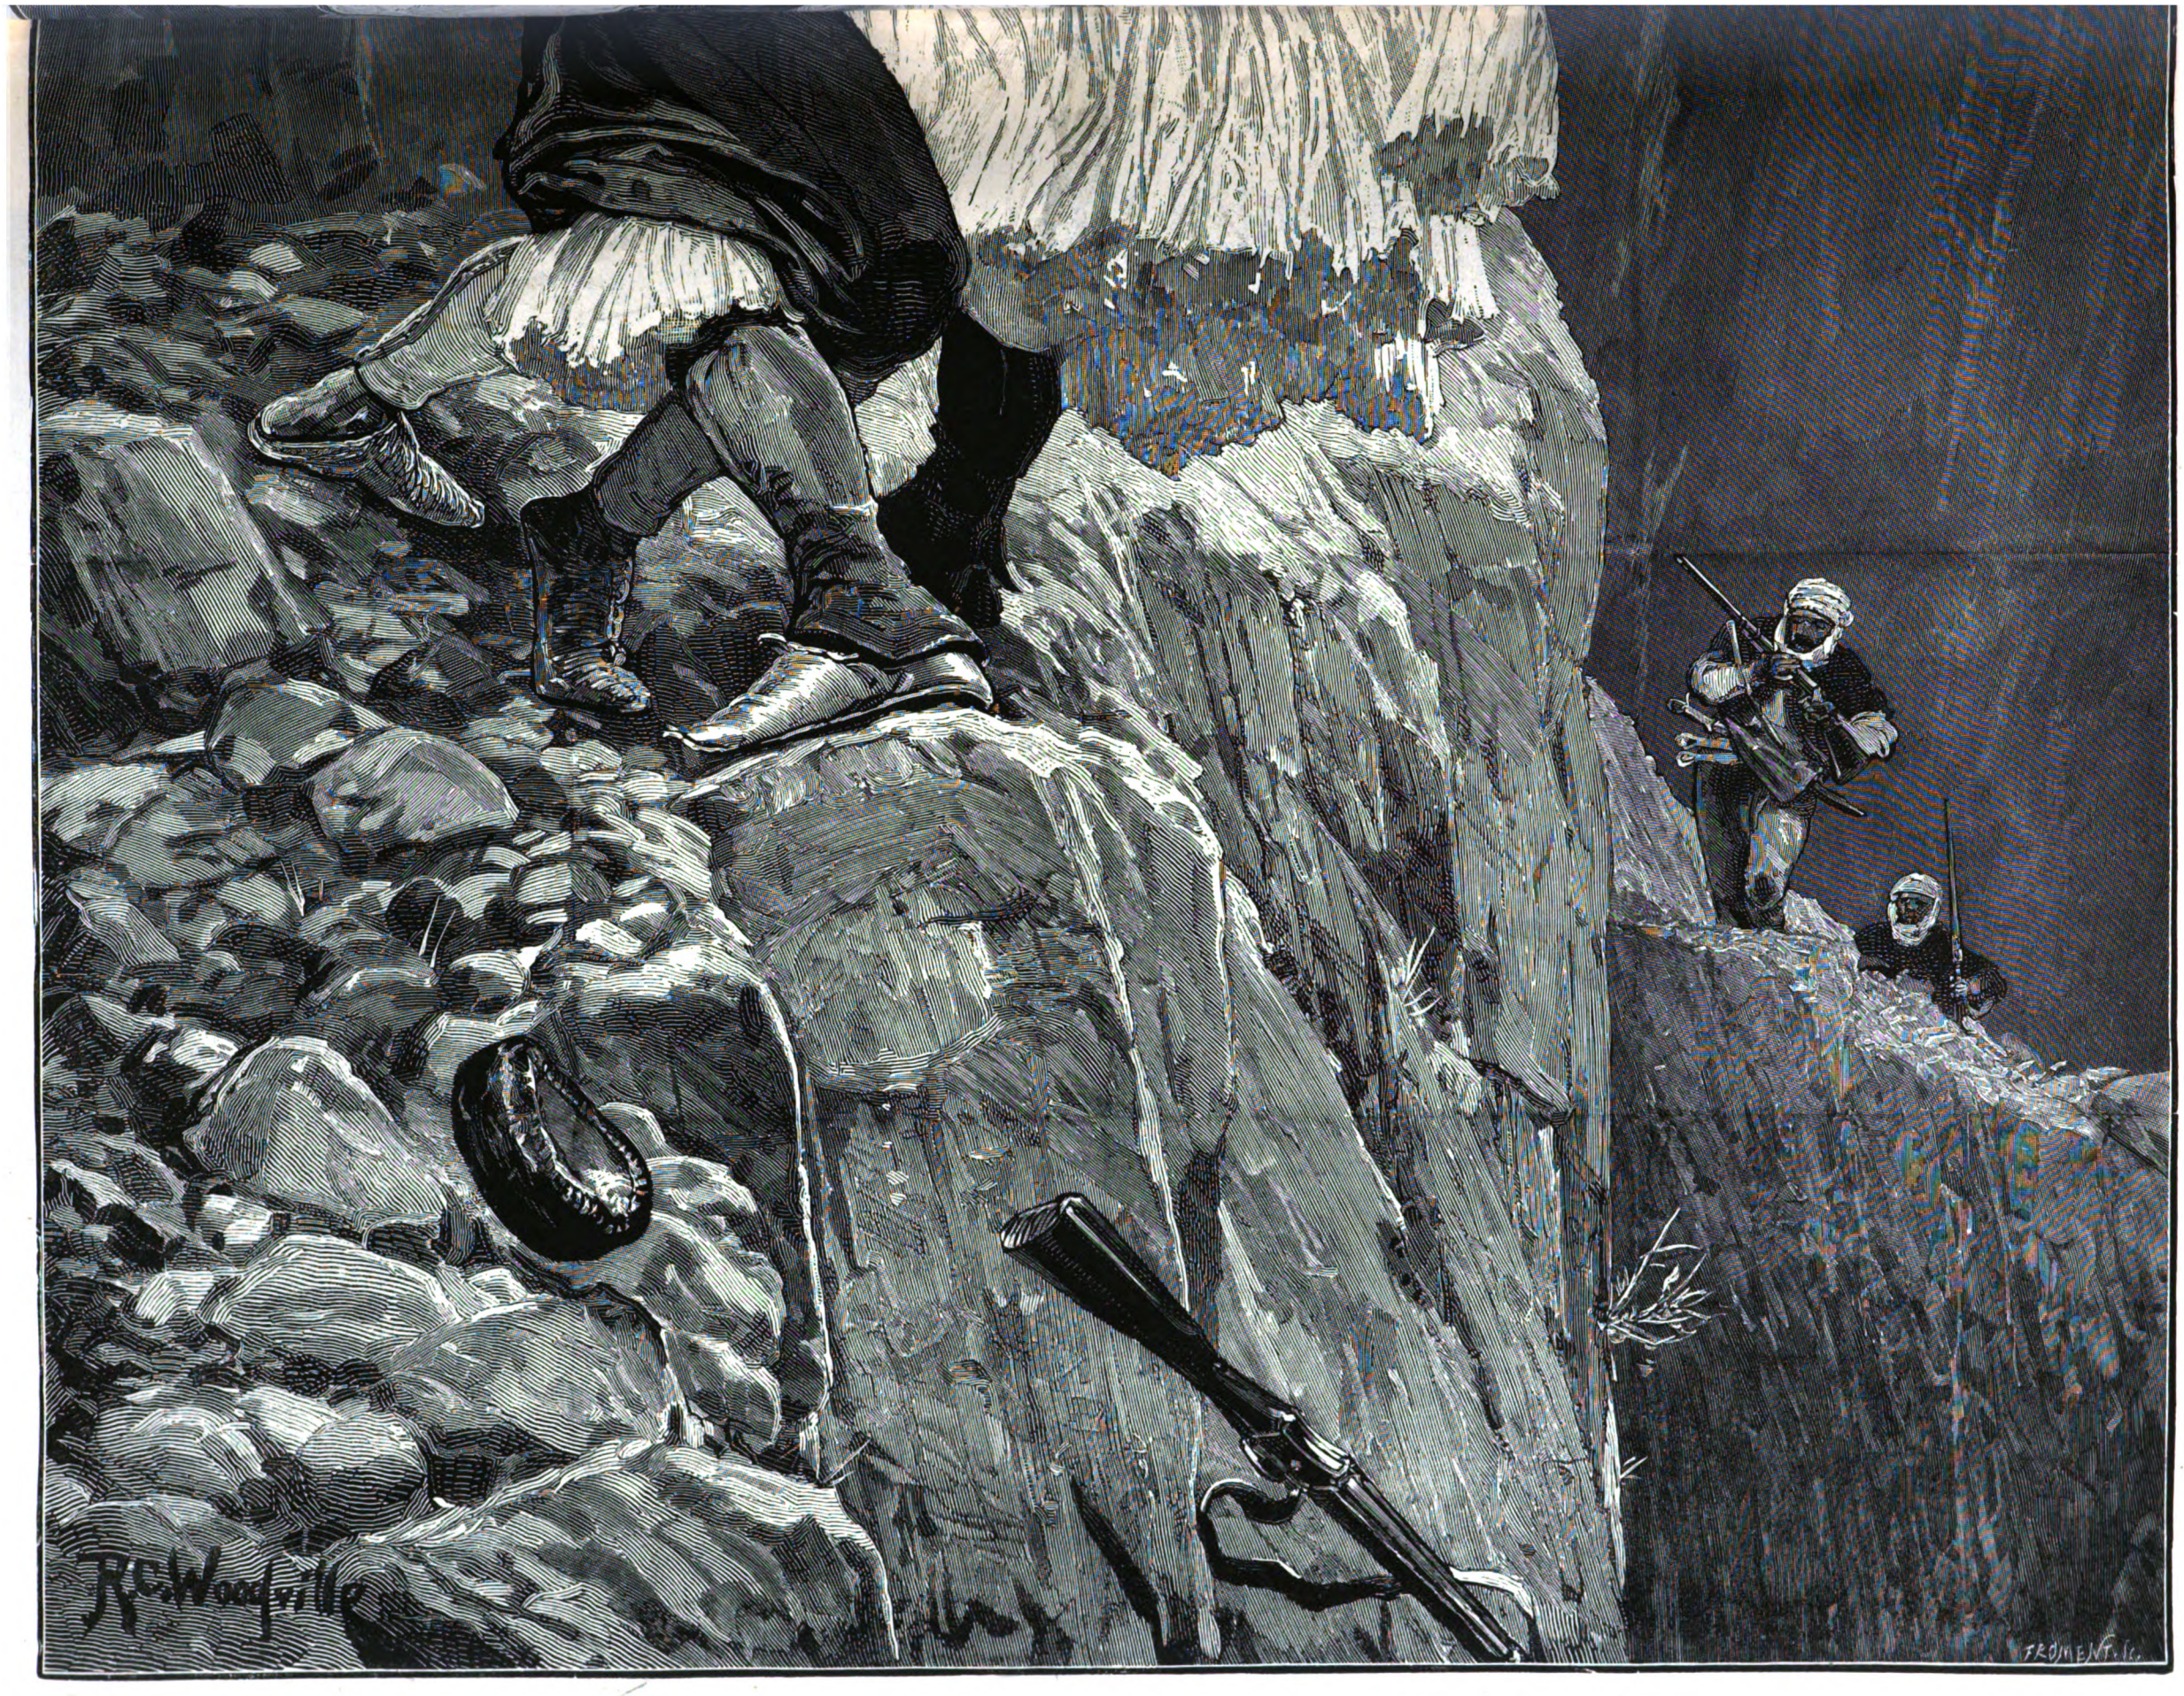
A meeting of this institution was held on Thursday at its house, John-street, Adelphi. Mr. Richard Lewis, the secretary, having read the minutes of the previous meeting, the thanks of the institution, inscribed on vellum, were granted to Captain D. George, Lloyd's sub-agent at Fishguard, and £18 19s. to pay the expenses of the life-boat at that place, in going off twice and saving eight persons from the smack Catherine, of Cardigan, and the brigantine Osnabrick, of Papenburg, Hanover, which were in distress off Fishguard during a strong gale from the N.N.E. The special thanks of the institution were also voted to Captain John Hodge and Mr. T. B. Williams, and £10 14s. to the crew of the St. Ives life-boat for saving the crew of six men from the schooner Jane Smith, of Plymouth, which had struck on Porthminster beach in a strong gale and heavy sea. The second service clasp was granted to Mr. James Murphy, coastguardman and assistant coxswain of the St. Ives life-boat, in acknowledgment of his intrepid and skilful services in the boat. Other rewards, amounting to £160, were granted to the crews of different life-boats for recent services, and payments amounting to £2734 were made on life-boat establishments. New life-boats have recently been sent by the institution to Fraserburgh, N.B.; and Tramore and Ardmore, Ireland.

Digitized by Google



SKETCHES IN BRAEMAR.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

PATTY, A CHINESE PUG DOG, PRESENT AT THE CABUL MASSACRE.
SEE PRECEDING PAGE.



CASKET FOR SIR HENRY BESSEMER, WITH FREEDOM OF THE CITY OF LONDON.
SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

SETTLING A FRONTIER DISPUTE.

BY R. C. WOODVILLE.

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

PEOPLE I HAVE MET.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "THAT ARTFUL VICAR."

No. XIII.—THE ORNAMENTAL DIRECTOR.

The Marquis of Mistylands was a truly magnificent creature, who married the heiress of A. Shoddyman, merchant clothier, of Bradford and San Francisco; but Lord Augustus Shortcasshe, one of his younger brothers, had no money at all, nor would the most honourable Marquis give him any. His junior Lordship, who had a pleasant wit indeed, was wont to compare himself to an acorn, which is, he remarked, the same thing as an oak-tree, only not so big. Lord Augustus and his brother were wonderfully alike. They had the same features, the same hair, even the same proud noses, and, above all, the same pure, unadulterated love of themselves. "Come, Bustibus (Bustibus was the form of Augustus used in familiar intercourse by the peer in addressing his kinsman), if you were in my place, would you give me a tanner to save me from drowning? Out with it, man! 'Yes,' or 'No'?" And to this straightforward appeal the younger brother, who never wasted an untruth, answered with candour and spirit, "Not one"—whatever else he was going to say, however, was happily stopped by the entrance of the most honourable Marchioness; and the party dined together very cheerfully off hominy, pumpkin-pie, American oysters, and other Transatlantic delicacies which her sprightly Ladyship had opportunely introduced into the domestic cookery of the ancient house of Shortcasshe.

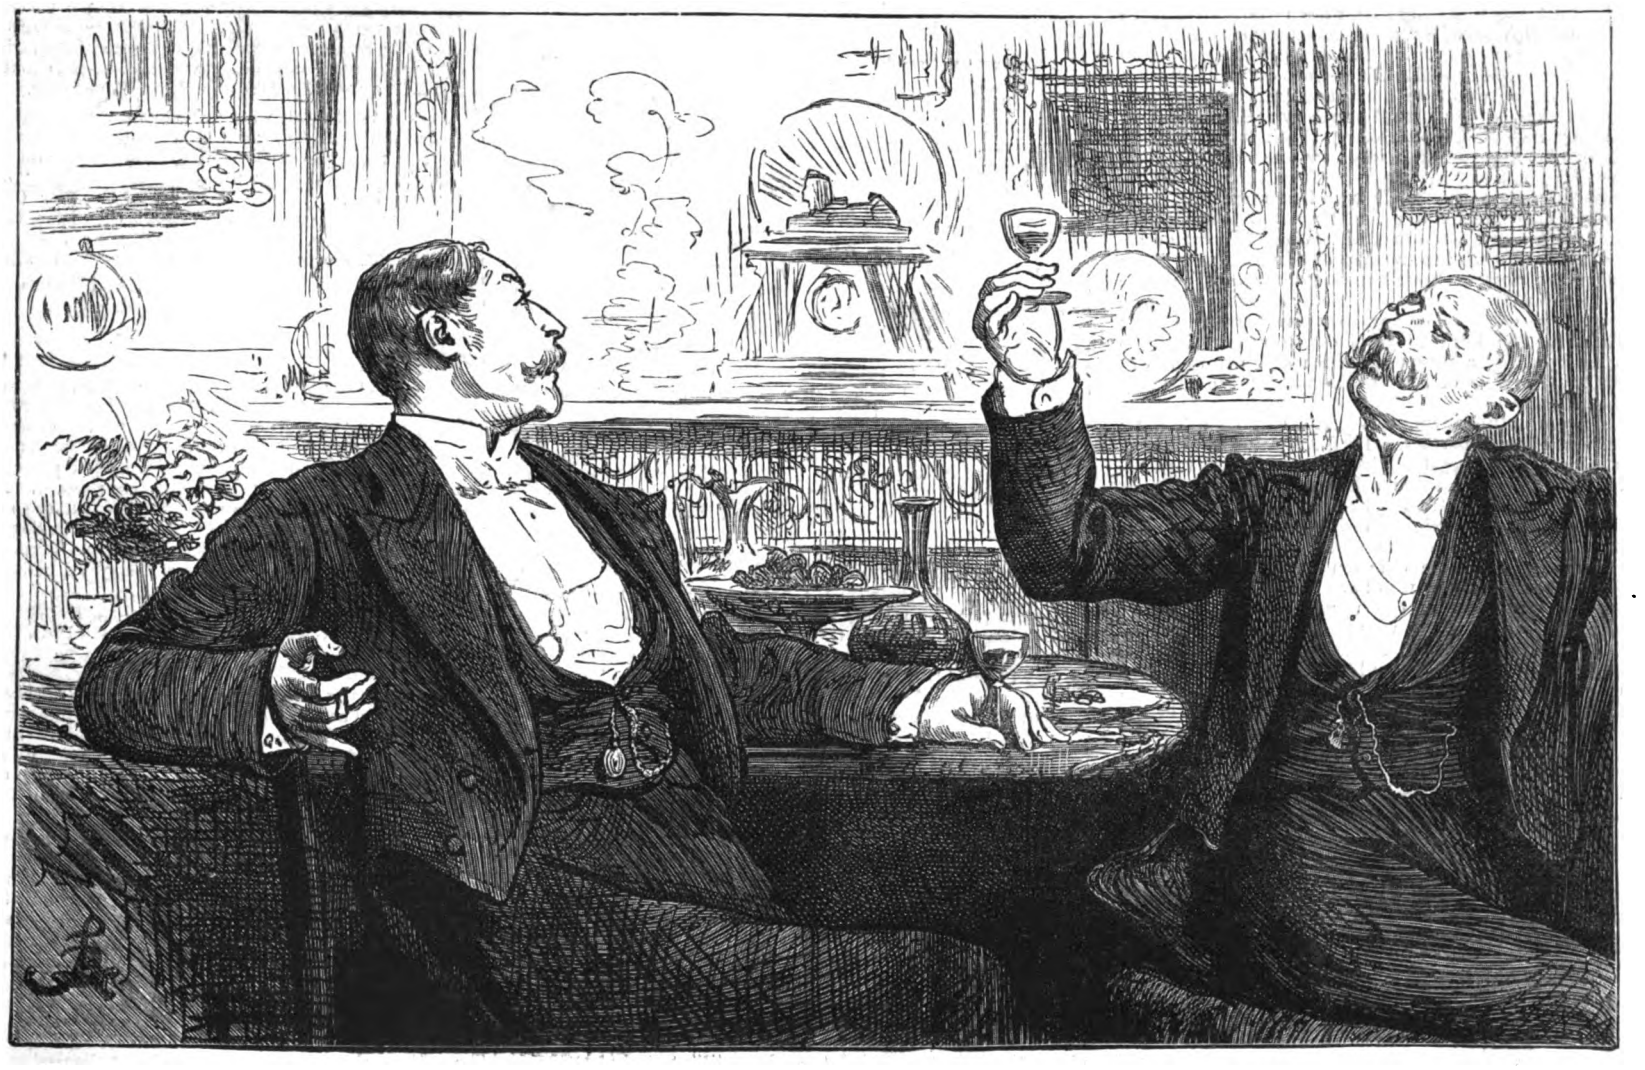
"I'll tell you what it is, though, old man," chirped the Marquis, while the beauty who adorned his home had retired to make herself more captivating for her opera-box on the grand tier, where she was about to pass the fag end of the evening before she went the round of balls upon her list, "I don't mind doing anything for you that costs nothing."

"Honour bright?" asked the young Lord, looking up from his dessert-plate, where he was peeling a walnut that required attention.

"Well, I don't know about 'honour bright;' that's a little rough on a man after dinner. Let 's hear first what you want," said the Marquis, who had a practical mind and was fond of inquiring into details affecting his interests.

"I want you to breakfast with me to-morrow at the Albany," replied his brother, lighting a little rose-coloured cigarette, which he drew from a silver-gilt case engraved with his crest and coronet. Our impecunious nobility have ever a haughty contempt for expense, and Lord Augustus was in constant intercourse with many creditors who understood his feelings and appreciated them.

The Marquis of Mistylands made no answer, but sipped his wine slowly, and once held it up to the light. Then he winked, closing his right eye gently, almost imperceptibly; but he certainly did wink, though in no other respect did his noble features depart from their calmness and gravity.



"Well?" said Lord Augustus, with a note of interrogation in his voice, as he inhaled the fragrant tobacco of the true Odessa make.

"I hear," observed the Marquis, drily. "What then?" The peer as he spoke cast his eyes up at the ceiling as though absorbed in contemplation.

"Some city men are coming to call on me at one o'clock.

THE ORNAMENTAL DIRECTOR.

"The Marquis of Mistylands made no answer, but sipped his wine slowly, and once held it up to the light."

Digitized by Google

If they see you with me they will think we are on good terms, and I can get what I want out of them," explained Lord Augustus with perfect sincerity.

"Ah, I am to act as decoy duck. It is a simple plan," replied the Marquis, demurely. "You don't expect me to say anything, I suppose?"

"Not much; you'll have to be civil, you know, as if we were no end of good friends," said Lord Augustus; "and hang it, Fred, my Lady shall have my Maltese dawg if you'll go through your paces cleverly. It will save you buying one."

"Send the dog. I'll come," answered the Marquis; and he went.

They were important people who called on Lord Augustus Shortcasshe; and the Marquis even found his own account in making their acquaintance, for one of them subsequently put him into a way of doing a great thing in building lots, with a worthless part of his estate that had never before yielded a guinea. Another got him some shares which rose to a startling premium before he paid for them. A third taught him how to deal with a railway company which wants to run through the ornamental part of a gentleman's park, or interfere with his plans for remunerative improvements connected with suburban villas.

Indeed, they belonged to that bold and enterprising body of men who just now possess most of the nerve and energy to be found in England. They were contractors for public works on a large scale; men who ranked with Brassey and Peto, Waring and Betts. Lord Augustus and his most honourable brother naturally looked down upon them; but they might as well have looked up. They knew perfectly well what they were about. They had come to buy Lord A. Shortcasshe merely because he was worth buying. They had no doubt about that in their minds; and they were hard-headed men of business, not at all likely to deceive themselves. They could not afford to be duped, rich as they were. The public like Lords; and they had to deal with the public. The public was their master, and no better policy can be pursued in trade than to satisfy a customer. Shareholders might grumble now and then, and did grumble, about promotion-money; but they never grumbled about having Lords among the directors. Indeed, if there was not a Lord somewhere they would not take shares; and a Lord could only be made a director. His colleagues would take care he did not go far wrong. He would have no real power; he would be merely ornamental—and useful when it was necessary to use him. There must be always a margin on any contract worth working; and a few hundred pounds to the right people were never thrown away.

Lord Augustus had no idea how accurately his worth had been estimated before he was definitively purchased. A Duke's uncle had run him very hard, and would have broken his chance but for a docket of bankruptcy which was struck against him by a tradesman who owed him a private grudge arising out of some affair of gallantry twenty years before. Such things will happen; and vulgar men take inconvenient revenges. The Duke's uncle was at once put out of the running, not because the contractors are more rigid in their code of morals than other people; but because directly a nobleman gets into a scrape there is such a hubbub round his name that it loses all value in open market. An Earl in like manner had his little game spoiled by a riot in a police court. The business world is strangely touchy on such questions. Besides, there is a good deal of competition for this sort of outdoor relief for the upper classes; and whenever one competitor can put a spoke in another competitor's wheel he is sure to do it. Now, Lord Augustus had never been mixed up in any public scandal. He had been caught young, and under shrewd training ultimately became one of the most ornamental directors in this Imperial city.

It was a red-letter day for Lord Augustus Shortcasshe when he first attended the meeting of the board of directors who had negotiated for his services. The Marchioness, his sister-in-law, who was fond of fun, put it into his head that he looked too young for a man of business, and had amused herself all the morning by imparting a judicious tinge of powder to his hair, that it might seem to be growing grey at the temples. He also ordered a complete suit of snuff-coloured clothes from his tailor, that he might appear in a garb of becoming gravity, having observed in several comedies he had witnessed at theatres that City men were usually dressed in brown. On the other hand, several of the directors had arrayed themselves in attire of great splendour to meet him, and were festooned with gold chains and brilliant-hued cravats. But all passed off satisfactorily on both sides; and everybody present, from the chairman to the assistant secretary and the solicitor (who naturally happened to be there) shook hands warmly with their titled colleague, who was now one of themselves, and reflected the lustre of hereditary rank on their establishment. Some of them shook hands with him more than once, and the ornamental director who had forgotten to take off a rather unbusiness-like collection of rings which he wore on his right hand, suffered some inconvenience. Indeed, warned by his sufferings, he always shook hands with members of the boards to which he belonged in after life by extending his fore finger only. He came to belong to a great many boards in due time, for the Lord Mayor's dominion contained no better figure-head for a new enterprise; and before he was forty years old the name of Shortcasshe was known on every exchange in Europe.

It was favourably known, too. The city men had no cause to repent of their bargain. Lord Augustus would have been worth his price if they had given twice as much for him, and all the parties concerned in this transaction had equally good reason to be content. He had precisely the qualities which his employers wanted; for ordinary men of business, practised as they are in the methods of making money habitual to them, are mere children in the ways of the world. They are like people who have lived all their lives in a mine and see nothing of the upper earth. Moreover, although men of business know very little of Courts, Cabinets, Parliamentary wire-pullers and influential ladies, those high and mighty personages take a very keen interest in them, and are for ever prying into their proceedings and making vexatious rules and regulations about them. The ways of the governing classes all over the world have never altered; and those men of business fare ill who confront them unprotected. Did not one of the sharpest money makers in Europe get the finest concession to be had for love or gold out of his Majesty the King of Kings, who is known to our Stock Exchange as the Shah of Persia, and was he ever able to make any thing of it? Have not the Pashas of Turkey and the Tchinovniks of Russia driven every man of business to despair who has had dealings with them on commercial principles. Lord Augustus would have piloted them through all their troubles into the smoothest of waters had they but consulted him.

The official world has its secrets as well as Change-alley and Threadneedle-street. It has manners, language, and a code of ethics all its own. A virtuous engineer, with his clear head full of useful facts and scientific truths, will make nothing of a peer of the realm, or of a Secretary of State, or of a foreign diplomatist, prince, or general. All these illustrious personages will receive him on stilts, and talk mere words and wind to him: yet the virtuous engineer and his backer the eminent capitalist cannot get beyond the influence of any one of those occult and vigilant influences which rule all sublunary affairs. It is here that the ornamental director comes in.

Suppose the Government of All the Tartars has not fulfilled its engagements with scrupulous accuracy, and a company of enterprising Britons have ten thousand men employed on a railway to pay every week out of their own pocket. What are they to do? A letter to the Times will not bring the Grand Tartar to reason; it will only make matters worse. Two sides can play at writing to the papers; and, if the truth must be told, perhaps the Tartaric Government has a strong primâ facie case against the company, together with much influence over the press. The Tartaric Ambassador probably is one of the first journalists living, so strangely are diplomatic appointments made abroad. Moreover, the company cannot back out of the contract, because the Tartaric Government has got their caution money and will not let go its hold. Besides, the contract is a lucrative and a valuable one, if only the difficulties which stop the way could be got over. They seem trumpery enough; but the local manager of the company has committed suicide while in a state of brain fever, and the chairman's nephew, a golden youth on his travels, has just wired to say that his successor is always drunk, having grown quite reckless at the hopeless character of the obstacles placed in his way. All is loss, confusion, and disorder.

It changes by magic when Lord Augustus appears on the scene. The Aide-de-Camp-General Governor-General His Serene Highness Knaz Dontoumosch-Tüpplingoff, who has played such an unapproachable, mysterious, abominable, perplexing, diabolical part in the telegrams and letters of the poor men of business; and who has seemed to the board of directors and the secretary, sitting glumly over the prospect of next half year's dividends, as Satan incarnate, turns out to be merely a jolly dog, somewhat used up by devotion to tobacco, champagne, and ladies. He and Lord Augustus go off to shoot in the Caucasus, and when they come back all is settled. They understand each other directly by the free-masonry which belongs to their class. And did not Lady Hermione Nortiman, Augustus Shortcasshe's own aunt, marry Count Krankswilsky-Smokitoff, the Governor-General's own uncle? He and the ornamental director called each other by their Christian names before they finished dinner on the first day they met. "Those confounded Engineers and their 'Co.,'" complains the Governor-General, opening his whole heart to Lord Augustus and letting out the cares of office abundantly, "write me sometimes two letters a day. I never read them. Once several of them were impudent and I had them pumped upon. I hope it did them good. By-the-way, who is 'Co.,' mon cher? They sign their letters, 'Humpty, Dumpty, Grumpy, and Co.' I know Humpty, who bought my yacht, and Dumpty, who sent my brother some cigars from the Havannah. Grumpy was here lately. But who is 'Co.'?" Lord Augustus explains that he is "Co.," and the Aide-de-Camp-General Governor-General goes off into fits of laughter. "You know as well as I do," he adds; "that I can do nothing for you. But I tell you who can. There is a Polish Jew named Dashmivig, who has the ear of the Minister of Public Works. Luckily, he is Peruvian Consul. So I can ask him to dinner to-morrow. He will put it all right for you. But you will have to take him into your boat, I fancy, if your cargo is worth anything. He is a reasonable man, however, and manages one of my estates. I never found him dishonest. You may have what you like of him if you get the Marchioness, your sister-in-law, to be civil to his wife. All these people are bitten by a taste for noblemen's tea-parties." So that business is settled. Lord Augustus is sometimes wanted also nearer home, for nobody can handle one of the real shifters of the scenes on our own pure stage of public life so well as his Lordship? He and his set could make London too hot to hold anyone who made a resolute stand against them. Besides, the scene-shifters are mostly made of the same stuff as themselves; and these people won't offend each other. Indeed they cannot do so conveniently, because they meet half a dozen times a week, and must be civil or have a row, which none of them fancy. Our governing classes are a very judicious community, and keep themselves wonderfully close.

There was yet another quality which men of business liked in Lord Augustus and other ornamental directors who resembled him. They really did the work for which they were paid; and they showed admirable discipline under instructions. There was nothing obstreperous and kicking about them. They went perfectly quiet in harness. They did not babble, they did not sell themselves twice over, as certain men of business have been known to do. They were loyal and true to their employers; and such was the spell of their nobility over the substantial British shareholder that they could be trusted to make an awkward statement on dividend day much better than the most experienced chairman or secretary. They really did it better too. It was quite an improving sight to see my Lord handle a body of perplexed shareholders at a critical meeting; and if any malcontent so far forgot himself as to stand up and challenge a statement over loose or vague made by such authority, cries of "Order" soon gave evidence of the respect in which the nobleman was held, and some happy allusion to the usages of polite society at once put the laughers on his Lordship's side and confounded the politics of his opponents. Even his lisp and the jargon of fashionable life in which he spoke seemed to have a charm for them, and many of them stored up his words and phrases for after use with amazing fidelity. In plain truth, Lord Augustus was the dummy of the great capitalists and contractors who had set him on high, and he acted becomingly in that capacity. In their turn, too, they were very kind to him, and often put him up to a good thing. "But," observed Sir Whistleton Fluke, one of the most prudent of them, "whenever you want to make a trick for your own private game employ Chyssel! He is the best man-of-all-work I know, and not too greedy of the plunder." So, while Lord Augustus Shortcasshe made a good profit by his profession, every company which employed him might safely be congratulated on their Ornamental Director.

We are requested to announce that the Commissioners of her Majesty's Works and Public Buildings intend to distribute this autumn among the working classes and the poor inhabitants of London the surplus bedding-out plants in Battersea, Hyde, Regent's, and Victoria Parks, and in the Royal Gardens, Kew, and the pleasure-gardens, Hampton Court, if the clergy, school committees, and others interested will make application to the superintendent of the park nearest to their respective parishes, or to the director of the Royal Gardens, Kew, or to the superintendent of Hampton Court Gardens. In the cases of persons residing in those neighbourhoods, they will receive early intimation of the number of plants that can be allotted to each applicant, and of the time and manner of their distribution.

FOLKLORE OF OCTOBER.

In some of our old Saxon calendars the present month is symbolised by the figure of a husbandman carrying a sack on his shoulders and scattering corn, in allusion to the practice of sowing the winter grain at this season. It was called by our forefathers "Wyn-Monath," or the "Wine-Month," and also "Winter-Fyllyth," from the approach of winter. The warm weather which we so often experience towards the middle of this month is in almost every European country designated summer, and various names have been applied to it. Thus in our own country it is popularly called "St. Luke's Little Summer," and by the Americans the "Indian Summer." On the Continent the Germans term it "the Summer of St. Gall," and the Belgians "St. Michael's Summer." Among the weather proverbs associated with this month, we are told that—

Good October, a good blast
To blow the hogs, acorns and mast

There is also a popular saying that "if the oak bear much mast (acorns) it foreshows a long and hard winter." About this season the wild fruits come to their perfection, and cast a beauty on the landscape, now variegated with the rich hues of autumn. Weather prophets have therefore turned these to good account in their prognostications—

Many haws,
Many snaws;
Many sloes,
Many cold toes.

Thunder in this month is said to foretell wind, and a scarcity of corn, fruits, and trees. And the "Shepherd's Kalendar" tells us that "if in the fall of the leaf in October many leaves wither on the boughs and hang there, it betokens a frosty winter and much snow.

On St. Faith's Day (6th) a curious custom was formerly observed in the North of England. A cake of flour, spring water, salt, and sugar, was made by three maidens, each taking an equal share in its composition. It was then baked before the fire in a Dutch oven, being turned nine times, or three times to each maiden. When thoroughly baked it was divided into three parts. Each one, then, took her share, and dividing it into nine slips, passed each one three times through a wedding ring, which had been previously borrowed from a woman who had been married at least seven years. Afterwards, each one ate her nine slips as she undressed herself before retiring to rest, at the same time repeating the following rhyme:—

O good St. Faith, be kind to-night,
And bring to me my heart's delight;
Let me my future husband view,
And be my visions chaste and true.

It was supposed that in the course of the night they would see their future husbands in their dreams. St. Etheldreda or Audry, commemorated in the Romish calendar on June 23, but in the English calendar on the 17th of this month, founded the Church and Convent of Ely on the spot where the Cathedral was subsequently erected. Formerly, at Ely, a fair was annually held, called, in memory of her, St. Audry's fair, at which, it seems, much cheap lace was sold to the poorer classes, which at first was known as St. Audry's lace, but in after times was corrupted to tawdry lace; an allusion to which we find in the following old ballad:—

One time I gave thee a paper of pins,
Another time a tawdry lace,
And if thou wilt not grant me love,
In truth I'll die before thy face.

In some parts of the country love-sick maidens still make use of curious love-charms, on St. Luke's Day (18) invoking the saint in a variety of rhymes, of which we subjoin a specimen:—

St. Luke, St. Luke, be kind to me;
In dreams let me my true love see.

At York St. Luke's Day was formerly known as "Whip-Dog Day," from a strange custom practised by boys of whipping every dog they found in the streets. According to tradition, this custom originated in the times of Popery,—a dog, on one occasion, having swallowed a consecrated pax which a priest accidentally let fall. The unfortunate dog was killed, and thence on this anniversary a persecution commenced which lasted for many years, until forbidden by a Lord Mayor of York. The same custom is said to have existed at Manchester on the first day of Acres Fair, which was held about the same time; and also at Hull on every 10th of October.

On the Continent, we find sundry weather-sayings associated with this festival; as, for example, in Spain, where the farmer is recommended "to kill his pigs and bung up his barrels." The Venetian peasantry affirm that "he who has not sown by St. Luke's Day, tears his hair (for sorrow). Alluding to the increasing cold about this time, the Servians say:—"Up to St. Luke's Day put your hands where you like: after it, keep them in your pockets." In allusion, also, to the warm weather which so often prevails, there is a common proverb:—

On St. Luke's Day
The oxen may play.

St. Crispin's Day (25th) has, from time immemorial, been a red-letter day in the calendar of the shoemakers, being the festival of their patron saint. In the town of Hexham, Northumberland, the following custom was formerly observed. The shoemakers met and dined, by previous arrangement, at some tavern, a king Crispin, queen, prince, and princess, elected from members of their fraternity, being present. Afterwards they formed a grand procession and paraded the streets with music, dressed in gay attire; finishing the day's proceedings with music and dancing. Shakspeare has perpetuated the memory of this festival by making Henry V., before the battle of Agincourt, say:—

This day is called the Feast of Crispian.
He that outlives this day, and comes safe home,
Will stand a-tiptoe when this day is named,
And rouse him at the name of Crispian.

The festival of St. Simon and St. Jude (28) has generally been regarded as a critical day by weather sages, being superstitiously regarded rainy, as well as that of St. Swithin. Thus, in the old play of the "Roaring Girls" we read:—"I know it as well as I know 'twill rain on Simon and Jude's Day." We learn from Holinshed that, in 1536, when a battle was appointed to have been fought upon this day between the King's troops and the rebels in Yorkshire, so great a quantity of rain fell upon the eve thereof as to prevent the battle from taking place. An amusing love-charm was once practised on this day, the directions of which are thus given by Brand in his "Popular Antiquities:"—Take an apple, pare it whole, and, holding the paring in your right hand, stand in the middle of the room repeating the following lines:—

St. Simon and Jude, on you I intrude,
By this paring I hold to discover,
Without any delay, to tell me this day
The first letter of my own true lover.

Turn, then, three times round, and cast the paring over your left shoulder, and it will form the first letter of your future husband's surname; but if the paring breaks in many pieces, so that no letter is discernible, you will never marry.

Digitized by Google

Allhalloween, or Hallow Eve (31st), so called from being the Vigil of All Saints' Day, is still a season abounding in superstitious observances. In days gone it was a popular notion that on this night there was a universal walking of spirits abroad, and hence the very season for divination; in allusion to which Burns says:—"It is thought to be a night when witches, devils, and other mischief-making beings are all abroad on their baneful midnight errands." In the Isle of Man it is called Hollandtide Eve; and in the North of England Nutcrack Night, from the popular charm of burning nuts. Young people fling nuts into the fire; if they lie still and burn together they prognosticate a happy marriage; but if they start from beside one another, it is regarded as an unlucky omen. Among other divinations, we may mention eating an apple before the looking-glass, running round the stack three times, procuring omens from apple-pippins, hemp-seed, &c. In the Midland Counties this vigil was formerly known as Snap-Apple Night.

OBITUARY.

MR. MACKENZIE, OF FAWLEY COURT.

Mr. Edward Mackenzie, of Fawley Court, Bucks, Henley Park, Oxon, Newbie, in the county of Dumfries, and Auchenskeoch, in the county of Kirkcudbright, J.P. and D.L., died recently, aged seventy. He was the youngest son of Mr. Alexander Mackenzie, of Fairburn, Ross-shire, a civil engineer, and brother of the late Mr. William Mackenzie, who, first with Macintosh and then under Fletcher and Telford, assisted in most of the great works, railways, canals, &c., of his time, and was a partner in the eminent firm of Mackenzie and Brassey, as was also the gentleman whose death we record. By his energy, ability, and successful contracts, Mr. Edward Mackenzie realised a large fortune, and purchased, in 1853, the manor and estate of Fawley Court, Bucks, previously the seat of the family of Williams-Freeman. Here, in the old mansion, built by Sir Christopher Wren, Mr. Mackenzie resided up to his decease, being a magistrate for the counties of Bucks, Oxford, Dumfries, and Kirkcudbright, a Deputy Lieutenant also for Oxfordshire, and its High Sheriff in 1862. He married, first, Jan. 29, 1839, Mary, daughter of Mr. William Dalziel, of The Craigs, Dumfriesshire; and secondly, in 1864, Ellen, daughter of Mr. James Mullett. By the former he leaves four sons and six daughters. The eldest of the former, William Dalzell Mackenzie, M.A., is a barrister, and served as High Sheriff of Oxfordshire in 1873.

SIR WALTER TARLETON.

Admiral Sir John Walter Tarleton, K.C.B., died on the 25th ult. He was born in 1811, the son of Mr. Thomas Tarleton, of Bolesworth Castle, in the county of Chester, by Frances, his wife, daughter of Mr. Philip Egerton, of Oulton Park, and was grandnephew of General Sir Banastre Tarleton, G.C.B. He entered the Royal Navy in 1824, and attained the rank of Admiral in 1879. During the intervening period he saw much service. Throughout the last Burmese war he commanded H.M.S. Fox, was present at the capture of Rangoon, at which he led a storming party, and was in command of the naval forces when Pegu was taken. He commanded also the first expedition up the Irrawaddy, which resulted in the occupation of the town of Prome and the dispersal of the Burmese army. From 1866 to 1869 he was Controller-General of Coastguard, A.D.C. to the Queen 1861 to 1866, and Naval Lord of the Admiralty 1871 to 1874, and Admiral Superintendent of Coastguard and Naval Reserves 1874 to 1876. The distinction of K.C.B. was conferred on him in 1873. He had medals and clasp for Burmah, and was awarded the Flag Officers' Good Service pension. He married, 1861, Finetta Esther, daughter of the Hon. Baron Dimsdale, of Camfield Place, Herts, and leaves issue.

We have also to record the deaths of—

Major Edward Haughton, late 98th Regiment, on Sept. 29, at Levally, Enniskillen, aged thirty-nine.

Lieutenant-Colonel George O'Boyen Ottley, Bengal Army, on the 1st inst., at Cornwall-road, aged seventy.

The Rev. John James Barlow, Vicar of Kempsford, Hon. Canon of Bristol, Rural Dean of Fairford, and Chaplain to the Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol, on the 27th ult., aged sixty-four.

Lady Elizabeth Leigh, wife of Mr. Egerton Leigh, of West Hall and Jodrell Hall, Cheshire, on the 1st inst., at West Hall, near Knutsford. Her Ladyship was the eldest daughter of the present Earl of Bantry, and sister to Lady Ardilaun.

Lady Elizabeth Murray, on the 24th ult., at The Elms, Dulwich, aged seventy-seven. She was second daughter of William, third Earl of Mansfield, by Frederica, his wife, daughter of Dr. Markham, Archbishop of York.

The Rev. Edward Powlett Blunt, Rector of Spettisbury-cum-Charlton, Dorset, on the 24th ult., at the Rectory, aged seventy-four. He was second son of Mr. James Blunt, of Wallop House, Hants, whose grandfather was Sir Henry Blunt, second Baronet, of Heathfield Park, Sussex.

The Rev. John Waddington, D.D., a prominent Congregationalist minister and historian, on the 24th ult., at Surrey-place, London, in his seventieth year. Dr. Waddington commenced his ministerial career at Stockport, and was engaged subsequently in Southwark from 1846 to 1871. He was author of various pamphlets on theological subjects.

Lieut.-Colonel George Romney Rawlinson, of Graythwaite, Lancashire, formerly of the 3rd Dragoon Guards, suddenly, at Great Malvern, on the 21st ult. He was born June 3, 1837, the second son of the late Mr. John Job Rawlinson, of Graythwaite, J.P., by Mary, his wife, eldest daughter of the Rev. John Romney, B.D., of Whitestock Hall, Lancashire, and descended from an old county family.

Mr. John Page Reade, of Crowe Hall, Ipswich, J.P. and D.L. for Suffolk (High Sheriff 1865), on the 28th ult., at Graton, Torquay, aged seventy-three. He was the second son of the late Mr. George Reade, of Crowe Hall, by Eliza, his wife, daughter of Mr. George Swinton, of Swinton, Berwickshire. He married, firstly, 1829, Helen, younger daughter of the late Sir James Colquhoun, Bart., of Luss, in the county of Dumbarton; and secondly, in 1854, Lady Mary, second daughter of Thomas, Earl of Ranfurly, and leaves issue.

Mr. James Henry Deakin, of Moseley Park, Cheshire, and of Werrington Park, Cornwall, Lord of the Manors of St. Stephens and Werrington, Constable of Launceston Castle, J.P., Hon. Colonel 33rd Lancashire Rifle Volunteers, on the 23rd ult., at his residence, Moseley Park, near Cheadle, aged fifty-seven. He was formerly a merchant at Manchester, and, having realised a considerable fortune, purchased some years since the fine estate of Werrington, in Cornwall. In 1874 he was returned, in the Conservative interest, for the neighbouring borough of Launceston, but was unseated on petition. He married, 1846, Martha, daughter of Mr. John Newton, and leaves issue. His eldest son, James Henry, was M.P. for Launceston 1874 to 1877.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All communications relating to this department of the Paper should be addressed to the Editor, and have the word "Chess" written on the envelope.

G B S (Strand).—You shall have a report upon the position after it has been again examined.

C B C (Clifton).—The lady's proposed solution of No. 1908 is met by 1. K takes P. We are glad to hear from you again.

A M (Strand).—If neither King nor Rook has been moved, a player can castle whether the King has been checked or not. Letters addressed to us on a Thursday cannot be answered in the next Issue.

E G (Westfield).—We have already referred to the solution of No. 1908.

C F (Brunswick).—We have addressed a letter to you on the subject.

Dr F St (Dorchester-place).—The correction of your four-move problem is noted; but that style of problem, Knight and Rook against the solitary King, was brought down to what our American cousins would call "hard pan" half a century ago. You should study Alexandre's collection of chess problems to note what to avoid; what to do may then be left to yourself.

N C (Hastings).—Thanks for the trouble you have taken; but the game is not up to the standard of publication.

B A (Brompton).—Two of the four prize sets in the American competition have stood the test of public examination—viz., "Sub hoc signo vinces" and "Varieties."

C T B (Manchester).—Problem No. 1908 cannot be solved by 1. Kt to Kt 7th. See answer to C B C.

W J E (Dewsbury).—It is an interesting position in which White with the move should win. Look at No. 1910 again.

D W C (Barnaul, Siberia).—Thanks for the budget of problems.

B L D (Westminster).—Damiano's work, "Libro da Imparare," &c., was re-published a few years ago by Pretl, of Paris. You can probably obtain a copy through a bookseller or newsagent.

A G M (Port Elizabeth).—Your solution of No. 1899 is correct.

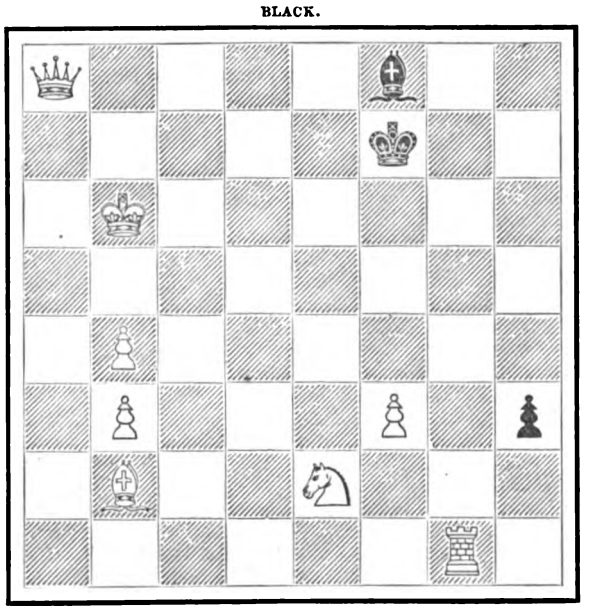
P S S (Ilford).—You are right, of course, as regards the dual solution, and also as to the cause of that "effect defective."

Correct Solutions of Problem No. 1908 received from R H Brooks, A Chapman, Cant, W J Eggleston, L Chappelle (Malta), A C Edwards, J Tucker, W F Payne, Onno, James Atkinson, Brough (Alexandria), B C M S, and P S Shenele.

Correct Solutions of Problem No. 1909 received from Hofstede de Groot, Cant, J Tucker, Onno, Ch Pompe, James Atkinson, M H Moorhouse, W J Eggleston, P S Shenele, Dr F St, F E Purchas, G C Baxter, and Alfred W Hale.

Correct Solutions of Problem No. 1910 received from H B, R H Brooks, Julia Short, East Marden, Shadforth, Cant, Lulu, James Dobson, A R, F W, Norman Rumbelow, J W W, W Biddle, Baker Orn, Semaj, E L G, No Name (Elgerton), H Langford, A Kentish Man, One of Them, Elsie, Chessophile, C C E, Ben Nevis, R Jessop, T Barrington, C Oswald, H Brewster, D Templeton, T Greenbank, R Ingersoll, B Dyke, C S Cole, G L Mayne, Helen Lee, D W Kell, An Old Hand, W Warren, F R J, H Blacklock, S Farrant, E Elsbury, C Darragh, N Cator, E P Vulliamy, J Nepveu, A C Edwards, Agostino Bozzini, W F Payne, Quince, W M Curtis, Alice and Charlie, M H Moorhouse, P S Shenele, Gogarth Lodge (Llandudno), W Burr, E F (Winchester), Dr F St, Carioca, Frank E Purchas, Muriel, G C Baxter, J Glossop, Alfred W Hale, E Louden, and Alpha.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 1909.



WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Q to R sq	K to B 3rd*
2. Kt to R 7th (ch)	K to Kt 3rd
3. B to Q 8th. Mate.

* If Black play 1. R to K 6th, or 1. R to K 7th, or 1. R to Kt 7th, White continues 2. Kt to Q 4th, discovering check, mating with Queen or Bishop accordingly; and if 1. K to B 5th, then 2. Q to B 4th (ch), &c.

PROBLEM No. 1912.

By Dr. F. Steingass.

BLACK.

WHITE.

White to play, and mate in three moves.

The Turf, Field, and Farm, of New York, announces that the match between Messrs. Neill and Davidson, of Philadelphia, has been brought to a premature conclusion by the resignation of Mr. Neill, the cause assigned being pressure of business and delicate health. Of the seven games played in the match, Mr. Davidson won three, Mr. Neill won two, and two were drawn. We quote the final game from the Philadelphia Times.

(Ruy Lopez.)

WHITE (Mr. N.)	BLACK (Mr. D.)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th
2. Kt to K B 3rd	Kt to Q B 3rd
3. B to Kt 5th	P to Q R 3rd
4. B to R 4th	Kt to B 3rd
5. P to Q 3rd	B to B 4th
6. P to B 3rd	Castles

An extraordinary blunder for a strong player at the sixth move of a match game. 6. P to Q Kt 4th, followed by 7. P to Q 4th, is the correct line of play here. The move in the text loses a Pawn.

7. B takes Kt	Kt P takes B
8. Kt takes P	B to K sq
9. Kt to B 3rd	P to Q 4th
10. P to K 5th	P to Q 5th
11. Castles	Kt to Kt 5th
12. B to B 4th	B to B 4th
13. P to K R 3rd	Kt to R 3rd
14. B takes Kt	P takes B
15. P to Q Kt 4th	B to Kt 3rd
16. P to B 4th	P to B 4th
17. P takes P	B takes B P
18. Q to B 2nd	K to R sq
19. Q Kt to Q 2nd	R to K Kt sq
20. K to R 2nd	Q to Q 2nd
21. R to K Kt sq	R to Kt 2nd
22. Kt to Kt 3rd	B to R 2nd
23. P to B 5th	Q R to K Kt sq
24. Q Kt takes P	P to Q B 3rd
25. Kt takes B	Q takes Kt
26. Q to B 3rd

An unfortunate slip, indeed. As the Times observes, 26. Q to Q 2nd is the correct move.

26.	Q to B 5th (ch)
27. K to R sq	R takes P
28. R takes R

There are some chances in White's favour springing from 27. P to K 6th (discovering check); but Black, with careful play, should win eventually, we think.

28.	Q takes Kt
29. R to K Kt sq	Q takes P (ch)
30. R to R 2nd	Q to B 6th (ch)
31. K R to Kt 2nd	R to Kt 4th
32. P to K 6th (dis. ch)	P to B 3rd.

Black resigned.

The following amusing Partie was played a short time ago on board the steam-ship Britannia, in the Pacific Ocean, between Mr. F. Fesser and a fellow-passenger.

(King's Gambit.)

WHITE (Mr. A.)	BLACK (Mr. F.)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th
2. P to K B 4th	P takes P
3. Kt to K B 3rd	P to K Kt 4th
4. B to B 4th	P to Kt 5th
5. B takes P (ch)

The attack obtained by this sacrifice is very brief in its course, and the move has gone out of vogue for many years.

5.	K takes B
6. Kt to K 5th (ch)	K to Q sq
7. Q takes Kt P	Kt to K B 3rd
8. Q takes B P	P to Q 3rd
9. Kt to Q 3rd

White is certainly at sea here. The right square for the Knight is Q B 4th.

9.	B to K 3rd
10. Castles	B to Kt 2nd
11. P to Q B 3rd	K to Q 2nd
12. Kt to K B 2nd	Kt to Q B 3rd
13. P to Q 4th	Kt to K 2nd
14. Kt to Q R 3rd	Q to K sq
15. Q to Q 2nd	R to Q sq
16. P to Q B 4th	K to B sq
17. Q to R 5th	Kt to Q B 3rd
18. Q to Q 2nd

White never recovers the time lost in the abortive manœuvre begun on the fifteenth move.

18.	B to Q 2nd
19. P to Q 5th	Kt takes K P
20. Kt takes Kt	Q takes Kt
21. R to B 4th	B to Q 5th (ch)
22. K to R sq	Q R to B sq
23. P takes Kt	B takes P
24. R takes R	R takes R
25 P to K R 3rd	R to B 8th (ch)
26. K to R 2nd	B to K 4th (ch).

White resigned.

The Chessplayers' Chronicle for October shows no signs of dissolution, although it is threatened with the secession of its principal editors and contributors at the end of the current volume. The opening notes and queries this month refer to the "Ruy Lopez" and the analysis thereof by Mr. Barnes, of New York, published in the Canadian Spectator. It is not a far cry, nowadays, from Madrid to Montreal. The games are selected from those played at the recent meetings at Wiesbaden and Brunswick, and from a collection, in MS., of games played by the late Mr. Cochrane in India.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will (dated Aug. 26, 1879) with two codicils (dated 26th and 30th of the same month) of Monsieur François Xavier Branicki, late of No. 54, Rue Abbatucci, Paris, who died on Nov. 22 last, at Syout, in Upper Egypt, was proved in London on the 18th ult. by Charles Saint Anga Berceon, the executor, the personal estate in England being sworn under £250,000. The testator leaves to his wife, Madame Pelagie Branicki, born Comtesse Zamoyski, his house in the Rue Abbatucci with its dependencies, and the furniture, objects of art, pictures, wines, and all supplies; to his brother, Gregoire Constantine Branicki, and his nephew, Count Ladilas Branicki, one half of his property between them, subject to their paying thereout 100,000f. to his clerks and servants; 100,000f. to Miss Constance Gurska; and an annuity of 2500f. to his valet de chambre, Mohammed Fadil; one fourth of his property, as reserved by law, to Augustin Branicki; and the remaining fourth of his property is directed to be divided into ten parts, one part of which he gives to his said brother and nephew to be distributed among the poor; two parts each to his nephews Stanilas Potocki and Antoine Potocki, and the Comtesse de Comminge; and one part each to Alexandre Stylinski, François Sapieha, and his nephew Theobald de Choiseuil.

The will (dated May 13, 1874) of Mr. George Checkland, formerly of Leicester, but late of Hawkswick, near St. Albans, Herts, coal and iron master, who died on May 25 last, was proved on the 21st ult. by Mrs. Millicent Checkland, the widow, George Edward Checkland, the son, and George Griffiths Williams, the acting executors, the personal estate being sworn under £100,000. The testator bequeaths to his wife £500 and all his residential furniture, plate, pictures, books, wines, household effects, horses and carriages, and an annuity of £1500 for life, to be reduced to £500 per annum in the event of her marrying again; to his servant, Mary Stuffins, 19 guineas; to his clerks, Arthur Taylor and E. M. Blackwell, £100 each; to the Leicester Infirmary and the Church Missionary Society, £100 each; and to the Leicester Dispensary and the Curates Augmentation Fund, £50 each. The residue of his real and personal estate he gives in equal shares to all his children.

The will (dated June 12, 1874) with a codicil of Mr. Robert William Gaussen, late of Brookmans Park, Hatfield, Herts, who died on Aug. 11 last, was proved on the 16th ult. by Viscount Cole, and Robert George Gaussen and Cassamajor William Gaussen, the sons, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £90,000. The testator leaves to his son Robert George, £10,000, and his household furniture, effects, live and dead stock; to his son Cassamajor William, £9000, in addition to what he is entitled to under testator's marriage settlement; to his executor, Viscount Cole, £100; and legacies to his housekeeper, gamekeeper, steward, and others. The residue of his real and personal estate is given upon trust so as to go with his settled estates, and his diamonds, gems, and jewellery are made heirlooms, to be held therewith.

The will (dated Sept. 4, 1877) with a codicil (dated Oct. 3 following) of Mr. Thomas Veasey, late of South Lodge, Baldock, Herts, who died on Aug. 26 last, was proved on the 21st ult. by Mrs. Catherine Anna Veasey, the widow, and sole executrix, the personal estate being sworn under £35,000. The testator bequeaths £50 to the Hitchin Infirmary; 19 guineas each to the National or Church Schools of Baldock and Weston, Herts; and, after the death of his wife, £300 to the Hitchin Infirmary, £200 to the Baldock Almshouses, and 19 guineas each to the Church Missionary Society, the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, the Society for Promoting the Education of the Poor in the Principles of the Church of England, and the Hunt Servants' Benefit Society.

The will (dated Aug. 18, 1877) of Mr. John Skirrow Wright, Chairman of the Birmingham Liberal Association, and M.P. for Nottingham, was proved at the District Registry, Lichfield, on Aug. 7 last, the personalty being sworn under £30,000. The testator, after giving several legacies to his own and his wife's relations, bequeaths £200 each to the People's Chapel, Great King-street, Hockley, the General Hospital, Birmingham, and the Queen's Hospital, Birmingham; and £100 each to the London Sunday School Union, Old Bailey, and the Birmingham Sunday School Union, all to be paid within two years and free of duty. The whole of the residue of his property, real and personal, he gives to his wife, Mrs. Sarah Wright, for her sole use and benefit during her lifetime, and at her death £5000 each is given to his daughters, Mrs. Amy Ransom and Miss Kate Wright, and to his youngest son, Harold; £3000 to the family of his son Egbert; and the ultimate residue to his sons Alfred and Frank, in the proportions of three fifths to the former and two fifths to the latter. The testator states he prefers that none of his family should wear any mourning.

The will (re-executed on Jan. 27, 1880) with a codicil (dated March 2 following) of William Watkin Edward Wynne, late of Peniarth, Merionethshire, who died on June 9 last, was proved on the 16th ult. by Sir Watkin Williams Wynne, Bart., and Charles Watkin Williams Wynne, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £25,000.

The will (dated July 14, 1877) of Mr. Benjamin Dixon, late of Wickham Mills, Wickham Bishops, Essex, miller, who died on July 14 last, was proved on the 21st ult. by Robert Walker Dixon and Thomas Butler Dixon, the nephews, the acting executors, the personal estate being sworn under £20,000. The testator bequeaths £100 each to the London Missionary Society and the Essex Home Congregational Missionary Society; and £50 each to the British and Foreign Bible Society, the Congregational School, Lewisham, Kent, the Essex and Hertfordshire Benevolent Society for the Relief of Dissenting Ministers, and the Essex and Colchester Hospital.

The will (dated July 25, 1879) with a codicil (dated March 9, 1880) of the Rev. George Martin Barrow, late of Writtle, near Chelmsford, Essex, who died on July 25 last, was proved on the 20th ult. by James Scarlett and Frank Pellatt Suthery, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £20,000.

The will (dated July 31, 1878) of Mr. William Henry Giles Kingston, the well-known writer, late of Stormont Lodge, Willesden, who died on Aug. 6 last, was proved on the 18th ult. by Mrs. Agnes Kingston, the widow, and sole executrix, to whom he gives, devises, and bequeaths all his real and personal estate for her own use and benefit. The personalty is sworn under £4000.

The annual conference of the Association of Librarians of the United Kingdom was opened in Edinburgh on Tuesday. Thirty-five new members were elected. The chairman, Mr. Small, of the University Library, gave the opening address, in which he dealt with the work of the last three years, and of their future prospects. Speaking of the libraries they would visit while in Edinburgh, he mentioned that they represented a total of upwards of 700,000 volumes available to the literary public of Edinburgh.

Digitized by Google

JUST PUBLISHED, Gratis and Post-free, OETZMANN and CO.'S NEW CATALOGUE—"A Guide to House Furnishing"—contains price of every article required in completely furnishing a house of any class, also "Hints on House Furnishing and Decoration," and is considered to be by far the best furnishing guide extant. The prices have been reduced wherever it was found compatible with maintaining the same excellence of style, quality, and workmanship, and will be found from 5 to 25 per cent below those charged at Co-operative Stores. Members should write for Catalogue and Patterns, and compare prices and quality. A minimum saving of 5 per cent is guaranteed. Those residing at a distance inconvenient for a personal visit, would do well to avail themselves of O. and CO.'S "Postal Order Department," full particulars of which will be found page 379 in Catalogue.—OETZMANN and CO., 67 to 79, Hampstead-road, near Tottenham-court-road.

FURNISH THROUGHOUT.

SUBSTANTIAL ARTISTIC FURNITURE (Regd.)

OETZMANN & CO.,

HAMPSTEAD-ROAD,

NEAR TOTTENHAM-COURT-ROAD.

FURNISH THROUGHOUT.—OETZMANN and CO., 67, 69, 71, 73, 77 and 79, HAMPSTEAD-ROAD, near Tottenham-court-road. CARPETS, Furniture, Bedding, Drapery, Furnishing Ironmongery, China, Glass, Paper Hangings, Pictures, Bronzes, Clocks, Pianos, &c., and every other requisite for completely furnishing a house throughout. Lowest prices consistent with guaranteed quality.
OETZMANN and CO.

PAINTING, PAPER-HANGING, and DECORATING DEPARTMENT.—OETZMANN and CO. undertake all kinds of Painting, Paper-hanging, and Decorating in town or country. A staff of thoroughly competent workmen are employed in the various branches under experienced foremen. Designs and estimates supplied for every style of decoration. O. and Co. also undertake Gas-fitting in all its branches. A large stock of French and English Paper-hangings, newest and best designs, always on show.—OETZMANN and CO.

THE EASIEST OF EASY-CHAIRS. OETZMANN and CO.'S Club, Divan, or Dining-Room Easy-Chair, as used in the principal West-End Clubs. The most comfortable Easy-Chair extant, spring seat and back, upholstered very soft and comfortable, all hair, in best morocco leather, and finished in the best manner, 8 guineas. A large stock of Easy-Chairs in the Show-Rooms from 1 guinea upwards.—OETZMANN and CO.

OETZMANN and CO.'S FIVE-GUINEA "NONPAREIL" BEDSTEAD and BEDDING is a marvel of quality and economy combined—consists of a 4 ft. 6 in. wide handsome Brass and Iron French Bedstead, one of O. and Co.'s patent Pallio Mattresses, and a good Wool Upper Mattress, good Feather Bolster, and two Pillows. Everyone about to furnish should see this excellent set on view in the Show-Rooms. Also, to suit the above, two fine Linen Sheets, one ditto Bolster-case, two ditto Pillow-cases, three superior quality Blankets, and handsome white Marsella Quilt, for 78s. 6d. the set.
OETZMANN and CO.

DOWN QUILTS.—OETZMANN and CO.'S EIDER and ARCTIC DOWN QUILTS and CLOTHING combine the greatest amount of warmth attainable with the least possible weight, and are warranted pure. O. and CO. sell only the best make—BOOTH and FOX'S. See Trade-Mark on each article. Prices will be found much below those usually charged for this favourite make. Reduced Price-Lists post-free.
OETZMANN and CO.

FURNISHING IRONMONGERY DEPARTMENT.—Superior Electro-Plate Tea and Coffee Pots, Spoons, Forks, Cruets, &c. (quality guaranteed); best warranted Table Cutlery, handsome Coal Vases, from 3s. 11d. upwards; Dish Covers, Japanned Toilet Sets, full size bath, pail, and can, various neat designs in colours, 8s. 11d. per set. Kitchen Ironmongery of every description. Mats, Matting, Brooms, Brushes, Pails, &c. Bronze Umbrella Stands, from 3s. 9d. Table Lamps, complete, good style, 3s. 11d.—OETZMANN and CO.

POSTAL ORDER DEPARTMENT. OETZMANN and CO.—Orders sent per post, whether large or small, receive prompt and careful attention. Those residing at a distance, or any to whom a personal visit would be inconvenient, desirous of leaving the selection to the firm, may rely upon a faithful attention to their wishes and interest in the selection. This department is personally supervised by a member of the firm, and O. and Co. continually receive numerous letters expressing the greatest satisfaction with the execution of orders so entrusted. For further particulars please see page 379 in Catalogue, sent free on application.—OETZMANN and CO.

DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE, post-free.

OETZMANN & CO.,

HAMPSTEAD-ROAD.

NOTICE.—SILVER and ELECTRO-PLATE.—ELKINGTON and CO., Manufacturing Silversmiths and Patentees of the Electro-Plate. Revised Illustrated Pattern-Book of New Designs in Table Plate of all kinds, and new qualities in Spoons and Forks, forwarded free by post on application. Testimonial Plate in Solid Silver, in great variety, always in stock; and Committees provided with Designs and Photographs to suit all occasions.
Address—Elkington and Co., 22, Regent-street, London; or 42, Moorgate-street, City.

GARDNER'S DINNER and TABLE GLASS SERVICES. Free, graceful, and original designs, of unequalled value. Dinner Services, from 21s. Table Glass Services, of the best Crystal, for twelve persons, complete, 65s. Cash discount, 15 per cent. Coloured Photographic Sheets and Illustrated Glass Catalogues post-free.
453 and 454, West Strand, Charing-cross.

FURNISH YOUR HOUSE at DEANE'S. Catalogue, with priced Furnishing Estimates, post-free.
1. Table Knives, Ivory, per doz., 13s., 16s., 19s., 24s., 32s., 40s.
2. Electro Forks—Table, 24s. to 64s.; Spoons, 21s. to 96s.
3. Electro Tea and Coffee Sets, Cruets, and Liqueurs.
4. Dish-Covers in Sets—Tin, 22s.; Metal, 65s.; Electro, £11 11s.
5. Fenders—Bright, 45s. to £15; Bronze, 3s. to £6.
6. Baths—Hot and Cold Water, Gas, Travelling, &c.
7. Bedsteads—Brass and Iron, with Bedding.
8. Gaseliers—2-light, 16s.; 3-do., 50s.; 5-do., £4 4s.
9. Kitcheners, from 3 ft., £3; to 6 ft., £33.
10. Kitchen Utensils—Copper, Tin, and Iron.
Deane and Co., 46, King William-st., London Bridge. A.D. 1700.

D. HULETT.—GASELIERS in CRYSTAL GLASS and ORMOLU or BRONZE. Mediæval Fittings. A large Stock always on View. Every article marked with plain figures.—Manufactory, 55 and 56, High Holborn.

"THE BEST SELECTIONS OF THE BEST GROWTHS."

WILLS' CIGARETTES. "DUBEC" (mild). "YENIJEH" (full flavour).

Every Genuine Cigarette bears the name of
W. D. and H. O. WILLS.
Sold by all Principal Dealers.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON, FOR CONSTIPATION, BILE, HEADACHE.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON, A LAXATIVE AND REFRESHING FRUIT LOZENGE, UNIVERSALLY PRESCRIBED BY THE FACULTY.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON. 2s. 6d. per Box, stamp included. Sold by all Chemists and Druggists. Wholesale—E. GRILLON, 69, Queen-street, London, E.C.

FER BRAVAIS (Bravais' Dialysed Iron), used in every Hospital. Recommended by all Physicians. For Anæmia, Chlorosis, Debility, Exhaustion, &c. FER BRAVAIS (liquid iron in concentrated drops) is the only one entirely free from acid; it is without smell, tasteless, and produces neither constipation, diarrhœa, inflammation, or fatigue in the stomach; it is besides the only iron that never blackens the teeth. It is the Cheapest of all Ferruginous Compounds, as a bottle of it lasts a month. General Depôt in Paris, 13, Rue Lafayette (near the Opera); and at all Chemists. Beware of dangerous imitations, and see that the Trade Mark is on every Bottle, which can be had of all Chemists in the United Kingdom. Sold also at 8, Idol-lane; and Messrs. Barclay and Sons', 95, Farringdon-street, London, where the Pamphlet on "Anæmia and its Treatment" can be obtained.

EAU DE SUEZ.
EAU DE SUEZ.
EAU DE SUEZ.
EAU DE SUEZ.
EAU DE SUEZ.
EAU DE SUEZ.
EAU DE SUEZ.
EAU DE SUEZ.—Comfortable Teeth.
EAU DE SUEZ.
EAU DE SUEZ.
EAU DE SUEZ.
EAU DE SUEZ.
EAU DE SUEZ.
EAU DE SUEZ.

EAU DE SUEZ, so called from the name of its inventor, M. Suez, has been with justice termed "Vaccine for the Mouth," inasmuch as it does away with toothache as completely as vaccination does away with smallpox. It immediately and permanently cures toothache, whitens and preserves the teeth, removes all unpleasant colours, including that of tobacco, and secures a pure and healthy state of the gums, mouth, and throat.
There are three kinds, distinguished from each other by a Yellow, Green, and Red Silk Thread.

EAU DE SUEZ.—GREEN THREAD must be considered the most valuable of all, and should be used as a daily mouth-wash. Those who suffer periodically from toothache, sensitiveness of the teeth and gums, decay, and offensive breath will never suffer again, and will preserve their teeth sound and white till the end, by using ten or twelve drops in a little water to rinse the mouth well night and morning.

EAU DE SUEZ.—YELLOW THREAD instantly removes toothache, however violent it may be.

EAU DE SUEZ.—RED THREAD is used in the same manner as the green, but is specially adapted for children.

SUEZ TOOTH-BRUSH.—This brush is soft, being made of the finest badger-hair. A hard tooth-brush is not only a foolish, but also a criminal instrument, so to speak. For by rubbing a soft substance like the gums with a hard brush the former will evidently become spongey and weakened, thus being no longer of any use in protecting the roots of the teeth, which naturally become exposed, and impart an offensive smell to the breath.

SUEZ ORANGE TOOTH PASTE secures the permanent removal of tartar, and by daily use restores the whiteness of the teeth.

EAU DE SUEZ.—To guard against counterfeiting, buy only those tooth-brushes which are stamped on the handle with the name "Suez," and those bottles which bear the words "Wilcox and Co., 336, Oxford-street, London," on the labels.

Green Thread	4s. 6d.	Carriage free to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of P.O.O., stamps, or cash in registered letter, to Wilcox and Co., 336, Oxford-street, London, and all Chemists.
Yellow Thread	2s. 9d.
Red Thread	3s. 6d.
Orange Tooth Paste	4s. 6d.
Suez Tooth-Brushes, each	1s. 6d.

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.
ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.
ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.
ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.
ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.
ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.
ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.
ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.
ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT. Trade Mark, "Anti-Fat" (Registered), is purely vegetable, and perfectly harmless. No change of diet required. Will reduce from 2 lb. to 5 lb. a week. Acts upon the food in the stomach, preventing its conversion into fat.

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT is endorsed by those eminent in the medical professional.
The late THOMAS FAIRBANK, M.D., of Windsor, Surgeon to Her Majesty the Queen, referring to ANTI-FAT in the "British Medical Journal" of June 7, 1879, says:—
"I gave some of this extract (Fucus Vesiculosus) to a very corpulent lady, who in three months lost three stones in weight without any change of diet. Since then I have frequently given it for reducing weight depending on the accumulation of adipose tissue, and have never found it fail."

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT Reduces 61 lb.
"Prattville, Ala., July 20, 1878.
"Botanic Medicine Company.—Gentlemen,—About three months ago I commenced using your 'Anti-Fat,' at which time my weight was 219 pounds. By following your directions carefully I have succeeded in reducing my weight to 158 pounds.—Yours truly, "GEORGE BOYD."
Hundreds of letters similar to the above have been received.

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT. Sold by Chemists everywhere, at 6s. 6d., or delivered free on receipt of price. Send stamp for Pamphlet.
Address, BOTANIC MEDICINE COMPANY, 493, Oxford-street.

A NEVER-FAILING REMEDY for LIVER COMPLAINTS.—Dr. SCOTT'S BILIOUS and LIVER PILLS, prepared without mercury, are invaluable to all who suffer from Bilious and Liver Complaints, Indigestion, Wind, Spasms, Foul Breath, Irritability, Loss of Appetite, Sour Eructations, and General Debility. As a General Family Aperient Medicine they have no equal, being mild in their operation and grateful to the stomach. They will be found, in slight cases, by a single dose to restore health to the body with a happy frame of mind. Prepared only by W. LAMBERT, 1A, Vere-street, London, W. 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d.; or, post-free, 15 or 35 stamps, and sold by all Chemists. The Genuine are in a Square Green Package.

THROAT IRRITATION.—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice. For these symptoms use EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES. Glycerine, in these agreeable confections, being in proximity to the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of sucking, becomes actively healing. Sold only in Boxes, 7½d. and 1s. 1½d., labelled "James Epps and Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London." A letter received:—"Gentlemen,—It may, perhaps, interest you to know that, after an extended trial, I have found your Glycerine Jujubes of considerable benefit (with or without medical treatment) in almost all forms of throat disease. They soften and clear the voice. In no case can they do any harm.—Yours faithfully, GORDON HOLMES, L.R.C.P.E., Senior Physician to the Municipal Throat and Ear Infirmary."

FITS.—EPILEPSY, or FALLING SICKNESS.—GIDDINESS—SENSATIONS—FAINTS.—A certain method of CURE has been DISCOVERED for these distressing complaints. Full particulars of the remedies will be sent by post free of charge.—Address, Mr. WILLIAMS, 10, Oxford-terrace, Hyde Park, London.

NOTICE.—For PETER ROBINSON'S Court and General Mourning Warehouse, "REGENT-STREET" is the only one address.

FAMILY BEREAVEMENTS.
UPON RECEIPT OF LETTER OR TELEGRAM, PETER ROBINSON'S Experienced Dressmakers and Milliners Travel to all parts of the COUNTRY, FREE of EXPENSE to purchasers, with Dresses, Millinery, and a full assortment of made-up Articles of the BEST and most suitable description. Also materials by the Yard, and supplied at the SAME PRICES as if purchased at the Warehouse in Regent-street.
Mourning for Servants at unexceptionably low rates, at a great saving to large or small Families.
Funerals conducted in Town or Country at stated charges.
Address ONLY to 256 to 262, REGENT-STREET, LONDON, PETER ROBINSON'S.

THE BUYERS
of PETER ROBINSON, of REGENT-STREET, have just returned from Paris with a new and choice collection of MANTLES, CLOAKS, and JACKETS, MILLINERY, COSTUMES, in SATIN and SILK, COSTUMES in NEW MATERIALS, EVENING DRESSES, OPERA CLOAKS, and Novelties in every department.
PETER ROBINSON, of REGENT-STREET, respectfully solicits a visit to THE REGENT-STREET SHOP, Nos. 256 to 262, Regent-street.

BLACK VELVET-VELVETEENS, new and superior makes, in appearance equal to silk Velvet, at 2s. 6d., 2s. 11d., and 3s. 6d. Also the guaranteed fast Pile Velveteens, at 2s. 11d. and up to 5s. 11d. For patterns, please direct only to 256 to 262, Regent-street, PETER ROBINSON'S.

BLACK VELVET-VELVETEEN COSTUMES, at 3 guineas, and up to 7 guineas. BLACK SERGE COSTUMES, from 2 guineas. NEW AUTUMN MATERIAL COSTUMES, from 2 to 7 guineas. Perfectly New Styles. At PETER ROBINSON'S, of REGENT-STREET, Nos. 256 to 262.

EVENING DRESSES.
A New and very Choice Collection for this Season, at 1 guinea and up to 7 guineas.
Illustrations and Descriptions, with Patterns, sent on application.
Address only to 256 to 262, Regent-street.
PETER ROBINSON'S.

BLACK SILKS.
DURING THIS MONTH, we shall sell
Messrs. BONNET et CIE. and JAUBERT et CIE. BLACK SILKS at Manufacturers' prices, and Cheaper than they have ever before been supplied.

Bonnet's	No. 1 Quality,	4s.	3d.	from 1s. 6d. to 4s. per yard under fair value.
	No. 2 "	5s.	3d.
	No. 3 "	6s.	0d.
	No. 4 "	7s.	0d.
Jaubert	No. 1 Quality,	3s.	3½d.	from 1s. to 4s. per yard under their fair value.
	No. 2 "	3s.	11d.
	No. 3 "	4s.	9d.
	No. 4 "	5s.	3d.
	No. 5 "	6s.	0d.

To be obtained only at
PETER ROBINSON'S
REGENT-STREET SHOP,
Nos. 256 to 262, Regent-street.
For Patterns please be careful in the address.

"LOUIS"
IN ALL THE NEWEST AND MOST FASHIONABLE COLOURS.

"THE QUEEN" of Sept. 11, 1880, says:—
"As this is to be a velvet season, it may be as well to point out some eminently novel features in
LOUIS VELVETEEN,
"LOUIS." now an established favourite for Dresses. The REDS are particularly rich; indeed, so are the many PLUMS and PRUNES, and we have also OLD GOLD (no less than four shades), PEACH, PORCELAIN BLUE, and many DARK GREENS of the WILLOW and MYRTLE tones. The pile, which is both erect and fine, is asserted to be permanently fast.

LE FOLLET says:—
"The Louis Velveteen is a very close and admirably wearing material, with a lustrous silky surface, draping richly and softly, and the brilliant blue light on the folds cannot be surpassed by the best silk velvet. For every purpose to which black velvet can be applied, we can recommend the Louis Velveteen; and a dress of this material would be a most elegant and useful addition to any lady's wardrobe, successfully representing, as it does, a silk velvet at more than four times the cost."
"LOUIS."

THE ENGLISHWOMAN'S DOMESTIC MAGAZINE says:—"This Velveteen costs no more than ordinary velveteen, and is worth at least double, so that purchasers should be sure that it is the Louis Velveteen that they get. It is stamped with the words 'LOUIS VELVETEEN' upon every yard of the fabric."
"LOUIS." Ladies are respectfully informed that on and after this date all Louis Velveteen, both Black and the New Autumn and Winter Colours, have stamped on the back plain instructions for removing all creases, folding-marks, &c., made in conveyance by rail, post, or other causes.

WHOLESALE AGENTS,
who will send on inquiry, post-free, the names of the nearest Drapers from whom the genuine "LOUIS" VELVETEEN can be obtained:—
"LOUIS." J. H. FULLER, 92, Watling-street, London, E.C.
JOHN FREEMAN, 20, Wicklow-street, Dublin.
WILLIAM FIFE, 52, Glassford-street, Glasgow.

"THE AMARANT VELVETEEN" supersedes all others for durability and silk-like appearance.
Is not Spotted by RAIN, nor Injured by HEAT.
It is of PERFECT MANUFACTURE and PATENTED FINISH
Unfading in Colour, Unequalled in Value, Firm in Pile.
To be had in all Colours and Prices.
Ask for it, and see that the word "AMARANT" is stamped in GOLD on the FACE SELVAGES.
Patterns and Show Cards supplied to the Trade.
RAWSON BROTHERS, Sole Agents, 2, Blue Boar-court, Friday-street, London, E.C.

INDIAN EMBROIDERY of the most Elegant and Fashionable Designs—viz., Christening Robes, 21s. and 42s. each; Ladies' Handkerchiefs, 35s. and 45s. the half dozen; Babies' Bibs, 20s. the dozen; Children's Frocks, 15s. each; Petticoats, large size, 28s. each; Ladies' Neckties, 30s. the dozen; Children's Capes, 12s. 6d. each; Narrow Edging, 1s. per yard; Ditto, Wide, 3s. 4d. per yard. The above sent post-free to any address in Great Britain, the United States, and Canada. Remittances to be crossed "Agra Bank," and made payable to J. KENYON and CO., 19, Strand, Calcutta, East Indies.

TO LADIES.—THE SHREWSBURY WATERPROOF TWEED CLOAKS, SKIRTS, and JACKETS, in every variety of shape and colour, are supplied by the original Makers, E. W. and W. PHILLIPS, 37, High-street, Shrewsbury. Patterns and Prices on application.

IMPORTANT NOTICE,
Please direct all Letters and Orders for
PETER ROBINSON,
SILKMERCER AND LINENDRAPER, TO THE ONLY ADDRESS,
103 to 108, OXFORD-STREET,
LONDON, W
(where the Business was Established in 1833).
CASH PRICES. PARCELS FREE.

SILKS, SATINS, VELVET, and PLUSHES.—NOW ON SALE.
All Patterns free.
The entire Manufacturer's Stock, comprising Rich BROCADED SILKS, in every variety, for the fashionable Combination Dresses,

3s. 6d.	usual price 5s. 6d.	In all the New Autumn Shades and Mixtures of Old Gold, &c.
4s. 6d.	" 6s. 6d.	In delicate Tints for Evening and Dinner Wear.
5s. 6d.	" 7s. 6d.
6s. 6d.	" 8s. 9d.	In White Ivory and Cream for Bridal Wear; also in Black.

RICH VELVET BROCADES.

8s. 11d.	usual price 8s. 9d.	In splendid variety of new Autumn Shades and Mixtures for making up with Silks, Satins, or other fabrics.
6s. 11d.	" 8s. 6d.
7s. 6d.	" 10s. 9d.

BLACK VELVET BROCADES, in very handsome designs for dresses and mantles, much under price—7s. 6d. to 21s.
400 pieces COLOURED SATIN STRIPED VELVETS—3s. 9d.; usual price 5s. 6d., in every shade.
ITALIAN SILK VELVETS—4s. 11d., 6s. 9d., 8s. 9d., in every possible shade.
BLACK LYONS SILK VELVETS—8s. 6d. to 21s., 11s. 9d. to 16s. 9d., in all new shades.
The New DRESS and MANTLE PLUSH, in black and all new colours—7s. 6d. to 10s. 9d.
LYONS DRESS SILKS, in every possible shade of colour—2s. 11d., 3s. 6d., 4s. 6d., 5s. 11d.; worth 7s. 11d., extra double warp.
Rich DUCHESSE SATIN, in black and all the new shades—6s. 3d., exceptional, 23 in. wide.
SILK-FACED and SILK SATINS, in all shades—2s. 11d. to 7s. 11d.

BLACK SILKS, SPECIAL.
200 Pieces Lyons Gros Grain—2s. 11½d., wear guaranteed.
400 Pieces of the best make in pure Lyons Silks—3s. 6d. to 4s. 11d.; 5s. 11d., usual price 7s. 11d., extra rich; 6s. 11d., usual price 8s. 11d.; 7s. 11d., usual price 10s. 6d.
The Satin Merveilleux, very soft and bright—6s. 6d., wear guaranteed.
Black Silk-faced Satins—1s. 9½d. to 2s. 11d.
New Dress Satins, very bright—3s. 3½d. to 6s. 11d.
12 Pieces All-Silk Satin Duchesse, extra wide—9s. 6d., worth double. Specially recommended.
300 Pieces of Black Satin de Lyons—4s. 6d. to 5s. 9d.

RICH VELVET VELVETEENS.
Black, White, and all the New Colours, in Plain, Striped, and Embossed, 1s. 11d. to 4s. 9d. per yard.
Also, the New Black, as advertised, very wide, 2s. 11d. to 5s. 6d. per yard.
Patterns free.

AUTUMN and TRAVELLING DRESSES.
NEW MATERIALS in NEW COLOURS, suitable for the present and APPROACHING SEASON, Casimir d'Italie, Grain de Poudre, Cashmere de la Reine, Angora Foulé, &c. All pure Wool, and dyed by the most eminent Paris dyers, in black and every new colour.
Prices from 1s. 6d. to 2s. the Full Dress.
Also in Black and the same colours, several thousand pieces of Cashmere and Cashmere Merinos, very wide, 2s. 9d. to 3s. 6d. the yard.
Estamene, Witney, Devonshire, and other all-wool Serges, in Navy, Dark Brown, Prune Bronze Black, &c., from 1s. to 2s. 9d. the yard.
Patterns of all the above free. Cash prices. Parcels free.
PETER ROBINSON, 103 to 108, OXFORD-STREET, W.

THE GLOVE STOCKS of L. T. PIVER, of 160, REGENT-STREET, and H. ORGER, of 152, REGENT-STREET, Bought for cash at large discounts, are NOW on SALE at little more than Half Price, at PETER ROBINSON'S, OXFORD-STREET.

NEW SHADES AND NEW MIXTURES, 1880.
Under the direct patronage of the
ROYAL COURTS OF EUROPE.
EGERTON BURNETT'S SERGES
MAINTAIN THEIR UNRIVALLED EXCELLENCE for YACHTING, SEASIDE, and TRAVELLING WEAR. Proof against Salt Water or Rain. Prices, 1s. 3½d. to 4s. 6d. per yard. "The Queen" says:—"Mr. Burnett has gained a very high reputation for the ROYAL SERGES." Orders are daily arriving from all parts. Pattern Books post-free. Carriage paid to London, Bristol, Glasgow, or Belfast. Any length cut. Goods packed for exportation.
Address—
EGERTON BURNETT,
SERGE WAREHOUSE,
WELLINGTON, SOMERSET.
N.B.—He has no connection with any Company or other London or Provincial Firm whatsoever. NO AGENTS.

EGERTON BURNETT'S "IMPERIAL VELVETEEN,"
"PATENT FAST PILE."
In the most Fashionable Colours.
Le Follet says:—"The dye is said, by competent judges, to be the most permanent ever brought out. Their finish is superb."
Ladies must see that my name is branded on the back, without which none are guaranteed. Any length cut.
Patterns post-free on application to
EGERTON BURNETT,
WELLINGTON, SOMERSET.
No Agents.
Carriage paid to any town in England, Ireland, Scotland, or Wales on orders over 40s.

WINTER DRESSES—THE BEST VALUE IN LONDON.—Vicuna Foule Serges, the Fashionable Material for the Season. Price, 8½d. per yard. Patterns free.
JOHN HOOPER, 58, Oxford-street, W.

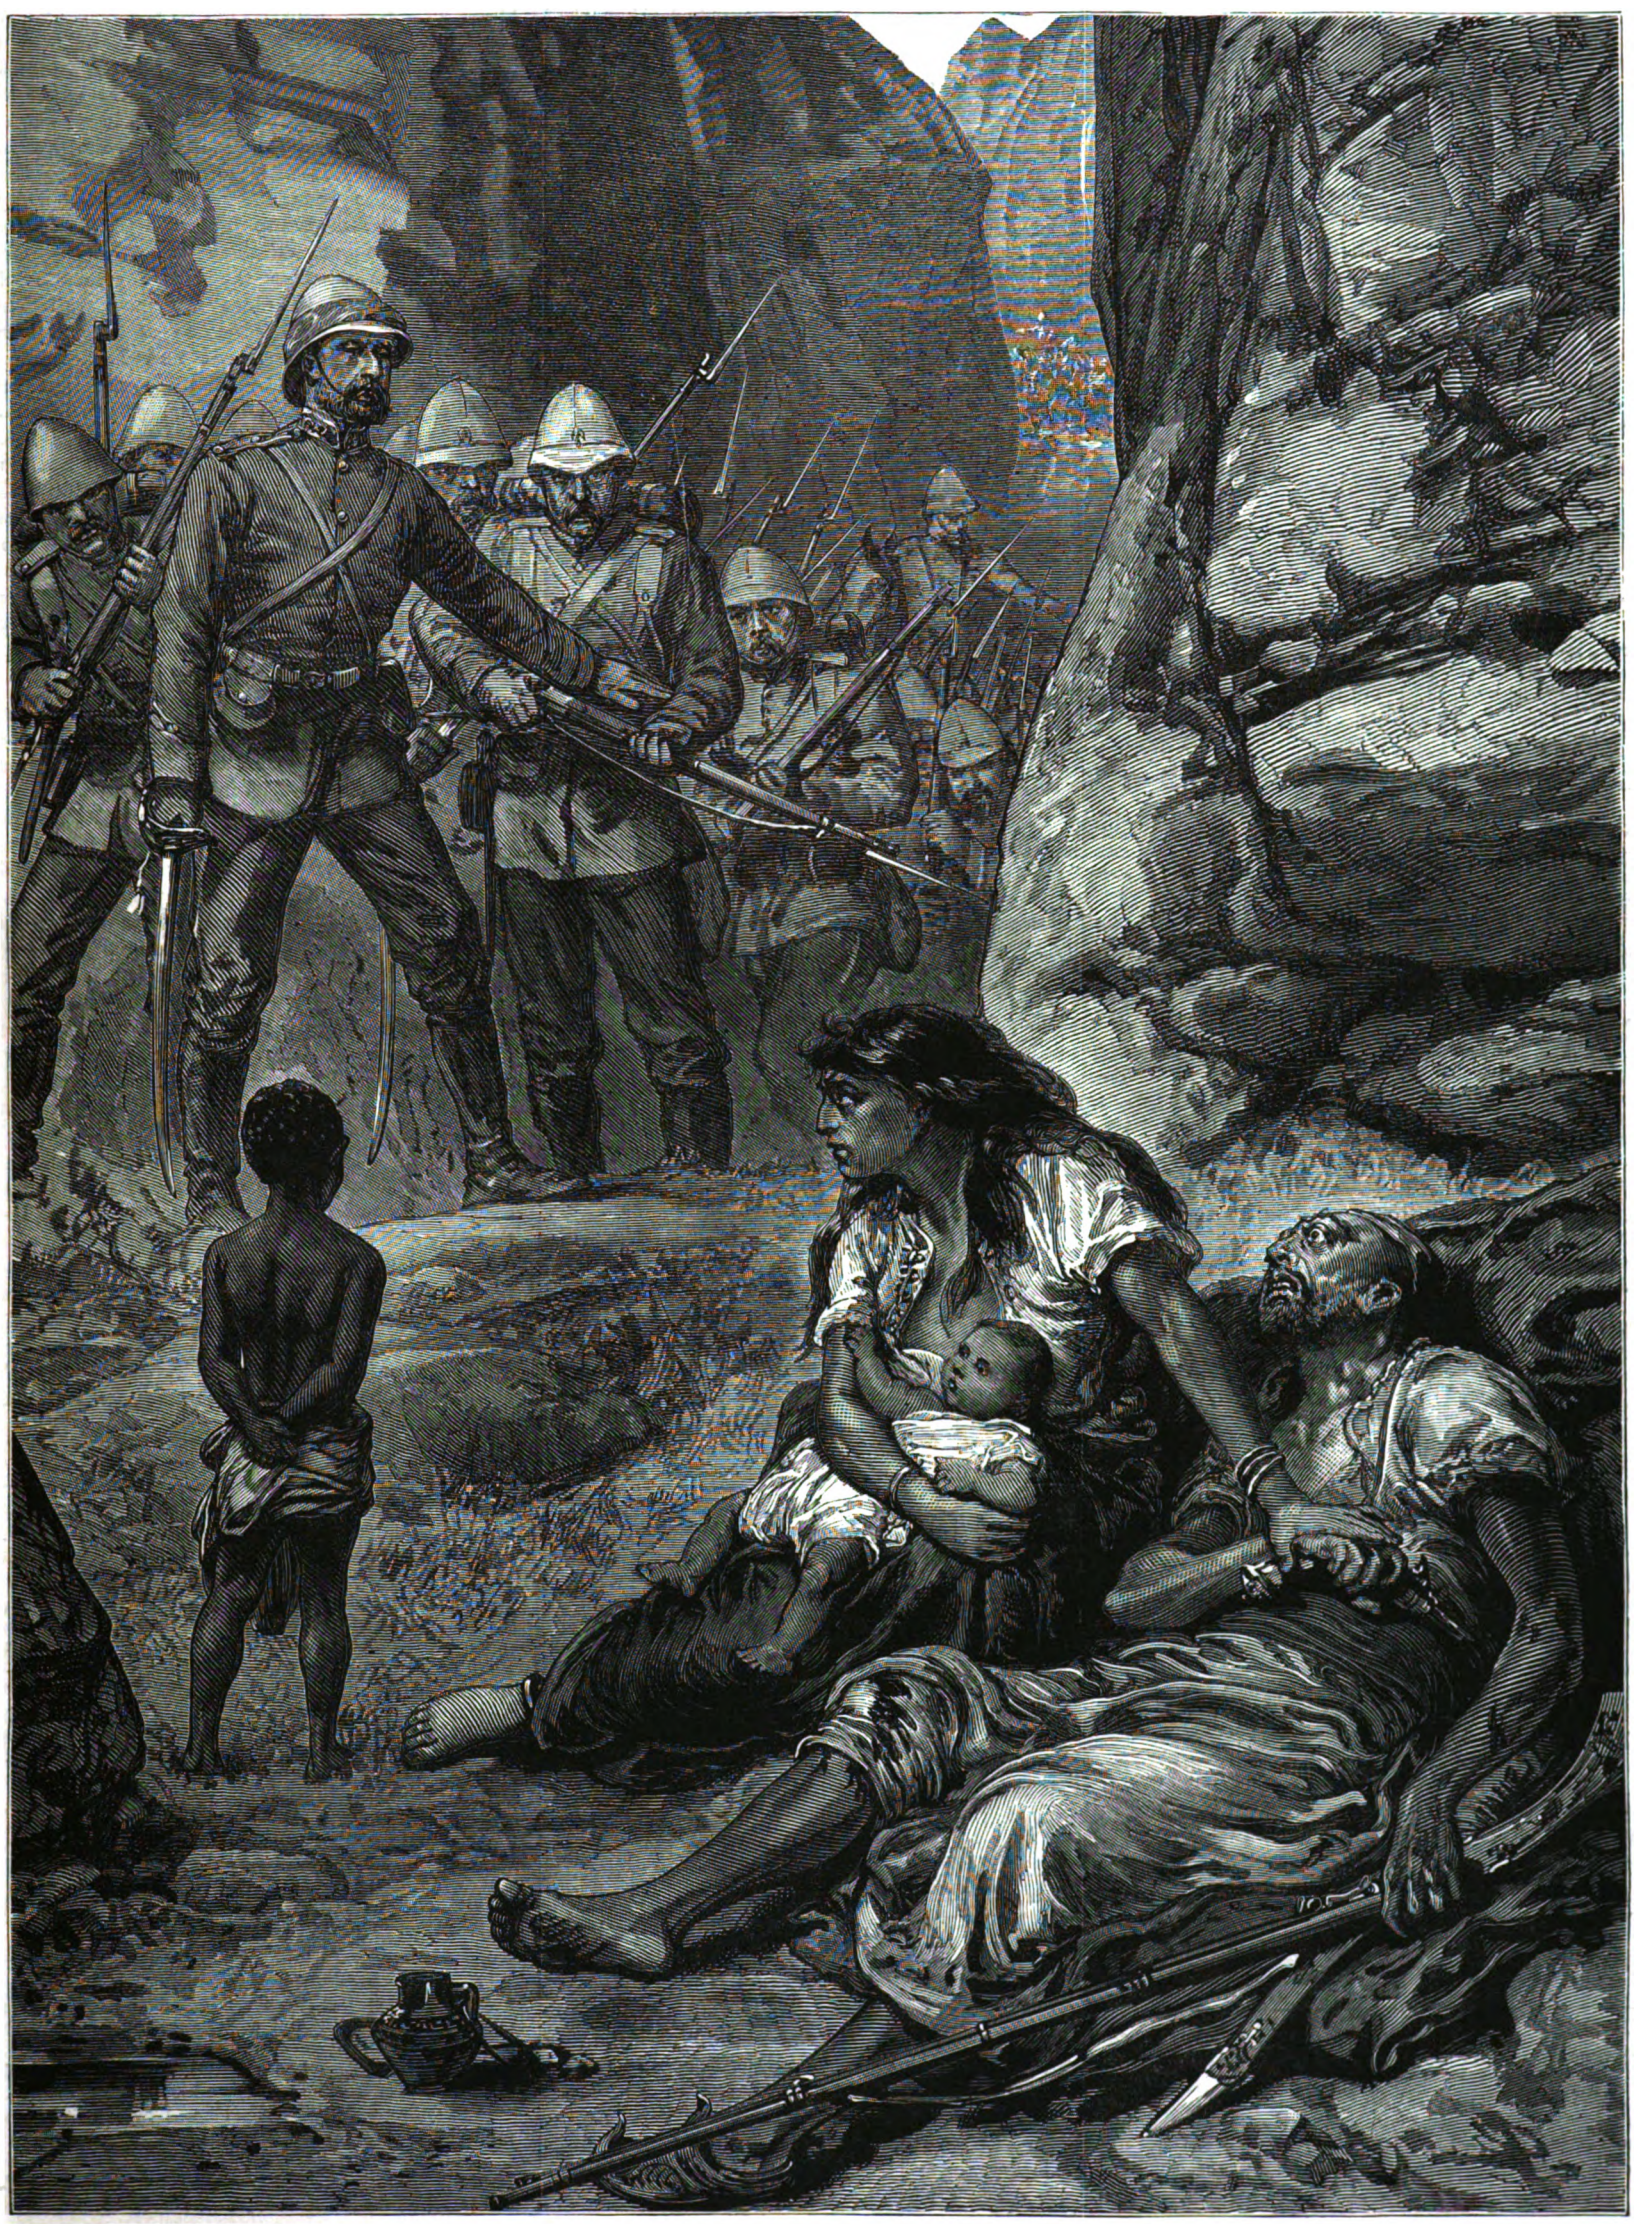
THE LADIES' HAWICK COSTUME TWEED, in all the newest colourings, 1s. 6½d. per yard. Patterns free. Parcels over 20s. carriage paid.
WM. KEDIE and CO., Warehousemen, Hawick.

PRETTY FLOWERS, Bridal Bouquets, Bridesmaids' Bouquets, Baskets of Flowers, Loose Cut Flowers, Funeral Wreaths. Prices on application.—WILLIAM HOOPER, 86, Oxford-street, W.

PRATT'S WATER PAD TRUSSES are the MOST EFFECTUAL CURE FOR RUPTURES. PRATT'S ELASTIC STOCKINGS, for VARICOSE VEINS, &c. J. F. PRATT. Surgical Mechanician to St. Bartholomew's Hospital, 420, OXFORD-STREET, LONDON

A LADY having a simple RECIPE that at once safely removes SUPERFLUOUS HAIRS, preventing their appearance, has pleasure in forwarding it upon application to Mrs. Grace Newton, Verwood Villa, Thornton-heath, Surrey.

DIAMONDS. SAPPHIRES. CATS'-EYES. OPALS. EMERALDS.
Mr. STREETER, 18, New Bond-street, W.
INTRODUCER of 18-CARAT GOLD JEWELLERY and ENGLISH LEVER WATCHES, (MACHINE-MADE.)
BRANCH ESTABLISHMENT, COLOMBO, CEYLON.



LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by GEORGE C. LEIGHTON, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1880.

Digitized by Google

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

REGISTERED AT THE GENERAL POST-OFFICE FOR TRANSMISSION ABROAD.

No. 2159.—VOL. LXXVII. SATURDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1880. WITH TWO SUPPLEMENTS SIXPENCE. By Post, 6½D.

AN INCIDENT IN THE MARCH OF OUR TROOPS FROM AFGHANISTAN.—SEE PAGE 374.

Digitized by Google

BIRTHS.

On Aug. 13, at Grahamstown, Cape of Good Hope, the wife of George Henry Rew, of a son.

On the 17th ult., at 21, Connaught-terrace, Folkstone, the wife of Jesse Nowell, of a son—Algernon James Thilbrick.

On the 28th ult., at 42, Russell-road Kensington, the wife of W. Stanley Adams, M.D., of Forest Lodge, Hong-Kong, of a son.

On the 5th inst., at 50, Stanhope-gardens, the Lady Chelmsford of a son.

On the 8th inst., at Fir Grove, East Hothly, Sussex, the wife of Sir Edmund Horuby, of a daughter.

On the 8th inst., at 23, Bryanston-square, the wife of Colonel Sir Charles Keyes, K.C.B., of a daughter.

On the 8th inst., at 6, Atherstone-terrace, the wife of the Hon. Edward Romilly, of a daughter.

On the 10th inst., at 46, Welbeck-street, Cavendish-square, the Hon. Mrs. Herbert Gye, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

On the 30th ult., at St. Saviour's, Jersey, by the Rev. Charles Marett, M.A., Rector, Alfred John Le Cornu, of Highfield St. Ouens, to Rozel, daughter of T. G. Falle, Esq., Plaisance, Jersey.

On the 30th ult., at St. John's Church, Deptford, in the county of Kent, by the Rev. Charles Walford, Gustaf Svensson, of the I.M. Customs Service, China, youngest son of Olof Svensson, to Grace Martha Owen, youngest daughter of David Owen.

On the 28th ult., at St. Luke's Church, Cork, by the Rev. E. Ellis-Viner, assisted by the Archdeacon, Francis A. St. Maur Sheil, to Margaret Jane, second daughter of Sir John Arnott, D.L., Woodlands, Cork.

DEATHS.

On the 8th inst., at 29, Grosvenor-square, the Lord Lanerton, aged 70.

On the 4th inst., at 31, Linden-gardens, Kensington, Colonel Sir William Lockyer Merewether, C.B., K.C.S.I., H.M.'s Indian Army, aged 55.

On the 9th inst., at Skairfield Lockerbie, N.B., Sir William Linton, K.C.B., in his 79th year.

On the 11th inst., at East Cowes Castle, in the 90th year of her age, Elizabeth Mary, Dowager Viscountess Gort.

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING OCT. 23.

Sunday, Oct. 17.

Twenty-first Sunday after Trinity.
Morning Lessons: Dan. iii., 1 Thess. ii. Evening Lessons: Dan. iv. or v., Luke xiii. 1—18.
St. Paul's Cathedral, 10.30 a.m., Rev. Prebendary Dr. Butler; 3.15 p.m., Bishop Piers Claughton; 7 p.m., Rev. N. Dawes, Vicar of St. Mary's, Charterhouse.
St. James's (re-opened), noon, Rev. Francis Garden, Sub-Dean of the Chapels Royal.
Westminster Abbey, 10 a.m., Rev. M. S. A. Walrond, Vicar of St. Lawrence Jewry; 3 p.m., Rev. Canon Duckworth.
Whitehall, 11 a.m. and 3 p.m., Rev. Canon Wordsworth.
Savoy, 11.30 a.m., Rev. Henry White, the Chaplain; 7 p.m., Rev. Alfred Gurney, Vicar of St. Barnabas, Pimlico.
Temple Church, 11 a.m.; 3 p.m., Rev. A. Ainger, the Reader.

Monday, Oct. 18.

St. Luke the Evangelist.
Full Moon, 4.26 a.m.
Frederick William, Crown Prince of Germany born, 1831.
Food Exhibition, Agricultural Hall (three days).
Farmers' Alliance: meeting at Westminster Palace Hotel, 2.30 p.m.
Medical Society, 8.30 p.m.
Royal Naval Benevolent Society; quarterly court, Willis's Rooms, noon.

Tuesday, Oct. 19.

Humane Society, 4 p.m.
Gresham Lectures, 6 p.m., Dean Cowie on Geometry; and on 20th, 21st, and 22nd.
Pathological Society, 8.30 p.m.
Evangelical Alliance, opening of Conference at Nottingham—President, Lord Polwarth; opening of the Irish Branch at Belfast.
South Place Institute, Finsbury, 3.30 p.m., Dr. E. B. Aveling on Biology; 7 p.m., Mr. W. C. Coupland on Ethical Principles.
Pembroke Dog Show.
Southwell Agricultural Show.
Races: Newcastle, Croydon.
The Lady Mayoress's Reception, 3 to 5 p.m.

Wednesday, Oct. 20.

Institute of Bankers, 6 p.m., Dr. F. Pollock on the Law of Partnership.
British Horological Institute, 8 p.m., Mr. W. B. Warwick on Electro-Metallurgy.
International Balloon Contest, Crystal Palace, 3 p.m.
London Dialectical Society, 8 p.m., Miss Sarah Marshall, on the Moral Treatment of Invalids.

Thursday, Oct. 21.

Battle of Trafalgar, Nelson's victory and death, 1805.
Toxophilite Society, extra target.
Races: Sandown Park.

Friday, Oct. 22.

City of London College, 6 p.m., Dr. N. Heinemann on Political Economy: Variations in Productiveness.
Quekett Microscopical Club, 8 p.m.
Clinical Society, 8.30 p.m.
Christ's Hospital: Annual dinner, the Albion, 5.30 p.m.

Saturday, Oct. 23.

Meeting of the first United Parliament of Great Britain, 1707.

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE KEW OBSERVATORY OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY.

Lat. 51° 28′ 6″ N.; Long. 0° 18′ 47″ W. Height above Sea, 34 feet.

Day.	Daily means of: Barometer Corrected.	Temperature of the Air.	Dew Point.	Relative Humidity.	Amount of Cloud.	Thermom.: Maximum, read at 10 P.M.	Minimum, read at 10 P.M.	Wind: General Direction.	Movement in 24 hours, read at 10 A.M. next morning.	Rain in 24 hours, read at 10 A.M. next morning.
	Inches.	°	°	°	0-10	°	°		Miles.	In.
Oct. 8	29·876	44·5	35·6	·73	6	53·8	35·0	SW. W.	146	0·000
1	29·635	42·2	39·1	·89	10	46·7	37·8	W. NE. E.	241	0·215
5	29·222	56·0	54·1	·93	9	61·8	45·5	E. S. SW.	331	0·375
6	29·355	49·2	47·5	·94	10	56·8	49·8	SSW. NE.	202	0·460
7	29·397	51·5	49·3	·84	4	64·8	49.9	NE. E. SSW.	142	0·655
8	29·728	52·1	48·3	·88	9	57·6	48·9	NE. E.	235	0·130
9	29·663	51·6	48·3	·90	10	56·0	47·7	NE.	538	1·080

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, in order, at ten o'clock a.m.:—

Barometer (in inches) corrected ..	29·803	29·714	29·916	29·343	29·561	29·728	29·680
Temperature of Air	47·6	44·3	48·3	50·9	54·2	52·6	52·9
Temperature of Evaporation ..	42·7	41·4	5·6	49·9	53·6	51·8	50·4
Direction of Wind	NW.	NE.	S.	NNE.	ENE.	E.	NE.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE

FOR THE WEEK ENDING OCTOBER 23.

Sunday.		Monday.		Tuesday.		Wednesday.		Thursday.		Friday.		Saturday.
M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A
h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m
0 53	1 20	1 38	1 55	2 15	2 30	2 48	3 5	3 23	3 40	3 57	4 15	4 30	4 47

DORÉ'S GREAT WORKS.—"ECCE HOMO" ("Full of divine dignity."—The Times) and "THE ASCENSION;" "CHRIST LEAVING THE PRÆTORIUM," "CHRIST ENTERING JERUSALEM," with all his other Great Pictures.—DORÉ GALLERY, 35, New Bond-street. Daily, 10 to 6. 1s.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry Irving.—THE CORSICAN BROTHERS Every Night at 8.30.—Louis and Fabien dei Franchi, Mr. Irving. At 7.30, BYGONES, by A. W. Pinero. Doors open at 7. Special Morning Performances of THE CORSICAN BROTHERS, Saturdays, OCT. 16, 23, 30, at 2.30. Box Office (Mr. Hurst) open 10 to 5 daily. Seats booked by letter or telegram.

ST. JAMES'S HALL, PICCADILLY.
EVERY NIGHT AT EIGHT;
MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS, and SATURDAYS, at Three and Eight,
ALL THE YEAR ROUND.
MOORE and BURGESS MINSTRELS,
the oldest established and most successful Entertainment in the world, and
THE ACKNOWLEDGED SUPREME HEAD OF ALL CONTEMPORARY MINSTREL COMPANIES
on either side of the Atlantic, comprising, "as it has done for more than fifteen years past,"
FORTY ARTISTES OF KNOWN EMINENCE.

THE BRIGHTON SEASON.
Frequent Trains from Victoria and London Bridge.
Also Trains in connection from Kensington and Liverpool-street.
Return Tickets, London to Brighton, available for eight days.
Weekly, Fortnightly, and Monthly Tickets, at Cheap Rates,
Available to travel by all Trains between London and Brighton.
Cheap Half-Guinea First Class Day Tickets to Brighton
Every Saturday, from Victoria and London Bridge,
Admitting to the Grand Aquarium and Royal Pavilion.
Cheap First Class Day Tickets to Brighton every Sunday,
From Victoria at 10.45 a.m., and London Bridge at 10.35 a.m.
Pullman Drawing-Room Cars between Victoria and Brighton.
Through Bookings to Brighton from principal Stations
On the Railways in the Northern and Midland districts.
A Special Train for Horses, Carriages, and Servants,
From Victoria to Brighton, at 11.15 a.m. every Weekday.

GRAND AQUARIUM AND PAVILION.—Military and other Concerts EVERY SATURDAY AFTERNOON, for which the above Saturday Cheap Tickets are available.

NEW ROUTE to WEST BRIGHTON by the DIRECT LINE, PRESTON PARK to CLIFTONVILLE.
A Morning Up and Evening Down Fast Train Every Weekday between London Bridge and West Brighton.

PARIS.—SHORTEST, CHEAPEST ROUTE.—Via NEWHAVEN, DIEPPE, and ROUEN.
CHEAP EXPRESS SERVICE Every Week Night—First, Second, and Third Class.
From Victoria 7.50 p.m., and London Bridge 8.0 p.m.
Fares—Single, 35s., 24s., 17s.; Return, 55s., 39s., 30s.
Powerful Paddle-steamers, with excellent cabins, &c.
Trains run alongside Steamers at Newhaven and Dieppe.
SOUTH OF FRANCE, ITALY, SWITZERLAND, &c.—Tourists' Tickets are issued enabling the holder to visit all the principal places of interest.
HAVRE.—Passengers booked through by this route every week night from Victoria and London Bridge as above.
HONFLEUR, TROUVILLE, CAEN, &c.—Passengers booked through from Victoria and London Bridge, via Littlehampton, every Monday and Wednesday.

TICKETS and every information at the Brighton Company's West-End General Offices, 28, Regent-circus, Piccadilly; and No. 8, Grand Hotel Buildings, Trafalgar-square; also at the Victoria and London Bridge Stations. (By Order) J. P. KNIGHT, General Manager.

WILL BE PUBLISHED, OCTOBER 19,
PRICE ONE SHILLING,
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK
FOR
1881,
CONTAINING
SIX COLOURED PICTURES,
PRINTED BY LEIGHTON BROTHERS' CHROMATIC PROCESS,
FROM ORIGINALS BY EMINENT ARTISTS;
TWELVE FINE-ART ENGRAVINGS;
ASTRONOMICAL PHENOMENA;
TWELVE DIAGRAMS OF THE DURATION OF MOONLIGHT;

The Royal Family of Great Britain; the Queen's Household; her Majesty's Ministers; Lists of Public Offices and Officers; Bankers, Law and University Terms; Fixed and Movable Festivals; Anniversaries; Acts of Parliament passed during the Session of 1880; Revenue and Expenditure; Obituary of Eminent Persons; Christian, Jewish, and Mohammedan Calendars; Tables of Stamps, Taxes, and Government Duties; Times of High Water; Post Office Regulations; together with a large amount of useful and valuable information, which has during the past thirty-eight years made the ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK the most acceptable and elegant companion to the Library; whilst it is universally acknowledged to be by far the cheapest Almanack ever published.

The unprecedented demand for the ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK year after year stimulates the Proprietor to still greater exertions to secure for this Almanack a reception as favourable as that which has hitherto placed its circulation second only to that of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

The ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK is inclosed in an elegant cover, printed in colours by the same process as the COLOURED PLATES, and forms a useful and pleasing ornament to the drawing-room table.

The SHILLING ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK is published at the Office of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, 198, Strand, and sold by all Booksellers and Newsvenders.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON: SATURDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1880.

Public affairs have a slightly more promising look. The excessive strain upon men's anxieties for the maintenance of peace in Europe has somewhat relaxed. The Sultan of Turkey seems to have discovered the mistake he made when he counted upon breaking up the European Concert by assuming an attitude of direct defiance. So far from disintegrating the international combination, it has rather tended to knit it together more closely. Germany and Austria are said to have availed themselves of the opportunity to bring under the notice of his Imperial Majesty the immediate mischief he was doing to his own objects, and the ulterior danger to the very existence of his Empire that his reckless obstinacy was raising up. For the moment, he has listened to reason. There can be but little doubt that, if convinced at all by the representations made to him from the quarter indicated, he has been "convinced against his will." Dulcigno is to be unconditionally surrendered to the Montenegrins—will have been surrendered, possibly, before these columns have reached the eyes of our readers. We will assume this. We will assume that one item of the demands made upon the Porte by the united will of Europe has been, or presently will be, struck off the list. So far, good. The cession, save as a recognition of the principle which underlies remaining claims, is of very little importance in itself, but it puts an end to any present necessity for a Naval Demonstration, and goes far to justify the resort to that kind of coercive pressure. Whether it will be employed in aid of the settlement of the Greek Frontier Question is extremely doubtful. It is a weapon insufficient of itself, unless intended to initiate a further recourse to material means; and it remains to be seen whether the Signatary Powers can agree to take it up again, together with the responsibility which it implies. At any rate, no precipitate decision is called for. The Greek and Armenian questions remain to be dealt with on their respective merits; and, substantially, there can be hardly room to doubt, will be eventually settled without resort to bloodshed.

Ireland is much nearer home, and much more closely concerns England's "business and bosom," than the Port of Dulcigno. The face of Irish affairs appears to us somewhat less troubled than it was. Agrarian outrages, assassinations, non-payment of rents, and inflammatory, not to say menacing, meetings summoned and held by the Land League leaders, have perhaps done their worst, but they have also called into action the better influences which, in Ireland as well as elsewhere, are latent in society until evoked by events. We do not wonder that Irish landlords have taken the alarm. We cannot be surprised at the appeal they have made with such moving earnestness to the Executive for the protection of life and property, The State we think, may be trusted to discharge with efficiency its primary duty; but it will exhaust all the means which law has placed within its reach before it asks for an extension of them. It has no intention, it is said, of sending any additional military force to the Island. We do not hear that it is likely to call Parliament together for the purpose of passing a new Coercion Bill. It has "proclaimed" two Counties and has sent into them an augmentation of the Police Force, the expense of which will fall upon the cess-payers. Meanwhile, the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Dublin has addressed the Priesthood under his Ecclesiastical superintendence, in a firm but Christian denunciation of those quasi apologies for violence and murder, too frequently ejaculated at recent public meetings. We shall see in the sequel what is the effect upon the multitude of this patriotic interposition. That it will be beneficial may be fairly assumed; to a certain extent, no doubt, it will assauge angry passions and neutralise the sympathy of the Tenant-Farmer class with the evil doings of the desperadoes who profess to act on their behalf. It will, moreover, encourage that large portion of the community yet uncommitted by overt acts to illegal remedies to protest against any resort to, or connivance at, criminal deeds as a means of reform. But whether the better elements of Irish Society will avail to place the more turbulent ones under restriction until Measures of Reform have been matured by the Government and Legislature of the United Kingdom, is one of those practical problems which can only be solved by facts. There is some room for hope that it may yet be peacefully and favourably solved. The Chief Secretary for Ireland has his hands full enough, as it is. He is becoming intimately and painfully acquainted with the weaknesses of the body politic he has been called to govern, and with the subtle and pervasive causes of them. If he should get at the root of the malady which he is attempting to cure, and should persuade Parliament to adopt effective remedial measures, he will achieve a task such as no previous Statesman has achieved for that country.

The inquiries now proceeding as to corrupt practices at the late General Election, in several constituencies, have already disclosed to us a laxity of political virtue and a readiness to barter patriotism for pelf at which there are few politicians, we hope, who will not blush, for their country's sake. If our Constitution rests upon so unstable a foundation as is laid bare by these Electoral Commissions it is hastening to decay. But we do not believe it does, to anything like the extent hastily surmised. Comparatively small constituencies generally inherit the evil tendencies and cherish the evil habits lately brought to light, but not by any means for the first time. It has become quite clear that the Ballot is no adequate preventative against bribery. It has, perhaps, put an end to, or, at any rate, has largely diminished, the potency of intimidation. But it leaves corruption where it found it; and voters accustomed to handle money at electoral contests are shrewd enough to see that their miserable privilege can only be upheld by fidelity, in the main, to the pledges which they sell. Large constituent bodies are tolerably free from the degrading vice. It is now becoming a serious question as to what should be done to extirpate the disease. It is too large a question to discuss now, and here; but it will no doubt be thoroughly discussed when a renewal of the Ballot Act shall be brought under the consideration of Parliament; and, we trust, with more earnestness of spirit and with better practical results than heretofore.

The Lord Lieutenant of Ireland and Countess Cowper gave a dinner party last Saturday evening at the Viceregal Lodge, Dublin. On Friday the Lord Lieutenant and Countess Cowper paid a visit to the Cripples' Home at Bray. Their Excellencies were accompanied by the Countess of Dufferin.

Earl Spencer, Lord President of the Council, left Spencer House, St. James's, on Monday morning, for Dublin, accompanied by Viscount Ebrington, his private secretary, and during his short stay in Ireland will be the guest of the Lord Lieutenant at the Viceregal Lodge. Countess Spencer left yesterday for Althorpe Hall, Northampton.

Colonel George Chesney, R.E., President of the Royal Indian Engineering College, Cooper's-hill, has accepted the appointment of Secretary to the Government of India, Military Department.

The Duke of Bedford has bought Norris Castle, Cowes, Isle of Wight. The Queen, when Princess Victoria, resided there some time with her mother, the Duchess of Kent. In the year 1831, during the stay there of the Princess, she laid the foundation-stone of the district church.

Mr. Donald Currie, M.P. for the county of Perth, has bought Garth Castle estate and Drumchary Wester, between Aberfeldy and Glenlyon.

In consequence of the disturbed state of Mayo and Galway, a proclamation has been published in the Dublin Gazette directing "an additional establishment of police force" in these two counties.

Lord Fitzwilliam has resolved, at the request of his Irish tenantry, to spend the winter on his Wicklow estates.

The O'Conor Don has been elected President of the Society for the Preservation of the Irish Language.

It is announced that the Hon. Russell Lowell, United States Minister in London, will give a lecture at Edinburgh on the 5th prox. before the Philosophical Institute.

Digitized by Google

ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

The French Government, so the telegrams say, have been contemplating the prosecution of M. Felix Pyat, the Irreconcilable editor of a Paris paper, with the engaging title of "La Commune," who has started a subscription for presenting a "revolver of honour" to Berezowski, the Pole who, some thirteen years ago, attempted to assassinate the Emperor Alexander of Russia in the Bois de Boulogne by shooting him with a pistol. Individual subscriptions to the Revolver Fund are to be limited to five centimes, or one halfpenny; but the Government fails to approve of this proposed testimonial to a "political martyr," who very narrowly escaped the guillotine, and who is at present expiating his little act of indiscretion in 1867 as a convict in New Caledonia. So the Editor of La Commune was to be proceeded against for the offence of "qualifying and justifying a crime condemned by the law;" but, at the last moment, the prosecution seems to have fallen through.

M. Felix Pyat is a very clever gentleman, who must be close, I take it, on seventy years of age. He is by profession an Advocate. Ever so many years ago he produced, at the Porte St. Martin, a most moving melodrama called "Le Chiffonnier de Paris," afterwards adapted to our stage as "The Ragpicker of Paris." The principal character was, I think, played by an excellent actor, Mr. Addison, one of whose latest appearances in London was as Mr. Pickwick to Mr. Henry Irving's Jingle, at the Lyceum. In 1848 M. Felix Pyat abandoned the mimic drama for the real one of politics. He went into exile with Ledru Rollin, and remained in banishment until 1870. He was one of the most conspicuous actors in the great spectacular drama of the Commune (you remember its striking effects of petroleum and red fire?); but, more fortunate than M. Rochefort, he managed to get away, and was only condemned to death en contumace, a sentence which pleased his political opponents but did not hurt him. Only the other day he was amnestied; and returned with other gentlemen of his patriotic persuasion to Paris. He immediately proceeded to found an Irreconcilable journal, and to attack the powers that be tooth and nail. All this on the verge of seventy. A "game"—a very "game" old gentleman, as it would be said in fistic parlance.

Touching the convict Pole, Berezowski, it was my fortune to see the man tried, one warm morning during the season of 1867, at the Court of Assizes of the Seine. The court was crowded; and we were all, from M. le Président in his ermine-lined robes to us poor spectators huddled together on the back benches, uncomfortably hot. Some of the ladies present fainted. The coolest person in court seemed to be Berezowski himself, sitting on the banc des accusés between two gendarmes. I can see the prisoner now, in my mind's eye, and could draw his portrait from memory on my thumb-nail. A little, sinister-looking, shambling, weak-kneed wretch, with a stubbly apex to his head which looked like a fir-cone, and a birdlike profile. Can you realise the idea of a bilious vulture or a hypochondriacal hawk? Stop. Did you ever see the "Aztec Children"? On ancient bas-reliefs and in linen pictures in Mexico I have seen the counterpart of Berezowski's lineaments over and over again.

If this miserable little crétin was not at least two thirds a congenital idiot, I am very much mistaken. He had lain many weeks in gaol, and had the prison taint and the prison pallor on his face; and, with his bleared, lashless eyes, he blinked in the sunlight as an owl in an ivy-bush (I never saw an owl in an ivy-bush, but I once knew a lady at Washington who kept a screech-owl in her parlour) might be supposed to do. Otherwise he seemed quite undisturbed by what was going on, and answered the interrogatory of M. le Président (during which the accused stood up) quite jauntily. The evidence against him was clear; and of a surety he would have been condemned to death but for the impassioned eloquence of his counsel, Maître Emmanuel Arago. The distinguished advocate had got hold of the, to him, gratifying fact that Berezowski's maternal parent had died since her son's arrest; and of this fact M. Arago made the most. "The accused," he thundered forth, "had two Mothers—his own parent, and his beloved country, Poland; and the Czar of Russia has assassinated them both." An allusion to one's mother may be always warranted to "fetch" a French jury and a French theatrical audience.

As M. Arago resumed his seat, after this telling coup, I heard a stout and elderly Frenchman close to me murmur to himself, "Après ces belles paroles, la tête du malheureux ne tombera pas." Nor did it. That allusion to his mother in all probability saved his life. He had ceased, in the opinion of the spectators, to be a criminal of the deepest dye. He was only a malheureux—an unfortunate. The jury found him guilty, "with extenuating circumstances;" and he was sentenced to les travaux forcés à perpetuité, or penal servitude for life. As he was being taken from the Court the members of the jeune barreau—the junior barristers—hastily sent a hat round, and gathered what I was told was a round sum of money for the wretched life-convict, to purchase him some trifling comforts withal. French convicts are mercifully permitted to spend a little pocket money to buy additions to their rations. It was thirteen years ago. I wonder how many of those smock-faced young barristers whom I saw in the Palais de Justice are judges, prefects, deputies, diplomatists, Ministers of State, it may be, now! I wonder whether M. Léon Gambetta was of the company!

No signs are visible in the surcease of the statue mania in France. Denis Papin at Blois and Blaise Pascal at Clermont Ferrand have been succeeded by a statue at Sens of the famous Renaissance painter, sculptor, and engraver, Jean Cousin. And now, poor dear Joan of Arc has had yet another statue erected to her memory at Compiègne, outside the gate of which, at the close of an unsuccessful sortie, she was captured by a Burgundian archer belonging to the Bâtard de Wandonne, who took his valuable prize in triumph to his castle of Beaulieu, and delivered her over to his womankind for safe keeping until arrangements could be made for selling her to the English. The statue at Compiègne is from the chisel of M. Leroux. I had the curiosity this week to go through a collection of no less than seventy engraved portraits of the Maid of Orleans; and there are scarcely three alike as regards the martial costume which she assumed during her brief but glorious campaigns. She is represented in plate armour, in chain armour, in a surcoat of mail, in a cuirass and shoulder-pieces, and a long white slashed skirt, like the fustanella of a Greek palikar, in a riding-habit, and, in one instance, in a hat and feathers, the sleeves of Titian's daughter, and a periwig! This is a seventeenth-century Pucelle.

But there happens to be, in the National Library, Paris, an illuminated manuscript, bearing the date of 1484, with a vignette representing the capture of Joan. She is on horseback, clad cap-à-pié in armour of plate; but she wears in addition a flowing skirt open at the sides, so as to give free action to her limbs when mounting and dismounting. The probability of her having been so accoutred is enhanced by the testimony of the contemporary accounts of her capture, which record that the archers dragged her out of her saddle par ses longs habits. A specially light panoply of steel must have been made for the heroic girl. Perhaps the industry of some indefatigable antiquary will one day be rewarded by the discovery of her armourer's little bill.

The gentleman who wrote in a hurry to the Times to point out that the griffin in "fine white stone" with which it is proposed to crown the Temple Bar "Memorial" would soon be converted by the sulphur-laden atmosphere of London into the semblance of a "shapeless block of sugar candy" has been tersely but effectually demolished by another correspondent of the leading journal, who adopts the signature, "One who Knows," and who sarcastically remarks that the gentleman who wrote in a hurry is perfectly right—"that is he would be, only the griffin is to be of bronze, and not of marble at all."

It strikes me that all, or nearly all, the friction which has arisen from this unfortunate undertaking of embodying the ghost of old Temple Bar might have been avoided had the City Lands Committee only condescended in the first instance to set up a model of the structure which the City architect proposed to erect in the middle of the roadway. Then the public at large, as well as the "experts," might have had their say; and the vexed question might have been ultimately settled by one of Mr. Linley Sambourne's wondrously weird allegories in Punch. Meanwhile, Mr. Bedford sticks manfully to his text, and continues to maintain that there will be room for two vehicles to pass abreast on each side—mind, on each side—the Memorial. I await the Ninth of November (on which day there are to be no Men in Armour in the procession; those warriors are said to be serving as stokers on board the ironclads in the Adriatic) with some anxiety. Most sincerely do I hope that the Lord Mayor's State coach will not knock over the Memorial, or that the gilded ark of civic royalty itself will not come to grief by sudden collision with the griffin-surmounted What-d'ye-call-it. I do not intend to scoff at it any more. It is an all but accomplished fact. I "cave in" and "dry up," and yield to the Inevitable. I will try to learn to love it, as the student learned to love the Bottle Imp.

Mem.: Thus we have grown to tolerate, if not to love, the equestrian statue of the Duke on the summit of Decimus Burton's arch at Hyde Park-corner. Do you remember Punch's famous joke about the man and horse being so heavy that by their own ponderosity they would probably cause the arch and themselves to sink right through the solid globe and come out in the middle of George-street, Sydney, New South Wales? And when the statue of Nelson was placed on the capital of Mr. Railton's disproportioned column in Trafalgar-square did not some wicked wag declare that they had "mast-headed the Admiral"? Altogether, the bronze statuary on the top of Decimus Burton's arch is not so very bad. The horse is really a remarkably fine piece of modelling. It is only that monstrous cocked hat which is incurably offensive, and which continues to excite the derision of foreigners. "Plus grand que Napoléon," one sneering Gaul remarked, "même en fait de chapeau."

My respected correspondent "E. L. L.," —— Rectory, near Oxford, writes me that he has been an enthusiastic student of Shakspeare for fifty years, and that, without referring to Mrs. Cowden Clarke's Concordance, he can call to mind that the expression "the Music of the Spheres" occurs in the first scene of the fifth act of "Pericles Prince of Tyre." Since my receipt of "E. L. L.'s" friendly communication the courtesy of Messrs. Bickers, of Leicester-square, has made me the proud possessor of a new and revised edition of the Cowden Clarke Concordance; and therein I duly find the "Music of the Spheres" from "Pericles" duly tabulated; but I would mention one curious fact: that, out of about seventy correspondents who have quoted the "Music from the Spheres" passage in "Twelfth Night," and the exquisite implied allusion to spherical harmony in "The Merchant of Venice," my correspondent from —— Rectory is the only one who has said anything concerning the "Music of the Spheres" in "Pericles."

Mem.: Would not this seem to point to the probability of "Pericles Prince of Tyre" being about the least frequently read of all Shakspeare's plays? Mr. Howard Staunton, in the "Routledge Shakspeare," comes to the conclusion that "in an imperfect form this piece was the work of an older playwright than Shakspeare, and, being founded on a story which for ages had retained extensive popularity, that it was placed in the latter's hands very early in his dramatic career for adaptation to the Blackfriars stage." It is a sufficiently curious coincidence that the first edition of "the late and much-admired play called 'Pericles Prince of Tyre'" (which is not comprised in the folio of 1623) was published in 1609, the self-same year that saw the production of the first two parts of Kepler's "Astronomia Nova." The third part, containing the "Harmonia Mundi," was not printed until ten years afterwards.

Touching Mrs. Cowden Clarke's marvellously exhaustive Concordance to Shakspeare I note that the authoress on the dedication page consecrates her handsome volume of nearly nine hundred pages, with its thousands of references (entailing some sixteen years of continuous labour), to the "Memory of Shakspeare and the Use of the British Nation." Am I in error in fancying that some five-and-twenty years ago the first edition of the Concordance to Shakspeare bore some such Dedication as the following:—"To Douglas Jerrold, the First Wit of the Age, this Concordance to the Works of Shakspeare, the First Wit of Any Age, is dedicated by Mary Cowden Clarke, a Woman of a Certain Age, and no Wit at all." I am trusting entirely to memory. But it may have been some other book by Mrs. Clarke which was thus inscribed. I am one of the poorest of Shakspearean scholars, and have the most meagre of Shakspearean libraries; and whenever I go to Birmingham (head-quarters of Shakspearean lore) and meet my old friend Mr. Sam Timmins, J.P., I am always full of fear and trembling lest he should offer me a Shakspearean nut far beyond my powers of cracking.

We have been warned to "beware of the Man of One Book;" and the "monobiblic" student may be apt sometimes to be a bore. But he is a useful bore: an ambulatory solver of textual problems, a peripatetic guide and directory. Is it better to be a student of one book than of many books? His Excellency the Hon. James Russell Lowell, D.C.L., Minister Plenipotentiary from the United States, who delivered an admirable address lately to the students of the Working Men's College in Great Ormond-street, seems to be of opinion that the present generation read too many books, and that the major portion of the literature which they devour is rubbish. The beau ideal of a student formed by the author of the "Biglow Papers" is he who confines his reading to three authors—Shakspeare, Goethe, and Dante. Touching the illustrious Florentine, the American poet and humourist was pleasantly enthusiastic. "He would defy," he said, "anyone who knew Dante thoroughly to do a shabby thing." Alas and alack! I have been studying the "Divina Commedia" these many years past, in the original, and comparing it with the English versions of Cary and Wright and Longfellow and Canon Ford, and getting cantos of it by heart, and lingering over its beauties (when I should have been minding my Shakspeare, perhaps), and I am guiltily conscious of having done in my time a great many shabby things. Better to acknowledge having been what the Americans style "a mean cuss" than to be a hypocrite.

Mem.: I have a dear friend, who has a deeply religious sense too, who often tells me that he habitually prays not to be Poor. "For," he says, "if I be poor, I may tell lies. I may be jealous and envious. I may evade and shuffle. I may do inexpressibly shabby things. I may be Mean." There is poverty, and poverty. The beggar has no responsibilities, and, as a rule, is happy enough. Paupers have no responsibilities; and they can scarcely be so very miserable: else they would hang themselves with greater frequency than they do. And how they chirrup at Christmas-time over their beef and pudding and strong beer! The wretchedest of poor people are, first, I take it, middle-aged gentlewomen with insufficient incomes; and, next, professional men who are compelled—by the very circumstance of their profession—to associate with the rich, and are continually and coolly expected to co-operate with Crœsus in pecuniarily assisting distressed persons who are in many respects much better off than the professional men are. And when they, the professionals, die, and it is found that they have not left thirty thousand pounds in Consols to their widows, the usual sneers are heard about "sending the hat round," and the usual head shakings take place over the thoughtless prodigality of men, who have had to make small incomes out of their brains, instead of immense ones out of making bricks, or boiling bones, or distilling gin.

An extraordinary paragraph is going the round of the papers purporting to be a compendious summary of the political opinions of Mr. John Ruskin, who is the Conservative candidate for the Lord Rectorship of the University of Glasgow. Mr. Ruskin's estimate of parties in general, and Liberalism in particular, is set forth in a letter addressed by him last July to a gentleman in Scotland, and which should never have been published. I have too much admiration, too much esteem, too much veneration for the genius and character of the illustrious author of "Modern Painters" (of whom I have not any kind of personal knowledge), to quote textually the amazing phraseology in which Mr. Ruskin's thoughts on Liberalism as against Conservatism are couched. But I will say this, that, as an old and incurable Radical (those horrid Radicals!), I most earnestly hope that Mr. John Ruskin may be elected Lord Rector of Glasgow University.

Why do I think he should be elected? Because it is time that signal honour were done to one who in his magnificent writings—full as they are of unsurpassed knowledge of Art, of almost magical appreciation of nature, of deep poetic feeling, of pure thoughts and noble aspirations, have done honour to his country. The first volume of "Modern Painters" appeared in the year 1843; and since that time what mines of intellectual and artistic wealth have there not been opened to us by the subtle hands of the necromancer of Brantwood! I would uphold him were he even to ascend the rostrum at Glasgow and deliver an inaugural address kindred in type to the judicial charge of Bérenger's "Juge de Charenton."

Partout règnent les intrigants,
On n'interdit point les extravagants,
Ce dernier point n'est pas un rêve,
Puisqu'en robe je dis tout ça,
Et patati, et patata,
On trouve du bon dans ce discours là.

Mr. Howard Paul, most versatile of "entertainers," has had the moral courage, on "public grounds," to prosecute to conviction at Highgate Police Court an intemperate constable in the City Police, whom Mr. Paul had the misfortune to meet in a railway carriage travelling between the Alexandra Palace and King's Cross, and who, on being remonstrated with for using unseemly language, retorted by using speech yet more objectionable, and altogether made a very offensive exhibition of himself. The first prosecution broke down on some technical points, but eventually the indiscreet police-constable was fined for his misconduct, and, moreover, bound over to keep the peace towards Mr. Howard Paul, who is to be congratulated on the public spirit which impelled him to prosecute this man to conviction.

G. A. S.

Digitized by Google

THE LATE ADMIRAL SIR JOHN TARLETON.

The death of this distinguished naval officer was announced last week. He was a son of the late Mr. Thomas Tarleton, of Bolesworth Castle, Cheshire, and grand-nephew of the late General Sir Banastre Tarleton, G.C.B. He was born in 1811, and entered the Royal Navy in 1824. He obtained a lieutenancy in 1835, was promoted to the rank of Commander in 1846, and was made a C.B. for his services in the Burmese War. He was promoted to flag rank in 1868, and to the rank of Vice-Admiral in 1873, in which year he was also made a Knight of the Bath. Sir John Tarleton was successively Controller of the Coastguard, a Lord of the Admiralty, and Admiral-Superintendent of Naval Reserves. He was granted an Admiral's "good service" pension in 1870, and went on the retired list in 1873. He received from the Royal Humane Society and from the Congress of the United States medals for saving life. Sir John Tarleton married in 1861 a daughter of Baron Dimsdale, of Camfield Place, Herts.

THE LATE REAR-ADMIRAL SIR J. W. TARLETON, K.C.B.

The portrait is from a photograph by the London Stereoscopic Company.

THE LATE M. OFFENBACH.

This popular composer of opera buffa music, who died last week, was born at Cologne, the son of Jewish parents, about sixty years ago. He received his musical education at the Paris Conservatoire, and, on completing his studies, was engaged as chef d'orchestre at the Théâtre Français, in Paris, in 1847. He achieved his first reputation by setting to music several of La Fontaine's fables, and by his performances as a violoncellist. He remained at the Théâtre Français until 1855, when he undertook the management of the new Théâtre des Bouffes Parisiens. He there formed a company whose performances have not been confined to France, but who have occasionally visited this country and Germany. His first piece, "Les Deux Aveugles," was produced at the Bouffes Parisiens, but did not meet with the same favour that was bestowed on his "Orphée aux Enfers," produced in 1869. The year 1861 was notable for the production of two pieces, "Le Chanson de Fortunio" and "Le Roman Comique." He then received from the Emperor Napoleon III. the decoration of the Legion of Honour. From that period he has given to the world a large number of light lively operettas and a series of burlesque operas, by which he is best known. These include "La Belle Heléne," produced in 1864; "Le Barbe Bleue," in 1865; the "Grande Duchesse," in 1867; "La Perichole," in 1868; "Les Brigands," in the following year; and "Le Roi Carotte" in 1872. His later works include "Geneviève de Brabant;" "Le Corsair Noir," a three-act opera produced in Vienna in September, 1872; "La Jolie Parfumeuse," a three-act opera brought out at the Rénaissance in Paris in December, 1873; a one-act opera, produced at the Bouffes Parisiens in May, 1874; "Un Voyage dans la Lune," a piece in four acts and twenty-three tableaux, produced at the Gaîté in 1875; "Madame l'Archiduc" in 1876; "Le Docteur Ox," a fairy opera, in three acts, produced at the Varieties in 1877; and "Madame Favart" a year or so since. Most of these have obtained high popularity in every country of Europe.

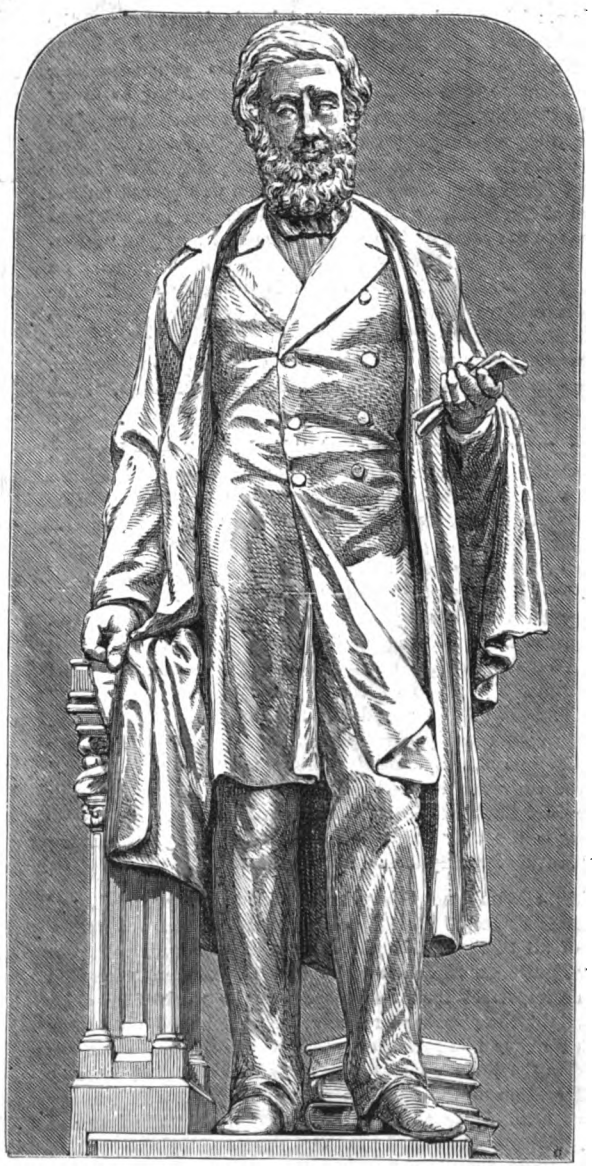
The portrait is from a photograph by the London Stereoscopic Company.

THE LATE LIEUTENANT E. S. MARSH.

Among the officers killed in the sortie of the British garrison from Candahar, on Aug. 16, was Everard Swaine Marsh, a second lieutenant of the 7th Royal Fusiliers, He was second son of the Rev. William Marsh, Vicar of Wethersfield, Essex. He was educated at Wellington College, and by Professor Wolffram of Blackheath as private tutor; he afterwards passed out of the final examination at Sandhurst, second on the list. He accompanied the relief force which was sent out to cover the retreat of the remnant of General Burrows' brigade under Brigadier General Brooke, who was killed in the same sortie.

The circumstances under which this young officer came by his death are not without a touching interest. We gave last week the portrait and memoir of his comrade, Frederick Wood, a second lieutenant of the same regiment, who also fell upon that occasion. A letter from one of their seniors in the regiment, describing the incident as follows, relates how Everard Marsh was killed in the attempt to save his wounded brother-officer:—"The Fusiliers lost twenty-nine killed and twenty-seven wounded, besides two officers killed and two wounded; two men and one officer since dead. Poor little Wood was the first officer of ours hit, and when being carried back in the dooly, two bearers were shot and two bolted. 'Don't leave me, Marsh,' he said to his brother subaltern, one of the nicest boys I ever met. He replied, 'I'll do the best I can for you, old fellow.'

THE LATE M. OFFENBACH, COMPOSER.



He and three men then lifted the dóoly, when poor Marsh fell, shot through the heart. One other man was shot through the head, and the other two pulled Wood out and carried him in anyhow. Poor little chap! he died inside the gate, having no less than five bullets in him. Major Vandeleur was dreadfully wounded in the right shoulder, but managed to get in on Conolly's horse. They had to take off his right arm from the shoulder, and he died the night after the operation. It was a dreadful morning's work. How any man escaped out of the cross-fire when retreating between the two villages on the right, or how any got back from the treble fire on the left front, I cannot tell. The Fusiliers behaved splendidly, but no man can perform impossibilities."

The portrait of Lieutenant Marsh is from a photograph by Messrs. Elliott and Fry.

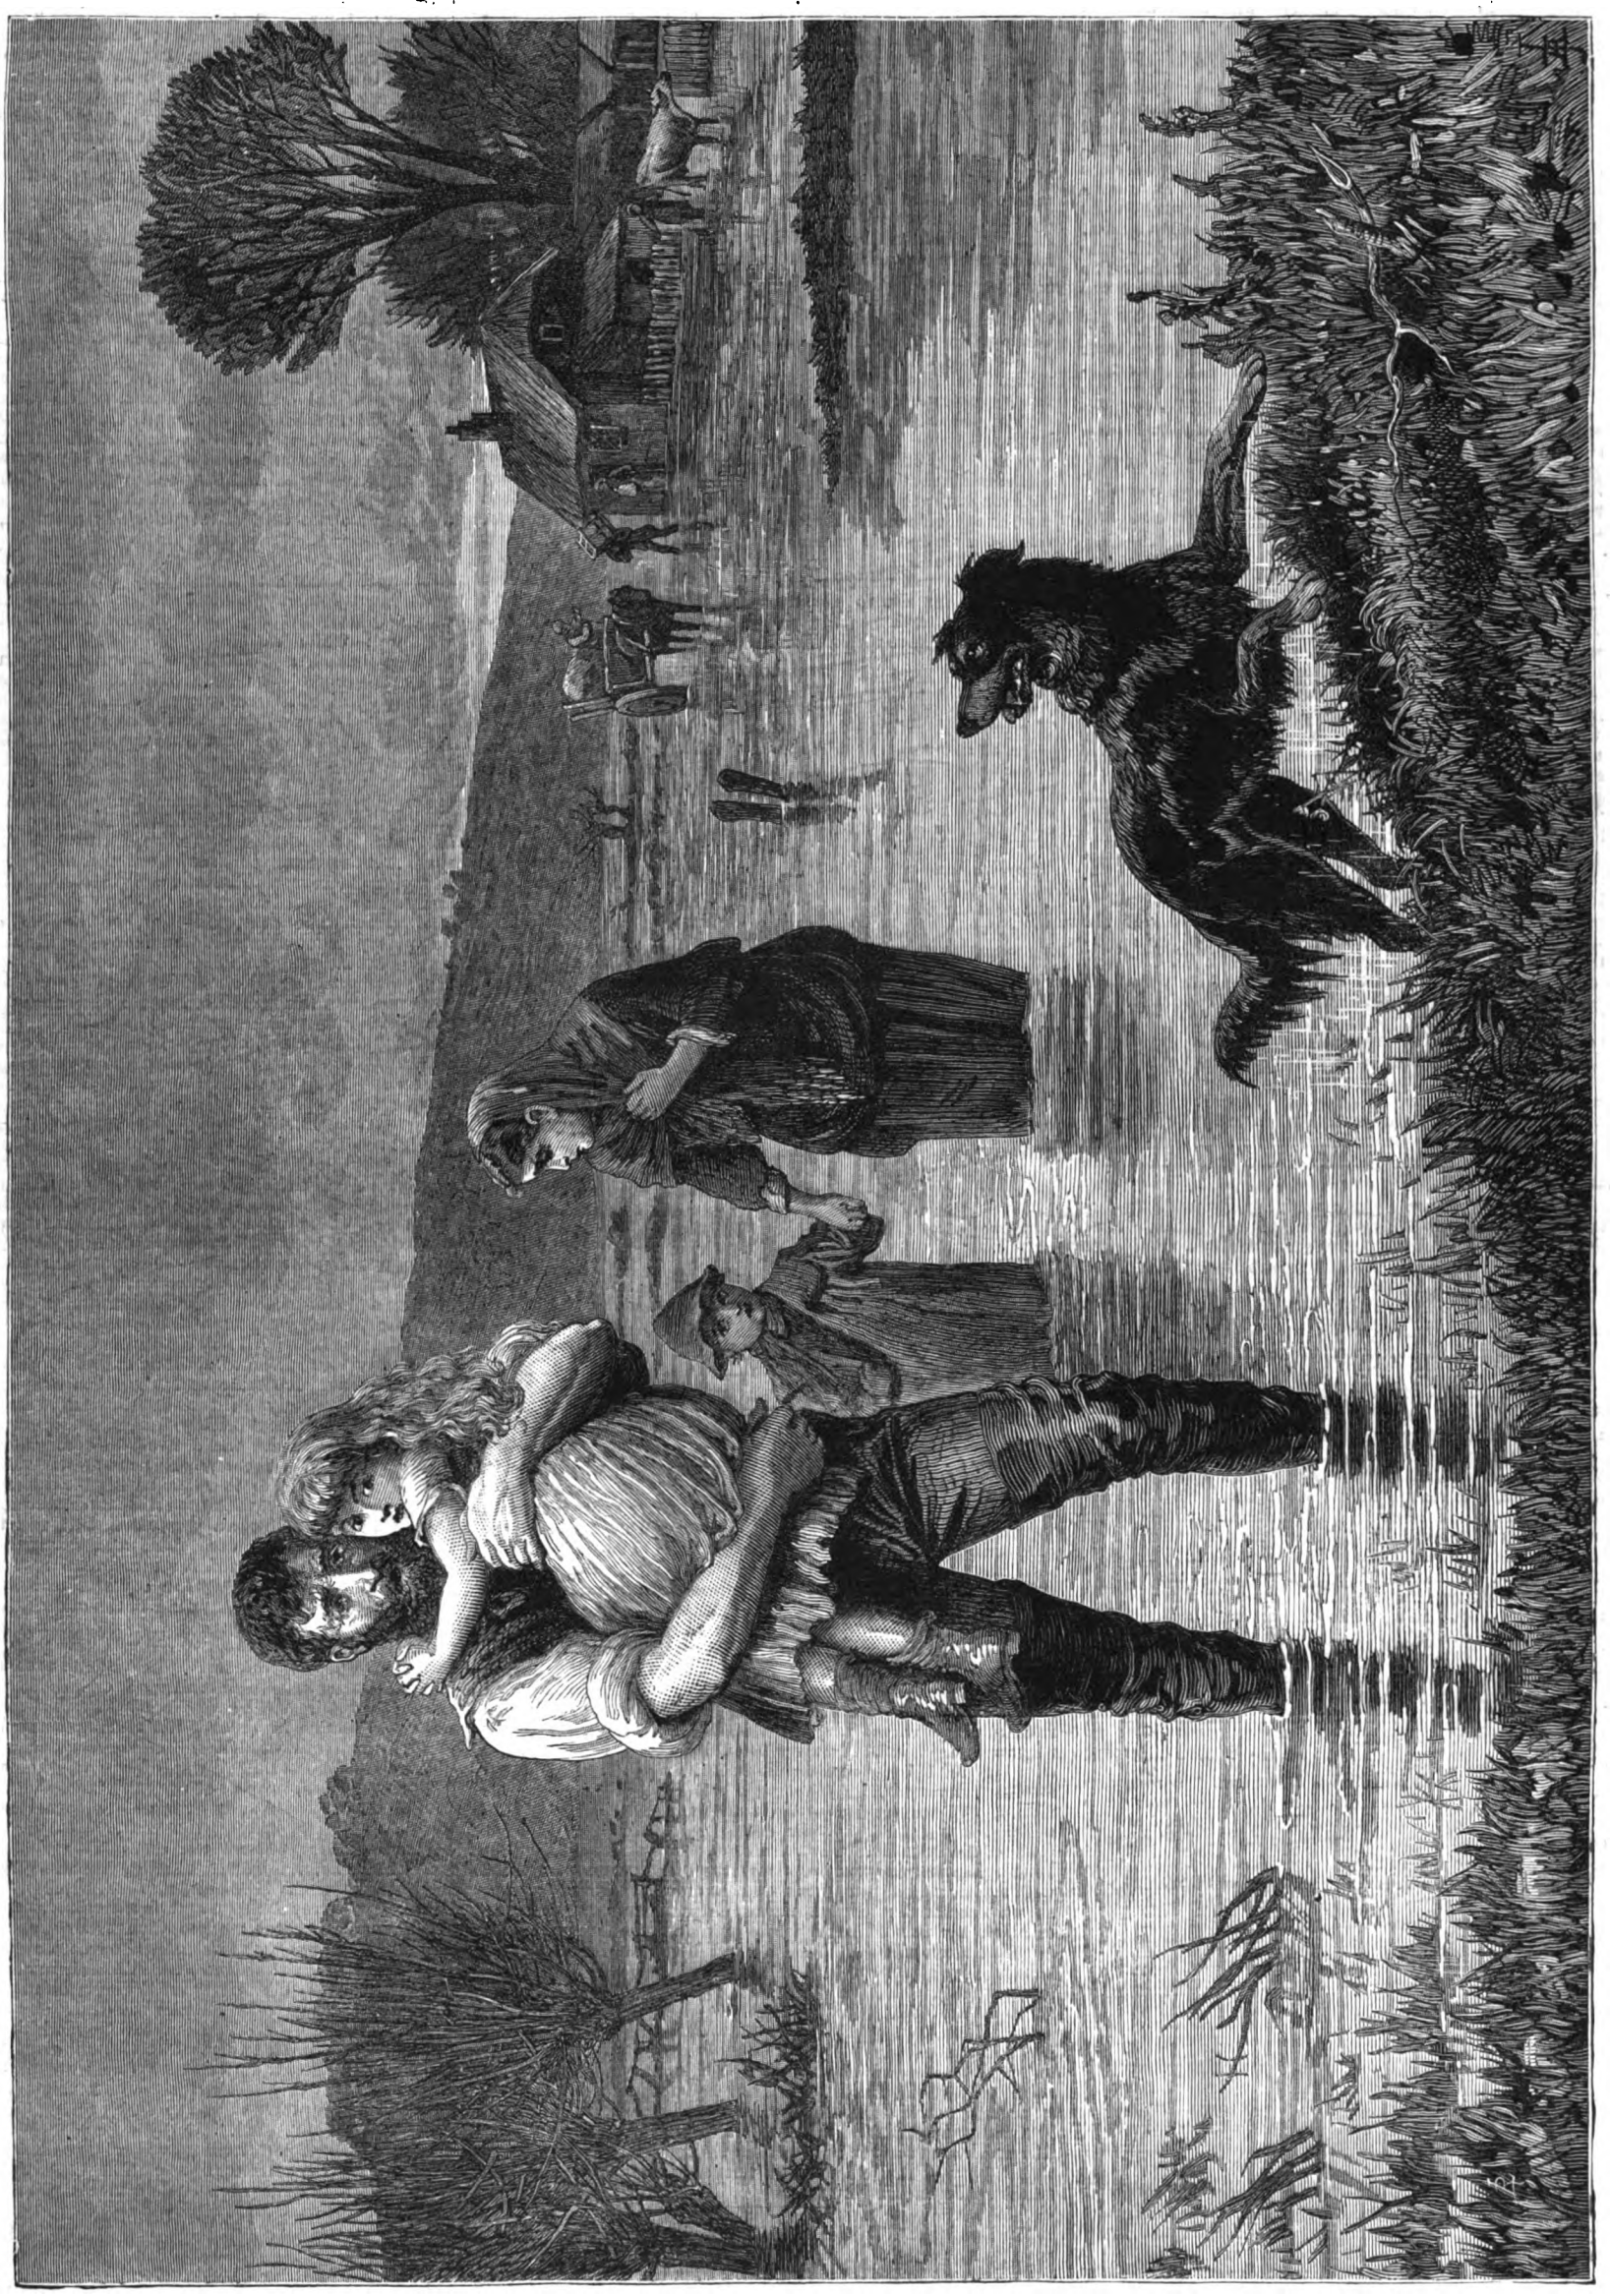
With reference to Lieutenant F. P. F. Wood, it should be mentioned that he was the elder son of the Rev. Frederic Wood, Rector of Erwarton, Suffolk, and eldest grandchild of Mr. Thomas Wood, J.P. and D.L., of Coxhoe Hall, Durham, and of Dumbleton Hall, Evesham.

STATUE OF THE EARL OF DEVON AT EXETER.

The city of Exeter, pleasantly seated amidst the green and wooded hills that rise along the banks of its river, has preserved many picturesque features of antiquity in its streets; but has nevertheless admitted great modern improvements and artistic adornments. The general effect of these is rather surprising to most visitors, as was lately testified at the meeting there of the Sanitary Institute of Great Britain. On arriving at the Queen-street station, the stranger finds himself at the foot of Northernhay, one of the most beautiful urban pleasure-grounds in England. It is a lofty bank, the scarped face of the hill upon which the Castle of Exeter, called Rougemont Castle, formerly stood, but is now covered with a grove of stately elms, and laid out as a public garden with much care and taste. Here are the statues, by an Exeter sculptor, Mr.

STATUE OF THE EARL OF DEVON AT EXETER.

THE LATE LIEUTENANT E. S. MARSH, KILLED IN THE SORTIE FROM CANDAHAR.



E. B. Stephens, A.R.A., of several eminent local worthies; the late Sir T. D. Acland, M.P. for North Devon, and the late Mr. John Dinham, a benevolent Exeter tradesman, who founded a conspicuous range of almshouses on St. David's Hill. The Albert Museum, which has some architectural beauty, stands close by. A short walk from Northernhay, through a handsome, cheerful street containing the Higher Market-house, the Post Office, and other important buildings, reaches the centre of High-street. It is very commodious for town traffic; and here, in the very heart of the bright little city, are wide openings to the Cathedral Yard, which has a well-preserved space of grassy turf and shady trees, and further towards Southernhay, with its gardens and shrubberies facing mansions of a superior class. Opposite the newly opened entrance from High-street into Bedford-circus, leading to the Exeter Theatre, was erected, not long ago, that creditable work of art, Mr. E. B. Stephens's bronze group, "The Deer-slayer," of which we gave an Illustration when the model was shown in the Exhibition of the Royal Academy. It has now been removed, from the inclosure of Bedford-circus, to a more appropriate site in the Northernhay Public Garden; and its former place is occupied by the same artist's bronze statue of the Earl of Devon, which was publicly unveiled yesterday week.

The ancient family of Courtenay, the Earls of Devon especially, have many old and intimate historical associations with Exeter; their noble seat on the estuary of the Exe, Powderham Castle, being distant but seven miles from this city. The present Earl, who was M.P. for South Devon till his accession to the Peerage, has always been much esteemed by his neighbours, for merits and services which they are best able to appreciate. They have bestowed upon him the rare compliment of putting up his statue during his lifetime. Mr. E. B. Stephens has designed and executed this work in a manner which seems to have won general approval at Exeter, to judge from the following notice of it in the Western Times:—"The Earl stands with his right hand resting on a pedestal, whilst in the upraised left hand he holds a roll of papers. The artist has been happy in moulding the figure in the attitude characteristic of the noble Earl, the body being well braced up, the head a little on one side, and the entire carriage is dignified, but at the same time quiet and easy. The dress immediately strikes one with an air of familiarity, the artist having thrown over the shoulders of the statue a representation of the style of Inverness cloak usually worn by Earl Devon. Looked at from every point, there is something in which one recognises the individuality of the noble Earl, and we cannot pay the artist a higher compliment than that which is conveyed in the verdict that the statue is faithful to life. The height of the figure is about eight feet, the weight is two tons, and the metal is bronze, and the clearness and perfection of the details of the work show that no better material could be used for the purposes of street decoration. The pedestal on which the Earl's right hand rests is of a decorated ecclesiastical character, and the design may in some measure be taken as indicating the well-known taste of Earl Devon for works of art and for matters ecclesiastical." The pedestal upon which the figure stands is a massive block of granite from the Cheesewring, supplied by Messrs. Stephens and Son, of Fore-street, Exeter. On the front of the pedestal is a bronze plate, given by Messrs. Garton and King, bearing the words:—"William Reginald, Eleventh Earl of Devon. A Tribute of Respect and Affection from many Friends." On the reverse side of the pedestal are Wordsworth's lines:—

> Who, not content that former worth stand fast,
> Looks forward, persevering to the last,
> From well to better, daily self surpassed.

The statue at the unveiling was presented to the city. The ceremony was performed, in the Earl of Devon's presence, by the Right Hon. Sir Stafford Northcote, late Chancellor of the Exchequer, who resides near Exeter. Earl Fortescue, the Earl of Portsmouth, Sir T. D. Acland, M.P., and other gentlemen of position, with the Mayor of Exeter, Mr. W. H. Ellis, and Mr. S. C. Hamlyn, chairman of the committee for the statue, took part in the proceedings.

Digitized by Google

FLOODED OUT. BY NORMAN TAYLER.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

Digitized by Google

PARISIAN SAYINGS AND DOINGS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Paris, Tuesday, Oct. 12.

The honours of the political week have been undoubtedly for Félix Pyat, who has written a rhetorical panegyric of regicide, and originated the idea of a public subscription of five centimes to buy a pistol of honour for Bérezowski, who shot at the Emperor of Russia while he was at Paris in 1867, and who is now languishing in New Caledonia. The arm is to bear the date, 1867, and the inscription: "Paris, Moscow, Varsovie. Au vengeur de trois peuples, au justicier de deux tyrans, à l'ouvrier Bérezowski, les ouvriers français reconnaissants." The pistol is to cost 200f., and it will therefore require 4000 subscribers, just the number of voters who by electing Trinquet forced the Government to vote the Amnesty. The Trinquet electoral committee have taken the matter up, and by this time the subscription must have been nearly covered. In looking over the lists one is struck by the number of women who have subscribed. The women, indeed, take a very active part in the movement of the French proletariate. Augustine Chiffon, Louise Michel, and citoyenne Rouzade exercise a great influence amongst the people by their example and their words. The reader may think that all this is very trivial, and that the French Socialists and Communists are mere dreamers. On the contrary, they are earnest and active. They mean business, and the fact that the journals of the classes dirigeante ignore their existence altogether and make them the butt of their witticisms only proves that those journals are written by men who are wilfully blind. The Bérezowski subscription has of course been scoffed at. The best thing has been said by La France, which dubs Félix Pyat with the title of "Consulting Assassin," and suggests that it is about time for him to operate in person. In 1870 Félix Pyat started in his journal, Le Combat, a similar subscription to buy a gun to shoot the King of Prussia. The subscription was covered and the gun bought, and nobody has heard of it since. It appears that no volunteer regicide presented himself to make use of the gun. Finally, to finish up this Bérezowski case, La Commune threatens the Government, if it refuses to amnesty him, to elect him deputy, and so force the hand of the Government, as was done in the Trinquet case. There appears to be no truth in the statement that the caustic and rhetorical Pyat is to be prosecuted. At least, he himself has heard nothing of it.

Nevertheless, there is no lack of press prosecutions, apart from those of the pornographic journals. At present three papers are prosecuted on political grounds, the Citoyen, for an article on President Grévy, who was compared to a "Major de table d'hôte;" the Triboulet, for insulting President Grévy; and La Trique, a new satirical journal, which was seized last week at its printing office.

It is almost useless to attempt to give any coherent account of the intentions or deliberations of the Ferry Cabinet on any subject whatever. The Ministers arrive at one decision one day and at another the next, and that, too, not only in the matter of the Eastern Question, but also in that of the application of those tiresome religious decrees which M. Constans appears to find more difficult of execution than he had imagined. It was expected that some dozen Capucin fathers would have been expelled from their monastery yesterday, but it was decided at the last moment that President Grévy should be invited to give a little respite to the rabbits of Mont-sous-Vaudrey, and to come to Paris to aid the hesitating Ministry by his advice. M. Grévy is expected here to-night, and to-morrow an important Cabinet Council will be held to settle the date of the meeting of the Chambers, the date of the municipal elections, and the method of the execution of the decrees.

Meanwhile reports from various parts of the country represent the Jesuit colleges as being carried on just as usual. The titular proprietors have been changed, but the Jesuit fathers who were expelled in August have returned simply in the garb of secular priests, the General of their order having relieved them, with the Pope's assent, of their monastic vows.

The Jung de Wœstyne case came before the eighth Chamber of the Tribunal Correctionnel to-day. Three journals were involved in the affair. The Gaulois, Gil Blas, and Paris Journal. The Tribunal ordered the hearing of each journal separately.

On Sunday last a bronze equestrian statue of Joan of Arc was unveiled at Compiègne, the town where the Maid of Orleans was taken prisoner by a Picardy archer in the English service. As a work of art, this statue does not do much credit to its sculptor, M. Leroux. It is curious that Joan of Arc has never been a source of happy inspiration either to painters, or sculptors, or even to poets. What can be said of Voltaire's "Pucelle," or of Casimir Delavigne's commonplace verses? Bastien Lepage's picture in the Salon this year was strange, and that is all. Falguière's statue of her is by no means a great work; and every tourist is expected to laugh at Frémiet's equestrian abomination which adorns the Place du Pyramides. The ceremony at Compiègne on Sunday was chiefly remarkable for the unexpected arrival of M. Sadi Carnot, who came down expressly to pronounce this phrase, "Le gouvernement veut la paix."

Two important theatres have produced new pieces this week. At the Porte Saint Martin we have had "L'Arbre de Noël," a spectacular piece, on which a large sum of money has been spent. The fairy story, about the novelty and wit of which we have heard so much, is of the most sickening stupidity. The scenery and costumes are very splendid and abundant, as the piece contains no less than thirty tableaux. It will doubtless be forced into a success. At the Vaudeville MM. Gondinet and D'Arlhac had played a piece called "Les Grands Enfants." It is poorly constructed, but full of interesting and amusing episodes. The play is supposed to be directed against divorce; but, after all, the authors do not declare themselves either way. Their chief object, I imagine, was to get the most fun out of the various situations. The comedy was well received.

Offenbach, it appears, had not written a single note for the Variétés piece, "Le Cabaret des Lilas." "Belle Lurette," on the contrary, was finished. "Les Contes d'Hoffmann," to be produced at the Opéra Comique, has to be arranged for the orchestra. This task has been intrusted to M. Guiraud, who will make use of Offenbach's notes.

Mdlle. Sarah Bernhardt will sail from Havre for New York on board the Amérique on Saturday next. She will take with her all her pictures, sculptures, and a large quantity of bibelots. As soon as she arrives at New York she will open her atelier and give æsthetic teas. There seems every probability that her success in America will be as colossal as that great country itself. At any rate, if réclame can do anything, there is no one who knows better how to manage it than Mdlle. Bernhardt.

Bressant, the famous actor of the Comédie Française, is about to leave Paris in order to live in the country. His collection of pictures and objects of art will be sold on Nov. 25. He has some fine pictures and bronzes, and his sale will be the first important one of the season. T. C.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

An important change for the better has this week taken place in the aspect of the European political crisis, occasioned by the dispute between Turkey and the Powers represented at the Congress of Berlin. It had been rumoured that there was a proposal made to those Powers by the British Government for the sending of their combined naval squadrons from Cattaro to the Ægean Sea, with a view to some coercive measures against Turkey, probably in the nature of a blockade, or sequestration of the Customs revenue, at the ports of Smyrna and Salonica. But the expected necessity for any such measures has been obviated by the tardy consent of the Sultan to give up Dulcigno to the Prince of Montenegro. The following Note was delivered on Tuesday morning by the Porte to the foreign Ambassadors at Constantinople. The Note is dated "October 11, midnight":—

"The undersigned Minister of Foreign Affairs of his Majesty the Sultan is instructed by his Government to convey what follows to the knowledge of their Excellencies Messieurs les Ambassadeurs:—The Sublime Porte, desirous of giving a fresh proof of its loyalty and goodwill, declares that it will immediately give categorical instructions to the local authorities of Dulcigno for the cession of that locality to the Montenegro authorities by pacific means. A Convention will be drawn up to settle the conditions of that cession. The Ottoman Government, which only makes this sacrifice in view of avoiding the Naval Demonstration, hopes that the said measure will be entirely given up. The undersigned takes this opportunity, &c."

The above Note is the result of pressing counsels tendered by the German, Austrian, and French Ambassadors. We are now in hopes of the preservation of peace, if the Albanians will submit to the Sultan's decree, which has actually been published, for the peaceable surrender of Dulcigno; and if the Greeks will refrain from an invasion of Thessaly and Epirus, which the Sultan has never agreed to cede, wholly or in great part, to the Kingdom of Greece. He has consented to a "rectification of the Greek frontier," on the border of those provinces, but not to give up their principal towns, Jannina and Larissa, and the strategic position of Mezzovo. This question will have to wait for its settlement a while longer.

ON THE MARCH IN AFGHANISTAN.

The incident which is depicted in the Engraving on our front page, as having occurred in the returning march of a column of British troops from the scene of the late military campaign, is inspired by a timely remembrance of the duties of humanity, of compassion and kindness, that should always be cherished by good and brave soldiers amidst the inevitable scenes of distress attendant on war. A Ghazi, or devoted Mussulman warrior against the invading army of the Kaisar-i-Hind, whose power he has doubtless been taught to regard with dread and detestation, has been left, severely wounded in some fierce conflict, among the rocky passes of Afghanistan. He probably belongs to a local tribe, which has sent forth its militia to fight in the common cause of national antagonism to foreign and "infidel"—that is to say, non-Mussulman—domination. Perhaps the quick dispersion of their ill-armed, "unscientific," force by the English may have prevented them from carrying him off to his own village. It is more probable, however, that the village has been destroyed by a measure of warlike retaliation; for we see that his wife and children have quitted their home. This disconsolate woman, unveiled like many of the labouring class of Mohammedan females in those countries of Central Asia, has come to sit beside her poor helpless husband at the roadside. At the approach of the British troops the unhappy couple in this forlorn situation feel their hearts distracted by a mixture of rage and terror. The wounded man, unable to rise and make use of his matchlock gun, draws a pistol from the sash round his waist and lies ready to shoot the first of the hated strangers. But he is restrained by the hand of his wife, who mutely appeals to their pity by the mere display of such abject misery, though she cannot speak to them, and will not make an imploring gesture. We are pleased already to perceive that the officer in command has taken these poor people under his generous protection.

"FLOODED OUT."

The subject of Mr. Norman Tayler's picture, which was in the last Exhibition of the Society of Painters in Water Colours, may impress the mind with greater sense of truth at this moment, since we have just had sad accounts of the prevalent floods in some East Midland shires of England. The lowlands through which the river Trent, with the Derwent and other tributaries, finds its course before turning northward to the Humber, seem to have been afflicted, last week, during several days following the excessive rains, with inundations causing much damage to agricultural property, and to household safety and comfort. Cambridgeshire and Lincolnshire have also suffered from this visitation of superabundant waters; and there was considerable danger about Sheffield, of a sudden rush and rise of the streams that flow down comparatively narrow valleys into the river Don, by which some terrible disasters have been occasioned in former years. The actual mischief, however, has this time not been so great as was feared, and we trust that the autumn and winter may pass without any such deplorable calamities in these or in other parts of the country. The scene of distress which Mr. Norman Tayler has represented in his picture, though not attended with loss or risk of life, must engage our heartfelt sympathy, as we cannot but reflect upon the privations likely to be endured by this humble rustic family, who are suddenly expelled from their little homestead by the rising flood that has already submerged the neighbouring fields and lanes. The husband and wife, with their two young children, wading through the cold water to reach higher ground, have left behind them, in the cottage, their small possessions of furniture and other domestic chattels, to be placed in a cart for easier and speedier conveyance. Their cow is also on its way from the byre, while their faithful dog, which does not see any harm in wading or swimming, frisks on before the sorrowful party. Let us hope that kind friends or kinsfolk, living at no great distance, will receive them with a compassionate welcome, and that they will find themselves not entirely ruined when the floods have gone down.

In London 2261 births and 1398 deaths were registered last week. Allowing for increase of population, the births were 227 below, while the deaths exceeded by 2, the average numbers in the corresponding week of the last ten years. The deaths included 5 from smallpox, 16 from measles, 63 from scarlet fever, 15 from diphtheria, 19 from whooping-cough, 25 from different forms of fever, and 64 from diarrhœa. The deaths referred to diseases of the respiratory organs, which had increased from 124 to 199 in the four preceding weeks, further rose to 266 last week, and exceeded by 42 the corrected weekly average: of these 149 were attributed to bronchitis and 69 to pneumonia. Different forms of violence caused 55 deaths.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

Newmarket does not appear to have suffered quite so much as London and other parts of the country from the recent plague of rain; and, as there was a fine drying wind on Sunday, the "going" on the following day, when the Second October Meeting began, was really very fair. The five days' programme was inaugurated tamely enough; but, after Monday, there were plenty of exciting events on each day's card to satisfy the most confirmed grumbler. The pretty Thebais, another of the all-conquering Hermits, had a couple of virtual walks-over for nice little stakes; and Lord Rosebery's recent turn of luck continued with Prudhomme, who proved good enough to secure the Cesarewitch Trial Plate from Mr. Dodd and three others. Favorita's long career of victory was at length checked, both Brag and Mynheer finishing in front of her in a T.Y.C. Plate; but, of course, she had a good deal the worst of the weights, and, moreover, must be sadly in need of a long rest. In spite of her 9 lb. penalty, Bal Gal had matters all her own way in the Clearwell Stakes, for Iroquois, who was also fully penalised, has gone utterly to the bad since he won the Chesterfield Stakes at the July Meeting, while the other four runners were mere platers. Fordham secured his fourth win during the day, in the Ditton Stakes, on Traveller's Joy, the newly named filly by Adventurer—Wild Myrtle.

Tuesday was big with the fate of the Cesarewitch, and we may as well tell the story of that race before touching on the minor events. Little change took place in the betting during the morning. Cipolata (7st. 8 lb.) and Petronel (7 st. 5 lb.) closed in equal demand at 5 to 1, while Robert the Devil (8 st. 6 lb.) receded slightly, and Ulster (6 st. 9 lb.) made a decided "Irish rise" in the quotations. Chippendale (9 st. 4 lb.) was in great demand, and he was one of the few saddled in the Birdcage, the great majority being put to rights in the Ditch stables. The twenty-one runners were at the post in capital time; but three or four breaks-away occurred, and it was nearly a quarter of an hour after time when the flag fell. When they were fairly on their legs, Eurus took a clear lead, and cut out the work at a cracking pace, Retreat, Stockmar, Seahorse, Schoolboy, and Unready heading the others, of whom Ulster, Pacific, Chippendale, and Wallenstein were well up; while the last four were Cipolata, Robert the Devil, Petronel, and Exeter, with the exception of Caroline and Rochampton, who were tailed off from the start. Without any material change they ran behind the Ditch, and when on the flat it was seen that Eurus was beaten, and that Retreat, in the centre of the course, with Schoolboy, Pacific, Unready, and Stockmar, were forming the front rank, while wide on the far side were Petronel and Ulster, Sea Horse having beaten a retreat, and Robert the Devil being a few lengths behind these in the centre. Meanwhile, on the Stand side were Chippendale and Cipolata, though until reaching the T.Y.C. winning-post they were well behind. Before they had gained this point Petronel and Ulster were in difficulties, and Retreat, with Schoolboy, was now going on in front of Wallenstein, The Star, Unready, and Stockmar, who were on pretty level terms, Robert the Devil in the centre being behind these, with Cipolata and Chippendale on the lower ground now close up. So they went to the Bushes, where Retreat was still in command of Stockmar, Schoolboy, The Star, and Wallenstein, the latter of whom coming down the hill lost his place, an opportunity at once taken advantage of by Robert the Devil, who then came through, while Chippendale and Cipolata began to gain on the front rank. Coming out of the Dip, Retreat and Stockmar were in trouble, Unready and Pacific having previously been done with, so Robert the Devil went to the front. Cipolata at the same time passing Schoolboy, Retreat, and The Star, went on in pursuit of the St. Leger winner; but, although she made a game struggle, it was utterly useless, as directly Robert the Devil had taken up the running the race was all over, the verdict being very easily secured by four lengths; a length between second and third. Retreat was fourth, clear of Chippendale fifth, Schoolboy sixth, Stockmar seventh, Exeter eighth; then came Wallenstein and Ulster, with Eurus, Pacific, and Ridotto whipping in, with the exception of Caroline, who walked in by herself. Such a performance as that of Robert the Devil entitles him to rank as one of the best three-year-olds ever seen. No horse of his age has ever carried such a weight successfully in the Cesarewitch; indeed, Audrey (8 st. 5 lb.) is the most highly-weighted animal that has ever won the race, and she was a five-year-old. No victory could possibly have been more popular than that of Messrs. Brewer and Blanton, and it is reported that they and the party intimately connected with the stable have won something like £80,000 in bets. Cipolata performed well, but the St. Leger form was more than confirmed, and though Petronel and Ulster showed good speed for more than half the distance, neither of them could stay the course. The Burwell Stakes was perhaps the most interesting of the other races of the day, and it appears that Elizabeth has lost the fine turn of speed that she possessed at the beginning of the year, as she could make no show at all, and was unplaced to Golden Eye. Savoyard, who has long been talked of as a likely youngster, credited Lord Rosebery with a £100 Plate; and Apollo had not much trouble in beating the roaring Pride of the Highlands in the Royal Stakes.

The Middle Park Plate was, of course, the great event of Wednesday, and, in spite of the full penalty having invariably proved a fatal bar to success, the hitherto invincible Bal Gal was freely backed against the field. She, however, fared no better than her predecessors, and could only finish fourth to St. Louis, who, in Fordham's hands, gained a very easy victory for Mr. Crawfurd. The colt, who had never run previously, is by Hermit—Lady Audley, and is therefore a half brother to Pilgrimage. He cost no less than 2200 gs. at Mr. Cookson's annual yearling sale at Doncaster last season; Town Moor was second, and Lucy Glitters third. The Select Stakes, in which Toastmaster very cleverly upset the odds laid upon Mask, was the only other important race on the card.

The Ridgway Club (Lytham) Meeting, which was brought off last week, proved very successful in every way, and the hares were so stout, and stood up so long, that most of the stakes were divided between three or four dogs, their owners wisely declining to run them to death by fighting matters out to the bitter end. Mr. Hornby's Handicraftsman, a son of that well-known performer Handicraft, ran into the last three of the North Lancashire Stakes. The Clifton Cup, in which nine Waterloo dogs were engaged, was remarkable for the hollow defeat of Dear Erin by Hilda in the first round, but the former was amiss only a week ago, which detracts from the merit of the performance. Still Hilda won her other two courses, though not in the most dashing style, and took a fourth of the stake. Mr. Pilkington's kennel was quite out of form, and Duenna, whom he purchased for a large sum, succumbed to Subpœna, in the second ties of the Lytham Cup. The Scotch kennels were in rare form, and took a share of every stake except the Lytham Cup.

On Saturday last Thomas Blackman beat Harry Clasper very easily indeed in a sculling-match from Putney to Mortlake. The latter's form was perfect, but he had evidently flown a little too high in challenging Blackman.

Digitized by Google

THE PLAYHOUSES.

Last Saturday, at the Court Theatre, in the presence of an audience as crowded as it was refined, took place the first performance of the tragedy of "Mary Stuart," adapted, and it may be said remodelled and rewritten, from the German original of Johann Christoph Friedrich von Schiller, by the Hon. Lewis Wingfield. Mr. Carlyle has said quite enough about the general ineligibility for modern theatrical purposes of the illustrious Würtemburger's grandiose but wearisome drama. If he could devote five whole acts to the exposition of the incidents which occurred between the condemnation of the hapless Mary to death and the execution of her sentence, how many acts, it has been elsewhere asked, would he have required had he begun at the beginning of her troubled career—had he traced her from the Palaces of the Louvre and Chenonçeaux, thence to Holyrood House, thence to the Kirk of Field, Carberry Hill, Lochleven, and Dumbarton; and, so through the many English castles in which during a period of nineteen years she was imprisoned, to the ultimate catastrophe on the scaffold in the hall at Fotheringay? The play in twenty-six acts which mad Nat Lee wrote would have been but the merest interlude in comparison with a complete Marian epopœa from such an exhaustive pen as Schiller's. Even Mr. Swinburne, in his exquisitely poetical treatment of the same fertile theme has only reached the Boswell episode; and the life-drama of Mary Queen of Scots, in its entirety, might rival in oppressiveness Guicciardini's History of the Italian Wars. A culprit condemned to the galleys, Lord Macaulay tells us, was once offered as an alternative punishment the reading of Guicciardini's tremendous work; but he "gave out" at the War of Pisa, and went to the galleys gleefully.

Schiller was a wonderful writer; and "Mary Stuart" is, in many respects, a very fine play. So are "Wallenstein" and "The Robbers" (of which the frequenters of Her Majesty's Theatre would have naught, as the libretto to the opera of "I Masnadieri"), "Don Carlos," and "The Maid of Orleans" very fine plays; still not one of these could, with any chance of success, be produced intact on our stage. "William Tell" is, perhaps, the most actable of all the pieces in the Schillerian repertory; but were it presented at a London theatre it would require, in the way of excision, the application of the axe, rather than the pruning knife. A distinguished French playwright, M. Pierre Lebrun, tried his hand at a compressing of Schiller's unwieldy drama at the Théâtre Français, sixty years ago. The famous Mdlle. Duchenois was the Mary; and the more famous Talma played Leicester. The piece seems, at this time of day, a weak and impertinent production. The more recent "Maria Stuarda," so splendidly impersonated by Madame Adelaide Ristori, was a slightly altered version of the Italian translation from Schiller by Maffei. Mr. Lewis Wingfield has very wisely refrained from any attempt to patch, cobble, truncate, and disfigure the text of Schiller. He has not cut down the stately old three-decker to the proportions of what, in nautical technology, used to be called a "razee." He has left, the rather, the fine old galleon laid up in ordinary, and painted with the dockyard drab, and he has built by her side, in quite another slip, and on quite other lines, a smart, taut, seagoing ship. Only downright ill-nature and injustice could stigmatise Mr. Wingfield's "Mary Stuart" (written in very ringing and in portions very polished blank verse) as a dull play. It is, on the contrary, from first to last, intensely interesting; but that it should not be dull, and intolerably dull, is positively a marvel. The plot is merely the congener of that of Victor Hugo's "Dernier Jour d'un Condamné." Is Mary to have her head cut off or not? that is the pivot on which the entire interest of the play runs. Besides the great scene in the third act in the park at Fotheringay, when "the trampled worm turns," and Mary overwhelms Elizabeth with scorn and insult, there are scarcely any "situations" of moment. The suicide of Mortimer in the fourth act is an absurd anti-climax; the signature of the death-warrant by Elizabeth, which is led up to by some excellent writing and acting, is marred in its effect by the too "stagey" yells of a mob outside; and the parting of Mary from her attendants and the procession to the block are only the realisation of long foregone conclusions. In a word, "Mary Stuart," both the old and the new, must be considered as dramas made up of dialogue; and dialogue may be dramatic, but is not, per se, a drama. Why Mr. Wingfield's able paraphrase of Schiller is, from the beginning to the end, replete with the deepest interest is simply due to this:—that, from first to last, we are watching the course and conflict of the most tumultuous and most virulent of human passions: love that is "strong as death;" jealousy that is "cruel as the grave." In Elizabeth we have the proud, imperious Tudor Princess, who has every reason to hate Mary as a Queen—who has hated and dreaded her from her youth, when the Scottish Queen denied the legitimacy of the daughter of Anne Boleyn and claimed the Crown of England. But the political animosity which she entertains for her is far exceeded in steady bitterness by the hatred which she feels for her as a Woman. How she abhors her; and how she fears her! Mary is younger and comelier than she. She hates her own red hair and painted face and attenuated form; she rages at the thought of her rival still beautiful, still loving and beloved, after nineteen years' cruel captivity. The only wonder is that, in the park at Fotheringay, she does not make a rush at Mary and slash her across the face with her riding-switch. Mary's vengeful feelings towards Elizabeth take, characteristically enough, just such a shape as might be expected in a highly accomplished Frenchwoman. In her heart of hearts she detests her Queenly persecutor; but she can be polite to her, she can pathetically entreat her as "Sister," and kneel before and fawn upon her, so long as she thinks that her object can be gained by submission; but when that hope is gone she turns upon her with the fury of a wild beast, and rends her. The entire scheme of action between the two Queens in Schiller, as interpreted by Mr. Wingfield, is a Duel; and a duel is more interesting than a pitched battle.

It may fairly be said of Madame Helena Modjeska's impersonation of Mary Stuart that it is so exquisitely pathetic, so winning, so thoroughly "loveable" that, if we yielded to the oblivion of the moment—as well we might—and fancied that she was the real Mary who was done to death at Fotheringay, we should at once forgive and forget the murder of Darnley, the scandalous alliance with Bothwell, the equivocal episode of Rizzio, and the hundred-and-one dark scandals that cling like burrs to Mary's regal mantle. When the old men saw Helen at the Scæan gate, they forgave her all the woes of Troy. The pathos of Madame Modjeska never becomes sickly nor maudlin. That she should be sunk from time to time in the deepest dejection, is but natural, looking at what she has suffered, and the awful doom with which she is menaced; and in wondrously artistic contrast with this normal sorrowfulness is the exuberant, the almost infantile manifestation of her joy, when, for a few brief moments, one bright streak of the light of Hope gleams across her gloomy path; and when, although still encircled by watchful guards, she treads the fresh green turf and breathes the pure air in the park at Fotheringay in comparative freedom. The blackest of clouds speedily obliterate the sunshine. Her interview with Elizabeth passes from cautious tentatives of reconciliation to bitterest recrimination, and culminates in the tremendous outburst of invective in which she tells her enemy that she is a base-born usurper, that the English people are the dupes of a deceiver, and that she, Mary Stuart, is the rightful Queen of England.

The parting of Mary with her female attendants in the Fifth Act was almost pathetically heartrending; and, looking at the supreme nature of the coming catastrophe, I am not prepared to say that the farewell was too protracted. But the curtain should have definitively fallen when Mary, given over to the custody of the sheriff, slowly passes from the stage on her last and dismal progress to the scaffold. I am reluctant, also, to object too stringently to the somewhat too obtrusive display of the large crucifix which Mary holds in her hands in the last scene:—because I may be told that such an exhibition of her piety is strictly historical; and because, perhaps, Madame Modjeska, may plead that she herself is a Catholic and is reluctant to change the conduct of her stage action for the reason that Protestant audiences entertain a strong objection to the too-marked parade of the emblems of Religion on the stage. But I do most strongly protest against the recitation by Madame Modjeska behind the scenes of sundry fragments of a low mass in the Latin tongue. Excerpts from the De Profundis and the Dies Iræ in a monotonous chant at the "wings" are as unnecessary as they are unseemly; and, besides, this funereal psalmody is only a vague refinement on the lugubrious chanting of the Penitential Friars heard behind the scenes in the banqueting-scene in Victor Hugo's "Lucrèce Borgia."

Too much praise cannot be bestowed on Miss Louise Moodie for the most artistic and most powerful manner in which she rendered the part of Elizabeth. The character is a repulsive one, and the sympathies of the audience are, throughout, against her; but against these disadvantages Miss Moodie bravely struggled. In two of the five acts she is the predominant female personage; nor, with herself as the central figure, did the interest for one moment flag. In the great scene of the third act (for which a view of the castle and park of Fotheringay has been superbly painted by Mr. William Beverly) Miss Moodie played on an artistic equality with Madame Modjeska. Politically her rival, she was dramatically her compeer—even to the extent that such an Iago as Mr. Hermann Vezin is the compeer of the best Othello that could be brought forward on the stage. Mr. John Clayton was bluff, chivalrous, and at times impassioned, in the wholly cloudy, unhistoric, and inconsistent part of Leicester; and Mr. Edward Price was grave, solid, and respectable as Lord Burleigh. He has only to talk; and Mr. Edward Price talked well. As the crack-brained Sir Edward Mortimer, who, in this "drama of dialogue," is the only conspicuous "man of action," Mr. J. R. Crauford was somewhat overweighted. Schiller's Mortimer, as distilled in Mr. Wingfield's alembic, should be a combination of the Admirable Crichton, Lord Herbert of Cherbury, Cinq Mars, and Anthony Babington; but Mr. Crauford failed either in speech, action, or appearance to rise above the level of an ordinary Gunpowder-Plot Conspirator. He would make a good Catesby. It was not the gentleman's fault that he had to die in so ridiculous a manner. On the other hand, the part of the high-minded, albeit austere, custodian of Mary, Sir Amias Paulet, was very impressively played by Mr. Clifford Cooper. The part of Hannah Kennedy, Mary's nurse, was acted with quiet effect by Miss M. A. Giffard. Altogether, Madame Helen Modjeska has every reason to be satisfied with the triumph which (in the presence of Mr. Gladstone, Earl Granville, and a whole host of political, social, and literary notabilities) she achieved at the Court on Saturday night; Mr. Wilson Barrett is to be congratulated on the highly successful commencement of his autumnal season of management; and Mr. Louis Wingfield is to be sincerely felicitated on the scholarship and the adroitness with which he has accomplished a most difficult, yet not by any means a thankless task; for his "Mary Stuart," as adapted for the use of Madame Modjeska, will probably remain an integral part of her répertoire.

The exigencies of space only permit me to record the production, on this same Saturday night, at the St. James's Theatre, and with complete success, of the three-act play of "William and Susan," founded on Douglas Jerrold's nautical drama of "Black-Eyed Susan," and adapted for modern usage by Mr. W. G. Wills, who has re-written the two first acts, while leaving the last almost entirely in its pristine integrity. When I say that Mr. Kendal was the William and Mrs. Kendal the Susan, and that the slight but characteristic part of the Admiral was sustained by Mr. Hare, I have said all that I am able to say about Mr. Wills's improvement on Douglas Jerrold, this week. I went to see "William and Susan" on Monday night, and was charmed with it; but it would be unjust not to make it the subject for a careful study, and it would be inexpedient to place the consideration of such a piece (which is one essentially of pathos) in direct juxtaposition with the pathetic "Mary Stuart." G. A. S.

MUSIC.

THE LEEDS FESTIVAL.

The third triennial music meeting at Leeds took place this week, the object having been, as before, in aid of the funds of the medical charities of that place—these being the General Infirmary, the Public Dispensary, the House of Recovery (or Fever Hospital), and the Hospital for Women and Children. The large and constantly increasing demands made on such institutions in such a locality incur expenses that cannot be adequately met by the voluntary contributions on which they mainly depend, and the success of the musical festival is therefore a matter of serious consequence.

The result of the experimental meeting of 1858 (on the occasion of the opening of the Townhall) was so encouraging as to lead to the establishment of triennial festivals, the first of which took place in 1874, and the second in 1877. The musical arrangements on each occasion have been of a very extensive kind; and not only by the general excellence of the performances has Leeds distinguished itself, but also by the production of new works. It was at the festival of 1858 that the late Sterndale Bennett's cantata "The May Queen" was produced, the composer having been the conductor on that occasion.

At the festivals of 1874 and 1877 Sir Michael Costa was the conductor, the latter of these occasions having brought forward Professor G. A. Macfarren's oratorio "Joseph," and a dramatic cantata entitled "The Fire-King," composed by Mr. W. Austin, of Leeds.

The festival just concluded has also been rendered special by the production of two important new compositions expressly written for it—Mr. Arthur Sullivan's sacred musical drama "The Martyr of Antioch," and Mr. J. F. Barnett's cantata "The Building of the Ship." A numerous and fine orchestra, comprising many of the most eminent instrumentalists, was led by Mr. Carrodus (of our Royal Italian Opera), the chorus having been of exceptional strength, and chiefly consisting of Yorkshire choristers, whose admirable singing has long been renowned—altogether about 420 performers.

The solo singers were Mesdames Albani, Patey, and Trebelli, Mrs. Osgood, Miss Anna Williams, Mr. E. Lloyd, Mr. Maas, Herr Henschel, Mr. H. Cross, and Mr. F. King. Mr. Arthur Sullivan having been the conductor. A long list of guarantors ensured the payment of the costs of the undertaking, the financial success of which—and the consequent benefit to the hospital—is expected to be great, the sale of tickets having been unusually large in advance of the occasion.

The festival opened with Mendelssohn's "Elijah" on Wednesday, and in the evening Mr. Barnett's cantata was produced. Thursday morning's performances included Mendelssohn's eight-part psalm "When Israel out of Egypt came," Beethoven's choral symphony, and Sterndale Bennett's "May Queen." In the evening Handel's "Samson" was given, with additional accompaniments written for the occasion by Mr. E. Prout. For yesterday (Friday) morning, Mr. Sullivan's new cantata was announced, to be followed by Beethoven's Mass in C, and Schubert's "Song of Miriam." In the afternoon an organ recital by Dr. Spark (organist of the Leeds Townhall) was to take place, and in the evening a concert comprising Cherubini's overture to "Anacreon," Joachim Raff's "Lenore" symphony, a new overture entitled "Mors Janua Vitæ," composed for the festival by Mr. T. Wingham; Bach's sacred cantata "O Light Everlasting," the finale to Mendelssohn's unfinished opera "Loreley," and a miscellaneous vocal selection, to which Madame Albani was to contribute.

The festival is to terminate to-day (Saturday) with Spohr's "Last Judgment," the first and second parts of Haydn's "Creation," and the "Gloria" from Handel's "Utrecht Jubilate," in the morning; and an organ recital by Dr. Spark in the afternoon. Of the performances we must speak next week.

CRYSTAL PALACE.

We have already given an outline of the arrangements for the twenty-fifth series of Saturday afternoon concerts, which began last week, when Joachim Raff's ninth and latest orchestral symphony was given for the first time in England. It forms the second of a series of four intended to illustrate the seasons, the remaining two having yet to be produced. The first, entitled "Frühlingsklange" ("Spring Sounds"), was performed at a Crystal Palace concert last November, and was noticed at the time. The work now referred to is called "In Summer-Time," and consists of three principal divisions, "A Hot Day," "The Hunt of the Fairies" (including "The Meet," "Oberon and Titania," "The Hunt," and "The Return"), and the finale, consisting of an "Eclogue" and "Harvest Home." There are more variety and interest in this symphony than in its predecessor, each portion being replete with characteristic writing and masterly orchestral treatment. The first movement, the several pieces constituting the second division, and the "Eclogue," are especially noteworthy, although the applicability of some of the music to the subjects indicated is not very apparent. The symphony received a very fine performance by the excellent band conducted by Mr. Manns, who was warmly greeted on his appearance on the platform.

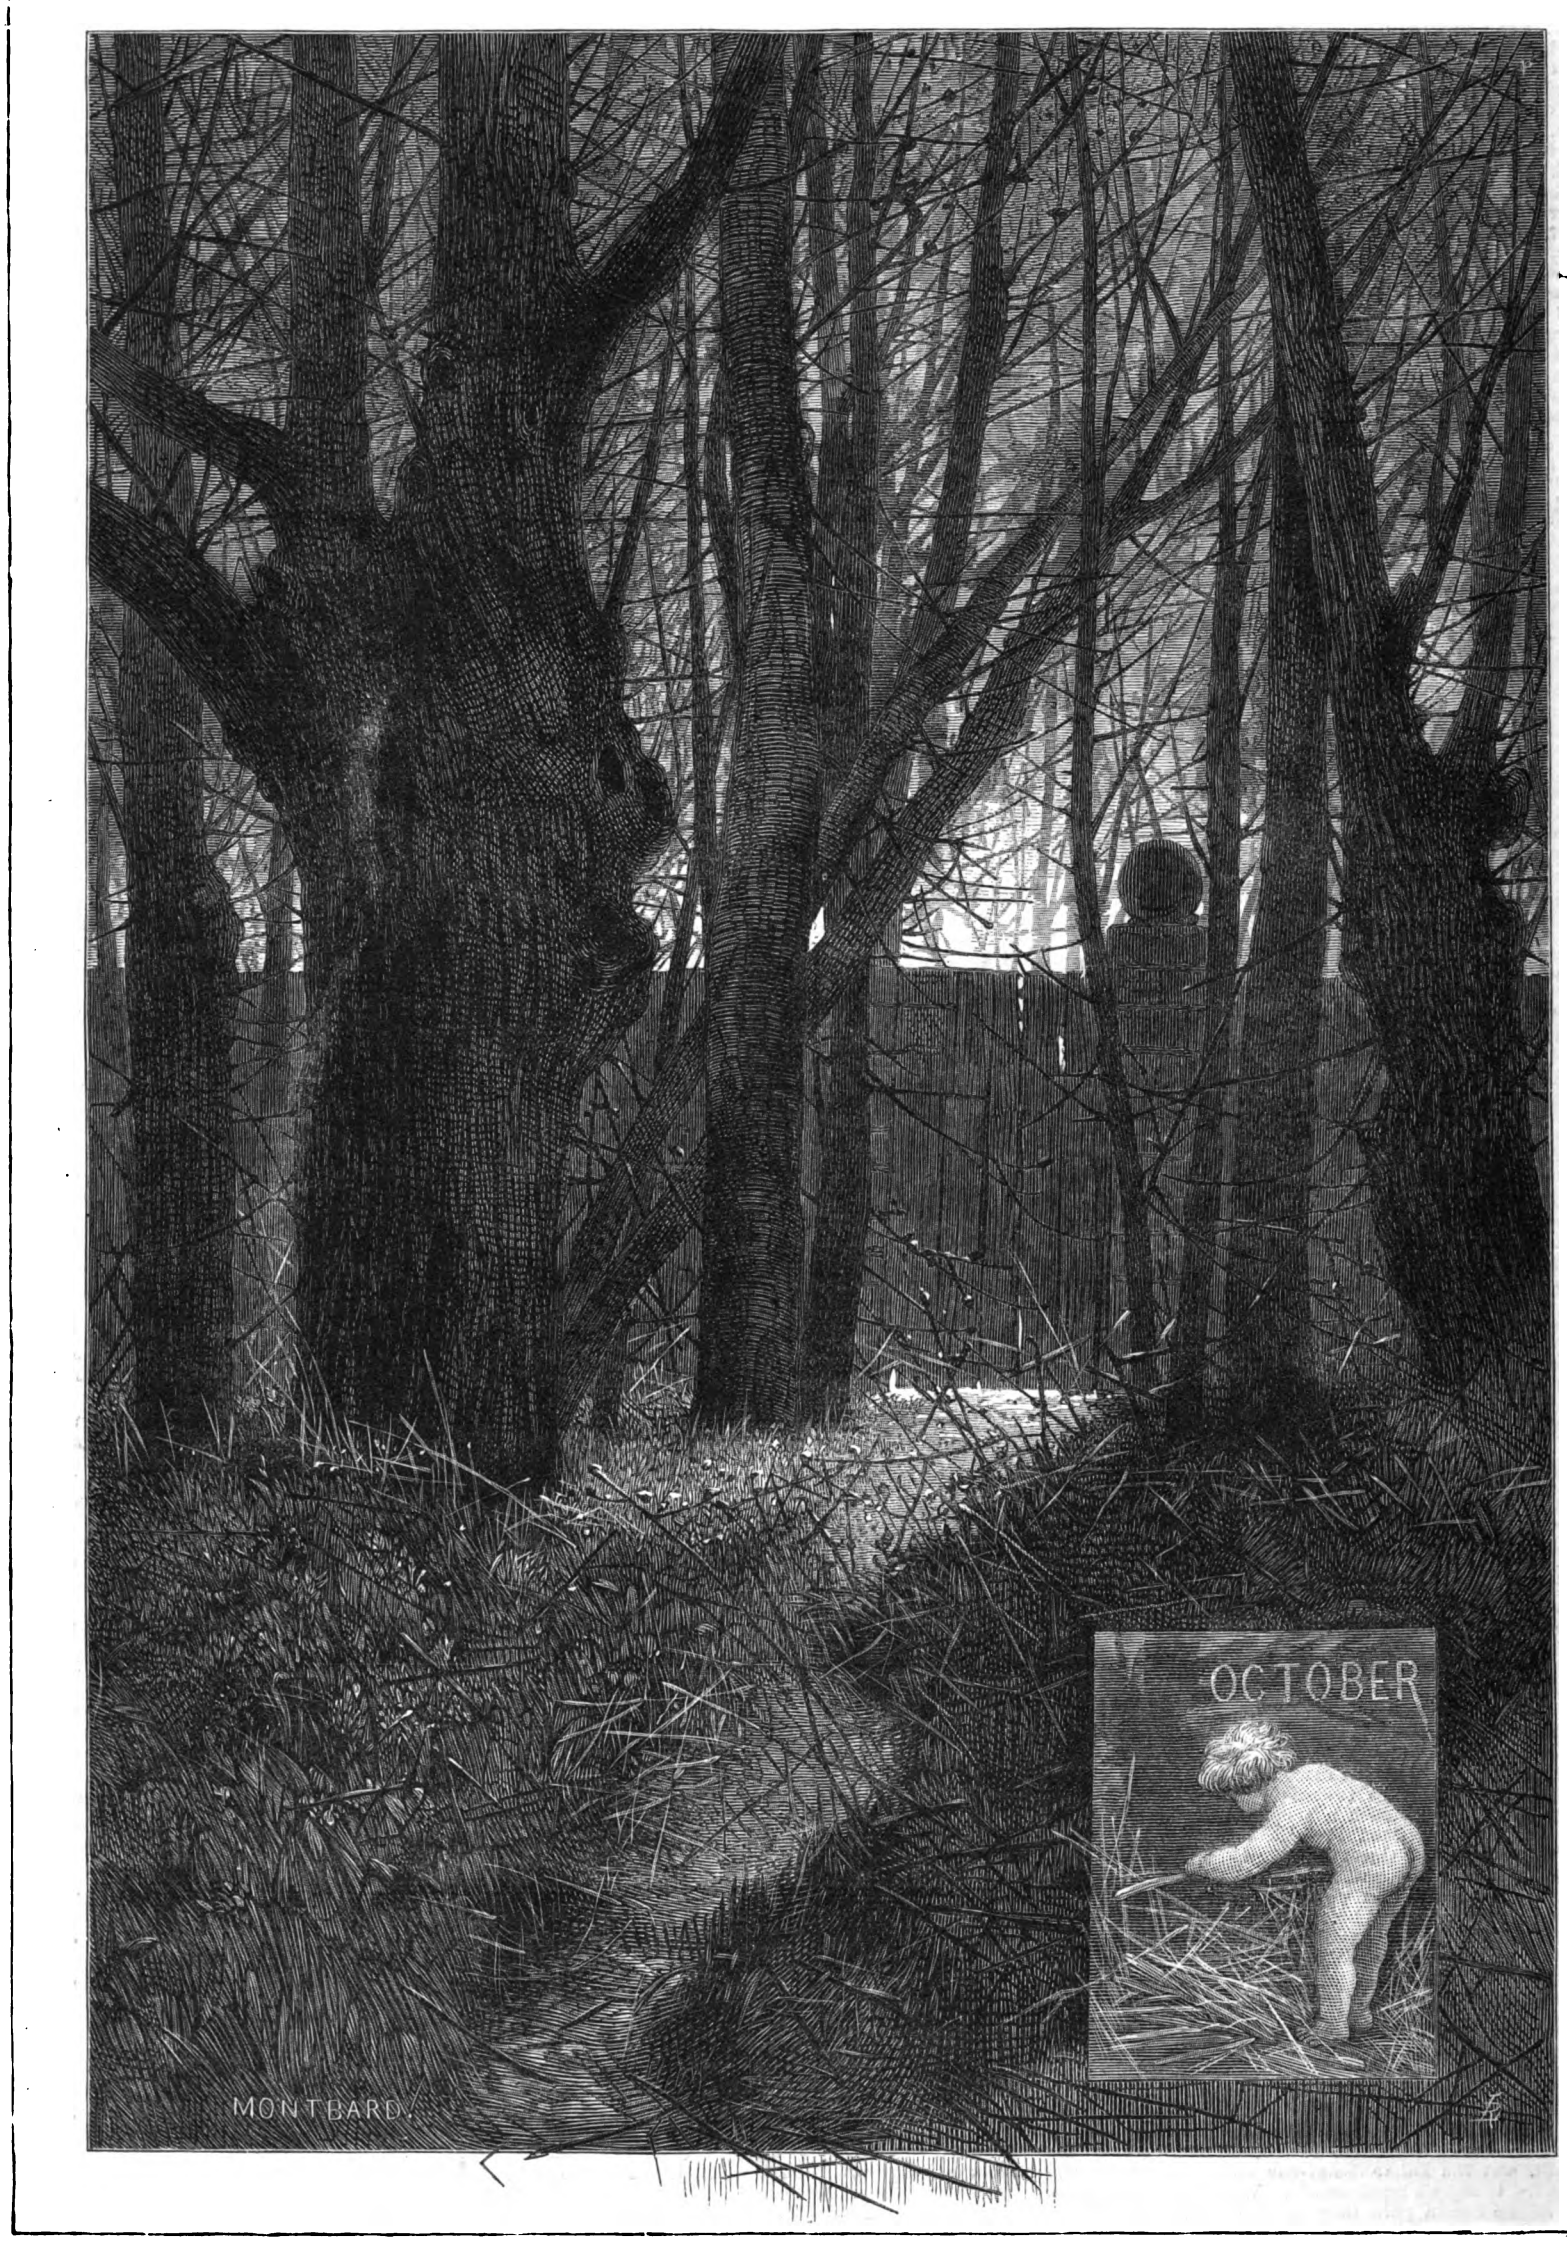
Madame Montigny-Rémaury gave a fine rendering of Schumann's Concertstück in G, op. 92—for pianoforte (with orchestra), and of three unaccompanied pieces—the concert having included Weber's overture to "Euryanthe" and Wagner's "Ride of the Walkyries;" and the air "Far Greater" (with recitative), from Gounod's "La Reine de Saba;" and Mignon's song from M. Thomas's opera, both sung with much refinement by Mrs. Osgood.

Mr. Samuel Hayes's Promenade Concerts at Covent-Garden Theatre (conducted by Mr. H. Weist Hill) are being carried on with great spirit and success. The bright dance music of Herr Gung'l, directed by himself, continues to be an attractive feature. Yesterday (Friday) week was a "choral" night, the programme having included part-songs, glees, and choruses, effectively sung by Mr. Weist Hill's choir of about 120 voices. For yesterday (Friday) evening, Rossini's "Stabat Mater" was announced.

Mr. Armit's prospectus of the autumn season of Italian opera performances at Her Majesty's Theatre has already been referred to by us. The opera chosen for the opening night (on Monday next) is Gounod's "Faust," with the first appearances here of Mdlle. Elsa Widmar and Mdlle. Morini, respectively as Margherita and Siebel. For Tuesday "La Favorita" is announced, with Madame Trebelli's first impersonation in this country of the character of Leonora, and the début of Signor Cantoni as Fernando. On Wednesday Mdlle. Giulia Bressolles is to appear as Amina in "La Sonnambula;" and on Thursday "Lucrezia Borgia" is to be given, with the début of Madame Giovannoni-Zacchi as Lucrezia. "Carmen" is announced for Friday, with Madame Trebelli in the title-character; and on Saturday "Lucia di Lammermoor" is to be performed, with the first appearance here of Mdlle. Rosina Isidor as the heroine.

Madame Christine Nilsson was announced to sing at Mr. Kuhe's concert, at Brighton, on Thursday evening.

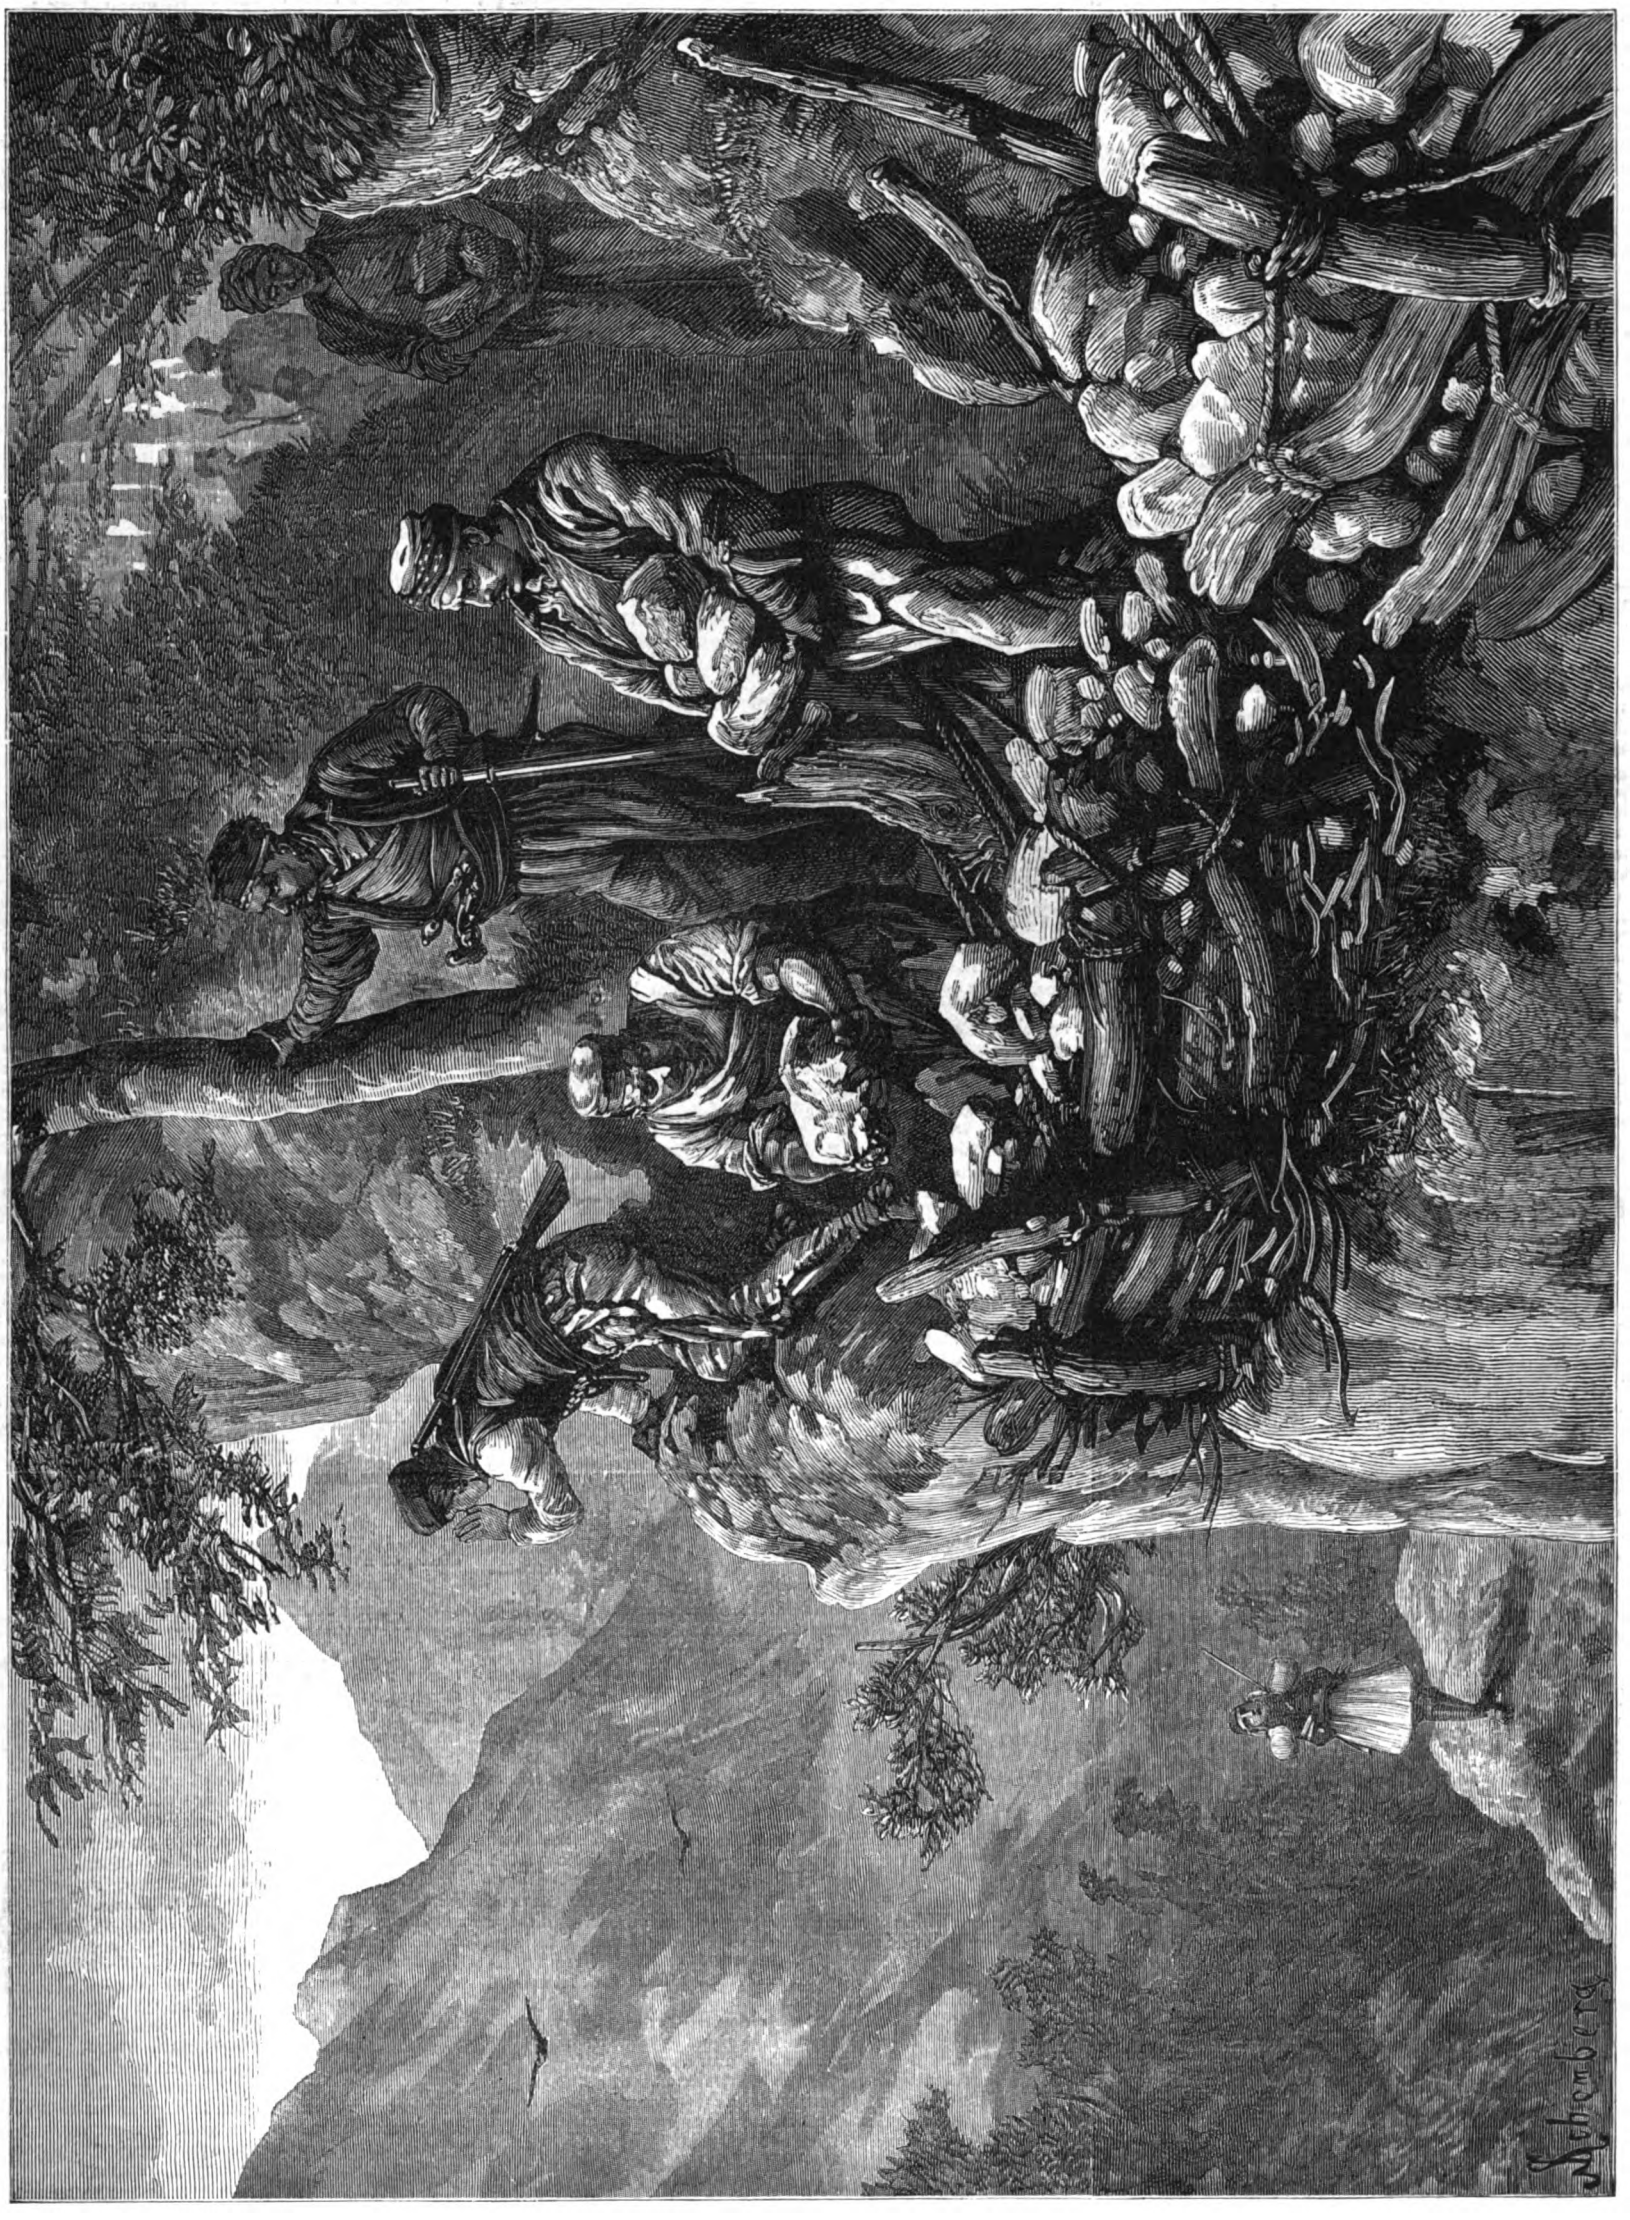
The annual benefit of Mr. Seymour Smith (from the Royal Polytechnic) takes place at the City of London College, Leadenhall-street, this (Saturday) evening, when he will be assisted by several artists of note.



Miss Glyn (Mrs. Dallas) will resume her dramatic readings on Wednesday evening, the 27th inst., continuing them on the Wednesdays throughout November, at her residence, 13, Mount-street, Grosvenor-square.

At Mr. and Mrs. German Reed's entertainment, on Wednesday evening, Oct. 20, a new First Part, entitled "A Turquoise Ring," from the pen of Messrs. W. E. Godfrey and E. W. Craigie, will be produced, the music being supplied by Lionel Benson. Mr. Corney Grain has also a new Musical Sketch, "The Haunted Room," which he will give for the first time on the same evening.

A long discussion took place at the last meeting of the London School Board on the question of detaining children at school after the hours laid down by the board. The matter was ultimately referred to the School Management Committee. A proposition of the Industrial Schools Committee as to a contribution of money towards the establishment of an industrial school for Roman Catholic truant boys was also discussed.



The Scotch express from St. Pancras to Edinburgh came into collision last Saturday night at Kibworth with an ironstone train, wrecking a number of the carriages and injuring several passengers. It appears that the accident occurred under extraordinary circumstances. The engine-driver stopped the train in order to examine the driving gear, with which, he thought, something had gone wrong. The engine, however, was all right; but when the train was put in motion it went backwards, and came into collision with the goods-train standing on the same line of rails.

Digitized by Google

THE MONTHS: OCTOBER.—SEE PAGE 378.

Digitized by Google

MOUNTAIN DEFENCES IN ALBANIA: MIRIDITES AND ALBANIANS BUILDING STONE BATTERIES.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

Digitized by Google

THE RECESS.

Fog! On the eve of the gloomy autumnal season which finds London usually enveloped in fog as dark as Erebus, Dr. Alfred Carpenter has simultaneously made the timely suggestion at a sitting of the Social Science Congress and in a letter to the Times that the evil might be removed to a great degree by making each grate consume its own smoke. May not the same remedy effectually disperse the political fog which prevails? At any rate, the public would feel infinitely obliged to numberless public speakers and writers if they would consent to consume their own speeches and leading articles.

The political world goes round without paying much heed to the croaking commentators who would have it revolve in accord with their lethargic views. At the very moment some omniscient organs of public opinion would have it that discord had broken out in the European Concert directly the Turkish march was played—the news came that Dulcigno was ceded. Politicians who had conjured up fancy portraits of Mr. Gladstone sitting the picture of despair in the Council Chamber of Downing-street, would indubitably have seen the creatures of their imaginations vanish into thin air had they witnessed how serenely the Prime Minister, accompanied by Mr. Herbert Gladstone, walked to his seat in the stalls of the cosy Court Theatre on Saturday night, and how completely the right hon. gentleman gave himself up to the enjoyment of Schiller's "Mary Stuart" as embodied by Madame Modjeska.

Returning to town on Monday, brightened by an invigorating deer-drive or so with his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the Marquis of Hartington learnt from the lips of the Prime Minister and the Foreign Secretary the reassuring intelligence from Constantinople. This trio of her Majesty's Ministers, together with Mr. Bright, during the day held an informal conference at Devonshire House. Whether or not it was resolved to proceed with the rumoured partial blockade of Smyrna in order to quicken the action of the Porte with regard to the rectification of the frontier of Greece, affairs in the East appeared to be progressing so far satisfactorily that on Tuesday Mr. Gladstone felt himself free to return to Hawarden Castle; Earl Granville left the Foreign Office to breathe the sea air at Walmer Castle; Mr. Bright sought the seclusion of One Ash, probably to arm himself for fresh conquests over salmon; the Marquis of Hartington quitted town to indulge in his favourite sport on Newmarket Heath; and Lord Northbrook, ceasing for a time from telegraphing to Admiral Sir Beauchamp Seymour from the Admiralty, hied to his Hampshire seat.

The Leader of Her Majesty's Opposition has, meantime, not been idle. Albeit the Earl of Beaconsfield is confidently reported to be seeking relaxation in writing a companion novel to "Lothair," the noble Earl has not improbably found time to inspire a spirited attack upon Ministerial policy. Not only has Lord Lytton been a guest at Hughenden lately, but Lord Sandon has been staying under the same roof, and the wisdom his Lordship may have imbibed from his host and mentor will possibly leaven the speech he is to make at the Sheffield Conservative demonstration on the 27th inst. That lively scion of the Conservative Party Lord George Hamilton, ever more vivacious in his attacks on the Government from the platform than from his seat in the House, where his meekness would be remarkable were it not for the formidable array of strong debaters he has to face in Parliament—this dashing assailant of the Ministry out of doors aired his eloquence in company with Mr. Coope at the Feltham dinner of the Middlesex Agricultural Society yesterday week, and on Monday at the opening meeting of a new Conservative Club at Armley, Leeds. Harmony has presumably been uppermost there since, this being the week of the Leeds Musical Festival. But on Monday Lord George Hamilton (seemingly unaware of the Dulcigno concession) roundly declared that the Government had set the Eastern Question again in a blaze, and brought us face to face with war in the East and anarchy in Ireland. In brief, his Lordship appeared to paraphrase in prose an old saw to read thus:—

> We have many faults. Lib'rals have but two:
> There 's nothing right they say, and nothing right they do.

Suited, no doubt, to the natural urbanity of Sir Stafford Northcote are the generalities the right hon. baronet has been indulging in recently in the congenial climate of Devonshire, where speech partakes of the nature of, if it be not always so palatable as, Devon's thick cream. Politically, Sir Stafford has been marking time since the prorogation—the better to double to the attack, may be, when the signal is given. He unveiled on the 8th inst. the statue erected in Exeter of the Earl of Devon, an engraving of which will be found on another page. The inevitable banquet followed. It took place at the New London Hotel; and the occasion was so far awkward for Sir Stafford Northcote that he had to pronounce a glowing eulogium on the character of the noble Earl, with his Lordship sitting on his right.

Represented by members holding such widely divergent views on the Eastern Question as Mr. Joseph Cowen and Mr. Ashton Dilke do, Newcastle-on-Tyne could scarcely be expected to be of one mind in the matter. Hence a public meeting held on Tuesday evening in the Nelson-street Lecture-Room to "protest against the threatened war with Turkey, and to insist that no war be made without the consent of Parliament," was broken up in confusion, and it was left undecided whether the resolution put by the chairman or Mr. Spence Watson's amendment approving the action of the Government was carried. On the other hand, the Tynemouth Liberal Association unanimously agreed about the same time to a resolution expressing "its high opinion of the devotion of Mr. Gladstone's Government to the interests of the nation."

Whilst Mr. Chamberlain has been zealously displaying his high capacity for business by inspecting the docks between Newcastle and Shields, and the Tyne lighthouses, the right hon. gentleman who was generally named for the post of President of the Board of Trade when the Gladstone Administration was being formed. Mr. W. E. Baxter has been showing his mastery of a subject which Parliament must shortly be called upon to deal with thoroughly. Mr. Baxter discussed the land question with habitual shrewdness at Arbroath on Tuesday, the solution he favoured was the encouragement of a natural settlement of the vexed question by the abolition of the laws of entail and primogeniture.

Chester, Gloucester, and Boston have been added to the towns whose election customs are being searchingly inquired into by Commissioners. But not one of these places could hope to vie with Oxford, Macclesfield, and Sandwich in bribability—if the word may be permitted. Such a wealth of incident is furnished by the Deal inquiry, and so keenly do the Commissioners appear to have relished the work of fishing in the Kentish waters, that it might be suggested to Mr. Burnand that a burlesque of the affecting little play of "The Deal Boatman" from his humorous pen would be welcome. Dramatic personages in plenty are ready to his hand. In fact, one quotation will indicate the amount of mirth produced by the examination of the Deal boatmen Sir Julian Goldsmid guilelessly sought to represent, and the Conservative member did represent when Mr. Knatchbull-Hugessen gladly sailed into the haven of a peerage:—

> W. B. Mackey, a pilot, said that he had received £42 from Mr. Olds, which he had given to voters for their votes. When the petition was on they wanted to serve him, but he went to sea to get out of it (Laughter).
>
> Mr. Jeune: You were "all in the Downs," also, I suppose (Laughter)?—Witness: That's it (Laughter).
>
> G. Redmond, the landlord of the True Briton and a voter at Deal, was paid for watching poles. They were in front of his house, and he just looked at them a little bit (Laughter).
>
> The President: You saw them in the evening, and again when you got up in the morning (Laughter)?—Witness: Just so, Sir (Laughter).
>
> J. Phelps had distributed £38 among voters. One had taken money on both sides
>
> Mr. Jeune: I see that he is described as "a sweep" (Laughter).

Mr. Parnell has been discreetly silent in Ireland for a fortnight. His headlong colleague in the Home-Rule movement, Mr. Dillon, M.P., has not profited by the lesson Mr. Forster manfully read him in the House of Commons. At least, so it appeared from the report of the reckless remarks Mr. Dillon let drop on Saturday at a Land League meeting in Cork. Lord Donoughmore has denied that the deputation of landlords who felt it their duty to have an interview with the Lord Lieutenant and Mr. Forster dropped any hints as to adopting retaliatory measures against the armed peasants. Archbishop M'Cabe, of Dublin, has written a seasonable pastoral letter discountenancing the impracticable demands of agitators, and deeply deploring the silence of Irish leaders when threats of violence to landlords have been uttered in their presence. Finally, a letter written by Mr. Bright so far back as 1868, and indicating his well-known views on the necessary reforms for Ireland, has been published this week.

THE MONTHS: OCTOBER.

> The pale descending year, yet pleasing still,
> A gentler mood inspires.
>
> The fading, many coloured woods,
> Shade deepening over shade, the country round
> Imbrown.

The season that painters revel in has come, the hour of the year when Autumn's mellow tints light up the landscapes in their most picturesque attire; when the trees of the forest put on their last grandeur, bursting forth into all their warmest colours. Indeed, so beautiful just now are the trees, we almost forget that the year is waning fast. Their loveliness covers a multitude of blemishes and defects. What though the lark but rarely now "at heaven's gate sings"—what if Phœbus be late in rising, and the subdued brightness of his shining be also somewhat dimmed by a mistiness in the air—what care we though the mornings and evenings are becoming chilly—when forests, parks, copses, dells, and thickets are lit up in a halo of golden glory! And though there be at times a little haziness in the atmosphere, it is a haziness that is as yet unmixed with fog and cloud: it is a haziness born of ineffable calms, that are all the sweeter after the slight disturbances in the atmosphere when the sun-god took his flaming chariot across the line. The few frosty nights that succeeded the equinoctial spasm have left behind them nothing that savours of winter, and Nature is smiling again, smiling in her gentlest mood. But those few frosty nights—such as almost periodically pay us a transient visit in the first week of October—though they may not bequeath to us anything that is really wintry, have nevertheless left traces behind them: and very beautiful traces they are—to wit, the autumnal foliage. The sensitive leaves, under pressure of those cold nights, were utterly unable to preserve their summer verdure; yet have they, in shrinking from the chill hand that was laid upon them, as if in revenge for the injury done them, assumed a garb more radiant than before.

The grand old wood in that valley down there, beneath whose shade a murmuring stream loses itself in many a curve, looked very beautiful in the months just sped, but not one whit more beautiful was it then than now—nay, it was not so fair. What can surpass the loveliness of yon shimmering mass of yellow and russet and dusky red, as the soft autumn sunbeams play upon it—the fleecy clouds which now and then pass under the great orb serving only to render more beautiful by contrast the varying hues? The colours are less gorgeous than in lands where a cold winter follows close upon the heels of a hot summer—as, for instance in Canada; but our English woodlands have such diversity of trees, that our autumnal tints are highly picturesque: unless, indeed, summer merges into autumn and autumn into winter so gradually as to let the leaves slowly shrivel and drop, instead of their suddenly turning colour by two or three nights' sharp frost while the leaves are still entire. Such nights we have had, and the result is that glowing mass in the valley down there in front of us.

Magnificent as are the woods from the standpoint we have taken up here, which is more than half a mile above them, they will bear a closer inspection. Let us then enter them, and examine the trees individually. How fair are these elms in their soft yellow dress, which is burnished gold in those upper limbs, where some stray sunbeams are glancing timidly through, as though doubtful whether they should have left the main stream of light between the elms and those stately oaks beyond, whose outer fringe of foliage is also bathed in gold! But go deeper into the wood, where there is less sunlight, and we find ochre the prevailing tint in the oak-leaves, though they have also every variety of green and brown. And how kindly the oak-tints blend with the orange of these adjacent beeches, whose olive-hued trunks, overspread with patches of moss and lichen, are themselves a feature in the wood well worth our notice! The pale yellow of the maples is very pretty, and the browns and dingy reds of the sycamores give depth of tone to the rest of the woodland colours. But here is a tree that makes us shiver and recall the words of the poet:—

> Like leaves on trees, the race of man is found—
> Now green in youth, now withering on the ground.

It is the ash, who in the warm summer days was fairest of all the trees of the forest, but who now, instead of contributing a tint to the autumn foliage, shrinks from the distant storm, and gives only her naked limbs as a contrast to that Spanish chestnut there beside her, all glittering in gold, whose feathering lower branches seem to be scornfully upbraiding her for her faint-heartedness. And here are some more elms, grand old trees whose foliage is deeper-dyed than those we first met with, contrasting finely with these crimson dogwoods that have somehow crept in between them and those golden-crested birches beyond.

Though the woodland metamorphoses are finest where the trees are mixed, an oaken wood, pure and simple, is at this season a pleasant haunt to roam in, from its variety of tints and the picturesque appearance also of the great mossy trunks. A beechen grove is, perhaps, somewhat monotonous in its uniform dress of deep orange—which sometimes, however, becomes a modest brown. But the two together, oak and beech, present combinations of colour charming as any we have, especially when we come to those sudden openings where the sunbeams love to linger; and in such a wood, in the open glades, feeding upon the fallen acorns and beech-mast, we often find the game-bird of the month, the beautiful pheasant. All the trees, however, cannot boast just now of their loveliness: the less said about the avenues of limes and horse-chestnuts the better.

The hedges, too, are contributing their small quota to the general autumn colouring; and, in addition to the dusky tingeing of their own leaves, are laden with berries; with the scarlet hips and haws of the wild rose and the hawthorn; with the purple sloes of the blackthorn; with the berries of the elder, holly, honeysuckle, bryony, privet, and woody nightshade; and with the luscious fruit of the bramble, as is evident not only from the bramble-bushes themselves, but from the faces and pinafores of the little lads and lasses we meet in the lanes, who seem much to prefer nutting and blackberry-picking to the vagaries of school boards. But hazel and bramble bushes will soon be picked bare; and, as there are no sweet flowers now to tempt the truants from their lessons, teachers may take heart of grace. No flowers, said we? Yet we remember, one October morning, a few years ago, finding on some high ground above the wooded banks of the Teme, and in great abundance, a wilding that made us think of the verdant springtime—the pale purple meadow-saffron, or autumn crocus; but we fear there are only a few other nooks in the country where these pretty dainty things may be found, the last of Flora's gifts.

In the bird-world the "season" is now quite over. Impelled by a resistless impulse, our summer birds of passage are fast leaving us for the palm-fringed shores of Africa. Some, indeed, such as the cuckoo and the swift, left us long ago, before the harvest was over. Others—and amongst these our choicest sylvan choristers, the nightingale and the blackcap—waited, but only just waited, to see their leafy haunts touched by autumn's magic wand, and then, guided by unerring instinct, winged their way through illimitable space to lands where the birds are of gayest plumage, but who, if our little brown Philomel deigns to sing to them, must listen with mingled awe and envy. Most, however, of our summer birds of passage wait until October's nut-brown month ere they take their long aerial flight. The swallows, who towards the close of last month assembled at their several places of rendezvous, are now off; and so are those pretty minstrels of the air, the whitethroats, redstarts, willow-warblers, fly-catchers, yellow and willow wrens, and ring-ouzels. The thickets and hedges, berry-laden as they are, must look very tempting to the dauntless little travellers; but the autumn tints are deepening fast, and they must not tarry; though the ring-ouzels, before they start on their journey, fortify themselves with a short revel amongst the bilberries of the moors. But they are gone now, as are nearly all the birds that dread our English winters. Heaven speed them, little wanderers, on their long and perilous way through "the surges of the boundless air," and grant them a safe return in the sweet spring-time! But we must not forget that, while great flocks of our summer birds are winging their way to sub-tropical lands, others, guided by the same unerring instinct, are approaching our shores from the icy North, driven hither by the intense cold of the winter that has set in already in their far northern home. Amongst these latter are two interesting little rovers of the thrush family—the redwing and the fieldfare—who reach our shores during the latter part of October, and very soon make themselves quite at home in all the cultivated parts of the country. These arctic thrushes are followed by other birds of a different order; and when autumn is nearly over, high up in the misty air, may be seen triangular flocks of teal, wild geese, and ducks.

The farms, dotted as they are over all the country-side, seem naturally involved in a contemplation of the months. In October, however, there is not much on the farms to interest us. The orchards are delivering up the last of the harvests, winter wheat is being sown, and there is a good deal of brewing going on. Much of the sowing was done last month, and the corn will be nearly all in before October is half through; and once the seed is in the ground, the fields have a rather dreary aspect. They seem quite deserted, but for an occasional ploughman trudging slowly up and down the weary lengths of a corn-stubble.

But the ploughman, even in October, sees something of life. A reddish-brown, sharp-nosed little quadruped suddenly dashes past his team of stolid-looking horses, whom it does not require much urging to bring to a dead stand; then comes a rush of two or three score of hounds, deeply baying, and, closely following, a whirlwind of horses and red coats. In less than a minute all have vanished, Reynard, hounds, horses, riders, in one mad stream that swerves not from hedge, ditch, or five-barred gate. The hunting season has set in.

ALBANIAN MOUNTAIN DEFENCES.

The Sultan of Turkey has finally yielded to the menacing demonstration of the European Powers in ordering the surrender of Dulcigno to the Prince of Montenegro. But it remains to be seen whether the Albanians will consent to let this cession be carried peaceably into effect. Persons acquainted with the country and the people say that the Turkish Government has not such absolute control over them, and rather expect that there will be an obstinate resistance, not probably to the entrance of the Montenegrins into the seaport town, but to the settlement of the internal frontier in accordance with the resolutions of the Berlin Conference. We may hope that these sinister apprehensions will not be realised; but the highland Border tribes, both Mussulman and Roman Catholic, seem to be of a fierce and independent character; and their hereditary feuds with the Montenegrins, an Illustration of which we gave last week, cannot be instantly appeased by a decree of the Sublime Porte, or by the supreme authority of "the European Concert." It is therefore by no means quite certain, as yet, though for the sake of humanity one would fain wish it may be so, that the picturesque figures shown in our Illustration, Miridites, Clementi, and other warlike tribesmen of the North Albanian frontier, will not continue their work of building parapets on the edge of the cliff to shelter them while firing upon the enemy when he advances by the road below. These men have, we are told, Martini-Henry rifles, and great abundance of cartridges, which they know how to use, in guerrilla warfare, at least as well as the Montenegrins; and it is to be apprehended that the conflict, once provoked, would rage for a long time, and would be carried on in a savage and ferocious spirit. The wisdom and prudence of European statesmen will be properly exercised in avoiding measures of provocation between those half-barbarian races of the Turkish Empire and its frontiers.

The Government of Bengal, with a view of improving scientific agriculture in the Presidency, has resolved to create two special scholarships of £200 a year each, to be held by science graduates of Calcutta University, at the Royal Agricultural College, Cirencester.

Digitized by Google

THE COURT.

The Queen's life in the Highlands is but little varied from its general course of driving and walking; as, except to a few of her valued friends in the district and some of her old retainers, her Majesty seldom pays visits. The younger members of the Royal family, including the Hessian Grand Ducal visitors, enjoy a more extended Highland experience in the sports of the forest and moor, and in their daily rides to the less accessible points of interest in the locality.

Her Majesty, accompanied by Princess Beatrice and Princesses Irene and Alice of Hesse, drove to Invercauld on Thursday week and visited Miss Farquharson, when the Royal party inspected the stags which had been brought down the previous day by the Prince of Wales and party at the deer-drives in Invercauld Forest.

The Princess of Wales, attended by Miss Knollys, dined with the Queen yesterday week.

Her Majesty, accompanied by Princesses Irene and Alice of Hesse, drove by Gavenside last Saturday; and the Marquis of Hartington, Minister in attendance, who had returned from being the visitor of the Prince of Wales at Altnaguisach, dined with the Royal family, and subsequently left Balmoral.

On Sunday the Queen, Princess Beatrice, Prince Leopold, and the Grand Duke of Hesse, with his son, attended Divine service at Crathie church; the Rev. Dr. M'Gregor, of St. Cuthbert's Church, Edinburgh, officiating. Sir Bartle Frere had an audience of her Majesty in the afternoon, and he had also the honour of joining the Queen's dinner circle, which included the Prince and Princess of Wales and Prince John of Glücksburg.

The Grand Duke of Hesse joined the Prince of Wales for a deer-drive on Monday. The Rev. Dr. M'Gregor lunched at the castle, and afterwards had an interview with her Majesty. The Queen gave a ball in the evening to the servants, tenants, and gillies on the Balmoral, Abergeldie, and Birkhall estates. The Prince and Princess of Wales, Princess Beatrice, Prince Leopold, Princesses Louise, Victoria, and Maud of Wales, the Grand Duke of Hesse, the Hereditary Grand Duke, Princesses Irene and Alice of Hesse, and Prince John of Glücksburg were present, attended by the ladies and gentlemen of the Balmoral and Abergeldie households. Sir Bartle Frere, Admiral the Hon. C. Glyn, Lady Susan Suttie and Miss Suttie, Mr. and Mrs. George Forbes, Colonel and Miss Farquharson, Mr. and Mrs. Duff, Colonel and Mrs. Stewart, from Invercauld, and Mr. and Mrs. M'Kenzie and party, from Glenmuick, were invited.

The Grand Duke of Hesse having been requested by the Queen to continue his visit to Balmoral, his Royal Highness will be unable to be present at the ceremonies in celebration of the completion of the Cathedral of Cologne.

Her Majesty has granted to Sir Charles Rivers Wilson, K.C.M.G., C.B., and to Major Evelyn Baring, C.S.I., her authority that they may accept and wear the insignia of the First Class of the Turkish Order of the Medjidich, which the Khedive of Egypt, authorised by the Sultan, has conferred upon them respectively; and also to Auckland Colvin, Esq., that he may accept and wear the insignia of the Second Class of the said Order of the Medjidie.

In memory of the late Colonel Picard, a brass tablet has been placed in the Rutland Chapel of St. George's Chapel, Windsor Castle, bearing the inscription—"To the memory of Lieutenant-Colonel Arthur F. Picard, V.C., C.B., R.A., Assistant-Keeper Privy Purse, and Assistant Private Secretary. Born April 12, 1841; died March 12, 1880. This monument was erected as a tribute of respect by her Majesty the Queen, his Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, and his Royal Highness Prince Leopold. Not slothful in work; fervent in spirit."

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.

The Prince and Princess of Wales, with their daughters, are still at Abergeldie. Last week, upon the return of the Prince from Invercauld, his Royal Highness passed a couple of nights at Altnaguisach Lodge, where the Grand Duke of Hesse and a numerous party were entertained by the Prince, the two days being occupied with deerstalking. Another day's sport was had with Mr. Mackenzie, of Kintail, in Glenmuick forests. The Prince and Princess have entertained a large party during the week, Sir Bartle Frere being one of the guests. His Royal Highness has had good sport in the forest.

Her Majesty's ship Bacchante, Captain Lord Charles Scott, with Princes Albert Victor and George of Wales on board, arrived at Vigo on Monday. All well.

The Duke of Edinburgh, who has been the guest of Mr. Sykes, M.P., at Brantingham Thorpe, arrived at Hull on Monday and inspected the guard-ship Audacious. An address was presented by the Mayor at the Townhall, and his Royal Highness afterwards partook of luncheon with the Elder Brethren of Hull Trinity House, who presented him with a gold casket, and created him a Brother. The Duke afterwards planted some trees in the Botanic Gardens. On Tuesday his Royal Highness inspected the coastguard, the naval reserve, and the life brigade at Sunderland.

Princess Christian has expressed her willingness to be received at Brighton Railway Station by the members of the Corporation on the occasion of her visit to Brighton on the 20th, when her Royal Highness will open a bazaar at the Dome of the Pavilion in aid of the Female Orphan Asylum, a local institution.

The Duke of Connaught narrowly escaped a serious injury a few days since while riding to the Camp at Aldershott, through his horse shieing and throwing him. Happily, his Royal Highness escaped with little harm, and has been able to perform his military duties. The Duke, as ranger of Epping Forest, has consented to plant two memorial trees to-day (Saturday). He will be accompanied by the Duchess.

Prince Leopold will receive the Freedom and Livery of the Vintners' Company, of which the Lord Mayor of London is the Master, on Nov. 6, at their hall, in Upper Thames-street. The Prince has accepted the invitation of Mr. W. Busbridge to deliver to the students of the Metropolitan Drawing Classes the Queen's prizes, awarded by the Science and Art Department. The Lord Mayor will preside, and the ceremony will probably take place at the Guildhall early in November.

The Duke of Cambridge inspected the troops quartered at Colchester on Monday, and on Tuesday his Royal Highness had a field-day at Havant, after which he returned to Portsmouth, being the guest of Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar. The Duke has since inspected Parkhurst and the forts of the Isle of Wight. His Royal Highness has also, on his return, had a field-day at Aldershott.

The Duke of Aosta, who arrived at Claridge's the end of last week, went to an early mass at the Italian church, Hatton-garden, on Sunday, and afterwards entertained various friends at luncheon. His Royal Highness has visited the Duke of Cambridge, and has received various members of the Corps Diplomatique and of the Ministry. The Duke has made a general inspection of the public buildings and improvements of the metropolis, and has visited some of the theatres.

THE CHURCH.

PREFERMENTS AND APPOINTMENTS.

Birtwell, G., to be Vicar of St. Elizabeth's, Ashby, near Bowden.
Brown, C. W. H.; Missions to Seamen Chaplain, Penarth Roadstead.
Bubb, Osborne; Rector of Woodeaton, Oxon.
Carver, Henry Jonathan; Rector of Melbury Abbas, Dorset.
Davies, J. Hart; Vicar of St. James's, Bristol.
Fairclough, William Henry Hutchinson; Vicar of Barton-under-Needwood.
Forster, C. A.; Rector of Walton-in-Gordano and Weston-in-Gordano.
Garry, W. W.; Missions to Seamen Chaplain, Newport Docks, Monmouthshire.
Gerratt, W. J.; Vicar of Gannow, Barnsley.
Hadow, G. R.; Senior Curate of Wilton; Rector of Calston, Wilts.
Hodges, J. H.; Vicar of East Leach, Gloucestershire.
Ibs, John Hodson; Vicar of Christ Church, Lichfield.
Parsons, Randal; Rector of Sandhurst, Berks.
Phillips, J. R.; Missions to Seamen Chaplain, Cardiff Docks.
Rooker, John; Vicar of St. Peter's, Clifton-road, Bristol.
Suckling, R. J.; Vicar of St. Peter's, London Docks.
Theed, T. M.; Vicar of Ferriby, near Hull.
Vernon, W. G.; Vicar of St. Philip's, Pennfields, Wolverhampton.
Westmacott, Walter; Perpetual Curate of Highbridge.
Wilcox, Henry Jenkyns; Vicar of Nettleden, Bucks.—Guardian.

On the 4th inst. the Bishop of Durham reopened the parish church of Escombe, after restoration.

Lady Cardigan laid the foundation-stone on the 7th inst. of the restored Church of St. Michael, East Ardsley. The Countess is the principal landowner in the district, and this was her first visit.

At a conference of the clergy and laity of the Deanery of Ilchester, in the diocese of Bath and Wells, it was resolved unanimously to carry out the provisions of the Burials Act with kindness and courtesy and Christian charity, but not to make concessions beyond the Act.

A painted window, from the studio of Mr. W. G. Taylor, of Berners-street, has been erected in Christ Church, Crouch End, in memory of Mr. Gillatt Jonathan Ottaway, who was for five years churchwarden. The window is presented to the church by his friends and parishioners.

Speaking at a Church conference held at Leeds on the 6th inst., the Bishop of Ripon stated that during the last twenty-four years in his diocese there had been 144 new churches consecrated. The number of confirmations and persons confirmed had also very largely increased.

On Wednesday week the Bishop of Salisbury consecrated the new Church of St. Saviour, Erlestoke, which has been erected by Mr. Street, R.A., at the sole cost of Lady Charlotte Watson Taylor. Her Ladyship has also provided a vicarage for the Incumbent. The church, which was highly spoken of by his Lordship, has cost upwards of £6000.

The revisers of the Authorised Version of the New Testament met on Tuesday in the Jerusalem Chamber, and sat for seven hours. Fourteen members of the company were present, the Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol being in the chair. The company was engaged in the consideration of proposals of the American committee.

The new Church of St. Matthew, South Watford, was consecrated on Tuesday by the Bishop of St. Albans. Towards the outlay necessary for the erection of the church, estimated at £5700, considerable aid was given by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and about £200 from Queen Anne's Bounty. The site, containing upwards of an acre, is the gift of Mr. Jonathan King. Mr. David Carnegie contributed £2000 (and £500 to the parsonage fund), Mr. R. Russell Carew, £1000; Mr. T. Blackwell, £1000; Mr. T. W. Eley, £500; Mr. W. H. Smith, M.P., £250; Lord Ebury, £105; the Earl of Essex, £100; and Mr. J. W. Perry-Watlington, £100.

The annual conference of clergy and laity has been held at Oxford. The Bishop of Oxford, in his opening address, referring to the subject of ecclesiastical benefices, said that it was most important that all appointments to the cure of souls should be free from the taint of corruption or from the suspicion of malpractices. If a Government or Parliament was to deal with these very important questions it must be under some kind of pressure, and he knew no pressure more legitimate or more likely to receive fair attention than the pressure which was put on members of Parliament by a great representative body of Churchmen.

The Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church has been appointed to the place on the Board of Intermediate Education rendered vacant by the retirement of Lord Belmore. This appointment makes the representation of the Presbyterian Church by two members equal to that of the Church of Ireland, and removes a ground of complaint.

The opening service of the Congregational Union of England and Wales, which met this week in Birmingham, was held on Monday night in Carr's-lane Chapel, of that town, and the annual sermon was preached by the Rev. E. R. Conder. The preacher addressed himself chiefly to the relations between science and revealed religion, and combated the claim of advanced thinkers that modern thought and intellectual progress were superseding the Gospel. Congregationalism, he added, had changed, but not for the better. The change was in favour of form and priestly assertion, instead of Christian profession. He urged the return to earlier, broader, and simpler principles. The conference proper began on Tuesday. There were about 1200 Members present. The Rev. S. Newth, D.D., presided, and in his opening address dealt with the subjects of ministerial training and the present duty of the Congregational churches. Resolutions were passed acknowledging the earnestness with which the Government undertook to deal with the long pending controversy relative to the burial grounds, and also acknowledging much common ground with the Church of England, which was not opposed by them as a Church but as a State establishment. Papers were read by the Rev. Dr. Kennedy, the Rev. G. S. Barrett, and the Rev. J. M'Ewan Stott. In the evening there was a public meeting in the interest of Continental and Foreign Missions. The conference continued until Friday, inclusive.

A Conference of the Roman Catholic Young Men's Societies of Great Britain was opened at Birmingham last Saturday by Dr. Ilsley, the coadjutor Bishop of Birmingham. Sixty delegates were present, representing London, Manchester, Leeds, Liverpool, Sheffield, and other towns. A letter was read from Cardinal Manning, in which he said the efforts of the Young Men's Societies to promote the intellectual objects they had in view had his blessing. Dr. Ilsley in his opening address stated that the objects of the Young Men's Societies were to promote mental improvement and the extension of the spirit of religion and brotherly love.

At the meeting of the Baptist Union at Bloomsbury Chapel, on the 7th inst., papers on the subject of evangelical work were read by the Rev. E. Stone, of Nottingham, and the Rev. J. W. Lance. A discussion took place upon both papers. In the evening a public meeting was held in the Metropolitan Tabernacle, Sir Morton Peto presiding, and amongst the speakers was Mr. C. H. Spurgeon.

At a meeting of representatives from metropolitan hospitals, held at King's College Hospital, it was decided to form an Association of Hospital Registrars, with a view to securing greater uniformity in the registration of disease.

THE SOCIAL SCIENCE CONGRESS.

Lord Reay gave the opening address at the Edinburgh meeting of the Social Science Congress on Wednesday, the 6th inst. He contrasted the social system of the Continent with that of England. He ridiculed the notion of the inviolable sanctity of treaties, and showed that treaties were only the exposition of the relations existing between different Powers at a given time. In England, united by free trade and individual liberty, a glorious prospect was still before us.

All the sections met on Thursday, when an address was given by the Right Hon. J. M'Laren, the Lord Advocate, as chairman of the Jurisprudence department, in the Free Assembly Hall. The Lord Advocate dwelt on the question of criminal law administration, and recommended the study of the Scotch criminal administration to the attention of English jurists, not as an absolutely perfect system, but as one which has stood the test of experience. The chief merit of the system is that it accords in a large measure independence of action to the local prosecutors, while ensuring the full responsibility of the State in regard to land reform. He expressed an opinion that it would be unwise to prohibit contracts which were neither immoral nor hurtful. In the Educational Department, the dangers of educational overwork were discussed by Miss Edith Pechey, M.D., Miss Lumsden, and others; and in the Art Section the question of dramatic reform was considered. A paper by Sir Walter Crofton, upon the repression of crime, was also submitted; and Mr. Macfie, who wishes to see the House of Lords representative instead of hereditary, introduced the question of Parliamentary Government.

Yesterday week the sectional meetings were fairly attended. The proceedings opened with an address by Lord Balfour of Burleigh, President of the Educational Department. He confined his observations to a review of educational work in Scotland and the effects produced by the Act of 1872. Mr. Smith, of Coalville, gave an interesting account of wandering life in canal-boats and gipsy tents. The registration of land titles, the law of copyright, and the best means of detecting and repressing crime, were among the other topics discussed. The Principal and Senators of the University entertained members of the Congress to an open-air musical promenade in the Royal Botanic Gardens.

On Saturday all the sections met, with the exception of those devoted to Art and International Law. Dr. Beddoe, the president of the Health Department, gave the opening address. He expressed his belief that disease is diminishing under sanitary supervision and regulation. He condemned the Vaccination Bill introduced last Session as a measure of a retrograde character. The incidence of the income tax, educational phases and fallacies, thrift, and national education were discussed.

Excursions were arranged for Saturday, and although the weather was showery and cold, they were well patronised. One party, numbering a hundred, drove to Dalmeny Park.

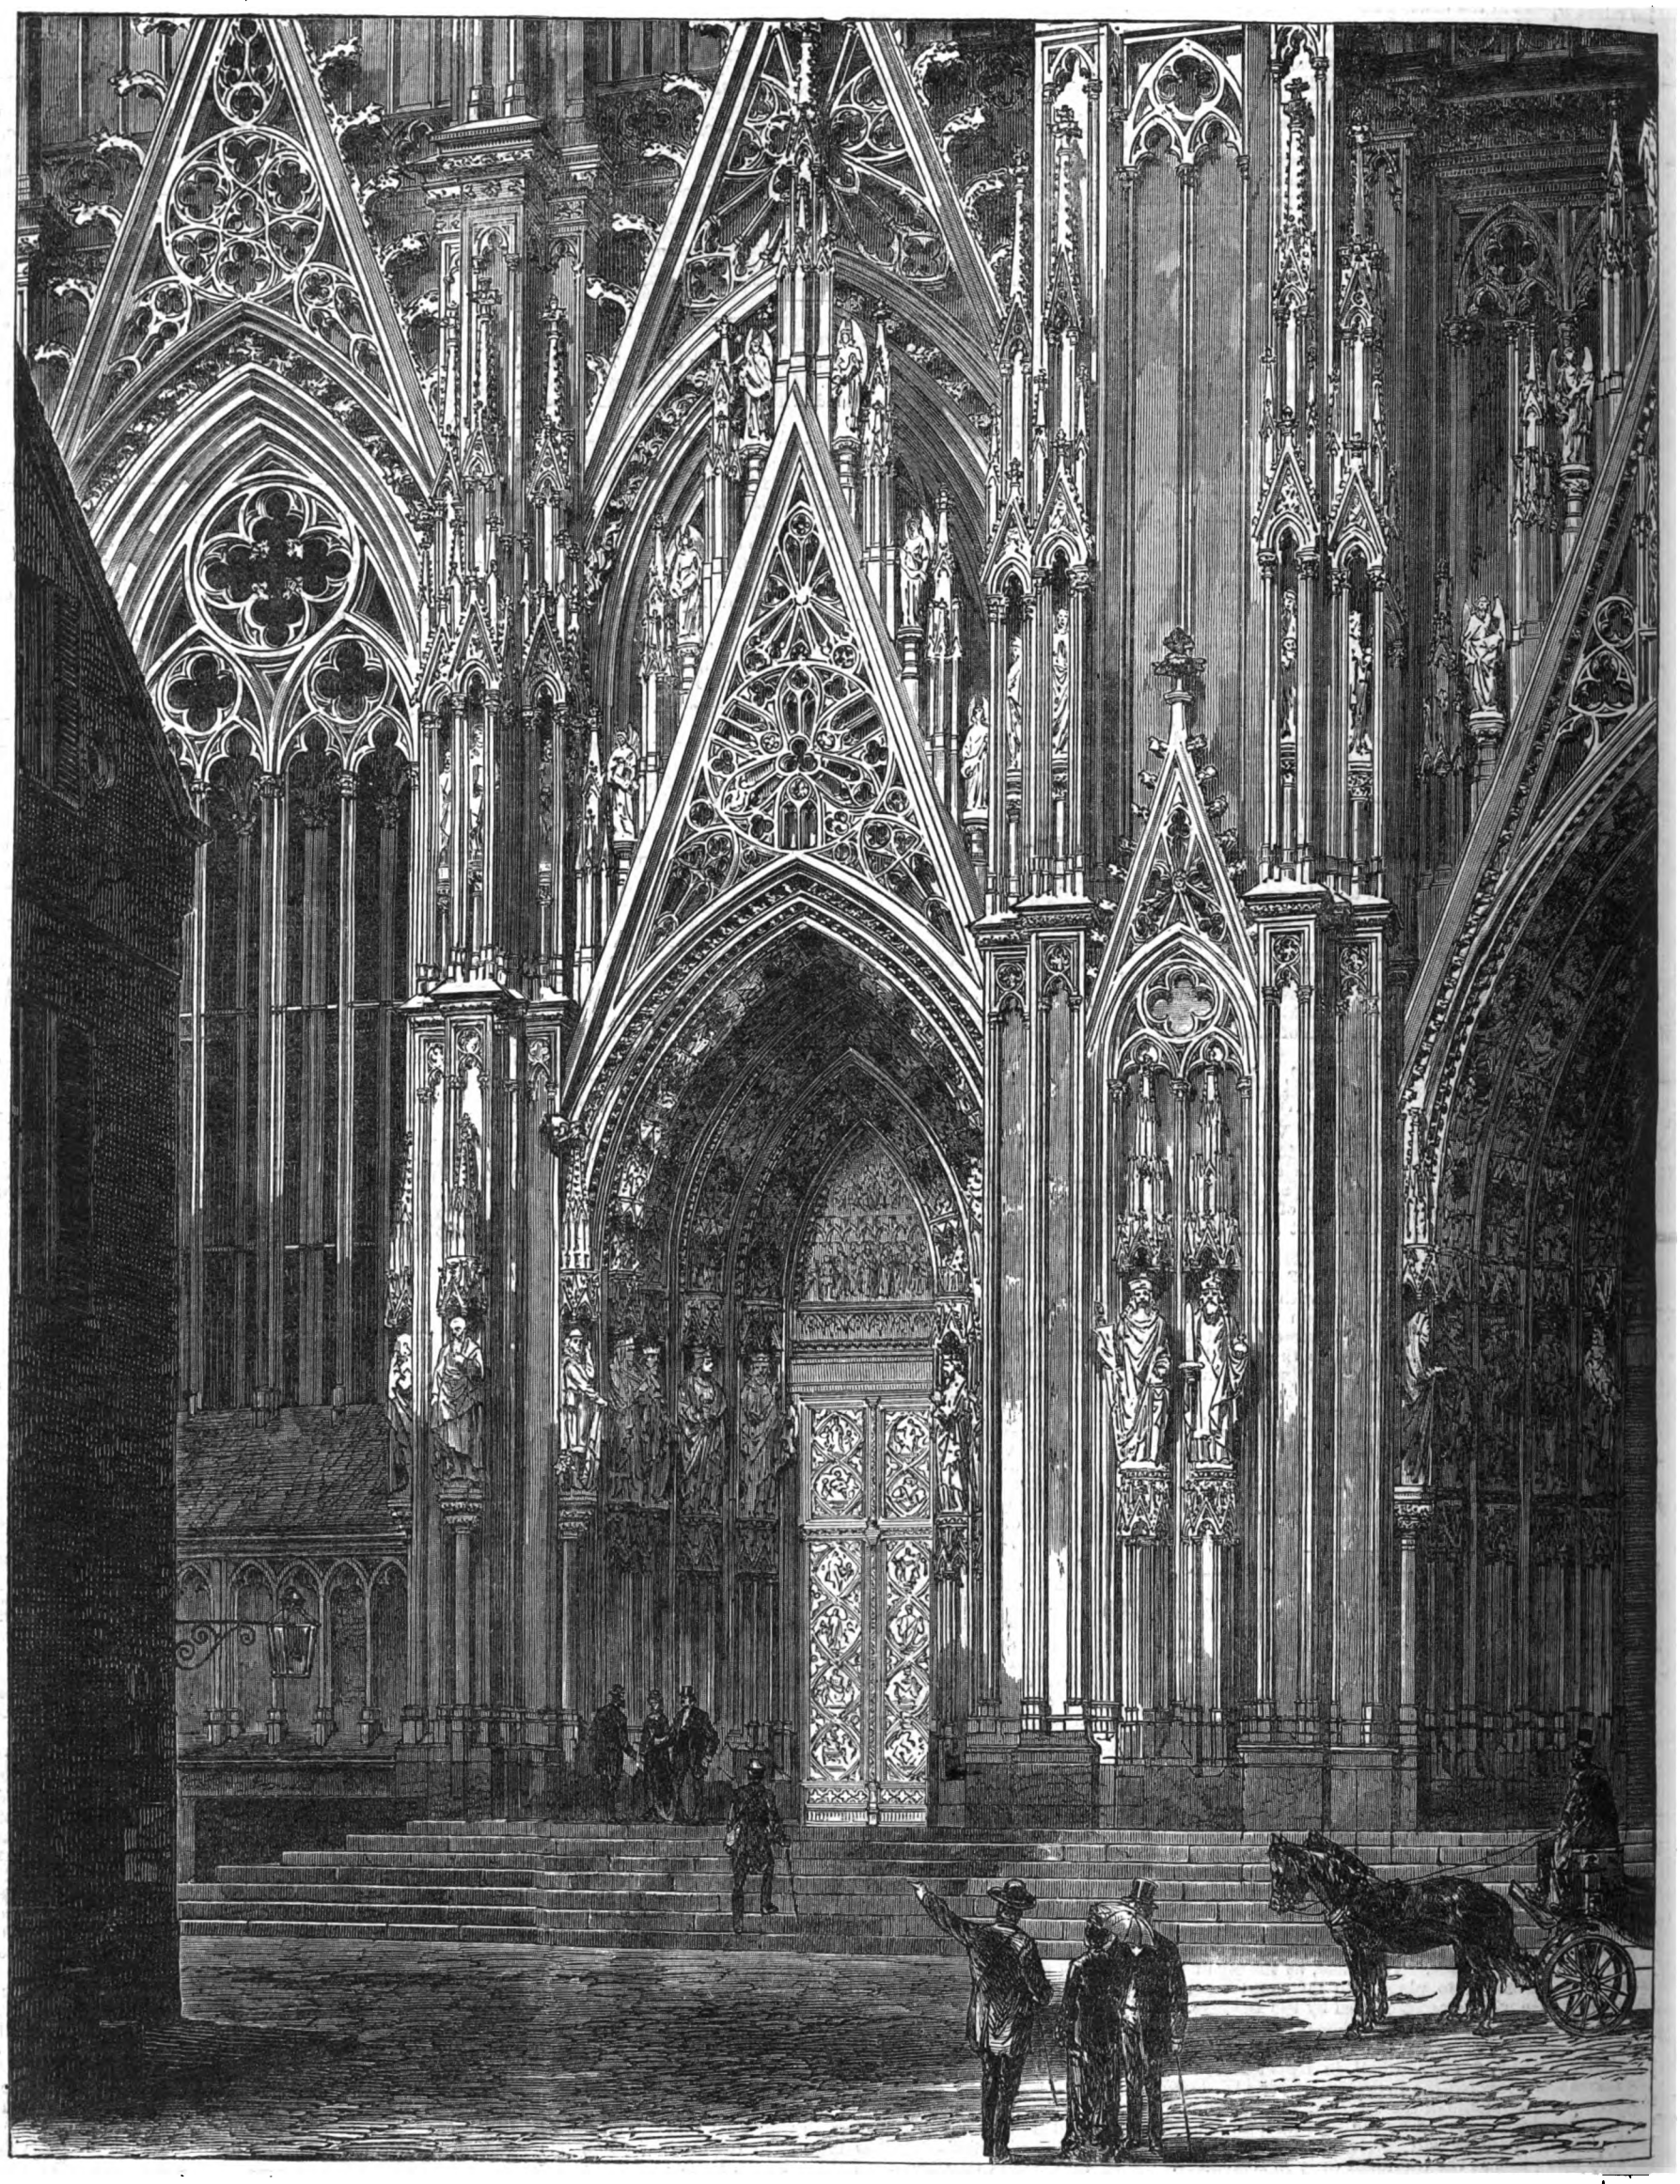
The proceedings opened on Monday morning with an address on charitable endowments by Sir W. Kay-Shuttleworth, the president of the Economy and Trade department. He believes that the existing charities, from which a gross annual income of more than two millions sterling is derived, are wasted and misapplied generally. The donors have been mistaken and misguided in their benevolence, and have been as unable to see the march of events as those who left property for ever to redeem English slaves from the Moors, to pay persons for awakening sleepers and turning out dogs in church, or to provide bulls to be baited and Bibles to be raffled for. During the last forty years the income from charities has increased by half a million, and a complete reform of the administration and employment of such charities is now imperatively demanded. All the sections held meetings for the discussion of special questions. In international law Mr. Thorburn introduced the question of the practicability and expediency of assimilating the laws of different countries in relation to bills of exchange; and Mr. J. Kirkpatrick in another paper recommended the codification of the mercantile law. In municipal law, Mr. R. V. Campbell discussed the propriety of having one bankruptcy law for England and Scotland. The repression of crime section was occupied in considering papers by Mr. Meredith, of the Wandsworth Prison Mission; Captain Christie, Governor of the Edinburgh prisons, and others on juvenile delinquency. A general opinion in favour of the recent action of the Home Secretary was expressed. Mr. Health, Sir James Alexander, Dr. Stevenson Macadam, and Major-General Scott debated the best means of preventing the pollution of rivers.

Professor Richmond, the President of the Art Department, gave the opening address on Tuesday. He dealt with the question of art from a social point of view, and showed that, with all our desire for improvement, we were very far from being an artistic nation. No doubt there had been much reaction during the present century, but, unhappily, it had taken the form of restoration instead of preservation, and has created more ruin and disintegration than the progress of railways. All the sections met for the consideration of special questions.

In most of the departments votes of thanks were awarded to the presidents and the secretaries.

A great meeting of working men, organised by the Edinburgh Trades' Council and the Workmen's Industrial Institute, was held in the Free Assembly Hall under the presidency of Lord Reay. Several prominent members of the Congress took part in the proceedings, the drift of the speeches being to show working men that they are more deeply concerned than almost any of the other classes of the community in the chief subjects which the Congress deals with—public health, education, economy, and trade. The proceedings were enthusiastic throughout.

A public meeting on women's suffrage was also held in the Queen-street Hall, which was filled in every part. Mr. C. B. M'Laren, M.P., occupied the chair; and among the other speakers were Mrs. Duncan M'Laren, Miss Lydia Becker, and Miss Downing.



The public business of Congress was brought to a close on Wednesday morning, when Mr. G. W. Hastings, M.P., President of the Council, gave an address.

The meeting next year will be held in Dublin.

Lord Rosebery will give his address as Lord Rector of Aberdeen University on Friday, Nov. 5.

Early on Sunday morning a fire broke out in the Guildhall, one of the principal municipal buildings in Arbroath. Much valuable property was destroyed, and there perished in the flames letters of the Corporation extending back hundreds of years.—The Folly Cotton Spinning Mill, Rochdale, formerly the property of Messrs. Bright, was burned down on Saturday last, and on Monday morning a large woollen mill at Millbrook, near Stalybridge, belonging to Mr. Robert Hyde, was destroyed by fire.—A fire took place on Sunday morning at 24, Spring Garden-street, Dublin, a house which was let out in lodgings. Several of the inmates had narrow escapes, and one Lawrence Murphy, a labourer, was burned to death.

Digitized by Google

WEST DOOR OF COLOGNE CATHEDRAL.

The Emperor of Germany will have performed the grand national ceremony of formally celebrating the completion of this magnificent edifice, by the time our present Number, with its Illustrations, comprising a general View of the Cathedral, and one of the West Front, has been published for all our readers in this country. Yesterday, the 15th inst., was the day appointed for this august solemnity at Cologne, which has the character of a significant historical event, being regarded by the Germans, Protestants and Catholics alike, as symbolic of their national unity, and as a type of the realisation, at length, of those patriotic and romantic aspirations for Germany, visions of power and glory among the European States, long cherished by the literary and artistic studies of the last two generations. It is the triumph of what was called the Romantic School of German poetry, and of the political sentiment that was nourished by that school, after the decay of the purely classical or Hellenic school; but it is not now accompanied, as it might have been half a century ago, by a fresh exhibition of devotion to Catholicism in ecclesiastical relations. The actual conflict of authorities between Church and State in the German Empire is rather decidedly marked by the conspicuous absence of the Archbishop of Cologne from this notable celebration, though partly of a religious character, at the seat of his diocese. Times are changed, indeed, since the princely prelates of that See, in the Middle Ages, ranked among the most powerful electors of the "Holy Roman Empire."

One of these great Archbishops, Conrad von Hochstaden, laid the foundation-stone of Cologne Cathedral on Aug. 14, 1248. There was a cathedral on that site before, which had been founded in the ninth century by the Frankish Emperor Charlemagne, but it had been destroyed by fire. The architect first employed in the present Gothic structure was Gerhard von

Digitized by Google

THE SONG OF THE Whip-poor-Will.

Even-tide drooped like a veil,
Over misty Hill and Dale.
Th' old witch passed us on the path
That climbed the tangled Hill;
We laughed for she was strange and old,
Then her eyes gleamed green and cold,
Like a serpent's in its wrath;
While sang the Whip-poor-Will.
"Whip-poor-Will,
Whip-poor-Will;"
The strange witch bird that silent flits
Thro' the dusk, or crouching sits,
And sings its song of omen ill,
"Whip-poor-Will,
Whip-poor-Will."

Bleak the winds of Winter blow,
Bringing ice, and frost, and snow.
That look the old witch gave to me,
It made me deathly chill.
At dead of night I see her gloat,
And hear that bird its lonely note,
In fancy still that look I see,
And hear the Whip-poor-Will.
"Whip-poor-Will,
Whip-poor-Will;"
That witches' bird that silent flits.
Thro' the dusk, or crouching sits,
And sings its song of omen ill,
"Whip-poor-Will,
Whip-poor-Will."

H Pyle

Digitized by Google

Riehl, a native of the village of Riehl, near Cologne. It was not till 1332 that the choir was finished and consecrated by Archbishop Henry of Virneburg, after which the building of the transepts was commenced. The southern tower was erected in the fifteenth century, and the bells were hung there in 1447. The conflicts in Germany which were occasioned by the Protestant Reformation, in the sixteenth century, stopped the progress of this grand edifice; and, for nearly two hundred and fifty years, it seemed likely never to attain completion, if not already doomed to perish of neglect. There was actually some intention of demolishing the north tower, for the purpose of widening the adjacent street. The interior was defaced by various unseemly additions and pretended decorations in the most tasteless style of the eighteenth century. The French Revolution, and the wars of Napoleon I., brought the rude hand of military violence to inflict still worse degradation upon the sacred pile; its interior was converted, by one French army, into a storehouse for hay and forage. That it was an object of German national pride would render it the more amenable to the insults of a foreign invader.

The Prussian monarchy, after the overthrow of Napoleon, looked upon the restoration, at least the preservation, of Cologne Cathedral as a token by which to pledge its rulers and people to the ultimate redemption of Germany. King Frederick William III., and his successor of the same name, bestowed serious attention upon this work, assisted by the official architects, Ahlert and Zwirner, the second of whom prepared a scheme for the completion of the original design. On Sept. 4, 1842, the first stone of the new construction was solemnly laid. A national subscription was opened to supply the funds, which have been steadily contributed by the Germans everywhere, since that time, without regard to provincial or religious distinctions. The sexcentenary festival, on Aug. 14, 1848, was attended by the King of Prussia, and by the Austrian Archduke John, the elect President of the German Empire, then attempted to be established by the votes of a National Assembly. Notwithstanding the subsequent political reaction, the Princes and the people of Germany continued to support this undertaking, which became indeed the symbol of their future reconciliation. It has survived the greater shocks of the war between Prussia and Austria in 1866, and the dissolution of the former Germanic Confederation. The fund raised for Cologne Cathedral, altogether exceeding one million sterling, was much augmented by the contrivance, in 1863, of a popular lottery for the pecuniary profit of this great public work. The architect Zwirner, who died in 1861, was succeeded by Herr Voigtel, the present architect of the Cathedral, who now sees the work happily finished by the completion of the two lofty western towers.

The ground-plan of the Cathedral, which we lately described, is cruciform, as usual; the breadth of the nave, including two aisles on each side, is 144 ft.; the total length of nave and choir is 466 ft., and the length of the transept, which has two aisles, is 238 ft. The interior vault is 143 ft. high; there are two rows of clustered pillars, 106 ft. high, around the nave and choir, and one row surrounding the transept. The west front, which has now been finished, is shown in our Illustration on the preceding page. It presents a beautiful Gothic portal, with four recesses at each side, containing statues of saints and kings; the four great exterior buttresses are grooved and niched, admitting the same kind of decorative sculpture; and so are the openings for the two large windows, to the right and left, the upper parts of which are of the best Geometrical Gothic design. The pediments, canopies, and pinnacles above are very richly adorned; and two tiers of tall canopied windows, four in each tier, occupy the higher portion of this front. The façade of the south transept is likewise elaborately decorated in the same manner, which, indeed, has been imitated in the west front. The general effect of the exterior view of the whole cathedral is shown in the large Engraving presented for an Extra Supplement this week. The central tower, rising over the intersection of the nave with the transept, is 350 ft. high to the star that appears over its summit. But the two western towers, measuring their elevation from the pavement outside, attain the vast height of 524 ft., or 515 ft. from the basement; which is far greater than the altitude of any other building in Europe. The completion of this majestic cathedral will be a matter for great congratulations, as we have observed, among all who belong to the German race, and who call Germany their Fatherland, though some of them dwell perhaps in this country, or in America, or Australia, or other distant parts of the world.

ART ITEMS.

Lord Lytton on Wednesday, the 6th inst., opened a Fine-Art Exhibition at the Shirehall, Hertford. The leading county families are contributors to the loan collection, and many of the articles exhibited were rare and valuable. Yesterday week a large and influential meeting was held in the Corn Exchange, for the purpose of distributing the prizes to the successful competitors in this exhibition, and also of promoting the establishment of a local school of art. The idea of inaugurating the enterprise by an exhibition originated with the Countess Cowper, and was carried out by her in conjunction with the Marchioness of Salisbury and a committee of ladies interested in artistic work. The exhibition proved to be a decided success, and the resolutions proposed were carried unanimously. Viscountess Grimston distributed the prizes. The prizes in the needlework department were given on Tuesday last by the Marchioness of Salisbury, and it was then resolved to establish a needlework association for the eastern districts of the county.

The Temple Bar Memorial was again the subject of discussion at the Court of Common Council held on the 7th inst. The City architect stated that the cost would be about £10,000. Notices of motion, directed against the scheme, were given.

The conditions upon which the twelve sculptors selected to compete for the production of the statue to the late Sir Rowland Hill were yesterday week agreed to by the Mansion House committee. Each of the sculptors will receive a gratuity of 15 guineas; and the models, which are to be 18 inches high, are to be sent to the Mansion House not later than Nov. 30.

Mr. Pfoundes, an English gentleman who has spent several years in Japan, threw open to the inspection of a few specially-invited guests, at his residence, No. 1, Cleveland-row, St. James's, Westminster, on Saturday last, a collection of objects illustrating Japanese art, folklore, and literature, it being his intention to give similar receptions every Saturday evening for a considerable period.

Mr. Cowen M.P., in an address delivered on Monday evening in connection with the Newcastle Science and Art School, spoke at considerable length on the subject of Art, which, he remarked, notwithstanding national inconsistencies and shortcomings, had during the last forty years made unprecedented progress in this country. A British school of art, both vigorous and healthy, had arisen, which, for variety, dexterity, and power, for purity of design, brilliance of colouring, and truth to nature, was not surpassed by that of any modern nation.

An exhibition under the auspices of the Turners' Company was opened at the Mansion House on Tuesday. The competition includes specimens of hand-turning in wood, ivory, and precious stones, and engraving in intaglio. The prizes, besides those of the Company, are contributed by Baroness Burdett-Coutts, Mr. Alderman Cotton, M.P., the Master (Mr. Greenhough), and others.

Signor Romanelli, of Florence, has completed a statue of the Prince Consort for Mrs. Richardson-Gardner (wife of Mr. Richardson-Gardner, M.P.), who intends to present it to the Albert Institute at Windsor.

The winter exhibition of the Institute of Art will open on Nov. 1 at 9, Conduit-street, W. The exhibits will be received on and after Monday next, the 18th inst.

HOME NEWS.

The reference library of the London Institution is open to all persons having reading tickets.

Next Monday, Oct. 18, the new Townhall at Wakefield, which has cost £80,000, will be opened by the Mayor.

The Earl of Fife will preside at the anniversary festival of the Scottish Corporation on St. Andrew's Day.

The monthly meetings of the new Shakspere Society at University College, were resumed yesterday (Friday), when its eighth session began.

Two other men, Patrick Heffernan and William Spencer, have been arrested on the charge of complicity in the murder of Lord Mountmorres.

Earl Fortescue, supported by a distinguished company, presided at the prize-day proceedings of the Devon County School, West Buckland, on the 6th inst.

The Most Rev. Dr. Cooke, Archbishop of Cashel, has collected £2766 as the subscription for the past year from his diocese to Peter's pence.

On Monday evening the Roman Catholic Total Abstinence League of the Cross had a most successful meeting at Exeter Hall, over which Cardinal Manning presided.

The open entrance scholarship of 125 guineas in science at Guy's Hospital Medical School has been awarded to Mr. H. W. Pigeon, and that of 125 guineas in Arts to Mr. R. Moody Ward; Mr. G. E. C. Anderson proxime accessit.

A gratuity of £2500 has been unanimously presented by the London Common Council to Mr. B. Scott, the City Chamberlain, for the able and zealous manner in which he had performed the duties of his office.

The Citizen states that no allegorical or theatrical adjuncts will form a feature of the Lord Mayor's show on Nov. 9; but, to make the occasion one of interest, good music, numerous banners, and an augmented military array will be relied on.

Nearly 17,000 Sunday-school children, representing Church and Nonconformist schools in Salford, took part in a united demonstration in Peel Park last Saturday in celebration of the Raikes centenary.

An official visit was paid to Burnham Beeches last Saturday by members of the Corn, Coal, and Finance Committee of the London Corporation, who have recently become the lords of the manor. Whilst determined to preserve the sylvan beauty of the place, the Corporation intend widening and improving the existing roads and walks.

Lady Grosvenor on the 6th inst. opened a new ward for children in the Chester Infirmary, in the erection of which the Duchess of Westminster had taken great interest. Some twenty-seven cots have been provided.

There has been a cat show at the Crystal Palace this week.—The Autumn show of English and Foreign cage birds has been held in the conservatory at the Alexandra Palace. There were about 550 entries, spread over 70 classes, and the arrangements afforded great facilities for inspection.

The closing dinner of the New Thames Yacht Club took place at the Club-house, Gravesend, last Saturday, when, despite the storm which had been raging throughout the day there was a large assemblage of members, presided over by Mr. W. N. Rudge, the vice-Commodore.

The arrivals of live stock and fresh meat from the United States and Canada last week, at Liverpool, were greatly below those of the preceding week, but quite up to those of recent weeks; the totals being 21,391 cattle, 529 sheep, 455 pigs; 2610 quarters of beef, 482 carcases of mutton, and 215 of pigs.

The rains which fell during the past week have swollen many rivers in the country to such an extent that the flat surrounding lands have been submerged to a depth of several feet. Villages have been consequently inundated, highways rendered impassable, and much destruction done to gathered crops and stock.

As a memorial to the late Mr. Ralph W. Jackson, it has been decided to acquire by public subscription a park, to be presented to the public of West Hartlepool. The site chosen is slightly to the west of the town, and about fifteen acres of land will probably be first secured. Already about £700 has been subscribed for the purpose.

A conference on the best means of dealing with discharged prisoners was held on Tuesday in Brook-street, Holborn. It was presided over by the Ordinary of Newgate, and attended by several governors and chaplains of metropolitan prisons. A paper on the subject was read by Mr. Hatton, and a discussion followed.

A resident in Bath having offered to present the city with a building worth £3000, provided it was used for a free library, the burgesses were polled three years ago, and decided to refuse to adopt the Free Libraries Act. Last week the burgesses were again polled, when the majority against a rate-aided library was nearly 2000.

A conference of licensed victuallers from all parts of the country was held at Birmingham on the 7th inst., to discuss the question of the united action of the Metropolitan Association with the National Defence League to defend the trade from the attacks threatened by the present Legislature. United action was resolved upon.

A barmaid has sued her late employer for a week's wages in lieu of a week's notice. In defence it was pleaded that it was part of the bargain that there should be no "counter courtship," and that the plaintiff, by paying too much attention to one customer, had broken her engagement. Judgment was given for the plaintiff.

At a meeting of the Birmingham School Board, at which nine scholarships and eight prizes were distributed to the successful students, the chairman, Mr. George Dixon, announced that since the establishment of the School Board the number of school children in the town had increased from 16,000 to 49,442.

The Marquis of Londonderry was on Tuesday installed with great honour as Provincial Grand Master of the province of Durham. The ceremony took place in the Castle Hall, Durham. After the ceremony a procession was formed to the cathedral, where a special service was held; and in the evening a Masonic banquet was held in the Townhall.

The Czar's new yacht Livadia had a six hours' continuous steaming in the Firth of Clyde yesterday week for the purpose of testing her engines. The six hours' voyage was performed at an average speed of fifteen knots, being one knot above the speed contracted for. While the Livadia was at anchor the Duke of Argyle went on board and inspected the vessel.

Mr. J. T. Hibbert, M.P., presided yesterday week at the sixth annual conference of the North-Western Poor Law district, held at Chester. He said that during the last ten years a saving of a million a year had been made in the dispensation of relief, and he looked to further reforms in the dealings with outdoor paupers.

The number of paupers in the metropolis on the last day of last week, exclusive of lunatics in asylums and vagrants, was 84,446, of whom 47,595 were in workhouses, and 36,851 received outdoor relief. As compared with the corresponding weeks in each of the three previous years these figures show an increase respectively of 2412, 7679, and 7277.

According to the report of Dr. Frankland, all the Thames waters, except that supplied by the Chelsea Company, were unfit for dietetic purposes in September owing to their large proportions of organic impurity, notwithstanding efficient filtration in every case. The Lea water distributed by the New River Company was of much better quality, although that sent out from the same source by the East London Company was little better than Thames water; both had been efficiently filtered. The river waters were delivered at a high temperature, which rendered them vapid and unpalatable.

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

FOUR NEW NOVELS AT ALL LIBRARIES.
ADAM AND EVE. By Mrs. PARR. 3 vols.
THE RED RAG. By R. MOUNTENEY JEPHSON. 2 vols. [Just ready.
JOHNNY LUDLOW. Second Series. By Mrs. HENRY WOOD. 3 vols.
THE WELLFIELDS. By JESSIE FOTHERGILL. 3 vols.
RICHARD BENTLEY and SON, New Burlington-street.

Now ready, 25th Edition, 8vo, cloth, pp. 1102, price 16s.,
HOMŒOPATHIC DOMESTIC MEDICINE. By J. LAURIE, M.D. Completely re-arranged, revised, re-written, annotated, and brought down to the present time, with a copious Introduction, by R. S. Gutteridge, M.D. The present edition contains many important new chapters and sections, with new features and matter pertaining thereto, including the specific characteristic effects of all the new American remedies, the symptoms and treatment of all general diseases, including those of women and children. Diseases of Tropical Climates are fully considered, and the volume may be pronounced of the greatest value to families, emigrants, and missionaries.
Of this work a Physician of high standing writes:—
"I have gone pretty well through your Edition of Laurie's Domestic Homœopathic Medicine, and I can truly say that it is the most perfect work of its kind ever published; in fact, it is, to my mind, too good for the general public, as it enlightens them too much in the art and mystery of medicine and surgery. For young medical beginners such a work is invaluable, as it would save them a great amount of reading. It is really superior to any Domestic yet published. I have the First and Second Editions of Laurie, and your Edition only shows what the work has developed into."

Just out, Thirtieth Edition, post 8vo, cloth, price 5s.,
EPITOME OF THE ABOVE WORK. By R. S. GUTTERIDGE, M.D.
This edition contains notices of most of the new medicines, and is brought down to the present time.
LEATH and ROSS, 5, St. Paul's-churchyard; and 9, Vere-street, W.

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

Now ready, royal 8vo, price 21s.,
THE POWER OF SOUND. By EDMUND GURNEY, late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge.
London: SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 15, Waterloo-place.

NEW NOVEL AT ALL THE LIBRARIES.
MEHALAH: A Story of the Salt Marshes.
2 vols. Post 8vo.
London: SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 15, Waterloo-place.

Second Edition, 1s.; or 13 stamps by post,
SKIN DISEASES TREATED HOMŒOPATHICALLY. By WASHINGTON EPPS, L.R.C.P. 100 cases, including 40 distinct varieties of skin diseases.
London: JAMES EPPS and Co., 48, Threadneedle-street.

JUST PUBLISHED. Post-free, Two Stamps.
DYSPEPSIA and the SEVERER FORMS OF INDIGESTION. A Small Pamphlet on those distressing complaints and their complete cure. Published by the Author, RICHARD KING, Esq., Staff Surgeon, R.N., 21, Warwick-st., Rugby.

Fourth Edition, cloth, post-free, 13 stamps,
DR. BARR MEADOWS on Homœopathy.
"A clever exposé of the system."
G. HILL, 154, Westminster-road.

Eighth Edition, cloth, post-free, 33 stamps,
DR. BARR MEADOWS on Skin Disease.
Remarks on the Abuse of Arsenic, and specifics.
G. HILL, 154, Westminster-road.

THE Treatment of Cancer, Tumours, and Ulcers, by CHIAN TURPENTINE, and all other Methods. Addressed to sufferers by ALEX. MARSDEN, M.D., Senior Surgeon to the Cancer Hospital, London. Post-free, 1s.
London: WYMAN and SONS, Great Queen-street, W.C.

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

DRAWING-ROOM OPERETTAS for CHILDREN. "Red Riding Hood's Rescue," by J. Astor Broad; Pianoforte Score, 1s. 3d. "New-Year's Eve," by Harry Schoeller, Pianoforte Score, 1s. Easy chorus, which children can quickly learn, with solos for their elders. Full Directions, for simple scenery and dresses.
J. CURWEN, and SONS, 8, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Just published, Illustrated, post-free, 1s. 8d.,
DECORATIVE PAINTING. A Practical Guide to Decorating the Walls of any Apartment, Painting Panels, Screens, and Terra Cotta. By W. R. HARRISON.—WM. BARNARD, 119, Edgware-road, London.

PAINTING on CHINA, EARTHENWARE, &c.: Practical Lessons by Madame la Baronne DELAMARDELLE. From the French, by G. A. Bouvier. Fourth Edition, post-free, 1s. 1d.—LECHERTIER, BARBE, and Co., 60, Regent-st., W.

THE NEW FASHION-BOOK.

DEBENHAM and FREEBODY beg to announce the publication of the Twenty-second Number of their NEW FASHION-BOOK. The Book is enlarged to forty-eight pages, and contains numerous Illustrations of selected Models in Costumes, Mantles, Millinery, Evening Dresses, and Lace Goods, with Descriptive Articles, Estimates, Prices, &c.
"It is a complete index to the fashionable novelties of the day, in regard to colour and make, furnishing made-up costumes of all that is choicest and newest, with their price in the respective materials, so that ladies may SHOP AT HOME."

THE NEW FASHION-BOOK Post-free for twelve stamps.
DEBENHAM and FREEBODY, Wigmore-street, Welbeck-street, London, W.

KOPF on DIET and HYGIENE. Price 6d. To be obtained at the Food Exhibition, Agricultural Hall, Stand 39; or, 2, Draper's-gardens, London, E.C.

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

ALL MOTHERS SHOULD READ
MYRA'S MID-MONTHLY JOURNAL and CHILDREN'S DRESS. Price 6d.; by post, 8d. Published on the 15th of each Month.

MYRA'S MID-MONTHLY JOURNAL contains information upon all the newest Modes for Children, from Infants to 14 years of age.

MYRA'S MID-MONTHLY JOURNAL. The OCTOBER Number contains cut-out Paper Pattern, the Leslie Apron; a Beautifully Coloured Fashion-Plate; the Silkworm's Gift, Design for a Braided Night-Dress Case; Diagram Sheet, containing—1. The Fanchalet Costume; 2. High Petticoat Bodice; Somerset Paletot; 4. The Minnie Night-Dress; 5. Edward VI. Hat. Costumes—Toilettes, Paletots, Chapeaux, and New Models of Clothing for Infants and Children; Dinner and Reception Toilettes; Walking, Indoor, Visiting Costumes; New Mantles; Chapeaux, Lingerie, Coiffures, Needlework—Squares in Guipure d'Art, and Braid and Crochet, Trimming for a Child's Collar, Loop, Fringe in Crochet, &c.

A MODE IN PARIS.—Nursery Notes by the SILKWORM; Modes for Children, and where to see them; the Last News from Paris.

MYRA'S ANSWERS.—Answers on Dress, Health, and Personal Attention, Needlework, the Cuisine, Miscellaneous, &c.

Subscriptions, Yearly, 8s.; Half-yearly, 4s.
GOUBAUD and SON,
39 and 40, Bedford-street, London, W.C.

Third Edition, 1s., post-free,
THE new ELECTROLYTIC TREATMENT of CANCER and of simple Tumours. By G. EDGELOW, M.D.—NELSON and Co., 23, Duke-street, Grosvenor-square, W.

Digitized by Google

FIVE PER CENT DEBENTURES.

AUSTRALASIAN AGENCY and BANKING CORPORATION (Limited).
Capital £1,250,000. In 125,000 Shares of £10 each.
Subscribed in the Australian Colonies, £982,320; in London, £200,000. Reserve Fund, £25,000.

LONDON DIRECTORS:
Abraham Scott, Esq. | Harry Hankey Dobree, Esq.
Frank C. Capel, Esq. | Joseph Cockfield, Dimsdale, Esq.

BANKERS:
Messrs. Dimsdale, Fowler, Barnard, and Dimsdales.

SOLICITORS:
Messrs. Freshfields and Williams.

The Company are now issuing Debentures at the above rate for four, five, or six years. Forms of application can be obtained at the Office of the Company, 6½, Austin Friars.

BANK OF NEW ZEALAND
(Incorporated by Act of General Assembly, July 29, 1861).
Bankers to the New Zealand Government.
Capital subscribed and paid up, £1,000,000.
Reserve Fund, £555,000.

DIRECTORS.
Hon. James Williamson, M.L.C., President.
G. B. Owen, Esq. | J. C. Firth, Esq.
Wm. Innes, Taylor, Esq. | S. Browning, Esq.
C. J. Stone, Esq.

LONDON BOARD.
Sir Penrose G. Julyan, K.C.M.G., C.B. | Rt. Hon. A. J. Mundella, M.P.
Falconer Larkworthy, Esq. | Robert Porter, Esq.
Thomas Russell, Esq., C.M.G.
Head Office—Auckland.

BRANCHES AND AGENCIES.
In Australia—Melbourne, Sydney, and Newcastle.
In Fiji—Levuka.
In New Zealand—Auckland, Blenheim, Christchurch, Dunedin, Invercargill, Napier, Nelson, New Plymouth, Picton, Wellington, and at eighty-six other towns and places throughout the Colony.

The Bank grants Drafts on all their Branches and Agencies, and transacts every description of banking business connected with New Zealand, Australia, and Fiji on the most favourable terms.

The London Office RECEIVES FIXED DEPOSITS of £50 and upwards, rates and particulars of which can be ascertained on application.
F. LARKWORTHY, Managing Director.
No. 1, Queen Victoria-street, Mansion House, E.C.

MISS GLYN'S SHAKESPERIAN READING and ELOCUTION LESSONS continue for LADIES, CLERGYMEN, and BARRISTERS, at 13, Mount-street, Grosvenor-square, W.

MALVERN COLLEGE. The NEXT TERM will BEGIN on FRIDAY, JAN. 28, 1881.

SMART'S WRITING INSTITUTION, 97B, Quadrant, Regent-street (entrance in Swallow-street). Open from Ten till Nine daily. Persons of all ages received privately, and taught at any time suiting their own convenience. Lessons one hour each. No classes. No extras. Improvement guaranteed in eight to twelve easy lessons. Separate room for ladies. Apply to Mr. Smart, as above.

CHARMING CRAYON PORTRAITS. Send Photo and 10s. 6d. to A. and J. BOOL, Artists (from Royal Academy, National Medallist), 30, Warwick-street, Pimlico, London, who will return photo with faithful Crayon Drawing from it, 15 by 10 inches, post-free, home or abroad. 100 testimonials. Tinted Crayons, 21s.; Water-colour, 21s.; Oil, two guineas; Life-size highly-finished Crayon, £5 5s. On Parle Français.

FINE-ART PARCEL of ENGRAVINGS for 21s.—Having purchased a large STOCK of first-class ENGRAVINGS, I have determined to SELL them at an immense reduction, comprising a pair of Turner's, pair of Landseer's, pair of Wilkie's, pair of Poole's, and a pair of Frith's, ten in all, in first-class condition, for 21s. Sufficient to furnish dining-room and library.—REES, 41, 42, 43, Russell-street, Covent-garden, opposite Drury-Lane Theatre.

VITREMANIE, superseding Diaphanie. An easy and inexpensive method of decorating windows in churches, public buildings, and private houses, by which may be produced the rich colouring and beautiful designs equal in appearance to real stained glass. Handbook of Designs and full instructions, 1s. 1d. Boxes, comprising designs, &c., at 21s., 31s. 6d., 42s. Particulars post-free. Sole inventors, J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street, London, W.

CHROMOPHOTOGRAPHY.
(KRAUS' PROCESS.)
The New Art (enabling any person without previous knowledge of either Painting or Drawing) to Colour Photographs on convex glasses, in imitation of China and Enamel Painting. Boxes containing every requisite, 20s. and 30s. Particulars post-free. Specimens shown on application at the Sole Agents, J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street, London, W.

WHY NOT MAKE YOUR OWN LANTERN SLIDES?
(TRANSFER PROCESS.)
A Box containing a Sheet of Twelve 3½-inch VIEWS, Glasses, Rubber, Brushes, Varnishes, New Frame, Masks, and Book containing full Instructions, 14s. Particulars and Price-Lists post-free.—J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street, London, W.

FOR ARMS and CREST send Name and County to T. MORING, Inns of Court Heraldic Offices, 44, High Holborn, W.C. Plain Sketch, 3s. 6d.; Coloured, 7s. 6d. Seals, Dies, and Diplomas. Illustrated Price-Lists post-free.

FOR FAMILY ARMS (Lincoln's-inn Heraldic Office) send Name and County. Sketch, 3s. 6d.; in colours, 7s. 6d. Arms Painted and Engraved on Seals, Dies, &c. PUGH BROTHERS, Great Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn, W.C.; and 76, Queen Victoria-street, E.C. Prize Medal, Paris, 1878.

WHAT IS YOUR CREST and WHAT IS YOUR MOTTO? Send name and county to CULLETON'S Heraldic Office, Plain Sketch, 3s. 6d.; colours, 7s. The arms of man and wife blended. Crest engraved on seals, rings, books, and steel dies, 8s. 6d. Gold seal, with crest, 24s. Solid Gold Ring, 18-carat, Hall-marked, with crest, 42s. Manual of Heraldry, 400 engravings, 3s. 9d.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

VISITING CARDS, by CULLETON. Fifty best quality, 2s. 6d., post-free, including the Engraving of Copper-plate. Wedding Cards, 50 each, 50 Embossed Envelopes, with Maiden Name, 13s. 6d.—T. CULLETON, Seal Engraver, 25, Cranbourn-street, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

CULLETON'S GUINEA BOX of STATIONERY contains a Ream of the very best Paper and 500 Envelopes, all stamped in the most elegant way with Crest and Motto, Monogram, or Address, and the engraving of Steel Die included. Sent to any part for P.O. order.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

RODRIGUES' MONOGRAMS, ARMS, CORONET, CREST, and ADDRESS DIES Engraved as Gems from Original and Artistic Designs.
NOTE-PAPER AND ENVELOPES, brilliantly Illuminated by hand in Gold, Silver, Bronze, and Colours.
BEST RELIEF STAMPING, any colour, 1s. per 100.
The New STYLOGRAPHIC PEN, 12s. 6d., 14s. 6d., and 16s. 6d.
A VISITING CARD PLATE, elegantly Engraved, and 100 Superfine Cards printed, for 4s. 6d.
BALL PROGRAMMES, BILLS OF FARE, GUEST CARDS, WEDDING CARDS, and INVITATIONS in every variety.
HENRY RODRIGUES, 42, Piccadilly, London, W.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS.
GOLD MEDAL,
PARIS,
1878.

TO BE SOLD, a few GOLD WATCHES, by the renowned M'Cabe, whose celebrated manufacture recently and finally ceased. Other eminent makers are also represented in the large Stock of Gold and Silver Watches at WALES and M'CULLOCH'S, 22, Ludgate-hill, and 76, Cheapside, all such instruments being warranted genuine, perfect in condition, and at about half original cost.

EVERY MAN HIS OWN PRINTER. The People's Printing Press, for Authors, Amateurs, the Army and Navy, &c. Prospectuses forwarded on application to D. G. BERRI, 36, High Holborn, London, W.C.

EPPS'S CHOCOLATE ESSENCE. Product of a special refining process, it is Chocolate devoided of its over richness and substantiality. Sugarless, and, when made, of the consistence of coffee. An afternoon Chocolate. Sold only in packets labelled JAMES EPPS and CO., Homœopathic Chemists, 48, Threadneedle-street, London.

ELECTRICITY IS LIFE.

PULVERMACHER'S "GALVANISM, NATURE'S CHIEF RESTORER OF IMPAIRED VITAL ENERGY."
In this Pamphlet the most reliable proofs are given of the vast and wonderful curative powers of Pulvermacher's Patent Galvanic Chain-Bands, Belts, &c., in Rheumatic, Nervous, and Functional Disorders. Sent post-free for three stamps on application to
J. L. PULVERMACHER'S GALVANIC ESTABLISHMENT, 194, Regent-street, London, W.

SULIS WATER. SULIS WATER.
THE NATURAL MINERAL WATER OF BATH AERATED.
Known to the Romans as "Aquæ Sulis."

SULIS WATER.—Analyses of Bath Water as it flows from the Spring, and of Aerated Bath Water, by Professor Attfield, F.I.C., F.C.S., Professor of Practical Chemistry to the Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain, Author of a "Manual on General Medical and Pharmaceutical Chemistry," &c.

"London, 17, Bloomsbury-square, W.C., Aug. 30, 1879.—I find that Aerated Bath Water is absolutely identical with the Bath Water as it flows from the Spring, except that the Spring Water has been aerated just as soda water, seltzer water, and many other mineral and medicinal waters are aerated—namely, by carbonic acid gas. I find, too, that the aeration has been well and judiciously conducted by Mr. R. B. Cater, of Bath.

These results of the analyses of the Bath Water before aeration and after aeration are practically identical. With the sodium and potassium are associated traces of rubidium and lithium, and with the calcium a trace of strontium.
"JOHN ATTFIELD."

SULIS WATER REALLY CURES GOUT.

SULIS WATER REALLY CURES INDIGESTION.

SULIS WATER REALLY CURES DYSPEPSIA IN ITS VARIOUS FORMS.

SULIS WATER IS ACKNOWLEDGED TO BE SUPREME AMONG TABLE WATERS.

SULIS WATER IS REALY THE MINERAL WATER OF BATH.

SULIS WATER SHOULD BE FOUND ON EVERY TABLE.

SULIS WATER.
PRICES—30 Large Bottles, 27s. per Case, or 7s. per Dozen; 100 Half Bottles, 42s. per Case, or 5s. 6d. per Dozen; 100 Quarter Bottles, 32s. per Case, or 4s. per Dozen. Allowances for Returned Empties. Sulis Water Bottles only will be allowed for as follows:—50 Large Bottles, 3s.; 100 Half, 4s. 6d.; 100 Quarter, 4s.

Sole Lessee under the Corporation of Bath,
R. B. CATER,
THE SPRINGS, GRAND PUMP-ROOM, BATH.
To be had of the principal Wine Merchants, Chemists, and Grocers.

DECORATION.

MORANT and CO., having for many years carefully studied the best periods of Decorative Art, and having had great experience in carrying out important orders, will be happy to advise upon the decoration and furnishing of town and country houses, to prepare designs, and to execute the necessary works at moderate cost.
They personally superintend all work intrusted to them.
91, New Bond-street, W.

ALFRED B. PEARCE, 39, Ludgate-hill, INVITES INSPECTION of all that is new and beautiful in useful and ornamental CHINA and GLASS, including

Dinner services ("Cottage"), 50 pieces	..	..	£0 13 6
Dinner Services for 12 persons (108 pieces)	..	..	1 15 0
Gilt China Dessert Services for 12 persons	..	..	0 17 0
Gilt China Tea Services, 40 pieces, 12s.; 28 pieces	..	..	0 8 6
China Breakfast Services for 6 persons	..	..	0 11 0
Toilet Services (for washstands), 6s. 9d., 9s. 6d., and	..	..	0 3 9
White Stone Jugs, "The Grecian," set of three	..	..	0 1 3

All really excellent patterns.

Quart Decanters, cut, good quality	per pair	0 5 0
Claret Decanters (with handle)	each	0 4 0
Plain light Claret Glasses, Burgundy shape ..	per doz.	0 6 0
Wine Glasses, plain or cut, Ports and Sherries	,,	0 1 9
Engraved Wine Glasses do do	,,	0 3 6
Hock Glasses, ruby bowl, 6s. per doz.; green bowl "	..	0 3 0
Half-pint Cut Tumblers	per doz.	0 3 3
Plain light Finger-Glasses, taper shape ..	,, ..	0 6 6

Other articles proportionately cheap.
Descriptive Catalogue post-free.
39, LUDGATE-HILL. Established 1760.

SILVER TEA and COFFEE SERVICES. GOLDSMITHS' ALLIANCE, Limited, Manufacturing Silversmiths, have always ready for immediate selection a great variety of the Newest and most Elegant Designs. The following are much admired:—

The Beaded Pattern.		The Orleans Pattern.
Silver Teapot	£15 12 0	Silver Teapot	£16 8 0
Silver Sugar Basin ..	8 0 0	Silver Sugar Basin ..	10 0 0
Silver Cream Ewer ..	5 10 0	Silver Cream Ewer ..	6 5 0
Silver Coffeepot	17 8 0	Silver Coffeepot	19 5 0
	£44 10 0		£51 18 0

A Pamphlet, Illustrated with 300 engravings, will be sent, post-free on application, and Lithographic Drawings of Silver Presentation Plate will be forwarded to committees and others requiring Testimonial Plate.
Goldsmiths' Alliance, Limited, Manufacturing Silversmiths, 11 and 12, Cornhill, London (opposite the Bank of England).

CHARLES FRODSHAM and CO. By Appointment to her Majesty. THREE GOLD MEDALS for CLOCKS and WATCHES.
Only Address, 84, Strand, London, W.C.

DENT'S WATCHES, CLOCKS, and CHRONOMETERS.—Illustrated Catalogue sent free.—Apply to 61, Strand, or 34, Royal Exchange, London.

WALKER'S CRYSTAL CASE WATCHES are superseding all others. Prize Medals—London, 1862; Paris, 1867. Silver Watches, from £4 4s.; Gold, from £6 6s. Price-Lists sent free.—77, Cornhill; 220, Regent-street; and 76, Strand.

DIAMONDS. SAPPHIRES. CATS'-EYES. OPALS. EMERALDS.
Mr. STREETER,
18, New Bond-street, W.
INTRODUCER of 18-CARAT GOLD JEWELLERY
and
ENGLISH LEVER WATCHES,
(MACHINE-MADE.)
BRANCH ESTABLISHMENT, COLOMBO, CEYLON.

THE FINEST WATCHES MADE. SEWILL'S KEYLESS WATCHES, Prize Medals, London, Paris, and Philadelphia. Damp and Dust-proof, 18-carat cases, adjusted and compensated for all climates, £10 10s., £14 14s., and £25; Ladies', £7 7s., £10 10s., and £18 10s.; in silver cases, for Ladies or Gentlemen, £5 5s., £6 6s., and £8 8s. Forwarded on receipt of remittance.—J. Sewill, 30, Cornhill, London; and 61, South Castle-street, Liverpool.

OROIDE GOLD ALBERT CHAINS, 5s., 7s. 6d., 10s. 6d. Links, Solitaires, or Studs, 2s. 6d. Brooches, 4s. 6d. to 8s. 6d. Earrings, 3s. 6d. to 7s. 6d. Lockets, 4s. 6d. to 12s. 6d. Free by post. Opinions of the Press and Price-Lists post-free.—C. C. ROWE, 92, Brompton-road, London, S.W.

NOTICE. — For PETER ROBINSON'S Court and General Mourning Warehouse.
"REGENT-STREET" is the only one address.

FAMILY BEREAVEMENTS.
UPON RECEIPT OF LETTER OR TELEGRAM, PETER ROBINSON'S Experienced Dressmakers and Milliners Travel to all parts of the COUNTRY, FREE of EXPENSE to purchasers, with Dresses, Millinery, and a full assortment of made-up Articles of the BEST and most suitable description. Also materials by the Yard, and supplied at the SAME PRICES as if purchased at the Warehouse in Regent-street.
Mourning for Servants at unexceptionably low rates, at a great saving to large or small Families.
Funerals conducted in Town or Country at stated charges.
Address ONLY to 256 to 262, REGENT-STREET, LONDON, PETER ROBINSON'S.

THE BUYERS
of PETER ROBINSON, of REGENT-STREET, have just returned from Paris with a new and choice collection of MANTLES, CLOAKS, and JACKETS, MILLINERY, COSTUMES, in SATIN and SILK, COSTUMES in NEW MATERIALS, EVENING DRESSES, OPERA CLOAKS, and Novelties in every department.
PETER ROBINSON, of REGENT-STREET, respectfully solicits a visit to THE REGENT-STREET SHOP, Nos. 256 to 262, Regent-street.

BLACK VELVET-VELVETEENS, new and superior makes, in appearance equal to Silk Velvet, at 2s. 6d., 2s. 11d., and 3s. 6d. Also the guaranteed fast Pile Velveteens, at 2s. 11d. and up to 5s. 11d. For patterns, please direct only to 256 to 262, Regent-street, PETER ROBINSON'S.

BLACK VELVET-VELVETEEN COSTUMES, at 3 guineas, and up to 7 guineas. BLACK SERGE COSTUMES, from 2 guineas. NEW AUTUMN MATERIAL COSTUMES, from 2 to 7 guineas. Perfectly New Styles. At PETER ROBINSON'S, of REGENT-STREET, Nos. 256 to 262.

EVENING DRESSES.
A New and very Choice Collection for this Season, at 1 guinea and up to 7 guineas. Illustrations and Descriptions, with Patterns, sent on application. Address only to 256 to 262, Regent-street. PETER ROBINSON'S.

BLACK SILKS.
DURING THIS MONTH, we shall sell
Messrs. BONNET et CIE. and JAUBERT et CIE. BLACK SILKS at Manufacturers' prices, and Cheaper than they have ever before been supplied.

Bonnet's..	No. 1 Quality,	4s. 3d.	from 1s. 6d. to 4s. per yard under fair value.
..	No. 2 ,,	5s. 3d.
..	No. 3 ,,	6s. 9d.
..	No. 4 ,,	7s. 9d.
Jaubert ..	No. 1 Quality,	3s. 3½d.	from 1s. to 4s. per yard under their fair value.
	No. 2 ,,	3s. 11d.
	No. 3 ,,	4s. 9d.
	No. 4 ,,	5s. 3d.
	No. 5 ,,	6s. 0d.

To be obtained only at
PETER ROBINSON'S
REGENT-STREET SHOP,
Nos. 256 to 262, Regent-street.
For Patterns please be careful in the address.

BAKER and CRISP.
The newest and cheapest DRESS FABRICS.
The newest and cheapest Cashmeres, Serges, Pompadours, Broches, and 100 other New Fabrics, from 8½d. yard.
Patterns free.—198, Regent-street.

BAKER and CRISP'S
LYONS MOLESKIN VELVETEENS, in Black, Prune, Cardinal, Navy, Old Gold, Browns, Claret, Rubys, and all other colours; also Black, Coloured, and Figured Velveteens and Silk Velvets, at our well-known low prices for best goods.
198, Regent-street.—Patterns free.

BAKER and CRISP'S ULSTERS and CLOAKS.
New Engravings, Patterns, and Measurement Forms, free.
1000 Fur-lined Cloaks, 21s. to 50s. 6d.

Our Mother Hubbard Cloak, lined through, 29s. 6d. to 35s. 6d.	The most Ladylike Ulsters, 8s. 11d. to 50s.
St. Leger Jacket, 21s. to 35s.	St. Leger Costume, £2 to £3.
Jersey Jackets. See engravings.	Engravings free.
The Lanetry, Sandown, and other Ulsters. Engravings free.	The Watteau Tea Gown, 21s. The Princess Morning Gown, 15s. 9d. Engravings sent.

Tam-o'-Shanter Hats to match Ulsters, 2s. 11d.; Velveteen, 6s. 6d.; Silk Velvets or Plush, 8s. 9d.
Engravings of all Newest Fashions free.
BAKER and CRISP, 198, Regent-street, London.

DRESS FABRICS EXTRAORDINARY. 11,000 yards Soft FOULE CASHMERE CLOTHS, in Prune, Bronze, Claret, Myrtle, Black, and other shades, all at 11s. for 14 yards. Patterns free.
BAKER and CRISP, 198, Regent-street.

SHAWLS and WRAPS Extraordinary. 100 doz. Shetland Shawls, two yards square, any colour, for stamps, 2s. 6d.; Berlin Wraps, new and beautiful, a luxury for cool evenings, 2s. 11d., 3s. 6d., 4s. 11d. each. Free for remittance.
BAKER and CRISP'S.

MOURNING.
Messrs. JAY'S experienced Assistants travel to any part of the Kingdom, free of expense to purchasers. They take with them dresses and millinery, besides materials, all marked in plain figures, and at the same price as if purchased at the Warehouse in Regent-street. Funerals at stated charges.

BLACK INDIAN CASHMERE COSTUMES.—The general utility and exquisite drapery of Indian Cashmere has made it one of the most fashionable materials for this season's costumes. Messrs. Jay have imported a variety of costumes made of Indian Cashmere, and they are specially recommended for style and good wear.
JAY'S, REGENT-STREET.

PATTERNS FREE.

BLACK VELVETEENS.—Almost equal in appearance to good black velvet. As black velveteen is likely to be much worn during the winter season, Messrs. JAY have had manufactured for themselves special qualities of black velveteen, fast colour. These Velveteens are confidently recommended to their customers.
JAY'S,
THE LONDON GENERAL MOURNING WAREHOUSE,
REGENT-STREET, W.

ULSTER CLOTHS, Sealskins, and other Materials for Ladies' Jackets, at very moderate prices, for ready money only.
CHARLES MEEKING and CO., Woollen Warehouse, 8, Holborn-circus, corner of Hatton-garden, London.

AEGIDIUS. — The only non-shrinking Flannel Shirt. Warm as wool, soft as silk, and very elastic. Patterns and self-measure free.
R. FORD, 41, Poultry, London.

PRETTY FLOWERS, Bridal Bouquets, Bridesmaids' Bouquets, Baskets of Flowers, Loose Cut Flowers, Funeral Wreaths. Prices on application.—WILLIAM HOOPER, 88, Oxford-street, W.

PRATT'S LADIES' BELTS AND ABDOMINAL SUPPORTS
ARE CONFIDENTLY RECOMMENDED AS THE MOST COMFORTABLE AND EFFICIENT EVER MADE.
Apply to the Ladies' Attendant,
J. F. PRATT,
420, OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.

IMPORTANT NOTICE,
Please direct all Letters and Orders for
PETER ROBINSON,
SILKMERCER AND LINENDRAPER,
TO THE ONLY ADDRESS,
103 to 108, OXFORD-STREET,
LONDON, W.
(where the Business was Established in 1833).
CASH PRICES. PARCELS FREE.

SILKS, SATINS, VELVET, and PLUSHES.—NOW ON SALE.
All Patterns free.
The entire Manufacturer's Stock, comprising Rich BROCADED SILKS, in every variety, for the fashionable Combination Dresses.

3s. 6d.; usual price 5s. 6d.		In all the New Autumn Shades and Mixtures of Old Gold, &c.
4s. 6d.; ,, 6s. 6d.		In delicate Tints for Evening and Dinner Wear.
5s. 6d.; ,, 7s. 6d.
6s. 6d.; ,, 8s. 9d.		In White Ivory and Cream for Bridal Wear; also in Black.

RICH VELVET BROCADES.

5s. 11d.; usual price 8s. 9d.		In splendid variety of new Autumn Shades and Mixtures for making up with Silks, Satins, or other fabrics.
6s. 11d.; ,, 9s. 6d.
7s. 6d.; ,, 10s. 9d.

BLACK VELVET BROCADES, in very handsome designs for dresses and mantle, much under price—7s. 6d. to 21s.
400 pieces COLOURED SATIN STRIPED VELVETS—3s. 9d.; usual price 5s. 6d., in every shade.
ITALIAN SILK VELVETS—4s. 11d., 6s. 9d., 8s. 9d., in every possible shade.
BLACK LYONS SILK VELVETS—9s. 6d. to 21s., 11s. 9d. to 16s. 9d., in all new shades.
The New DRESS and MANTLE PLUSH, in black and all new colours—7s. 6d. to 10s. 9d.
LYONS DRESS SILKS, in every possible shade of colour—2s. 11d., 3s. 6d., 4s. 6d., 5s. 11d.; worth 7s. 11d., extra double warp.
Rich DUCHESSE SATIN, in black and all the new shades—5s. 3d., exceptional, 24 in. wide.
SILK-FACED and SILK SATINS, in all shades—2s. 11d. to 7s. 11d.

BLACK SILKS, SPECIAL.
200 Pieces Lyons Gros Grain—2s. 11½d., wear guaranteed.
400 Pieces of the best make in pure Lyons Silks—3s. 6d. to 4s. 11d.; 5s. 11d., usual price 7s. 11d., extra rich; 6s. 11d., usual price 8s. 11d.; 7s. 11d., usual price 10s. 6d.
The Satin Merveilleux, very soft and bright—5s. 6d., wear guaranteed.
Black Silks-faced Satins—1s. 9½d. to 2s. 11d.
New Dress Satins, very bright—3s. 3½d. to 6s. 11d.
12 Pieces All-Silk Satin Duchesse, extra wide—9s. 6d., worth double. Specially recommended.
300 Pieces of Black Satin de Lyons—4s. 6d. to 5s. 3d.

RICH VELVET VELVETEENS.
Black, White, and all the New Colours, in Plain, Striped, and Embossed, 1s. 11d. to 4s. 9d. per yard.
Also, the New Black, as advertised, very wide, 2s. 11d. to 5s. 6d. per yard.
Patterns free.

AUTUMN and WINTER DRESSES.
NEW MATERIALS in NEW COLOURS, suitable for the present and APPROACHING SEASON, Cashmir d'Italie, Grain de Poudre, Cashmire de la Reine, Angola Foulé, &c. All pure Wool, and dyed by the most eminent Paris dyers, in black and every new colour.
Prices from 14s. 6d. to 25s. the Full Dress.
Also in Black and the same colours, several thousand pieces of Cashmere and Cashmere Merinos, very wide,
2s. 3d. to 3s. 6d. the yard.
Estamene, Witney, Devonshire, and other all-wool Serges, in Navy, Dark Brown, Prune Bronze Black, &c., from 1s. to 2s. 3d. the yard.
Patterns of all the above free. Cash prices. Parcels free.
PETER ROBINSON, 103 to 108,
OXFORD-STREET, W.

THE GLOVE STOCKS of L. T. PIVER,
of 160, REGENT-STREET,
and
H. ORGER, of 132, REGENT-STREET,
Bought for cash at large discounts,
are NOW on SALE
at little more than Half Price, at
PETER ROBINSON'S, OXFORD-STREET.

PRESENTS.—MECHI has REMOVED from Regent-street to 4 to 9, STRAND, and 2, LOWTHER-ARCADE (nearly opposite the Charing-cross Station). As usual with him—quality first rate, prices moderate, 10 per cent discount for cash. Having been tested for 53 years, since he first commenced business in Leadenhall-street, he feels confident that his old friends and customers will not forsake him, especially those who still continue to remove their daily growth of beard. Catalogues post-free.

FLORILINE. For the Teeth and Breath. Is the best Liquid Dentifrice in the world; it thoroughly cleanses partially-decayed teeth from all parasites or living "animalculæ," leaving them pearly white, imparting a delightful fragrance to the breath. The Fragrant Floriline removes instantly all odours arising from a foul stomach or tobacco smoke, being partly composed of honey, soda, and extracts of sweet herbs and plants. It is perfectly harmless, and delicious as sherry. Sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere, at 2s. 6d. per Bottle.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY for the HAIR. If your hair is turning grey, or white, or falling off, use "The Mexican Hair Renewer," for it will positively restore in every case Grey or White Hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting the growth of the hair on bald spots where the glands are not decayed. "The Mexican Hair Renewer" is sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere, at 3s. 6d. per Bottle.

MITCHAM LAVENDER.—PIESSE and LUBIN.

LAVENDER, Sweet Lavender.—PIESSE and LUBIN are now distilling, at their Flower Farm, the famed MITCHAM LAVENDER. Samples may be had either at the Stillery, Mitcham-road, Surrey, or at the Laboratory, 2, New Bond-street, London.

NUDA VERITAS.—GREY HAIR restored by this valuable specific to its original shade, after which it grows the natural colour, not grey. Used as a dressing, it causes growth and arrests falling. The most harmless and effectual restorer extant. One trial will convince it has no equal. Price 10s. 6d., of all Chemists and Hairdressers. Testimonials post-free.—R. HOVENDEN and SONS, London.

GOLDEN HAIR.—ROBARE'S AUREOLINE produces the beautiful Golden Colour so much admired. Warranted perfectly harmless. Prices 5s. 6d. and 10s. 6d., of all Perfumers. Wholesale, HOVENDEN and SONS, 6, Great Marlborough-street, W.; and 93 and 95, City-road, E.C. London. Pinaud and Meyer, 37, Boulevard de Strasbourg, Paris; 31, Graben, Vienna; 44, Rue des Longs Chariots, Brussels.

BREIDENBACH'S WOOD VIOLET. Fresh as the flower itself. Price 2s. 6d., 5s., 10s. Bottle. Sold at all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the Universe; or Breidenbach and Co., Distillers of Wood Violet to the Queen, 157B, New Bond-street, W. Trade-Mark, the "Wood Violet."

EXTRAORDINARY TESTIMONIAL. "For 30 years I have tried all the various soaps that have been recommended, and I candidly state that the ALBION MILK and SULPHUR SOAP has no equal in soothing the irritation of the skin."—J. Mayrick Croft, M.D., M.R.C.P., late Staff Surgeon to her Majesty's Royal Army Hospitals, May 1, 1880. N.B.—Dr. Croft has great pleasure in sending, unasked, his opinion of the Albion Milk and Sulphur Soap.—By all Chemists, in Tablets, 9d. and 1s. Chief Dépôt, 532, Oxford-street London.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON,
FOR CONSTIPATION,
BILE,
HEADACHE.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON,
A LAXATIVE AND REFRESHING FRUIT LOZENGE,
UNIVERSALLY PRESCRIBED BY THE FACULTY.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON.
2s. 6d. per Box, stamp included.
Sold by all Chemists and Druggists.
Wholesale—E. GRILLON, 69, Queen-street, London, E.C.

THROAT AFFECTIONS, ASTHMA, COUGHS, and COLDS are immediately relieved and rapidly cured by Dr. LOCOCK'S PULMONIC WAFERS. They give a sound, refreshing night's rest.

Digitized by Google

NEW MUSIC.

Just published,

OLIVETTE. New Comic Opera, now being performed at the Strand Theatre with enormous success. Adapted by H. B. Farnie; Music by AUDRAN.

	s.	net.
Vocal Score	8s.	net.
Pianoforte Solo	2s. 6d.	,,
Olivette Waltz. D'Albert	2s.	,,
Olivette Quadrille. D'Albert	2s.	,,
Olivette Polka. D'Albert	2s.	,,
Torpedo Galop. D'Albert	2s.	,,
I Love my Love so well. Duet	4s.	,,
The Convent slept	2s.	,,
Where balmy garlic scents the air. Bolero	2s.	,,
Valse Song. First Love	2s.	,,
Torpedo Song	2s.	,,
Sob Song. Sung by Miss St. John	2s.	,,
Romance—"Nearest and Dearest"	2s.	,,
Franz Nava's Gems from Olivette (Nos. 1 and 2) each	1s. 6d.	,,
Franz Nava's Farandole	1s. 6d.	,,
Audran's "Nearest and Dearest"	2s.	,,

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

CHARLES D'ALBERT'S NOVELTIES.

ADELINA WALTZ. Illustrated with a beautiful Portrait of Madame Patti . . 2s. 0d. net
PORTIA WALTZ . . 2s. 0d. net
DRINK, PUPPY, DRINK! POLKA . . 2s. 0d. net
CAN'T STOP! GALOP . . 2s. 0d. net
CONGRESS LANCERS . . 2s. 0d. net
DISTANT SHORE WALTZ . . 2s. 0d. net
THE FANFARE POLKA . . 1s. 6d. net

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

Now ready,

VOLUME TWO OF CHAPPELL'S OLD ENGLISH DITTIES. Handsomely bound in cloth and gold. Price 10s. 6d. net.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S THREE-YEARS' SYSTEM of HIRE of PIANOFORTES, HARMONIUMS, and AMERICAN ORGANS, by which the Instrument becomes the property of the Hirer at the end of the third year, provided each quarter's hire shall have been regularly paid in advance. Pianofortes, from 2 gs.; Harmoniums, from £1 4s.; and American Organs, from £2 10s. a Quarter.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S PIANINOS, from 20 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S COTTAGES, from 27 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S GRANDS, from 60 guineas.

CHICKERING PIANOFORTES, from 120 guineas, with American discount.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S ALEXANDRE HARMONIUMS, for Church, Schools, or Drawing-Rooms, from 5 to 150 guineas; or, on the Three-Years' System, from £1 5s. per quarter.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S IMPROVED AMERICAN ORGANS, combining Pipes with Reeds, Manufactured by Clough and Warren, Detroit, U.S.A. The immense advantages these instruments possess over the Organs hitherto imported have induced Messrs. Chappell and Co. to undertake the sole Agency of this eminent Manufactory. A large variety on view, from 25 to 200 guineas. Price-Lists on application to CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S Favourite ORGAN. Compass, five octaves, ten stops, four sets of reeds, two of two and two thirds octaves and two of two and one third octaves, knee swell, elegant carved Canadian walnut case, price 25 guineas. With twelve stops, sub-bass octave coupler, and two knee pedals, 35 guineas. Illustrated Price-List free by post.

Sole Agents, CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

NEW DANCE MUSIC.
SUCCESS OF THE SEASON.
AMITIÉ VALSE. By H. R. CALLCOTT. 4s.
TOUT EST FINI GALOP. By H. R. CALLCOTT. 4s.
AVANT SOUPIR GALOP. By H. R. CALLCOTT. 4s.
Half price post-free.

ALDERSON and BURNSALL, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

CIRO PINSUTI'S LATEST SUCCESS.
THE BUGLER.
In D, for Bass; F, Baritone; and G, Tenor. Post-free, 24 stamps. net.
London: B. WILLIAMS, 60, Paternoster-row.

JOSEPH WILLIAMS'S LIST.
ALL MUSIC POST-FREE AT HALF PRICE.

FOLI'S GREATEST SUCCESS.

THE RAFT. Descriptive Fantasia. By PINSUTI. In E and G, free, 24 stamps. Now being sung by Signor Foli with the greatest success at all his concerts. Decidedly the finest baritone (or bass) song extant.

I LOVE MY LOVE. PINSUTI'S most celebrated Song, in A flat and B flat; free, 24 stamps. This the most effective Drawing-room Song ever written, is continually sung by all the leading vocalists, both soprano and contralto.

THREE JOLLY BRITONS, or the ENGLISH, IRISH, and SCOTCH.
New National Song.
"Long may our good Queen on her Throne
O'er her subjects keep a watch,
For the three will fight for her as one,
Though English, Irish, and Scotch.
Words and Music, G. WARE. Post-free, 18 stamps.

SHALL I WEAR A WHITE ROSE? New Song. By EMILY FARMER; poetry by Savile Clark. This charming Song is now being sung by Madame Trebelli at her Provincial Concerts with perfect success. Published in E flat and G, for soprano or contralto. Post-free, 24 stamps.

JOHN GILPIN. Cantata. By GEORGE FOX. 2s. 6d. net. Easy and effective. A liberal discount allowed to choral societies for copies.

LES CLOCHES DE CORNEVILLE.
Vocal Score, English Words, 10s. net, and 4s.
Piano Score, complete, 2s. 6d. net.

HENRY FARMER'S PIANOFORTE TUTOR, considerably Enlarged and Fingered by the Author. 100th Edition. 4s.
"Decidedly the best and most useful instruction book we have seen."—Musical Review.

JOSEPH WILLIAMS,
24, Berners-street, W.; and 123, Cheapside, E.C.

CHARLES HALLE'S PRACTICAL PIANOFORTE SCHOOL.
Section I.—No. 1, Pianoforte Tutor. Also 67 Numbers of CHARLES HALLE'S MUSICAL LIBRARY are now ready. Catalogues and all particulars may be had from FORSYTH BROTHERS, London, 272A, Regent-circus, Oxford-street; Manchester, Cross-street and South King-street; and all Musicsellers.

DOMINION ORGAN COMPANY,
Bowmanville, Ontario, Canada.
The best and cheapest 25 Guinea Organ in the Trade.
"PRINCESS LOUISE,"
Ten Stops, including Octave Coupler.
Sole Agents for the United Kingdom,
FORSYTH BROTHERS,
London: 272A, Regent-circus, Oxford-street.
Manchester: Cross-street and South King-street.
Complete Catalogues post-free.

NEW MUSIC.

POPULAR NUMBERS OF

BOOSEYS' MUSICAL CABINET.
Price 1s. each.
216. ROBERT FRANZ ALBUM. 32 Songs.
138. GOUNOD'S 10 SONGS, including "The Serenade," and "Où voulez-vous aller?"
2. LONGFELLOW AND BALFE'S 10 CELEBRATED SONGS.
13. HATTON'S 12 SONGS. New Edition.
145. DOLORES' 12 SONGS.
163. A. S. GATTY'S 12 BALLADS.
149. VIRGINIA GABRIEL'S 10 SONGS.
168. ARTHUR SULLIVAN'S 10 SONGS.
83. TWELVE VOCAL DUETS FOR LADIES' VOICES.
173. LILLIE'S SONG BOOK. 20 Songs.
212. BOOSEYS' MARCH ALBUM. 35 Marches.
203, 210, 213. RUBINSTEIN'S 3 ALBUMS. 25 Pieces.
214. ROBERT SCHUMANN'S ALBUMBLATTER.
204. BRAHMS' PIANOFORTE ALBUM
205. RAFF'S PIANOFORTE ALBUM.
150. FIELD'S NOCTURNE ALBUM. 10 Nocturnes.
114. BEETHOVEN'S WALTZ ALBUM. 45 Waltzes.
200. LAMOTHE'S WALTZ ALBUM. 6 Waltzes.
201. WALDTEUFEL'S WALTZ ALBUM. 8 Waltzes.
Boosey's Musical Cabinet also contains Beethoven's, Mozart's, Schubert's, and Dussek's Sonatas; Chopin's Waltzes, Mazurkas, and Nocturnes (each complete for 1s.); Mendelssohn's, Schumann's, Heller's, Weber's, and Hummel's works. The cheapest and best editions published. A full Catalogue on application.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street; and all Musicsellers and Booksellers in Town and Country.

BOOSEYS' SHILLING INSTRUCTORS.

Organ	Best.	Theory	Dr. Callcott.
Harmonium	Elliott.	Violin	Henning.
Pianoforte	Mount.	Violoncello	Howell.
Singing (Men)	Hatton.	Flute	Pratten.
Singing (Ladies)	Hatton.	Cornet	Jones.
Ballad Singing	Balfe.	Concertina	Case.
Choral Singing	Dr. Spark.	Clarionet	Kappey.

BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

New and much enlarged Edition. Price 12s. 6d.,

LOGIER'S SYSTEM OF THE SCIENCE OF MUSIC. "As a guide to the teacher, or for private study, we know of no better work."—Musical Standard.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

SPOHR'S VIOLIN SCHOOL. Edited by HENRY HOLMES. Price 10s. 6d. complete, bound in cloth.—BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

With Fifteen Illustrations, price 2s. 6d.,

LILLIE'S FIRST MUSIC-BOOK. Sixty-four pages. Music size. "The most admirable tutor extant for the pianoforte."—Somerset Herald.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

Next week, price 2s. 6d.,

LILLIE'S SECOND MUSIC-BOOK. Fifty-six pages. Music size, with six full-page Illustrations, forming a sequel to the first book, and completing the work. BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

Just published, 2s. 6d., paper covers; 4s., cloth, gilt edges,

HANDEL'S OPERA SONGS.—A Collection of Fifty-two of the choicest Songs from Handel's Operas, with Italian and English Words. Edited by W. T. Best. "The impression produced by turning over this collection is one of astonishment that such a wealth of fine and effective songs should have been neglected so long."—Pall Mall Gazette.—BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

Price 2s. 6d., paper covers; 4s., cloth, gilt edges,

THE SONGS OF ENGLAND—Second Volume—containing 100 celebrated Songs and Ballads. Edited by J. L. HATTON.—THE ROYAL EDITION.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

Price 2s. 6d., paper covers; 4s., cloth, gilt edges,

THE SONGS OF FRANCE. A Collection of Sixty celebrated Songs and popular Romances, all with French and English Words.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

THE SONGS OF FRANCE contains songs by Boieldieu, Grétry, Adam, Auber, Gounod, Berlioz, Halévy, Lefort, Alary, Nadaud, Niedermeyer, Flotow, Felicien David, Wekerlin, Masini, Puget, Henrion and Berdèse, in addition to the popular and National Songs of France. The work is specially for drawing-room use, and contains no extracts from operas. THE ROYAL EDITION.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

Full music size, 32 pages, 1s. each,

THE CAVENDISH MUSIC-BOOKS. Thirty-nine volumes are now ready, including New Ballad Concert Albums of Sherrington, Sterling, Reeves, Lloyd, and Santley (10 songs in each book); Albums of English, Irish, and Scotch Ballads (20 in each book); Songs of the Day (10 in each book); Sacred Songs and Pieces; Pianoforte Albums, containing the most favourite pieces of the time; Gavotte and Minuet Albums; Arabella Goddard's and Liszt's Albums; Recollections of the Opera, a book of 25 gems; Classical Readings, a book of 20 celebrated pieces; Books of Piano and Vocal Duets; Dance Albums; and collections of music for beginners. Full List of Contents post-free—BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street; and all Musicsellers and Booksellers in town and country.

PART MUSIC, published by ROBERT COCKS and CO., New Burlington-street.
HANDBOOK OF GLEES. Demy 4to, in Nos., at 1d. each; and double Nos., price 2d. each.
VOCAL QUARTETS, in 8vo form, for the use of Schools, Choral and Glee Societies, 60 Nos., from 1d. each to 4d. each.
W. HILLS' 105 ROUNDS and CANONS, 13 parts, each 2d.; or complete, limp cloth, 3s.
W. HILLS' VOCAL TRIOS; sequel to the Rounds and Canons. In 39 parts, each 2d.; or double parts 4d. each; or in 3 volumes, each 3s.
A List of the above may be had gratis and post-free.

WE TWO (BLUMENTHAL). Transcribed for the Pianoforte by BRINLEY RICHARDS. Price 3s.; post-free for 18 stamps
London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

THE PAPER SHIP. Song by A. S. GATTY. The Words, by Mrs. W. K. Clifford, are most original and amusing. Post-free for 18 stamps.
London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

RAINDROPS. New Song. By Lady LINDSAY (Balcarres). "The idea is an exceedingly pretty one, and the accomplished composer has treated it very artistically."—Nottingham Daily Guardian. Post free for 18 stamps.—London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

THE UNFORGOTTEN SONG. By ODOARDO BARRI. Price 3s., post-free at half the marked price.—London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

GOOD-NIGHT AND GOOD-MORROW. By J. H. CROXALL. Written by Lord Houghton. Price 3s.; post-free for 18 stamps.
London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

YOU SHALL STEER, CIRO PINSUTI'S Popular Song. Also, by the same Composer, MY LITTLE QUEEN. Price 3s. each; post-free at half price in stamps.
London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street.

GOOD-BYE. COTSFORD DICK'S New Song. The Poetry by G. J. Whyte-Melville. One of the most charming songs in words and music produced for some time. Post-free, 24 —DUFF and STEWART, 2, Hanover-street, W.

THE KING'S CHAMPION. New Song, for Baritone or Bass. Composed by MICHAEL WATSON. Sung by Mr. Thurley Beale. Editions in D and E flat.
Post-free, 24.—DUFF and STEWART, 2, Hanover-street, W.

ANNABEL LEE. New Song. By C. SWINNERTON HEAP. Sung by Mr. Maas at the Gloucester Festival. Price 2s. net.—NOVELLO, EWER and Co.

THE MUSICAL TIMES for OCTOBER contains:—A French View of Wagner—The Father of the Symphony—The Great Composers: Spohr—Musical Doctors—The Gloucester Musical Festival—Occasional Notes—Reviews, Foreign and Country News, &c. Price 3d.; post-free, 4d. Annual subscription, 4s., including postage.

THE MUSICAL TIMES for OCTOBER contains:—"Hurrah, for Merry England;" Chorus by H. H. PIERSON. Price separately, 1½d.
London: NOVELLO, EWER, and Co., 1, Berners-street, W.; and 80 and 81, Queen-street, E.C.

TRUSTING AND TRUE. LANGTON WILLIAMS'S New Song. Sung by Madame Campobello with much success. 2s. net.
W. WILLIAMS and Co., 221, Tottenham-court-road.

COWEN'S GREATEST SUCCESS.

THE CHILDREN'S HOME. By COWEN; B flat, C (compass, C to E, and E flat. Post-free, 24 stamps.
W. MOZLEY, Jun., and Co., 70, Upper-street, London, N.

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS' Newly-Patented SOSTENENTE GRAND and UPRIGHT PIANOS have gained the two First Prizes and only Special Mention above all competitors at the Sydney International Exhibition, 1879-80. Lists free.—11, Wigmore-street, London, W.

PIANOFORTES for HIRE or for SALE, from 25 guineas upwards.—JOHN BROADWOOD and SONS, 33, Great Pulteney-street, Golden-square, W. Manufactory, 45, Horseferry-road, Westminster, W.

P. J. SMITH AND SONS'

IRON-STRUTTED PIANOS.
"The best and most substantial instrument produced."
3 and 4, PRINCES-STREET, OXFORD-STREET, W.

D'ALMAINES' PIANOS HALF PRICE.
In consequence of a change of partnership, the whole of this splendid stock, perfected with all the modern improvements of the day by this long-standing firm, of 100 years' reputation, and in order to effect a speedy sale. The easiest terms arranged, with seven years' warranty. Trichord Cottages from hire, or taken in exchange, £10 to £12.
Class 0, £14 | Class 2, £20 | Class 4, £30 | Class 6, £35
Class 1, £17 | Class 3, £23 | Class 5, £27 | Class 7, £40
American Organs from £5.—91, Finsbury Pavement, Moorgate Station, E.C.

REBUILDING SALE.—PIANOFORTES, £15; Broadwood Pianos, £20; Erard Pianos, £25; Collard Pianos, £28; Harmoniums, £6; American Organs, £10.
THOMAS OETZMANN and Co., 27, Baker-street, Portman-sq.

REBUILDING SALE.—Purchasers who can pay cash will do well to take advantage of this exceptional opportunity of obtaining thoroughly good instruments at extraordinary low prices.

REBUILDING SALE. — The PIANOFORTE HIRE and THREE-YEARS' SYSTEM BUSINESS carried on as usual during the Rebuilding.—THOMAS OETZMANN and CO., 27, Baker-street, exactly opposite Madame Tussaud's.

BUTLER'S MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
Violins, Concertinas, Harmoniums, Flutes, Clarionets, Flageolets, Guitars, Banjoes, Accordeons, Flutinas, Cornets, Drums, Fifes, and Musical Instruments of every description, at BUTLER'S, 21, Haymarket, London. Illustrated Catalogue (50 pages) post-free.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—On MONDAY and TUESDAY, OCT. 25 and 26, Messrs. OETZMANN and CO. will OFFER for SALE an immense STOCK of BLANKETS and QUILTS, purchased for cash at a great reduction during the recent depression, and which will be sold off much below their usual cost. Reduced Price-Lists, with size and description, sent post-free on application.—OETZMANN and CO.

FURNISH THROUGHOUT.
SUBSTANTIAL ARTISTIC FURNITURE (Regd.)
OETZMANN & CO.,
HAMPSTEAD-ROAD,
NEAR TOTTENHAM-COURT-ROAD.

FURNISH THROUGHOUT.—OETZMANN and CO., 67, 69, 71, 73, 77 and 79, HAMPSTEAD-ROAD, near Tottenham-court-road, London. CARPETS, Furniture, Bedding, Drapery, Furnishing Ironmongery, China, Glass, Paper Hangings, Pictures, Bronzes, Clocks, Pianos, &c., and every other requisite for completely furnishing a house throughout. Lowest prices consistent with guaranteed quality.
OETZMANN and CO.

CABINET and UPHOLSTERY DEPARTMENT.—Elegant Drawing-room Suites, handsomely carved Italian Walnut Wood, upholstered in rich Worsted Damask or Tapestry Cretonne, from 8 guineas; ditto, in rich Silk and Satin, 20 to 60 guineas; elegant Black and Gold Suites, from 12 guineas; superior ditto, from 18 to 50 guineas; Solid Mahogany Dining-room Suites, 8 guineas; ditto, fine Spanish Mahogany, upholstered in best marone leather, 14 guineas; superior ditto, from 20 to 60 guineas; massive Mahogany Telescope Dining Tables, from £2 15s.; handsome Drawing-room Centre Table, from 3 guineas.
OETZMANN and CO.

THE "SANDRINGHAM" EASY-CHAIR, full size, upholstered very soft and comfortable, suitable for any room, price 2os.; Lady's ditto, smaller size, 21s.; also the Sandringham Couch, upholstered very soft and comfortable, price 2 guineas. Everyone about to furnish should see these marvels of excellence and economy. Packed free and dispatched same day on receipt of order per post.—OETZMANN and CO.

OETZMANN'S PATENT PALLIO MATTRESS supersedes the use of the old rigid palliasse; is more cleanly, healthy, and elastic; combines the advantages of a mattress and palliasse at the cost of one article. Price from 16s. 9d. upwards. See page 188 in "Guide to House Furnishing," Sent post-free on application.—OETZMANN and CO.

CARPET DEPARTMENT. — A quantity of ready-made Carpets will be cleared out a bargain. Quotations forwarded per post, upon receiving size and description required. Large-size Hearthrugs, 4s. 9d. each; super ditto, 8s. 11d.; Axminster ditto, 12s. 9d.; Best Axminster ditto, 15s. 6d.; usual price 21s. Stout Floorcloth, at 9d. per yard. Patent Linoleum Floorcloth and Stair cloth, from 1s. 8d. per yard. Hemp Dutch Carpet, yard wide, 8d. per yard; Large Kitchen Hearth-rugs, 3s. 9d.; Sheepskin Hearthrugs, from 15s. 9d. upwards; ditto Mats, from 2s.—OETZMANN and CO.

THE "QUEEN ANNE" BORDERED TAPESTRY CRETONNE CURTAINS.—A handsome Early English design in black and gold, dull red, peacock blue, sage, and other fashionable shades, lined throughout with Twilled Cretonne Lining, and bound with the new Cretonne Binding. 3 yards long by 30 inches wide, 9s. 9d. per pair; 3½ yards long, 10s. 11d.; 4 yards long, 12s. 6d.; 3 yards long by 42 inches wide, 14s. 9d.; 3½ yards long, 16s. 9d.; 4 yards long, 18s. 9d. Patterns sent post-free on application.—OETZMANN and CO.

THE "NORFOLK" COAL VASE, in Oak, Mahogany, Walnut, or Ebonized, handsome brass mountings and hand scoop, with strong loose lining, complete, 21s. A large assortment of handsome Wood Coal Boxes on view in the Show-Rooms, from 15s. 6d. to 5 guineas. Illustrations sent post-free on application.—OETZMANN and CO.

DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE, post-free.
OETZMANN & CO.,
HAMPSTEAD-ROAD.

NOTICE.—SILVER and ELECTRO PLATE.—ELKINGTON and CO., Manufacturing Silversmiths and Patentees of the Electro-Plate, can at all times Provide Purchasers with every variety of Table and Decorative Plate, Tea and Coffee Services, Salvers, Cruet Frames, Soup Tureens, &c., in Old English, Early English, Queen Anne, Jacobean, Corinthian, and every style of Art, both in Silver and in Electro-Plate. Spoons and Forks of the Old English Rat-Tail Pattern. Drawings and Prices free by post on application. Address: ELKINGTON and CO.,
22, Regent-street, London; or 42, Moorgate-street, City.

GARDNER'S DINNER and TABLE GLASS SERVICES. Free, graceful, and original designs, of unequalled value. Dinner Services, from 21s. Table Glass Services, of the best Crystal, for twelve persons, complete, 65s. Cash discount, 15 per cent. Coloured Photographic Sheets and Illustrated Glass Catalogues post-free.
453 and 454, West Strand, Charing-cross.

DUPLEX LAMPS.—The New Patterns. The light of twenty-four sperm candles at a cost of less than one farthing per hour; a pure and healthy flame, not injuring the choicest works of art. Engravings post-free.
Drawing-room Lamps, China and Glass, 45s., 78s., 63s., 52s., 40s.
Dining-room Lamps, Bronze and Ormolu, 40s., 35s., 28s., 22s.
Cheap Table Lamps, 10s. 6d., 14s. 6d., 18s., 19s. 6d., 22s.
Refined Rock Oil supplied by Dean and Co., 1s. 4d. per gallon.
DEANE and CO., 46, King William-st., London-bridge. A.D. 1700.

NOTICE.—GRIMES'S SALE of DUPLEX LAMPS, China, Table Glass, &c., continues for a short time longer. Some great bargains in Dinner and other Services; also Duplex Lamps for India and home use.—T. R. Grimes, 83, New Bond-street, W.

JEWEL ROBBERIES PREVENTED.—J. TANN'S RELIANCE SAFES have never failed to resist the attempts of the most determined burglars. Fire-Resisting Safes, £5 5s. Lists free.—11, Newgate-street, E.C.

GOLD MEDAL, PARIS, 1878.

FRY'S COCOA. FRY'S CARACAS COCOA. A choice prepared Cocoa, most delicious and valuable article."—Standard.

GUARANTEED PURE.

FRY'S COCOA. FRY'S COCOA EXTRACT. Pure Cocoa only, the superfluous oil extracted.
J. S. FRY and SONS.

SCHWEITZER'S COCOATINA.
Anti-Dyspeptic Cocoa or Chocolate Powder.
Guaranteed Pure Soluble Cocoa, with excess of Fat extracted. Four times the strength of Cocoas Thickened yet Weakened with Arrowroot, Starch, &c.
The faculty pronounce it the most nutritious, perfectly digestive Beverage for "BREAKFAST, LUNCHEON, or SUPPER." Keeps in all Climates. Requires no Cooking. A teaspoonful to Breakfast Cup, costing less than a halfpenny. Samples gratis.
In Air-Tight Tins, at 1s. 6d., 3s., &c., by Chemists and Grocers.
H. SCHWEITZER and CO., 10, Adam-street, London, W.C.

THE ESSEX FLOUR and GRAIN COMPANY, Liverpool-road, London, N., supply the best goods only. Flour: Whites for Pastry, per 56 lb., 2s. 6d.; Households, for Bread making, 2s. 3d.; Wheaten Meal for Brown Bread, 2s.; Best Scotch Oatmeal for Porridge, per 14 lb., 2s.; American Hominy, 2s.; Barley, Buck Wheat, Maize, and Mixed Corn for Poultry, per bushel, 5s.; Middlings, 2s.; Bran, 1s.; Pearl Split Peas, per peck, 3s.; Split Egyptian Lentils, 3s.; Meat Biscuits, per 14 lb., 2s. 6d.; Barley Meal, per 48 lb., 5s.; Lentil Flour, per 1 lb. tin, 8d.; per 14 lb., 6s. All other kinds of Grain and Seeds. Price-List on application. Special quotations for large orders. P.O. Orders and Cheques to be made in favour of George Young.

WILLS' "THREE CASTLES" TOBACCO.
In 1 oz., 2 oz., and 4 oz. Packets, lined with tinfoil.
WILLS' "THREE CASTLES" TOBACCO.
"There's no sweeter Tobacco comes from Virginia, and no better brand than the 'THREE CASTLES.'"—Vide "The Virginians." Only in Packets and Cigarettes, protected by the Name and Trade-Mark.
WILLS, W. D. and H. O.

DATURA TATULA FOR ASTHMA. SAVORY AND MOORE. A remedy which speedily relieves ASTHMA, DIFFICULT BREATHING, and all affections of the Respiratory Organs. In all forms for Smoking; pastilles and powders for Inhalation.
143, NEW BOND-STREET, LONDON;
and of Chemists everywhere.

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.
ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.
ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.
ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.
ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.
ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.
ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.
ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.
ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.
ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT. Trade Mark,
"Anti-Fat" (Registered), is purely vegetable, and perfectly harmless. No change of diet required. Will reduce from 2 lb. to 5 lb. a week. Acts upon the food in the stomach, preventing its conversion into fat.

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT is endorsed by those eminent in the medical professional.
The late THOMAS FAIRBANK, M.D., of Windsor, Surgeon to Her Majesty the Queen, referring to ANTI-FAT in the "British Medical Journal" of June 7, 1879, says:—
"I gave some of this extract (Fucus Vesiculosus) to a very corpulent lady, who in three months lost three stones in weight without any change of diet. Since then I have frequently given it for reducing weight depending on the accumulation of adipose tissue, and have never found it fail."

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT Reduces 61 lb.
"Botanic Medicine Company.—Gentlemen,—About three months ago I commenced using your 'Anti-Fat,' at which time my weight was 219 pounds. By following your directions carefully I have succeeded in reducing my weight to 158 pounds.—Yours truly, "GEORGE BOYD."
Hundreds of letters similar to the above have been received.

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT. Sold by Chemists everywhere, at 2s. 6d., or delivered free on receipt of price. Send stamp for Pamphlet.
Address, BOTANIC MEDICINE COMPANY, 493, Oxford-street.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

CLARKE'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE is warranted to cleanse the Blood from all impurities, from whatever cause arising. For Scrofula, Scurvy, Skin and Blood Diseases, its effects are marvellous. In Bottles, 2s. 9d. each, and in cases, containing six times the quantity, 11s. each, of all Chemists. Sent to any address for 30 or 132 stamps, of the Proprietor, F. J. CLARKE, Chemist, Lincoln.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT. The Pills purify the blood, correct all disorders of the liver, stomach, kidneys, and bowels. The Ointment is unrivalled in the cure of bad legs, old wounds, gout, and rheumatism.

BLAIR'S GOUT PILLS,
THE GREAT
REMEDY FOR GOUT AND RHEUMATISM.
Sold by all Chemists, at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. per Box.

COLDS CURED BY
DR. DUNBAR'S ALKARAM, or Anti-Catarrh Smelling-Bottle.
ALKARAM. COLDS.
ALKARAM. COLDS.
ALKARAM. COLDS.
IF inhaled on the first symptoms, ALKARAM will at once arrest them, and cure severe cases in half an hour. Sold by all Chemists, 2s. 9d. a Bottle. Address, Dr. Dunbar, care of Messrs. F. Newbery and Sons, 37, Newgate-street.

THE NEW REMEDY FOR CONSUMPTION.

TISSUE PHOSPHATE
has been so successfully used in the treatment of Consumption Chronic Cough, Inflamed Lungs, Debility, Emaciation, Nervous Exhaustion, and all Wasting Diseases, that it is now regarded as a real and positive cure for these complaints. A Pamphlet, descriptive of a large number of cases of which careful notes have been taken in every stage of disease, may be had free on application; and the TISSUE PHOSPHATE SYRUP may be obtained through any Chemist, price 3s. 9d. per Bottle, or carriage-paid, from ANDERSON and CO., 90, Gray's Inn-road, London, on receipt of P.O. order.

FITS.—EPILEPSY, or FALLING SICKNESS.—GIDDINESS—SENSATIONS—FAINTS.—A certain method of CURE has been DISCOVERED for these distressing complaints. Full particulars of the remedies will be sent by post free of charge.—Address, Mr. WILLIAMS, 10, Oxford-terrace, Hyde Park, London.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by GEORGE C. LEIGHTON, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1880.

Digitized by Google

THE PRINCE OF WALES IN THE HIGHLANDS

A DEER-DRIVE IN MAR FOREST—WAITING FOR THE DEER.
FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

Digitized by Google

THE PRINCE OF WALES IN THE HIGHLANDS.

The Engravings presented in this Supplement to the Illustrated London News are supplied by the Sketches of our Special Artist, who has been permitted to see the practice of Highland sport recently enjoyed by the Prince of Wales and a party of noblemen and gentlemen in the Forest of Mar. That district, as many of our readers know, is situated in the western part of Aberdeenshire, in the upper valley of the Dee, just below the group of mountains which comprise Ben Mac Dhui, Cairntoul, and Cairngorm, and which, rising to the north of Mar, separate the region of the Dee from that of the Spey. This range, composed of granite, and attaining an elevation of more than 4000 feet, is a northward projecting spur of the Grampians, which have the forests of Badenoch and Athol on their western and southern sides. The Forest of Mar, properly so called, is the northern portion of Deeside, above Castleton of Braemar; the southern portion constitutes the forest of Glen Ey, extending to Glen Tilt and the Grampian hills. Castleton of Braemar, the little town adjacent to Braemar Castle, has lately been described in this Journal, with some of the neighbouring picturesque features of river scenery, the Linn of Quoich, the Falls of the Garry-alt, and the Cluny, another tributary of the Dee. The chief landed proprietor of this district is Colonel J. R. Farquharson, of Invercauld House, one of the finest mansions on Deeside. Below his place, and on the south side of the Dee, are the extensive demesnes of Ballochbuie and Balmoral Forest, which are bounded to the south by the Cairn Taggart and Lochnagar mountains. Balmoral Castle, her Majesty's Highland residence, and Abergeldie Castle, which is that of the Prince of Wales, are situated at Crathie, a village on the Dee, about fifty miles from the city of Aberdeen, and about eight from the railway station at Ballater. Their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales arrived at Abergeldie towards the end of September, and the Prince has been a visitor upon more than one occasion to the Earl of Fife at Mar Lodge, in the Upper Braemar district; and likewise to Colonel Farquharson, at Invercauld.

On Monday afternoon, Sept. 27, their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales, Prince Leopold, and Prince John of Glücksburg arrived at Mar Lodge on a visit to the Earl of Fife. In the evening Lord Fife gave a grand ball, at which his distinguished guests were present, and the entertainment included a torchlight procession and dance by the Duff Highlanders. Among Lord Fife's guests were the Duchess of Manchester, the Marquis of Hartington, Lord Claud Hamilton, M.P., and Lady Hamilton, Lord Rowton, Lord and Lady Holmesdale, Mr. Christopher Sykes, M.P., and Mrs. George Forbes, Mr. and Mrs. Cornwallis West, Sir William Gordon Cumming of Altyre, Colonel and Mrs. Napier Stuart, Mr. Charles Hall (attorney-general to the Prince of Wales), Mr. Horace Farquhar, Colonel Farquharson of Invercauld, Mr. Gerald Leigh, Colonel and Mrs. Keith Fraser, Captain and Mrs. Paget, Colonel Francis Baring, Mr. George Farquharson, and Dr. Pratt. Next day the Prince of Wales, Prince John of Glücksburg, and Lord Fife went out in the North Deeside Forest. The Court Newsman reported that they went out "deer-stalking;" but this was not exactly what they did. It was "a deer-drive," which they attended with their rifles; and there is a considerable difference in the manner of the operation.

Deer-stalking, as one of the noblest of British sports, has long been held in honour. It has been made a theme of literary description by such eminent writers as Scrope, Murray, and Colquhoun; a book by the first-named, specially treating of this subject, having won high popularity forty years ago. The most recent essay in this line, a little volume just published by Messrs. W. Blackwood and Sons, is the "Handbook of Deer-stalking," by Mr. Alexander Macrae, late forester to Lord Henry Bentinck. It must be correct and trustworthy, as it is recommended in a preface by that veteran sportsman, Mr. Horatio Ross, whose experience of fifty or sixty years, with his reputation both as a shot and as an accomplished amateur and connoisseur of all these matters, command general respect. Those of our readers who care for the subject of the Illustrations given this week may be interested, likewise, in a notice of the practical advice to deer-stalkers, which is supplied by Mr. Alexander Macrae; though it will be seen that the mode of shooting which Lord Fife and the Prince of Wales, and their party, chose to adopt, was much less arduous and precarious; and there is no doubt much to be said, according to taste, for the one and the other method of proceeding.

Stag-shooting may be considered to end about Oct. 12, after which hinds may be shot. The first days of October are esteemed by Mr. Macrae the most exciting part of the season, as large herds of deer are then found together. At a later period, the stags "are looking for hinds, and begin to dislike each other;" so that the herds break up. The roaring of the stags, however, when left single, may be useful to direct the course of the deer-stalker; but they are so much on the look-out, at this time, that it is not easy to approach them.

The sportsman should endeavour to get a shot at them within such moderate distance as to be sure of killing. This distance, even in shooting with a Henry express rifle, is limited by Mr. Ross to 150 yards. With a Purdey rifle of the old construction, he says, "one hundred yards was about the longest distance at which any old careful stalker thought it right to fire at deer." He condemns as unsportsman-like—not to say wantonly and recklessly cruel—the practice of trying to hit an animal with the chance of merely wounding and not killing. The attempt to make very long shots at a living creature is, in his judgment, an abuse of the improved modern weapon. "People, especially young stalkers, get excited when they see the deer galloping off, and sometimes keep up a fire, with their long-range express breech-loaders, so long as they can see the deer. I won't mention names or place, but simply say it occurred in the Highlands during this century. I was watching a party stalking. He got a chance and missed, but fired eight consecutive shots at a single stag galloping, and when it disappeared it was certainly a quarter of a mile from the stalker." For his own part, Mr. Ross, who could once, at a hundred yards, hit a chalk mark, the size of a rifle-patch, eleven times in twelve shots, is justified in saying, "I cannot accuse myself of having often wounded deer, because I make it a rule never to fire at deer beyond the range of a hundred and fifty yards, and then only if I had a good steady view of the deer." He insists very earnestly upon this humane maxim. "However well men may shoot at a small mark on a target at a long distance, I venture to implore them to think of the misery and pain they may cause to poor deer for years, by reckless shooting." One hundred and fifty yards is the range for aiming at a vital part; but Mr. Macrae says that he believes, even with the superior power and precision of the new sporting rifles, "more deer are killed every season at about one hundred yards, than outside of it." The great advantage of these straight-shooting guns, compared with the old rifles, is that they have removed the uncertainty which formerly attended shooting up or down hill. When the path of the bullet, the trajectory as it is termed, was very much curved, the gun being sighted for level ground, the bullet would go over the mark in shooting down hill, or strike the ground short of it when shooting up hill, unless the aim were taken lower in the one case, and higher in the other, than on level ground. It is, however, still very desirable for the sportsman to exercise himself in the judging of distance, both on plain ground, and also where the ground is so uneven, and partly hidden, that the object is seen independently of the intervening surface. The improvement of modern fire-arms has not superseded the need of skill and care in these particulars.

The chief labour of the deer-stalker therefore—not of the shooter at a deer-drive—is to get within 100 yards or 150 yards of the deer. He must contrive not to be perceived by their sight or scent, as he makes his wary approach to the noble game. The power of vision possessed by these animals is, indeed, less transcendent than the power of smell. "Whether deer can see an object at a longer distance than man," remarks the old forester, "I cannot say; but, if they are standing on ground where they are easily seen, a man will see them at a distance where he is in no danger of being seen by them. This is apparently the result of carelessness on their part, because, when on the retreat, they see nearly as well as a man at a long distance, if not equally well. From this it may be inferred that deer, although of a suspicious disposition, on account of their fear of man, generally confine their attention, when undisturbed, to a space within which the eye is perfectly sure to decide whether the enemy is in view or not: but that they can see up to 400 yards or 500 yards as well as a man, is well known to any one who has spent some of his time after deer. In mist, and in the gloaming, their power of vision is far superior to that of man. So, on the whole, it may be concluded that, if a man's eye is in any way superior to that of a deer, it must be at a long distance."

The eye and the nose of the deer, as Mr. Macrae rather quaintly observes, are "equally hostile" to the success of the deer-stalker; but he presently adds, "in any case, trust as little to the nose as you can, whatever you do to the eye," meaning to the chance of evading detection by those organs. "I believe it was never definitely ascertained, and perhaps never will be, at what precise distance a deer can smell a human being. But, where the ground is plain and open, and the wind blowing strongly, I would not consider it safe to pass much within a mile on the windward side of a lot of deer. Where, however, the ground is undulating, with hollows and hillocks here and there in the course of the wind, and the weather moderately calm, the danger is not so great." He informs us, further, that deer can scent the track of a man if they cross it a few hours after him. Particular instructions are given, in this little handbook, for stalking up or against the wind; and stalking down the wind, from above, only where the deer are "below very sharp and steep edges or rocks, where the wind passes over them altogether," or where the wind reverses quickly at the edge, or two currents of wind meet and rise, which is a delicately experimental situation for the deer-stalker. The respective qualities, opportunities, and exigencies, for his artful purpose, of a downhill wind, an uphill wind, a wind blowing across the glen or gully, one blowing along its side, or in a slanting direction, are carefully explained. With a side wind passing straight along between the sportsman and the deer, he may get some advantage of them, as they are not so watchful on the windward as on the lee side; but a sudden gust, changing the direction of the wind, or the turning of its current by some rock or hillock, may betray him to the deer where they have taken shelter. Wind blowing straight down hill is generally unfavourable, as there are sometimes two currents meeting, from different openings in the slope above, and the deer will often stand at their converging point. It may then be possible to attack them from below, on a side wind, but the result is apt to be uncertain. An uphill wind is the most favourable, but even this may be reversed by the obstruction of steep rocks, especially on a stormy day. The worst chances, however, are those of a cross-wind in a narrow glen with steep sides; the deer will be on the sheltered side, but the wind is driven to and fro, striking against the opposite side and returning, "which makes the confusion in the air quite incalculable." This is a difficulty that tasks all the science of the most expert and judicious forester. The simplest and easiest approach, where practicable, is by going straight up against the wind; but it is not always that this can be done without alarming the deer, who are more vigilant on their lee side. It depends pretty much on the nature of the intervening ground, and whether this will afford cover to the hunter. We are told that the lee side of the herd is commonly allotted to "lean rubbish of beasts, which, as they seem perfectly aware, run no risk of being shot," and which are the safest sentinels to post, to guard the rest, in those positions of danger from which the wind can communicate no warning. "For deer," says Mr. Macrae, "are not at all destitute of wisdom."

All this, and other practical information, giving acquaintance with the effects of configuration of the ground on the atmosphere, as well as with the habits and instincts of the animal pursued, should be useful to the Highland sportsman. It is not uninteresting, we hope, to the ordinary reader, who has never looked for deer in those sequestered upland tracts of country, which are, indeed, forbidden ground to the majority of tourists. A deer-preserve in Scotland, like an English pheasant-preserve, is usually kept from unauthorised intrusion, at least in the season when the game would be likely to suffer from disturbance. The tourist in summer or autumn may travel through many districts of the Highlands without seeing much of the deer; and, if they were in sight at a distance, he might fail to recognise them, even with a pretty good field-glass. "For in the latter end of August and the month of September," we are told, "the colour of deer becomes extremely difficult to discern at a long distance, and some of them are far worse to see than others. A person, not accustomed to look at deer through a glass, might go over them repeatedly without observing them."

With the actual stalking—we might call it sneaking up—the stealthy, covert, hidden approach as close as possible to the deer, the sportsman usually crawling prostrate on the ground, keeping his head down, and moving his limbs with extreme gentleness and humility—with this toilsome kind of work, meritorious and glorious as it is, the Prince of Wales has had nothing to do. We read all about it, a long time ago, in Mr. Scrope's entertaining pages, and are content here to leave it to the imagination. Mr. Macrae's "Directions for Crawling" may be perused with comfortable self-complacency in an arm-chair. "You will take care," says he, "when in view of deer on bare ground, and endeavouring to approach them, that your motions be slow, like those of a snail, especially when in close quarters. You must not move either hand or foot too suddenly. Your head should be foremost when going up hill; your feet when going down; and you should creep on your belly, or hands and knees, when on level ground. Some people have a bad practice of lifting their feet, when on their belly, in the struggle for getting on." Mr. Ross tells a story in confirmation of this advice. "I was stalking for a young man; we had to cross some flat ground; and, before we came to it, I gave my young friend strict injunctions to keep low, and to do just as I did. Flat as a flounder, I moved at the rate of about a yard in five minutes, keeping my eye steadily on the deer. When almost within shot of them, up jumped an old hind, stared in our direction, gave a bark, and off they went. I looked round; and there was the novice, with his chin almost ploughing up the ground, and his feet well in the air, at right angles to his body." It is nevertheless the fact, that "three or four times as many stalks are spoiled from deer getting the wind of a stalker, as from seeing him." We cannot but admire the laborious patience and endurance of gentlemen who will put themselves, for sport and pleasure, into such an extremely painful attitude, writhing for long hours through bog, stones, or heather; "o'er moor and fen, o'er crag and torrent, till" they get a shot at the stately beast of venery, in a Scottish Highland forest.

The Deer Drive, on the contrary, as provided for his Royal Highness in the Forest of Mar, is a sort of Royal Road to Deer-shooting. We shall not offer any particular narrative of the incidents of a very pleasant day, which was equally enjoyed by all whom the kindness of the Prince and of the Earl of Fife invited to share its amusements. The Prince, with Lord Fife and Lord Claud Hamilton, arrived at Mar Lodge from Castleton of Braemar in a carriage, which was followed by vehicles conveying Prince John of Glücksburg, Lord Rowton, Mr. George Forbes, Mr. Farquhar, Mr. Morris, and other guests, amongst them our Special Artist. They mounted ponies, and rode five miles up into the Forest of Mar, preceded by the keepers and gillies, who carried their rifles and ammunition. The way that was taken by the party cannot here be exactly described, but it was a rugged path towards the mountains at the head of one of those glens. It was soon perceived that there had been a change of wind, and a brief consultation with the keepers took place; after which Lord Fife spoke to the Prince about it, saying that he was afraid the deer would not come up their way. His Royal Highness said, "Never mind; let us try," and immediately dismounted, being then at the spot where the ponies were to be left, and the sportsmen to proceed on foot. A number of keepers had been sent out early in the morning to find the deer all over the forest, and drive them so as to come past the appointed station. The whole company of sportsmen, having reached this place, was divided into three several parties. They saw the deer coming down the opposite mountain. Most of the company lay down, trying to hide themselves when the deer came near. The Prince and Lord Fife sat behind some rocks, while the Prince's man Peter, and Lord Fife's man, were employed, close at hand, in loading and reloading the rifles. The herd of deer, about 500, passed up the glen, within a hundred and fifty yards of the Prince. His Royal Highness fired at them repeatedly, killing three and wounding another, which was killed soon afterwards. Two other deer, making six in all, were shot by some of the party. After resting awhile, and inspecting these spoils of the chase, they returned to Mar Lodge; the carcases of the deer were conveyed on the saddles of the ponies, making a truly sportsman-like show. The Earl of Fife entertained a large party of ladies and gentlemen, with the Prince of Wales, at dinner that evening; and they came out to see the six deer, by torchlight, exhibited on the lawn. The Highland pipers made brisk music there, which prompted some of the gentlemen to dance a Highland reel; and this was the merry ending, as we have said, of a very agreeable day.

The Prince of Wales last week spent some two or three days with Colonel Farquharson at Invercauld, and attended a deer-drive in the adjoining forest on Wednesday week. The southern stretch of the forest, from opposite the village of Braemar to Invercauld Bridge, was driven for stags, and several splendid herds were started. His Royal Highness was accompanied by the Grand Duke of Hesse-Darmstadt, the Marquis of Hartington, Colonel Farquharson of Invercauld and Mr. George Farquharson, Colonel Teesdale, Mr. R. W. Duff, M.P., Colonel Stewart, Mr. J. T. Mackenzie of Kintail and Glenmuick, Colonel Baring, and Mr. George Forbes of Asloun. Throughout the day the weather proved fairly propitious, and the result of the deer-drives—there being two of them—was eminently successful. His Royal Highness afterwards returned to his own residence at Abergeldie, and has since enjoyed this sport on the Royal estates, and on those of Mr. Mackenzie in Glen Girnag and Glen Muick.

The following extract from the Queen's own publication, entitled "Leaves from the Journal of Our Life in the Highlands," describes what must have been the first occasion upon which the Prince of Wales, then in his seventh year, witnessed the sport of deer-shooting at Braemar. Her Majesty does not state, however, that his Royal Highness was that day subjected to the initiatory rite of being made "a Free Forester":—

"Sept. 18, 1848.

"At a quarter past ten o'clock we set off in a postchaise with Bertie, and drove beyond the house of Mr. Farquharson's keeper in the Balloch Buie. We then mounted our ponies, Bertie riding Grant's pony on the deer-saddle, and being led by a gillie, Grant walking by his side. Macdonald and several gillies were with us, and we were preceded by Bowman and old Arthur Farquharson, a deerstalker of Invercauld. They took us up a beautiful path, winding through the trees and heather in the Balloch Buie; but, when we had got about a mile or more, they discovered deer. A council of war was held in a whisper, and we turned back and went the whole way down again; and rode along to the keeper's lodge, where we turned up the glen immediately below Craig Daign, through a beautiful part of the wood, and went on along the track, till we came to the foot of the craig, where we all dismounted.

"We scrambled up an almost perpendicular place, to where there was a little box, made of hurdles and interwoven with branches of fir and heather, about five feet in height. There we seated ourselves with Bertie, Macdonald lying in the heather near us, watching and quite concealed; some had gone round to beat, and others, again, were at a little distance. We sat quite still, and sketched a little; I doing the landscape and some trees, Albert drawing Macdonald as he lay there. This lasted for nearly an hour, when Albert fancied he heard a distant sound; and, in a few minutes, Macdonald whispered that he saw stags, and that Albert should wait and take a steady aim. We then heard them coming past. Albert did not look over the box, but through it, and fired through the branches, and then again over the box. The deer retreated; but Albert felt certain he had hit a stag. He ran up to the keepers, and at that moment they called from below that they had 'got him,' and Albert ran on to see. I waited for a bit, but soon scrambled on, with Bertie and Macdonald's help, and Albert joined me directly, and we all went down and saw a magnificent stag, 'a royal,' which had dropped, soon after Albert had hit him, at one of the men's feet. The sport was successful, and everyone was delighted—Macdonald and the keepers in particular; the former saying that 'it was her Majesty's coming out that had brought the good luck.' I was supposed to have 'a lucky foot.' We walked down to the place we last came up, got into the carriage, and were home by half-past two o'clock."

Digitized by Google

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

ITALY.

The King and Queen of the Hellenes arrived in Rome yesterday week, and were received at the station by Signor Cairoli and several other Cabinet Ministers. On Saturday the King had a long interview with Signor Cairoli, at the Ministry for Foreign Affairs. Their Hellenic Majesties went to the Pantheon on Sunday and placed two wreaths, one of immortelles, the other of fresh flowers, tied with blue and white ribbons, at the tomb of Victor Emmanuel. At four o'clock their Majesties went to the Vatican and were received in private audience by his Holiness the Pope. Their Majesties left Rome on Monday for Naples, remaining there for two days, afterwards proceeding to Otranto, whence they embarked for Greece.

General Canzio, son-in-law of General Garibaldi, and all others concerned in the rioting at Genoa in May, 1879, were released from prison on Sunday, in accordance with a Royal decree issued the previous day.

The first Congress of Italian Shipowners was opened on Sunday at Camogli, a town near Genoa. All the maritime provinces were largely represented. A proposal to inaugurate the proceedings by the dispatch of a telegram to the King was voted by acclamation. Many of the delegates made speeches describing the decadence of the Italian merchant navy, which they contrasted with that of other nations, especially that of France. They urged that the present state of things ought no longer to be endured, and contended that the matter should be brought before the Government without delay in order that some remedy might be found.

GERMANY.

Prince Prisdang of Siam was received in private audience at Potsdam last Saturday by the Crown Prince, to whom he conveyed the insignia of the Grand Cordon of the White Elephant. His Highness was afterwards presented to the Crown Prince's family, with whom he lunched.

The Prussian Parliament will meet on the 28th inst. for the consideration of the economical schemes stated to have been elaborated by Prince Bismarck.

AUSTRIA-HUNGARY.

The Emperor of Austria, with the King of Saxony, has returned to Vienna from his Styrian hunting-box. The Prince and Princess of Roumania arrived at Vienna last Monday on their way to Bucharest. The Prince had an interview with Baron Haymerle at the Foreign Office, and both the Prince and Princess dined at Schönbrunn with the Emperor. On Tuesday his Majesty left for the Château of Gödöllö in Hungary, where he is to remain till the 17th inst., when he goes to Austrian Silesia, returning again on the 22nd inst. to Pesth, where he will open the Delegations on the 23rd or 24th inst.

HOLLAND.

The baptism of the Princess Pauline took place at the Hague on Tuesday in the Willems church. Prince Frederic and Princess Henry of the Netherlands, the Grand Duke and Duchess of Saxe-Weimar, the Prince of Waldeck-Pyrmont, the President of the Luxemburg Government, the members of the diplomatic body, and the principal authorities were present. A sermon was preached by the Rev. M. Koetsveld, who took for his text the fourteenth verse of the tenth chapter of the Gospel of St. Mark. The Royal family were warmly received on their passage from the palace to the church, and also on their return.

RUSSIA.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Daily News says there is no ground whatever for the recent statement that the Russo-Chinese question has assumed a serious aspect, rendering hostilities inevitable.

The Council of Ministers have agreed to the construction of the Ekaterinburg and Tiumen branch of the Siberian railway.

Some particulars are published by the St. Petersburg Gazette respecting the recently discovered mine which was laid as far back as last year near the Alexandrovsk railway station, with the object of blowing up the Imperial train. The mine, it is stated, was divided into two partitions, each filled with dynamite and connected by a wire with the roadway adjacent to the railway track. On the approach of the Imperial train train a carriage drawn by three horses came rapidly up on the roadway, but drove off after the train had passed. It is supposed the carriage contained an electric battery, and that the attempt proved unsuccessful on account of the wire having been accidentally cut.

AMERICA.

General Grant arrived in New York last Saturday night from Chicago. He will take a prominent part in the New York election campaign. There was a welcoming procession on Monday night of 40,000 Republican soldiers of the late war, bearing torches. They were reviewed by Generals Grant and Arthur.

Mr. Colquin, the Democratic candidate for the Governorship of Georgia, has been re-elected by a majority of 40,000 over Mr. Norwood, the "Bolting" Democratic candidate. No candidate was nominated by the Republican party, who have, however, gained some seats in the State Legislature.

Intelligence received from Salt Lake City states that at a Mormon conference Mr. John Taylor has been elected president of the community.

A convention has been sitting at Boston to promote the restoration of the United States shipping trade. It has adopted resolutions requesting Congress to create a Department of Commerce, with a Cabinet Minister at its head; to change the admeasurement laws, so that only the cargo space of vessels shall be measured; to abolish all compulsory pilotage, and also all Commissioners for shipping seamen. The convention also passed a resolution that Custom-house dues and the tonnage tax should be set apart as a fund to provide for proposed bounties to shipowners.

The general triennial convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church has been held in New York. Among others present were Bishop Herzog, of Switzerland, and Bishop Cotterill, of Edinburgh.

Nine thousand Freemasons were present last Saturday at the ceremony of placing in the Central Park, New York, the corner-stone of the pedestal on which the obelisk recently brought from Egypt is to stand.

Intelligence has been received by the United States Navy Department of the safe arrival of the Arctic Exploration steamer Jeannette at Cape Serdze Kamen on Aug. 29, 1879, all well.

A fight, lasting a whole day, is reported to have occurred between American and Canadian Indians hunting buffalo on the border. One of the American and many of the Canadian Indians, including women and children, were killed.

An accident occurred to a crowded excursion-train at Pittsburg last Saturday night. A local train was running in two sections. At midnight the first section stopped at Wall's Station, and, the signal-lights being obscured, the second section ran into the rear car, entirely wrecking it. Twenty-four persons were killed and many others severely injured.

CANADA.

By an order in Council, published in the Canadian Gazette, all British possessions in North America not already included in the Dominion, comprising all islands, with the exception of Newfoundland and its dependencies, will be considered as forming part of the Dominion of Canada from Sept. 1 last.

The revenue of the Dominion during the last quarter amounted to 7,165,586 dols., and the expenditure to 4,467,710 dols.

A pastoral letter was read in the Roman Catholic churches in Ottawa last Sunday forbidding parents, on pain of deprivation of the sacraments, to send their children to the Government Model School, a preparatory institution to the Normal School.

SOUTH AFRICA.

The following telegram has been received from the Premier of the Cape Colony, dated Cape Town, Oct. 11:—"Large reinforcements now on border of Basutoland. No other tribe has joined the Basutos. All well at Mafeteng." But later advices from the Cape state that official information has been received of a portion of the Tambookie tribe having joined the rebel Basutos. The tribe numbers about 98,000.

An official despatch from Cape Town announces that a strong force of insurgent Basutos attacked Maseru on the 10th inst. Firing continued all day until nightfall, when the enemy, taking advantage of the darkness, made a movement compelling the Cape Rifles to retire within the fort. The Basutos were, however, subsequently repulsed, with trifling loss on the Colonial side. The extent of the enemy's loss is not known.

INDIA.

A telegram received by the Viceroy reports all quiet at Candahar. Ayoub Khan is said to have reached and entered Herat. The Candahar correspondent of the Times telegraphs that there is no longer any doubt of Ayoub Khan's safe arrival at Herat. The correspondent says it is feared that he will be able there to foment troubles, and suggests that Candahar should be held in force. The Candahar correspondent of the Standard telegraphs that, owing to the rumours of Ayoub's intention to make another attack, the people of the neighbourhood are not sowing their land. The correspondent states that agitation is increasing among the tribes, and that trade is being brought to a standstill. General Roberts was expected to leave for England on the 30th inst. The Daily News correspondent at Quetta states that General Roberts is believed to be favourable to the annexation of Candahar. The Calcutta correspondent of the Times says that the recall of Generals Primrose, Burrows, and Nuttall, which has followed the report of General Roberts on the Maiwand disaster, has been received with universal satisfaction. The same correspondent says that cholera still hangs about the troops returning from Cabul.

AUSTRALIA.

The revenue of Victoria colony for the past quarter amounts to £1,092,000, showing a decrease of £41,250 compared with the corresponding period of last year.

The secretary to the Royal Commission for the Australian Exhibition has received a telegraphic despatch from Sir Herbert Sandford, the official representative of the commission at Melbourne, stating that the exhibition had opened most successfully, nearly all the courts being very complete, especially the British court, thanks to the exertions of the exhibitors and of the Great Britain committee, who respectfully desire to congratulate his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales and her Majesty's commissioners on the splendid display of British fine arts and manufactures.

Chili and Peru have accepted the offer of mediation made by the United States.

China has demanded reparation from the Governor-General of Cuba for the arrest of the secretary of the Consulate at Havannah by the police.

From Athens it is announced that numbers of volunteers are constantly arriving in Greece from Alexandria, Smyrna, and other places. The strength of the army is now upwards of 40,000 men, of whom 10,000 are quartered in Athens. A review of troops was held at Athens on Sunday.

The King of Hawaii, according to advices received at San Francisco from the Sandwich Islands, acting, it is alleged, under the influence of the foreign residents, has formed a new Cabinet, with Mr. William L. Green as Minister for Foreign Affairs, and has recalled and dismissed Mr. Moreno, the Hawaiian Special Envoy to America, England, and France.

The King of Norway has appointed Councillor of State Selmer to the post of Norwegian Minister of State. On Sept. 28, the city of Christiania inaugurated a statue to its founder and great benefactor King Christian IV. King Oscar was present, and was specially thanked by Burgomaster Rygh for assisting at the ceremony. His Majesty was greeted with enthusiastic cheering by the people.

A Buenos Ayres telegram to the 16th ult., received viâ Lisbon, says that the Senate had passed a resolution declaring Buenos Ayres the capital of the Republic, and the subject had come on for discussion in the Provincial Chambers. The elections were on the point of taking place, but there were no apprehensions of disturbances. The election of the new Governor was fixed for the 27th. Sir Horace Rumball, the new British Minister, had arrived. Buenos Ayres had been visited by a great storm, lasting three days, which caused several shipping disasters and necessitated the detention of the mail-packet.

A body of Kurds has invaded Persia, and, having been joined by other bands, have plundered several districts successfully. They now number, it is said, 15,000 men, mostly armed with Martini-Henry rifles. The Persian Government is sending troops to the scene of the rebellion, the nearest point being distant ten days' march. According to the correspondent of the Daily News, the Persian Government offered a subsidy to the Merv Turcomans for the formation of a cavalry corps to repress border brigandage. The offer was refused. A telegram from Teheran states that the Kurds are reported to have destroyed, totally or partly, 170 Persian villages. The Kurds are now falling back and sending their booty over the frontier into Kurdistan.

A constable encountered a burglar in the grounds of Park Villa, Blackheath, on Monday morning, and after a desperate struggle, in the course of which three shots were fired at the constable from a revolver, he was knocked down by a second ruffian who came to his comrade's assistance. Both men escaped, leaving the constable insensible, with a severe shot-wound in the head, and a bullet-hole in his clothes. On the same morning, at Lewisham, a burglar, while plundering the house of a Bank of England clerk, was interrupted by one of the inmates, and, after a desperate struggle, escaped. His assailant's night-dress was shot through, but a parting bullet struck the burglar as he was passing over the lawn, without, however, preventing him getting clear off.—In the neighbourhood of Leyton and Walthamstow a gang of thieves have entered a large number of dwellings, carrying off, in many cases, valuable property.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will (dated Sept. 15, 1875) of the Right Hon. Stratford Canning, Viscount Stratford de Redcliffe, K.G., K.C.B., has been proved by Eliza Charlotte, Viscountess Stratford de Redcliffe, the widow, and the Hon. Misses Louisa Charlotte Canning, Katherine Jane Canning, and Mary Canning, the daughters, the executrixes, the personal estate being sworn under £18,000.

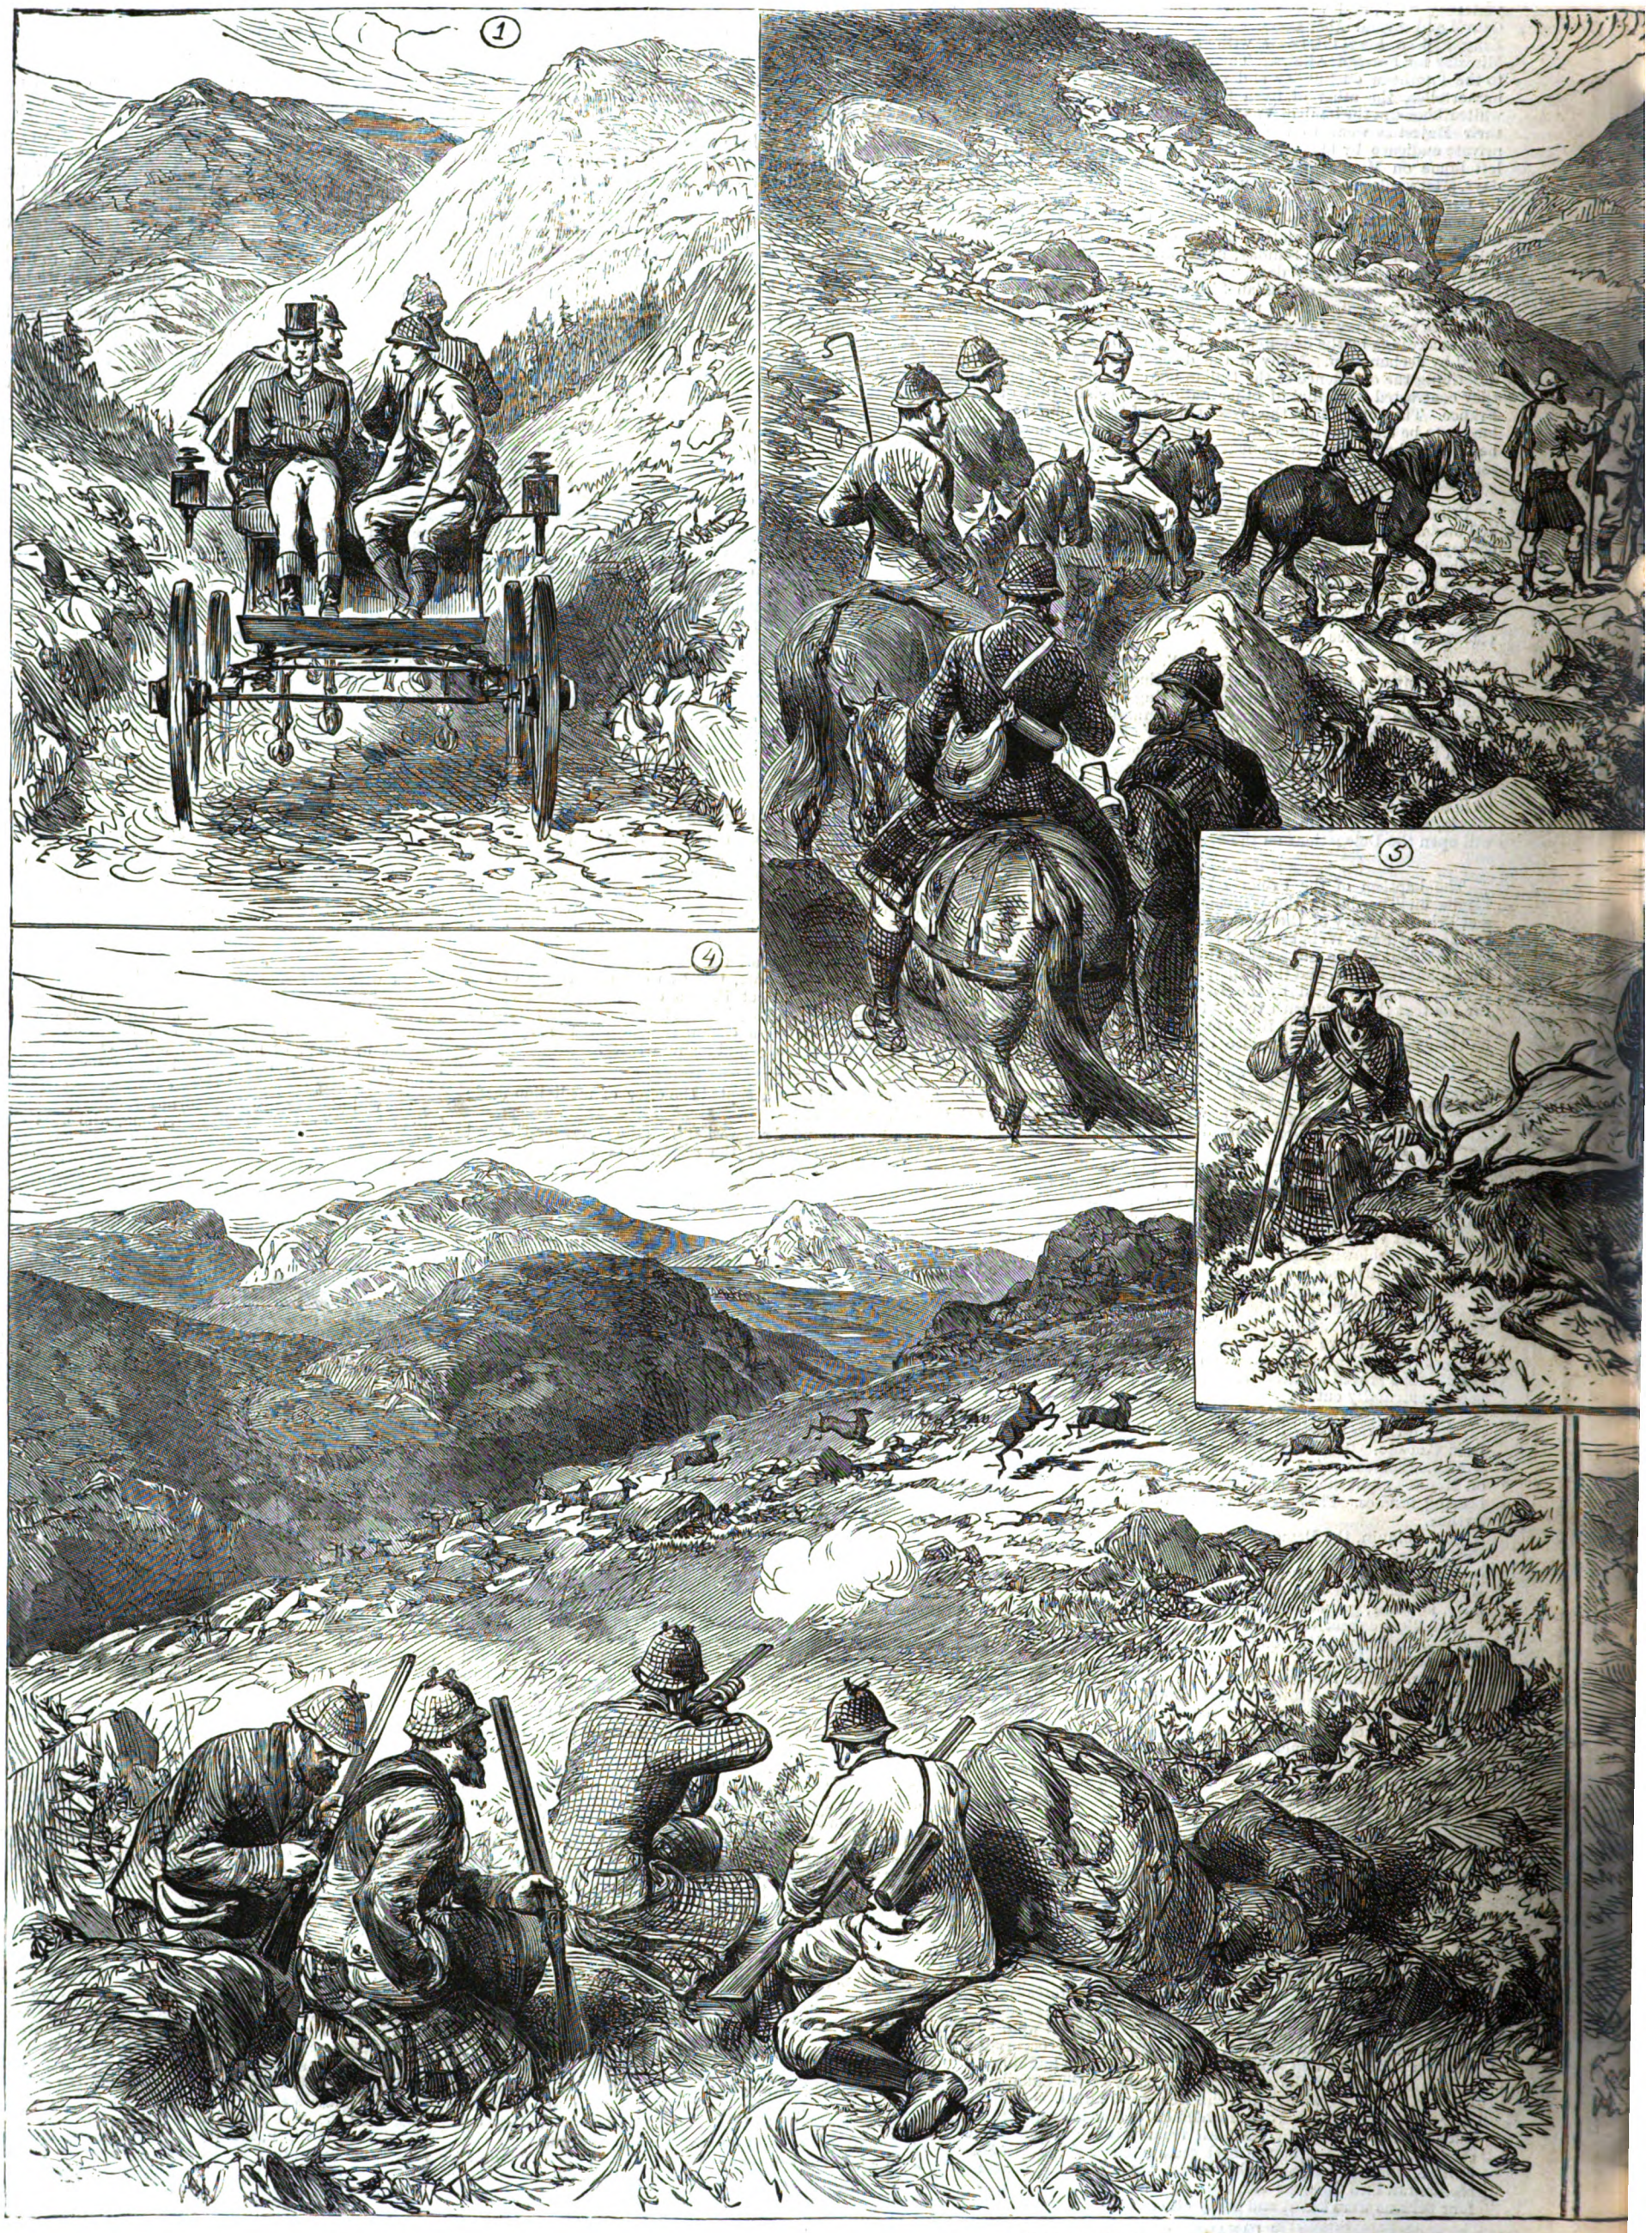
The will (dated Aug. 21, 1872) with two codicils (dated Dec. 4, 1873, and Feb. 5, 1877) of Mr. Edward Moon, late of Bank-chambers, Cook-street, Liverpool, and of The Lawn, Aigburth, Lancashire, who died on Aug. 10 last, was proved on the 1st ult. at the Liverpool district registry by Richard Moon and Robert Moon, the nephews, and Ralph Brocklebank, jun., the great-nephew, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £500,000. The testator bequeaths upon trust for the five children of his late niece, Mary Swire, £25,000; to his niece, Anna Scott, £15,000; to his great-nephew, the said Ralph Brocklebank, £10,000; to his sister-in-law, Jane Anne Holland, an annuity of £300; to his niece, Isabella Aspinall, £2000 and an annuity of £600; to his niece, Mary Elizabeth Wood, £4000; to his nephew, Samuel John Heathcote Martin, £5000; to his clerk Samuel Frodsham, an annuity of £300; to his clerk Charles Newman, an annuity of £150; and other legacies. The residue of his property, real and personal, he leaves to his nephews, the said Richard Moon and Robert Moon.

The will (dated May 20, 1878) of Mr. Henry Ludlam, late of No. 174, Piccadilly, hosier, who died on June 23 last, has been proved by Mr. William Gardiner Rigden, the sole executor, the personal estate being sworn under £45,000. The testator bequeaths to the St. George's and St. James's Dispensary, King-street, Golden-square, £1000; to the Royal Geological Museum, Jermyn-street, his minerals and cabinets, and he requests that such as may be chosen for exhibition may be labelled "Ludlam Collection;" and numerous legacies to executor, relatives, friends, clerks, assistants, and servants. The residue of his property he gives to his nieces, Alice and Rosa Ludlam.

The will and codicil (both dated Aug. 11, 1880) of Mr. William Henry Wills, late of Sherrards, Welwyn, Herts, who died on the 1st ult., were proved on the 5th inst. by Mrs. Janet Wills, the widow, and acting executrix, the personal estate being sworn under £40,000. After giving numerous legacies, the testator gives the residue of his real and personal estate upon trust for his wife for life, at her death, the house and grounds known as Sherrards are to go to Mrs. Eliza Priestly; and the remainder of his property as his wife shall by will or codicil appoint. In default of any such appointment, amongst other legacies which are then to take effect is one of £1000, given to the Newspaper Press Fund.

The will (dated Nov. 3, 1864) with three codicils (dated April 9 and Nov. 15, 1875, and June 13, 1878) of Mr. Peter Marten, formerly of Chilham, Kent, but late of Bridge-street, Canterbury, who died on June 29 last, was proved on the 29th ult. by Mrs. Benedicta Marten, the widow, and John Marten and Peter Lonbert Marten, the sons, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £35,000. The testator leaves to his wife £150 and his household furniture and effects absolutely, his residence at Canterbury, and the rents of his freehold property at Canterbury and Littlebourne for life, and an annuity of £300 during life or widowhood. There is a bequest in favour of his bailiff, William Coulthup; and the residue of his real and personal estate he gives to all his children by his present and former marriages in equal shares.

The will (dated April 27, 1860) of Mr. John Surman Surman, late of Swindon Hall, near Cheltenham, who died on Aug. 8 last, was proved on the 2nd ult. at the Gloucester district registry by John Surman, the acting executor, the personal estate being sworn under £12,000. Among other legacies, the testator bequeaths £2000 to the Gloucester Infirmary; £1000 each to the Cheltenham General Hospital and Dispensary and the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge; £500 to the minister and churchwardens of Swindon, to be invested and the dividends distributed as they shall think fit and proper among the parishioners living in cottages of less yearly value than £6; there is a similar bequest of £500 to the minister and churchwardens of the parish of Prestbury; £500 to build a school-room at Swindon, if none built in his lifetime, but if this has been done the money is to be invested and the income applied in paying the schoolmaster; and £150 to purchase a piece of land to build such school-room if it has not been built in his lifetime. The residue of his property he gives to his brothers and sisters, Thomas William Goodlake, Henry Cox Goodlake, Mrs. Elizabeth Surman, and Mrs. Catherine Samler.

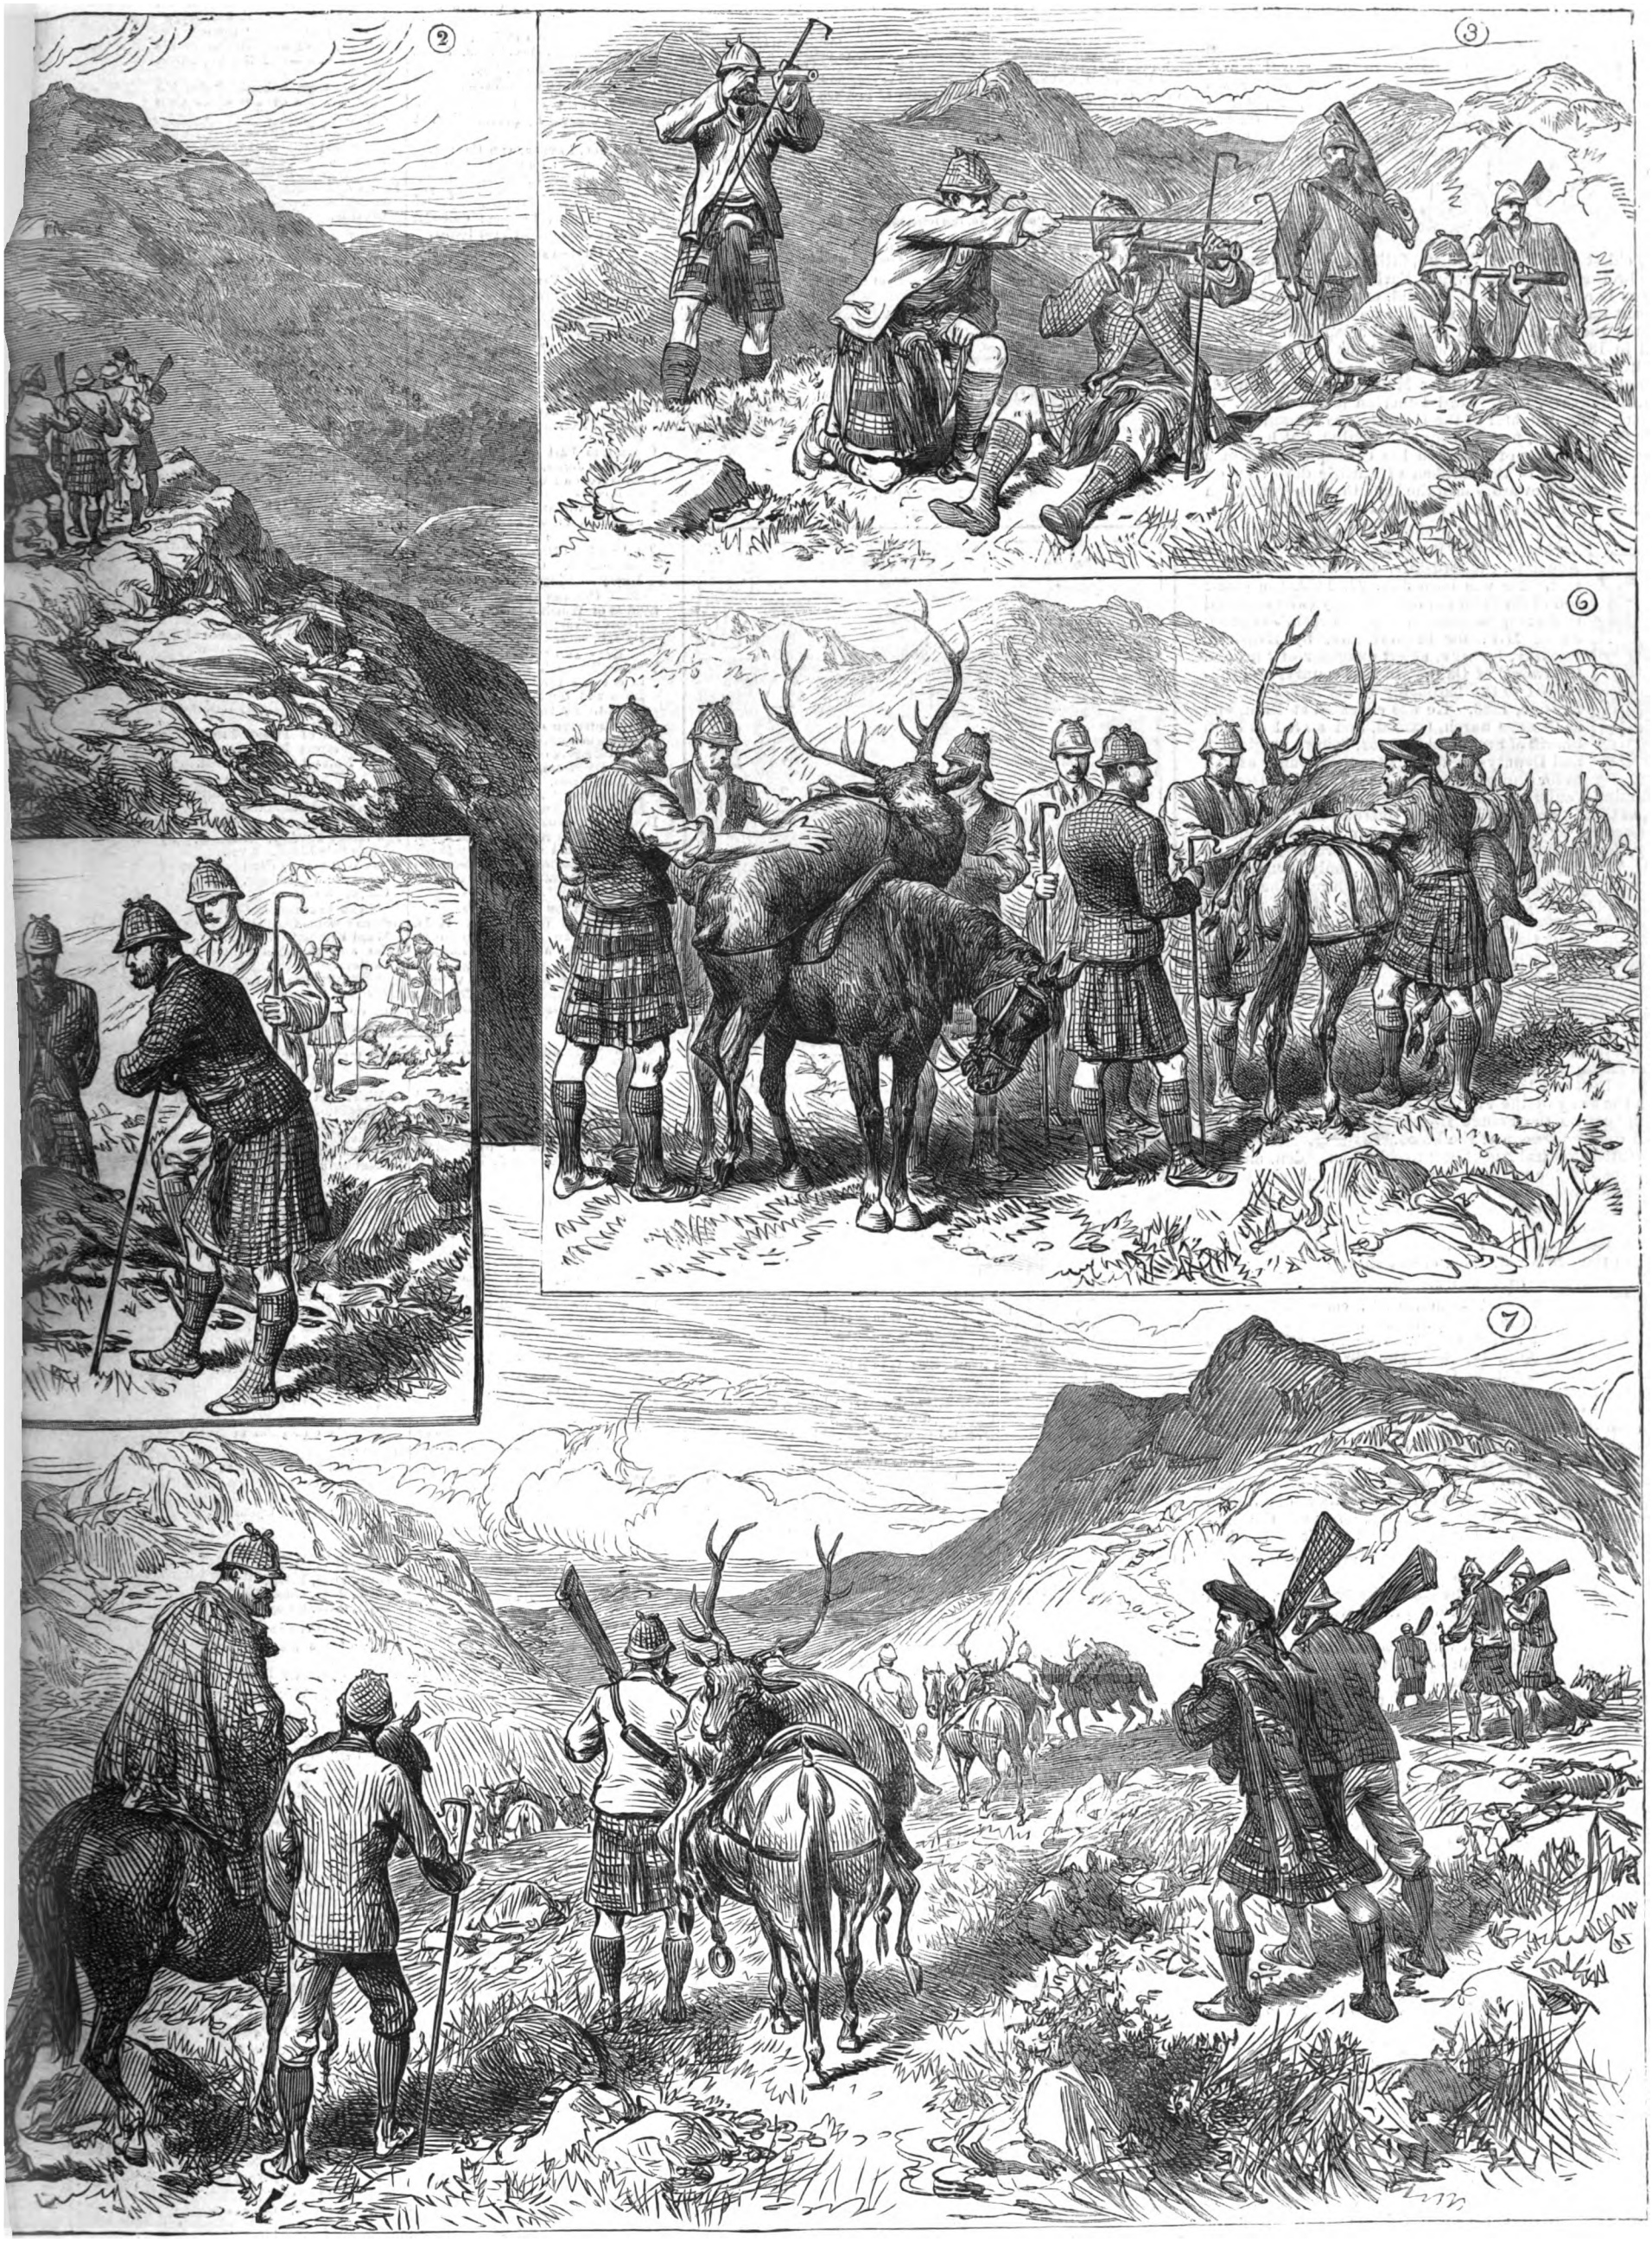


The will (dated April 3, 1875) of Mr. Charles Copland, late of No. 11, Angel Park-gardens, Brixton, who died on Aug. 25 last, was proved on the 28th ult. by Patrick Copland and William Copland, the acting executors, the personal estate being sworn under £1500. Among many other curiosities bequeathed to his children we may mention King Henry VIII.'s carriage clock, with alarum, and marked as being still in going order; one of the ten casts of the Portland vase, taken by Tassie, presented to his late father by Jane, Duchess of Gordon; and a silver medal, struck at the annual closing of the doors of the Cathedral of St. Peter's, 1725, Benedict XIII., most of which were exhibited at the National Exhibition of 1851.

Lord Carnarvon on Saturday last opened a workmen's club and coffee-house at Highclere, and gave an address, in which he referred to the rules as being framed on a liberal scale irrespective of party, and showed that the influence of such institutions was highly beneficial to society at large.

A new armour-clad corvette of 4200 tons, fitted with steel-faced plates, was launched on the 6th inst., from the shipyard of Messrs. Samuda, at Poplar, for the Argentine navy.—Three gunboats have been launched at Barrow-in-Furness for the Admiralty. These vessels are of the Forward and Foxhound type, being 125 ft. in extreme length, 23 ft. 6 in. in breadth, and 12 ft. in depth of hold. They carry two 64-pounders and two 25-pounders. Their engines are of 360-horse power.

Lord Beaconsfield has directed his agent to return twenty per cent of the rents just paid on the Hughenden Manor estate.—It was decided at a luncheon given on the 7th inst. by the Mayor of Birmingham (Alderman Chamberlain) to the Council of the Agricultural Exhibition Society to hold a show of dairy stock and dairy produce in Birmingham next year. The sum of £558 was promised in the room towards a guarantee fund for carrying out the show.—At the annual meeting of the South Bucks Agricultural Association, held on the 6th inst., the Prince Consort's silver cup, value 20 guineas, given by the Queen for the best root crops, was awarded to Mr. Ive, of Langley; Mr. Slack, of Upton Court, taking second prize, value 10 guineas, presented by Mr. Lambert.—The eighteenth annual exhibition of the Tunbridge Wells Agricultural Association took place yesterday week at Strawberry-hill, on the road to Eridge. Special prizes were given by the Marquis of Abergavenny, the Hon. F. G. Molyneux, Sir Julian Goldsmid, and the Tunbridge Wells Farmers' Club.



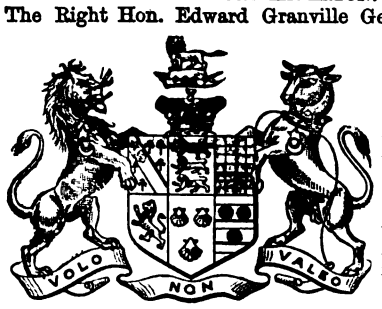
Digitized by Google

1. Driving to the forest. 2. Over the hills. 3. There they come! 4. The

THE PRINCE OF WALES IN THE HIGHLANDS: A DE

Digitized by Google

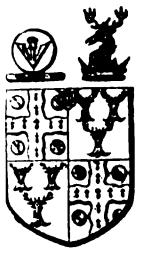
5. Examining the "kill." 6. Putting the deer on ponies. 7. The return home.



R-DRIVE IN MAR FOREST.—[From Sketches by our Special Artist.]

Digitized by Google

OBITUARY.



LORD LANERTON.

The Right Hon. Edward Granville George Howard, Baron Lanerton, of Lanerton, in the county of Cumberland, Admiral in the Royal Navy, died at his town residence, 29, Grosvenor-square, on the 8th inst. His Lordship was born Dec. 23, 1809, the fourth son of George, sixth Earl of Carlisle, K.G., by Lady Georgiana Dorothy Cavendish, his wife, eldest daughter of William, fifth Duke of Devonshire, and was brother to George, seventh Earl of Carlisle, K.G., so popular as Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and to his successor, the present Earl of Carlisle, to whom he was heir presumptive. He entered the Royal Navy in 1823, and attained the rank of Admiral in 1870. He sat in Parliament for Morpeth in the Liberal interest from 1834 to 1837, and from 1840 to 1853, and was raised to the Peerage, under Mr. Gladstone's Administration, in January, 1874. Lord Lanerton married, Aug. 16, 1842, Diana, only daughter of the Hon. George Ponsonby (son of William Brabazon, first Viscount Ponsonby), but leaves no issue, and the barony of Lanerton has consequently become extinct, the heirship to the earldom of Carlisle devolving on Mr. George James Howard, son of the Hon. Charles Wentworth George Howard, formerly M.P. for East Cumberland.

SIR T. F. FENTON BOUGHEY, BART.

Sir Thomas Fletcher Fenton Boughey, third Baronet, of Aqualate, Staffordshire, died there on the 6th inst. He was born Jan. 22, 1809, the eldest son of Sir John Fenton Boughey (who assumed that surname on inheriting his cousin's estates), Bart., M.P. for Staffordshire, by Henrietta Dorothy, his wife, eldest daughter of Sir John Chetwode, of Oakley, in that county, and succeeded to the baronetcy at his father's death, in June, 1823. He was educated at Eton, and at Christ Church, Oxford, and served as High Sheriff of Staffordshire 1862, being a magistrate and Deputy-Lieutenant for that county as well as for Shropshire. Sir Thomas married, Dec. 27, 1832, Louisa Paulina, youngest daughter of Mr. Thomas Giffard, of Chillington, and had eight sons and four daughters. He is succeeded by his eldest son, now Sir Thomas Fletcher Boughey, fourth Baronet, who was born April 5, 1836, and married, Aug. 25, 1864, Sarah Annabella, only daughter of Mr. Harold Littledale, of Liscard Hall, Cheshire. The family of Boughey was one of antiquity in the county of Stafford, and the name was adopted by the inheritors of the family property on the extinction of the direct line.

SIR WILLIAM MEREWETHER.

Colonel Sir William Lockyer Merewether, K.C.S.I., C.B., who died suddenly on the 4th inst., was the son of Mr. Serjeant H. A. Merewether. He was born in 1825, was educated at Westminster, and entered the Bombay Army in 1841, in which he attained the rank of Colonel 1868. He saw much active service in India, in Scinde with the 21st Regiment of Native Infantry in 1842 and 1843 (including the battle of Hyderabad), and with the army of the Punjaub at Mooltan and Goojerat. While engaged on the Scinde frontier he rendered effectual service in the suppression of the Beloochee rising. In 1865 he was appointed Political Agent and Resident at Aden, and he also accompanied the expedition to Magdala in the Abyssinian War. He was appointed Chief Commissioner of Scinde in 1868, and was a Member of Council for India. Sir William received the decoration of Companion of the Bath in 1860, and was nominated K.C.B. in 1868. He married, 1854, Harriet, daughter of the late Mr. J. Dale, of Coleshill.

GENERAL JONES.

General Henry Richmond Jones, C.B., commanding the 6th Dragoon Guards, Carabineers, died suddenly at Brighton on the 5th inst., aged seventy-three. He served through the Crimean War from Aug. 14, 1855, and through the Indian Mutiny. He was nominated a Companion of the Order of the Bath for his services during the Indian Mutiny, particularly at the capture of Bareilly, and was appointed Colonel of the 6th Dragoon Guards in May, 1873. The deceased gentleman was the second son of the late Rev. Inigo Jones, of Chobham Place, Surrey, by Margaret Elizabeth, only daughter of Lieutenant-General Henry Richmond Gale, of Bardsey Hall, in the county of Lancaster, younger brother of Wilson Braddyl, Esq., M.P., of Conishead Priory, Groom of the Bed-Chamber to George IV., and the younger brother of the late Lieutenant-Colonel Inigo Jones, of Kelston Park, Somerset.

MR. LASSELL.

Mr. William Lassell, F.R.S., the eminent astronomer, died on the 4th inst., in his eighty-second year. He was born June 18, 1799, at Bolton, and early evinced extraordinary genius for the study of that science with which his name, as are those of Herschell and Lord Rosse, is so prominently associated. So far back as 1820 he commenced the construction of reflecting telescopes for himself, the result being most important astronomical discoveries—the satellite of Neptune, Hyperion, and the eighth satellite of Saturn. In 1851 he discovered also two additional satellites of the planet Uranus. He proceeded the following year, with his telescope, to Malta, and here again the results of his observations contributed largely to astronomical lore. They are recorded in volume xxxvi. of the "Memoirs of the Royal Astronomical Society." His last work was a telescope, mounted equatorially, of 4 ft. aperture and 37 ft. focus. On his return to England, Mr. Lassell purchased an estate near Maidenhead. He obtained a Royal Medal in 1858, had an honorary degree of Cambridge University, and was a member of several learned societies.

We have also to record the deaths of—

Ida, Duchesse de Talleyrand Perigord, on the 2nd inst., at Florence, aged eighty.

The Rev. John Clare Pigot, on the 2nd inst., at The Priory, Taunton, aged seventy-one.

Captain George Sherbrooke Airey, R.N., on the 27th ult., at Cadenabbia, Lake of Como, aged sixty-nine.

The Rev. Thomas Lea Howlett, B.D., Vicar of St. Paul's, Westminster Bridge-road, on the 3rd inst.

Major Herbert William Wood, Royal (Madras) Engineers, F.R.G.S., on the 8th inst., at Madras, aged forty-two.

Thomas Hunter, M.D., Deputy-Inspector-General of Hospitals, late 4th Hussars, on the 7th inst., suddenly, at the Army and Navy Club.

The Rev. Sidney Amherst Shepherd, formerly Incumbent of St. Paul's Church, Holme Eden, on the 29th ult., at Cairn House, Warwick Bridge, Carlisle, aged seventy.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

A Brahmin Youth (Cuddapah).—The problem must be incorrectly described, for a solution cannot be effected in two moves. Black has several checks on the White King at his choice in reply to your first move.

Orima (Rostoff).—The problem is neatly constructed, but we require your full name and address before publishing it. You can write in the Continental notation.

T G (Smethwick).—We note your explanation, and have pleasure in crediting you with having solved the Brunswick problem from the diagram in twenty minutes.

W J E (Dewsbury).—Thanks; the problem shall be examined.

Upendrana Maitra (Calcutta).—Your solutions of Problems Nos. 1903, 1904, and 1905 are correct.

W B (Stratford).—The problem shall be examined.

W H T (Yokohama).—Very neat and very good, if sound. We are always glad to hear from you.

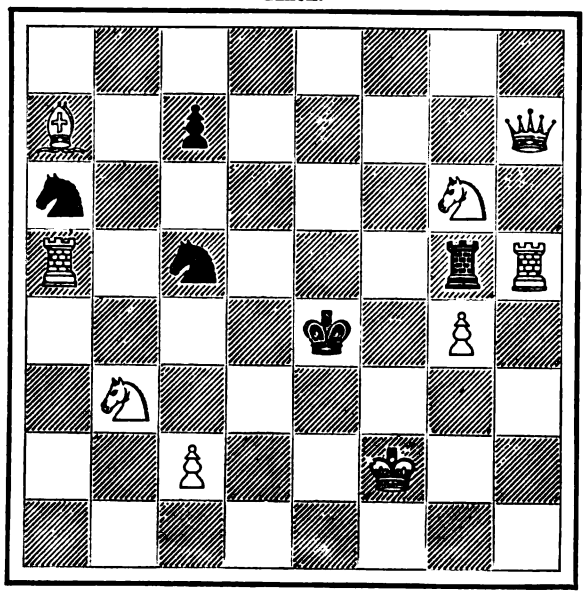
P D (Clapham).—It is to be hoped your friends may be lucky enough to discover the correct defence to a two-move problem; but, lest they should not be so, we recommend you to examine 1. P takes Kt, in reply to 1. Kt to Kt 7th.

Dr. F. Sr. (Dorchester-place).—Your suggested improvement is noted, but we consider the problem good as it stands.

Correct Solutions of Problem No. 1909 received from H Hampton, Agostino Bozzini, J Veglio, E L G, and Walter W.

Correct Solutions of Problem No. 1910 received from T Guest, Hoftede de Groot, H Hampton, N M Carrig, Ozokerine, H F K, Franklin Institute, A C, J Bumstead, and Walter W.

Correct Solutions of Problem No. 1911 received from H B, T Guest, R H Brooks, East Marden, Shadforth, Julia Short, Cant, Norman Rumbelow, One of Them, F H Jeffrey, Ben Nevis, R Oswald, C Oswald, C Elmore, Elsie, B Dyke, A Kentish Man, E Elsbury, C Darrach, W Warren, H Blacklock, S Farrant, G L Mayne, D Templeton, H Brewster, D W Kell, R Ingersoll, T Barrington, R Jessop, T Greenbank, C S Cox, F E Purchas, James Dobson, Sema, W Biddle, Alpha, H Hampton, Ch Pompé, N M Carrig, E P Vulliamy, Hereward, Lulu, Agostino Bozzini, E L G, W Burr, An Old Hand, Franklin Institute, Carioca, A W Hale, J Tucker, S Stripe, Louis Spencer, A C Edwards, and Hampsteadian.



Solution of Problem No. 1910.

WHITE.	BLACK.
1. R to K 3rd	Any move
2. Mates accordingly.

PROBLEM No. 1918.

By H. T. Young.

BLACK.

WHITE.

White to play, and mate in two moves.

Mr. Macdonnell yields the odds of K Kt to another Amateur.
(Remove White's K Kt from the Board.)

WHITE (Mr. M.)	BLACK (Mr. E.)
1. P to K 4th	P to Q B 4th
2. P to Q Kt 4th

Unsound, of course, but frequently successful when giving odds.

2.	P takes P
3. P to Q R 3rd	P to K 3rd
4. P takes P	B takes P
5. B to R 3rd	B takes B
6. R takes B	Kt to K 2nd
7. P to Q 4th	P to Q 4th
8. P to K 5th	P to B 4th
9. R to K Kt 3rd	Castles
10. B to Q 3rd	P to K Kt 3rd
11. P to K B 4th	P to Q R 4th
12. P to R 4th	K to Kt 2nd
13. P to R 5th	R to R sq
14. K to B 2nd	K to B 2nd
15. Kt to Q 2nd	Q Kt to B 3rd
16. Kt to B 3rd	P to R 5th
17. Kt to Kt 5th (ch)	K to Kt 2nd
18. P takes P	P takes P
19. R takes R	Q takes R
20. R to R 3rd	Q takes R

He cannot avoid the loss of the Queen for the Rook, and has no better course than the move in the text.

21. P takes Q	Kt takes P
22. P to R 4th	P to R 6th
23. P to R 5th	P to R 7th
24. P to R 6th (ch)	K to Kt sq
25. Q to Q R sq	B to Q 2nd
26. P to R 7th (ch)	K to R sq
27. Q to K R sq	P Queens

He might have prolonged the game by playing 27. K to Kt 2nd.

28. Q to R 6th.

Black resigned.

One of two Games played concurrently and sans voir by Mr. C. A Gilberg, of Brooklyn.—(K Kt's Gambit.)

WHITE (Mr. G.)	BLACK (Mr. E. C.)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th
2. P to K B 4th	P takes P
3. Kt to K B 3rd	P to K Kt 4th
4. B to B 4th	B to Kt 2nd
5. P to Q 4th	P to Q 3rd
6. P to K R 4th	P to K R 3rd
7. P takes P	P takes P
8. R takes R	B takes R
9. Q to Q 3rd	P to Kt 5th

9. Kt to Q B 3rd seems preferable at this juncture.

10. P to K 5th	P takes P
11. Q to R 7th	Q to B 3rd
12. Q takes Kt (ch)	K to K 2nd
13. Kt takes P	Q to R 5th (ch)
14. K to K 2nd	B to K 3rd

This makes matters much easier for the "blindfold" player.

15. B takes B	P takes B
16. Q to B 7th (ch)	K to Q 3rd
17. B takes P	B takes Kt
18. B takes B (ch)	K to Q 4th
19. Kt to B 3rd (ch)	K to B 5th
20. Q takes K P (ch)	K to Kt 5th
21. P to Q R 3rd (ch)	K to R 4th
22. P to Kt 4th. Mate.

Mr. J. P. Taylor's forthcoming collection of two-move problems will be published next month. Intending subscribers should address the publisher, Mr. G. C. Heywood, High-street, Lee, Kent, before the 21st inst., on which date the subscription-list will be closed. The following position is culled from an advance sheet:—

White:—K at Q 8th; Q at Q 3rd; B's at Q B 7th, Q Kt 7th; Kts at K 7th, K B 7th; B at K R 4th; Pawn at Q B 2nd. (Eight pieces.)

Black:—K at K 3rd; Q at Q R 7th; R's at K 8th, Q Kt 3rd; B's at K B sq, Q B sq; Pawns at K R 2nd, K Kt 2nd, K Kt 3rd, K Kt 6th, Q Kt 5th, Q R 2nd and 6th. (Thirteen pieces.)

White to play, and mate in two moves.

Brentano's Monthly, a New York magazine, has added the game of chess to the long list of sports and pastimes with which it has been identified for some years in America. The September number contains several games, eight problems, an editorial on the subject of awards in problem tournies, and the news of the month. The new department is conducted by Mr. H. C. Allen, and the list of contributors includes the best-known names in the American chess world; among others Mr. W. A. Shinkman, who contributes what is called a suicidal problem that is worth quoting:—

White: K at K B 8th; Q at K B 5th; R at K Kt square; Kts at K B 4th and K Kt 5th; B at Q 5th. (Six pieces.)

Black: K at K B 3rd; Q at K R 7th; R's at Q square and Q R 2nd; B at K Kt square; Pawns at Q 2nd and 6th. (Seven pieces.)

White to play, and force Black to mate him in two moves.

This branch of problem art has never found much favour in England; and, although specimens of it appear here and there, in collections and periodical publications, our best modern composers have practically ignored it. The neglect into which it has fallen is probably due to the circumstance that suicidal problems were usually constructed to embody combinations in an excessive number of moves, and such compositions have few, if any, admirers nowadays. Of late years, however, the problem-makers of America and Germany have given us compositions surpassing the productions of the old school in brevity and brilliancy, and of these qualities Mr. Shinkman's problem is a fair example. We warn our younger readers that in this problem the defence is more difficult than the attack, and that, therefore, they should not quickly conclude that they have successfully studied it.

The twenty-ninth season of the City of London Chess Club was opened on the 8th inst., when a general meeting of the members was held in the club-room, Mouffiet's Hotel, Newgate-street, Mr. H. F. Gastineau presiding. The programme for the ensuing year comprises a tournament with sixty-four competitors, a blindfold séance by Mr. Blackburne, and simultaneous games by several first-rate players, besides the usual matches with the other metropolitan and suburban clubs.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Allen.
Lord Lawrence: A Sketch of his Public Career. By Captain L. J. Trotter.

Bentley and Son.
Johnny Ludlow. Sec. Series. 3 vols.

Bickers and Son.
"Jammed," and other Verse.

Burns and Oates.
Freville Chase. By E. H. Dering. 2 vols.

Cassell, Petter, and Galpin.
Insect Variety: its Propagation and Distribution. By A. H. Swinton.
Science for All. Edited by Dr. Robert Brown. Illustrated.
Trinity College, London: Calendar for the Academical Year 1880-1.

Chapman and Hall.
The New Era. A Dramatic Poem. By Virginia Vaughan.
The Clerk of Porturick. A Tale. By George Manville Fenn. 3 vols.
South Kensington Museum Art Handbooks: Japanese Pottery. Edited by A. W. Franks.

Chatto and Windus.
A History of Our Own Times, from the Accession of Queen Victoria to the General Election of 1880. By Justin McCarthy, M.P. Vols. III. and IV.
Credulities Past and Present. By William Jones, F.S.A.
Leaves from a Hunting Journal. By G. Bowers.
Ellice Quentin and other Stories. By Julian Hawthorne. 2 vols.

Cox.
An Anecdotal History of the British Parliament. Compiled by George Henry Jennings.

Curwen and Sons.
Studies of Worship Music, chiefly as regards congregational singing. By J. Spencer Curwen.

Eyre and Spottiswoode.
The Englishman's Bible: combining in one the Englishman's Hebrew Bible and the English-Greek Testament. By Thomas Newberry.

Griffith and Farran.
Glimpses of England. A Companion to "Glimpses of the Globe." By J. R. Blakiston.
Two Rose Trees. The Adventures of Twin Sisters. A Story. By Mrs. Minnie Douglass. Illustrated.
Designs for Church Embroidery and Crewel Work from Old Examples. Collected and arranged by Emily Sophia Hartshorne. Eighteen Plates, containing upwards of Sixty Patterns.

Hamilton and Adams.
The Teacher's Work. What It Is, and How To Do It. By John Palmer. New and Revised Edition.

Hodder and Stoughton.
Modern Scepticism. First Volume of Popular Edition of the Christian Evidence Society's Lectures.

Isbister.
A Dweller in Tents. By L. T. Meade.
Stepping Stones. A Story of our Inner Life. By Sarah Doudney.

"Leisure Hour" Office.
The Boy's Own Annual. Being the Second Volume of the Boy's Own Paper.
The Girl's Own Annual. Being the First Volume of the Girl's Own Paper.

Longmans.
A Thousand Thoughts from Various Authors. Selected and arranged by Arthur B. Davison.
Faiths and Fashions. Short Essays Republished. By Lady Violet Greville.

Low and Co.
Brigitta. By Berthold Auerbach. From the German by Clara Bell.

Macmillan.
He That Will Not When He May. By Mrs. Oliphant. 3 vols.
Queen's College, London. The Calender for the Year 1880-1.

Maxwells.
The Scarsdale Peerage. A Novel. By Frederick Talbot. 3 vols.
Just as I am. A Novel. By the Author of "Lady Audley's Secret." 3 vols.
Quite True. A Novel. By Dora Russell. 3 vols.

Nimmo:
In Gipsy Tents. By Francis Hindes Groome.

Paul.
Mary Magdalene. A Poem. By Mrs. Richard Greenough.
The Atomic Theory. By Ad. Wurtz. Translated by E. Cleminshaw.

Poole.
Breezes of Song from Mount Pleasant. By George Johnson.

Remington.
In Fair Bruges. A Romance of the Present Day. By C. Beeston.
Cords and Discords. By Charlotte Atcherley. 2 vols.

Routledge and Sons.
Ultima Thule. By Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.
The Works of Father Prout (The Rev. Francis Mahony). Edited, with Notes, by Charles Kent.

Satchell.
God, Saints, and Man. Poems. By Eugène Lee-Hamilton.

Tinsley Brothers.
The Silent Shadow. A Novel. By Jessie Sale Lloyd. 3 vols.
What Will Society Say? A Story of Society and the Stage. By H. C. Coape. 3 vols.

Tyne Publishing Company.
Golden Gleams from the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher's Words and Works.
Tales and Sketches of the Covenanters.

Ward and Lock.
Jesus Christ: His Life and His Work. By the Rev. F. A. Malleson.

MUSIC RECEIVED.

Ashdown and Parry.
Hommage à Mozart. Morceau Symphonique pour Piano à quatre mains. By J. Baptiste Calkin.
To The Clouds. Song. Translated from the German by Thomas Campbell. Music by J. W. Elliott.
In The Spring. Two Impromptus for the Pianoforte. Nos. 1 and 2. By Johannes Weingaertner.

Bertini.
Marche Triomphale for the Piano. By F. N. Birtchnell.

Cuningham Boosey.
Love's Secret. Song. Words and Music by Jeanne Percy.
L stands for Love. Song. Words and Music by Jeanne Percy.
The Honeymoon Polka. By Jeanne Percy.
Happy Days. Song. Words and Music by Ralph Percy.

Robert Cocks.
Corydon. Song. Words by Vincent Amcotts. Music by Cotsford Dick.
A Farewell. Vocal Duet. Words by Maria X. Hayes. Music by Franz Abt.
The Dear Old Songs of Home. Words by Mrs. Aylmer. Music by Franz Abt.
Handel's Largo. Transcribed for the Pianoforte by F. Lemoine.
Les Chevaliers. Marche Militaire. Composed for the Piano by J. Duval.
The Gipsies' Festival. Descriptive Fantasia for the Pianoforte. By John Pridham.

Everard.
Alone: in Memory of Prince Louis Napoleon. Written and composed by Mrs. S. Phillis Atkinson.
Ravenspring. Arranged as a Solo or Quartet. Words and Music by Mrs. S. P. Atkinson. Second Edit.

Ewald.
Good-Bye! Ballad. Written by Edward Oxenford. Composed by Ferris Tozer.

Forsyths.
Third Sonatina for the Pianoforte, intended as a Study of the Sonatas by the Great Masters. By Stephen Heller. Op. 149. Edited and fingered by Charles Hallé.
The Football Galop. By James Batchelder.
The Whisper Valses. By C. D'Ace.
The Prince's Galop. By C. D'Ace.
Andantino in G, from the First Sonatina by Stephen Heller. Edited and fingered by C. Hallé.
Valse, in D major, for the Pianoforte. By Ferdinand Hiller. Op. 188. Edited and Fingered by C. Hallé.
Barcarolle. Composed for the Pianoforte. By Boyton Smith.
Gwendoline. Composed for the Pianoforte. By Boyton Smith.
Trois Morceaux de Salon. For the Violin and Piano. By Aloys Kettenus. No. 1, Tyrolienne. Ditto. No. 2, Mélodie. Ditto. No. 3, Sicilienne.
Villanelle. Canon. For Violin and Piano. By Aloys Kettenus.
The Lively Polka. By Joseph Sherwood.
Shades of Evening. Transcribed for the Pianoforte by F. N. Löhr.
Thuringia. Melody by Mendelssohn. Transcribed for the Pianoforte by Frederick N. Löhr.
Albany. A Fantasy. Arranged for the Pianoforte by F. N. Löhr.

Goddard.
A Wrist and Finger Exercise in a Single Study for the Pianoforte. By Aug. Buhl.
Suite de Pièces. Ten Easy and Melodious Musical Miniatures on the Pianoforte. By H. Stiehl.

Metzler.
Time Long Past. Song. Poetry by Shelley. Music by Maria E. H. Stisted.

Morley.
Cambriana. Song. Words and Music by Mrs. S. Phillis Atkinson.

Neumeyer.
The Trumpeter of Säkkingen. Six Characteristic Pieces for the Pianoforte. By H. Hofmann. Books I. and II.
Gavotte for the Pianoforte. By Sir Julius Benedict.

Novello and Ewer.
Cherubini's Second Mass (D minor). Novello's Collection of Anthems, Vol. X.

265, Regent-street.
Five Separate Vocal Pieces, with English and Italian Words, from Arrigo Boïto's Opera, "Mefistofele."
Dance Album: From Boïto's opera "Mefistofele."—Waltz.
Ditto, ditto, Mazurka.
Ditto, ditto, Polka.
Ditto, ditto, Quadrille.
Ditto, ditto, Galop.

Salter and Son.
March of the Monks. By Robert Coverley.
Joie. Polka. By Robert Coverley.

B. Williams.
Smallwood's Operatic Duets for the Pianoforte: No. 1, Giovanni; No. 2, Der Freischütz; No. 3, Guillaume Tell; No. 4, Masaniello.
Allegro Scherzo for the Pianoforte. By W. Porter.
The Exile. Romance for the Pianoforte. By W. Porte.
Grand Festival March for the Organ. By Adam Wright.
Ditto, with Pedal Obbligato. By Adam Wright.
Grand Festival March for the Harmonium or American Organ. By Adam Wright.
Harmony Simplified for the Use of Students. By Farley Newman.
Midnight March. By L. Williams.
The Zephyr Polka. By L. Williams.
God Speed and Welcome. By D. Christie Murray. Music by Ciro Pinsuti.
In the Sweet of the Year. By D. Christie Murray. Music by Ciro Pinsuti.

Wood and Co.
Perles Classiques for the Pianoforte, Edited and Fingered by Carlo Tiesset:—No. 1, Schunann; No. 2, Mendelssohn; No. 3, Clementi; No. 4, Chopin; No. 5, Mozart; No. 6, Clementi; No. 7, Clementi; No. 8, Beethoven; No. 9, Weber; No. 10, Clementi; No. 11, Chopin; No. 12, Weber.

11, York-place, Portman-square.
A Complete Course of Wrist and Finger Gymnastics for the Use of Performers on the Pianoforte. By A. Lefler Arnim.

Digitized by Google

SOUND INVESTMENTS.

GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY OF CANADA.

—The reaction in the Securities of this Railway during the past month has been one of the most remarkable features of the whole market, when the intrinsic merits of the property are considered. The aggregate of increased receipts for the fourteen weeks of the current half-year amount to no less a sum than £111,729, and this fact alone, without regard to the many other favourable features now discernible, should rather have caused an improvement in capital value. Those who have been induced to sell cannot possibly have realised what the real progress of this Railway has been. On the day of the last meeting in April the Ordinary Stock was quoted at 26, and the Third Preference 46. No one then dared to dream of such a rapid and uninterrupted development as has since taken place. In the interval of twenty-four weeks which have elapsed the gross addition to the earnings has amounted to the enormous total of £187,213. The Grand Trunk has since been admitted to the Chicago Pool, the Directors have been enabled to successfully float £1,000,000 Debenture Stock to redeem prior charges, by which a net saving of £14,000 a year will be effected, the full half-year's dividend has been paid on the First Preferences, and an interim distribution at the rate of 3 per cent per annum announced on the Second Preferences, and yet the Third Preference is now about 6 per cent and the Ordinary 5 per cent lower than in April.

The recent fall in quotations is wholly attributable to adverse speculation. It would appear that there are some who cannot or will not understand that the position of the Grand Trunk to-day is very different from what it was a few years ago, and who have sold large amounts of Stock which they do not possess, in the hope of buying back at lower prices to secure profits. In order to assist their operations they have carefully ignored every favourable feature and circulated a variety of the wildest and most extravagant rumours, for not one of which has there been a shadow of foundation.

Upon the important question of "rates," the Grand Trunk was never in so strong a position, as the "Pool" Commissioners are rigidly enforcing a strict observance of the agreed tariffs. The Grand Trunk and Chicago line has only just been admitted within the City; hitherto, the Grand Trunk has not derived anything like the full benefit of this valuable feeder which will now accrue to it.

Shareholders may, I think, look forward with the greatest confidence to the meeting to be held on the 28th inst., and if in the meantime the weekly receipts should show occasional fluctuations they may rest assured that on the closing of the navigation in November extraordinary results will be manifested. All the securities of this railway, at the present reduced quotations, are well worth buying.

LONDON, CHATHAM, AND DOVER.—

It must be satisfactory to the shareholders to remark the continued steady development of this railway, the increase in the traffic receipts for the fourteen weeks of the current half-year to the 3rd inst. amounting to £20,277. During the same period the additional earnings of the South-Eastern Railway, with double the mileage, only amount to £12,514. At the time of the proposed fusion of the two companies, the advocates of that measure of spoliation to the Chatham and Dover line estimated the relative progress of the two companies as 39 in the South-Eastern, as compared with 31 in the Chatham. As a matter of fact, the result has been reversed.

GREAT EASTERN AND NORTH STAFFORDSHIRE RAILWAYS.

—The traffic receipts of both these railways continue to exhibit decided vitality, and the ordinary stocks of each undertaking are unquestionably good and improving investments.

GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY.—Immediately

following the issue of my Circular last month, in which I recommended investments in this Stock, a steady rise ensued, the quotations advancing from 127½ to 131. The subsequent reaction has been wholly attributable to sympathy with surrounding markets, and not to any adverse feature affecting the intrinsic value of the property; on the contrary, the weekly growth of the receipts has been considerable. It may be interesting to investors to point out the relatively small amount of the Ordinary Stock in proportion to the whole capital of this Railway as compared with the other leading lines in the United Kingdom. Thus, the proportion is—41·19 per cent in the case of the Lancashire and Yorkshire, 37·68 London and South-Western, 36·87 South-Eastern, 36·31 North-Eastern, 32·79 London and North-Western, 30·71 Midland, 30·65 Great Northern, 30·55 Brighton, while it is only 23·11 in the Great Western. It is therefore clear that it requires a much smaller ratio of increased receipts to pay an extra one per cent of dividend on the Ordinary Stock of the Great Western than in any other of the above-mentioned Railways. Quite apart from the intrinsic merits of this stock, it is additionally attractive just now, as there are reasonable grounds for anticipating its being subdivided into Preferred and Deferred. Should this be carried out, a very great advance would no doubt take place.

ISLE OF MAN RAILWAY.—The Shares

of this Company are but little known in the market, but they deserve more attention than they have hitherto received. They are £5 fully paid, and can be bought at a small premium. The dividend for the present year will, I expect, be 5 per cent, although the line has not reached anything like its full development. In my next circular I propose to enter more fully into the merits of the undertaking. This Railway is perfectly safe from all competition.

MEXICAN RAILWAY.—The announcement that it is the intention of the new President of Mexico to seriously take into consideration the public debt, with a view to revive Mexican credit abroad, is a welcome sign of the improved condition of the country. Concurrently with this cheering declaration a strangely inconsistent rumour has been very industriously circulated to the effect that the President contemplated inaugurating his new régime by nothing more nor less than an act of spoliation—viz., the withdrawal of the subvention to the Mexican Railway Company. It seems impossible to believe that he should voluntarily stultify himself by committing such a gross injustice while professing, at the same time, a desire for re-establishing the credit of the country; and any proposal to the Bondholders which included the diversion of this Railway subvention from its rightful owners would be fatal to the settlement of the debt, as it would only demonstrate the unreliable nature of the engagements of the Mexican Government. One looks in vain for any official confirmation of this report; and no doubt it will prove to be only another canard which has been concocted to serve the purpose of adverse speculators in the securities of this Railway.

ATLANTIC, MISSISSIPPI, AND OHIO.

Holders of these Bonds should at once apply to the agents for the receivers' report to June 30 last, which has just been published. It will repay a careful perusal, as it contains a vast amount of information demonstrating the rapidly-growing prosperity of the railway. Nothing can be more hopeful than the following extract:—"For the past year the net revenue realised was more than sufficient by the sum of 192,133 dols. (or £38,433) for the payment of full interest" on the Divisional and Seven per Cent Bonds. It further appears that on June 30 there remained in the hands of the receivers no less a sum than 411,946 dols. (or £82,389) as "excess resources over liabilities." and this after paying off 84,190 dols. (or £16,838) Virginia and Tennessee Registered Certificates out of revenue. This surplus of 411,946 dols. must, of course, have been further augmented during the past three months, so that it is reasonable to assume that the receivers at the present moment are absolutely in the position to pay from 8 to 10 per cent to the certificate-holders on account of overdue coupons. It is surprising, therefore, in the face of the above official statement that the full interest is now being earned, the Seven per Cent Certificates are quoted at only 103, the more especially when it is remembered that this price includes no less than 39 per cent of over-due coupons which will be dealt with immediately. Sooner or later a great improvement in value must take place when the merits of the security are clearly understood.

PHILADELPHIA AND READING

RAILROAD.—Since the issue of the Committee's Report, considerable diversity of opinion has been expressed as to the position and prospects of this railway. No one can deny that this is a great property, though it has been grossly mismanaged in the past; but under the present more enlightened administration, and aided by the enormous growth of the traffic receipts, there seems every prospect of a successful future, and whether the floating liabilities are discharged by means of an assessment on the Ordinary Shares (as in the case of the Erie), or by the issue of a Deferred Stock, there can be no doubt that benefit must accrue to the Ordinary Shareholders, and I am decidedly of opinion that they will act wisely in firmly retaining their holdings.

TRAMWAYS.—The market for these

Securities has lately shown some symptoms of revival, owing to the steadily increasing traffic returns and the probability of the working expenses showing a large decrease due to the low price of provender. The following Tramway Securities can now be bought to yield 5 to 6 per cent to present investors, with steadily improving prospects (the current quotations include three months' of accrued dividend)—viz., Argentine, Barcelona, Birkenhead Preference, Bordeaux, Provincial, Tramways of France, Tramways of Germany, Tramways Union, and Wolverhampton. Tramways and General Works can be bought to pay 7 per cent.

BORDEAUX TRAMWAYS AND

OMNIBUS.—There are now twenty-four miles of this Tramway system finished, but only about sixteen are yet opened for traffic. The weekly receipts since July 1 amount to the handsome total of £22,858, or an average of £1750 per week. It is expected that the remaining fourteen miles will be completed before the close of the year. These Shares at 10½ are very cheap.

TRAMWAYS COMPANY OF

GERMANY.—During the past month the meeting of this Company has been held, when it was pointed out that, although only 6 per cent dividend was distributed, the Directors really could have paid 7½ per cent. If the position of this security were properly understood the shares would, I think, be quoted at £12 instead of £10, at which they are now selling.

IMPERIAL TRAMWAYS.—The Directors

have decided, and wisely so, I think, to issue £35,000 of Six per Cent Preference Shares, for the purpose of extending and more thoroughly equipping the various systems. Having perfect confidence in the Board, I have no doubt this money will be expended so as to produce the largest possible amount of benefit. These Preference Shares must prove a steady Six per Cent investment. As some misapprehension exists as to the general principle of extensions, it may be well to point out that the great improvement in the position of the Sunderland and Birkenhead Companies dates from the time when additions to their respective lines were opened out. I look for similar results in Belfast.

CITY OF LONDON REAL PROPERTY.

Since I first recommended these Shares for investment in 1875, there has been a continuous rise in value from £9 10s. to the present level of £16 per share, and the dividends meanwhile have been 7 per cent per annum. As its name implies, the property of this Company is of the very highest class, and the management is altogether unexceptionable. The new Shares recently issued to provide the capital for the purchase of further properties are now quoted at a small premium. They enjoy a guarantee of 6 per cent for seven years.

CANADIAN COPPER.—It would appear

by the recently published advices that the works upon the several Mines are now being pushed on vigorously, so that the shareholders may reasonably look for some practical demonstration of the value of their property at an early date. The £4 fully-paid Shares can at present be bought at £1 15s. per Share, and they are likely to advance considerably upon any further favourable reports being received. The principal market for these Shares is in Glasgow.

NEUCHATEL ASPHALTE.—The business of this Company is increasing. The Preference Shares at £1 12s. 6d. and the Ordinary at about 9s. are well worth buying, both being fully-paid up and limited.

JOINT STOCK BANKS.—The great rise in the value of the shares of the London and Westminster and London and County Banks, since they were registered as "Limited," is a convincing proof of the beneficial nature of that change in their constitution. It must be a matter for regret to the shareholders of the Union and London Joint Stock that they have not adopted the same policy, as no doubt a similar advance in the value of their property would also have ensued.

INDIAN GOLD MINES. — Enormous

transactions in the Shares of the three leading Indian Gold-Mining Companies have taken place during the past month, and the buying has been of a very influential character. Public interest has been principally directed to the Shares of the Devala Moyar Company in consequence of the great importance attached to the official statements of Mr. Brough Smyth, the late engineer to the Indian Government, who is now associated with this particular undertaking. The £1 fully-paid shares are now quoted at 2¾, and there seems to be ample justification for this advance. While the Devala shares command this improved price, it is surprising that those of the South Indian and Indian Glenrock Companies, which were the earliest in the field, and therefore will be the first to commence actual mining operations should remain at such low prices as £1 15s. and £1 10s. respectively. The comparison is the more remarkable when it is remembered that some few months since, in the very earliest days of these pioneer Companies, the South Indian Shares were at £3 and the Glenrock at £2 5s. Now that these two Companies are on the eve of commencing absolute work (the machinery being on its way to India), the shares should at any rate be at the old level, if not higher.

From Mr. WILLIAM ABBOTT'S Circular for October.

10, Tokenhouse-yard, London, E.C.

WHETHER TO HAVE CARPETS OR RUGS.

RUGS have novelty on their side, and that is nine points in fashion's law, but there is much more to be said for them than simply that they are the latest thing out. Probably the housekeeper's argument for carpets is akin to her argument for tidies and slips and the other expedients by which the great enemy dirt is imagined to be circumvented. Carpets are great hiders of dirt and dust, and a new broom easily restores them when too much dirt and dust is collected on their surface, but then they are great storers of dirt and dust as well, and apart from the waste of money in covering places that do not need covering, the question of health involved in the use of carpets is a very serious one. The large pieces of furniture that in all rooms stand against the wall—the sofas, the pianofortes, the sideboards, the bookcases, the bedsteads, the wardrobes, the washstands, the bureaus—do not need any carpet under them; the carpet that is put under them stands for so much wasted money, and yet we go on putting down yards of carpet where they are never seen, where the dust collects, and is only attacked in weekly sweepings, and where it keeps a sort of colour, while the rest changes colour and fades. Let anyone give a rug a fair trial, and observe for himself how much less dust will be made in the room, how much more easily the room is kept clean, and how much more manageable the furniture is when the weekly sweeping or the daily dusting has to be got through. In no case should any of the large pieces of furniture rest upon the rug, for it ought to be an every day or at least an any day matter to turn it up and brush underneath it, or roll it up and carry it out to be shaken or swept. It is advisable to buy a good rug, large enough to cover all the floor you wish to cover, even if it strain your purse a little, for a good rug will last a lifetime; and, indeed, some rugs are well on their way to last a second lifetime. The best Turkey, Persian, and Indian rugs are made by hand, of pure wool, and are so thick that if a brazier of coals is upset on one of them the charred portion, which, in the case of a Brussels carpet, could never be effaced, will disappear after a few days' wear. After much using a good Eastern Rug, walking on the best Brussels Carpet feels like walking on the wooden floor. To an artistic eye an Eastern Rug that is handsome to begin with grows handsomer with time and use, and even one that was a little staring and pretentious at first gets toned down and subdued by being long walked over, just as if it were a human being. The gain of employing good rugs is so considerable in healthiness and cleanliness alone that the time must come when they will be "your only wear." The only firm in London, or indeed, in England, dealing exclusively in Floor Coverings is that of TRELOAR and SONS, 69, Ludgate-hill. Established in 1832. Prize Medallists at the Exhibitions, 1851, 1853, 1855, 1862, 1865, 1867, and 1878. At their Warehouse a very extensive stock of Foreign Rugs may be seen.

Address—
TRELOAR and SONS',
69, Ludgate-hill.

TRELOAR, 69, LUDGATE-HILL.

TRELOAR'S CATALOGUE OF ALL THE BEST FLOOR COVERINGS, POST-FREE.

TRELOAR and SONS, 69, Ludgate-hill.

CHUBB'S PATENT SAFES, FIRE AND THIEF RESISTING.

CHUBB'S SAFES FOR JEWELS, DEEDS, PLATE, BULLION, &c.

CHUBB'S LOCKS AND LATCHES, CHESTS, BOXES, &c.

CHUBB'S ILLUSTRATED PRICE-LISTS POST-FREE.

CHUBB and SON, 128, Queen Victoria-street, E.C.; and 65, St. James's-street, London.

EPPS'S COCOA.

GRATEFUL and COMFORTING.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operation of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

JAMES EPPS and CO., HOMŒOPATHIC CHEMISTS.
Also, EPPS'S CHOCOLATE ESSENCE, for Afternoon Use.

THROAT IRRITATION.
EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES.
Sold only in Boxes, 7½d. and 1s. 1½d., labelled
JAMES EPPS and CO., HOMŒOPATHIC CHEMISTS,
48, Threadneedle-street, and 170, Piccadilly.

NEW SHADES AND NEW MIXTURES, 1880.
Under the direct patronage of the
ROYAL COURTS OF EUROPE

EGERTON BURNETT'S SERGES

MAINTAIN THEIR UNRIVALLED EXCELLENCE for YACHTING, SEASIDE, and TRAVELLING WEAR. Proof against Salt Water or Rain. Prices, 1s. 2½d. to 4s. 6d. per yard. "The Queen" says:—"Mr. Burnett has gained a very high reputation for the ROYAL SERGES." Orders are daily arriving from all parts. Pattern Books post-free. Carriage paid to London, Bristol, Glasgow, or Belfast. Any length cut. Goods packed for exportation.

Address—
EGERTON BURNETT,
SERGE WAREHOUSE,
WELLINGTON, SOMERSET.

N.B.—He has no connection with any Company or other London or Provincial Firm whatsoever. NO AGENTS.

EGERTON BURNETT'S "IMPERIAL VELVETEEN,"
"PATENT FAST PILE."
In the most Fashionable Colours.

Le Follet says:—"The dye is said, by competent judges, to be the most permanent ever brought out. Their finish is superb." Ladies must see that my name is branded on the back, without which none are guaranteed. Any length cut.
Patterns post-free on application to
EGERTON BURNETT,
WELLINGTON, SOMERSET.
No Agents.
Carriage paid to any town in England, Ireland, Scotland, or Wales on orders over 40s.

CHAPMAN'S, NOTTING-HILL.
PATTERNS OF ALL GOODS POST-FREE.

LYONS SILK DRESS VELVETS, 5s. per yard under value. Pure Lyons Silk Gown Velvets 8s. 11d. per yard. Good Black Silk Velvet, 19 in. wide, 3s. 11d., 5s. 11d., and 7s. 11d. per yard; Coloured Gown Velvets, 19 in. wide, 5s. 11d., 6s. 11d., and 8s. 11d. per yard.

SILKS CONTINUE AT DESPERATE PRICES.
THE BEST AND CHEAPEST IN LONDON.

The present low market value of Silk is becoming a serious matter to all concerned in the manufacture. Many of the large Lyons weaving firms are working their mills at a loss. This condition of things should be eagerly seised by the public.

	s.	d.
Corded Silks, of good sound quality, at less than
the value of woollen goods	1	9	per yard.
An extra quality of the same make	2	9	"
Handsome Gros Grain, equal in value to many that are sold at 4s. 6d., for	3	9	"
Very rich quality, at	4	9	"
A superb Faille	5	11	"

In better times the latter quality is sold at 7s. 11d.

I have bought very largely during this depression, and secured an immense stock of all qualities, in value over £20,000.

LOUIS VELVETEEN,

which is sold by me at the wholesale tariff, by the box of about 33 yards—viz., 1s. 10½d., 1d. per yard extra for cutting short lengths. All qualities kept in stock up to 4s. 6d. Genoa, Fast Pile, &c.

COLOURED CORDED VELVETEENS,
For the Autumn and Winter Seasons. Made in all the Newest Colours. 26 in. wide, 1s. 11½d. per yard.

NEW DRESS GOODS, 10,000 PATTERNS TO SELECT FROM.

CASHMERES and MERINOS,

among Plain Woollen Fabrics, will be, if possible, more popular than ever. These genuine favourites are produced for the autumn in many new and beautiful colours; some fine tones in Blue, Greys, Heliotropes, and Reds are special features among the New Patterns.

The quality at 1s. 6¾d. is of excellent value.
At 1s. 11½d., an extra width, and equally good.
That at 2s. 3d., made of the best long staple wool, is superior in weight to any yet sold at the price; and the finest produced is 2s. 11½d. per yard.

VIGOGNE DE L'INDE.

This is a Specialité of mine, of the real Indian Chuddah Cloth appearance, which is sold at 11s. 6d. per yard. I particularly wish to draw attention to the beautiful quality of this Cloth. It is remarkably soft, and has a light woolly surface, is very durable, and most agreeable wear. To many ladies, who have a horror of a heavy dress, this will be a most acceptable material. 25 in. wide, 1s. 11½d. per yard.

CASHMERIENNE.

This is an exquisitely fine Woollen Fabric, with a marked will on either side; is particularly pure both in quality and dye, and specially adapted for "demi-saison toilettes." The colours are very good, including the new shade, called "Sand of the Desert," also Heliotrope, and twelve other new and choice shades. The width of this capital cloth is 26 inches, and the price 12½d. per yard.

TWILLED LLAMAS.

For cheap House Dresses a most desirable material. All good useful colourings, and very durable. For children's wear is particularly recommended, making strong useful School Dresses; 26 inches wide; 9d. per yard. In Plain and Heather Mixtures.

SERGES,

or giving away, reduced to 6¾d., stout or fine; usual price.. .. .. 0s. 8½d.
Welsh Serge, in all colours, reduced to 7d.; good quality, .. 0s. 9½d.
Welsh Homespun, reduced to .. .. 0s. 9½d.
Estamene Serge, reduced to 1s.; sold everywhere at .. 1s. 6d.
Devonshire Serge, reduced to 1s. 3d.; sold everywhere at 2s. 0d.
Esquimaux Serge, reduced to .. .. 1s. 2d.

TWELVE MONTHS OLD.—About 5000 yards of last Summer's WASHING TEXTURES, such as Grebe Cloth, Ribbed Sateen Cloth, Idra Stripes, Fancy Oatmeals, and various material, which were sold at 9d., 1s., and 1s. 3d., will be cleared out at 6d. per yard. Complete Sets of Patterns free.

1, CASTLE-TERRACE; and 1, 3, and 5, PORTLAND-ROAD, W.
Wholesale; Shipping and Export Merchant.

CHAPMAN'S, NOTTING-HILL, W.

"THE AMARANT VELVETEEN"
supersedes all others for durability and silk-like appearance.
Is not Spotted by RAIN, nor Injured by HEAT.
It is of PERFECT MANUFACTURE and PATENTED FINISH
Unfading in Colour, Unequalled in Value, Firm in Pile.
To be had in all Colours and Prices.
Ask for it, and see that the word "AMARANT" is stamped in GOLD on the FACE SELVAGES.
Patterns and Show Cards supplied to the Trade.
RAWSON BROTHERS, Sole Agents,
2, Blue Boar-court, Friday-street, London, E.C.

INDIAN EMBROIDERY of the most Elegant and Fashionable Designs—viz., Christening Robes, 21s. and 42s. each; Ladies' Handkerchiefs, 35s. and 45s. the half dozen: Babies' Bibs, 20s. the dozen; Children's Frocks, 15s. each; Petticoats, large size, 28s. each; Ladies' Neckties, 28s. the dozen; Children's Capes, 12s. 6d. each; Narrow Edging, 1s. per yard; Ditto, Wide, 3s. 4d. per yard. The above sent post-free to any address in Great Britain, the United States, and Canada. Remittances to be crossed "Agra Bank," and made payable to J. KENYON and CO., 19, Strand, Calcutta, East Indies.

WINTER DRESSES—THE BEST VALUE IN LONDON.—Vicuna Foule Serges, the Fashionable Material for the Season. Price, 8½d. per yard. Patterns free.
JOHN HOOPER, 52, Oxford-street, W.

TO LADIES.—THE SHREWSBURY WATERPROOF TWEED CLOAKS, SKIRTS, and JACKETS, in every variety of shape and colour, are supplied by the original Makers, E. W. and W. PHILLIPS, 37, High-street, Shrewsbury. Patterns and Prices on application.

THE LADIES' HAWICK COSTUME
TWEED, in all the newest colourings, 1s. 6¾d. per yard.
Patterns free. Parcels over 20s. carriage paid.
WM. KEDIE and CO., Warehousemen, Hawick.

CONSUMPTION AND WASTING DISEASES.

IN "NOTES on CONSUMPTION and WASTING DISEASES SUCCESSFULLY TREATED with HYDRATED OIL, with Cases showing the immediate increase in weight by it," see Book published by Diprose, Bateman, and Co., Lincoln's-inn-fields.

GOVEREND DREWRY, M.D., Physician to the National Free Dispensary for Consumption and Wasting Diseases, Author of "Common-Sense Management of the Stomach," &c., referring to cases treated at the National Free Dispensary for Consumption and Wasting Diseases, says that "'Hydroleine' (or Hydrated Oil) produces an effect such as neither cod-liver oil nor any preparation of it with which I am acquainted even faintly approaches, and patients are unanimous in their statement that the appetite is much increased by taking 'Hydrated Oil,' and that, so far from possessing the unpleasant taste of ordinary cod-liver oil, the taste of 'Hydrated Oil' is agreeable rather than the reverse, and is described by some as resembling Devonshire cream. These, I submit, are very important points in cases usually attended by great irritability of stomach. The general improvement in strength shown within a fortnight was in many instances surprising, even to myself, who had seen already in private practice many startling results from its use. My experience, however, shews that in cases where cod-liver oil or an emulsion of it has been depended upon, increase of weight is rarely obtained."—Page 16.

HYDROLEINE (Hydrated Oil),
Equal to Ten times the quantity of Cod-Liver Oil.

HYDROLEINE (Hydrated Oil)
Entirely supersedes plain Cod-Liver Oil.

HYDROLEINE (Hydrated Oil)
Produces rapid increase in flesh.

HYDROLEINE (Hydrated Oil)
Is certain in result, and is pleasant to take.

TRY YOUR WEIGHT!!

TRY YOUR WEIGHT.—HYDROLEINE (Hydrated Oil) has proved of the highest value as a food in consumption and all wasting diseases, invariably producing increase in flesh and weight. This preparation of Hydrated Cod-Liver Oil is tonic, digestive, and ten times more strengthening and nourishing, as well as far more pleasant to taste, than plain cod-liver oil. Hydroleine may be described as partially digested oil, which will nourish and produce increase of weight in those cases where oils or fat, not so treated, are difficult or impossible to digest. All tendency to emaciation and loss of weight is arrested by the regular use of Hydroleine, which may be discontinued when the usual average weight has been permanently acquired. Of all Chemists, 4s. 6d.; or sent direct, carriage paid, to any address in England for 5s.—Sold wholesale by the ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG COMPANY, Limited, 33, Farringdon-road, London.

READ the following Extracts from a few among the hundreds of letters received, showing that HYDROLEINE will nourish, and cause young or old to increase in weight where plain cod-liver oil will not; the original letters, with many others, may be seen at our Office.

DR. AUSTIN, of Sunnyside, East Grinstead, writing on May 13, 1880, says:—
"I recommended one patient to get it, and he gained 8 lb. weight in a week; left it off next week, and lost 4 lb. This speaks well."

MR. JAS. STEWART, Chemist, of Dalkeith, writing April 28, 1877, says:—
"I weighed only 116 lb. on March 25, took the Hydroleine very irregularly I must confess, and on April 19 weighed 126 lbs. I found it very pleasant to take, never experienced the least approach to eructation, and rather think it acted very much as a tonic."

WRITING of Hydrated Oil on May 14, 1877, Mr. KENNETH M'DONALD, of Dunkeld, says:—
"I had been taking cod-liver oil all winter myself, and thought I would first experiment on myself with the Hydroleine and I must say, whether it is that or not, I am much better; in fact, all right again, and I certainly give it the credit, and will recommend it to all in preference to the ordinary oil—it is much easier taken."

HYDROLEINE (Hydrated Oil) has been favourably received by all classes of people, as well as the press, as the following extracts will show:—

MRS. ELLEN COOKE, Weston-super-Mare, in a letter dated May 24, 1879, says:—
"I think the last bottle you sent me has saved the life of a little boy three years old."

MR. J. H. GREGORY, Master of Caxton Workhouse, Cambs., writing on March 12, 1879, says:—
"The effect of the bottle I received from you was marvellous, as I increased nearly 4 lb. in weight, and felt better in every way."

MRS. MARYATT, Bayswater, W., writing on Jan. 23, 1877, speaks of the Hydrated Oil in the following terms:—
"My little boy (aged five and a half years) is so extremely fond of it that he will take it just as it is, without the ginger or orange wine, and will smack his lips after it. As for myself, I can never sound its praises too loudly. I consider it a perfect life-giver."

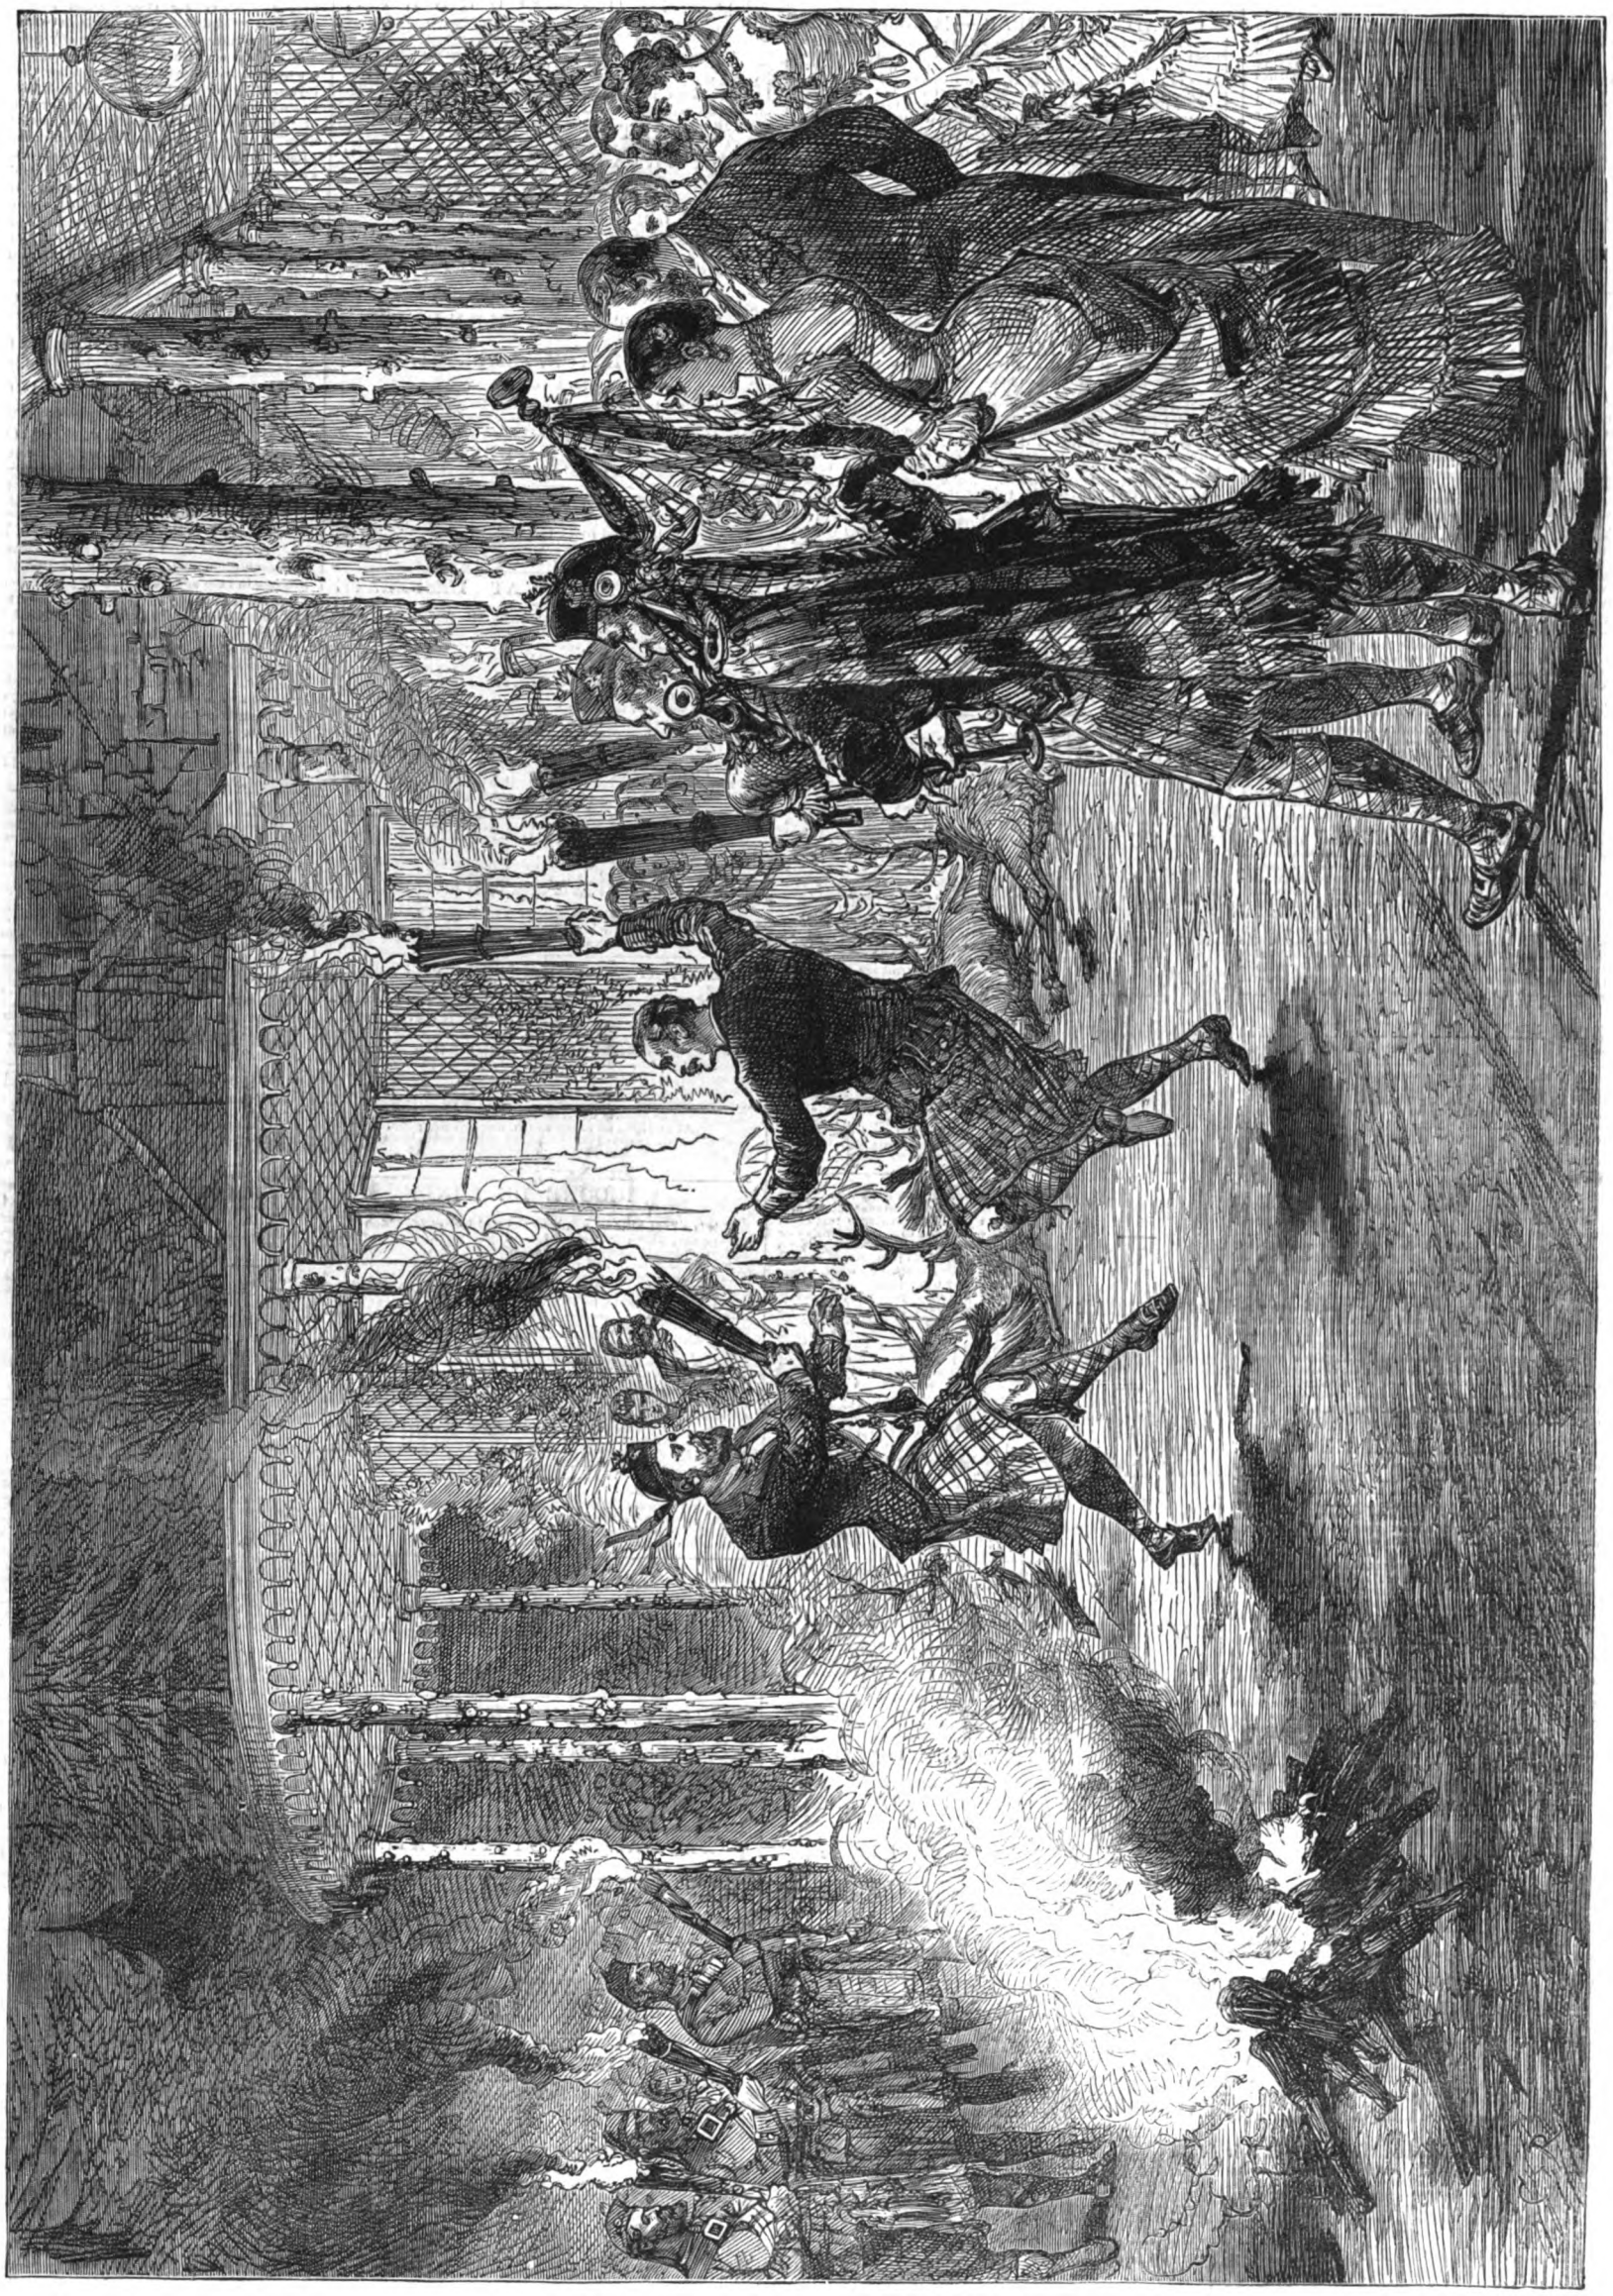
MR. JOHN MILTON, writing from Liverpool on May 7, 1877, says:—
"Five weeks ago a small pamphlet was handed to me descriptive of your Hydroleine, and since that time my wife has been taking just one bottle a week with certain benefit."

MR. A. BOYCE, Chemist, Hayward's-heath, writing on July 9, 1877, says:—
"I have given it to several consumptive cases, and am pleased to inform you with very good result. The effect of it on two persons (children) has been wonderful. I am trying to make it known everywhere I can."

HYDROLEINE (Hydrated Oil)
Is not a patent medicine.

HYDROLEINE (Hydrated Oil)
Has the formula upon every bottle.

HYDROLEINE (Hydrated Oil).
Try it, and try your weight.

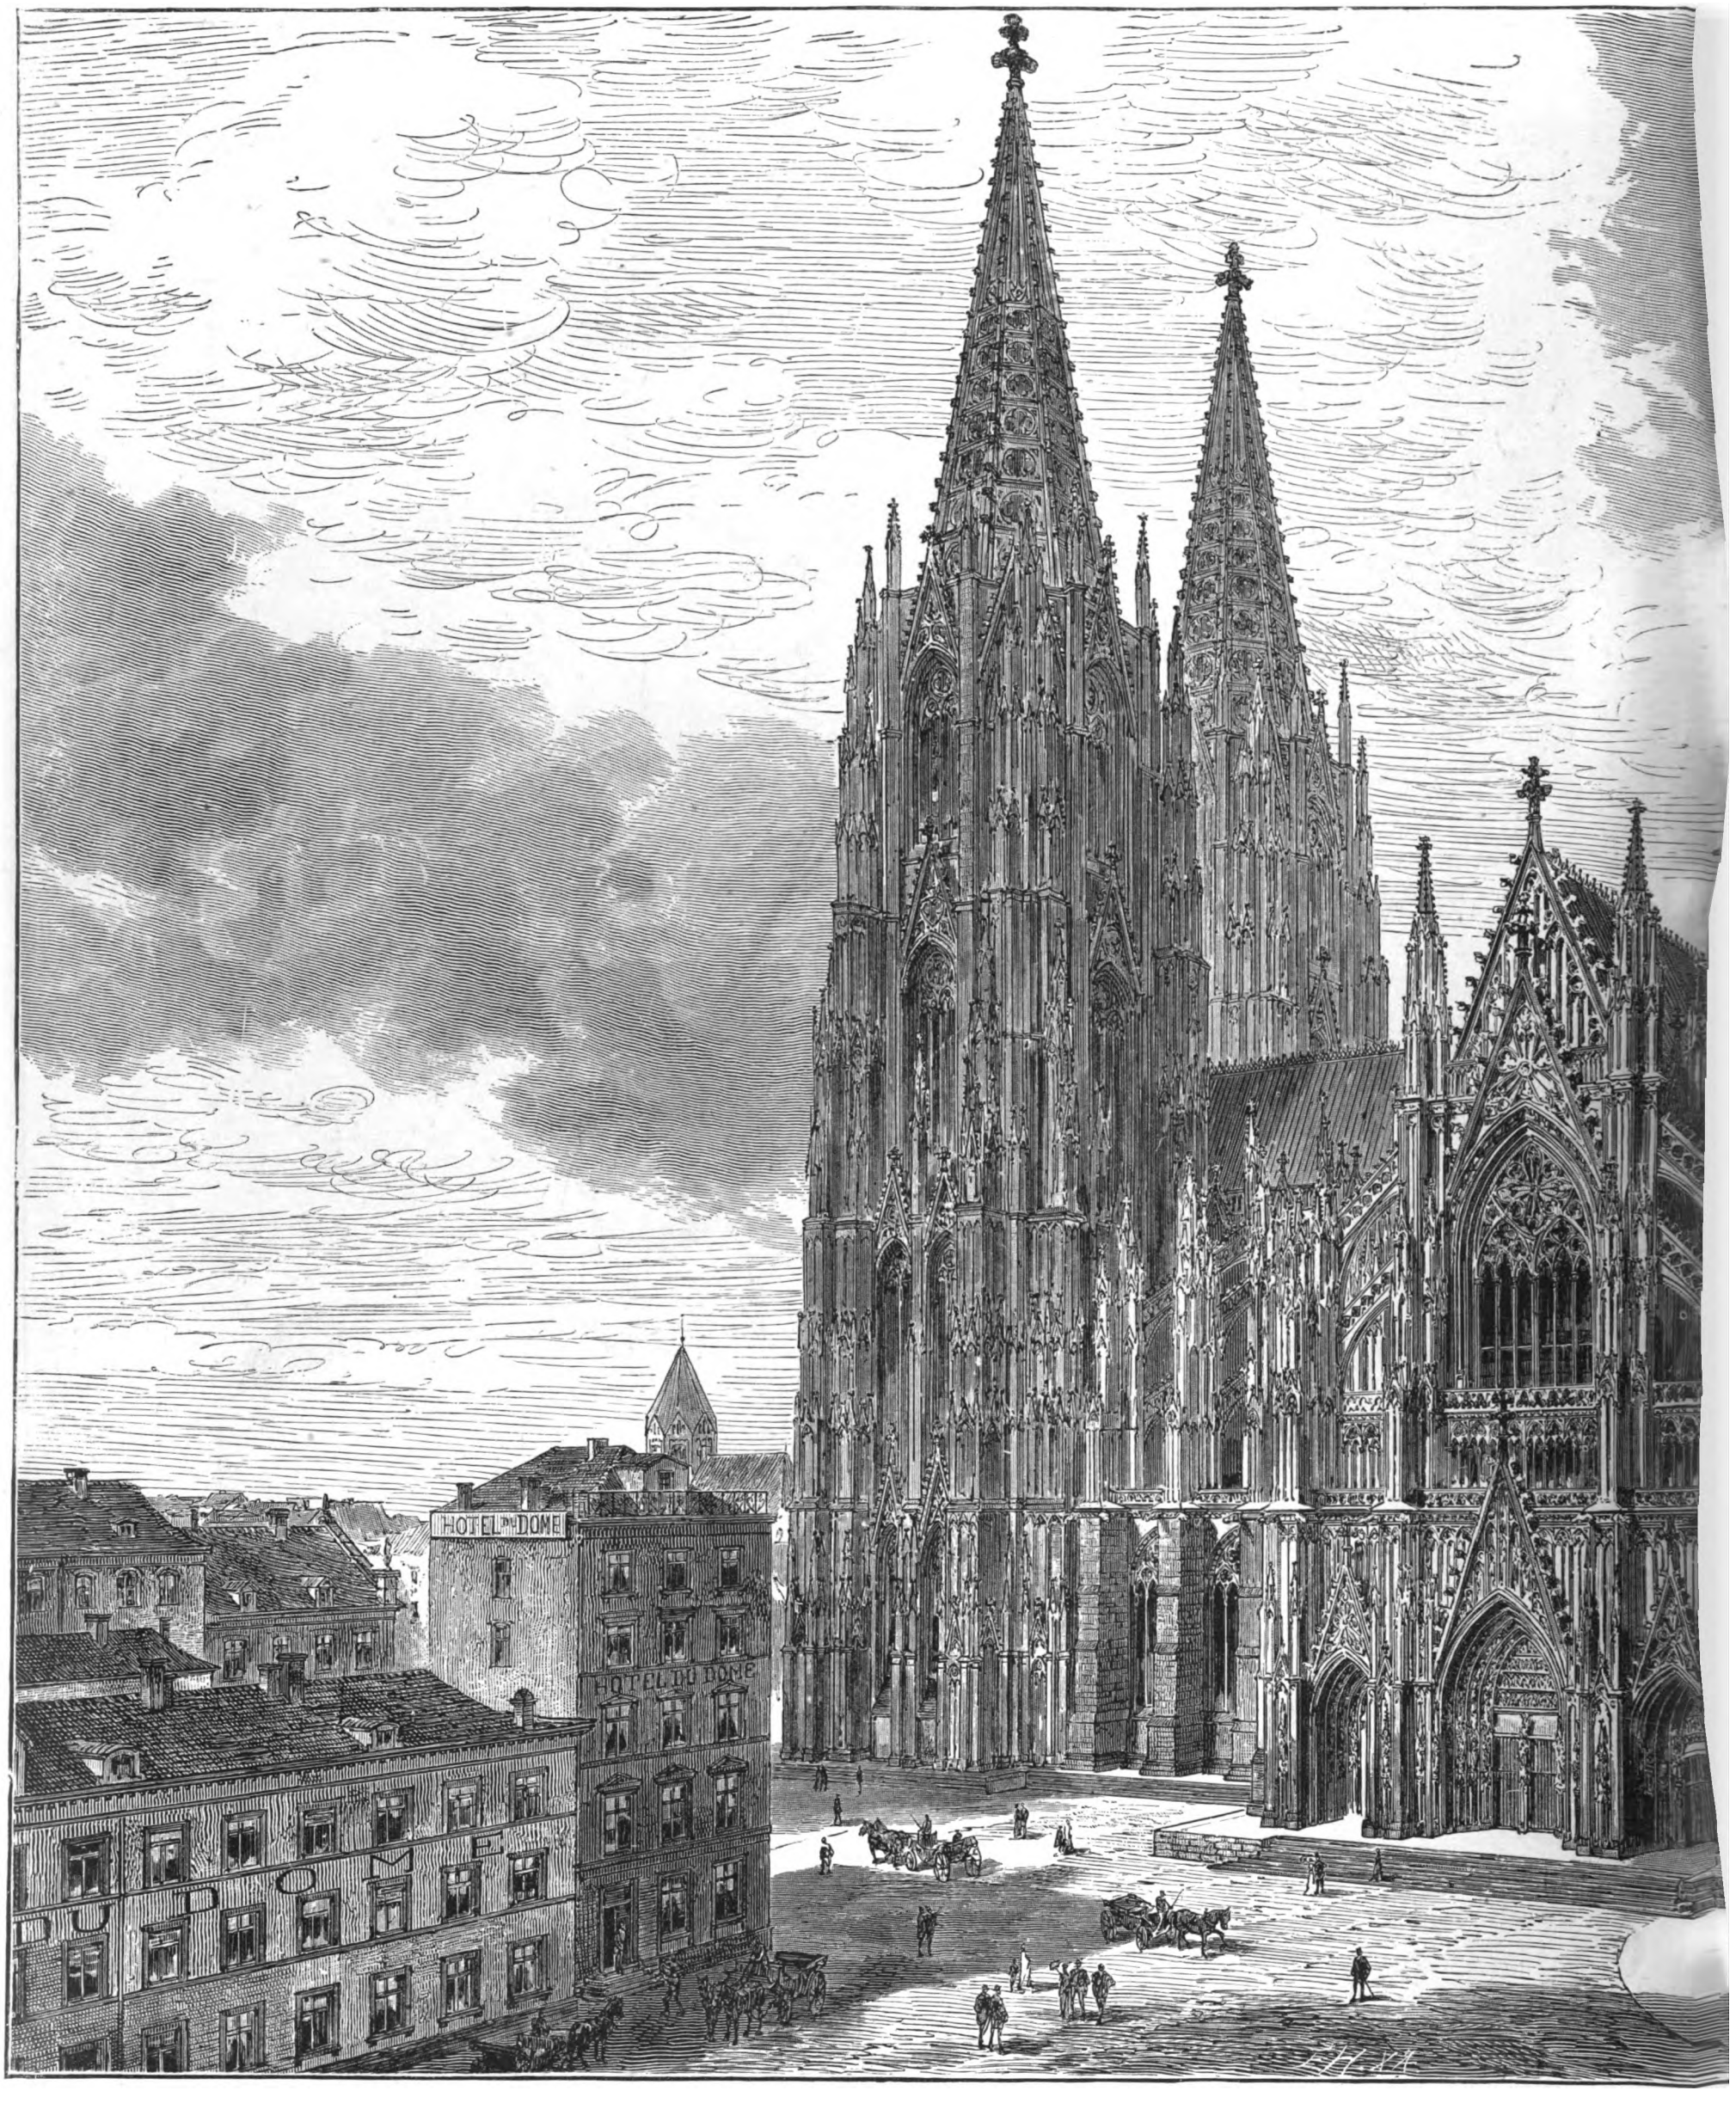


HYDROLEINE (Hydrated Oil)
Is used to increase flesh.

HYDROLEINE (Hydrated Oil)
May be relied upon to increase weight.

THE CHEMICAL PRINCIPLES upon which HYDRATED OIL is prepared were first described in a treatise on the Assimilation and Digestion of Fats in the Human Body, by H. C. Bartlett, Ph.D., F.C.S., published by Messrs. J. and A. Churchill, New Burlington-street (Fat in the Human Body, page 41):—"Nothing appears to restore the healthy functions of the liver and pancreas in these cases except the frequent ingestion of oil or liquid fat, so treated artificially that it is already partially transformed by fermentation and the reaction of bile. Seized on with avidity by the absorbents, it is insensibly assimilated by the digestive organs, until they gradually become strengthened, not only to provide their own nourishment, but to transform a sufficient quantity of fat to supply the inevitable waste throughout the body."

ALL persons taking HYDROLEINE are particularly urged to keep an ACCOUNT from WEEK to WEEK of their WEIGHT, that the gain and improvement may be shown. The makers, having devoted special attention to perfecting a process by means of which uniformity in the production of HYDRATED OIL is secured, desire to direct the attention of the medical profession and the public to this preparation, to distinguish which the name of HYDROLEINE (Hydrated Oil) has been registered under the Trade-Marks Acts. Ask your Chemist for it. If your Chemist has not the "Hydroleine" in stock, a bottle will be sent from the Factory (carriage paid) to any part of England, on receipt of Post-Office Order, 5s. Sold wholesale by the ANGLO-AMERICAN DRUG COMPANY, Limited, 33, Farringdon-road, London. Pamphlet sent free to any address.



Digitized by Google

THE PRINCE OF WALES IN THE HIGHLANDS: A TORCHLIGHT DANCE AT MAR LODGE.
FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

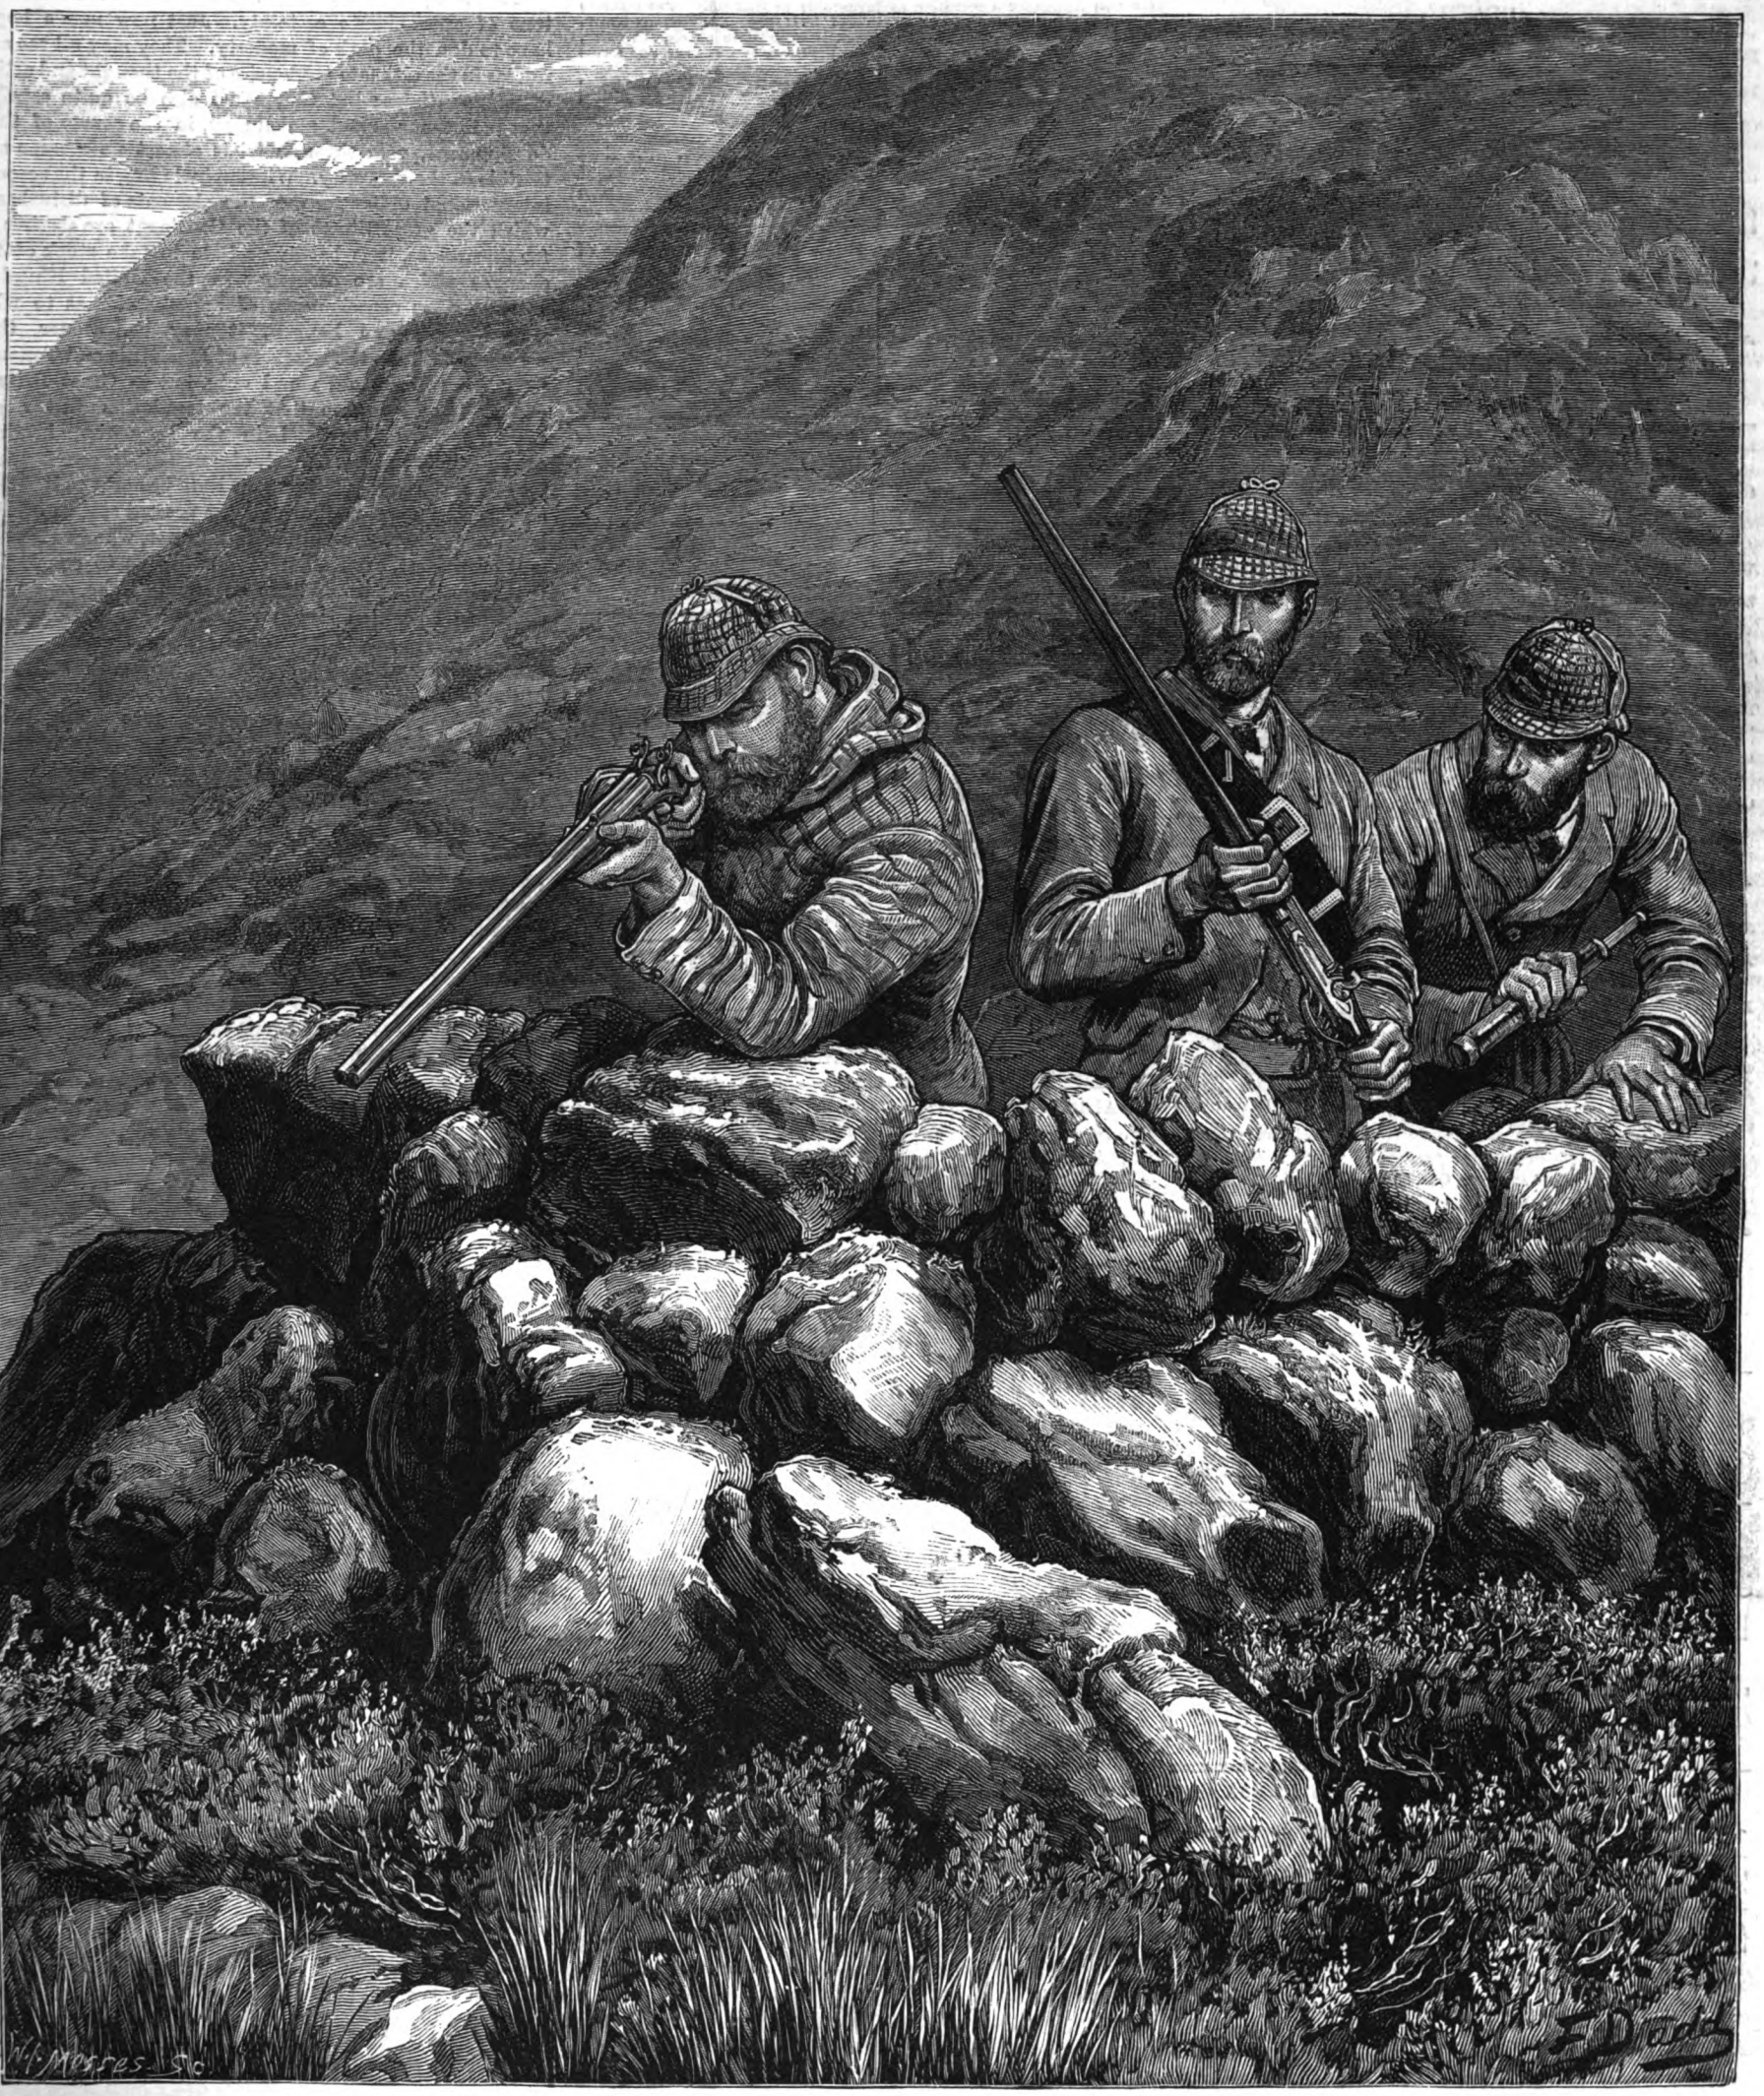
Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

COLOGNE

Digitized by Google

ATHEDRAL.



Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

REGISTERED AT THE GENERAL POST-OFFICE FOR TRANSMISSION ABROAD.

No. 2160.—VOL. LXXVII. SATURDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1880. WITH TWO SUPPLEMENTS } SIXPENCE. By Post, 6½D.

THE PRINCE OF WALES IN THE HIGHLANDS: THE DEER-DRIVE AT INVERCAULD.—SEE PAGE 402.

FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

Digitized by Google

BIRTHS.

On the 17th ult., at 79, Calle Maypú, Buenos Ayres, the wife of Michael Carroll, of a daughter.

On the 7th inst., at 3, Ulverton-place, Dalkey, county Dublin, the wife of William Comyns, of a son.

On the 12th inst., at Folkestone, the Countess of Jersey, of a daughter.

On the 16th inst., at Mote Park, the Hon. Mrs. Dillon, of a daughter.

On the 20th inst., at 20A, Manchester-square, the Hon. Mrs. Chandos Leigh, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

On the 6th inst., at the parish church, Sutton, Surrey, by the Rev. J. E. Orme, Rector of Angmering, assisted by the Rev. H. W. Beverley, of Brighton, and the Rev H. A. Spyers, of Weybridge (uncles of the bride), W. Bailey Hawkins, of Bramley-hill, Croydon, Esq., to Emma Louisa, eldest daughter of George Orme, Esq., of the Manor House, Sutton.

On the 7th inst., at the parish church, Willesden, by the Right Rev. Bishop Beckles, D.D., assisted by the Rev. H. McLeod Beckles, father and brother of the bridegroom, the Rev. Michael Terry, uncle of the bride, the Rev J. C. Whar on, Vicar of the parish, and the Rev. J. T. Brown, Curate, Samuel Husbands Beckles, Esq., grandson of the late Hon. J. A. Beckles, of Barbadoes, to Caroline Jane Terry ("Lina"), daughter of the late Charles Terry, Esq., of Clifton, Gloucestershire. No cards.

At All Saints', Bangalore, India, by the Rev. G. U. Pope, D.D., Incumbent, Thomas Henry Pope, M.B., C.M., Surgeon, Indian Medical Service, to Agnes, second daughter of Edward Owen Crichton, Esq., R.N., Greenhill-place, Edinburgh. No cards.

On the 15th inst., at St. George's, Hanover square, the Rev. E. H. Bickersteth, Vicar of Christ Church, Hamostead, Captain Henry Hay, 1st Bombay Light Cavalry, to Louisa, daughter of the late William Millar, of South Heath, Hampstead.

DEATHS.

On the 17th inst., suddenly, at his residence, Roselands, Turkey-street, Enfield, James Pateshall Jones, aged 65.

On the 12th inst., at his residence, Yewtree, West Derby, Liverpool, Peter George Heyworth, Esq., J.P., aged 57 years.

On the 18th ult., killed in the landslip at Nyuce Tal, in the performance of his duty, Second Lieutenant James Barre Hood Carmichael, of the 33rd (Duke of Wellington's) Regiment, aged 20.

On the 17th ult., at Trevandrum, South India, Geoffrey Lisle, eldest son of Sir Mylles Cave Browne Cave, Bart., aged 23.

On the 17th inst., at North Luffenham, Rutland, William Henry Heathcote, Esq., of North Luffenham Hall, and Tadworth Court, Surrey, third son of the late Sir Gilbert and Lady Sophia Heathcote, aged 83.

On the 17th inst., Mary, the beloved wife of the Rev. J. A. Wood, daughter of the late Rev. H. Morice, Vicar of Ashwell, Herts, and granddaughter of the late Sir John St. Aubyn, Bart.

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, or Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING OCT. 30.

SUNDAY, OCT. 24.

Twenty-second Sunday after Trinity. Morning Lessons: Dan. vi.; 1 Tim. i. 1—18. Evening Lessons: Dan. vii. 9, or xii.; Luke xvii. 20.
St. Paul's Cathedral, 10.30 a.m., Rev. J. V. Povah, Minor Canon; 3.15 p.m., Bishop Piers Claughton; 7 p.m., Rev. C. N. Kelly, Minor Canon.
Westminster Abbey, 10 a.m. and 3 p.m.
St. James's, noon.
Whitehall, 11 a.m. and 3 p.m., Rev. W. F. Erskine Knollys.
Savoy, 11.30 a.m., Rev. Henry White, the Chaplain; 7 p.m., Rev. Dr. Stanley Leathes, Rector of Cliffe, Rochester.
Temple Church, 11 a.m., uncertain; 3 p.m., Rev. A. Ainger, the Reader.
City of London Hospital for Diseases of the Chest: the Bishop of Bedford, at the Chapel, Victoria Park, 3.30 p.m.

MONDAY, OCT. 25.

Annual Balaklava Dinner, Willis's Rooms, 8 p.m.
Medical Society, 8.30 p.m.
Newmarket Houghton Meeting.

TUESDAY, OCT. 26.

Moon's last quarter, 7 a.m.
Medical and Chirurgical Society, 8.30 p.m.
British Dairy Farmers' Association Show, Agricultural Hall (four days).
Gresham Lectures, 6 p.m. (Dr. J. T. Abdy on Law, and on the 27th, 28th, and 29th.
West London Scientific Association, 8 p.m.
South-Place Institute, 7 p.m., Mr. W. C. Coupland on Ethical Principles; 8.30 p.m., Dr. E. B. Aveling on Biology.
Glasgow Scientific Lecture Association, 8 p.m. (Professor Tyndall on Complementary Colours).

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 27.

Hunterian Society, 8 p.m.

THURSDAY, OCT. 28.

St. Simon and St. Jude, apostles and martyrs.
Asylum for Idiots, Earlswood, elections, &c., Cannon-street Hotel, noon.
Bristol, Clifton, and West of England Dog Show (four days).
Toxophilite Society, extra target.
Topographical Society of London, inaugural meeting, Mansion House, 4 p.m.
Hertfordshire Convalescent Home, St. Leonards, to be opened by Princess Christian, about 1.15 p.m.

FRIDAY, OCT. 29.

Hare-hunting begins.
Accession of Albert, King of Saxony, 1873.
Birmingham and Midland Institute: Inaugural Address by the Earl of Northbrook.
City of London College, 6 p.m. (Dr. N. Heinemann on Political Economy—Quantity of Labour and Capital).
Architectural Association: Conversazione, 8 p.m.

SATURDAY, OCT. 30.

Society of Schoolmasters, 2 p.m.

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE KEW OBSERVATORY OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY.

Lat. 51° 28′ 6″ N.; Long. 0° 18′ 47″ W. Height above Sea, 34 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF: Barometer Corrected.	Temperature of the Air.	Dew Point.	Relative Humidity.	Amount of Cloud.	THERMOM.: Maximum, read at 10 P.M.	Minimum, read at 10 P.M.	WIND: General Direction.	Movement in 24 hours, read at 10 A.M. next morning.	Rain in 24 hours, read at 10 A.M. next morning.
	Inches.	°	°	°	0-10	°	°		Miles.	In.
Oct. 10	30·004	51·3	48·5	91	10	54·8	50·1	NE.	449	0·075
11	30·224	49·9	41·3	74	5	56·9	44·8	NE.	296	0·005
12	30·096	46·9	40·3	80	9	53·6	43·5	NE. NNE. N.	297	0·005
13	30·268	49·6	42·0	77	8	55·9	44·8	N. NNE.	187	0·000
14	30·366	44·3	37·6	79	5	52·8	37·4	N. NNW.	54	0·015*
15	30·214	22·6	41·9	97	"7	51·3	32·7	NNW. NE.	57	0·000
16	30·038	48·8	46·5	92	10	53·3	43·4	NE.	96	0·005

* Dew.

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, in order, at ten o'clock a.m.:—

Barometer (in Inches) corrected ..	29·911	30·254	30·179	30·254	30·304	30·286	30·063
Temperature of Air	52·3°	53·9°	50·0°	51·4°	48·0°	42·2°	50·8°
Temperature of Evaporation ..	51·1°	47·2°	45·5°	47·2°	45·2°	41·3°	48·4°
Direction of Wind	NE.	NE.	N.	NNW.	NNW.	NNW.	NE.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE FOR THE WEEK ENDING OCTOBER 30.

Sunday.		Monday.		Tuesday.		Wednesday.		Thursday.		Friday.		Saturday.
M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A
h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m
5 5	5 25	5 45	6 7	6 25	7 5	7 35	8 12	8 52	9 3	10 10	10 43	11 13	11 40

ST. JAMES'S HALL, PICCADILLY.
EVERY NIGHT AT EIGHT:
MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS, and SATURDAYS, at Three and Eight,
ALL THE YEAR ROUND.
MOORE and BURGESS MINSTRELS,
the oldest established and most successful Entertainment in the world, and
THE ACKNOWLEDGED SUPREME HEAD OF ALL CONTEMPORARY MINSTREL COMPANIES
on either side of the Atlantic, comprising, "as it has done for more than fifteen years past,"
FORTY ARTISTES OF KNOWN EMINENCE.

NOW READY,
PRICE ONE SHILLING (INLAND POSTAGE, 2½d.),
THE
ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK
FOR
1881,
CONTAINING
SIX COLOURED PICTURES;
PRINTED BY LEIGHTON BROTHERS' CHROMATIC PROCESS,
FROM ORIGINALS BY EMINENT ARTISTS.
TWELVE FINE-ART ENGRAVINGS;
ASTRONOMICAL PHENOMENA;
TWELVE DIAGRAMS OF THE DURATION OF MOONLIGHT;
The Royal Family of Great Britain; the Queen's Household; her Majesty's Ministers; Lists of Public Offices and Officers; Bankers, Law and University Terms; Fixed and Movable Festivals; Anniversaries; Acts of Parliament passed during the Session of 1880; Revenue and Expenditure; Obituary of Eminent Persons; Christian, Jewish, and Mohammedan Calendars; Tables of Stamps, Taxes, and Government Duties; Times of High Water; Post Office Regulations; together with a large amount of useful and valuable information, which has during the past thirty-eight years made the ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK the most acceptable and elegant companion to the Library; whilst it is universally acknowledged to be by far the cheapest Almanack ever published.
The unprecedented demand for the ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK year after year stimulates the Proprietor to still greater exertions to secure for this Almanack a reception as favourable as that which has hitherto placed its circulation second only to that of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.
The ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK is inclosed in an elegant cover, printed in colours by the same process as the COLOURED PLATES, and forms a useful and pleasing ornament to the drawing-room table.
The SHILLING ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK is published at the Office of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, 198, Strand, and sold by all Booksellers and Newsvenders.

DORÉ'S GREAT WORKS.—"ECCE HOMO" ("Full of divine dignity."—The Times) and "THE ASCENSION;" "CHRIST LEAVING THE PRÆTORIUM," "CHRIST ENTERING JERUSALEM," with all his other Great Pictures.—DORÉ GALLERY, 35, New Bond-street. Daily, 10 to 6. 1s.

FRENCH GALLERY, 120, Pall-mall.—In consequence of the sudden postponement of the intended Building Alterations the TWENTY-EIGHTH ANNUAL WINTER EXHIBITION of PAINTINGS, including the Great Attraction at this year's SALON, "Les Enfants de Jeanidès," by Luminais, will be OPENED, as usual, on the FIRST MONDAY in NOVEMBER, 1880.

PHRENOLOGICAL INSTITUTION.—1, Ludgate-circus, London, E.C.—STACKPOOL E. O'DELL, Consulting Phrenologist. Drawing-room Lectures given upon this interesting and useful science, illustrated by skulls and diagrams. Fee, Five Guineas. Delineations of character at private residences by appointment. Fee, One Guinea.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry Irving.—THE CORSICAN BROTHERS Every Night at 8.30—Louis and Fabien del Franchi, Mr. Irving. At 7.30, BYGONES, by A. W. Pinero. Doors open at 7. Special Morning Performances of THE CORSICAN BROTHERS, Saturdays, OCT. 23 and 30; NOV. 6 and 13; also Wednesday, Nov. 3, and Wednesday, Nov. 10, at 2.30. Box Office (Mr. Hurst) open 10 to 5 daily. Seats booked by letter or telegram.

MR. WALTER BACHE'S PIANOFORTE RECITAL (Ninth Season), ST. JAMES'S HALL, MONDAY, NOV. 1, at Half-past Three. Vocalist, Miss Anna Williams. Stalls, 5s.; Balcony, 3s. Admission, 1s. Stanley, Lucas, Weber and Co., Chappell and Co., usual Agents, and Austin's Ticket Office, St. James's Hall.

MR. and MRS. GERMAN REED'S ENTERTAINMENT. THE TURQUOISE RING, Mr. Corney Grain's New Musical Sketch. THE HAUNTED ROOM and A FLYING VISIT. Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday Evenings at Eight; Thursday and Saturday Afternoons at Three. Admission, 1s., 2s.; Stalls, 3s. and 5s.—ST. GEORGE'S HALL, Langham-place.

THE BRIGHTON SEASON.
Frequent Trains from Victoria and London Bridge.
Also Trains in connection from Kensington and Liverpool-street.
Return Tickets, London to Brighton, available for eight days.
Weekly, Fortnightly, and Monthly Tickets, at Cheap Rates,
Available to travel by all Trains between London and Brighton.
Cheap Half-Guinea First Class Day Tickets to Brighton
Every Saturday, from Victoria and London Bridge,
Admitting to the Grand Aquarium and Royal Pavilion.
Cheap First Class Day Tickets to Brighton every Sunday,
From Victoria at 10.45 a.m., and London Bridge at 10.35 a.m.
Pullman Drawing-Room Cars between Victoria and Brighton.
Through Bookings to Brighton from principal Stations
On the Railways in the Northern and Midland districts.
A Special Train for Horses, Carriages, and Servants,
From Victoria to Brighton, at 11.15 a.m. every Weekday.

GRAND AQUARIUM AND PAVILION.—Military and other Concerts EVERY SATURDAY AFTERNOON, for which the above Saturday Cheap Tickets are available.

NEW ROUTE to WEST BRIGHTON by the DIRECT LINE, PRESTON PARK to CLIFTONVILLE.
A Morning Up and Evening Down Fast Train Every Weekday between London Bridge and West Brighton.

PARIS.—SHORTEST, CHEAPEST ROUTE.—Via NEWHAVEN, DIEPPE, and ROUEN.
CHEAP EXPRESS SERVICE Every Week Night—First, Second, and Third Class.
From Victoria 7.30 p.m., and London Bridge 8.0 p.m.
Fares—Single, 35s., 24s., 17s.; Return, 55s., 38s., 30s.
Powerful Paddle-steamers, with excellent cabins, &c.
Trains run alongside Steamers at Newhaven and Dieppe.
SOUTH OF FRANCE, ITALY, SWITZERLAND, &c.—Tourists' Tickets are issued enabling the holder to visit all the principal places of interest.
HAVRE.—Passengers booked through by this route every week night from Victoria and London Bridge as above.
HONFLEUR, TROUVILLE, CAEN, &c.—Passengers booked through from Victoria and London Bridge, viâ Littlehampton, every Monday and Wednesday.

TICKETS and every information at the Brighton Company's West-End General Offices, 28, Regent-circus, Piccadilly; and No. 8, Grand Hotel Buildings, Trafalgar-square; also at the Victoria and London Bridge Stations. (By Order) J. P. KNIGHT, General Manager.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON: SATURDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1880.

Patience and Hope! The first, long-enduring; the second, looking far into the distant future. Such are the dispositions of mind called for by the present state of International affairs. There is a keen game of diplomacy going on, the progress of which, if it can be called progress, has become monotonous to all those who view it from the outside. One might suppose that no other object was before the players than to protract the game. Looking into the newspapers closely resembles looking through a kaleidoscope. Day after day, there is a change in the aspect of affairs, but it would seem to consist solely in the transposition of the same details. Telegrams appear one day which the next day contradicts. Now we are on the verge of danger; presently we are disenchanted of the grim illusion. How often has this been the case, in times gone by, when the political interests of Nations were supposed to be concentrated in the hands of Ministries and Diplomatists. Necessarily, the work they do, or essay to do, among themselves, is veiled from the scrutinising gaze of the public; and, even where the final aim of all is identical, or nearly so, the methods and means of each become conflicting just in proportion as they are definite. Mr. Gladstone is, just now, the target at which the shafts of abuse, or of ridicule, are being let fly from all quarters of Europe. He has a policy, and he knows how to insist upon it. The policy itself may be good or bad, too precipitate or too far-reaching; but it is understood. So far as his intentions are concerned, it is real and active. It brings a certain amount of pressure to bear upon other Powers, and, doubtless, it runs athwart the yet unavowed schemes of other statesmen. No wonder that it is met by several unexpected obstructions, or that it is environed by hosts of petty perplexities, which the outer world cannot see through. He is not the man, however, to relinquish his hold upon the helm on account of the fluctuations which disturb the surface of the public mind. He is too experienced a hand to blench before journalistic vagaries, to be "blown about by every wind of doctrine" which circumstances let loose upon his course. We must have patience, and, possibly, before the end of the Parliamentary Recess we shall see the vessel of State triumphantly riding upon smoother waters.

It is not prudent, perhaps, to speak of the future in a tone of approximate certainty. Just now men's hopes have to don the garb of modesty. They may all see and rejoice in the ultimate tendencies of the thought and action of passing times; but they must also be quite sensible that both thought and action may, in the course of their development, pass through trials almost unforeseen and terrible in their severity. Without including in the account international obligations, or the elements of disturbance which the great States of the Continent are storing up for themselves, it is hardly possible to take stock of the changes which are occurring in the United Kingdom without some consciousness of apprehension as to what may happen—and happen, it may be, sooner than we expect. Take the relations of Landlords and Tenants, for instance—not in Ireland only, but in Great Britain, and it is easy to see that the legislation just ahead of it, however beneficial in the long run, however cautious in the process, must, of necessity, be accompanied by great suffering. Bad seasons have brought to light the cumbrousness and weakness of the present system of land laws, and, whether we are willing or not, whether we consent or protest, events are conducting us to conclusions that no agitation would have extorted. Take, again, our commercial position and prospects. Free Trade will, no doubt, achieve a final victory over Protectionism. But a conflict is near at hand which will sorely test the endurance of the great interests of the country. Almost every nation in Europe has adopted, or threatens to adopt, hostile tariffs. The United States of America appear less likely than ever to discard their protective system. Our own Colonies have yielded to similar economical errors. All this will probably bear hard upon us, and will sensibly diminish the volume of our material earnings. The melancholy disclosures, brought to light by the Electoral Commissions, of corrupt practices at elections indicate, moreover, a feeble condition of public virtue which, if it were taken by itself, might wellnigh extinguish all hope of political improvement. But they must not be taken as if they constituted the only facts bearing on the case. They are bad enough, even if they could be regarded as exceptional. But it has to be borne in mind that they are exceptional. The great mass of our Constituencies, we are convinced, is free from the taint which has destroyed all independence of thought, and all self-respect, in several of our minor boroughs. The homely virtues of honesty, truthfulness, and love of country, do not "cry aloud in the streets," but when the time comes for their effective exercise it is generally found that they are out-of-sight more powerful and wider spread than any other factor in the choice of Parliamentary Representatives.

The foregoing reflections are not cheerful, we confess. But they are, perhaps, not altogether so depressing as they seem. There is always a bright as well as a dark side to things, and, if it were possible, it would be puerile to confine attention exclusively to either the one or the other. It may be that we are about to be submitted to a baptism the effect of which will be to fit us for higher duties towards the world than we have yet undertaken. Certainly, there is not a little attaching to British character, British customs, and British modes of viewing human interests which might be got rid of without injury to British individuality. An ambition to take the lead in the affairs of men is not by any means to be condemned for its own sake. Much, if not all, depends upon whither we are anxious to conduct our followers. Intellectual, social, and moral conquests are not always simultaneous with material ascendancy. The influence of England will, in the main, depend upon the character of England; and, apart from character, her wealth, or even the extent of her dominions, will do little for mankind. When she is accumulating pecuniary capital by "leaps and bounds," she has seldom much attention to bestow upon other nations, seldom much disposition to bestow it upon what is right and equitable and good, for its own sake. She is now learning a difficult lesson, moral as well as political. She is being taught by events beyond her own control that she cannot do everything she wills—cannot even do all the good she would. But she is also learning the much-needed lesson that in striving to give justice and freedom to others she is also ennobling herself.

Digitized by Google

ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

Mr. J. L. Toole and Mr. John Hollingshead should look well to such of the leaves of their laurels as are of Gallic growth; for the chaplet may ere long be wrested from them, or at least fiercely disputed by some very unexpected competitors in the City of London. Not alone on the outward walls of the Gaiety and the Folly theatres should banners be hung blazoned with the proud inscription "Ici on parle Français." The City magnates have begun to talk French—and to talk it very well, too, at the Mansion House, where, on Tuesday, the Lord Mayor entertained at a grand "International" Banquet the representatives of the municipalities of Paris and Brussels, as also the Mayors of several English cities and boroughs.

Towards the close of the convivial proceedings, Mr. Birch, the Governor of the Bank of England, in returning thanks for the toast of "The Interests of Commerce," added to his remarks, in the vernacular tongue, a few phrases in French, for the benefit of the foreign visitors. I am not astonished at Mr. Birch. A Governor of the Bank of England should be able to go anywhere and do anything; and were I told that the existing Major Domo of the Old Lady of Threadneedle-street talked Sanskrit as well as Professor Max Müller does, danced as Taglioni, and "played the fiddle like an Angel," as William in "Black-Eyed Susan" did, I should not be very much surprised. But what do you say to Mr. ex-Sheriff Woolloton, who, when his health was proposed by the Lord Mayor, responded in a speech in the French language?

No French after the School of Stratford-atte-Bowe, mind you. "Frenche of Paris was unknowe" to Chaucer's Prioress, but not by any means so to Mr. ex-Sheriff Woolloton, who speaks "ful fayre and fetisly" the speech of our vivacious neighbours, and spake an address of which the diction was scrupulously accurate, the delivery fluent, and the accent vraiment Parisien, and not "vraymong Parysiang."

If I had any money—that is to say, if I had at my disposal a sum of some three thousand pounds, not already forestalled by the demands of the butterman and the tax-gatherer (have you heard of the fantastically high-handed tricks of the parochial Assessment Committees, who are raising the rateable value of houses all over London?)—I would found at the Lycée Charlemagne, or Louis le Grand, or the Collège Chaptal, Paris, a bourse or exhibition (the interest on the capital should amount to about a hundred a year), tenable for three years, which should be awarded triennially by open competition to the young Frenchman between the ages of eighteen and twenty who should approve himself most promisingly proficient in the English language. The scholarship should be a travelling one; and the successful candidate should be required to come to England and perfect his familiarity with our tongue in our own midst. In the case of a studious and steady young man, there is a great deal of spending in a hundred a year.

I have not the slightest doubt that within ten years of the foundation of such a bourse of which I, a poor visionary Alnaschar, have been dreaming, some wealthy French gentleman would endow at one of our Universities a scholarship of equal annual value, to be competed for triennially, and held for three years by a young Englishman, for proficiency in French. The successful candidate should be bound to reside, not in Paris (which is a dangerous place), but at Tours or Bordeaux. It is not at all unlikely that, failing the appearance of the wealthy French founder, the State would come forward to take his place.

There is a novel which I have never read, by Lord Beaconsfield, called "Lothair;" but I have been told that therein the noble author incidentally makes the remark that the youthful British aristocracy "speak only one language and live in the open air." Is this so? I do not know anything about the British aristocracy, young or old; but it has happened to me to have seen a good deal of another aristocracy—I mean the Russian one—who, in the most rigorous climate in Europe, pass a considerable amount of their time in the open air, and are, almost without exception, trained from their youth upwards in athletic and martial exercises, and who yet contrive to speak a good many languages in addition to their own.

In the winter of 1875-6 it chanced that I was at Moscow. When I left that city to return to St. Petersburg her Britannic Majesty's Vice-Consul, Mr. Leslie, was kind enough to accompany me to the railway station, and sate with me some time in the compartment before the train started. The only other occupant of the carriage was a Russian military officer, in uniform, and evidently, to judge from the many decorations which he wore, of high rank. I knew that Russian officers of all ranks are bound to speak French fluently; and when we were "off," I asked him in French whether he had any objection to smoking. He answered by producing a cigar-case and offering me a choice havana, adding, in bluff idiomatic Saxon, that he was about to have a "weed" himself. Then he began to talk about Brighton and Scarborough, the Orleans Club, the Alhambra, and the Ascot Cup. By-and-by, there entered the carriage a French gentleman, who was in business as a wine merchant at Odessa, and then, for the next two hours or so, we all talked French.

At a refreshment-buffet, midway, I got into some slight trouble over the change for a gold napoleon, which I wished to change into paper roubles. Of course the waiter (he was a native) wanted to cheat me. The little Russ I had acquired twenty years before had grown very rusty; and I should have been cozened out of about thirty per cent of my due had not the bluff officer who spoke English come to my assistance. The way in which he "blew up" the Russian waiter in his own tongue, and forced him to make restitution, was most consolatory to hear. The proprietor of the buffet was a German; and him also did the bluff officer "blow up" in the choicest High Dutch.

Then we resumed our journey; and my polyglot friend talked about the St. Petersburg and Moscow Opera-Houses, and Patti and Nicolini and Albani. He had to allude to, and even quote, the words of numbers of famous Italian pieces of music; and I felt assured that he had the lingua Toscana in bocca Romana. At the conclusion of our journey we interchanged cards; and, looking at his, I found that my many-tongued fellow-traveller was General Greig, Aide-de-Camp to the Grand Duke Constantine, and grandson of Catherine the Second's famous Scotch Admiral Greig. Afterwards I had the honour to meet at dinner the General's brother, Admiral Greig, the Comptroller of the Imperial Finances, and found him to be quite as varied and as accomplished a linguist as his kinsman.

I relate this little apologue with the sole wish to confute the erroneous notion that the Russians have almost exclusively a "natural aptitude for acquiring languages." The polyglot General was, on the parental side, of direct Scottish descent. You might as well tell me that English cabmen have a "natural aptitude" for remembering the names and localities of all the streets and squares in London, or that river pilots have a "natural aptitude" for gaining familiarity with the hydrography of the Thames. No, no: it is the early teaching that does it all. Educated Russians are excellent linguists, because they are excellently well trained in childhood to skilfulness in the tongues; whereas, on the other hand, there are some forty millions of uneducated Russians who speak nothing but their native Sclavonic. I have a little niece who went out the other day as a governess in a noble Russian family at Nishni Novgorod. She tells me that there are three resident governesses in the house, in addition to a German tutor, and five or six non-resident masters for other languages and accomplishments.

So M. Félix Pyat, of whose (reported to be abandoned) prosecution by the French Government for justifying Berezowski's attempted assassination of the Czar I spoke last week, has really been prosecuted, and, moreover, convicted and sentenced in contumaciam. Two years' imprisonment and a fine of one thousand francs are the penal pabulum prescribed, in his absence, for the offence of which the editor of the Commune has been found guilty. I wonder whether M. Félix Pyat will surrender himself to offended French justice, or whether he will show the parquet a clean pair of heels, and visit us in Soho once more? How fond he must be of hot water, to be sure!

Lord Houghton's utterances to Prince Rudolf, the Kaiser's heir-apparent, seem to have given umbrage in official circles at Berlin. But the popular Liberal Peer sticks to his text, and in a letter to the Times of Wednesday declares that "he has long felt and often avowed, both in and out of Parliament, and in contradiction to the views of his political chief, that England should look to Austrian preponderance in the Balkan peninsula; and, in the calamitous event of the collapse of the Turkish Empire, on the Bosphorus itself, as the best security for Europe and civilisation.

Thus my Lord Houghton. Austrians or Russians at Constantinople. Capuletti or Montecchi? What says Mercutio ("Romeo and Juliet," Act III. Scene I.: you see that I am making good use of Mrs. Cowden Clarke's Concordance), "A plague o' both the houses." I am not a practical politician; but I have devised what seems in my humble opinion to be a very feasible scheme for the government of Constantinople in view of the "calamitous event of the collapse of the Turkish Empire."

The form of government to be a Conservative Republic, presided over by the Earl of Dufferin (if he will be so kind as to accept the post); Joint Ministers of the Interior, Messrs. Spiers and Pond, who will at least take care to convert the ruinous caravanserais of Stamboul into habitable hotels and provide decent tables d'hôte at the Pera Hotels. Minister of Public Health (with power to inflict the punishment of the bastinado and the bowstring for a second offence on architects who build normally unhealthy houses), Dr. Benjamin R. Richardson; Joint Ministers of Finance, Messrs. Quilter and Ball, Accountants; Minister of War, Mr. Pease, M.P.; Minister of Agriculture, Mr. Mechi, of Tiptree Hall; Minister of Justice, Mr. George Lewis; Minister of Marine, Mr. Brassey; and First Commissioner of Works, Mr. Waterhouse, the architect of the New National History Museum at South Kensington. As for the presidents of the High Court of Justice, an ordinarily sharp metropolitan police magistrate would do excellently well for the criminal, and an average English County Judge for the civil, side of the judiciary. Mr. Frank Ives Scudamore might be appointed Postmaster General (with a fair chance of getting his salary paid). I do not think any more reforms would be wanted beyond those which such administrators as I have named would be able to carry out.

Mem.: There would be no harm, perhaps, in "crowning the edifice" of regeneration on the Bosphorus by hanging the Kislar Aga and giving the white and black slaves of the Sultan's harem their liberty; by restoring the Cathedral (now Mosque) of St. Sophia to its legitimate Metropolitan, the Patriarch of the Greek Church; by sending the Dancing Dervishes to try "the light fantastic" on the treadmill in the British Consular prison at Galata; by giving the Howling Dervishes something to howl for in the shape of two dozen apiece with the "cat;" by drowning the pitiably mangy and half-starved curs which in their thousands infest every street in the Ottoman capital; and by shutting up the gaming-houses of Pera. But these are merely matters of detail.

A lady correspondent, who signs herself "Ignoramus," and describes herself as an "illiterate Irishwoman," while writing in a boldly symmetrical hand a very sensible letter, remarks (in allusion to the "Spare the Rod and Spoil the Child" question, anent which I continue to receive numbers of more or less fierce letters for and against the thrashing of feeble children by strong-handed adults) that it has often struck her that those who advocate the whipping of juveniles, and cite King Solomon as an authority, do not seem to consider that, supposing the Wise Man to have reduced his disciplinary theories to practice in the case of Rehoboam, the result in that personage's subsequent career was scarcely what Solomon would have expected. It happens, curiously enough, that precisely the same reflection occurs in one of Mrs. Gaskell's novels—in "Ruth"—I think where an old nurse is made to say (if I remember aright) that Rehoboam turned out "no great shakes." And Mrs. Gaskell (when shall we have such another book as "Mary Barton?") was the wife of a Unitarian minister.

Quite apart from the disciplinarians and the anti-disciplinarians are the philologers; and altogether this extremely thorny question of "Spare the Rod," &c., has brought me mentally into the condition of the celebrated American "bob-tail bull at fly time;" or the equally well known "Scottish toad under a harrow, when every tooth gave her a tig." It has brought down on me—well, not precisely the wrath of the Rev. Professor W. W. Skeat, of Cambridge, but an avalanche of erudition from his pen, beneath which I lie so crushed out of shape that my relations would scarcely know me.

Ordinarily, in questions of philology (about which, as a science, I never professed to know anything: I merely note what seem to me to be odd words and expressions when I come across them, and try to find out their meaning and derivation), Professor Skeat "goes" for me, metaphorically speaking, with a hundred-ton gun, several mitrailleuses, a Lochaber axe, a sackful of torpedoes, a pack of hounds in full cry, and a knuckle-duster. In the present instance the Professor is not ferocious. He is polite—exquisitely; but ah, me! sarcastically polite. He hopes that I will pardon him if he ventures (sic in italics) that he thinks "Spare the Rod," &c., is an old English proverb, much older than "Hudibras." Here, he says, are the very words in Latin Qui parcit virge odit filium.

But, most amiable of Professors, Butler in his love for alliteration and antithesis, said "Spare and Spoil;" and to hate is not to spoil. Professor Skeat quotes the English of the Latin proverb from "Piers Plowman, Text D. Passus V. l. 40," in the Professor's own "Selections from Piers Plowman," published by the Clarendon Press. It runs thus:—

> Who-so will it knowe
> Who-so spareth the sprynge
> Spilleth his children.

Professor Skeat contends that "sprynge" is a more expressive term for a rod or switch than "rod;" and he points out that "spill" is a word of purely English origin, for which the French word "spoil" was afterwards substituted. All this may be, and must be, if Professor Skeat says so; but I am content to repeat that King Solomon flourished a great many centuries before either "Piers Plowman" or "Hudibras" was written; but that Butler's elegant and nervous paraphrase of the Wise Man's counsel belongs, to all appearance (verbatim et literatim), to Butler, and Butler only. The spirit of the precept pertains, of course, to Solomon, and is paraphrased inelegantly in "Piers Plowman."

Finally, Professor Skeat (to whom I am really very much obliged for his courtesy) quotes from "Hazlitt's Popular Poetry," Vol. I., page 191, the following engaging recommendation:—

> And yif thou love thin (thy) children, loke thou holde hem lowe
> Yif any of hem do amys curre hem not ne blowe,
> But take a smerte rodde and bete hem alle by rowe (in a row!)
> Til thei cry mercy, and be here grylte aknowe > (acknowledge their guilt).

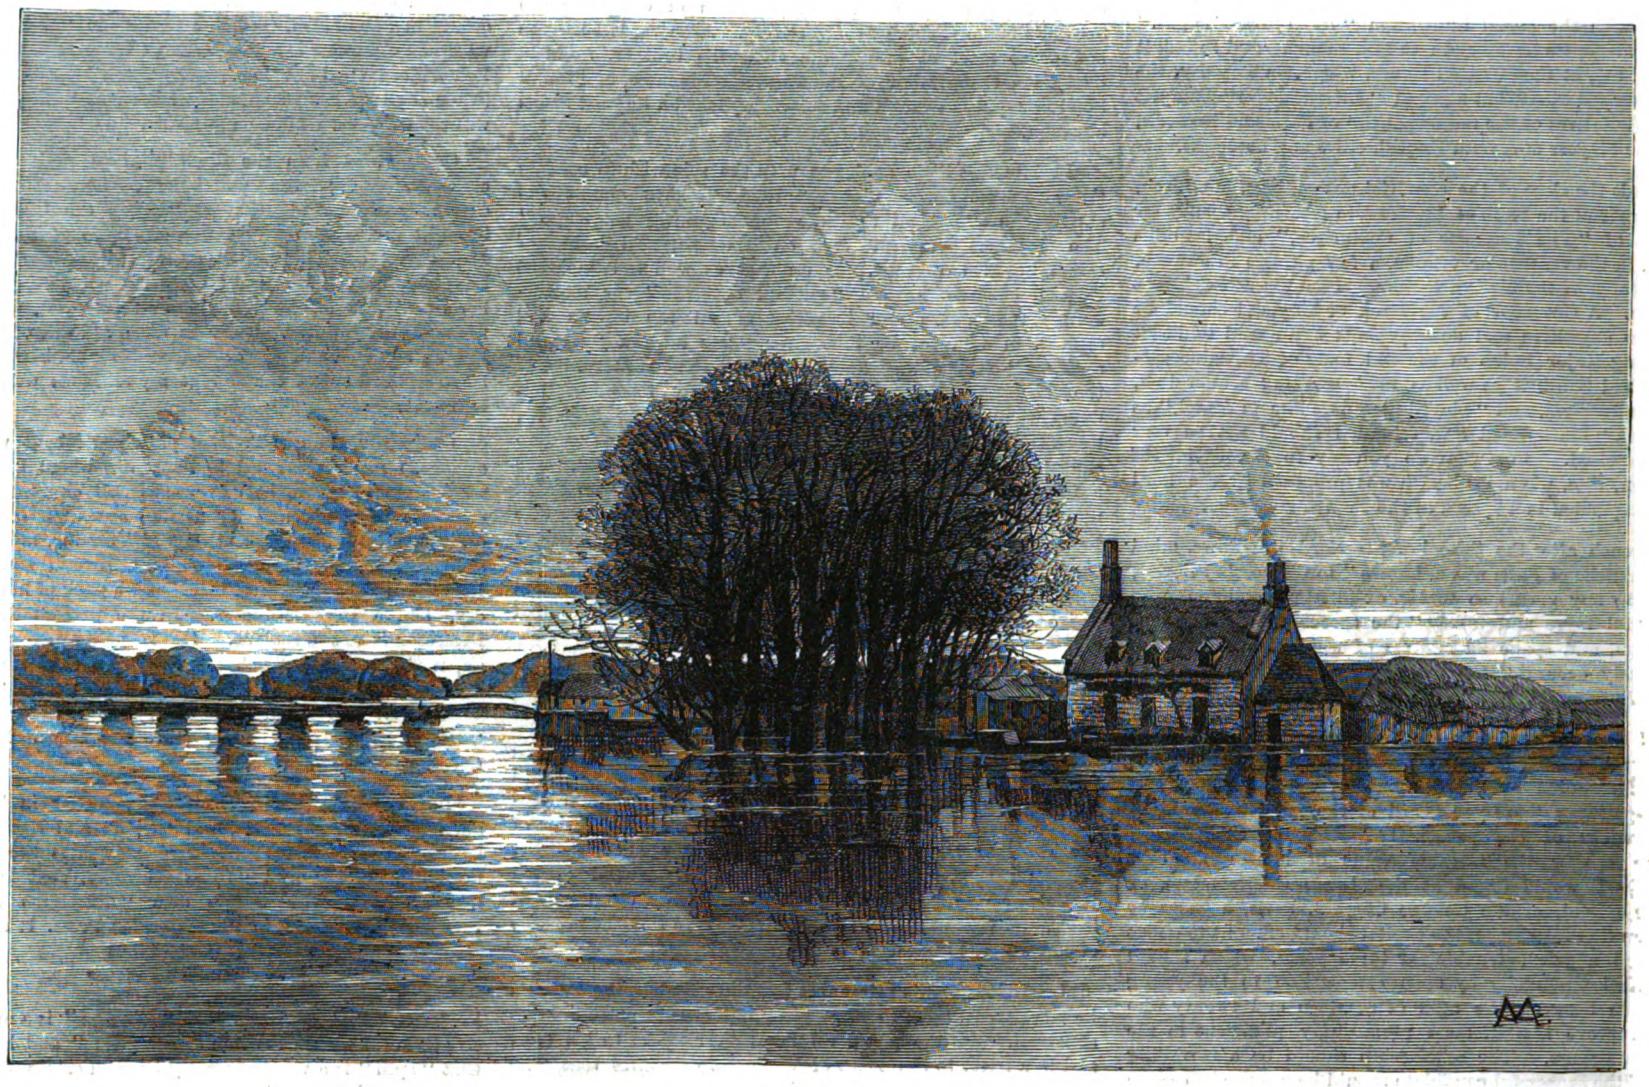
To this sage advice the attention of Board School masters and mistresses who are occasionally addicted to rapping little children over the head may well be drawn.

Have you heard the great American "Whisky Well" story yet? I hope it has not been before in English print; but, in any case, it is so droll that it will bear re-telling. I find it quoted in the San Francisco News Letter from the St. Louis Republican. It seems that a farmer who owned a large tract of land at some short distance from the Missouri river commenced operations lately for boring an Artesian well. The first fluid brought up by his "drive-pump" appeared from its odour to be very excellent Old Rye whisky. He tried some of the liquid on his pigs, and they became exceedingly tipsy. He tried it on himself, and he became tipsier even than the swine. When he had got over his headache, he began boring in other directions, and always with the same result. Whisky, Whisky everywhere, and not a drop of water. It was bruited about that Alcoholia had been discovered at last; and land in the vicinity of the "whisky well" found ready purchasers at several thousand dollars per acre.

At length somebody remembered that about twenty years ago the steamer Arabian, laden with six hundred casks of whisky, sank in the Missouri river. The course of the current of that frailly banked river has been changing ever since; and the forgotten vessel, with the six hundred barrels of whisky in her hold, had got buried forty feet under the sand from which the stream had receded. The idea of the "drive-pump" striking Old Rye instead of water is very rich.



Several correspondents tell me that Mrs. Cowden Clarke's Dedication to Douglas Jerrold was not of the Shakspercan Concordance, but to a volume of "Shakspeare's Proverbs," compiled by the same scholarly and indefatigable lady, who is at present resident at Genoa. And Mr. Sam. Timmins, J.P., has kindly sent me from Birmingham a copy of the first edition of the Proverbs, bearing the date of 1848, which now is very rare. To me it will be extremely precious.

I have been among the Dragons this week, and have gained (I hope) much valuable information from communing with those monsters. I do not mean the Temple Bar Memorial Dragon (who has been erroneously called a Griffin); I have bidden that Portent a respectful farewell, and am trying to learn to love him. The Dragons I mean are the wonderful fossil skeletons of extinct animals of gigantic size at the New National Museum at South Kensington, which, through the courtesy of Professor Owen, I have been privileged to inspect. I shall have to say something about those Dragons next week.

G. A. S.

Digitized by Google

THE FLOODS IN THE FEN COUNTRY.

VIEW BETWEEN PEAKIRK AND CROWLAND.

In speaking generally, last week, of the distress caused by inundations frequent in low-lying districts, as represented in Mr. Norman Tayler's picture bearing the title of "Flooded Out," we mentioned the recent visitation of that kind in our North-east Midland shires, and in the part of Yorkshire about Sheffield. The Illustrations we now present, some of which appear in our Extra Supplement, were sketched by our Special Artist in the neighbourhood of Crowland, which is in the southern part of Lincolnshire, and which has suffered, with other places in the Fen country, more severely by the late floods than by any similar calamity for many years past. There are three rivers, the Ouse, the Nene, and the Welland, flowing into the Wash from the south-western and the western borders of the Fenland, the first-named coming from Huntingdonshire, by the Isle of Ely, and the two latter from Northamptonshire, which are especially liable to overflow, with results usually most disastrous to places near the inland limit of the Fenland region. The lower part of that country, towards the shores of the Wash, having an ample outfall to the sea, as at Lynn Regis and Wisbech, does not experience this trouble so much as the levels immediately above; where the rivers have been led, at different times, into several artificial channels, by the local schemes of land drainage, but without due provision for the simultaneous prompt discharge of an extraordinary volume of water produced by continuous rains. No one channel, it appears, is deep and wide enough to serve as the main artery or surface drainage for the entire region surrounding the Fenland, while the extremely slight inclination of the land makes the currents of such rivers too slow for efficiently scouring their bed. The week before last,

STREET IN PEAKIRK.

Digitized by Google

AUTUMN LEAVES ARE FALLING.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

Digitized by Google

from Tuesday, the 5th inst., to Saturday, the 9th, brought sore trials from this cause to the towns of St. Ives, Huntingdon, and Godmanchester, in one direction; and in other quarters to Peterborough, Spalding, Bourne, and Crowland.

The Nene at Peterborough, on the Saturday afternoon, by which time the flood reached its height, was running with such force that it was feared the bridge would be carried away. At Spalding, which is in Lincolnshire, on the Wednesday night, the Glen embankment suddenly gave way; by dint of great exertions the breach was stopped, but no sooner had this been done than the water overflowed the sluice walls, and inundated all the neighbouring districts. On the Friday, in the embankment of Bourne South Fen, the water made another breach, which it was found impossible to stop. By the next morning, the line of the Bourne and Spalding railway was under water of 2 ft. depth, and the railway traffic was stopped. The flood happily abated on the Sunday and Monday.

At Crowland, and between Peakirk and Crowland, along the Welland where it flows out of Northamptonshire, the mischief done was very considerable. It was in this locality that the scenes occurred which are shown in our series of Illustrations. The bank, overcome by enormous pressure of water, gave way near Becken's mill, on the Saturday night, and the inhabitants of Crowland were alarmed by an instant and tremendous peril to their homes and property. Every man able to work had to labour, for many hours, in laying hundreds of sacks, filled with earth, along the still widening breach or "slip" of the embankment. This was continued all through Sunday; but when the breach was stopped, here as at Spalding, the water rose and poured in a cascade over the top of the bank, along a space of nearly a mile, and it seemed as though nothing could resist its invasion. Messengers and telegrams had been sent to all the neighbouring towns for more hands and more sacks to fight the arduous battle; and it is said that Messrs. Dawbarn and Sons, of Wisbech, sent 8000 or 9000 sacks to Crowland. The bank gave way in another part between midnight and the break of day, and thousands of acres of land were presently flooded. It fortunately happened on the Sunday that the violent north-east wind, by which the water of the Welland had been driven back upon Crowland, was considerably lulled, abating the pressure on the side of the protecting bank, and the water then subsided. They say at Crowland that this is the most alarming flood that place has known since 1796.

A local correspondent supplies the following particulars:—"Crowland Wash is an immense reservoir, fifteen miles in length, and in some places near upon a mile wide. At ordinary times the meadows in the washes are most luxuriant. The river Welland enters it at Peakirk, and runs alongside the west bank. The land here is estimated to be at least four feet higher than it is outside the bank, and the bottom of the river is far higher than the land adjacent, so that it partakes more of the nature of an aqueduct than a drain. Through this system the highland water passes to Spalding, where its overflow is contracted to the compass of the single archway of the "stone bridge." The recent inundation was of unexampled height, the water rising more like the ocean tides than the customary floods. On Friday, the 8th, news reached the district that we might expect an unusual high flood; but nothing was done until midday on Saturday; but then the water was coursing over the west bank in one vast cascade, until Borough fen was all drowned. On Sunday morning about one o'clock the bank parted in the centre. Hundreds of tons of earth was blown to a great distance, but fortunately sufficient remained to resist the bulk of the water. A fearful panic ensued in the town; but hundreds of willing assistants were soon on the spot, and so vigorously did they apply their energy, under the leadership of Mr. Watson, the resident manager for the Duke of Bedford, that by Monday night the great danger was past. Had the water got the complete mastery, it is estimated that three fourths of the great level would have been flooded. As it is, much ruin and misery will result. Corn still remains uncut, the potatoes are destroyed, as also the carrot, mangold, and turnip crops."

Crowland, or Croyland, a small market-town of 3000 inhabitants, is situated between Peterborough and Spalding, about ten miles from each of those places. It is famous for the ruins of the magnificent abbey, which was originally founded, in 716, by Ethelbald, King of Mercia, in honour of St. Guthlac, who made his abode there some time before. A sister of St. Guthlac, named Pega, dwelt at a place six miles west of Crowland, now called Peakirk, that is to say, Pega's Kirk, from the chapel she there founded. It is only a small village of 250 people, and a station of the Great Northern Railway. Views of Crowland and Peakirk, and of the floods there, appear in this Number of our Journal.

At St. Ives and in other places of Huntingdonshire during four or five days the floods occasioned much loss and household misery. The inhabitants, both of that borough and of the county, have held meetings to petition Government to undertake or to order a thorough reform of the whole land drainage of the Ouse valley or plain, where 30,000 acres of most valuable land, producing corn, meat, and market-garden vegetables, is liable to be frequently laid waste. They estimate the amount of damage in that district at £200,000 within a few past years. The remedy which they propose is an enlargement of the outfall below the Isle of Ely, and removal of weeds and other obstructions in the channel of the Ouse above. Any reader who desires more topographical, scientific, and practical information concerning the existing works of river embankment and main drainage in this part of England, should consult a book which was reviewed in our Journal two years ago—"The Fenland, Present and Past," by Messrs. S. B. J. Skertchly and S. B. Miller. It is well worthy of perusal.

"AUTUMN LEAVES ARE FALLING."

Wise old Homer, in his familiar lines of melodious Ionic Greek, has made a pathetic comparison of the decaying and perishing lives of a senile generation of mankind to the withering and falling leaves of a tree at the fatal approach of winter. Such may be the moralising reflections of that pensive, solitary gentleman—perhaps the studious parish clergyman—who stands upon the rustic bridge, where a few beeches, oaks, and ash-trees of the Park overhang the placid river, and sees how they are shedding the dry remains of their summer foliage, a silent token of mortality, a lesson to sanguine and presumptuous minds. "The grass withereth, the flower fadeth;" and the leaf, when it has performed its office for a season, inhaling the nourishment of the plant from the surrounding air, imparting to its sap the vital elements of continued growth, must also fade and die, and flutter down from its lofty place in the ancient and stately tree, dropping either to the ground beneath, where it soon rots to fertilise the soil, under the winter rains and snows, or else falling into the water, as here, to be carried by its ceaseless stream far off to the banks of distant fields, or even to the mighty sea. Not a particle of its substance, however, will be lost or wasted in the vast and perfect economy of nature, which never fails to convert all organic substance to the production and sustenance of some forms of vegetable or animal life; and this scientific truth, if it be rightly and fully considered, is fraught with no slight consolation. It is still better to think of the noble tree itself, living on from year to year, it may be for centuries, like a great nation, or like a great institution, a College or University, a Church or religious community, still thriving and expanding by the work of many successive ages; while its loyal and diligent servants, one set of them after another, have done their turn of duty, and have then quickly disappeared, falling off its branches like the used-up autumn leaves. This is the state of man, at its best, in the present transitory world.

HOME NEWS.

In command of Admiral Popoff, the Czar's yacht Livadia left the Clyde yesterday week.

A whale, measuring forty-five feet in length, has been driven ashore at Lambness, Stronsay, Orkney.

Dr. J. S. Bristowe, the president of the Society of Medical Officers of Health, opened the session yesterday week at Adam-street, Adelphi.

Mr. Denis Caulfield Heron, Q.C., has been appointed Serjeant-at-Law at the Irish Bar, in place of the late Sergeant Armstrong.

Alderman Lewis, the Mayor of Carnarvon, has given £500 towards founding a literary institution, to cost about £3500. It is proposed to adopt the Public Libraries Act.

The 108th session of the Medical Society of London commenced on Monday, when Dr. Hughlings Jackson, F.R.S., read a paper entitled "Cases of recovery from symptoms of organic brain disease."

Earl Fitzwilliam has instructed his agent at Elsecar Colliery, Barnsley, to send four trucks of coal to Peterborough for the use of the poor people whose houses were inundated by the recent floods.

At a public meeting held in the Albert Hall, Leeds, on Monday night a resolution was passed protesting against the injurious operation of the foreign bounty system upon our national industries.

The Governors of Guy's Hospital have accepted an explanatory letter addressed to them by the medical staff, and have rescinded the resolution calling upon Dr. Habershon and Mr. Cooper Forster to resign.

An industrial exhibition is open at Tolmer's-square Institute, St. Pancras. The exhibits, which have all been manufactured during the last twelve months, are far more numerous and varied than they were at the first exhibition.

The official quarterly Army List for September quarter, 1880, has been issued by the Under-Secretary of State for War, in accordance with the Army Discipline and Regulation Acts of 1879, section 156, and is a most comprehensive record.

A great show of poultry has been held in the Brighton Corn Exchange, the entries, which were received from all parts of England, numbering over 1500. There were also extensive shows of pigeons, owls, rabbits, and cage-birds, amongst the latter being some choice canaries.

Mr. Cornelius Hartley Christmas, of Great Yarmouth, has vested in trustees the sum of £16,000, the interest whereof is to be devoted in perpetuity to the purchase of coal and bread for an annual distribution, with a small gift of money, among the poor of Yarmouth.

The rifle-match between the London and Midland Counties teams, which took place last Saturday at Sandwell Park, near Birmingham, was won by the Midland men by forty-four points. The aggregate of the shooting at the three ranges was—Midland Counties, 736; London, 692.

The trial-trip of the Don Alfonso, paddle-wheel steam-vessel, built at the Thames Ironworks, Blackwall, for the South-Eastern Railway Company of Portugal, took place last Saturday. The Don Alfonso is sister-ship to the D. August, built for the same department three years ago.

We are desired to state that the Canadian Government offices, including the Emigration Office, reading-room, and library, have been removed from 31, Queen Victoria-street, E.C., to 9, Victoria-chambers, Westminster, to which address all communications should now be sent.

There was a large increase in the number of live stock and the quantity of fresh meat landed at Liverpool last week from the United States and Canada, making a total of 2738 cattle, 1223 sheep, 1072 pigs, 5798 quarters of beef, 355 carcases of mutton, and 125 dead pigs.

Paisley School Board has opened rooms in which the children of parents who work all day may be kept and fed from morning till night. The object aimed at is to remove the necessity of children who should be at school staying at home to attend to younger members of the household.

Last Saturday evening the Lord Mayor and the Lady Mayoress entertained the Wardens and Court of Assistants of the Vintners' Company, one of the most ancient City guilds, of which this year Sir Francis Truscott is the master, at dinner at the Mansion House, which was served in the Long Parlour.

Mr. Harrison, of Pall-mall, has published a little work descriptive of a floral system of alphabet by which any word or number can be intelligently expressed through the agency of flowers or leaves of six different colours. The use of flowers of certain colours in combinations of two form the basis of the floral alphabet.

In the record of new patents now being printed in our contemporary, Engineering, many of the inventions described are illustrated by woodcuts, an improvement which will be found to be of great value to a large section of the community, and which will tend to make the publication mentioned of far greater value to its readers.

We learn from the Jewish Chronicle that on Wednesday last, the 13th inst., being the ninety-sixth anniversary of the birthday of Sir Moses Montefiore, a sum of £96 was distributed to ninety-six poor deserving families of the Spanish and Portuguese Congregation by its Board of Guardians, the amount having been forwarded for distribution by Sir Moses Montefiore.

The members of the Social Science Congress made excursions from Edinburgh on the 14th inst. to Melrose, Abbotsford, and Dryburgh Abbey, and to the source of the Edinburgh water supply in the Pentland Hills. Another party landed at Inchkeith, where they were permitted to inspect the fortifications being erected for the defence of the Forth.

Tuesday's Gazette announces the issue of a Royal Commission to inquire into the operation of the law for the measurement of tonnage, and to report "whether, having regard to just principles of taxation, to the convenience and furtherance of trade, to international arrangements, and, above all, to safety, it is desirable to make any alteration in such law."

On Tuesday evening the Lord Mayor entertained, at the Mansion House, the representatives of the municipalities of Paris and Brussels, and also the Mayors of several of the English provincial cities and boroughs, the banquet being specially given in response to the entertainment recently offered to the Lord Mayor by the Mayor of Brussels.

Joseph Skipsey, a Northumberland miner, author of several lyric poems, now residing at Rackworth Colliery, near Newcastle, has received an intimation from Mr. Gladstone's private secretary that, in consideration of his literary services, the Queen has been pleased to award him an annual pension.

At the last meeting of the council of the College of Physical Science, Newcastle-on-Tyne, it was agreed, without a dissentient voice, to admit a lady who had been successful in the examination to hold an exhibition in the college. This young lady was Miss Isabel M. Aldis, who won the mathematical prize for junior candidates in the last Cambridge local examinations.

Poplar Dry Dock, recently constructed at Cubitt Town by Messrs. J. and R. B. Brown, was opened last Saturday. It is 393 ft. long and 84 ft. wide, and 53 ft. wide at the gates, being the largest dry dock in London.—The Town Council of Bristol, at a special meeting held on Friday last, unanimously resolved to purchase for the Corporation the new docks at Portishead and Avonmouth on fair and reasonable terms.

A testimonial of the value of £450, consisting of a handsome silver table service, has been presented by the Ward of Bishopsgate and other citizens of London to Mr. Deputy Stapleton, in recognition of upwards of twenty-one years valuable public services in the Corporation of the City of London, and of his unceasing labours in the freeing of Epping Forest and other open spaces for the people.

Mr. A. J. Ellis (president of the Philological Society) gave on Saturday night, at the Working Men's College, Great Ormond-street, a lecture upon English Dialects, their Sounds and Homes; and on the same day Dr. Zerffi gave the first of thirty lectures on the Science of General History, in the Lecture Theatre, South Kensington Museum, under the auspices of the Royal Historical Society.

The Barrow Ship-Building Company on Tuesday launched from their yard the steam-ship Furnessia, which is the largest vessel, with the exception of the Great Eastern, ever built in England. Her length is 445 ft., her gross tonnage 5500 tons, and her engines of 600 nominal horse-power, and 3800 indicated horse-power. She is intended to form one of the Anchor Line fleet sailing from the Clyde to New York.

The weekly return of metropolitan pauperism shows that the total number of paupers on the last day of the second week in October was 84,422, of whom 48,264 were in workhouses, and 36,158 received outdoor relief. Compared with the corresponding week of 1879, these figures show an increase of 2483. The number of vagrants relieved on the last day of the week was 1044, of whom 717 were men, 276 women, and 51 children.

The Earl of Coventry has been elected chairman of the Worcestershire Quarter Sessions, that position having been vacated by the Earl of Dudley; Sir Richard Harrington, elected chairman of the Hereford Quarter Sessions in the place of the late Mr. George Clive; and Sir Massey Lopes, M.P., to a vacancy in the chairmanship of the Devonshire Quarter Sessions, through the resignation of Earl Morley.

Mrs. Brassey on Saturday last laid the memorial-stone of a Working Men's Club at Hastings, Mr. and the Misses Brassey and the Mayor and Corporation being also present at the gathering. Mr. Brassey said while they desired that the habits of the people should be those of temperance, they must also recognise the necessity of providing for them some amusement and recreation apart from the public-house.

A deputation waited on the Lord Mayor at the Mansion House last Saturday, to urge the importance of placing bridges across crowded thoroughfares. His Lordship dissented from the views expressed, and said he did not think that people generally would use the structures if they were erected. He, however, recommended the deputation to wait upon the Commissioners of Sewers.

The Earl of Longford has issued a circular to the tenantry on his estates informing them that as it has been represented to him that, notwithstanding the present abundant harvest, the effects of unfavourable seasons are still felt to some extent by agricultural tenants, he has instructed his agents "to make for this year the same temporary abatement of 10 per cent which was allowed last year, to all agricultural tenants who pay their rents at the usual time."

The estate of William Birks Rhodes, called the Hounslow Miser, who died in 1878, has lately been wound up. It realised the sum of £78,000, from investments chiefly in gas shares, and was bequeathed in equal parts to the National Life-Boat Institution and the Royal Hospital, Gray's-inn-road. The sale of the effects in the residence of the deceased realised £5 17s., and the sum of £100 has been received by each of the five next-of-kin from the above-named institutions in full of all demands.

The Dublin Gazette of Tuesday contains the offer of a reward of a £1000 by the Lord Lieutenant to any person or persons who shall, within six months from the date of the announcement, give such information as shall lead to the conviction of the person or persons who fired at Mr. Samuel N. Hutchins, J.P., and murdered the servant, John Downey, on Saturday evening last. His Excellency also offers a free pardon to any person concerned as a party to the murder and outrage other than the person or persons who actually committed the crime, in the event of such information being given as shall lead to the conviction of the persons, or any of them, concerned in the crime. The murder was committed on the road between Bantry and Drumoleague, county Cork.

The London correspondent of the Liverpool Daily Post says the experiment now being tried by the Postmaster-General of allowing people to save by means of postage-stamps has been, so far as Cardiganshire is concerned, quite successful. Between the beginning of the year and Sept. 13 there were only nineteen new accounts opened at the Aberystwith Post-office Savings Bank; but since that date up to the present there have been 135 new accounts opened, nearly all of which were the result of the new forms.—It is intended that the regulations made under the authority of the Savings Bank Act of last Session shall come into force, as regards the trustee banks, on Nov. 21 next. After that date depositors will be able to invest in certain Goverment stocks any sum from £10 to £100, or they may purchase any amount of stock between those amounts.

At the weekly meeting of the School Board for London on the 14th inst. (Sir Charles Reed, M.P., presiding) there was a long discussion on a motion by the chairman of the Industrial Schools Committee as to a contribution of £900 towards the establishment of an industrial school for truants at Fulham for the reception of Roman Catholic boys. After several amendments had been rejected, the motion was carried by a large majority. On the same day Mr. J. E. Walford, chairman of the Corporation School Committee, laid the foundation-stone of the new City of London School, which is to be constructed on the Thames Embankment.—Sir Hardinge Giffard, M.P., in opening a board school at Launceston last week, said, without going into the comparative merits of voluntary and board schools, now that the latter had become a national institution, it was the duty of good citizens to make the best of things. He urged upon parents the necessity of seconding at home the efforts of the teacher.

Digitized by Google

PARISIAN SAYINGS AND DOINGS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Paris, Tuesday, Oct. 19.

Paris is full of illustrious visitors, Royal and Imperial Highnesses, Grand Dukes, and distinguished foreigners. As in the days of the Empire, their Royal Highnesses's first visit is to the theatre to see Judic, or Granier, or Bartet, or Croizette. Sarah Bernhardt no longer figures in the list of the jolies actrices de Paris. To the general relief of the Parisian public, this diaphanous and demonstrative person sailed for New York on Saturday last on board the Amérique. If one may judge from the American journals, she will be the object of intense curiosity in the United States, whence she will doubtless return six months hence with her poor head completely turned. Tragedian, comedian, painter, sculptor, art-critic, aeronaut, author, diplomatist, she will doubtless have taken the command of the Amérique before she reaches New York; and what she will do there it is impossible to foresee. While she was in London this year did not Captain Shaw take the insatiable Doña Sol for a ride on a steam fire-engine?

The name of Sarah Bernhardt has, however, been momentarily eclipsed by that of the Baronne de Kaulla, who was, in a certain way, the heroine of the Jung-de Woestyne trial, of which I spoke in my last letter. The result of that trial was that Lieutenant-Colonel Jung came out of court without a stain upon his character, M. de Woestyne was condemned to six months' imprisonment, 1000f. fine, and 5000f. damages, to be shared between him and the gérant of the Gaulois. But the curious point is that this trial, demanded by the political enemies of M. Jung, who was the cause of Bazaine being tried for treason, who was a Republican under the Empire, and who has recently published two volumes on Bonaparte, which put an end, once for all, to the Napoleonic legend, has served to show up the scandalous conduct of no less a personage than General Courtot de Cissey, born in 1810, Minister of War in 1875, and until within the past few days Commander of the 11th Army Corps. The Baronne de Kaulla was the wife of M. Jung. She was separated from him owing to her infidelity. In 1875 she was the mistress of General de Cissey, and had free run of the War Office and all the papers that were in it. She is by birth an Austrian, and her relations with foreign chancelleries have induced the French police to believe her to be a spy. While she was mistress, as it was said during the trial, of the Minister of War she induced General de Cissey to tyrannise over her husband in a disgraceful manner. In short, the conduct of this General was shown up in such a light that public opinion demanded his revocation. General de Cissey, who is also a Senator, has been removed from his command. He does not deny his follies, which he describes as les imprudences de l'homme privé; but, in consideration of the violent attacks of which he has been the object in the press, he has requested the Government to make an enquête into his case. This council will legally consist of the Minister of War and five officers, according to whose verdict the Minister will inflict or will not inflict a disciplinary punishment on the General.

M. Constans has caused the religious decrees to be applied to the Carmelite and Barnabite Societies all over France. These orders will appeal, as the Jesuits have done. As in the case of the expulsion of the Jesuits, a large number of reactionary magistrates have resigned their office, in order not to become even involuntary accomplices of measures which they consider to be odious, arbitrary, and illegal.

M. Gambetta returned to Paris last Thursday. Sir Charles Dilke left for his villa near Toulon on Sunday.

To-day MM. Félix Pyat, director, and Robert, gérant of La Commune, were condemned by default by the Eighth Chamber of Correctional Police, the former to two years' imprisonment and 1000f. fine, and the latter to six months' imprisonment and 1000f. fine. The offence was the apology of facts qualified by the law as crimes in certain articles which Félix Pyat has written about the regicide Berezowski. It was understood that Félix Pyat would not appear in court, and it was also expected that he would be condemned. Nevertheless, to use the language of the central market, il y aura du grabuge. Apropos of this very Berezowski subscription, a meeting of some 4000 persons was held in the Salle Graffard last Sunday to glorify the conduct of Berezowski and to proclaim themselves in harmony with the opinions expressed in La Commune.

On Sunday, too, a stormy meeting of Bonapartists was held in the Cirque Fernando, the object of which was to induce Prince Jerome to abdicate in favour of his son. The organisers of this meeting do not bear known names, and the whole affair is regarded very suspiciously even by the Bonapartist press. Prince Jerome has refused to receive a deputation of twelve persons connected with this meeting.

At last public opinion has declared itself against the abominable pornographic journals which have been openly sold on the boulevards of Paris during the past three months. The press has spoken. Last Thursday M Francisque Sarcey delivered a lecture on the subject, and on Friday the Government ordered the arrest of one of the pornographes, named Blain, for outrage aux bonnes mœurs. This, let us hope, is the beginning of the end.

Apropos of journals, the fecundity of the boulevards in new periodical literature is proverbial. During the past week we have been blessed with the birth of le Journal des Amnesties, with old Blanqui at the head of the list of writers; l'Absinthe, described as an aperient journal, treating of gastronomy; La Vie Littéraire, organ of an ingenious combination, called l'Editorat Mutuel, the object of which is to publish the books of young and unknown writers free of expense; Le XXième Siècle and l'Amusant, both which are supposed to be satirical.

Dennery, the most ingenious and successful of French dramatists, has had a new five-act drama, called "Diana," produced at the Ambigu Theatre. I shall not even attempt to sketch the plan of the piece; three columns of this journal would barely suffice, so multifarious and complicated are the threads which M. Dennery makes it his task to twist and untwist into moving situations and a lucid dénoûment. The drama is supposed to take place in Auvergne in 1776, and the plot turns upon a murder committed by a gentleman, the Comte de Maillepré, while in the act of somnambulism. The drama is full of exciting and touching scenes.

To-morrow the literary and artistic celebrities of Paris will respond to the invitation of M. Perrin to witness a performance of "L'Impromptu de Versailles" at the Comédie Française; and on Thursday will begin the public jubilee in celebration of the two-hundredth anniversary of the foundation of the Comédie Française, in accordance with a Royal decree signed by Louis XIV., which came into force Oct. 21, 1680, and united into one the companies of the Hôtel de Bourgogne and of the Theatre of the Rue Guénégaud. The jubilee will last a week, during which time nothing will be played but the masterpieces of Molière, Corneille, and Racine. On Thursday, the 28th, the celebration will end with a performance of "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme," with the ballets, and with Lulli's music.

T. C.

THE PLAYHOUSES.

The best thing that an old playgoer can do when he disposes himself comfortably in his stall at the St. James's Theatre, packs his overcoat as neatly as though it were a convict's bedding into the space at his back, carefully edges his crush-hat between himself and the side of his fauteuil, and adjusts his lorgnon to its proper focus, is by a strong effort of volition temporarily but utterly to forget that such a play as "Black-Eyed Susan; or, All in the Downs" was ever written, or that such a dramatist as Douglas Jerrold ever lived. Then he will get on very nicely. And that is what I tried to do, and succeeded tolerably well in doing, on the evening when I witnessed the performance of Mr. W. G. Wills's three-act play of "William and Susan." Looking at the probability that the major portion of the audience in the stalls and boxes were not old playgoers—certainly not transpontine playgoers—but fashionable ladies and gentlemen of the existing epoch, I think that it does not in the least degree matter from what source Mr. Wills derived his inspiration in writing a very neatly-constructed, interesting, and most pathetic drama, exquisitely well acted in its principal characters, and admirably put on the stage. If in the fulness of time Mr. Wills cares to produce four fresh domestic dramas, entitled respectively "Thomas and Sophy," "Le Fèvre," "The Lovers of Louisiana," and "The Sweethearts of the Sugar Plantation," I, for one, am quite prepared (temporarily) to forget that Henry Fielding ever wrote "Tom Jones," that the "Story of Le Fèvre" is an immortal episode in Sterne's "Tristram Shandy," that we owe the beautiful romance of "Manon Lescaut" to the Abbé Prévost, and that Bernardin de St. Pierre was the author of "Paul and Virginia." Le Roi est mort! Vive le Roi! Mr. Wills, like the Thane of Cawdor, lives a prosperous gentleman; and Douglas Jerrold is very dead indeed. I went to his funeral three-and-twenty years ago: and Dickens and Thackeray, Mark Lemon and John Leech, Tom Taylor and Horace and Augustus Mayhew, Peter Cunningham, and nearly all the artists and men of letters who gathered round the grave of the brightest wit of the nineteenth century, are dead, too. No more. I only hope that the adapters will leave "Time Works Wonders" and the "Prisoner of War" alone. I should be sorry to see Peter and Polly Pallmall metamorphosed into a brace of cry-babies.

Mr. Wills tells a very simple and touching story of the devoted wife of a gallant man-o'-war's man who very nearly gets hanged at the yard-arm for cutting down with a cutlass his captain, who has grossly insulted her, the gallant man-o'-war's man's spouse; but is saved, even when the halter is round his neck, by the production of a long antedated official letter of discharge from the Secretary of the Admiralty, thus showing that he was not a seaman in his Majesty's service at the time of his committing the assault on his officer. The discharge has been "delayed in transmission," as the newspapers say in the case of stale telegrams, through the villany of an old sailor who bears a grudge to the gallant tar, and obtains the letter from a candid but careless letter-carrier. His Majesty's Post-Master General ought certainly to have said something of a very severe nature to a subordinate official who had thus neglected his duty. This is the over-plot of "William and Susan." Neither more nor less of it is there. The under-plot hinges on some very diverting sweethearting between the candid but careless letter-carrier and a pretty and saucy soubrette. The mise-en-scène demands a cottage interior so quaint, varied, and picturesquely homely in its accessories that it might be a copy from one of Wilkie's early pictures of domestic life; a common near Deal, which, as a piece of scene-painting, is not so good, but in which a very quaint and vivacious dance of the principal characters is introduced, and in which William sings a song about an Old Ship, written and composed by Mr. Walter Maynard (you must quite forget that there was once a ballad about a ship that All in the Downs lay moored, on board of which one Black Eyed Susan came to inquire of the jovial sailors if her Sweet William were among the crew). Again, there is required a scene representing the cabin of the line-of-battle ship on board which is held the trial by court-martial of the unfortunate William; a scene in the cockpit of the vessel where the condemned prisoner is confined, and in which he goes through a most heartrending parting from his wife; and, finally, the quarter-deck, to which William is escorted by a party of marines for the dread sentence of sus. per coll. to be carried out, but which is happily averted by the timely appearance of the now repentant and stricken down but convalescent captain with the official document, which has been "delayed in transmission." All these scenic and accessorial requirements have been met by means of, perhaps, the most perfectly appreciative and artistic stage management that I have lately had experience of. I have come across one or two hypercritical sneers at the exiguity of the queues worn by William and the other sailors; but Mr. Hare and Mr. Kendal had no wish that they and the majority of their male dramatis personæ should be laughed at; and the exhibition on the stage of such preposterously long pigtails as were worn in the Navy in 1806 (in 1812 they were altogether cut off) would have excited perhaps fatal derision. For the rest, the "mounting" of the piece, from the dishes and porringers in William's cottage to the Admiral's cocked hat and the cross-belts of the marines, is far beyond any praise that I could give.

Out of the hands of Mr. and Mrs. Kendal, who, of course, play William and Susan, Mr. Wills's play probably would not live a fortnight. He has specially and exclusively modelled it, chiselled it, and polished it with a view to the display of the hero and heroine's special gifts. Their respective parts suit them to within a hair's breadth of appropriateness; and the other characters are, to most intents and purposes, only the "quelques poupées" whom Madame Catalani's husband thought only were necessary to supplement the talents of "ma femme"—the Diva Catalani herself. These satellites, however, attend the superior planets very creditably indeed. The very minor part of the Admiral might have been respectably sustained by a comedian at a salary of thirty shillings a week; but the tried experience and the acute artistic perception of Mr. Hare have enabled him to make a really important rôle out of, ostensibly, the flimsiest materials. In the keenness of his purview he has seized and embodied the idea of the Admiral being a kind of Deus ex Machinâ, a supreme distributor of rewards and punishments here below. The same idea, but in an excruciatingly burlesque form, pervades the notion of the Admiral in the ballad of "Billy Taylor" and in Mr. Thackeray's "Little Billee;" but Mr. Hare has most adroitly and most successfully taken the dread naval commander who hoisted his flag on board the gallant Thunderbomb au sérieux, and has infused into the demeanour of this very superior naval officer a certain official morgue and hauteur delightfully edifying to contemplate.

But that Mr. Wills is a thoroughly idealistic dramatist, and that "William and Susan" is in some respects a slightly unreal drama, we might quarrel with Mr. Kendal's William as being too refined and sentimental. A tar of the Dibdin type he certainly is not. He does not swear, he does not drink too much grog, and he neither shivers his timbers nor splices his main-braces. Not even Dibdin could idealise a tar; and the highest effort in the direction of idealisation is the ineffable "Tom Bowling." It must be remembered that the name of the sailor so genially portrayed by Mr. Kendal is William Bowlin, or Bowling—possibly younger brother to the virtuous Thomas. For the rest, Mr. Kendal bore himself throughout in a very frank, manly, and unaffected manner; and was just as sorry at parting from his wife and child under the most distressing circumstances it is possible to conceive, as a brave, honest, and innocent man ought to be. There was, on the other hand, not the slightest element of idealism in Mrs. Kendal's Susan. It was throughout splendidly realistic—even to the homely dress, the rustic manners, and the slight provincial accent of the untutored sailor's wife. In the pathetic scenes she proved herself to be a mighty compeller of tears. I have left off weeping—save for the Wickedness of these Times—and it requires Hood's "Bridge of Sighs" or Dibdin's "Wapping Old Stairs" to "fetch" me in a lachrymose sense; but I saw around me many streaming eyes and heard much sobbing and sniffling. Aquarius seems to be in the ascendant just now. Madame Modjeska is making everybody cry at the Court Theatre; everybody is crying at Mrs. Kendal at the St. James's; and in a week or so we shall all be bound to cry our eyes out over the Anne-Mie of Miss Geneviève Ward at the Prince of Wales's.

In conclusion, let me add that William's ill-conditioned enemy, the cantankerous old sailor Tuck, was played by Mr. Wenman in very fine cross-grained style. Mr. Wenman would play Ralph Nickleby or Scrooge the miser to admiration. Mr. J. H. Barnes made all that could be made of the repulsive part of Captain Crosstree (who has not even the miserable excuse of being tipsy when he insults Susan); and Mr. Mackintosh and Miss Kate Phillips in the respective characters of the candid but careless letter-carrier and his capricious sweetheart, were diverting. There was an Interesting Object, too, in the shape of William and Susan's little boy Bill, played by Master Norton. I abominate children in serious dramas; but I am glad to admit, in common justice to Master Norton, that he was much more inoffensive than theatrical urchins usually are. His costume appeared to be a careful study of the late Charles H. Bennett's drawing of "Little Breeches."

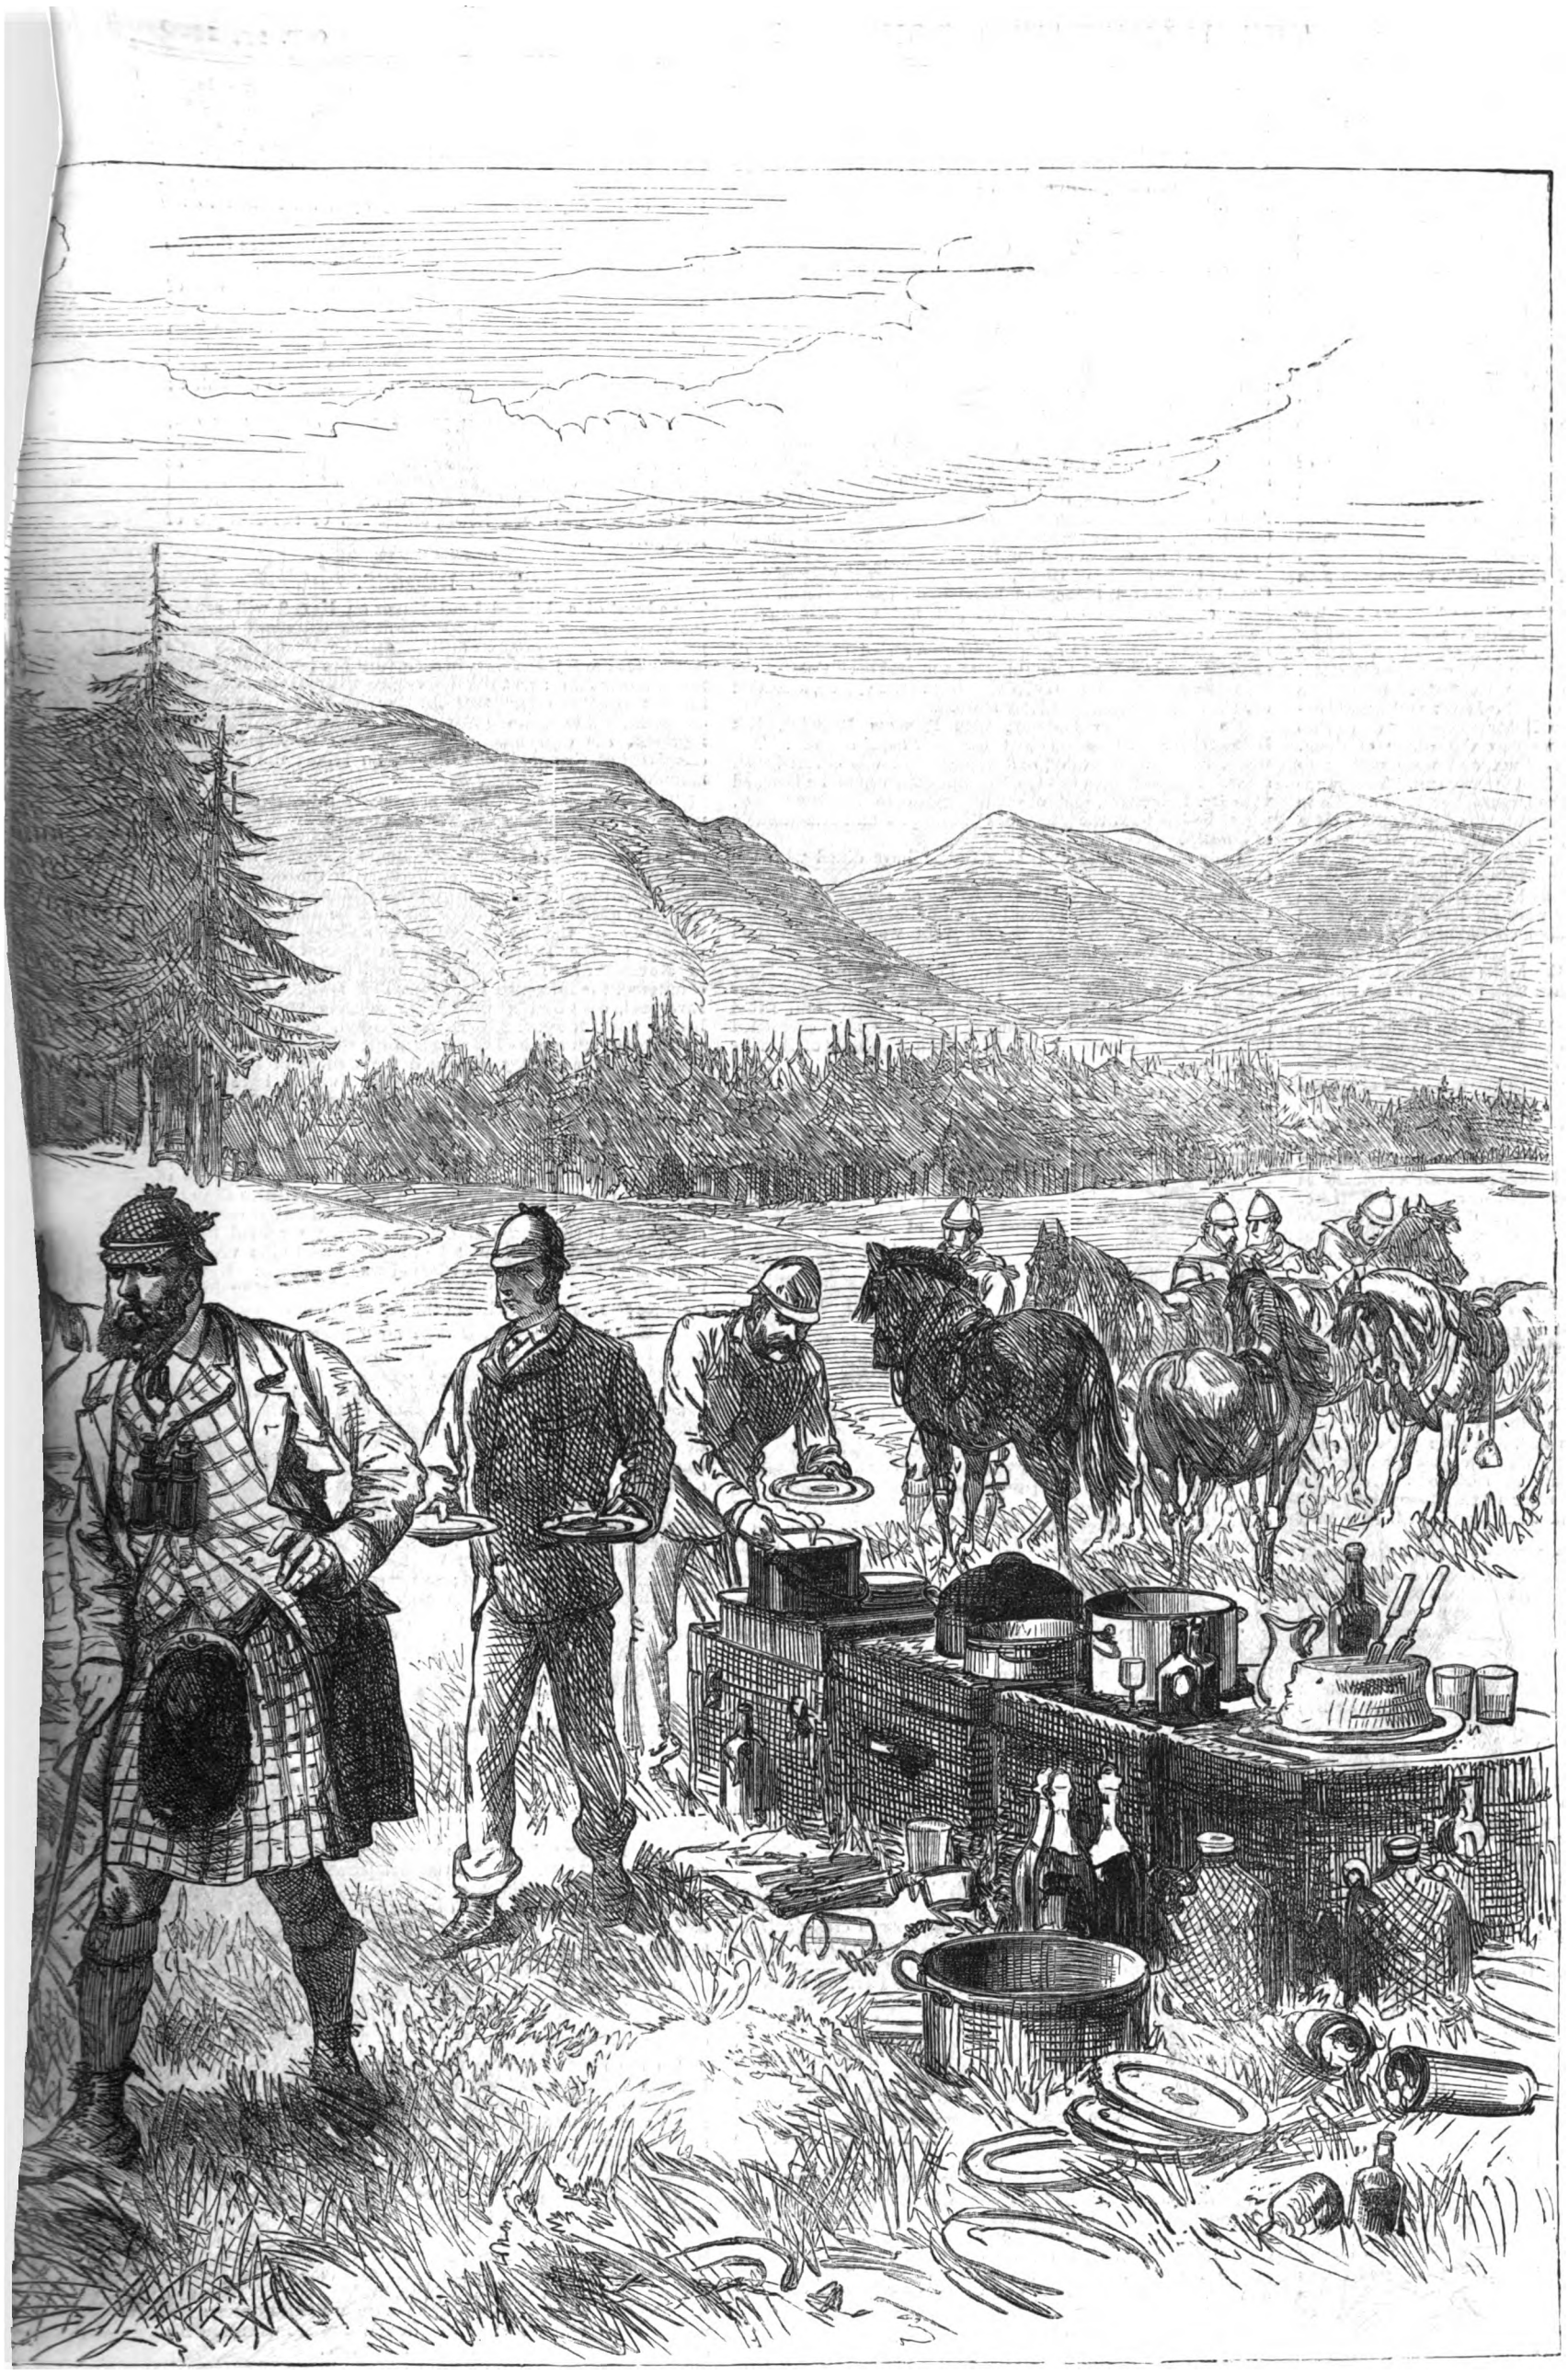
On Saturday last I went to the Olympic Theatre, newly opened for the winter season, and very handsomely and tastefully decorated, to see the first performance of a melodrama (?), in three acts, by Mr. Frederic Hay, called "Mabel." The author, I was told, is a gentleman of considerable experience as a dramatist. This information struck me as being somewhat strange, since "Mabel" is, from beginning to end, a bundle of crudities, impertinences, and extravagances. Yet, more strange to say, some of the characters are very artistically marked; some of the scenes comprise strong dramatic situations, and the dialogue is, on the whole, closely and nervously written. The drama in its entirety reminded me of a handsome vase which had been smashed by a careless servant and very clumsily put together again. The plot of "Mabel" seemed to turn on the fearful predicaments into which a respectable family by the name of Fleetwood and a beauteous and virtuous orphan, Mabel Ransome, are thrown through the ill-advised concealment by a bereaved mother of the fact of her daughter's death from her husband, who has just returned to England, after an absence of twelve years in India. The virtuous orphan, who bears a strong resemblance to the young lady deceased, is substituted for her. Hence all the quandaries and all the predicaments, which are complicated by the ruffianly machinations of two deep-dyed villains; one a depraved tombstone-cutter, cleverly impersonated by Mr. Anson, the other an Anglo-French forcat, forcibly rendered by Mr. W. H. Vernon. Mr. Dacre looked too tall and gesticulated too vigorously as a promising young barrister; but he took much more pains with his part than the insouciant walking gentlemen of the present day generally do; and Mr. David Fisher commanded respect as the affectionate and deluded papa in a play which should properly have been called "White Lies, and the Black Deeds which Spring from Them." Miss Carlotta Addison threw highly sympathetic feeling and (in the interpretation of a dream) real dramatic force into the character of Mabel Ransome; and I should have appreciated the talents of Miss Carlotta Leclercq to a far higher extent than I was able to do on Saturday, had it been her vocation just then to evoke smiles instead of tears. As it was, she had scarcely anything to do, save to apply a pocket-handkerchief to her expressive eyes and sob. I don't want Miss Carlotta Leclercq to sob. Miss Fanny Thorne, I am glad to say, laughed most cheerily as a humorous chambermaid.

G. A. S.

There are now thirty-three Volunteer Corps in India, with a total enrolled strength of upwards of eight thousand men.

Miss Glyn's Shakspearean readings, of which we spoke last week, will take place in the theatre of the Dilettante Club, 7, Argyll-street, Oxford-circus, on Oct. 27, and the five succeeding Wednesdays, when "Macbeth," "Antony and Cleopatra," "Hamlet," "Romeo and Juliet," and other plays will be rendered.

The Record Society, "for the publication of Original Documents relating to Lancashire and Cheshire," has just issued, as its third volume, "Lancashire Inquisitions; returned into the Chancery of the Duchy of Lancaster, and now existing in the Public Record Office, London. Edited by Mr. J. Paul Rylands, F.S.A." This volume comprises full English abstracts of the whole of the Lancashire Inquisitions post Mortem, 231 in number, during the first half of the reign of James I., being the first part of the "Stuart Period." It will be followed by other volumes containing Inquisitions from the reign of Henry V. to the eighteenth year of Charles I., after which time such Inquisitions were no longer held. The information contained in these documents is of great value to the local historian and genealogist. It is, therefore, surprising that hitherto no attempt has been made to print a consecutive series of them relating to any county. The prospective publications of the Record Society include a number of the most important documents remaining in the Public Record Office and elsewhere. But the Council, in their annual report, observe that the society would be enabled to publish a greater number of volumes in each year if it received an acquisition to its list of members. The present volume is carefully edited, and is finished with a very elaborate index. It will be shortly followed by a List of the Wills preserved at Chester, edited by Mr. J. P. Earwaker, M.A., F.S.A.; and by an account of the various classes of documents preserved in the Public Record Office, edited by Mr. Walford D. Selby, the superintendent of the search-room there.



Digitized by Google

THE PRINCE OF WALES IN THE I

FROM A SKETCH BY OUR

Digitized by Google

LANDS: LUNCHEON IN THE FOREST.

L ARTIST.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

Digitized by Google

THE DEER DRIVE AT INVERCAULD.

Our Special Artist, who was permitted on several recent occasions to accompany the shooting-parties in the Forest of Mar, arranged by the Earl of Fife and other local proprietors for the entertainment of the Prince of Wales, has furnished a series of highly spirited and characteristic Sketches. Of these, some appeared in our publications of last week and the week before, with a sufficient account of the subject. The visit of his Royal Highness, with the Grand Duke of Hesse and Prince John of Glücksburg, and a party of noblemen and gentlemen, including the Marquis of Hartington, to Invercauld, near Castleton of Braemar, was a renewed opportunity for enjoying this grand Highland sport. Lieutenant-Colonel J. R. Farquharson, of Invercauld, who is owner of a large portion of the Northern Deeside country and the chieftain of a numerous clan, was enabled to show his distinguished guests a most successful "deer-drive," affording the Prince of Wales some excellent shots. The Sketches of our Artist, representing this scene, and that of the luncheon in the forest provided for the party of sportsmen, do not seem to require much further explanation, after all that was said upon the subject last week. But our readers will be in a mood, from the view of such illustrations, to peruse with interest the following extract from Mr. Charles St. John's "Wild Sports and Natural History of the Highlands," vividly relating a bit of the hunter's experience with the noblest of British game:—

"The deer had moved from the valley where we had left them the previous evening; for Donald, who knew every mountain and glen in the country, having ascertained exactly the way the wind came from, led me in an easterly direction. The sun was well up when we came towards the summit of a hill from which he expected to see the herd; and his anticipations proved to be correct; on looking carefully down into the extended valley below us, we saw the whole of them. They had apparently finished feeding, and were retiring to rest on a hillside which faced the morning sun. The hinds were in a compact body, while the largest hart kept a little to their rear, and constantly employed himself in keeping off a number of stags who were moving around. Occasionally, one of these would make an impatient rush into the centre of the herd of hinds, but was as quickly driven out by the large stag. When near the summit, the hinds began to drop one by one into the long heather, until they were all lying down, except five or six, who kept fidgeting about, turning their long ears, and snuffing in all directions. The old stag walked quietly about, going round and round the herd; now and then lying down for a few moments, and then rising again, to see that no other stag intruded too near.

"After consulting with Donald, I sent him to make a large circuit, and, when he got quite round them, he was to show himself in the distance to the deer. We reckoned on their leaving the glen by a particular pass, close to which I stationed myself. I kept both gun and rifle with me. From my position, though I could not see Donald, I had a good view of the deer.

"After waiting nearly an hour I saw one of the smaller stags stop in his rounds, and, having gazed for a moment in the direction in which I knew Donald was, he trotted nearer to the hinds, still halting occasionally, and turning an anxious glance down the valley. I saw, by his manner, that he had not quite made up his mind whether or not there was an enemy at hand. The hinds, one and all, kept a most anxious watch on his movements, evidently aware that he suspected some danger.

"Presently one old hind got up and snuffed the air, then another and another, till all were on their legs; still they were not decided as to the danger. At last a general panic seemed to seize the hinds, and they all trotted together a short way up the hill. The large stag had got up also, but seemed not at all disposed to make off. The hinds came to a halt near the top of the first slope of the hill, and were joined immediately by about a dozen stags, which, collecting together, galloped up the hill to join them. This seemed to arouse the old fellow, and he trotted up after them. The hinds only waited for his joining them, and then the whole herd set off towards my pass.

"They had to cross a trifling hollow, during which time I lost sight of them. When they emerged, their order had quite changed. First of all came eight stags in a body, jostling each other as they hurried up through the narrow passes of the rocks. Then came the whole lot of hinds, mostly in single file, but breaking into confused flocks as they passed over pieces of heather and open ground. Next to them came the big-antlered chief, the object of our manœuvres; and, at a small distance behind him, the rest of the stags, four or five in number.

"On they came, sometimes in full view, and sometimes half concealed from me. Donald, too, now showed himself, waving his plaid. The hindmost deer halted on seeing him, and then rushed on to the main herd, which got all into rare confusion as it hurried on to the pass to leave the glen. The foremost stags were now passing, one by one, within forty yards of me; just at that moment, they had to make a kind of spring over a chasm in their road. I kept quite motionless, and they did not observe me, half concealed as I was amongst the grey rocks.

"They were trotting quickly past me, when an unlucky hind caught sight of my rifle-barrel as a ray of the sun fell upon it. The rest of the herd took the alarm from her manner, and they all rushed through the pass in mad confusion. The difficult path was only a few yards in length, and, once through this, they got into regular order again.

"But where is their lord and leader? I was afraid to look over my ambuscade for fear of turning him. Just as I was about to do so, however, I heard his step on the stones, and next moment he was in full view, passing broadside to me, but going slowly, and undecided whether to proceed or turn back, having perceived the panic of the rest of the herd.

"When he came to the difficult point, where the rest had leaped, he halted for a moment, looking round. The next moment my rifle-ball passed through the top of his shoulder, just too high; the blow, however, knocked him down; and before he was up, I had my gun in my hand. The poor brute rose, and looked wildly round; not knowing where the enemy was, or which way to go, he stood still, looking with anxious glance at his companions, who were galloping up an opposite slope. Expecting him to drop dead every moment, I did not pull the trigger, but kept my aim on him.

"The way the rest had gone seemed too rough for him; and, after standing for a minute, gazing at them, he turned round, with the intention, probably, of going down the hill, to some well-known burn, where he had been in the habit of bathing and cooling his limbs. He twice fell to his knees before he had gone five yards, and then walked slowly away. I thought he might recover strength; and, taking a deliberate aim, I fired. This time, he fell without a struggle perfectly dead. Donald joined me by the time I had bled him, and examined the shot-marks. One had broken the very top of his shoulder, but just missed the large arteries; the other ball seemed to have passed through his heart.

"The Highlander was vastly delighted at our getting the stag we had determined on; but his enjoyment was somewhat damped by my not having sent both barrels in the middle of the hinds. I consoled Donald with a dram, and we set to work to prepare our stag for taking home, which, with the assistance of a shepherd's pony, we succeeded in doing before night."

THE COURT.

The Queen, accompanied by Princess Beatrice, Prince Leopold, and the Grand Duke of Hesse, with his children, made various excursions before the departure of the Grand Ducal family from Balmoral. Among the places visited were Altanauer Shiel and the Colonel's Bed, when her Majesty stopped at Mar Lodge on the way to inquire after Colonel Napier Sturt, also to Glen Gelder Shiel, and to the Linn of Muick, where tea was served at the Falls. A frequent interchange of visits was made between the Royal family at Balmoral and at Abergeldie. The Prince and Princess of Wales and Prince John of Glücksburg dined with her Majesty before leaving for the south, and Admiral the Hon. H. Carr Glyn was invited.

The Rev. Dr. Lees, of St. Giles's, Edinburgh, and the Rev. A. Campbell, dined with her Majesty last Saturday; and on Sunday Dr. Lees performed Divine service at Balmoral, in the presence of the Queen and the Royal family.

The Grand Duke of Hesse, accompanied by the Hereditary Grand Duke and Princesses Irene and Alice of Hesse, took leave of the Queen on Monday, and left for Buckingham Palace, en route for Darmstadt. Prince Leopold accompanied his august relations to Ballater, where a guard of honour of the 71st Regiment was mounted at the station. Colonel the Hon. Henry Byng, Equerry in Waiting to the Queen, attended the Grand Duke to the railway station.

On Tuesday her Majesty, with Princess Beatrice, left Balmoral for the Glassalt Shiel for a few days' sojourn. The weather was very stormy, and the ground was covered with snow. Prince Leopold drove to Hopewell, where he lunched with Dr. Robertson, and afterwards went to Aboyne Castle, where he has been the guest of the Marquis and Marchioness of Huntly.

Lady Susan Suttie and Miss Suttie have dined with the Queen.

Her Majesty has written a letter of sympathy to Mrs. Cleland, mother of Lieutenant-Colonel Cleland, 9th Lancers, who has lately died from the effects of wounds received in action before Cabul last December.

The Marchioness Dowager of Ely and the Hon. Mary Lascelles have left the castle, and Lady Southampton has arrived as Lady in Waiting on the Queen. The Hon. Ethel Cadogan and Colonel the Hon. Henry Byng have succeeded the Hon. Amy Lambart and Colonel Maude as Maid of Honour and Equerry in Waiting.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.

The Prince and Princes of Wales, upon their departure from Abergeldie for the south, paid a short visit to the Marquis of Huntly, at Aboyne Castle, the Marquis giving a grand battue for the Prince, which was followed by a ball in honour of their Royal Highnesses and Prince John of Glücksburg, who accompanied them. The Prince and Princess, with their daughters (who had joined them at Aboyne station), arrived at Marlborough House at seven o'clock on Sunday morning, accompanied by Prince John of Glücksburg. Their Royal Highnesses attended Divine service in the afternoon. On Monday Princess Louise of Lorne lunched with the Prince and Princess at Marlborough House, and afterwards accompanied them, with Prince John of Glücksburg, to the studios of Mr. Boehm and Mr. Sydney P. Hall, the latter having painted a portrait of the Princess recently. The Prince and Princess and Prince John of Glücksburg went to the Lyceum Theatre in the evening. The Princes visited the Grand Duke of Hesse on Tuesday at Buckingham Palace. The Grand Duke, with his son and two daughters, lunched with the Prince and Princess at Marlborough House. The Duke of Edinburgh also visited their Royal Highnesses. In the evening the Prince and Princess and Prince John went to the Strand Theatre. The Prince went on Wednesday to Cliveden, on a visit to the Duke of Westminster. After luncheon his Royal Highness returned to town.

The Prince proposes to visit Norwich on the occasion of the opening of the annual fat cattle show in that city next month.

The Grand Duke of Hesse, with his family, arrived at Buckingham Palace on Tuesday morning from Balmoral, and left in the afternoon for Bagshot on a visit to the Duke and Duchess of Connaught.

The Duke of Edinburgh was present during two days of the Leeds Musical Festival. His Royal Highness paid a second visit to Hull last week, coming from Brough with a large party, who inspected the yacht Lively, then lying in the Roads. Last Saturday the Lively was run into by the steamer Rollo, going to Gothenburg. The yacht's ram was struck, thus the fore compartment filled; consequently the Rollo put back to dock. The Duchess, who is at Eastwell, visited Canterbury Cathedral yesterday week.

Prince and Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein arrived at Cumberland Lodge, Windsor Great Park, last Saturday, from the Continent. Their Royal Highnesses crossed from Flushing to Queenborough. The Princess came to London on Tuesday evening, and on Wednesday her Royal Highness went to Brighton and opened the Bazaar at the Pavilion in aid of the Female Orphan Asylum. Her Royal Highness was received at the railway station by the Mayor and Corporation, who presented an address. The Princess, after the opening ceremonial, lunched with Mr. Lawrence Peel, and then returned to London, where she passed the night, proceeding to Cumberland Lodge on Thursday. Her Royal Highness will open the Hertfordshire Convalescent Home next Thursday.

Princess Louise of Lorne arrived at Buckingham Palace the end of last week from Germany.

The Duke and Duchess of Connaught performed an interesting ceremony last Saturday in Epping Forest (of which the Duke is Ranger) by planting two trees (Normandy pine) at Hawkwood in celebration of the great proportion of the forest being secured as a place of public recreation for the people for ever. Captain Alexander Mackenzie, Deputy Ranger, was in attendance, and the proceedings were carried out with great éclat, in the presence of the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress of London (who also planted memorial trees), the Verderers and Committee of the Corporation of London for the reclamation of the forest, with a large company, who were afterwards present at the déjeûner given to the Duke and Duchess at the Forest Hotel, Chingford, presided over by the Lord Mayor. During the day's proceedings bouquets were presented to the Duchess, and upon her departure from the railway station the platform was lined by youthful daughters of the county gentry attired in white, who scattered flowers in her path. Mr. Robertson was in charge of the Great Eastern special train which conveyed their Royal Highnesses from and to Liverpool-street Station on their journey between Bagshot Park and Epping. The Duke and Duchess have consented to lay the foundation-stone—although the building is approaching completion—of the Hospital for Consumption, Mount Vernon, Hampstead, to-day (Saturday). Presentations of purses of £5 and upwards for the hospital will be made to the Duchess.

The Duke of Aosta dined with the Italian Minister previous to his departure last Saturday upon his return to the Continent.

His Excellency the Belgian Minister and Baroness Solvyns have returned to Grosvenor-gardens from Cornwall.

A ball was given on Tuesday by the Earl and Countess of Breadalbane in the Banner Hall of Taymouth Castle.

Lord and Lady Newark were received with great enthusiasm upon their home-coming last Saturday. They were met at the station by his Lordship's tenantry, who took the places of the horses by themselves drawing the carriage to the hall at Holme Pierrepoint.

The marriage of Sir F. G. Milner, Bart., of Nun Appleton, Yorkshire, with Miss Adeline Gertrude Denison, daughter of Mr. W. Beckett Denison, was celebrated on Tuesday at Bolton Percy church. The Archbishop of York performed the ceremony. The bride was given away by her father, and the best man was Lord Lewis, eldest son of the Marquis of Abergavenny.

THE RECESS.

The advent of a Liberal Lord Mayor on Nov. 9 will render the reappearance of Mr. Gladstone at the Guildhall banquet particularly appropriate. Several of the Prime Minister's colleagues have joined him in accepting the invitations to the forthcoming feast; and the festive gathering will be of further interest from the fact that M. Challemel-Lacour and Mr. James Russell Lowell, the French and American Ministers, will represent the diplomatic body. Till the Loving Cup has circulated at this great City dinner, no Ministerial speech of magnitude will apparently be made.

The Marquis of Salisbury is scarcely reticent enough to neglect the opportunity the Taunton banquet will afford him on the 26th inst. of subjecting the home and foreign policies of the Government to caustic criticism. Sir Stafford Northcote, speaking on the 14th inst. at Feniton in the old, familiar, mellifluous strain, referred in guarded platitudes to the Turkish and Irish questions. Will Sir Stafford be stimulated by the pungency of the noble Marquis, and speak out more plainly at the Dolphin dinner in Bristol on the 13th of November? His colleague, Lord Sandon, possibly to counteract the influence Mr. Plimsoll is seeking to obtain in Liverpool, delivered a thoughtful address yesterday week before the Liverpool Marine Association, and succeeded in proving the interest he had taken in the reforms introduced to bring about seaworthy ships and the welfare of Poor Jack. Of the remaining Conservative members who have lately relieved their minds, Lord Henry Lennox on the 16th inst. did what he conceived to be his duty by praising his own Party and gently condemning the Liberal Administration for the benefit of the bucolic mind of the Chichester ring of Conservatives; Mr. E. Stanhope and Sir H. D. Wolff did likewise, each in his own manner, in gracing the opening of a new Conservative Club in Blackburn on Saturday. Mr. Stanhope, who does not lack self-confidence in the House of Commons, even ventured to say that the present Government had brought us to the verge of civil war in Ireland and the verge of war in Europe. Need it be said Sir Drummond Wolff also saw War looming in the distance? But we have heard the cry of "Wolff" before.

Ireland, furnishing as it does an agrarian outrage every week, is still a source of anxiety to the Ministry. Mr. Forster was compelled to avow this in a grave letter declining an invitation to a banquet in Armagh. Meantime, Mr. Parnell is not to be turned from his pastime of popularity-hunting. Addressing a meeting in Longford on Sunday (in company with Mr. Justin McCarthy) he alluded to the report that Government contemplated prosecuting some of the leaders of the Land League. As well strive to keep back the tide with a pitchfork as try to stem the Land League movement! magniloquently exclaimed this mild-mannered dealer in large words. Mr. Parnell on Tuesday presided in Dublin over a knot of his Land League associates, a motley gathering enough; but not one word was said in denunciation of the assassin who stealthily shot at Mr. Hutchins and killed his car-driver, John Downey, on Saturday last, in West Cork. The large reward of £1000 has been offered by the Government for the apprehension of the murderer. But money appears to be thrown away in the effort to arrest the perpetrators of those detestable crimes, which are by implication palliated by the utterers of veiled sedition. Possibly, the increase in the Police forces in these lawless districts may prove more efficacious. Meantime, a campaign to enlist the sympathies of Englishmen for Ireland was begun at Bradford on Saturday, when Mr. Mitchell Henry, Mr. T. P. O'Connor, and Mr. O'Connor Power gave vent to their feelings on the question of the hour.

The Ministry has not altogether lacked sympathetic supporters of late. While the comparative failure of the anti-Ministerial meetings may show there is little public interest taken in the virulent censure heaped upon the Government by prejudiced opponents, cordial approval of the measures and actions of the Administration was expressed by the members for South-East Lancashire, Mr. Leake and Mr. Agnew, at the Rochdale Liberal Club, on Saturday; and on Monday by the Hon. E. Leveson-Gower at Bodmin, by Sir George Campbell at Kirkcaldy, and by Mr. Craig at Silverdale, in Staffordshire.

To the abolition of public canvassing did the Hon. E. Leveson Gower look, in conjunction with the restraining influence of public opinion, for the gradual reduction of the bribery which the revelations before the Election Commissioners prove to have taken place on so gigantic a scale in some of the boroughs under review. The Commissions are running their monotonous course; but the witnesses who evidently regard bribery as inseparable from electioneering may not thank Mr. H. R. Brand for reminding them, in a letter to the Times, that a Parliamentary Committee recommended three months' imprisonment, with or without hard labour, as the punishment for bribery or treating. While on this subject, it may be added that the hearing of the Berwick Election Petition was commenced on Tuesday, when the Lord Advocate withdrew his charges of bribery against the Conservatives.

Sir Stafford Northcote has accepted an invitation to attend the Dolphin dinner at the approaching Colston Anniversary in Bristol, fixed for Nov. 13.

The Gazette announces that the Queen has appointed the Right Hon. William P. Adam, M.P., to be Governor of the Presidency of Fort St. George, at Madras, in the East Indies; and Major Evelyn Baring, R.A., C.S.I., to be an Ordinary Member of the Council of the Governor-General of India, in the room of Sir John Strachey.

Digitized by Google

THE CHURCH.

PREFERMENTS AND APPOINTMENTS.

Alford, J. G., to be Vicar of St. Nicholas with St. Leonard, Bristol.
Andrew, Thomas Prynne; Rector of West Putford.
Bowen, Elias Jenkins; Chaplain, Bombay.
Bridges Charles; Perpetual Curate of Wacton.
Buckham, Frederick Holmes; Minister of the New Church of St. John the Divine, Thorpe, Halifax.
Bury, Edward William; Rector of Screveton.
Cockin, John Irwin Browne; Chaplain, Bengal.
Craig, S. B.; Vicar of Warthill and Gate Helmsley.
Cross, John Edward; Prebendary of St. Margaret-in-Leicester in Lincoln Cathedral.
Davies, John Silvester; Vicar of St. James's, Enfield.
Dickson, John Bathurst; Vicar of Foxton.
Dombrain, J.; Vicar of Market Stainton, Lincolnshire.
Du Boulay, Henry Houssemayne; Vicar of Newlyn East.
England, G. A.; Vicar of St. Mark's, Hull.
Fell, Henry Seymour; Rector of Puddington.
Forde, George; Vicar of Badminton.
Gray, Samuel; Rector of Lecontield-cum-Scorborough.
Goff, Edward; Vicar of Stanton-in-Peak, Bakewell, Derbyshire.
Greenwood, Sydney; Perpetual Curate of Wortley, Yorkshire.
Hervey, Frederick Alfred John; Rector of West Newton.
Hillyard, Arthur; Rector of Stoodleigh.
Howard, W. Waltham, Vicar of Blackmore; Rector of Market Deeping.
Hughes, Herbert Thomas; Vicar of Christ Church, Emery Down.
Hughes, Thomas Evans; Rector of Challacombe.
Ivens, Charles Llewelyn; Minister of Emmanuel Church, Leeds.
Johnston, Charles Smyth; Rector of Sproughton, Suffolk.
Jones, Edward Douglas; Vicar of East and West Looe.
Karney, Gilbert S.; Minister of St. John's Chapel, Hampstead.
Kent, Alfred, Vicar of Coln St. Aldwyn; Rural Dean of Fairford.
Lampen, S. P.; Rector of Tempsford, Bedfordshire.
Lawrence, Neville George Murray; Chaplain, Freiburg in Baden.
M'Kee, James; Vicar of Womenswold.
Monro, Hugh; Chaplain St. Saviour's Cancer Hospital, Osnaburg-street.
Pettigrew, S. T.; Vicar of Hatfield, Herefordshire.
Purcell, L. T.; Rector of St. Paul's, Exeter.
Rawlins, J. Arthur; Vicar of St. Andrew's, Willesden.
Reid, William Cawley; Rector of Coppenhall, otherwise Church Coppenhall.
Robinson, Edward; Perpetual Curate of Penrhos.
Starey, William; Vicar of Horton-cum-Studley, Oxon.
Streeten, Robert Henry; Perpetual Curate of St. Mary's, Kingswinford.
Taunton, Charles William Sackville; Vicar of St. Clether.
Vawdrey, Alexander Allen; Vicar of St. Sithney.
Weakley, Robert Hopkinson; Chaplain, Stockholm.
Whitmarsh, Robert T.; Rector of Carlton-cum-Ashby.—Guardian.

Efforts are being made to effect the restoration of Stratford-on-Avon parish church, which contains the tomb of Shakspeare. It is estimated that about £20,000 will be required to complete the restoration.

On the 14th inst. the Bishop of Liverpool consecrated the chancel and transepts which have been added to All Saints', Southport, increasing the accommodation from 400 to 1050 sittings. The cost of this operation has been £5000.

A beautifully sculptured tablet has been erected in the South Chapel of the church at Chewton Mendip, by Lord Carlingford, to the memory of his late wife, Frances, Countess Waldegrave.

Last Saturday afternoon the memorial-stone of the chancel, transepts, and steeple of St. Mary's Church, Plaistow, Kent, was laid, in the presence of a large congregation, by Lady Scott, wife of Sir Edward H. Scott, Bart.

The trustees of the advowson of St. Leonard's Church, Bilston, near Wolverhampton, being unable to secure an offer of over £3000, which they consider too small, have decided to dispose of the living by public auction.

The honorary Canons appointed by the Bishop to the Liverpool pro-cathedral were installed on Monday morning. The new Canons number fifteen, and two are to be appointed every year till the full number of twenty-four is reached.

The Archbishop of Canterbury has appointed next Thursday for the consecration in St. Paul's Cathedral of the Rev. Enos Nuttall as Bishop of Jamaica; of the Rev. G. E. Moule as Bishop of Ningpo; and of the Rev. C. P. Scott as Bishop of North China.

At a meeting of the general committee of the Truro Cathedral Fund yesterday week, the chairman (the Earl of Mount Edgcumbe) presiding, the treasurer presented a report showing that the amount actually promised was £43,200, of which about £12,000 had been spent.

The Rev. C. E. Prior, Assistant-Master of Merchant Taylors' School, has been appointed to the lectureship in St. Magnus the Martyr, City, rendered vacant by the appointment of the Rev. Charles J. Ball to the Chaplaincy of Lincoln's Inn. These lectures will be given on Sunday afternoons.

Sir John Holker on Saturday last, attending a meeting at Preston in connection with the foundation of a new church, spoke of the spread of scepticism as an alarming feature of the present day, and urged that the best antidote was the teaching of a comprehensive and liberal theology.

In presiding at the annual meeting of the Staffordshire Bible Society on the 14th inst., Lord Sandon, M.P., maintained that it was impossible to say that the Bible was losing influence in this country with the progress of education and intellect, as long as they found Bible societies receiving generous and increasing support from all classes of society.

Princess Christian and Princess Beatrice head the list of contributors to a fancy bazaar, which was held in the Corn Exchange at Newbury on Monday and Tuesday, in aid of the funds for the restoration of West Ilsley church.—On Tuesday the Countess of Dartmouth opened a bazaar in the Exchange at Wolverhampton, which was continued for several days, with the view of raising £2000 required to pay off a debt due to the building fund of the new church of All Saints, and to complete the edifice by the addition of a chancel.—Lord Wharncliffe, accompanied by the Countess and other distinguished personages, opened a fancy fair in the Public Hall at Barnsley on Tuesday afternoon in aid of the Endowment Fund of the new parish of St. Peter's, which is being formed.

A pastoral letter has been issued by the Bishop of Peterborough, in which he advises his clergy to carry out the Burials Act in a spirit calculated to promote quietness, peace, and love among all Christian people.—In opening the Lincoln Diocesan Conference yesterday week the Bishop of Lincoln read an address on the law of marriage and divorce, in which he strongly argued against the bill for legalising marriage with a deceased wife's sister.—The Bishop of St. David's, in his triennial charge at Carmarthen on the 14th inst., dealt at length with the question of education in Wales, and said he believed that the revival and reorganisation of their grammar schools was at this moment the chief educational want of the Principality. The establishment or restoration of good secondary schools would do more than anything else to render a system of higher education possible and efficient in Wales.

The Rev. Stopford A. Brooke preached on Sunday at Bedford Chapel, Bloomsbury, for the first time after his secession from the Church of England. The chapel was crowded. Mr. Brooke stated the reasons which had induced him to leave the Church, and also said he had come to disapprove of the existence of the Church as an ecclesiastical body, especially as connected with the State. The form of service at this chapel has undergone some alteration in consequence of the change in the views of Mr. Brooke.

The annual conference of the Evangelical Alliance, which is this year being held at Nottingham, began on Tuesday night in the Albert Hall, when Mr. Arthur Wells, vice-president of the local branch, took the chair at a large public meeting. The Rev. George Edgcombe, Rector of St. Peter's, Nottingham, gave an address of welcome on behalf of the local committee, which was responded to by Mr. John Finch, one of the treasurers of the Alliance; Dr. Samuel Hall, of the United States; the Rev. Principal Brown, of Aberdeen; the Rev. A. Constantian, of Constantinople; and Pastor Wagner, of Germany. Colonel R. Wilmot Brooke then addressed the meeting on the development, work, and influence of the Evangelical Alliance. The sittings of the conference were resumed on Wednesday.

The Congregational Union held a special meeting yesterday week evening at Carr's-lane Chapel, Birmingham, when papers on the advance of scepticism were read by Professor Thomson, the Rev. T. T. Waterman, the Rev. E. White, and Dr. Kennedy. Previously to the conference the delegates attended the secretary's breakfast at the Grand Hotel. In the evening a public meeting for young men was held in the Townhall, when there was a large attendance. The chair was occupied by the Rev. Dr. Newth, and addresses were delivered by the Revs. J. Willis, U. R. Thomas, and Dr. Pulsford, of Glasgow. This closed the proceedings of the Union.

THE UNIVERSITIES AND PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

In a convocation of the University of Oxford recently held the Rev. Dr. Evans, Master of Pembroke College, was elected to the vice-chancellorship for the ensuing year, thus commencing his third year's term of office.—The following gentlemen have been elected to classical postmasterships at Merton College:—James M. Dodds, Glasgow University; Frederick Campbell Paul, High School, Bishop's Stortford, and exhibitioner of Worcester College. The following gentlemen have been selected to the vacant scholarships at Pembroke College:—Open—Mr. Seaton, from Manchester Grammar School. King Charles I.—Mr. Le Lièvre, from Elizabeth College, Guernsey.—At Exeter College Mr. Francis Henry Gribble, Chatham House, Ramsgate, and Mr. John Ward, from the Wesleyan College, Taunton, have been elected to the Stapleton scholarships; and Mr. Henry George Johnston, from Merchant Taylors' School, to an open exhibition.—The election to the vacant open scholarships at Lincoln took place, with the following result:—To the scholarships of the value of £80 per annum—Messrs. E. J. Nash, from Louth Grammar School, and W. E. P. Panton, from Blackheath Proprietary School. To the scholarships of the value of £60 per annum—Messrs. L. B. Kennedy, from Trinity College, Dublin, F. Farrar, of Bedford Grammar School; and S. R. Baker, from Marlborough School.—The Queen has approved the appointment of Mr. Bradley, Master of University, to be a member of the Oxford University Commission, in place of Lord Selborne, who resigns.

Professor Churchill Babington has announced his intention of resigning the professorship of archæology in the University of Cambridge. He has held the post since 1865. The election of a professor to the vacant chair will take place on the 28th inst.—The following gentlemen, as the result of the competitive examination, have been elected Fellows of the Society of Trinity College:—Edward Vernon Arnold, Head of the Classical Tripos, and bracketed fifteenth wrangler, 1879; Joseph John Thompson, second wrangler, 1880; Adam Sedgwick (for natural science).—Doctor Edwin Guest has resigned the mastership of Gonville and Caius College.—The Rev. H. C. G. Moule, for some time senior Dean of Trinity College, has been appointed to the headship of Ridley Theological Hall.—In consequence of the state of the health of Professor Challis, Plumian Professor of Astronomy, Mr. A. Freeman, M.A., St. John's, has been appointed his deputy for twelve months.—The Le Bas prize for the best English essay on general literature has been adjudged to C. H. Herford, B.A., Trinity College. The subject given out was "The History of the Drama in England in Relation to its National Character."—The freshmen at the various colleges this October number 701, as against 808 last year.

At Durham, the Tulloch Scholarship (in anatomy, physiology, and chemistry) has been awarded to Mr. S. Brookfield, and the Charlton and Dickinson Scholarship (in medicine, surgery, and midwifery) to Mr. W. G. Black, who has also gained the Gibb Scholarship (in pathology).

The Rev. David Laird Adams, M.A., B.D., minister of the parish of Monimail, Fifeshire, has been elected to the chair of Hebrew and Oriental Languages in Edinburgh University.

A correspondence with Mr. Ruskin regarding the Lord Rectorship of Glasgow University has been published. He expresses his willingness to accept the nomination of the Conservative and Independent Club.

At the annual meeting of convocation of the Queen's University in Ireland on the 7th inst., resolutions were adopted expressing the opinion that the dissolution of the Queen's University, as contemplated by the University Education (Ireland) Act of 1879, would be a grievous infraction of the vested rights of the graduates of the University, injurious to the interests of academical education, and in violation of expectations which a series of statesmen and of Parliaments held out to the students of Ireland.—The annual meeting of the Queen's University in Ireland was held on the 13th inst., in St. Patrick's Hall, Dublin Castle. The Duke of Leinster presided; and the Lord Lieutenant and Countess Cowper were present. A large number of degrees were conferred, and prizes were distributed by Earl Cowper. The number of students has advanced since last year from 920 to 959.

Mr. John C. Mallet, M.A., has been appointed to the Chair of Mathematics in Queen's College, Cork, rendered vacant by the appointment of Mr. Niven to the Professorship of Natural Philosophy in the University of Aberdeen.

At University College, London, the Examiners for the Andrews entrance prize (of £20 each) have recommended the award of prizes as follows:—Classics, Mr. W. Ashburner; English and other languages, Mr. C. Moritz; Science, Mr. F. W. Mann. They were all from University College School.

The committee appointed by the Education Department of the Privy Council to inquire into the state of higher and intermediate education in Wales met at their office in Victoria-street, Westminster, on the 7th inst., Lord Aberdare, the chairman, presiding. The committee took the evidence of gentlemen residing in London and the neighbourhood, and sat for several hours. Later in the autumn the committee will sit to take evidence in different parts of Wales.

The winter session of the evening classes connected with King's College was opened by Professor Huntington, the subject of his address being the metallurgy of the ancients.

The opening lecture of the academical year 1880-1 of King's College Lectures to Ladies was given on Monday week, at the Vestry-hall, Kensington, by the Rev. Canon Barry, D.D., Principal of King's College, to a large audience.

The annual meeting of the Regent's Park College was held on the 8th inst., in connection with the autumnal session of the Baptist Union. Mr. James Harvey presided. The annual report was presented by the Rev. Dr. Angus, Principal of the College, and a resolution commending the college to the support of all friends of an intelligent and earnest ministry was adopted, on the motion of Dr. Newth.

The Rev. Harry N. M'Kenzie, M.A., of Keble College, has been appointed to the Wardenship of St. Paul's College, Stony Stratford, which is about to become vacant by the resignation of the Rev. W. F. Short.

The third session of the Preparatory University Teaching Classes, which are held at the St. Philip's Board School, near the London Hospital, has begun. The services of King's College professors are being secured for the French, German, and Latin classes.

The winter session of Trinity College, London, was begun on the 11th inst., an opening address being given by the Rev. H. G. B. Hunt, Mus. B., the Warden of the College.

The Rev. John Ellis, M.A., has been appointed Head Master of The College, Bournemouth.

The scholarships at Bath College have been adjudged to the following boys:—Harper, Kitchin, Cooper, Spender, St. Hill, Cooke, and Cox.

Mr. R. C. Masson, M.A., F.G.S., Head Master of Stamford School, has been appointed Head Master of Ashford School.

THE AMERICAN PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION.

The election of a new President of the United States will begin on Tuesday, Nov. 2, when electors will be chosen in the thirty-eight States of the Union, who will subsequently meet in their respective State capitals and select a President and a Vice-President, who are to succeed President Hayes and Vice-President Wheeler on March 4, 1881, and hold their offices for four years thereafter. On Nov. 2 there will also be chosen, excepting in a few States, the members of a new House of Representatives, who also go into office on March 4, 1881; and most of the States will, besides, choose State officers and Legislatures, the latter selecting Senators in nearly one third of the States. March 4, 1881, will thus give the country a new President, Vice-President, and House of Representatives, and will supply new Senators for one third of the seats of the Senate. In Ohio and Indiana the members of the new House are, however, elected on Oct. 12, they being known as the "October States."

With the system of electing an American President, the English reader, who is treated to its history every four years, ought by this time to be tolerably familiar. Each State chooses a number of electors equal to its whole number of Senators and members of the House; and these electors, who are prohibited from being selected from the ranks of office-holders, form colleges in their respective States, who elect the President and Vice-President. Thus, Pennsylvania, having two Senators and twenty-seven members, chooses twenty-nine electors. They are chosen in each State on a general ticket, and not by separate districts; that is, each voter in Pennsylvania votes for twenty-nine men, and the highest number of votes elect. This gives the whole electoral power of the State in the Presidential election to the strongest party, the minority having no representation in the electoral college of the State. When the electors in their respective State capitals vote for President and Vice-President they transmit returns of their votes to Washington, where they are counted by the Vice-President in the presence of Congress, and the President and Vice-President, to get elected, must have an absolute majority of all the electoral votes cast. Thus, for the Presidential election this year, the thirty-eight States will aggregate 369 electoral votes, and the successful candidates must get at least 185. With but two great parties, one or other is sure to get this majority; so it is not necessary now to explain the methods pursued by Congress in making selections where three or more candidates divide the votes, and no one has an absolute majority.

The theory of the American Constitution is that the people are not wise enough to select a President by their direct votes, but that an intermediary agent in the form of the electoral college is selected by the people to do the work of choosing a President for them. At the same time, the college is so made up as to give the smaller States more actual weight relatively to the larger States than their population alone would secure them. This is part of the system of "checks and balances" with which the Constitution abounds, and it is secured by adding the two Senators to the number of members of the House in fixing the number of electors. The House is apportioned according to population, the Senate according to States, each having two Senators. Thus Delaware has but one member, while New York has thirty-three; but in making the electoral college two electors are added to each State, irrespective of size, so that Delaware gets three and New York thirty-five. This adds to the importance of the weaker States, and its value is the more evident when sections of country are considered. Thus, the six New England States together had, when the present House was apportioned in 1872, about the same population as Pennsylvania, and they got twenty-eight members, while Pennsylvania got twenty-seven members. In the growth of population Pennsylvania is now probably ahead of New England, but the Senatorial "balance" in the electoral college, which gives her twenty-nine electors, gives New England forty electors. But while the theory of the American Constitution was that the electors were necessary to give wisdom to the presidential choice of the people, in practice the rule has been reversed. The people select their Presidential candidates themselves, using the electors merely as clerks to register their will. By the "Convention" system, which was not dreamt of until many years after the Constitution was framed, each party selects its candidates for President and Vice-President and then votes in each State for electors pledged in advance to vote for the party candidates. The election campaign is thus fought for the candidates direct, the electors being almost unheard of, although the political movements in each State are, of course, directed to the popular election of the respective before-pledged lists of electors.

The two great contending parties, who style themselves, respectively, the Democratic and the Republican party, have at different periods been opposed to each other upon more than one political question. But they appear to have staked their success in this contest upon their views with regard to finance, the currency, and free trade or protection. The Republican candidate for President is General James A. Garfield, of Ohio, more eminent as a lawyer than as a soldier; while General Winfield Scott Hancock, a distinguished commander of the Federal Army in the Civil War eighteen years ago, is the Democratic candidate. Our Illustration represents a private conference at Washington between some of the party leaders.

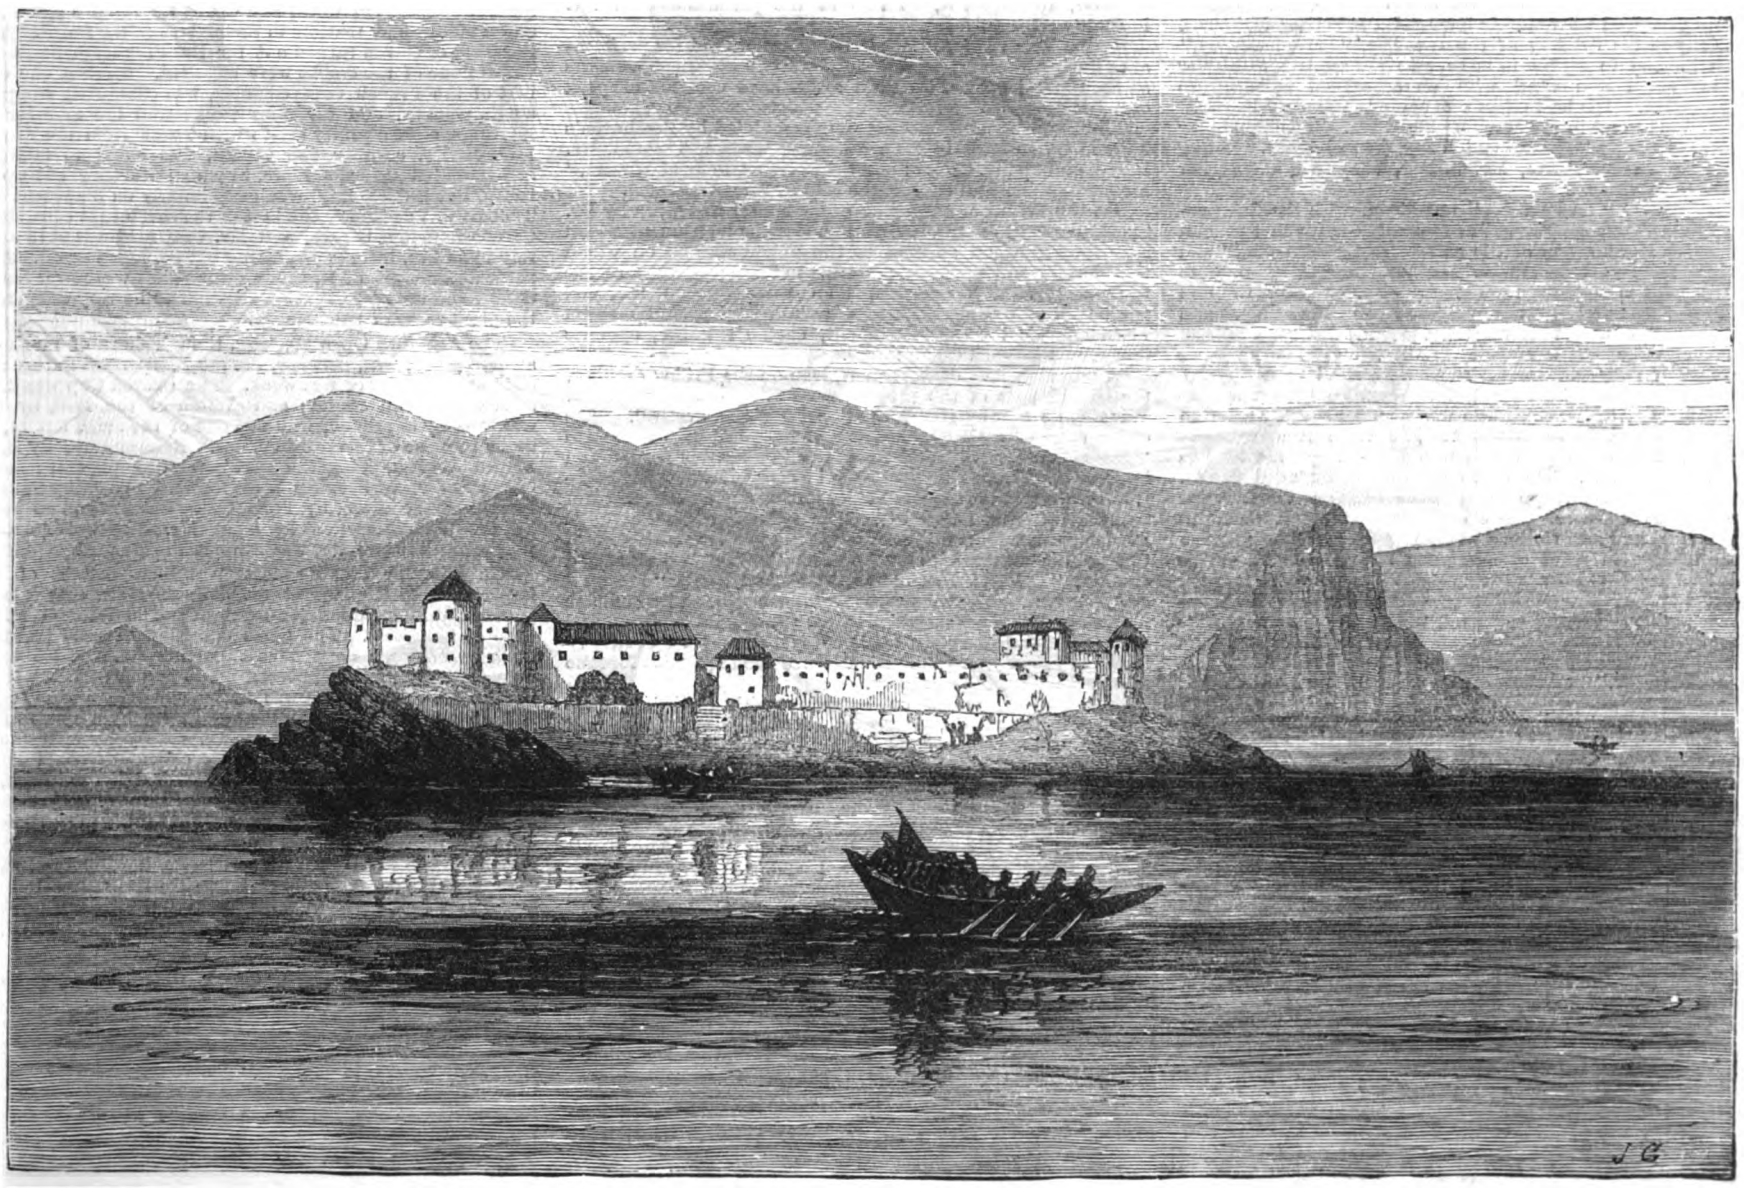
The annual conference of the United Kingdom Alliance was held in Manchester on Tuesday, under the presidency of Sir Wilfrid Lawson. The report states that the national agitation conducted by the United Kingdom Alliance has at length made a deep and enduring mark on the political mind of the country, and even on Parliament itself.

Digitized by Google

THE AMERICAN PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION: A SKETCH AT WASHINGTON.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

Digitized by Google

LIEUTENANT R. G. SCOTT, V.C.,
CAPE MOUNTED RIFLES.



THE LATE MAJOR VANDELEUR, 7TH ROYAL FUSILIERS,
KILLED AT CANDAHAR.

THE LATE MAJOR T. B. VANDELEUR.

Major Thomas Burton Vandeleur, of the 7th Royal Fusiliers, who died of the wounds he received in the ill-fated sortie from Candahar on Aug. 16, had passed his whole service of twenty-five years in the same regiment. He had only recently been promoted from senior captain of the 1st Battalion to a majority in the battalion abroad, and, hurrying out to India in the spring of the year, joined head-quarters at Candahar shortly before the disaster at Khushk-i-Nakhud. In a letter received from Candahar by the last mail, referring to the sortie of Aug. 16, a brother officer writes:—"Poor Major Vandeleur was dreadfully wounded in the right shoulder by an explosive bullet, while he was in command of the rear-guard, and fighting his way inch by inch back to the walls of the citadel—and right well he did his duty. He managed to get inside the gates, and for nine days he lingered on, shattered though he was. At last, however, it was deemed advisable to amputate his arm from the shoulder, and the poor fellow sank under the effects of the operation the same night at one a.m. on the 26th inst. Major Vandeleur was beloved by all who knew him." He belonged to an old Irish family, the Vandeleurs of Kilrush, county Clare. He was married, September, 1875, to Florence, only daughter of the late Shaw Smith, Esq., of Fitzwilliam-square, Dublin. The portrait is from a photograph by Messrs. Byrne and Co., Richmond.

THE LATE WARS IN SOUTH AFRICA.

The Victoria Cross has been conferred by her Majesty on Sergeant (now Lieutenant) Robert George Scott, Cape Mounted Riflemen, for conspicuous gallantry and devotion during an attack on Moirosi's Mountain on April 8, 1879. This was in volunteering to throw time-fuze shells, as hand grenades, over a line of stone barricades, from behind which the enemy were bringing a heavy fire to bear on the colonial troops. At the second attempt, owing to some defect in the fuze, which he had just lighted, the shell exploded almost in Scott's hands, blowing his right hand to pieces and wounding him severely in the left leg. This officer, who is twenty-three years of age, is the eldest son of Fleet-Surgeon Robert C. Scott, of the Royal Navy, and nephew of Sir Edward Sinclair, of Dublin. He was educated at the Royal Medical College, Epsom, entered the Cape Mounted Riflemen, in October, 1876, served through the ranks, as all in that corps do, and received his commission as Lieutenant, in August, 1879, for distinguished service in the field. The portrait of Lieutenant Scott is from a photograph by Mr. G. W. Wilson, Aberdeen.

FORT ALESSANDRIA, A MONTENEGRIN STRONGHOLD AT THE MOUTH OF THE RJEKA.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

Digitized by Google

THE MONTENEGRIN FRONTIER QUESTION.

Rjeka, a small town and fort at the mouth of the river of that name at the north end of the Lake of Scutari, was captured by the Montenegrins in the war of 1877, the Turkish garrison having their supplies cut off by the Montenegrins occupying the heights on each side of it. It was ceded to Montenegro by the Treaty of Berlin. We are indebted to Lieutenant V. H. Caillard, R.E., who is attached to the diplomatic staff which accompanies Admiral Sir F. Beauchamp Seymour, for our view of this place, where conferences began last Monday between the Turkish and Montenegrin Government delegates, to arrange the details of the surrender of Dulcigno.

Negotiations of a political nature are going on also at Cettinje, the capital of Montenegro; and there was, on Tuesday, a despatch from Cettinje stating that Bedri Bey, the Turkish Plenipotentiary, left the night before for Scutari, to obtain fresh instructions from Riza Pasha. With reference to the negotiations for the surrender of Dulcigno, the despatch states that seven points are proposed by Turkey, two of which have been rejected by Montenegro. These latter are:—1. The maintenance of the status quo to the east of Lake Scutari; and, 2. The maintenance of the Turkish flag in the port of Dulcigno. The last point was rejected in consequence of the provisions of article 27 of the Treaty of Berlin, according to which the Austrian coastguard vessels are to exercise jurisdiction on the coast of the territory ceded to Montenegro. It is added that the Montenegrin Government considers the question raised respecting the Turkish flag as not open to discussion, and as a pretext for delay on the part of the Porte in order to postpone the withdrawal of the Turkish regular troops and gain time for the Albanians. But an Italian paper asserts that the bulk of the Albanians have withdrawn from Dulcigno, and that only 300 Albanians from Scutari now remain there, whose presence gives no cause for anxiety. This paper adds that the transfer of Dulcigno to Montenegro may be expected within a few days hence.

The Prince of Montenegro has appointed General Simon Popovitch to the post of Commandant of Dulcigno, with instructions to occupy the town with a force of 1400 men when the transfer of the place is effected by the Turkish authorities.

In case of the International Fleet remaining on this coast, the anchorage will probably be shifted to Kombur, in Meglina Bay, in order to be nearer to Castelnuovo, which is the principal town in the Bocche di Cattaro.

Several vessels of the squadrons forming the International Fleet have been practising naval manœuvres at sea, returning daily each evening to their anchorage.

The Prince of Montenegro has undertaken to set at liberty the Mussulmans imprisoned at Podgoritza for stirring up agitation in the town, and he will proclaim an amnesty after the surrender of Dulcigno. The Porte has expressed it appreciation of Mr. Goschen's action in interceding in favour of the Mussulman prisoners.

MUSIC.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

The Haverly American Minstrels closed their season on Saturday last, and the theatre reopened on Monday for the autumn series of Italian opera performances—at reduced prices and comparatively early hours—under the direction of Mr. Armit, the son-in-law of Mr. Mapleson. As we have already given an outline of the arrangements of the new season just begun, we have now merely to speak of the opening performances, the first of which was "Faust," in which Mdlle. Elisa Widmar was to have made her first appearance in England as Margherita. The sudden indisposition of the lady, however, caused the transference of the character to Mdlle. Bauermeister, who—as on many past occasions—proved her readiness and efficiency at the shortest possible notice. Mdlle. Olga de Morini, as Siebel, sang apparently under the disadvantageous influence of cold and nervousness. Signor Vizzani was the Faust, and Signor Ordinas the Mephistopheles; both gentlemen having before been heard on our opera stage. Signor Vizzani produced a favourable impression in several instances, especially in his delivery of the cavatina, "Salve! dimora," which he had to repeat in answer to the applause. Signor Ordinas acted and sang with an occasional tendency to exaggeration. His best effect was made in the air "Dio dell' or," and his worst in the Mocking Serenade. The remaining features of the performance call for no critical detail. Mdlle. Barnadelli was the Marta, Mr. G. Fox, Valentine, and Signor Ghilberti, Wagner.

On Tuesday "La Favorita" was given, with the fine performance of Madame Trebelli as Leonora, for the first time in England. Her delivery of the aria, "O mio Fernando," and of her shares in the duets with Fernando and Alfonso, were worthy of the artist's high reputation. Signor Cantoni made a successful first appearance as Fernando, and gained much deserved applause. This gentleman has a tenor voice of agreeable quality, and his phrasing is generally artistic. Of his merits we shall soon be able to speak further. Another first appearance here was that of Signor Quintilli-Leoni, who was also favourably received in his performance as Alfonso. His voice is a resonant baritone, the effect of which would be improved by less use of the tremolo. The cast of the opera included Mdlle. Bauermeister as Inez, Signor Ordinas as Baldassare, and Signor Bertocchi as Gaspare. The orchestra—with Mr. Carrodus as principal and solo violinist—is thoroughly efficient; and so is the chorus, in point of numbers; but the choral effects would be improved by some modification of vocal energy. Signor Li Calsi conducted the performances with his well-known ability. During the week the first appearances were announced of Mdlle. Julie de Bressolles as Amina, in "La Sonnambula," and Mdlle. Rosina Isidor as Lucia, in "Lucia di Lammermoor." Of these events we must speak next week.

THE LEEDS FESTIVAL.

Our last week's notice of this triennial music-meeting was necessarily incomplete, most of the performances having taken place too late for our publication. As already stated, the Festival opened on Wednesday with Mendelssohn's "Elijah," the principal solo singers having been Madame Albani, Mrs. Osgood, Mesdames Patey and Trebelli, Mr. Maas, and Mr. King. The choral singing was especially fine.

One of the new works commissioned for the Festival was produced on Wednesday evening. This was Mr. J. F. Barnett's cantata "The Building of the Ship," the words of which are taken from Longfellow's poem. Mr. Barnett had gained much deserved celebrity by previous compositions of a similar class, these being "The Ancient Mariner" and "Paradise and the Peri." His new work is an advance on its predecessors, both in constructive power and richness and variety of orchestral treatment. As the cantata will soon have to be noticed in reference to its London performance, brief comment may now suffice. It is written for four solo voices, chorus, and orchestra, and consists of fourteen numbers (with subdivisions), irrespective of the characteristic instrumental introduction. The music is throughout interesting, and well suited to the text which it illustrates. With the fine band, the excellent chorus, and the eminent solo vocalists engaged in its rendering at Leeds, it had every advantage in its performance, which was conducted by the composer. The principal soloists were Miss Anna Williams, Madame Trebelli, Mr. E. Lloyd, and Herr Henschel. Among the solo pieces that produced the most effect were the airs, "Choose the timbers" (Herr Henschel), "Love's command" (Mr. Lloyd), "Ah! when the wanderer" (Madame Trebelli), "To-day the vessel shall be launched" (Miss Williams); and the two quartets, "The sun shone on her golden hair," and "How beautiful she is." Some of the choruses also proved very effective, especially "In the ship-yard," "Thus with the rising sun," "Beautiful they were" (for female voices), "The prayer is said," and the final climax. The work and the composer were greatly applauded. The concert concluded with a short miscellaneous selection.

Thursday morning's performances began with Mr. W. Macfarren's clever concert overture, entitled "Hero and Leander," conducted by himself. The piece had before been performed and commented on. This was followed by Mendelssohn's noble eight-part psalm, "When Israel out of Egypt came." An interesting association with this work was the fact of its having been composed for and dedicated to the Halifax Choral Society. Beethoven's gigantic choral symphony, including the vocal setting of Schiller's "Ode to Joy," closed the first part of the programme. Here again the chorus singing was exceptionally fine; the solos having been well rendered by Miss Anna Williams, Madame Trebelli, Mr. E. Lloyd, and Herr Henschel. The elaborate orchestral writing of the three entirely instrumental movements was very finely rendered.

Sterndale Bennett's graceful cantata, "The May Queen," closed the Thursday morning's performances. As mentioned last week, this charming work was produced at the experimental festival given at Leeds, on the occasion of opening the Townhall in 1858, when Bennett was the conductor of the performances. In last week's rendering the solo portions were efficiently sung by Mrs. Osgood, Mr. Lloyd, and Mr. King. In the evening Handel's "Samson" was given, with the orchestral score enchanced by additional accompaniments, written—for the occasion—with much judgment and skill by Mr. E. Prout. The soloists were Miss Anna Williams, Madame Patey, Mr. Maas, and Herr Henschel.

The Friday morning's programme opened with "The Martyr of Antioch," the new sacred musical drama composed expressly for the Festival by Mr. Arthur Sullivan. The text is selected from Milman's poem, and the characters supposed to be represented are:—Margarita (soprano), Julia (contralto), Olybius (tenor), Callias and Fabius (basses). The cantata is divided into four scenes—the front of the Temple of Apollo, the burial place of the Christians (night), the Palace of the Prefect, and the Temple of Apollo. Each of these includes pieces for chorus and solo voices, the work opening with an orchestral introduction, in which Mr. Sullivan's mastery over the varied effects of instrumentation is very successfully evidenced. The opening "chorus of sun worshippers" is the most elaborate, and one of the most effective movements in the cantata. This and some other choral movements—among them having been the Funeral Hymn, the Evening Song of the Maidens, the chorus of Heathen Maidens and Christians, and that associated with the contralto solo, "Io Pæan," produced much effect. Special among the solo music was that assigned to Madame Albani, who gave the hymn, "For Thou didst die for me," and other passages, with fine expression. Another specialty was the excellent delivery of the contralto music, especially the solo, "Io Pæan," by Madame Patey: Mr. Lloyd having also distinguished himself greatly by his effective singing in the tenor solos, particularly the airs, "Come, Margarita, come," and "See what Olybius' love prepares for thee." Mr. King sang well in the few opportunities allowed him for special display. The work was enthusiastically received, several numbers having been encored, and the composer and conductor received a perfect ovation. The Duke of Edinburgh, President of the Festival, was present, as also at the performance of Mr. Barnett's cantata.

"The Martyr of Antioch" being announced for performance during the present series of Saturday afternoon concerts at the Crystal Palace, we shall again have occasion to speak of it when given there.

The morning performances were completed by Beethoven's Mass in C (the solos by Miss Williams, Madame Trebelli, Mr. Lloyd, and Mr. H. Cross); and Schubert's "Song of Miriam," for soprano solo and chorus (the solo by Miss Williams).

On the Friday afternoon an organ recital was given by Dr. Spark (organist of the Festival) on the fine instrument which is so important an adjunct to the Townhall, and on which this gentleman frequently performs to large audiences of the townspeople. His programme on this occasion included specimens of old classical organ music, examples of modern French music for the instrument, chamber music, operatic music, and English organ music.

A miscellaneous concert was given on the Friday evening, the second part of the programme having opened with Mr. Wingham's new overture, composed for the Festival. This clever piece of orchestral writing is inscribed with the motto "Mors Janua vitæ," and its prevailing tone is solemn and impressive. It was conducted by the composer. The overture is to be given at the Crystal Palace during the present series of Saturday afternoon concerts. The remaining portion of the Leeds performances of yesterday (Friday) week consisted of Cherubini's overture to "Anacreon," Bach's fine sacred cantata, "O Light Everlasting," Joachim Raff's "Lenore" symphony, miscellaneous vocal pieces contributed by Madame Albani, and other principal singers; the concert having closed with the finale to Mendelssohn's unfinished opera, "Loreley," in which Miss Anna Williams sustained the important soprano solo part with great efficiency.

The Festival closed on Saturday with Spohr's "Last Judgment," the first and second parts of Haydn's "Creation," and the "Gloria" from Handel's "Utrecht Jubilate," in the morning; another organ recital by Dr. Spark in the afternoon; and a popular concert at night, consisting of ballads and extracts from some of the Festival programmes. The soloists in Spohr's oratorio were Mrs. Osgood, Madame Patey, Mr. Maas, and Herr Henschel—those in "The Creation" having been Madame Albani, Mr. Lloyd, and Mr. King.

The Festival has been a great success, both financial and artistic; and the result can scarcely fail to be largely beneficial to the excellent medical charities in whose behalf it was given. It is expected that upwards of £2000 will be realised. Mr. Arthur Sullivan has fulfilled the duties of conductor with skill and judgment—praise being also due to Mr. J. Broughton for the zealous discharge of his duties as chorus-master, the chorus-singing having been—with one or two small exceptions—especially admirable. Of the exceptional excellence of the orchestra we have already spoken.

The second "choral night" at the Covent-Garden Promenade Concerts took place yesterday (Friday) week, when Rossini's "Stabat Mater" was effectively given (in the first part of the programme) with the co-operation of the fine orchestra and Mr. Weist Hill's well-trained choir of 120 voices. The solos were generally well rendered by Mesdames Enequist and Mary Cummings, Mr. H. Kearton, and Mr. E. Roberts. Monday was an "Irish" night; and Wednesday a classical night, when the third orchestral suite, "Roma," by the late Georges Bizet, was given for the first time in England. As the work is to be performed at this week's Saturday concert at the Crystal Palace, we shall hereafter refer to it in reference to both occasions.

A complimentary concert was given in St. Andrew's Hall, Norwich, on Monday evening, in honour of Sir Julius Benedict, who was for a very lengthened period associated with the Norwich Musical Festival, as conductor thereof.

Under the title of Twopenny Concerts, a series of high-class popular musical performances will be given in Kensington during the ensuing winter. The opening of the new Townhall, with a large concert-room capable of holding over nine hundred people, has offered a favourable opportunity for the attempt. There will be twelve concerts, which will take place on every alternate Tuesday evening, the first date being Oct. 26. Mr. Ridley Prentice is the director.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

The past Second October Meeting was about the best ever held at Newmarket. After the first day, a succession of thoroughly good "cards" were provided, the attendance of spectators throughout the week has never been surpassed, and, considering that winter is close upon us, the weather was far more favourable than might have been anticipated. A tame beginning was made on the Thursday, as Thebais was indulged with her second walk-over during the week, and placed another useful little stake to Mr. Crawfurd's credit. The Autumn Handicap over the Bretby Stakes course, attracted a field of ten, and though old Cradle (8 st. 1 lb.) struggled with the greatest gameness from the distance he could never quite catch Microphone (6 st. 5 lb.), who carried Sir John Astley's colours, that gentleman having purchased him from Cannon. There was some tremendously heavy speculation over the match between Donato and Lady Chelmsford, the former having just the call at the finish, and Archer got him home by a neck, after a magnificent struggle with Fordham. After her running in the Cesarewitch, the Newmarket Oaks looked a certainty for Cipolata; probably, however, the former race had taken a good deal out of her, for, though she appeared to have the race in hand at the distance, Muriel shot up in the last fifty yards and beat her by a head. Of course the Champion Stakes was the event of the day, though the scratching of Rayon d'Or deprived it of a great amount of interest. Still, there was the fourth meeting of Robert the Devil and Bend Or, and, bearing in mind that there was only a head between them in the Great Trial Stakes, which was run over the same course, that "Robert" had been trained for a race of twice this distance, and had run only two days previously, and that Fordham was up against Rossiter, the Derby winner, had nearly as many friends as the Newmarket crack. The only other competitors were Reveller and Charibert, and, after negotiations for the purchase of the latter, who was wanted to make the running for Robert the Devil, had failed, Rossiter received instructions to make the whole of the running at his best pace. So well did he carry these out that even the speedy Charibert was never near the front, and the Leger and Cesarewitch hero had his opponents in hopeless trouble at the Bushes, and came in alone. Thus the question of supremacy between the bay and the chestnut has been decisively set at rest, and 1880 must be henceforth known as "Robert the Devil's Year." In the Ashley Stakes, Savoyard beat Foxhall, Simnel, and two others so cleverly, that he may be, after all, the smart colt that rumour has credited him with being.

On the Friday, backers began badly by laying slight odds on Teviotdale for the Newmarket Derby; but even a mile and a half of the Beacon Course was too much for an unsound colt notoriously short of work, and Count Lagrange's pair—Milan and Poulet—had matters to themselves at the finish. A very fair field of eleven turned out for the Prendergast Stakes, in which none of the cracks were engaged. Strelitz, one of the best of the French two-year-olds, was effectually stopped by a 6 lb. penalty, and Sir Marmaduke won the race for Lord Hastings, after a pretty set-to with Tunis from the distance. Le Destrier, another Frenchman, was equal to taking the amalgamated Queen's Plate, in which Reveller cut up very badly, but Ridotto improved considerably on his recent form. Thebais was decidedly the best of the seven that contested the Great Challenge Stakes, and Mr. Crawfurd was well able to rely upon her, instead of putting out St. Louis again. Simnel made a fair fight of it, though the result was never really in doubt, and the scarlet jacket bids fair to be very dangerous in the great races of next season.

The Ashdown Open Meeting, though shorn of much of its ancient glory, was, perhaps, the most important fixture in the coursing calendar of last week. The Craven Cup was divided after the second round; and Witch of the Ball, by Great Gable—Gay Saraband, who was one of the three left in, gave much promise of future excellence. Reformation, by B. F.—Wilful Widow, took the Derby for dog puppies; and the Oaks was divided between Wilhelmina, by Geoffrey Saltaire—Lava, and Woodlark, by Ptarmigan—Governess, two puppies in Mr. Wansborough's kennel. Mr. Wentworth acted as judge, and the slipping was intrusted to Nailard.

On Monday evening last a billiard-match of some importance took place at St. James's Hall, Regent-street, between William Cook (ex-champion) and William Mitchell (late of Sheffield). The game consisted of 2000 points up, Cook conceding his opponent 400 points start. At the commencement the game appeared all in favour of Mitchell; for, though the ex-champion was first away with a nicely played 113, he did not appear in his usual form by a long way, and his opponent commenced to score, chiefly by spot play, so rapidly that the game was shortly called—Mitchell 1154, to Cook 288. Cook, however, soon recovered his old form, and, playing most brilliantly, manipulated in quick succession breaks of 132, 332 (75 and 22 spots), 168 (41 and 5 spots), 66 (10 and 7 spots), 255 (10, 33 and 40 spots), 87 (16 spots), 120 (27 spots), and 279 (73 spots), ran out the winner by no less than 404 points, after four hours thirteen minutes play. Mitchell's best scores were:—268 (87 spots), 148 (42 spots), 143 (36 spots), 60 (16 spots), 101 (29 spots), and 136 (41 spots).

A new Townhall, which, with police premises adjoining, has cost about £80,000, was opened at Wakefield on Monday by the Mayor. The latter part of the day was observed as a holiday, and at night the town was illuminated. The Mayor entertained about one hundred gentlemen to luncheon in the banqueting-room, among them being the borough member, Mr. Robert B. Mackie, and a number of Mayors from the neighbouring towns.

Digitized by Google

FINE ARTS.

The building for the exhibition of panoramas now being erected in Leicester-square is to open in the spring with a representation of the Battle of Ulundi, by Mr. A. Yvon, and is to be lighted by the new Jamin electric light, which is said to give great satisfaction. Not many yards from the same spot was exhibited one of the last shows of this kind (in a building expressly designed for the purpose) which have been seen in London—i.e., Burford's Panorama of the Holy Land. The novelty of this effective mode of representation will probably secure the success of the new venture, at least till that novelty wears off. The rage for panoramas is now great on the Continent. A society has been formed, with a large capital, for the exploitation of panoramas in the great capitals of Europe. At this moment there are three large panoramas open at Brussels. Perhaps the most important of these, the "Battle of Waterloo," by Signor Castelani (which we saw a few days back), is really a work of considerable artistic merit as regards the painting both of figures and landscape, under a dismal rainy sky; but the composition does not realise any of the principal events of the day, and as an historical representation it is naught. A curious mistake was made in rendering the corn-fields as quite ripe in June! At Antwerp, too, a huge building, almost as capacious it seemed to us as the Pantheon at Rome, is being erected, and is to contain another panorama of the "Battle of Waterloo," with, for a leading incident, the charge of Kellerman's cuirassiers on a square of British infantry. This is to be painted by Professor Verlat, one of the most vigorous and versatile painters of Europe, and whose early practice as an animal-painter will stand him in good stead. A special exhibition of the works of this artist has been held at Brussels, including a series of most original pictures painted in the Holy Land, which have been the theme of an immense amount of admiration and controversy in the Belgian papers.

The Ghent triennial exhibition contains many of the leading attractions of the last Paris Salon, including "The Good Samaritan," by M. Morot, to which was awarded the medal of honour, and which has been purchased by a private collector for 25,000f. The French Government offered the artist the paltry sum of 4000f. for this masterpiece, which he refused.

The fine-art exhibition at Brussels, illustrative of the Belgian school since the severance of the country from Holland fifty years ago, is now closed, together with the separate industrial exhibition, which also included an historical collection of no very great importance. The former has not proved nearly so successful as the latter. We confess we were disappointed with the art-exhibition; and on all hands it is admitted that the Belgian school is in decadence. There is a sad lack of freshness, originality, and individuality in the Belgian painters of to-day. The traditions of the great Flemish school are lost sight of in a weak imitation of the leading French painters—with the result we have indicated. This is more painfully apparent in the Ghent Exhibition of which we have just spoken. The Antwerp painters are, perhaps, least affected by this fatal tendency to imitate a non-national school with non-indigenous tastes and characteristics. Yet, strange to say, Leys, the most intensely Flemish of modern painters (in his "third manner") did not appear to advantage—did not bear out the estimate we had formed. His works appear to have undergone deterioration, owing, doubtless, to his method of painting with excess of vehicle laden with varnish. It must, however, be admitted that his fame was always somewhat adventitious, like that of our pre-Raphaelites. His subjects appealed to patriotic sentiment, as did no less his revival of the extremest peculiarities of early Flemish art. But, now that we are familiar with his antiquarian cents, what we accepted as sincere seems but artifice; there is no real vitality, only a galvanised semblance thereof, in his works; we become more sensible to his entire want of all sense of beauty, and to the absence of aerial perspective and other technical defects. M. Gallait is almost the only living Belgian painter who appeared to sustain his reputation in this exhibition. M. Verlat, with the special exhibition of his works, to which we have also already alluded, has decidedly won the foremost position in the contemporary Belgian school.

A new society has been formed, called the Topographical Society of London, for the purpose of collecting and republishing maps, views, and other materials bearing on the history of London. The inaugural meeting of the society will be held on Thursday next at four p.m., in the Long Parlour at the Mansion House. The Lord Mayor will preside.

The Lord Mayor on the 14th inst. distributed the prizes awarded at the recent exhibition promoted by the Turners' Company. The two principal prize-takers—Mr. F. Nickolay, of Rupert-street, and Mr. Louis Islar, of Oval-road, Regent's Park—received also the freedom of the Guild and of the City.

A colossal statue of Robert Burns was unveiled last Saturday in Dundee by Mr. Henderson, M.P., in the presence of about thirty thousand persons. A large procession, consisting of representatives of the different trades, marched through the town, and along the route crowds of people collected. The statue, which is in bronze, was executed by Sir John Steell.

The Committee of the Corporation for letting the Bridge House Estates have given notice that on March 25 next they will receive designs for statuary to be placed on the four pedestals at Blackfriars Bridge. Six premiums will be awarded by the committee—two of £250, two of £150, and two of £100.

The Council of the Bristol and West of England Amateur Photographic Association announce an International Exhibition of Photographs, Photographic Apparatus, and Appliances to be held in the galleries of the Academy of Arts, Queen's-road, Clifton, to be opened on Friday, Dec. 17.

An art-exhibition has been opened at Leek, Staffordshire, in aid of the funds of the art-school of that town.

At the Hertford Quarter Sessions on Monday a letter was read from Earl Cowper, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, resigning his position as Chairman of the Court. His Lordship tendered his resignation at the Midsummer Sessions, but the Court then decided to ask him to reconsider his determination. A letter was now read from him expressing his final decision to resign.

A new Foresters' hall was opened at Canterbury on Monday, and the occasion was celebrated by a public dinner, which was attended by nearly 300 members of the order and their friends. The chair was occupied by Mr. Alderman Goulden, who was supported by the Dean of Canterbury and several members of the Corporation.

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

ENLARGEMENT of

THE MAGAZINE OF ART,

WITH the PART Published OCT. 26.

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

NOTICE.—Special attention is directed to the Frontispiece, which will be issued with the FIRST Part of the ENLARGED SERIES of the MAGAZINE OF ART, ready Oct. 26, which consists of an exquisitely produced Etching, entitled "The Trio," from the Painting by ERSKINE NICOL, A.R.A., Etched by Lalauze.
CASSELL, PETTER, GALPIN, and Co., Ludgate-hill, London.

THE QUIVER.—COMMENCEMENT of a NEW VOLUME affording a convenient opportunity for New Subscribers.

On Oct. 26 will be published
The FIRST PART of a NEW VOLUME of
THE QUIVER: Being the NOVEMBER PART, price 6d., containing, amongst other Contributions:
THE FAMILY COUNCIL: CONVERSATIONS ON THE EVENTS OF HOME. By Edward Garrett.
LIFE PICTURES OF MEN WE HAVE MET.
SCRIPTURE TEXTS NOT GENERALLY KNOWN. By the Rev. T. M. Morris.
THE PEOPLE CALLED QUAKERS. By a Former Member of the Society of Friends.
THE LESSONS OF THE LEAVES. By the Rev. W. Walters.
"CHRIST WHOSE GLORY FILLS THE SKIES." Music by George Garrett, M.A., Mus. D.
THE ENTRANCE OF THE KING.
PEN'S GIFT. Short complete Story.
SCRIPTURE LESSONS FOR SCHOOL AND HOME. New Series.
FRANCES RIDLEY HAVERGAL: the Poetess of the Consecrated Life. By Emma R. Pitman.
WITNESS FOR CHRIST IN THE WORLD'S WORK. By the Rev. Robert Shindler.
THE BLESSEDNESS OF SEEING CHRIST. By the Rev. J. Stuart.
THROUGH STORM AND SUNSHINE.
SOME THOUGHTS ABOUT SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHING.
SHORT ARROWS: Completion of the New Testament in Japanese—Temperance Work in Sweden—Teaching the Zulus—A Useful Life—God's Word in a Savage Island—In the Prairie Provinces—Syrian Schools.
"THE QUIVER" BIBLE CLASS, &c.
SERIAL STORIES.
IN VANITY AND VEXATION: A North Country Story. By the Author of "Lost in the Winning."
BERTIE AND I: A Home story. By the Author of "Keep on Sowing," &c.
CASSELL, PETTER, GALPIN, and Co., Ludgate-hill, London.

THE CHILD'S LIFE OF CHRIST.

Messrs. Cassell, Petter, Galpin, and Co. will publish in Monthly Parts, price 7d.,
AN ENTIRELY NEW WORK, ENTITLED
THE CHILD'S LIFE OF CHRIST, with 250 Illustrations. Part I. ready Oct. 26.
"'The Child's Life of Christ' will be an entirely original work, written in simple and interesting language adapted to the comprehension of children, relating in consecutive order the events connected with our Lord's life and ministry, and describing fully the scenes amid which He moved, and the people amongst whom He spent His life on earth."
"The greatest care will be exercised in the selection and production of the wood engravings, which will be entirely new and original illustrations; taken mainly from photographs and other authentic sources, and will be unsparingly disposed through the text."
Prospectuses at all Booksellers', or post-free from
CASSELL, PETTER, GALPIN, and Co., Ludgate-hill, London.

THE LITTLE FOLKS ANNUAL.

On Oct. 26 will be published, in Coloured Wrapper, price 6d.,
THE GLAD TIME: being the "Little Folks" Annual for 1881, and containing a "Little Folks" Calendar for 1881, Christmas Stories, Indoor Games and Amusements, Acting Charades, Songs, Recitations, Riddles, Puzzles, &c., together with full particulars of a Special Prize Competition.
With numerous Illustrations by Kate Greenaway, G. G. Kilburne, George Cruikshank, jun., M. E. Edwards, H. Giacomelli, C. Gregory, Ernest Griset, Lizzie Lawson, &c.

THE NEW WORLD.
RE-ISSUE in Monthly Parts, price 7d. (Part I. ready Oct. 26), HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES.
(CASSELL'S.)
With about SIX HUNDRED ILLUSTRATIONS.
CASSELL, PETTER, GALPIN, and Co., Ludgate-hill, London.

THE CHEAPEST MAGAZINE IN THE WORLD.
WELDON'S LADIES' JOURNAL.
3d., Monthly; post-free, 4d.
Contains 32 Pages of Letterpress, and 30 Illustrations of the Latest Winter Fashions for Ladies and Children.
WELDON and Co., 9, Southampton-street, Strand.

Eighth Edition, cloth, post-free, 33 stamps,
DR. BARR MEADOWS on Skin Disease.
Remarks on the Abuse of Arsenic, and specifics.
G. HILL, 154, Westminster-road.

Fourth Edition, cloth, post-free, 13 stamps,
DR. BARR MEADOWS on Homœopathy.
"A clever expose of the system."
G. HILL, 154, Westminster-road.

THE Treatment of Cancer, Tumours, and Ulcers, by CHIAN TURPENTINE, and all other Methods. Addressed to sufferers by ALEX. MARSDEN, M.D., Senior Surgeon to the Cancer Hospital, London. Post-free, 1s.
London: WYMAN and SONS, Great Queen-street, W.C.

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

SELF-CULTURE FOR ALL.
WARD AND LOCK'S
UNIVERSAL INSTRUCTOR. A Complete Encyclopædia of Learning and Self-Education. Profusely illustrated. In Weekly Numbers, 1d.; and Monthly Parts, 6d. Prospectuses post-free on application to the Publishers.

WARD AND LOCK'S
UNIVERSAL INSTRUCTOR; or, Self Culture for All.
No. 1 is Now Ready, price 1d.; Part I. Oct. 25, price 6d. With Part I. will be presented, Gratis, a valuable Chart of the History of the World, printed in Colours.
Prospectus post-free on application to the Publishers.
London: WARD, LOCK, and Co., Salisbury-square, E.C.

Just ready, crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 5s.,
THE
LIFE AND WORK OF JESUS CHRIST.
By the Rev. F. A. MALLESON.
"A narrative which we venture to think will never die, and which deserves to find a place alongside the grand Old Book in every home."—The Pictorial World.
"The well-known but ever-fascinating story is here told in graceful and flowing language."—The Scotsman.
London: WARD, LOCK, and Co., Salisbury-square, E.C.

On Oct. 29 (One Shilling), No. 251,
THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE for NOVEMBER. With Illustrations by George du Maurier and W. Small.
CONTENTS.
My Faithful Johnny. (With an Illustration.) Chapters I.—IV
Quevedo.
The Natural History of Dress.
Lord Macaulay and Dr. Johnson's Wife.
The Burmese. By Shway Yoe.
Decorative Decorations.
Social Life Amongst the Ancient Greeks.
Washington Square. By Henry James, jun. (With an Illustration.) Chapters XXX.—XXXV.
London: SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 15, Waterloo-place.

Now ready, royal 8vo, price 28s.,
THE POWER OF SOUND. By EDMUND GURNEY, late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge.
London: SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 15, Waterloo-place.

NEW NOVEL AT ALL THE LIBRARIES.
MEHALAH: A Story of the Salt Marshes.
2 vols., post 8vo.
London: SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 15, Waterloo-place.

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF "FAR FROM THE MADDING CROWD."
Now ready at all the Libraries,
THE TRUMPET MAJOR. By THOMAS HARDY, Author of "Far from the Madding Crowd," &c.
3 vols., post 8vo.
London: SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 15, Waterloo-place.

THE NEW FASHION-BOOK.

DEBENHAM and FREEBODY beg to announce the publication of the Twenty-second Number of their NEW FASHION-BOOK. The Book is enlarged to forty-eight pages, and contains numerous Illustrations of selected Models in Costumes, Mantles, Millinery, Evening Dresses, and Lace Goods, with Descriptive Articles, Estimates, Prices, &c.
"It is a complete index to the fashionable novelties of the day, in regard to colour and make, furnishing made-up costumes of all that is choicest and newest, with their price in the respective materials, so that ladies may SHOP AT HOME."

THE NEW FASHION-BOOK
Post-free for twelve stamps.
DEBENHAM and FREEBODY, Wigmore-street, Welbeck-street, London, W.

ZADKIEL'S ALMANAC, 1881. — The Great Year.—Contents:—Voice of the Stars—Weather Predictions—Great Conjunction of Saturn and Jupiter—Probable Effects of the Coincident, Perihelia—Comets as Portents, &c. Price 6d.
ZADKIEL foretold the victories in Afghanistan, the very days of Isandlana and the Tay Bridge Accident, the Reign of Terror in Ireland, Coercion of Turkey, &c.
London: Corsiss and Co., 3, York-street, Covent-garden, W.C.

JUST PUBLISHED. Post-free, Two Stamps.
DYSPEPSIA and the SEVERER FORMS OF INDIGESTION. A Small Pamphlet on those distressing complaints and their complete cures. Published by the Author, RICHARD KING, Esq., Staff Surgeon, R.N., 23, Warwick-st., Rugby.

Third Edition, 1s., post-free,
THE new ELECTROLYTIC TREATMENT of CANCER and of simple Tumours. By G. EDGELOW, M.D.—NELSON and Co., 23, Duke-street, Grosvenor-square, W.

THE LINCOLN POSTAGE-STAMP ALBUM and CATALOGUE. Illustrated. Fifth Edition. With Spaces for over 3500 stamps. Cloth gilt, 2s. 6d.; post-free, 2s. 10d.—W. LINCOLN, 289, High Holborn, London.

WEDDING and BIRTHDAY PRESENTS at RODRIGUES', 42, Piccadilly, London.
SETS FOR THE WRITING-TABLE AND BOUDOIR, IN POLISHED BRASS, ORMOLU, SEVRES CHINA.

BRONZE, and OXIDIZED SILVER, from ..	21s. to £10
TRAVELLING DRESSING BAGS	63s. to £50
DRESSING CASES	21s. to £50
DESPATCH BOXES	21s. to £10
TOURISTS' WRITING CASES	4s. 6d. to £5
ENVELOPE CASES and BLOTTING BOOKS ..	10s. 6d. to £5
STATIONERY CASES AND CABINETS ..	30s. to £5
INKSTANDS	5s. to £5
CANDLESTICKS (per pair)	7s. 6d. to £5
WORK BOXES and BASKETS	15s. to £5
PORTRAIT ALBUMS	4s. 6d. to £2
THE NEW "TANTALUS" LIQUEUR STAND ..	105s. to £10
THE NEW "EPITOME" WRITING CASE ..	12s. to 30s.
THE NEW STYLOGRAPHIC PEN, 12s. 6d., 14s. 6d., and 16s. 6d.

And a large and choice assortment of ENGLISH, VIENNESE, and PARISIAN NOVELTIES, from 5s. to £5.
HENRY RODRIGUES', 42, Piccadilly, London.

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

THE NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.
Now ready, at all the Libraries, in 3 vols.,
DIMPLETHORPE. By the Author of "St. Olave's," &c.
STRICTLY TIED UP.
ROY AND VIOLA. By Mrs. FORRESTER, Author of "Viva," &c. SECOND EDITION.
LORD BRACKENBURY. By AMELIA B. EDWARDS, Author of "Barbara's History." SECOND EDITION.
ST. MARTIN'S SUMMER. By SHIRLEY SMITH.
HURST and BLACKETT, Publishers, 13, Great Marlborough-street

Just Out, in Two handsome volumes, demy 8vo, 25s.,
THE LIFE of SIR ANTHONY PANIZZI, K.C.B., late Principal Librarian of the British Museum, Senator of Italy, &c. By LOUIS FAGAN. With Frontispiece and numerous Illustrations.
"A Panizzi biography, should Mr. Fagan accomplish his task, would have an importance hardly inferior to any of the works added during this last half-century to the heavily-burdened shelves of our great book repository."—Times, Sept. 11.
"Mr. Fagan has made good use of the materials bequeathed to him, and has produced a work of great and probably lasting interest."—Athenæum.
REMINGTON and Co., 133, New Bond-street, W.

Now ready, in crown 8vo, price 6s., cloth extra, gilt edges,
YELLOW CAP, and other Fairy Stories, for Children—viz., "Rumpty Dudget," "Calladon," and "Theeda:" an Allegory. By JULIAN HAWTHORNE.
London: LONGMANS and Co.

PAINTING on CHINA, EARTHENWARE, &c.: Practical Lessons by Madame la Baronne DELAMARDELLE. From the French, by G. A. Bouvier. Fourth Edition, post-free, 1s. 1d.—LECHERTIER, BARBE, and Co., 60, Regent-st., W.

EVERY MAN HIS OWN PRINTER. The People's Printing Press, for Authors, Amateurs, the Army and Navy, &c. Prospectuses forwarded on application to D. G. BERRI, 76, High Holborn, London, W.C.

FOR FAMILY ARMS (Lincoln's-inn Heraldic Office) send Name and County. Sketch, 3s. 6d.; in colours, 7s. 6d. Arms Painted and Engraved on Seals, Dies, &c. PUGH BROTHERS, Great Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn, W.C.; and 76, Queen Victoria-street, E.C. Prize Medal, Paris, 1878.

SAMPLES GRATIS.
PAPIER MARION.—The Finest Writing Paper. Apply to 23, Soho-square, W., for Specimen Sheets and Envelopes. Sent gratis per post. To be had of all Stationers; and wholesale only of the Manufacturers, MARION and CO., London.

FOR ARMS and CREST send Name and County to T. MORING, Inns of Court Heraldic Offices, 44, High Holborn, W.C. Plain Sketch, 3s. 6d.; Coloured, 7s. 6d. Seals, Dies, and Diplomas. Illustrated Price-Lists post-free.

WHAT IS YOUR CREST and WHAT IS YOUR MOTTO? Send name and county to CULLETON'S Heraldic Office. Plain Sketch, 3s. 6d.; colours, 7s. The arms of man and wife blended. Crest engraved on seals, rings, books, and steel dies, 8s. 6d. Gold seal, with crest, 20s. Solid Gold Ring, 18-carat, Hall-marked, with crest, 42s. Manual of Heraldry, 400 engravings, 3s. 9d.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

VISITING CARDS, by CULLETON. Fifty best quality, 2s. 8d., post-free, including the Engraving of Copper-plate. Wedding Cards, 50 each, 50 Embossed Envelopes, with Maiden Name, 13s. 6d.—T. CULLETON, Seal Engraver, 25, Cranbourn-street, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

CULLETON'S GUINEA BOX of STATIONERY contains a Ream of the very best Paper and 200 Envelopes, all stamped in the most elegant way with Crest and Motto, Monogram, or Address, and the engraving of Steel Die included. Sent to any part for P.O. order.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

VITREMANIE, superseding Diaphanie. An easy and inexpensive method of decorating windows in churches, public buildings, and private houses, by which may be produced the rich colouring and beautiful designs equal in appearance to real stained glass. Handbook of Designs and full instructions, 1s. 1d. Boxes, comprising designs, &c., at 21s., 31s. 6d., 42s. Particulars post-free. Sole Inventors, J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street, London, W.

CHROMOPHOTOGRAPHY.
(KRAUS' PROCESS.)
The New Art (enabling any person without previous knowledge of either Painting or Drawing) to Colour Photographs on convex glasses, in imitation of China and Enamel Painting. Boxes containing every requisite, 26s. and 28s. Particulars post-free. Specimens shown on application at the Sole Agents, J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street, London, W.

WHY NOT MAKE YOUR OWN LANTERN SLIDES?
(TRANSFER PROCESS.)
A Box containing a Sheet of Twelve 3¼-inch VIEWS, Glasses, Roller, Brushes, Varnishes, New Frame, Masks, and Book containing full Instructions, 18s. Particulars and Price-Lists post-free.—J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street, London, W.

PHOTOGRAPHS.
THE CZAR OF RUSSIA'S YACHT—THE LIVADIA.—A set of fourteen Photographs, 11 by 9, mounted, and in leather case, showing the saloons, &c.; price, Five Guineas. Photographed by command by Messrs. Bedford, Lemere and Co.
The English Cathedrals, the English Lake District, Yorkshire, Derbyshire, the Isle of Wight, Warwickshire, Cambridge, South Coast, Devonshire, Cornwall, North Wales, Paris, the French Cathedrals, Switzerland, Belgium, Vienna, Nuremburg, Innsbruck, Salzburg, Norway, Constantinople, Italy, South of France, Algiers, America, India, Spain, Portugal, and Japan.
3000 Photographs of Italy and its Treasures, Photographed in Detail. Size, 10in. by 8in. Price 1s. each. A very fine Collection for Students, arranged for easy inspection.
Collections of Photographs, Prints, Drawings, &c., Cleaned, Mounted, Titled, and put into Order, and Bound into convenient Volumes or Portfolioed.
Photographs Enlarged, Coloured, and Framed.
MARION and CO., 22 and 23, Soho-square, London.

MISS GLYN'S SHAKESPERIAN READING and ELOCUTION LESSONS continue for LADIES, CLERGYMEN, and BARRISTERS, at 13, Mount-street, Grosvenor-square, W.

MALVERN COLLEGE.
The ANNUAL EXAMINATION for SCHOLARSHIPS and ENTRANCE EXHIBITIONS will be held on DEC. 7 and 8.

SMART'S WRITING INSTITUTION, 97B, Quadrant, Regent-street (entrance in Swallow-street). Open from Ten till Nine daily. Persons of all ages received privately, and taught at any time suiting their own convenience. Lessons one hour each. No classes. No extras. Improvement guaranteed in eight to twelve easy lessons. Separate room for ladies. Apply to Mr. Smart, as above.

FINE-ART PARCEL of ENGRAVINGS for 21s.—Having purchased a large STOCK of first-class ENGRAVINGS, I have determined to SELL them at an immense reduction, comprising a pair of Turner's, pair of Landseer's, pair of Wilkie's, pair of Poole's, and a pair of Frith's, ten in all, in first-class condition, for 21s. Sufficient to furnish dining-room and library.—REES, 41, 42, 43, Russell-street, Covent-garden, opposite Drury-Lane Theatre.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS.
GOLD MEDAL,
PARIS,
1878.

REBUILDING SALE.—PIANOFORTES, £15; Broadwood Pianos, £25; Erard Pianos, £25; Collard Pianos, £28; Harmoniums, £5; American Organs, £10. THOMAS OETZMANN and Co., 27, Baker-street, Portman-sq.

£20 SCHOOL-ROOM PIANO (Co-operative price for cash). Seven octaves—strong, sound, and substantial. Adapted for hard practice. THOMAS OETZMANN and CO., 27, Baker-street.

REBUILDING SALE.—Purchasers who can pay cash will do well to take advantage of this exceptional opportunity of obtaining thoroughly good instruments at extraordinary low prices.

BROADWOOD PIANO, 38 guineas. Full compass Pianoforte, in handsome walnut-wood case, good condition, fine tone, at above moderate price, for cash only. At OETZMANN'S, 27, Baker-street.

COLLARD PIANO, 30 guineas. Full-compass COTTAGE PIANOFORTE, fine full, rich tone, perfect condition. May be seen at OETZMANN'S, 27, Baker-street (exactly opposite Madame Tussaud's).

ERARD PIANO, 40 guineas, fullest compass of Seven Octaves. Trichord COTTAGE PIANOFORTE, in handsome ebonised and gilt case, fine full, powerful tone. Cash only. At OETZMANN'S, 27, Baker-street.

COLLARD'S IRON BOUDOIR GRAND, Seven Octaves.—One of these charming and unique Short Grands, very nearly new, and of sweet tone, is for SALE, at a considerably reduced price, at OETZMANN'S, 27, Baker-street.

REBUILDING SALE. — The PIANOFORTE HIRE and THREE-YEARS' SYSTEM BUSINESS carried on as usual during the Rebuilding.—THOMAS OETZMANN and CO., 27, Baker-st., opposite Madame Tussaud's.

PIANOFORTES for HIRE or for SALE, from 25 guineas upwards.—JOHN BROADWOOD and SONS, 33, Great Pulteney-street, Golden-square, W. Manufactory, 45, Horseferry-road, Westminster, W.

P. J. SMITH AND SONS'
IRON-STRUTTED PIANOS.
"The best and most substantial instrument produced."
3 and 4, PRINCES-STREET, OXFORD-STREET, W.

ERARDS' PIANOS.—Messrs. ERARD, of 18, Great Marlborough-street, London, and 13, Rue de Mail, Paris, Makers to her Majesty and the Prince and Princess of Wales, CAUTION the Public that Pianofortes are being sold bearing the name of "Erard" which are not of their manufacture. For information as to authenticity apply at 18, Great Marlborough-st., where new Pianos can be obtained from 50 guineas.

ERARDS' PIANOS.—COTTAGES, from 70 guineas.
OBLIQUES, from 85 guineas.
GRANDS, from 125 guineas.

D'ALMAINES' PIANOS HALF PRICE. In consequence of a change of partnership, the whole of this splendid stock, perfected with all the modern improvements of the day by this long-standing firm, of 100 years' reputation, and in order to effect a speedy sale. The easiest terms arranged, with seven years' warranty. Trichord Cottages from hire, or taken in exchange, £10 to £12.
Class 0, £14 | Class 2, £20 | Class 4, £30 | Class 6, £35
Class 1, £17 | Class 3, £23 | Class 5, £27 | Class 7, £40
American Organs from £5.—91, Finsbury Pavement, Moorgate Station, E.C.

BUTLER'S MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS. Violins, Concertinas, Harmoniums, Flutes, Clarionets, Flageolets, Guitars, Banjoes, Accordeons, Flutinas, Cornets, Drums, Fifes, and Musical Instruments of every description, at BUTLER'S, 29, Haymarket, London. Illustrated Catalogue (50 pages) post-free.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.
DUC DE MONTEBELLO'S EXTRA CUVEE CHAMPAGNE.—At the competitive tastings recently held at the Wine and Spirit Exhibition in the Agricultural Hall, 20 samples of the leading brands were tasted by 41 members of the Wine Trade, and the above was adjudicated the FINEST. Calculations checked and vouched for by A. B. INGRAM, Chartered Accountant, 2, Gresham-buildings.
This identical Wine, at 70s. per Doz., can be obtained of T. W. STAPLETON and CO., Wine Merchants, 233, Regent-street, W.

Digitized by Google

NEW MUSIC.

THE MARTYR OF ANTIOCH. Sacred Musical Drama. Music by ARTHUR SULLIVAN. Performed on the 15th inst. at the Leeds Musical Festival with enormous success. Price 8s. net; bound in cloth, 10s. 6d. net.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry, E.C.

OLIVETTE. New Comic Opera, now being performed at the Strand Theatre with enormous success. Adapted by H. B. Farnie; Music by AUDRAN.

Vocal Score	8s. net.
Pianoforte Solo	2s. 6d. ,,
Nearest and Dearest Waltz. D'Albert	2s. ,,
Olivette Waltz. D'Albert	2s. ,,
Olivette Quadrille. D'Albert	2s. ,,
Olivette Polka. D'Albert	2s. ,,
Torpedo Galop. D'Albert	2s. ,,
I Love my Love so well. Duet	2s. ,,
The Convent Slept	2s. ,,
Where balmy garlic scents the air. Bolero	2s. ,,
Valse Song. First Love	2s. ,,
Torpedo Song	2s. ,,
Sob Song. Sung by Miss St. John	2s. ,,
Romance—"Nearest and Dearest."	2s. ,,
Franz Nava's Gems from Olivette (Nos. 1 and 2) each	1s. 6d. ,,
Franz Nava's Farandole	1s. 6d. ,,
Audran's "Nearest and Dearest"	2s. ,,

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

CHARLES D'ALBERT'S NOVELTIES.

ADELINA WALTZ. Illustrated with a beautiful Portrait of Madame Patti	2s. 0d. net
PORTIA WALTZ	2s. 0d. net
DRINK, PUPPY, DRINK! POLKA	2s. 0d. net
CAN'T STOP! GALOP	2s. 0d. net
CONGRESS LANCERS	2s. 0d. net
DISTANT SHORE WALTZ	2s. 0d. net
THE FANFARE POLKA	1s. 6d. net

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

Now ready,
VOLUME TWO OF CHAPPELL'S OLD ENGLISH DITTIES. Handsomely bound in cloth and gold. Price 10s. 6d. net.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S THREE-YEARS' SYSTEM of HIRE of PIANOFORTES, HARMONIUMS, and AMERICAN ORGANS, by which the instrument becomes the property of the Hirer at the end of the third year, provided each quarter's hire shall have been regularly paid in advance. Pianofortes, from 2 gs.; Harmoniums, from £1 4s.; and American Organs, from £2 10s. a Quarter.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S PIANINOS, from 20 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S COTTAGES, from 27 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S GRANDS, from 50 guineas.

CHICKERING PIANOFORTES, from 120 guineas, with American discount.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S ALEXANDRE HARMONIUMS, for Church, Schools, or Drawing-Rooms, from 5 to 150 guineas; or, on the Three-Years' System, from £1 5s. per quarter.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S IMPROVED AMERICAN ORGANS, combining Pipes with Reeds, Manufactured by Clough and Warren, Detroit, U.S.A. The immense advantages these instruments possess over the Organs hitherto imported have induced Messrs. Chappell and Co. to undertake the sole Agency of this eminent Manufactory. A large variety on view, from 25 to 250 guineas. Price-Lists on application to CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S Favourite ORGAN. Compass, five octaves, ten stops, four sets of reeds, two of two and two thirds octaves and two of two and one third octaves, knee swell, elegant carved Canadian walnut case, price 25 guineas. With twelve stops, sub-bass octave coupler, and two knee pedals, 35 guineas. Illustrated Price-List free by post.
Sole Agents, CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

INSTRUMENTS by ALL MAKERS may be HIRED or PURCHASED on the Three-Years' System.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

A LARGE DISCOUNT TO PURCHASERS FOR CASH.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

JOSEPH WILLIAMS'S LIST.
ALL MUSIC POST-FREE AT HALF PRICE.

FOLI'S GREATEST SUCCESS.
THE RAFT. Descriptive Fantasia. By PINSUTI. In E and G; free, 24 stamps. Now being sung by Signor Foli with the greatest success at all his concerts. Decidedly the finest baritone (or bass) song extant.

I LOVE MY LOVE. PINSUTI'S most celebrated Song, in A flat and B flat; free, 24 stamps.
This, the most effective Drawing-room Song ever written, is continually sung by all the leading vocalists, both soprano and contralto.

THREE JOLLY BRITONS, or the ENGLISH, IRISH, and SCOTCH.
New National Song.
"Long may our good Queen on her Throne
O'er her subjects keep a watch,
For the three will fight for her as one,
Though English, Irish, and Scotch.
Words and Music, G. WARE. Post-free, 18 stamps.

SHALL I WEAR A WHITE ROSE? New Song. By EMILY FARMER; poetry by Savile Clark. This charming Song is now being sung by Madame Trebelli at her Provincial Concerts with perfect success. Published in E flat and G, for soprano or contralto. Post-free, 24 stamps.

JOHN GILPIN. Cantata. By GEORGE FOX. 2s. 6d. net. Easy and effective. A liberal discount allowed to choral societies for copies.

LES CLOCHES DE CORNEVILLE.
Vocal Score, English Words, 10s. net, and 4s.
Piano Score, complete, 2s. 6d. net.

HENRY FARMER'S PIANOFORTE TUTOR, considerably Enlarged and Fingered by the Author. 100th Edition. 4s.
"Decidedly the best and most useful instruction book we have seen."—Musical Review.

JOSEPH WILLIAMS,
24, Berners-street, W.; and 123, Cheapside, E.C.

NEW DANCE MUSIC.
SUCCESS OF THE SEASON.
AMITIÉ VALSE. By H. R. CALLCOTT. 4s.
TOUT EST FINI GALOP. By H. R. CALLCOTT. 4s.
AVANT SOUPIR GALOP. By H. R. CALLCOTT. 4s.
Half price post-free.
ALDERSON and BRENTNALL, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

CHARLES HALLÉ'S PRACTICAL PIANOFORTE SCHOOL.
Section I.—No. 1, Pianoforte Tutor. Also 67 Numbers of CHARLES HALLÉ'S MUSICAL LIBRARY are now ready.
Catalogues and all particulars may be had from
FORSYTH BROTHERS, London, 272A, Regent-circus, Oxford-street; Manchester, Cross-street and South King-street; and all Musicsellers.

DOMINION ORGAN COMPANY,
Bowmanville, Ontario, Canada.
The best and cheapest 25 Guinea Organ in the Trade.
"PRINCESS LOUISE,"
Ten Stops, including Octave Coupler.
Sole Agents for the United Kingdom,
FORSYTH BROTHERS,
London: 272A, Regent-circus, Oxford-street.
Manchester: Cross-street and South King-street.
Complete Catalogues post-free.

NEW MUSIC.

POPULAR NUMBERS OF
BOOSEYS' MUSICAL CABINET.
Price 1s. each.
216. ROBERT FRANZ ALBUM. 36 Songs.
138. GOUNOD'S 10 SONGS, including "The Serenade," and "Où voulez-vous aller?"
2. LONGFELLOW AND BALFE'S 10 CELEBRATED SONGS.
13. HATTON'S 12 SONGS. New Edition.
145. DOLORES' 12 SONGS.
163. A. S. GATTY'S 12 BALLADS.
169. VIRGINIA GABRIEL'S 10 SONGS.
168. ARTHUR SULLIVAN'S 10 SONGS.
83. TWELVE VOCAL DUETS FOR LADIES' VOICES.
173. LILLIE'S SONG BOOK. 50 Songs.
212. BOOSEYS' MARCH ALBUM. 35 Marches.
203, 210, 213. RUBINSTEIN'S 3 ALBUMS. 25 Pieces.
214. ROBERT SCHUMANN'S ALBUMBLATTER.
204. BRAHMS' PIANOFORTE ALBUM
190. FIELD'S NOCTURNE ALBUM. 10 Nocturnes.
114. BEETHOVEN'S WALTZ ALBUM. 45 Waltzes.
200. LAMOTHE'S WALTZ ALBUM. 6 Waltzes.
201. WALDTEUFEL'S WALTZ ALBUM. 8 Waltzes.
Booseys' Musical Cabinet also contains Beethoven's, Mozart's, Schubert's, and Dussek's Sonatas; Chopin's Waltzes, Mazurkas, and Nocturnes (each complete for 1s.); Mendelssohn's, Schumann's, Heller's, Weber's, and Hummel's works. The cheapest and best editions published. A full Catalogue on application.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

BOOSEYS' SHILLING INSTRUCTORS.

Organ	Best.	Theory	Dr. Callcott.
Harmonium	Elliott.	Violin	Henning.
Pianoforte	Mount.	Violoncello	Howell.
Singing (Men)	Hatton.	Flute	Pratten.
Singing (Ladies)	Hatton.	Cornet	Jones.
Ballad Singing	Balfe.	Concertina	Case.
Choral Singing	Dr. Spark.	Clarionet	Kappey.

New and much enlarged Edition. Price 12s. 6d.,
LOGIER'S SYSTEM OF THE SCIENCE OF MUSIC. "As a guide to the teacher, or for private study, we know of no better work."—Musical Standard.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

SPOHR'S VIOLIN SCHOOL. Edited by HENRY HOLMES. Price 10s. 6d. complete, bound in cloth.—BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

With Fifteen Illustrations, price 2s. 6d.,
LILLIE'S FIRST MUSIC-BOOK. Sixty-four pages. Music size. "The most admirable tutor extant for the pianoforte."—Somerset Herald.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

Next week, price 2s. 6d.,
LILLIE'S SECOND MUSIC-BOOK. Fifty-six pages. Music size, with six full-page Illustrations, forming a sequel to the first book, and completing the work. BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

Just published, 2s. 6d., paper covers; 4s., cloth, gilt edges,
HANDEL'S OPERA SONGS.—A Collection of Fifty-two of the choicest Songs from Handel's Operas, with Italian and English Words. Edited by W. T. Best. "The impression produced by turning over this collection is one of astonishment that such a wealth of fine and effective songs should have been neglected so long."—Pall Mall Gazette.—BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

Price 2s. 6d., paper covers; 4s., cloth, gilt edges,
THE SONGS OF ENGLAND—Second Volume—containing 100 celebrated Songs and Ballads. Edited by J. L. HATTON.—THE ROYAL EDITION.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

Price 2s. 6d., paper covers; 4s., cloth, gilt edges,
THE SONGS OF FRANCE. A Collection of Sixty celebrated Songs and popular Romances, all with French and English Words.

THE SONGS OF FRANCE contains songs by Boieldieu, Grétry, Adam, Auber, Gounod, Berlioz, Halévy, Lefort, Alary, Nadaud, Niedermeyer, Flotow, Felicien David, Wekerlin, Masini, Puget, Henrion and Bordèse, in addition to the popular and National Songs of France. The work is specially for drawing-room use, and contains no extracts from operas. THE ROYAL EDITION.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

Full music size, 32 pages, 1s. each,
THE CAVENDISH MUSIC-BOOKS. Thirty-nine are now ready, including New Ballad Concert Albums of Sherrington, Sterling, Reeves, Lloyd, and Santley (10 songs in each book); Albums of English, Irish, and Scotch Ballads (20 in each book); Songs of the Day (10 in each book); Sacred Songs and Pieces; Pianoforte Albums, containing the most favourite pieces of the time; Gavotte and Minuet Albums; Arabella Goddard's and Liszt's Albums; Recollections of the Opera, a book of 26 gems; Classical Readings, a book of 20 celebrated pieces; Books of Piano and Vocal Duets; Dance Albums; and collections of music for beginners. Full List of Contents post-free—BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street; and all Musicsellers and Booksellers in town and country.

CIRO PINSUTI'S LATEST SUCCESS.
THE BUGLER.
In D, for Bass; F, Baritone; and G, Tenor. Post-free, 2s. net.
London: B. WILLIAMS, 60, Paternoster-row.

MUSIC.—STANDARD EDUCATIONAL WORKS for the USE of STUDENTS.—Messrs. ROBERT COCKS and CO. have just issued this LIST, containing valuable Works indispensable to the Study of Music.
London: New Burlington-street.

PROCESSIONAL MARCH (WELY), Arranged for the Pianoforte by FREDERICK LEMOINE. 4s.; post-free, 24 stamps.—London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

HAMILTON'S SCHOOL MANUALS, on

Rudiments of Music	1s.	Organ	3s.
Musical Grammar	2s.	Singing	3s.
Harmony and T. Bass	1s.	Elements of Harmony	1s.
Key to ditto	1s.	Tuning	1s.
Counterpoint	2s.	Dictionary	1s.
Double ditto	1s.	Violin	1s.
Harmonium	4s.	Pupil's Daily Exercise	3s.

Payment in postage-stamps.—London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

MISS M. LINDSAY'S SELECT and POPULAR SACRED SONGS:—

Low at Thy Feet, 3s.	Come unto Me, 4s.
Tired, in D flat and D, 4s.	An Evening Prayer, 3s.
Too Late, 4s.	Rest, 4s.
Resignation, B flat and E flat, 4s.	The Lord will Provide, 3s.

Post-free at half price.—London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

SILVER BELLS OF MEMORY. Harry DALE'S much admired Melody. Transcribed for the Piano by GEORGE F. WEST. 3s.; post-free for 18 stamps.
London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

HOME TREASURES. An unrivalled Selection of TWENTY-FIVE POPULAR MELODIES. Arranged and Fingered for the Pianoforte by WILLIAM SMALLWOOD. Every number is a gem, as thousands who have heard them can testify. Post-free, as solos, 15 stamps each; as duets, 18 stamps each.
London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street.

JOHN PRIDHAM'S POPULAR MUSIC for the PIANOFORTE, carefully fingered. Descriptive Fantasias, Harvest Home, The Gipsies' Festival, The Sailors' Dream, The Sailors' Farewell, The Soldiers' Dream, and The Soldiers' Farewell. All Illustrated Titles. 4s. each; post-free at half price in stamps.—London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

TWO NEW SONGS by THEO. MARZIALS.
BUTTERCUP QUEEN, Words by Mrs. W. K. Clifford; and IN SUMMER TIME, Poetry by "Rea."—"Without doubt will be ranked among his most popular songs." 3s. each; post-free at half price.—London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street. Order everywhere.

THE MUSICAL ÆSOP. By TALBOT ERLE. Fables in Prose and Verse, Song and Chorus, with connecting Story, forming a Drawing-room Entertainment for Children. Price 1s.—WEEKES and Co., Hanover-street, W.

COWEN'S GREATEST SUCCESS.
THE CHILDREN'S HOME. By COWEN. Sung with brilliant applause by Miss Mary Davies, Miss José Sherrington, Madame Florence Lancia, Madame Bodda Pyne, Madame Patey, Madame Evans Warwick, Miss Coyte Turner, Mr. John Cross, and by all the principal Vocalists. Keys for all voices. 24 stamps.
W. MORLEY, Jun., and Co., 70, Upper-street, London, N.

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS' Newly-Patented SOSTENENTE GRAND and UPRIGHT PIANOS have gained the two First Prizes and only Special Mention above all competitors at the Sydney International Exhibition, 1879-80. Lists free.—11, Wigmore-street, London, W.

EAU DE SUEZ.
EAU DE SUEZ.
EAU DE SUEZ.
EAU DE SUEZ.
EAU DE SUEZ.
EAU DE SUEZ.
EAU DE SUEZ.
EAU DE SUEZ.—Comfortable Teeth.
EAU DE SUEZ.
EAU DE SUEZ.
EAU DE SUEZ.
EAU DE SUEZ.
EAU DE SUEZ.
EAU DE SUEZ.
EAU DE SUEZ.
EAU DE SUEZ.

EAU DE SUEZ, so called from the name of its inventor, M. Suez, has been with justice termed "Vaccine for the Mouth," inasmuch as it does away with toothache as completely as vaccination does away with smallpox. It immediately and permanently cures toothache, whitens and preserves the teeth, removes all unpleasant odours, including that of tobacco, and secures a pure and healthy state of the gums, mouth, and throat.
There are three kinds, distinguished from each other by a Yellow, Green, and Red Silk Thread.

EAU DE SUEZ.—GREEN THREAD must be considered the most valuable of all, and should be used as a daily mouth-wash. Those who suffer periodically from toothache, sensitiveness of the teeth and gums, decay, and offensive breath will never suffer again, and will preserve their teeth sound and white till the end, by using ten or twelve drops in a little water to rinse the mouth well night and morning.

EAU DE SUEZ.—YELLOW THREAD instantly removes toothache, however violent it may be.

EAU DE SUEZ.—RED THREAD is used in the same manner as the green, but is specially adapted for children.

SUEZ TOOTH-BRUSH.—This brush is soft, being made of the finest badger-hair. A hard tooth-brush is not only a foolish, but also a criminal instrument, so to speak. For by rubbing a soft substance like the gums with a hard brush the former will evidently become spongey and weakened, thus being no longer of any use in protecting the roots of the teeth, which naturally become exposed, and impart an offensive smell to the breath.

SUEZ ORANGE TOOTH PASTE secures the permanent removal of tartar, and by daily use restores the whiteness of the teeth.

EAU DE SUEZ.—To guard against counterfeiting, buy only those tooth-brushes which are stamped on the handle with the name "Suez," and those bottles which bear the words "Wilcox and Co., 336, Oxford-street, London," on the labels.

Green Thread	4s. 0d.	Carriage free to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of P.O.O., stamps, or cash in registered letter, to Wilcox and Co., 336, Oxford-street, London, and all Chemists.
Yellow Thread	2s. 9d.
Red Thread	3s. 0d.
Orange Tooth Paste	4s. 6d.
Suez Tooth-Brushes, each	1s. 6d.

MRS. S. A. ALLEN'S
WORLD'S HAIR RESTORER
THE ADMIRATION OF THE WORLD. Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Restorer is perfection for its wonderful life-giving properties to faded or falling hair, and quickly changing grey or white hair to its natural youthful colour and beauty. It is not a dye. It requires only a few applications to restore gray hair to its youthful colour and lustrous beauty, and induce luxuriant growth, and its occasional use is all that is needed to preserve it in its highest perfection and beauty. Dandruff is quickly and permanently removed. Sold by all Chemists and Perfumers.

ROWLANDS'
ODONTO
Whitens the Teeth, Prevents Decay, and gives a pleasing Fragrance to the Breath. It is the purest and most fragrant Dentifrice ever used, and contains no mineral, acid, or gritty substances.

ROWLANDS'
MACASSAR OIL,
known for the last eighty years to be the best and safest preserver and beautifier of the hair; it contains no lead or mineral ingredients, and is especially adapted for children's hair. Sold by all Chemists, &c., in usual four sizes, 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d. (family bottles, equal to four small), and 21s.

FLORILINE. For the Teeth and Breath. Is the best Liquid Dentifrice in the world; it thoroughly cleanses partially-decayed teeth from all parasites or living "animalculæ," leaving them pearly white, imparting a delightful fragrance to the breath. The Fragrant Floriline removes instantly all odours arising from a foul stomach or tobacco smoke, being partly composed of honey, soda, and extracts of sweet herbs and plants. It is perfectly harmless, and delicious as sherry. Sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere, at 2s. 6d. per Bottle.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY for the HAIR. If your hair is turning grey, or white, or falling off, use "The Mexican Hair Renewer," for it will positively restore in every case Grey or White Hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting the growth of the hair on bald spots where the glands are not decayed. "The Mexican Hair Renewer" is sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere, at 3s. 6d. per Bottle.

BREIDENBACH'S WOOD VIOLET. Fresh as the flower itself. Price 2s. 6d., 5s., 10s. Bottle. Sold at all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the Universe; or Breidenbach and Co., Distillers of Wood Violet to the Queen, 157B, New Bond-street, W. Trade-Mark, the "Wood Violet."

"AND TEETH LIKE ROWS OF PEARLS."
JEWSBURY and BROWN'S Exquisite Compound,
THE ORIENTAL TOOTH-PASTE.
The celebrated original and only genuine Oriental Tooth-Paste is signed "JEWSBURY and BROWN, Manchester. Established 50 years." PEARLY WHITE and SOUND TEETH, a healthy action of the gums, producing that firmness and rosy brightness of colour so essential to beauty, and fragrant breath, are all insured by the use of this most perfect Dentifrice. Pots, 1s. 6d.; double, 2s. 6d. All Perfumers and Chemists.

EXTRAORDINARY TESTIMONIAL. "For 30 years I have tried all the various soaps that have been recommended; and I candidly state that the ALBION MILK and SULPHUR SOAP has no equal in soothing the irritation of the skin."—J. M'Grigor Croft, M.D., M.R.C.P., late Staff Surgeon to her Majesty's Royal Army Hospitals, May 1, 1880. N.B.—Dr. Croft has great pleasure in sending, unasked, his opinion of the Albion Milk and Sulphur Soap.—By all Chemists, in Tablets, 9d. and 1s. Chief Dépôt, 532, Oxford-street London.

ALLEN AND HANBURYS'
"PERFECTED" COD-LIVER OIL
is free from disagreeable taste and smell, and causes no nausea, or after-taste. Of all Chemists, in capsuled bottles only.

IMPORTANT NOTICE,
Please direct all Letters and Orders for
PETER ROBINSON,
SILKMERCER AND LINENDRAPER,
TO THE ONLY ADDRESS,
103 to 108, OXFORD-STREET,
LONDON, W.
(where the Business was Established in 1833).
CASH PRICES. PARCELS FREE.

SILKS, SATINS, VELVET, and PLUSHES.—NOW ON SALE.
All Patterns free.
The entire Manufacturer's Stock, comprising Rich BROCADED SILKS, in every variety, for the fashionable Combination Dresses.

3s. 6d.;	usual price 5s. 6d.	In all the New Autumn Shades and Mixtures of Old Gold, &c.
4s. 6d.;	,, 6s. 6d.	In delicate Tints for Evening and Dinner Wear.
5s. 6d.;	,, 7s. 6d.
6s. 6d.;	,, 8s. 9d.	In White Ivory and Cream for Bridal Wear; also in Black.

RICH VELVET BROCADES.

5s. 11d.;	usual price 8s. 9d.	In splendid variety of new Autumn Shades and Mixtures for making up with Silks, Satins, or other fabrics.
6s. 11d.;	,, 9s. 6d.
7s. 6d.;	,, 10s. 9d.

BLACK VELVET BROCADES, in very handsome designs for dresses and manties, much under price—7s. 6d. to 21s.
400 pieces COLOURED SATIN STRIPED VELVETS—3s. 9d.; usual price 5s. 6d., in every shade.
ITALIAN SILK VELVETS—4s. 11d., 6s. 9d., 8s. 9d., in every possible shade.
BLACK LYONS SILK VELVETS—9s. 6d. to 21s., 11s. 9d. to 16s. 9d., in all new shades.
The New DRESS and MANTLE PLUSH, in black and all new colours—7s. 6d. to 10s. 9d.
LYONS DRESS SILKS, in every possible shade of colour—2s. 11d., 3s. 6d., 4s. 6d., 5s. 11d.; worth 7s. 11d., extra double wide.
Rich DUCHESSE SATIN, in black and all the new shades—5s. 3d., exceptional, 23 in. wide.
SILK-FACED and SILK SATINS, in all shades—2s. 11d. to 7s. 11d.

BLACK SILKS, SPECIAL.
200 Pieces Lyons Gros Grain—2s. 11½d., wear guaranteed.
400 Pieces of the best make in pure Lyons Silks—3s. 6d. to 4s. 11d.; 5s. 11d., usual price 7s. 11d., extra rich; 6s. 11d., usual price 8s. 11d.; 7s. 11d., usual price 10s. 6d.
The Satin Merveilleux, very soft and bright—5s. 6d., wear guaranteed.
Black Silk-faced Satins—1s. 9½d. to 2s. 11d.
New Dress Satins, very bright—3s. 3½d. to 6s. 11d.
12 Pieces All-Silk Satin Duchesse, extra wide—9s. 6d., worth double. Specially recommended.
300 Pieces of Black Satin de Lyons—4s. 6d. to 5s. 3d.

RICH VELVET VELVETEENS.
Black, White, and all the New Colours,
in Plain, Striped, and Embossed,
1s. 11d. to 4s. 9d. per yard.
Also, the New Black, as advertised, very wide, 2s. 11d. to 5s. 6d. per yard.
Patterns free.

AUTUMN and WINTER DRESSES.
NEW MATERIALS in NEW COLOURS, suitable for the present and APPROACHING SEASON. Casimir d'Italie, Grain de Poudie, Cashmire de la Reine, Angola Foulé, &c. All pure Wool, and dyed by the most eminent Paris dyers, in black and every new colour.
Prices from 14s. 6d. to 25s. the Full Dress.
Also in Black and the same colours, several thousand pieces of Cashmere and Cashmere Merinos, very wide,
2s. 2d. to 3s. 6d. the yard.
Estamene, Witney, Devonshire, and other all-wool Serges, in Navy, Dark Brown, Prime Bronze Black, &c.,
from 1s. to 2s. 9d. the yard.
Patterns of all the above free. Cash prices. Parcels free.
PETER ROBINSON, 103 to 108,
OXFORD-STREET, W.

THE GLOVE STOCKS of L. T. PIVER,
of 160, REGENT-STREET,
and
H. ORGER, of 152, REGENT-STREET,
Bought for cash at large discounts,
are NOW on SALE
at little more than Half Price, at
PETER ROBINSON'S, OXFORD-STREET.

"LOUIS"
IN ALL THE NEWEST AND MOST FASHIONABLE COLOURS.

"THE QUEEN" of Sept. 11, 1880, says:—
"As this is to be a velvet season, it may be as well to point out some eminently novel features in
LOUIS VELVETEEN,
now an established favourite for Dresses. The REDS are particularly rich; indeed, so are the many PLUMS and PRUNES, and we have also OLD GOLD (no less than four shades), PEACH, PORCELAIN BLUE, and many DARK GREENS of the WILLOW and MYRTLE tones. The pile, which is both erect and fine, is asserted to be permanently fast.
"LOUIS."

LE FOLLET says:—
"The Louis Velveteen is a very close and admirably wearing material, with a lustrous silky surface, draping richly and softly, and the brilliant blue light on the folds cannot be surpassed by the best silk velvet. For every purpose to which black velvet can be applied, we can recommend the Louis Velveteen; and a dress of this material would be a most elegant and useful addition to any lady's wardrobe, successfully representing, as it does, a silk velvet at more than four times the cost."
"LOUIS."

THE ENGLISHWOMAN'S DOMESTIC MAGAZINE says:—"This Velveteen costs no more than ordinary velveteen, and is worth at least double, so that purchasers should be sure that it is the Louis Velveteen that they get. It is stamped with the words 'LOUIS VELVETEEN' upon every yard of the fabric."
"LOUIS."
Ladies are respectfully informed that on and after this date all Louis Velveteen, both Black and the New Autumn and Winter Colours, have stamped on the back plain instructions for removing all creases, folding-marks, &c., made in conveyance by rail, post, or other causes.

WHOLESALE AGENTS,
who will send on inquiry, post-free, the names of the nearest Drapers from whom the genuine "LOUIS" VELVETEEN can be obtained:—
"LOUIS." J. H. FULLER, 92, Watling-street, London, E.C.
JOHN FREEMAN, 20, Wicklow-street, Dublin.
WILLIAM FIFE, 52, Glassford-street, Glasgow.

"THE AMARANT VELVETEEN"
supersedes all others for durability and silk-like appearance.
Is not Spotted by RAIN, nor Injured by HEAT.
It is of PERFECT MANUFACTURE and PATENTED FINISH
Unfading in Colour, Unequalled in Value, Firm in Pile.
To be had in all Colours and Prices.
Ask for it, and see that the word "AMARANT" is stamped in GOLD on the FACE SELVAGES.
Patterns and Show Cards supplied to the Trade.
RAWSON BROTHERS, Sole Agents,
2, Blue Boar-court, Friday-street, London, E.C.

INDIAN EMBROIDERY of the most Elegant and Fashionable Designs—viz., Christening Robes, 21s. and 42s. each; Ladies' Handkerchiefs, 35s. and 45s. the half dozen; Babies' Bibs, 20s. the dozen; Children's Frocks, 15s. each; Petticoats, large size, 28s. each; Ladies' Neckties, 28s. the dozen; Children's Capes, 12s. 6d. each; Narrow Edging, 1s. per yard; Ditto, Wide, 3s. 6d. per yard. The above sent post-free to any address in Great Britain, the United States and Canada. Remittances to be crossed "Agra Bank," and made payable to J. KENYON and CO., 19, Strand, Calcutta, East Indies.

WINTER DRESSES—THE BEST VALUE IN LONDON.—Vicuna Foule Serges, the Fashionable Material for the Season. Price, 8½d. per yard. Patterns free.
JOHN HOOPER, 52, Oxford-street, W.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by GEORGE C. LEIGHTON, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1880.

Digitized by Google

THE QUEEN IN THE HIGHLANDS

FALLS OF THE GLASSALT.

Digitized by Google

THE QUEEN IN THE HIGHLANDS.

The favourite summer and autumn residence of her Majesty at Balmoral, in Aberdeenshire, has often been described. But the volume published in 1868, entitled "Leaves from the Journal of Our Life in the Highlands," edited by the late Sir Arthur Helps, contains her own unstudied records, in their original freshness, of the impressions that she received in her first acquaintance with Scottish mountain scenery, of her kindly intercourse with rural neighbours of high and low degree, and of the happy domestic life there enjoyed by herself and the Prince Consort, year after year, till his lamented death at the end of 1861. We cannot do better now than again resort to those pages, for their artless descriptions of several places around Balmoral, which form the subjects of our Illustrations in this week's Number of our Journal. Some views of Braemar, which is the upper part of the valley of the Dee, a few miles above Balmoral to the westward, have lately appeared in the Illustrated London News; and a general account of that district was given, in connection with the visits of the Prince of Wales to Invercauld and to Mar Lodge, as guest of Colonel Farquharson and of the Earl of Fife.

The situation both of Balmoral Castle and of Abergeldie Castle, his Royal Highness's own residence, near the village of Crathie, on the banks of the Dee some miles above Ballater, which is the nearest railway station to come from Aberdeen, was also noted. One of the present Illustrations shows her Majesty passing through Ballater, which is a village much improved of late years by the accession of fashionable tourists, but which has long been esteemed for its salubrity and its vicinity to many picturesque and romantic spots. It has also the mineral spa of Pannanich, with some medicinal virtue.

It was in this neighbourhood, at the farmhouse of Ballaterach, that George Gordon, Lord Byron, sojourned in early boyhood, when he fancied himself a Scottish Highlander, wearing as he did the bonnet and plaid, while he freely imbibed, like Sir Walter Scott, the predilection for that country, its scenery, and its historic and poetic associations, that is expressed by some of his juvenile efforts in verse—

> Away, ye gay landscapes, ye gardens of roses!
> In you let the minions of luxury rove;
> Restore me the rocks, where the snowflake reposes,
> Though still they are sacred to freedom and love.
> Yet, Caledonia, beloved are thy mountains,
> Round their high summits though elements war;
> Though cataracts foam, 'stead of smooth-flowing fountains,
> I sigh for the valley of dark Loch-na-gar."

This is not first-rate poetry; it is by no means equal to much in "Childe Harold," and in Byron's Greek, Oriental, and Italian romances; but we heartily wish that he had continued, with Sir Walter Scott, to bestow his imaginative affections upon British themes, not, indeed, as a Scotchman, but as an Englishman; and that he had been content to live in his own country, and to write of her native story, or upon subjects of English life and character.

Ballater, with the opposite hill of Craigandarroch, and the Morven range extending to the north, closes the lower end of Glen Muich, a wide and long valley that runs up ten or twelve miles into the Grampians, in a south-west direction, winding round the back of the detached Lochnagar group of mountains. In this valley are the fine mansion of Mr. J. T. Mackenzie, Glen Muich House, also lately visited by the Prince of Wales, and the Birkhall domain, which has been occupied by his Royal Highness for a sporting preserve. Nine miles up the glen is Loch Muich, which is a rather large piece of water, sombre, and inclosed by precipices. Above this is another lake, the Dhu Loch, with sheer granite walls around it; beyond which there is a rugged path, behind the Cairn of Corbreach and Cairn Taggart, leading westward to Loch Callater, whence another long glen descends to Castleton of Braemar.

This circuit of the entire Lochnagar mountain district, returning again to Deeside, used to be a favourite excursion of her Majesty and the Prince Consort, who made a small lodge, in 1849, at Alt-na-Giuthasach, on the shore of Loch Muich, which is about half-way round. We may now quote some passages of the Queen's Journal, in which these places are mentioned:—

"Alt-na-Giuthasach, Sept. 16, 1852.

"We breakfasted with Miss Seymour; and, after writing and reading, we started at a quarter to eleven with her and our Highland party. The day was not cold, and would, in fact have been very fine, if it had not been for a constant succession of very slight showers, or clouds coming down. We walked along the loch, the road up to which is excellent. It has been widened, and would admit of a carriage.

"We arrived at the Alt-na-Dearg, a small burn and fall, which is very fine and rapid. Up this a winding path has been made, upon which we rode, though some paths are rather steep for riding. The burn falls over red granite; and in the ravine grow birch, mountain ash, and alder.

"We got off, and walked a good long way on the top of the very steep hills overhanging the loch, to the Stron, and the Moss of Monelpie, whence you overlook all the country belonging to Lord Panmure, Mount Keen, the Ogilvie Hills, &c. Here I suddenly missed my watch, which the dear old Duke had given me; and, not being certain whether I had put it on or not, I asked Mackenzie—one of our keepers, and a very good man, who lives at Alt-na-Giuthasach—to go back and inquire.

"We walked on, until we reached the higher part of the Glassalt, which we stepped across. We had passed over the tops of these hills on that expedition to the Dhu Loch, three years ago, when the ground was so soft that ponies could scarcely get along, the roads were so very bad.

"Then we began the descent of the Glassalt, along which another path has been admirably made. From here it is quite beautiful, so wild and grand. The Falls are equal to those of the Bruar at Blair, and are 150 ft. in height; the whole height to the foot of the loch being 500 ft. It looked very picturesque to see the ponies, and the Highlanders, winding along. We came down to the Shiel of the Glassalt, lately built, where there is a charming room for us, commanding a most lovely view. Here we took the cold luncheon, which we had brought with us; and after that we mounted our ponies, and rode to the Dhu Loch, along a beautiful path which keeps well above the burn, that rushes along over flat great slabs of stone. The scenery is exquisite. We passed a small fall called the Burn of the Spullan (spout). In half or three quarters of an hour, we were at the wild and picturesque Dhu Loch.

"We got off our ponies, and I had just sat down to sketch, when Mackenzie returned, saying my watch was safe at home, and bringing letters. Amongst them, there was one from Lord Derby, which I tore open, and, alas! it contained the fatal news, that England's, or rather Britain's pride, her glory, her hero, the greatest man she ever had produced, was no more! Sad day! Great and irreparable national loss!

"Lord Derby inclosed a few lines from Lord Charles Wellesley, saying that his dear great father had died on Tuesday at three o'clock, after a few hours' illness and no suffering. God's will be done! The day must have come; the Duke was eighty-three. But what a loss! One cannot think of this country without 'the Duke'—our immortal hero! His position was the highest a subject ever had—above party—looked up to by all—revered by the whole nation—the friend of the Sovereign; and how simply he carried these honours! With what singleness of purpose, what straightforwardness, what courage, were all the motives of his actions guided! The Crown never possessed—and I fear, never will—so devoted, loyal, and faithful a subject, so stanch a supporter.

"We hastened down on foot to the head of Loch Muich, and then rode home, in a heavy shower, to Alt-na-Giuthasach. Our whole enjoyment was spoilt; a gloom overhung all of us. We wrote to Lord Derby and Lord Charles Wellesley."

This memorable and most touching incident, related by her Majesty with characteristic sincerity and depth of feeling, gives additional interest to our View of the Falls of the Glassalt, which is copied from one of the Balmoral series of photographs taken by Mr. G. W. Wilson, of Aberdeen. A Sketch taken the other day by our Special Artist represents the Queen at Loch Callater, accompanied by the Grand Duke of Hesse, Princess Beatrice, and one of her Majesty's grandsons, the son of the Grand Duke of Hesse, a boy nearly twelve years old. Behind the Royal party is Mr. John Brown, her Majesty's faithful attendant in all outdoor excursions. Loch Callater is situated to the south-west of the group of mountains comprising Lochnagar, Cairn Taggart, and the Cairn of Cornbreach, which rise immediately south of Balmoral Forest, and by which Glen Muich is separated from Glen Callater and the vale of the Cluny. We will again quote part of her Majesty's "Journal of our Life in the Highlands," for her account of the last excursion here which she and her husband were permitted to enjoy together, accompanied by two of her daughters. One of these, "Lenchen," is Princess Helena, now the wife of Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein. The other was the beloved and lamented Princess Alice, who was then engaged to be married to Prince Louis of Hesse, now Grand Duke. There is a mournful interest, now, in reflecting that two of the Queen's nearest and dearest, who were with her on that occasion—but two months before the Prince Consort died—have passed away from earth; and it is with respectful sympathy that we now transcribe what she wrote in her private journal that day:—

"Wednesday, Oct. 16, 1861.

"To our great satisfaction, it was a most beautiful morning. Not a cloud was in the bright blue sky, and it was perfectly calm. There had been a sharp frost which lay on parts of the grass, and the mountains were beautifully lit up, with those very blue shades upon them, like the bloom of a plum. Up early, and breakfasted with Alice, Louis, and Lenchen, in our room. At twenty minutes to nine o'clock we started, with Alice, Lenchen, and Louis.

"The morning was beyond everything splendid, and the country in such beauty, though the poor trees are nearly leafless. Near Castleton, and indeed all along the road, in the shade, the frost lay, and the air was very sharp. We took post-horses at Castleton, and proceeded up Glen Cluny to Glen Callater, which looked lovely, and which Albert admired much.

"In a little more than two hours, we were at Loch Callater. The road was very bad indeed, as we approached the loch, where our ponies were waiting for us. After walking a few paces, we mounted them, I on my good 'Fyvie,' and Alice on 'Inchrory.'

"The day was glorious, and the whole expedition delightful and very easily performed. We ascended Little Cairn Turc, on the north side of Loch Callater, up a sort of footpath, very easy and even, upon ground that was almost flat, rising very gradually, but imperceptibly; and the view became wonderfully extensive. The top of Cairn Turc is quite flat, with moss and grass, so that you could drive upon it. It is very high; for you see the high table-land behind the highest point of Lochnagar. On that side you have no view, but from the other it is wonderfully extensive. It was so clear and bright, and so still there, reminding us of the day on Ben Muich Dhui last year.

"There rose, immediately behind us, Ben Muich Dhui, which you hardly ever see, and the shape of which is not fine; with its surrounding mountains of Cairngorm, Brae Riach, Ben Avon or A'an, Ben-na-Bhourd, &c. We saw Ben-y-Ghlo quite clearly, and all that range of hills; then, further west, Shichallion, near Loch Tay; the mountains which are near the Black Mount; and, quite on the horizon, we could discern Ben Nevis, which is above Fort William.

"Going up Cairn Turc, we looked down upon Loch Canter, a small loch above Loch Callater, very wild and dark. We proceeded to Cairn Glaishie, at the extreme point of which a cairn has been erected. We got off, to take a look at the wonderful panorama which lay stretched out before us. We looked on Fifeshire, and the country between Perth and Stirling, the Lomond Hills, &c. It was beautifully clear, and really it was most interesting to look over such an immense extent of the Highlands. . . . I give a very poor description of it, my head is so very ungeographical. I can not 'mind' the names, as they say here. . . . But here follows the account of our route, with all the names as written down by Duncan. . . . It gave me a very good idea of the geography of the country, which delighted dear Albert, as this expedition was quite in a different direction from any that we had ever made before."

Her Majesty further relates how they rode on to the edge of Cairn Lochan, and got another "bonnie" view on the south side of the Grampians, looking down to Glen Isla, beyond which they saw the Lomond Hills, above Kinross and Loch Leven.

"We sat on a very precipitous place, which made one dread any one moving backwards; and here, a little before two o'clock, we lunched. The luncheon was very acceptable, for the air was extremely keen, and we found ice thicker than a shilling on the top of Cairn Turc, which did not melt when Brown took it and kept it in his hand. Helena was so delighted, for this was the only really great expedition in which she had accompanied us. Duncan and the keeper at Loch Callater, R. Stewart, went with us as guides. I made some hasty sketches; and then Albert wrote on a bit of paper that we had lunched there, put it into the Seltzer-water bottle, and buried it there, or rather stuck it into the ground. Grant had done the same when we visited Ben Muich Dhui the first time. This over, we walked part of the way back, which we had ridden to avoid the bogs, we ladies walking only a short way, and then riding. We altered our course, and left Cairn Glaishie to our right, and went in the direction of the Cairn Wall.

"Looking back on the distant hills, above Glen Isla and Cairn Lochan (Lord Airlie's country), it was even more beautiful, for, as the day advanced, the mountains became clearer and clearer, of a lovely blue, while the valleys were in shadow. Shichallion, and those further ranges, were also most perfectly to be seen, and gave me such a longing for further Highland expeditions!

"We went over Garbchory, looking down on the road to the Spittal, and on the lower mountains, which are most curiously connected with one another, and which, from the height we were, we could look down upon. We came down by the Month Eigie, a steep hill covered with grass, down part of which I rode, walking where it was steepest; but it was so wet and slippery that I had two falls. We got down to the road to the Spittal Bridge, about fifteen miles from Castleton, at nearly half-past four; and then down along the new road, at least that part of it which is finished, and which is to extend to the Cairn Wall.

"We went back on our side of the river; and if we had been a little earlier, Albert might have got a stag, but it was too late. The moon rose, and shone most beautifully; and we returned at twenty minutes to seven o'clock, much pleased and interested with this delightful expedition. Alas! I fear, our last great one!

"IT WAS OUR LAST ONE!—1867."

This is the Queen's remark, entered six years afterwards in her journal of 1861, and every one of us, who read it in print, will understand and sympathise with her feelings.

The sketches we present in another page are of minor interest, except that of the little Scottish Presbyterian Kirk, the parish church in the village of Crathie, at which the Queen and family constantly attend Divine worship. The ruins of the old church, and the adjacent graveyard, are shown in another Sketch. Her Majesty writes as follows, on Sunday, Oct. 29, 1854:—

"We went to Kirk, as usual, at twelve o'clock. The service was performed by the Rev. Norman M'Leod, of Glasgow, son of Dr. M'Leod, and anything finer I never heard. The sermon, entirely extempore, was quite admirable; so simple, and yet so eloquent, and so beautifully argued and put. The text was from the account of the coming of Nicodemus to Christ by night; St. John, chapter 3. Mr. M'Leod showed in the sermon how we all tried to please self, and live for that, and in so doing found no rest. Christ had come not only to die for us, but to show us how we were to live. The second prayer was very touching; his allusions to us were so simple, saying, after his mention of us, 'bless their children.' It gave me a lump in my throat, as also when he prayed for 'the dying, the wounded, the widows, and the orphans.' Everyone came back delighted; and how satisfactory it is to come back from church with such feelings! The servants, and the Highlanders, all, were equally delighted."

It is hardly needful to speak of the subjects of the other small Sketches around Balmoral. The private road leading to Balmoral Castle is usually watched by police, because "tramps" have been apt to mistake it for the high road to Braemar. Not very far along that road is the Lochnagar Distillery, which has the repute of manufacturing excellent Scotch whisky. It uses water from the purest mountain stream. The queer specimen of a Highland cheese-press is an object of antiquarian curiosity belonging to this district.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

SPAIN.

The Minister of Justice has informed the Papal Nuncio that the Government has determined to expel from Spanish territory any priests who introduce political subjects into their sermons.

It having come to the ears of the authorities that some bands of brigands in the mountains of Toledo were preparing for another attack upon the Andalusian mail, a force was sent to the neighbourhood, who surprised the brigands, killed five, including the chief, and dispersed the remainder.

ITALY.

The Minister of Commerce has sent a circular informing the Chambers of Commerce of the International Exhibition to be held next June at the Crystal Palace, and bidding them make it known. As, however, a similar exhibition will be held simultaneously at Milan, the Minister warns the Chambers to provide against damaging the national one.

The third congress of representatives of popular banks was opened on Sunday at Bologna. The Abbé Louis d'Amgero, the promoter of popular banks in France, was present.

The new harbour works at Barletta were formally opened on Sunday by Signor Baccarini, the Minister of Public Works; who subsequently unveiled a monument erected in memory of the Chevalier Massimo d'Azeglio, the Italian painter, writer, and statesman, who took a prominent part in the restoration of Italian unity.

GERMANY—THE COLOGNE FETES.

Yesterday week the city of Cologne celebrated with great pomp the completion of the old Cathedral, of which we gave illustrations in our last issue. The Emperor William, the Empress, and a large number of Princes and dignitaries of the German empire, took part in the proceedings, the most notable absentees being the King of Bavaria, the King of Wurtemberg, and Prince Bismarck. The Royal party arrived in the town from Brühl at nine o'clock in the morning, and after attending Divine service in the Protestant church went to the cathedral, where a Te Deum was sung. In reply to an address from the clergy, the Emperor said:—"Receive my best thanks for the good wishes expressed for myself, the Empress my wife, and my family, and rest assured that on this day, so joyfully greeted by the whole nation, as has always been the case, my chief efforts and prayer will be for the maintenance of an unclouded peace throughout the empire." At the conclusion of the Te Deum the Imperial party came out from the south door of the cathedral into the Dom Platz, which had been encompassed with large galleries for privileged spectators, and which was the principal scene of the ceremony of inauguration. The Emperor had an enthusiastic reception from the assembled multitude. The formal ceremony began with the reading of the deed referring to the finishing of the building of the cathedral. The Emperor then sat at a table in front of the pavilion and signed the document, and after him the Empress, and next the reigning Princes and Princesses, the Crown Princes and Crown Princesses, the high personages of their suites, the chief architect, and others. The Emperor congratulated the nation on the completion of the edifice, the chief architect and the president of the Dombauverein made long speeches in reply, and the Imperial standard was hoisted on the tower; the deed was slipped into its receptacle under the kreuzblume, and the ceremony was completed at half-past one, amid the roar of cannon and the clang of the bells. At night the city was brilliantly illuminated, even in the most remote and smallest streets, and a very striking effect was, it is stated, produced by the illumination of the cathedral with the electric light.

The festivities were continued on Saturday, when a grand historical procession was witnessed from the Imperial Pavilion by the Emperor, Empress, and a large number of the Princes and Princesses of the various German States. In the evening a banquet was given by the municipality, at which the Crown Prince presided, and after referring to the completion of the cathedral as "a sign of German industry and German perseverance, worthy of the time which has given to our people the unity they ardently longed for," added, "May it be and remain an emblem of German fidelity and unity! May it endure to the remotest time, a German work tending to the edification of a great and happy people, united together in the bonds of peace!"

Digitized by Google

The Emperor has conferred decorations upon several gentlemen in connection with the inauguration of the Cathedral; among the persons so honoured being Herr Voigtel, the architect.

AUSTRIA-HUNGARY.

The Emperor of Austria arrived on Sunday afternoon at Teschen, in Silesia, and was received by the Archduke Albrecht, whose property is situated there, and by the authorities. At night there were illuminations. A Daily News telegram from Pesth says that the Emperor's journey from Gödöllö to Silesia was a series of enthusiastic receptions. Crowds of people from every adjacent town and village on the route swarmed to greet him, and the stations were lavishly embellished with triumphal arches and flowers.

The first sitting of the Austrian Delegation was held at Pesth on Tuesday. Count Coronini was elected President. Upon assuming office he made a speech expressing his satisfaction that peace had been preserved, and that the Austrian Minister for Foreign Affairs, responding to the wishes of the people and the historical mission of the monarchy, had always advocated the maintenance of peace. Count Czartorisky was elected Vice-President. The Government subsequently submitted various bills for Austria and Hungary.

On the same day the Hungarian Delegation met at Pesth, and elected M. Ludwig Tisza President, and Cardinal Haynald Vice-President. M. Tisza in his opening speech emphasised the necessity of affording the means of maintaining the position of the monarchy amongst other Powers to the utmost limit of possibility.

RUSSIA.

The morganatic marriage of the Czar with the Princess Dolgorouki is a moot point. According to one report, it took place on Aug. 13, Old Style—another rumour fixing it on July 19, Old Style—in the chapel of the Imperial Palace, St. Petersburg; while the Berlin correspondent of the Morning Post says that the report of the marriage having been already solemnised in church turns out to be incorrect, but that it will shortly take place.

The Czarewitch and Czarevna, with their children and General Loris Melikoff, Minister of the Interior, left St. Petersburg last Saturday for Livadia.

The semi-official Bereg of Saturday states that General Loris Melikoff has informed Baron Korff, the Mayor of St. Petersburg, that he may now abolish the system instituted by General Gourko whereby all householders were compelled to station doorkeepers as watchmen outside their houses both day and night, but that it will be necessary to increase the police.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Daily News telegraphs that the Tekke Turcomans have again assumed the offensive against the Russians, and during the last fortnight have been making energetic attacks along the whole line from Krasnovodsk and Tchikislar to Bami.

GREECE.

The King and Queen arrived at Athens on Sunday, having been detained two days by stormy weather at Corfu. They had an enthusiastic reception on landing, and the Acropolis and the hills round Athens, as well as all the principal streets of the town, were brilliantly illuminated.

The Athens correspondent of the Standard asserts that the Greek Government is about to address a Note to the Powers threatening to seize the provinces whose cession to her has been recommended by the Powers, in the event of the Greek Question not being settled within a certain time.

AMERICA.

General Grant has blossomed into speech. He arrived at Boston on the 12th inst. Large crowds assembled at all the railway stations en route, and gave him an enthusiastic reception. An imposing torchlight procession passed in review before the General in the evening. Addressing the Merchants' Association in that city on the 13th, he described Mexico as a most promising field for American commercial enterprise, which would benefit both nations. The Mexicans desired it, but feared American aggression. General Grant proceeded to say that he told the Mexicans when in their country that Americans wanted no territory they had to filibuster for, and that if ever they acquired territory, it would be with the consent of the inhabitants. The General was subsequently entertained at a banquet given in his honour by the Middlesex Club, Governor Rice presiding on the occasion, and being supported by the Governors of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, and Rhode Island, and the leading men of New England. The guest of the evening was welcomed with great enthusiam, and, in reply to the toast of his health, said that he returned to his native country a better American than when he left it. He believed that the United States were materially and politically in advance of the rest of the world, and would furnish a good example, the influence of which would sooner or later be felt by other nations.

General Garfield, the Republican candidate for the Presidency, at a reception given by him to 500 Germans, expressed a hope that all German immigrants to America would make the country their home and give to its institutions the strength which originally planted liberty in England.

The Republican National Committee has issued an address urging the members of the party not to relax their efforts, and predicting a complete victory at the Presidential election, with Republican majorities in both Houses of Congress.

The National Democratic Committee in their address denounce the means by which the Republican party carried the Indiana and Ohio States elections.

Mr. Sherman, Secretary of the Treasury, delivered a speech at a large meeting in Chicago, in which he argued that the triumph of Democracy would be the victory of State rights, and that every interest of the country required the continuance of the Republican party in power.

General Hancock, the Democratic candidate for the Presidency, has written a letter explaining his views on Protection, and expressing full sympathy with the American industries. All parties, he says, agree that the best way to raise money for the revenue is to a great extent by means of the tariff; therefore all talk about Free Trade is folly.

During a Democratic parade at Wilmington, Delaware, on Saturday night, the procession was fired upon by blacks from a housetop, and six persons were seriously wounded. The fire was returned, and the Democrats ransacked the house from which the shots were fired, and wounded several persons.

The Oregon State Legislature has passed an amendment of the Constitution in favour of woman suffrage.

The Vermont States Legislature has re-elected Mr. Edmunds as their representative in the United States Senate.

CANADA.

The Marquis of Lorne opened the Southern Counties Fair, at St. Thomas, Canada, on the 29th ult. His Excellency was presented with an address from the County Council of Elgin, and in it reference was made to the great agricultural resources of the district and to the efforts which had been put forth by his Excellency to promote the interests of the agricultural classes. The Governor-General, in reply, said that under any circumstances which could possibly be brought about English farmers would have some advantages over the Canadians in supplying their own markets, but he urged them to use every care in carrying on their work, and to endeavour, by purchasing the best breeds of live stock and farming their land intelligently, to increase their own wealth and that of the country generally. He further expressed the opinion that the evidence given before the Canadian Agricultural Commission by Mr. Richard Hall, cattle salesman, of Liverpool, should be printed and circulated as widely as possible all over the country.

SOUTH AFRICA.

A Reuter's telegram from Cape Town of Monday's date says:—Colonel Carrington destroyed the enemy's position at Mafeteng during the night of the 15th inst. The colonial forces subsequently had an engagement with a body of the insurgent Basutos, about 1000 strong, and completely defeated them.

INDIA.

According to a telegram received by the Viceroy from the Chief Commissioner, Moulmain, nothing has occurred on the frontier of Burmah.

The Viceroy states that all was quiet in Candahar and the neighbourhood to the date of the 16th. There was a report of disturbances at Mazar-i-Sharif. Caravans were arriving from Herat.

The Standard's correspondent at Candahar telegraphs that Mr. Lyall has received orders to come on there immediately. It is proposed to march up three Bengal regiments to take the place of three Bombay regiments. The news, the correspondent says, has created quite a sensation. He adds:—"It is probable that Candahar will be handed over to Abdur Rahman, the Wali being appointed by the latter to act as his governor of the place. The British will occupy it until Abdur Rahman is in a position to take it over."

Cardinal Nina has resigned his post as Papal Secretary of State, on account of failing health.

The Berlin correspondent of the Standard says that, thanks to German mediation, the Loo-Choo difference between China and Japan is on the point of being arranged.

Evan Johnson, the sole survivor of the crew of the Norwegian barque Alma, which foundered on the 5th inst., was picked up from a raft at sea four days later, and taken by a steamer to Malta.

A storm in Egypt brought down such torrents of water from the mountains that a large gap was made in the embankment of the Government railway in the neighbourhood of Suez, suspending the traffic for a few days.

After the close of the St. Lawrence navigation, next month, the Allan mail-steamers are to run to Boston, calling at Halifax to land the Canadian mails. The first sailing under the new arrangements will be the Polynesian on Nov. 11, and a steamer will be dispatched every Thursday thereafter.

A fire has occurred at Christiansand, a seaport in Norway, two thirds of the town having been destroyed and some hundreds of families rendered homeless. The fine Gothic Cathedral, which as an ecclesiastical edifice ranked second only to that of Drontheim, has been destroyed.

The Copenhagen correspondent of the Standard telegraphs that at a general meeting of the shareholders of the Zealand Railways the purchase by the State of these lines was voted by a large majority. The total length of the lines is about 210 miles, and the shares represent a capital of nearly two million pounds sterling.

A fearful snowstorm has visited the province of Buenos Ayres, lasting from Sept. 18 to Sept. 20. During the whole of three nights and three days the storm raged, and it is reported that during that time seven hundred thousand cows, five hundred thousand sheep, and two hundred and fifty thousand horses, were killed.

The City Press states that the Lord Mayor's procession of Nov. 9 will take the following route:—Down King-street, Cheapside, and old Jewry, into Coleman-street, Fore-street to Finsbury-pavement, down South-place and Eldon-street to Blomfield-street, round three sides of Finsbury-circus into Moorgate-street, thence to Prince's-street, Threadneedle-street, to Bishopsgate-street, down Cornhill; Queen Victoria-street, Cannon-street, St. Paul's-churchyard, Ludgate-hill, and Fleet-street, to the Strand, and thence on to Charing-cross, Whitehall, and Palace-yard, to Westminster-hall. The return journey will be by way of the Victoria-embankment, Queen Victoria-street, Queen-street, King-street, and Cheapside.

The annual meeting of the Yorkshire Association of Medical Officers of Health was held at Sheffield on Tuesday. There was in connection with the meeting an exhibition of sanitary appliances and other objects of special interest to members. The general meeting of members was held at the council-hall, over which Mr. S. W. North presided. The report stated that during the year they had lost their secretary, Dr. Barry, who had accepted the appointment of Chief Sanitary Officer in Cyprus; and Dr. Wilson, of Doncaster, was recommended as his successor. The society now numbers sixty-seven members, and an earnest desire was expressed that the association should include the entire body of medical officers of health throughout the country. Mr. North was re-elected president; Dr. Scott and Dr. Drew, vice-presidents; Dr. Wilson, hon. sec.; and a committee. The report was adopted. Dr. Hime, medical officer of health, read a paper on the recent outbreak of diarrhœa in Sheffield; and Dr. Drew, of Chapeltown, on Sanitation in Utopia. The members subsequently dined together.

Last week 5955 births and 3629 deaths were registered in London and twenty-two other large towns of the United Kingdom. The mortality from all causes was at the average rate of 22 deaths annually in every 1000 persons living. The annual death-rate was 27 per 1000 in Edinburgh, 21 in Glasgow, and 33 in Dublin. In London 2606 births and 1405 deaths were registered. Allowing for increase of population, the births exceeded by 128, whereas the deaths were 19 below, the average numbers in the corresponding week of the last ten years. The deaths included 6 from smallpox, 20 from measles, 70 from scarlet fever, 8 from diphtheria, 17 from whooping-cough, 27 from different forms of fever, and 66 from diarrhœa; thus to the seven principal diseases of the zymotic class 214 deaths were referred, against 232 and 207 in the two preceding weeks. These 214 deaths were 28 below the corrected average number from the same diseases in the corresponding week of the last ten years. The deaths referred to diseases of the respiratory organs, which had increased from 124 to 266 in the five preceding weeks, further rose to 273 last week, and exceeded the corrected weekly average by 31: of these 164 were attributed to bronchitis and 68 to pneumonia. The death of a child, aged six years, in the London Hospital on the 8th inst., was referred to hydrophobia from the bite of a dog. Different forms of violence caused 43 deaths: 37 were the result of negligence or accident, including 17 from fractures and contusions, 3 from burns and scalds, 2 from drowning, and 7 of infants under one year of age from suffocation.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will (dated June 24, 1871) with four codicils (dated Nov. 14, 1871; May 13, 1874; May 9, 1876; and Nov. 16, 1877) of the Right Hon. Anne Florence, Dowager Countess Cowper, late of Wrest Park, Bedfordshire, and of No. 4, St. James's-square, who died on July 23 last, was proved on the 12th inst. by the Right Hon. Francis Thomas de Grey, Earl Cowper, K.G., the son, the sole executor, the personal estate being sworn under £80,000. The testatrix leaves to her second son, the Hon. Henry Frederick Cowper, any arrears of rent due from the estate in Craven, West Riding of Yorkshire, left to her for life by her father, Earl de Grey, with remainder to her said second son, together with any property she may have bought as an addition to the said estate; and considerable provision is made for her daughters, Lady Florence Herbert and Lady Amabel Kerr. The residue of her property she gives to her son, Earl Cowper.

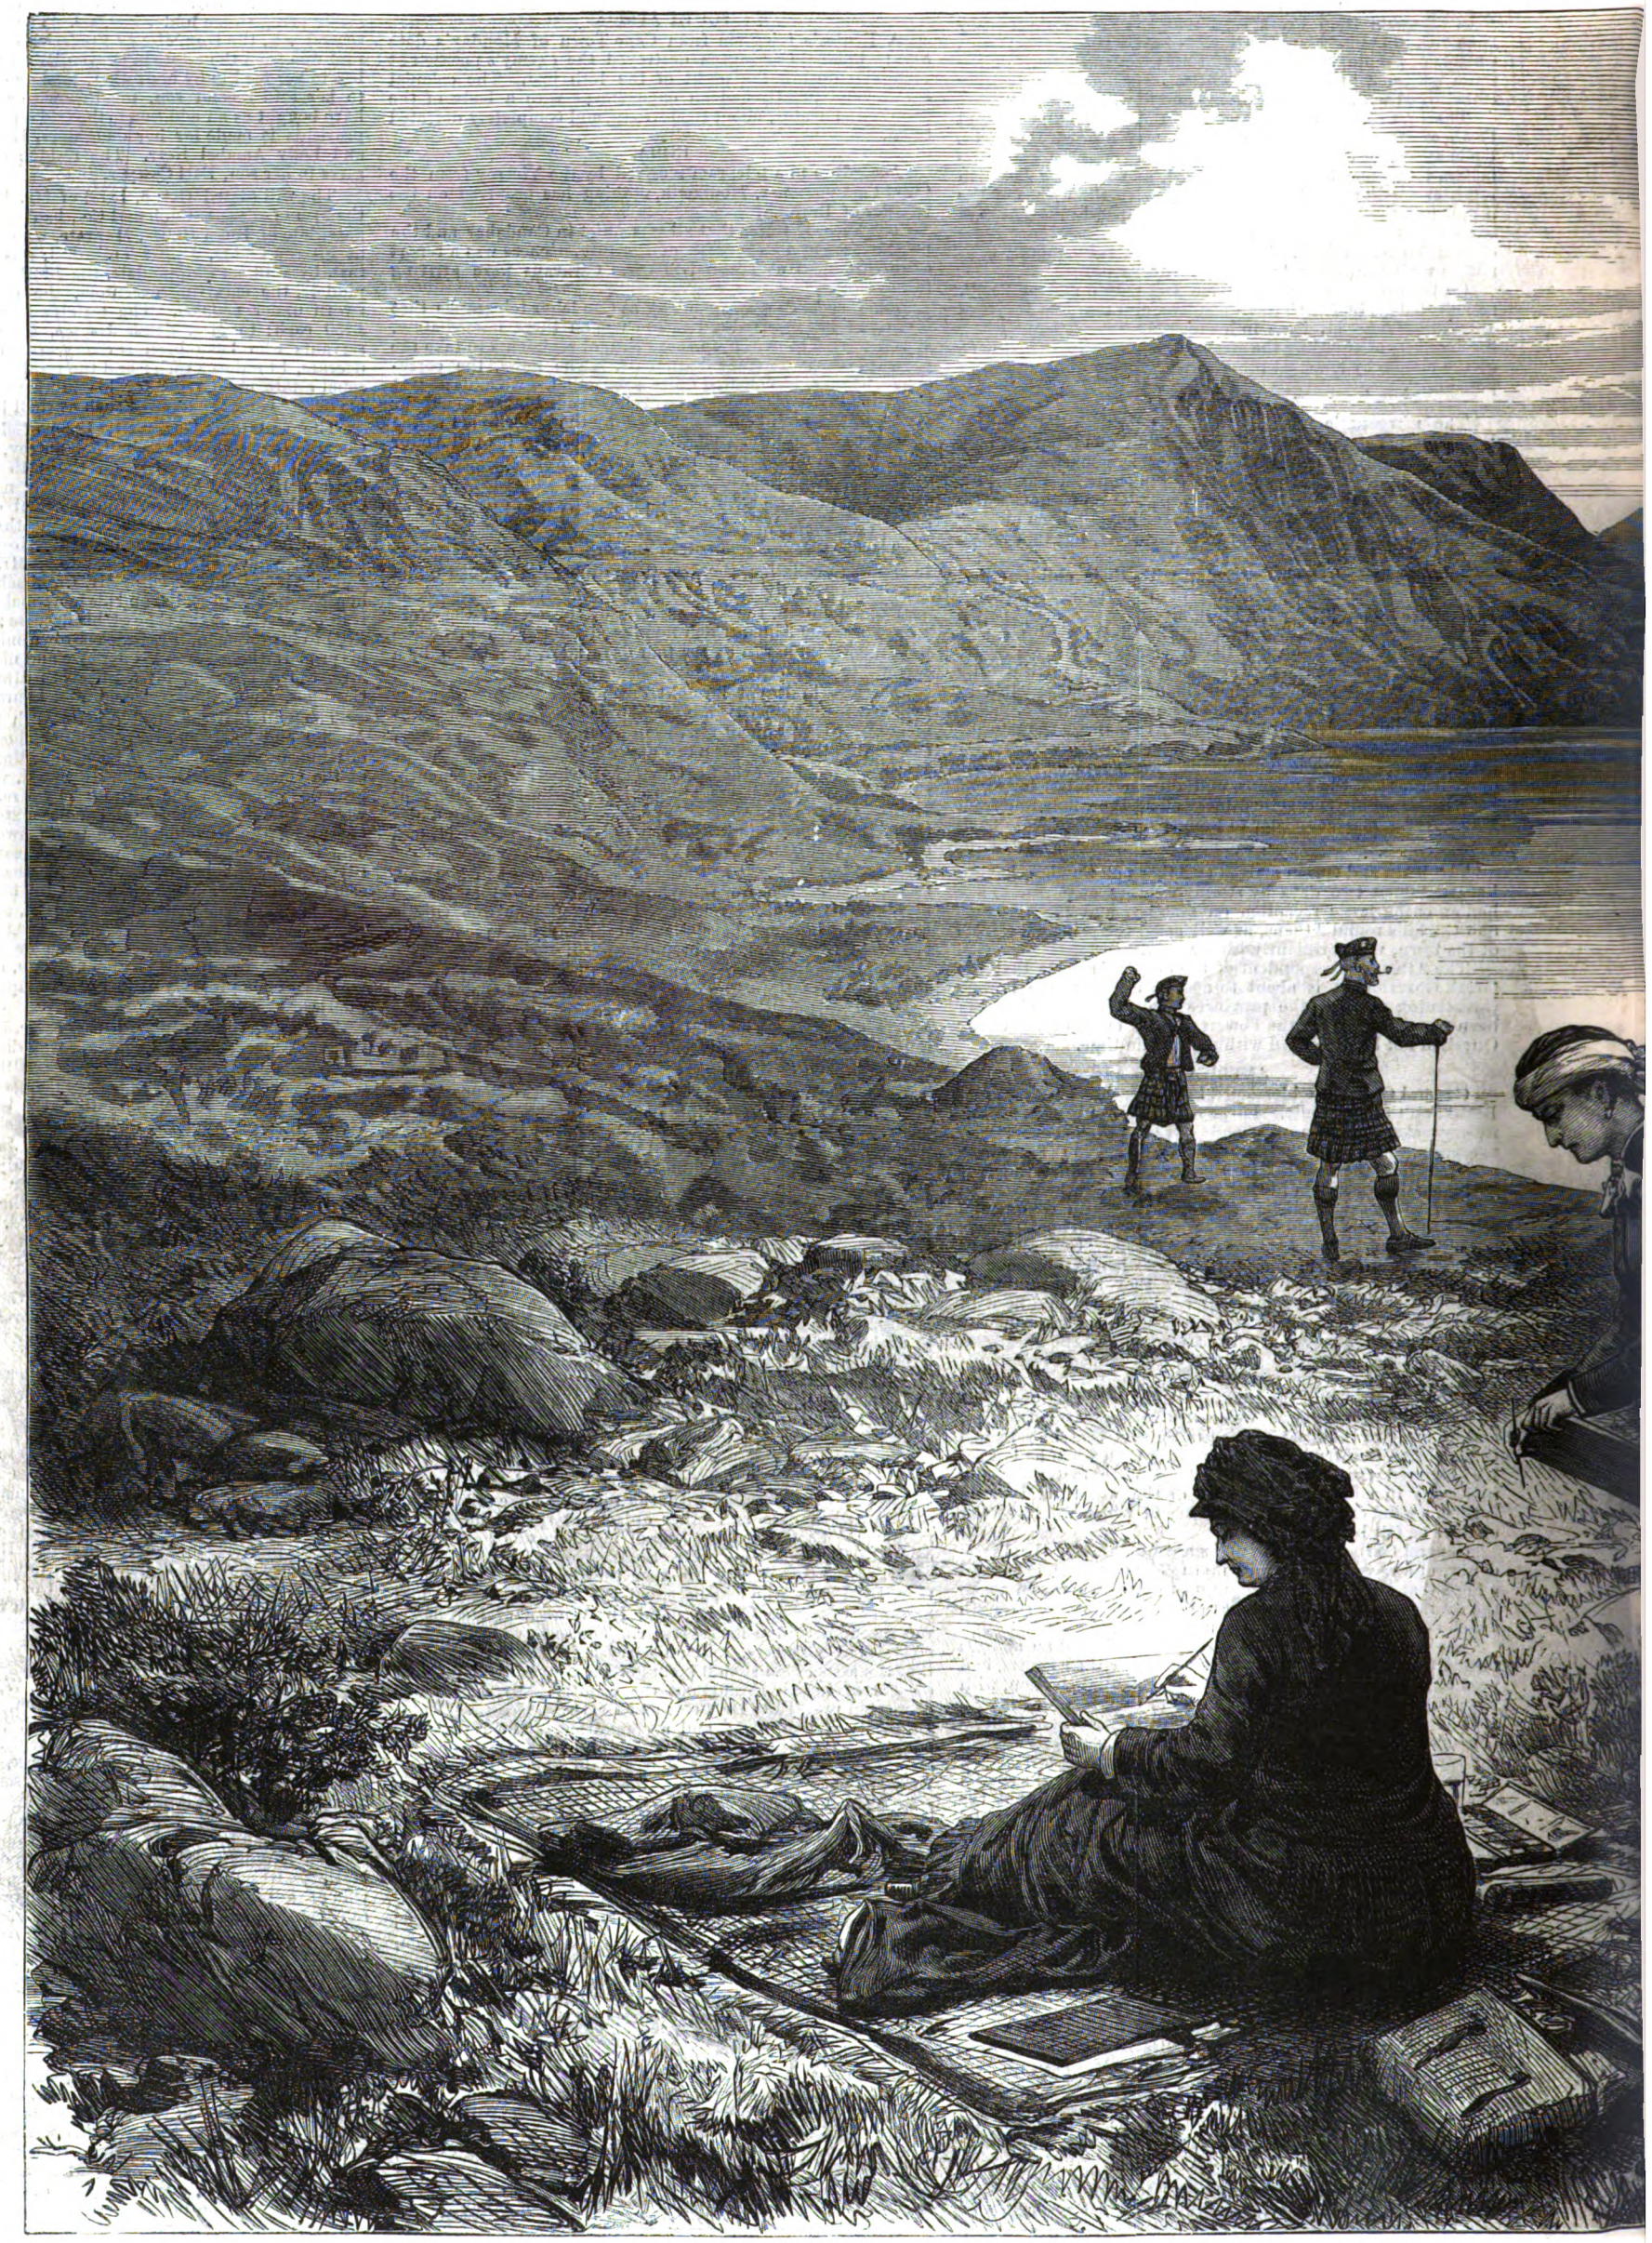
The will (dated Oct. 8, 1878) of Mr. John Chippindale, of the firm of Messrs. Cobb and Co., bankers and brewers, Margate, late of India House, Margate, who died on July 13 last at Fitzroy Lodge, Upper Tulse-hill, was proved on the 7th inst. by William Chippindale, the brother, and Charles Chippindale, the surviving executors, the personal estate being sworn under £80,000. The testator leaves to his executors £250 each; to Mrs. Sarah Neame, £100; to the domestic servants who have been seven years in his service at his decease, 19 guineas each; and the residue of his real and personal estate upon trust for his brothers and sisters living at his decease and the issue of such as shall be then dead.

The will (dated May 21, 1880) of Mr. Robert Linton Charrington, late of Carshalton, Surrey, miller, who died on Aug. 19 last, was proved on the 11th inst. by Alexander Gordon Hennell, William Hart, the nephew, and Arnold Cronbach, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £70,000. The testator bequeaths £1000 each to the Asylum for Idiots, Earlswood, and the Hospital for Incurables, Putney; £200 each to his executors, Mr. Hennell and Mr. Hart; £1200 to his executor Mr. Cronbach; £100 each to his housekeeper, Ann Eldis, and his housemaid, Sophia Hampton, if in his service at the time of his decease; and an annuity of £100 to his foreman, Frederick Brownsmith. The residue of his property he gives to his nephew and nieces, William Hart, Mrs. Clarissa Marsh, Mrs. Elizabeth Marsh, Mrs. Mary Ann Gardiner, Miss Julia Hart, and Mrs. Laura Hennell.

The will (dated Oct. 16, 1876) with two codicils (dated April 9 and 30, 1880) of Mr. Samuel Thomas Jones, formerly of Kingsmead, Kent, and of Benellan, Bournemouth, but late of the Queen's Hotel, Upper Norwood, who died on Aug. 9 last, was proved on the 12th inst. by Mrs. Martha Jones, the widow, and Henry Jones and Thomas Jones, the brothers, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £35,000. The testator leaves to his wife £500, certain Spanish Quicksilver Stock, and his furniture and household effects (except some jewellery and plate given to his son), horses and carriages, and the rent of Kingsmead, and the dividends of £4000 Bank of England Stock and £10,000 London and St. Katharine Dock Stock, during life or widowhood. There are some legacies to his brothers, sisters, and others; and the residue of his property is to be held upon trust for his son Charles.

The will (dated July 27, 1877) of Mr. Edward Henry Hills, late of Tudor Lodge, Richmond, who died on the 10th ult., was proved on the 9th inst. by Walter Hills, the nephew, the acting executor, the personal estate being sworn under £25,000. Subject to legacies to his executors, the testator leaves all his estate and effects upon trust for his daughter, Letitia Marner.

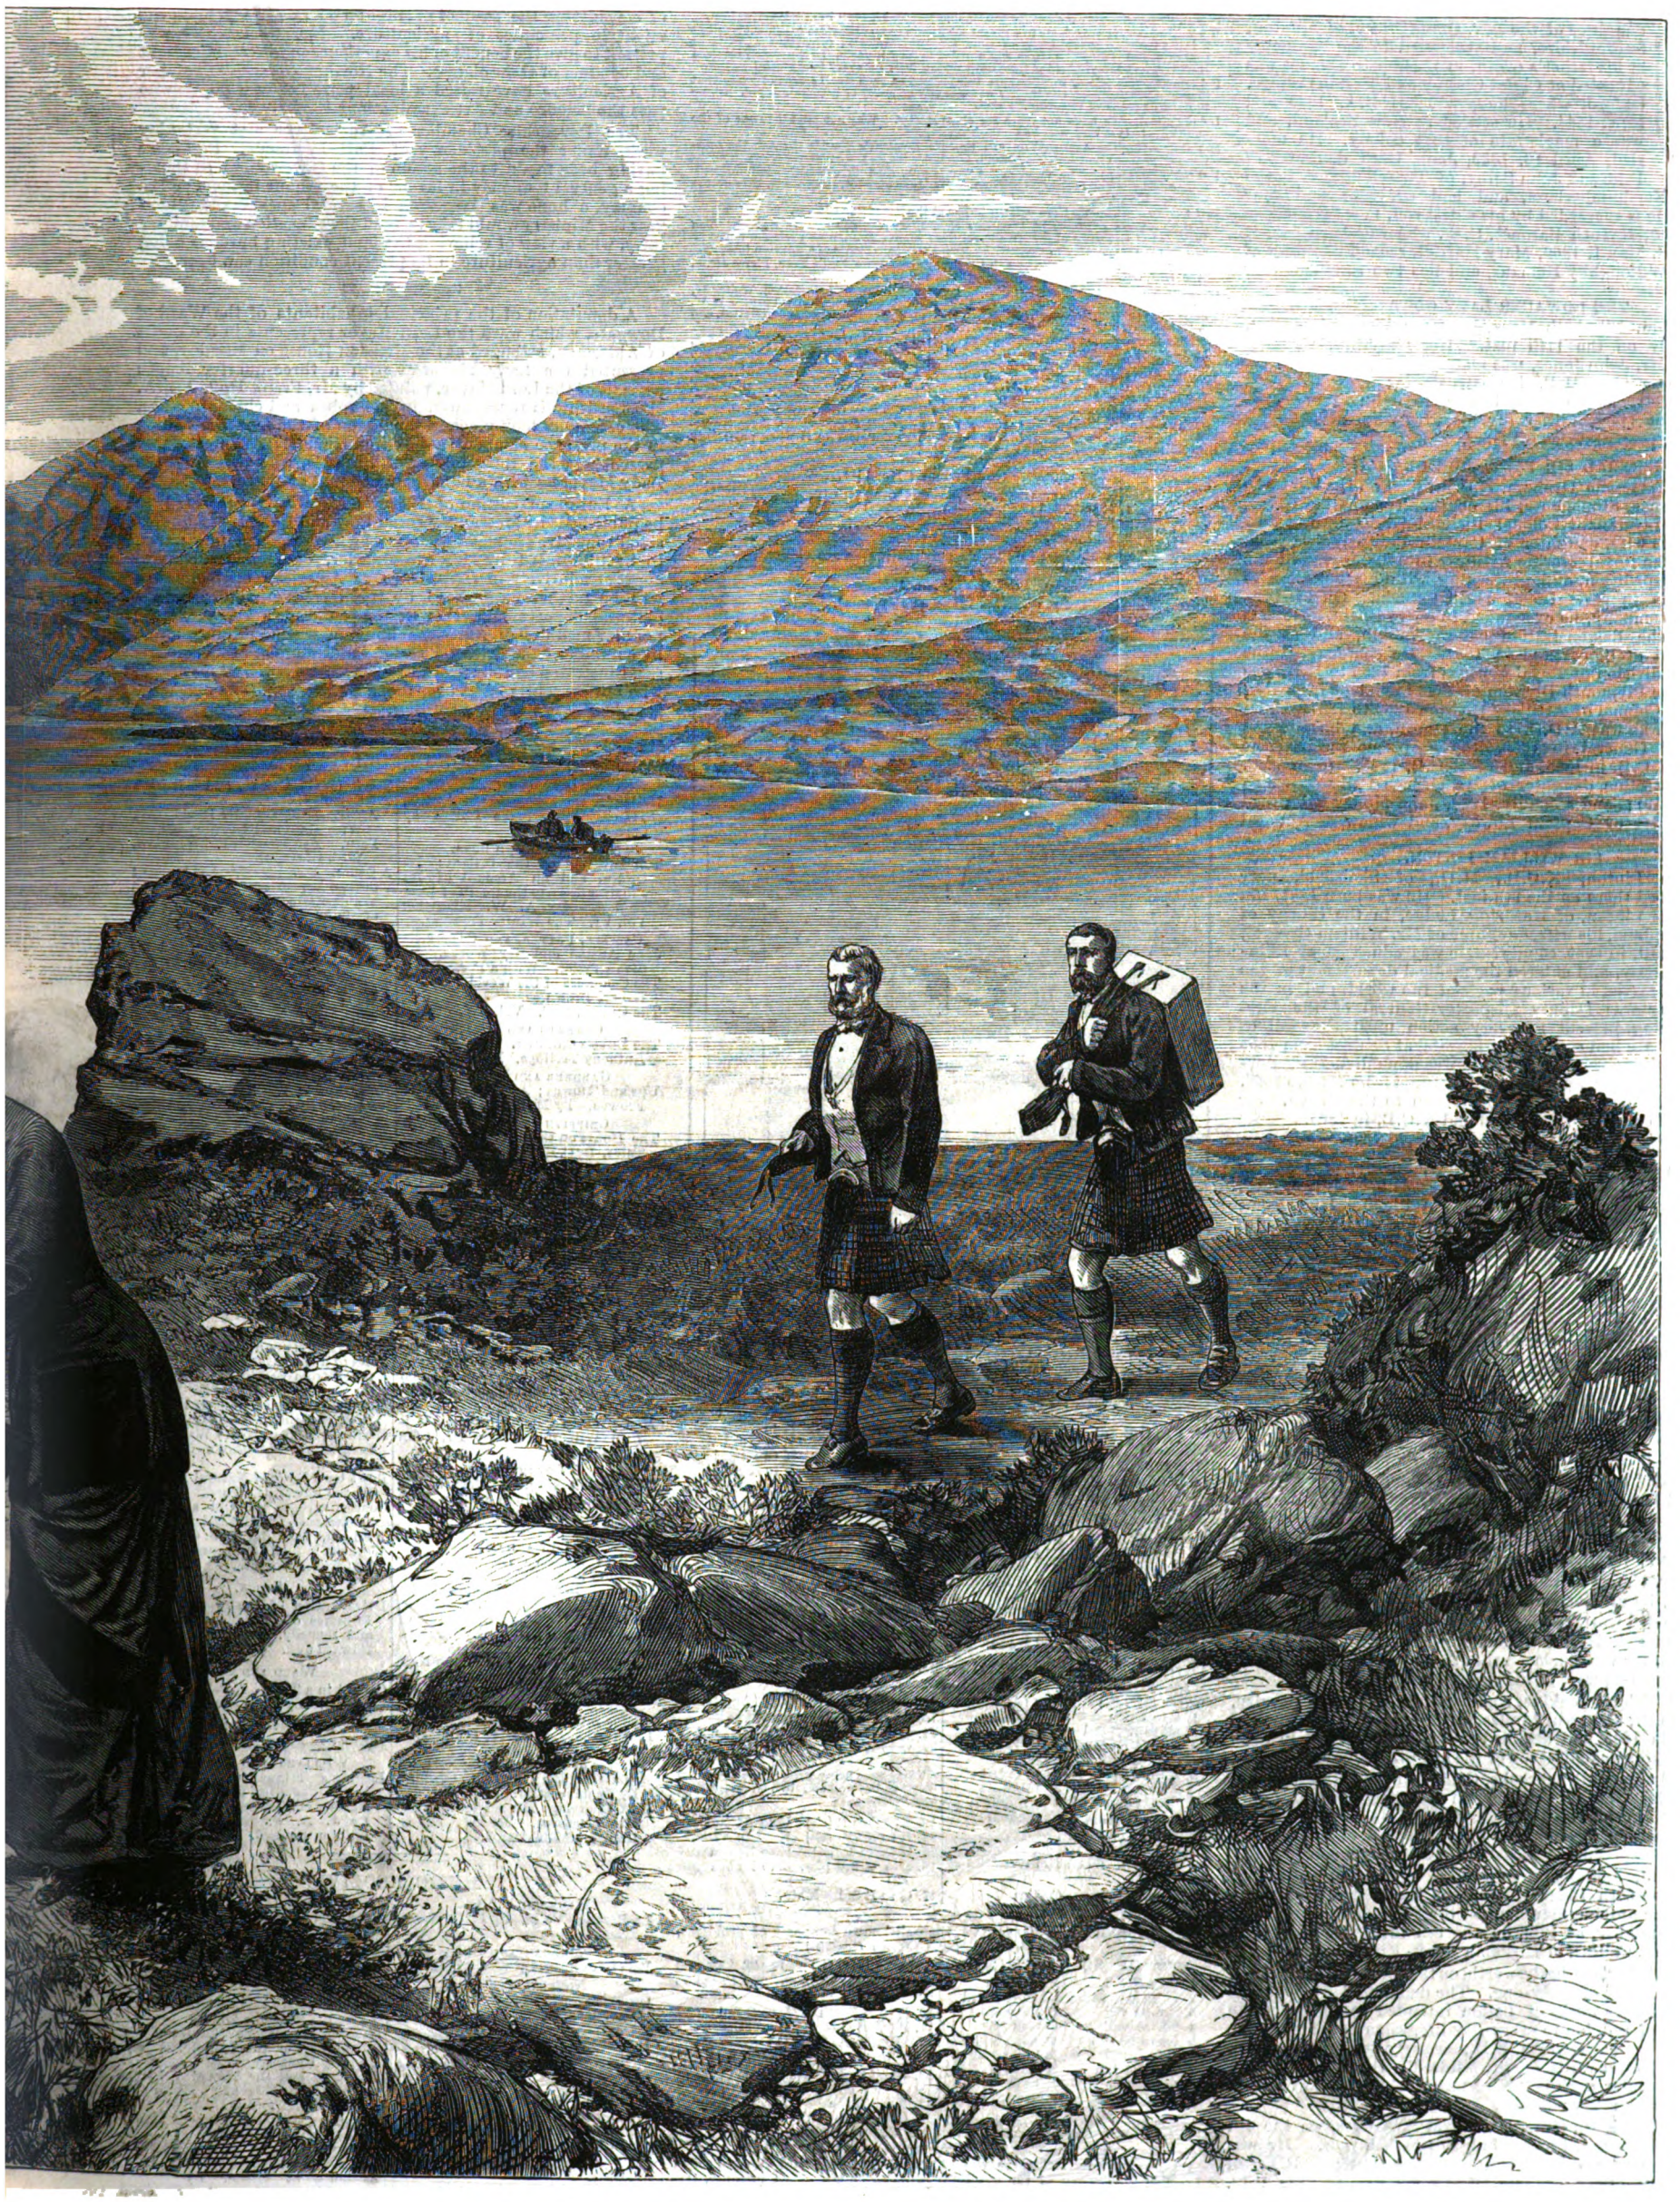
The will (dated June 8, 1880) of Mr. James Lewtas, late of Lancaster, corn merchant, who died on July 5 last, at Wimpole-street, has been proved at the Lancaster district registry by Robert Hunter, Miss Elizabeth Lewtas, the niece, David White Fyfe, Thomas Preston, and James Lord, the executers, the personal estate being sworn under £20,000. The testator, after making bequests to his sister and other relatives and to some of the workmen in his employ, leaves the remainder of his property upon trust, as to one fifth, for the children of his late niece, Mary Fyfe; and one fifth each for his nieces, Margaret Lewtas Preston, Ann Lord, Elizabeth Lewtas, and Margaret Crookhall Cottam.



The will (dated Aug. 25, 1878) of Miss Ann Elisabeth Watts, late of Thornhill-crescent, Islington, who died on Aug. 22 last, was proved on the 9th inst. by John Hill and Henry James Hill, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £12,000. The testatrix bequeaths £1000 to the Royal Literary Fund; and £500 to the British Museum Attendants' Mutual Life Assurance Society, both to be known as the gift of Thomas Watts; £1000 each to the Great Northern Hospital and the Royal Free Hospital; £500 each to the London School of Medicine for Women, the East London Hospital for Children and Dispensary for Women, and the London Bible and Domestic Female Mission; £100 to the Churchwardens of St. Andrew's, Thornhill-square, to be applied at their discretion for the relief of the poor of the said district, and several other legacies. The residue of her pure personalty she gives to the Great Northern Hospital.

The will (dated May 16, 1874) of Mr. William Harrison, late of South-grove, Rotherham, railway-waggon builder, who died on July 2 last, at Skegness, Lincolnshire, was proved on the 20th ult. at the Wakefield district registry by Mrs. Emma Harrison, the widow, and sole executrix, to whom he gives, devises, and bequeaths all his real and personal estate absolutely. The personalty is sworn under £5000.

The foundation-stone of the Liverpool Home for Aged Mariners was laid on Saturday by Mrs. William Cliff, the wife of a Liverpool merchant and shipowner, who has himself contributed the munificent sum of £8500 towards the edifice—an amount which is practically sufficient to cover the cost of erection. The home will have accommodation for about fifty inmates, and the scheme also embraces the erection of a number of cottages where old sailors may live rent free with their families or relatives. After the stone had been laid, Lord Sandon, the Bishop of Liverpool, Mr. Whitley, and others delivered addresses.

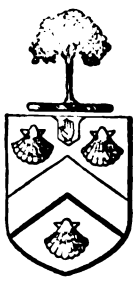


The fifth festival in aid of the East London Hospital for Children was held on the 13th inst. at the Cannon-street Hotel, under the presidency of the Lord Mayor. Last year the total number of patients treated was 9246, and the number of out-patients 30,864. The Hospital contained ninety-one beds. The present appeal was for funds for maintenance and for the addition of a third storey to the hospital, which would cost about £2000. The donations amounted to nearly £700.—A conversazione in aid of the North-Eastern Hospital for Children, which was founded thirteen years ago, and which has relieved 146,000 patients since its opening, was held on the following day at the hospital in Hackney-road. New subscriptions are much needed for the institution, the opening of new wards by the Duchess of Connaught in June last having caused a considerable increase in the expenditure.

Digitized by Google

THE QUEEN AT LOCH CALLA

Digitized by Google



—[From a Sketch by our Special Artist.]

Digitized by Google

OBITUARY.

SIR THOMAS TANCRED, BART.

Sir Thomas Tancred, Bart., of Boroughbridge, in the county of York, M.A., died recently, the intelligence of the occurrence being received by telegraph from New Zealand. He was born Aug. 16, 1808, the eldest son of Sir Thomas Tancred, sixth Baronet, by Harriet Lucy, his wife, daughter of the Rev. Offley Crewe, of Muxton, Staffordshire, and succeeded to the baronetcy at his father's death, in 1844. Sir Thomas was educated at Christ Church and Merton College, Oxford, where he graduated B.A. 1830 and M.A. 1844. He settled in New Zealand, and was a magistrate of that colony. He married, April 16, 1839, Jane, third daughter of Prideaux John Selby, of Twizell House, in the county of Northumberland, and had six sons and four daughters. He is succeeded by his eldest son, now Sir Thomas Selby Tancred, seventh Baronet, C.E., who was born Oct. 1, 1840, married, May 1, 1866, Mary Harriet, second daughter of Mr. George Willoughby Hemans, and has two sons and four daughters.

THE DOWAGER LADY GORT.

The Right Hon. Elizabeth Mary, Dowager Viscountess Gort, died suddenly on the 11th inst. Her Ladyship, who was daughter of Mr. John Jones, was married, first, to Mr. George Tudor, at one time M.P. for Barnstaple; and secondly, June 10, 1861, as his second wife, to John Prendergast, third Viscount Gort, father (by his first wife) of Standish Prendergast, present Viscount Gort.

GENERAL SIR FORTESCUE GRAHAM.

General Sir Fortescue Graham, K.C.B., died on the 9th inst., at his residence, Stonehouse, Plymouth. He was born 1794, the son of Lieutenant-Colonel Richard Graham, R.M., by Catherine, his wife, daughter of Captain Philip Walsh, R.N. He entered the Royal Marine Artillery in 1808, served in the Walcheren expedition, and, proceeding with his battalion to America, was in several actions in Canada. On his promotion to a company, he exchanged to go to Spain. He was present at the demonstration before Nankin, and at the bombardment of Bomarsund in 1854. He commanded the Portsmouth division of Royal Marines from 1855 to 1857, was Colonel of the Plymouth Division of that Regiment from 1857 to 1866, and Colonel of Artillery Division 1860 to 1867. From 1854 to 1857 he was A.D.C. to the Queen, and he attained the rank of General in 1866. Sir Fortescue received the decoration of C.B. in 1855, and of K.C.B. 1865. He married, first, 1828, Caroline, daughter of Mr. George Pallisser (which lady died 1859); and secondly, 1863, Jane Money (who died 1866), daughter of Captain Lowcay, and widow of Admiral Blight.

SIR WILLIAM LINTON.

Sir William Linton, K.C.B., M.D., of Skairfield, near Lockerbie, died there on the 9th inst. He was born 1801, son of Mr. Jabez Linton, of Hardrigg Lodge, in the county of Dumfries, by Jane, his wife, daughter of Mr. William Crocket, of Grahamshill, in that county. He was educated at Edinburgh University, and entered the medical department of the Army 1826; served in various parts of the world, and in the Crimean War was Deputy Inspector-General of the First Division, being present in every action until the fall of Sebastopol. He had care of the hospital at Scutari from 1855 till the end of the war. In 1857 he was appointed Inspector-General of Hospitals, and he served in India from 1858 to 1863. Since 1859 he had been Hon. Physician to the Queen. Sir William was created C.B. in 1856 and K.C.B. in 1865.

MR. MARTIN TUCKER SMITH.

Mr. Martin Tucker Smith, of Shirley, Surrey, died on the 10th inst. at St. Leonard's-on-Sea. He was born July 6, 1808, the second son of John Smith, Esq., of Blendon Hall, Kent, M.P., a banker in London, by Mary, his wife, daughter of Lieut.-Col. Tucker, and was nephew of Robert, first Lord Carrington. Mr. Smith was a Magistrate for Bucks, a Commissioner of Lieutenancy for London, and was formerly a Director of the East India Company. He sat in Parliament for Midhurst 1831 to 1832, and for Wycombe 1847 to 1866. Mr. Smith married, in 1831, Louisa, daughter of Sir Matthew White-Ridley, Bart., and leaves issue.

We have also to record the deaths of—

Lord Justice Thesiger, on the 20th inst. His memoir will be given in our issue next week.

Lieut.-Col. Alfred Romaine Wragge, late Royal Artillery, on the 3rd inst., at East Down Park, Lee, aged fifty-seven.

Edward Isaac Sparks, M.A., M.B. Oxon, F.R.C.P., on the 11th inst., at Misterton Lodge, Crewkerne, aged thirty-seven

Mr. Percy Lee, of Carter's Hill, Arborfield, Berks, on the 5th inst., at 2, Westbourne-street, aged thirty-nine.

The Rev. Henry Alfred Green Oliver, M.A., Jesus College, Cambridge, Head Master of St. John's-wood School, on the 11th inst., aged thirty-six

Mr. Frederick Herbert Hemming, for more than twenty years Consul for Venezuela, on the 9th inst., at 104, Gloucester-place, Portman-square, in his eighty-first year.

Colonel Richard Jenkins, commanding 1st Bengal Cavalry, on the 9th ult., at Rawul Pindee, in the Punjaub. He entered the Army in 1845, and attained the rank of Colonel in 1876. Colonel Jenkins was eldest son of the late Sir R. Jenkins, G.C.B.

General Samuel Braybrooke, Colonel of the 99th Regiment, on the 7th inst., at his residence in Gledhow-gardens, South Kensington, in his eighty-fifth year. He served in the Candian rebellion, 1817, and attained the rank of full General 1875. He was appointed Colonel of the 99th Regiment in 1866.

Lieut.-Col. James Joseph Collins, who commanded the 2nd Battalion 60th Rifles throughout the Afghan Campaign, including the arduous march under Sir Frederick Roberts from Cabul to Candahar, at Sibi, on the 8th inst. He was fourth son of Mr. W. Collins, of Kirkman Bank, Knaresborough.

Miss Maria Louisa Charlesworth, on the 16th inst., at Nutfield, Surrey, at the age of sixty-one. The deceased lady, who has written numerous works of fiction intended to illustrate the application of religion to every-day life, was a daughter of the late Rev. John Charlesworth, B.D., formerly Rector of Flowton, Suffolk, and afterwards of St. Mildred's, Bread-street, City. Her most popular work is "Ministering Children," which has passed through many editions.

Major Francis Du Cane, late Royal Engineers, on the 4th inst., at Eastbourne, Sussex, in his fifty-fifth year. He was the third son of the late Captain Charles Du Cane, R.N., of Braxted Park, near Witham, Essex, by Frances, his wife, second daughter of the late Rev. C. Prideaux-Boune, of Prideaux Place, Cornwall, and was thus brother of Sir Charles Du Cane, Chairman of the Board of Customs, formerly M.P. for North Essex. Major Du Cane married, in 1857, Louisa Frances Maria, youngest daughter of General Sir William Anson, G.C.B.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All communications relating to this department of the Paper should be addressed to the Editor, and have the word "Chess" written on the envelope.

C E Mabe.—Mr. M. of Moscow, who is now in London, requests us to inform you that he did not receive the letter you addressed to him.

W McA (Chichester).—Very good. Thanks.

A Brahmin Youth (Bombay).—The idea embodied in the problem is much too simple.

Orima (Rostoff).—Correct solution of Problem No. 1909. We require your name and address before publishing your problem.

H N (Dublin).—We are obliged for the "gamelet," and it shall have early attention.

R S V (Gloucester).—An hour to a player for fifteen moves provides for slow play; but it is not too large an allowance of time for competitors in important matches or tourneys, and is much less than was allowed in former years. In the match between Harrwitz and Löwenthal the time limit was an hour for every three moves!

P J (Broadmoor).—Your solutions are transmitted on such small scraps of paper that it should not surprise you if they occasionally miscarry or become mislaid. Please to write on paper of the ordinary size.

L S (Pimlico).—We have not space for chess stories. Why not send it to one of the monthlies? It is very well told

B T C (Stratford-on-Avon).—You can procure Brentano's Monthly through the American Exchange Company, 449, Strand, London. We do not know the price.

R O (Southampton).—The problem "A" was published in a weekly contemporary some years ago, and is the composition of Mr. James Pierce, of Bedford. We do not recognise the others.

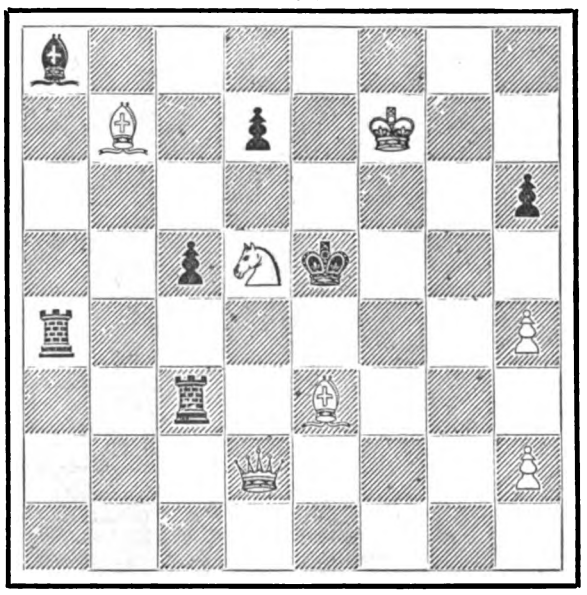
H C A (New York).—We have written to you at the Broadway address.

Va (U.S.).—Your solutions of Problems Nos. 1906, 1907, and 1908 are correct. You indicate the right line of play in the solution of the Brunswick problem, but your analysis is very meagre in comparison with the requirements of a solution tourney.

Correct Solutions of Problem No. 1910 received from Emile Frau, Pierce Jones, H W Hill, Orima, L Chapelle (Malta), Onno, and W J Eggleston.

Correct solutions of Problem No. 1911 received from W J Eggleston, Walter W, Dr F St, James Atkinson, J Bumstead, Theodor Wilkinson, Emile Frau, J W W, Jane Nepveu, H de Groot, Pierce Jones, E F (Winchester), L Chapelle (Malta), and A C (Abergavenny).

Correct Solutions of Problem No. 1912 received from H B, Shadforth, East Marden, H Langford, A Kentish Man, One of Three, G Fosbrooke, Ben Nevis, R Oswald, Chessophile, T Greenbank, D Templeton, H Brewster, C S Coxe, L S D, N Cator, Elsie, E Worsley, Helen Lee, E Elsbury, S Farrant, C Darragh, W Warren, T Barrington, An Old Hand, G L Mayne, E Jessop, R Ingersoll, B Dyke, D W Kell, C C E, F R Jeffrey, Louis Spencer, E Louden, Hereward, Alpha, Cant, Pierce Jones, James Dobson, Walter W, C F Jones, Ch Pompe, and H de Groot (Groningen).



Note.—Nearly all the foregoing solvers have directed attention to a defence overlooked by the author—namely, 1. K to K 2nd. We shall refer to it when publishing the solution next week.

Solution of Problem No. 1911.

WHITE.	BLACK.
1. K to K 3rd	K takes Kt
2. Kt to K 7th	Any move
3. Kt mates.

The variations in Black's possible moves are obvious.

PROBLEM No. 1914.
By W. H. Taylor (Yokohama).
BLACK.

WHITE.
White to play, and mate in three moves.

An interesting Game played by correspondence between Mrs. H. E. Walesby and another Amateur.
(Giuoco Piano.)

WHITE (Mrs. W.)	BLACK (Mr. B.)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th
2. Kt to K B 3rd	Kt to Q B 3rd
3. B to B 4th	B to B 4th
4. P to Q 4th	P takes P
5. Castles	Kt to K B 3rd

This resolves the opening into a variation of the two Knights' defence; but Black's better course here is to play 5. P to Q 3rd, keeping to the old lines of the Giuoco Piano.

6. P to Q B 3rd	P takes Q B P

Again, 6. P to Q 3rd is the correct move.

7. P to K 5th	Kt to K Kt 5th
8. B takes K B P (ch)	K to B sq
9. P takes P	K Kt takes P
10. Kt takes Kt	Kt takes Kt
11. B to Kt 3rd	P to Q 3rd
12. P to K R 3rd	P to Q Kt 3rd
13. B to K B 4th	B to Kt 2nd
14. Q to K R 5th	Q to K B 3rd
15. B takes Kt	P takes B
16. Kt to Q 2nd	Q to Kt 3rd
17. Q to Kt 4th	Q takes Q
18. P takes Q	P to K 5th

WHITE (Mrs. W.)	BLACK (Mr. B.)
19. Q R to Q sq	Q R to Q sq

Very weak. The Rook should have been played to King's square.

20. Kt takes P

Correctly played, and taking prompt advantage of the weak play on the other side. Obviously, the Kt cannot be taken.

20.	R takes R
21. R takes R	K to K 2nd
22. Kt to Kt 5th	K to B 3rd
23. Kt to K 6th	B to Q 3rd
24. P to Kt 5th (ch)	K to Kt 3rd
25. P to K B 4th	P to K R 3rd
26. B to B 2nd (ch)

From this point to the end White plays very cleverly.

26.	K to B 2nd
27. Kt takes Q B P	B to B 4th
28. K to B sq	P takes P
29. R to Q 7th (ch)	B to K 2nd
30. B to Kt 3rd (ch)	K to B 3rd
31. P takes P (ch)	K takes P
32. R takes B,	and Black resigned.

Played at Pursuell's between the Rev. Mr. Earnshaw and another Amateur.
(Ruy Lopez.)

WHITE (Mr. E.)	BLACK (Amateur).
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th
2. Kt to K B 3rd	Kt to Q B 3rd
3. B to Q Kt 5th	Kt to K B 3rd
4. Castles	Kt takes P
5. R to K sq	Kt to Q 3rd
6. Kt takes P	Kt takes Kt
7. R takes Kt (ch)	B to K 2nd
8. Kt to Q B 3rd	Kt takes B

White's last move is inferior to retreating the Bishop to R 4th, but Black's reply makes it good. He should have castled at once.

9. Kt to Q 5th	Castles
10. Kt takes B (ch)	K to R sq
11. Q to R 5th	P to K Kt 3rd
12. Q to R 4th	P to K B 4th

There were many weak moves at Black's disposal, but probably this is weaker than any other.

13. Kt takes P (ch)	K to Kt 2nd
14. R to K 7th (ch)	K takes Kt
15. Q takes P (ch)	K to Kt 4th
16. P to Q 3rd (dis. ch)	K to Kt 5th
17. Q to R 3rd.	Mate.

Played between Mr. W. Grimshaw, the well-known composer of problems, and a Divan player.—(Scotch Gambit.)

WHITE (Mr. G.)	BLACK (Mr. —)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th
2. Kt to K B 3rd	Kt to Q B 3rd
3. P to Q 4th	P takes P
4. Kt takes P	Q to R 5th
5. Kt to Kt 5th	Q takes K P (ch)
6. B to K 3rd	B to Kt 5th ch)
7. Kt to Q 2nd	B takes Kt (ch)
8. Q takes B	K to Q sq
9. Castles	Q to K 3rd

There is a suggestion of an attack on the Q R P about this move curiously out of place in the position. The best move seems to be 9. P to Q B 3rd.

WHITE (Mr. G.)	BLACK (Mr. —)
10. B to K B 4th	P to Q 3rd
11. B takes Q P	P takes B
12. Kt takes Q B P	Q takes R P

He has nothing better to do.

13. Kt to Kt 5th (dis. ch)	K to K sq
14. Kt to B 7th	K to B sq
15. Q to Q 6th (ch),	White mates in a few moves.

On Wednesday last there was a banquet at the City of London Chess Club in celebration of the ninetieth birthday of the oldest member, Mr. Murton. The chair was occupied by Mr. H. F. Gastineau, who, after the cloth was removed, proposed the health of Mr. Murton, testifying to the high esteem in which that gentlemen is held by his fellow members, and wishing the veteran "many happy returns of the day."

We have been requested to contradict a rumour that has gained currency to the effect that the Chessplayers' Chronicle would cease to appear after the current year. It will be continued under new management, and published, as heretofore, by Mr. Morgan, Great Queen-street.

AGRICULTURE.

A conference of the Farmers' Alliance took place on Monday at the Westminster Palace Hotel, at which several subjects were discussed, and especial attention was drawn to the want of security for the capital of the tenantry.

During the past few days numerously attended meetings have been held at Guildford, Aldershott, Stamford, Oundle, Raunds, and other agricultural centres for the purpose of considering the subject of night classes for teaching the scientific principles of agriculture. Mr. Buckmaster was present to give the benefit of his experience in the establishment and conduct of these classes. The Northamptonshire Chamber of Agriculture have raised a local prize fund for pupils who pass the Science and Art examinations.

The Devonshire Chamber of Agriculture met yesterday week, under the presidency of Earl Fortescue. Reference having been made to the action of the Government as showing a general tendency in favour of the tenant farmers of the country, a hope was expressed by several speakers that next year the Ministry would take in hand the education and sanitary rates, with a view of relieving the land, existing burdens being greater than agriculture in its present condition can bear.

A deputation of the principal inhabitants of the Ward of Dowgate, which ward the Lord Mayor represents in the Court of Aldermen, attended at the Mansion House on Monday, and presented the Lady Mayoress with a three-quarter length portrait of the Lord Mayor, painted by Mr. Frank Holl, A.R.A. His Lordship is represented in his robes and chain of office. The ceremony took place in the saloon of the Mansion House, in the presence of about a hundred friends. Amongst those present was the Burgomaster of Brussels, who presented the Lady Mayoress with a handsome bouquet of flowers.

A European edition of Harper's Magazine is projected, to be published by Messrs. Sampson Low and Co. It is understood that Mr. Thomas Hardy is engaged upon a new novel, to be illustrated by Mr. Du Maurier, of Punch, which will appear exclusively in Harper's. Our American contemporary will be further naturalised by the introduction of English editorial departments, though the "Editor's Drawer," the popular medium of American humour, will be retained; and by a number of articles on scenery and manners this side the sea, illustrated both by noted English artists and by Americans, who have recently come over for that purpose. The magazine is to be issued here at a shilling.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Allen and Co.
Holland. By Edmondo de Amicis. Translated from the Italian by Caroline Tilton.

Blackwood and Sons.
The Invasion of the Crimea: Its Origin, and an Account of Its Progress down to the Death of Lord Raglan. By A. W. Kinglake. Vol. VI. The Winter Troubles.

Cassell, Petter, and Galpin.
Jane Austen and Her Works. By Sarah Tytler. With a Portrait.
The Countries of the World. By Dr. Robert Brown.
The Quiver, 1880. Vol. XV.

Chapman and Hall.
The Duke's Children. A Novel. By Anthony Trollope. In one volume.

Gardner and Darton.
Ups and Downs; All Smiles and No Frowns. By M. T. Tilsley.

Griffith and Farran.
The House on the Bridge and Other Tales. By C. E. Bowen. Illustrated by A. H. Collins.
The Other Side, How It Struck Us. By C. B. Berry.
Heroes of History and Legend. By A. W. Grube. Translated from the German by J. L. Shadwell.
Nimpo's Troubles. By Olive Thorne Miller. Illustrated.

Groombridge and Sons.
Auntie Marian's School-Fellows. By Mary Gardiner.

"Hand and Heart" Office.
Popular Recreation (A Church Congress Paper): The Theatre As It Is, and the Ober-Ammergau Passion Play. By the Rev. Charles Bullock.

Hodder and Stoughton.
Men Worth Remembering—William Wilberforce. By Dr. John Stoughton.

Longmans.
The Crookit Meg. A Story of the Year One. By John Skelton.
Blues and Buffs. A Contested Election and Its Results. By A. Mills.

Low and Co.
Beatrice Melton's Discipline. By Maude Jeanne Franc.
Practical Blowpipe Assaying. By George Attwood. With 74 woodcuts.
The Heir of Kilfinnan. A Tale of the Shore and Ocean. By W. H. G. Kingston.
A Plot of the Present Day. By Kate Hope ("Proavia"). 3 vols.
Albania: A Narrative of Recent Travel. By E. F. Knight. With Illustrations.
Black Abbey. By M. Crommelin. 3 vols.
Episodes of French History.—II. St. Louis and the Thirteenth Century. By Gustave Masson.
Dick Cheveley: His Adventures and Misadventures. By W. H. G. Kingston. Illustrated.
Foreign Countries and British Colonies:—
Austria-Hungary. By David Kay. With Maps and Illustrations.
Peru. By Clements R. Markham. With Illustrations.
A Sailors' Sweetheart. An Account of The Wreck of the Sailing-ship Walderahare. From the narrative of Mr. W. Lee, second mate. By W. Clark Russell. 3 vols.
Primitive Folk-Moots; or, Open-air Assemblies in Britain. By George Laurence Gomme.
The Tribulations of a Chinaman. By Jules Verne. Translated by Ellen E. Frewer. Illustrated by L. Benett.
Jack and Jill. A Village Story. By Louisa M. Alcott. With Illustrations.
New Guinea: What I Did and What I Saw. By L. d'Albertis. 2 vols.

Newman.
Veracious History of a Black-and-Tan Terrier. Told by Himself. Edited by Lady Lamb. Illustrated by Walter J. Allen.
History of Duelling in All Countries; Translated from the French of M. Coustard de Massi, with Introduction and Concluding Chapter by Sir Lucius O'Trigger.

Pitman.
The Shorthand Clerk. A Manual of Practical Instruction. By Henry R. Evans.

Routledge and Son.
Tales of a Grandfather, being Stories taken from Scottish History. By Sir Walter Scott, Bart.
Household Stories Collected by the Brothers Grimm. Newly translated.
Poetical Works of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow. Author's Complete Edition.
Boy's Own Book of Natural History. By the Rev. J. G. Wood.
Concordance to the Old and New Testament. By Alexander Cruden. Edited by the Rev. C. S. Carey.
Works of William Shakspere. Edited by Charles Knight.

Strock.
Deterioration of Oyster and Trawl Fisheries of England: Its Cause and Remedy. By J. P. Hore and Edward Jex.

Ward and Lock.
Caught in a Trap. A Tale of France in 1802. By Emmé Stuart.

Waterston and Sons.
Nursery Library—The Two Bears.

Williams and Norgate.
Lessing's Minna von Barnhelm. With Idiomatical and Explanatory Notes and a Complete Vocabulary. By J. A. F. Schmidt. Second Edition, Revised.

MUSIC RECEIVED.

Hammond and Co.
La Roselle. Valse. By Emile Rosenkranz.

Morgan and Co.
Polka Joyeuse. By Wilford Morgan.

Novello and Co.
Organists' Quarterly Journal of Original Compositions. Edited by Dr. Wm. Spark.
Nocturne. For the Pianoforte. By Oliver King.
Music Primers—Composition. By Dr. Stainer.
A Dictionary of Musical Terms. By Dr. Stainer and W. A. Barrett (compressed from the Imp. Octavo Edition by K. M. Ross).
Samson. An Oratorio in Vocal Score. By G. F. Handel. The Pianoforte Accompaniment Revised from that of the German Handel Society. Novello's Octavo Edition.

Weekes and Co.
Songs for Girls' Schools. No. 1. Sunshine. Two-Part Song.
Organ Pieces in Various Styles. Composed by Dr. F E. Gladstone.
La Gracieuse (Morceau de Salon), for the Pianoforte. By Henry Houseley.
Troubled Conscience. Song. Imitated from the German of Moritz Count Strachwitz by Talbot Erle. Composed by Adolph Gollmick.
Little Sealskin. Legend. By E. Keary. Music by Monica.
Chanson Espagnole (Morceau de Salon). For the Pianoforte. By Henry Houseley.
The Seed and the Thought. Song. By Alex. Lamont. Music by Edmund H. Turpin.
Chanson d'Eté. Melodie pour Piano. By Henry J. Edwards.
"Always." Song. Music by Robert B. Addison.
Anchor'd at Home. By Arthur Matthison. Music by Berthold Tours.

B. Williams.
The Linnet's Answer. By D. Christie Murray. Music by Ciro Pinsuti.
The Bugler. By Frederick E. Weatherly. Music by Ciro Pinsuti.

Digitized by Google

DIAMONDS. SAPPHIRES. CATS'-EYES. OPALS. EMERALDS.

Mr. STREETER, 18, New Bond-street, W.

INTRODUCER of 18-CARAT GOLD JEWELLERY and ENGLISH LEVER WATCHES, (MACHINE-MADE.)

BRANCH ESTABLISHMENT, COLOMBO, CEYLON.

WALKER'S CRYSTAL CASE WATCHES are superseding all others. Prize Medals—London, 1862; Paris, 1867. Silver Watches, from £4 4s.; Gold, from £6 6s. Price-Lists sent free.—77, Cornhill; 220, Regent-street; and 76, Strand.

CHARLES FRODSHAM and CO. By Appointment to her Majesty. THREE GOLD MEDALS for CLOCKS and WATCHES. Only Address, 84, Strand, London, W.C.

THE FINEST WATCHES MADE. SEWILL'S KEYLESS WATCHES, Prize Medals, London, Paris, and Philadelphia. Damp and Dust-proof, 18-carat cases, adjusted and compensated for all climates, £10 10s., £14 14s., and £25; Ladies', £7 7s., £10 10s., and £18 18s.; in silver cases, for Ladies or Gentlemen, £5 5s., £6 6s., and £8 8s. Forwarded on receipt of remittance.—J. Sewill, 30, Cornhill, London; and 61, South Castle-street, Liverpool.

ORIDE GOLD ALBERT CHAINS, 5s., 7s. 6d., 10s. 6d. Links, Solitaires, or Studs, 2s. 6d. Brooches, 4s. 6d. to 8s. 6d. Earrings, 3s. 6d. to 7s. 6d. Lockets, 4s. 6d. to 12s. 6d. Free by post. Opinions of the Press and Price-Lists post-free.—C. C. ROWE, 92, Brompton-road, London, S.W.

NOTICE.—SPOONS and FORKS, in SILVER and in ELECTRO-PLATE. ELKINGTON and CO., as the result of important improvements in the above manufactures, are able to offer their guaranteed qualities at such prices as, while fully maintaining their acknowledged superiority, place them within the reach of all classes. Revised Illustrated Price-Lists free by post on application. Purchasers of Silver Spoons and Forks obtain the advantage of any fluctuations in the silver market.
Address—ELKINGTON and CO., 22, Regent-street, London, or 42, Moorgate-street, City.

GARDNER'S DINNER and TABLE GLASS SERVICES. Free, graceful, and original designs, of unequalled value. Dinner Services, from 21s. Table Glass Services, of the best Crystal, for twelve persons, complete, 65s. Cash discount, 15 per cent. Coloured Photographic Sheets and Illustrated Glass Catalogues post-free.
453 and 454, West Strand, Charing-cross.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—On MONDAY and TUESDAY, OCT. 25 and 26, Messrs. OETZMANN and CO. will OFFER for SALE an immense STOCK of BLANKETS and QUILTS, purchased for cash at a great reduction during the recent depression, and which will be sold off much below their usual cost. Reduced Price-Lists, with size and description, sent post-free on application.—OETZMANN and CO.

FURNISH THROUGHOUT.
SUBSTANTIAL ARTISTIC FURNITURE (Regd.)
OETZMANN & CO.,
HAMPSTEAD-ROAD,
NEAR TOTTENHAM-COURT-ROAD.

FURNISHTHROUGHOUT.—OETZMANN and CO., 67, 68, 71, 73, 77 and 79, HAMPSTEAD-ROAD, near Tottenham-court-road, London. CARPETS, Furniture, Bedding, Drapery, Furnishing Ironmongery, China, Glass, Paper Hangings, Pictures, Bronzes, Clocks, Pianos, &c., and every other requisite for completely furnishing a house throughout. Lowest prices consistent with guaranteed quality.
OETZMANN and CO.

THE "CANTERBURY" EARLY ENGLISH DINING-ROOM SUITE, 20 Guineas, in solid American Walnut or Oak, consisting of a Sideboard with two drawers and cupboards, with bevelled plate-glass back; an extending Dining-Table, Six Chairs, and Two Arm-chairs, seats stuffed, all hair, and covered in leather or Tapestry. Illustrations of this Suite post-free on application.—OETZMANN and CO.

ARTISTIC CANE WINDOW BLINDS and SCREENS.—These fashionable blinds can now be had from stock or made to order in any size or design; also Cane and Wicker Chairs, Ladies' Needlework Mounts, Flower Stands, &c., in colours or black and gold. Prices considerably below those usually charged for these goods. Illustrated Price-Lists post-free.
OETZMANN and CO.

TURKEY CARPETS.—OETZMANN and CO.—Turkey, Indian, and Persian Carpets and Rugs, at greatly reduced prices, ranging from 15s. 9d. to 80 guineas. A reduced Price-List, with sizes and description, sent, post-free, on application. Prices will be found much below those usually charged. A quantity of Indian Rugs, clearing out at 15s. 9d. each; some very handsome ditto at 35s. to 45s.
OETZMANN and CO.

DOWN QUILTS.—OETZMANN and CO.'S EIDER and ARCTIC DOWN QUILTS and CLOTHING combine the greatest amount of warmth attainable with the least possible weight, and are warranted pure. O. and CO. sell only the best make—BOOTH and FOX'S. See Trade-Mark on each article. Prices will be found much below those usually charged for this favourite make. Reduced Price-Lists post-free.
OETZMANN and CO.

THE "PORTLAND" COAL-VASE. OETZMANN and CO.'S New Special Designs for the Season; new shape, much admired, handsomely japanned and gold relieved, has bowl castors, opal handle handscoop, and strong loose lining—a great convenience and saving in the wear. Price, complete, only 10s. 6d.—OETZMANN and CO.

CLEARING OUT ACCUMULATED STOCK to make room for NEW DESIGNS. DINNER, DESSERT, TEA, and BREAKFAST SERVICES. A quantity of Sets, some with one or two pieces deficient or slightly chipped; also some TOILET SETS, will be cleared out at about half price. They are set out for inspection in one of the Show-Rooms. An early visit solicited. A constant succession of New Designs in China and Glass always on view.—OETZMANN and CO.

POSTAL ORDER DEPARTMENT. OETZMANN and CO.—Orders sent per post, whether large or small, receive prompt and careful attention. Those residing at a distance, or any to whom a personal visit would be inconvenient, desirous of leaving the selection to the firm, may rely upon a faithful attention to their wishes and interest in the selection. This department is personally supervised by a member of the firm, and O. and Co. continually receive numerous letters expressing the greatest satisfaction with the execution of orders so entrusted. Persons residing in Foreign Countries and the Colonies will find great advantages by entrusting their orders to O. and CO. For further particulars please see page 379 in Catalogue, sent free on application.—OETZMANN and CO.

DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE, post-free.
OETZMANN & CO.,
HAMPSTEAD-ROAD.

DEANE and CO.'S TABLE CUTLERY, celebrated for more than 150 years, remains unrivalled for quality and cheapness. The stock, extensive and complete, affords a choice suited to every purchaser.

Ivory Handles.	s. d.	s. d.	s. d.	s. d.	s. d.	s. d.	s. d.
Table Knives, per dozen.	13 0	16 0	19 0	24 0	32 0	35 0	40 0
Dessert ditto	11 0	13 0	15 0	19 0	26 0	29 0	33 0
Carvers, per pair	5 6	6 6	7 0	8 0	9 0	10 6	11 0

Agents for Joseph Rodgers and Sons, Cutlers to Her Majesty.

DEANE and CO.'S London KITCHENERS. DEANE and CO. Manufacture, Supply, and Fix complete COOKING APPARATUS, Kitcheners, Hot-Water Circulation, Bath Fittings, &c. Gas Cooking and Warming Stoves.

London Pattern. Double Oven.		London Pattern. Open Fire.		Flavel's Kitcheners.		Cheap Kitcheners.
5 ft. ..	£24 0 0	5 ft. ..	£22 0 0	3 ft. 6	£10 0 0	3 ft.	£3 0 0
5 ft. 6 ..	27 0 0	5 ft. 6 ..	25 0 0	4 ft. ..	12 0 0	3 ft. 6 ..	3 0 0
6 ft. ..	30 0 0	6 ft. ..	29 0 0	4 ft. 6	13 10 0	4 ft.	10 5 0

Manufactory and Workshops, 21, Jacob-street, Deckhead, S.E. Deane and Co.'s Complete Illustrated Catalogue free by post. DEANE and CO., 46, King William-st., London Bridge.—A.D. 1700.

D. HULETT.—GASELIERS in CRYSTAL GLASS and ORMOLU or BRONZE. Mediæval Fittings. A large Stock always on View. Every article marked with plain figures.—Manufactory, 55 and 55, High Holborn.

NOTICE. — For PETER ROBINSON'S Court and General Mourning Warehouse.
"REGENT-STREET" is the only one address.

FAMILY BEREAVEMENTS.
UPON RECEIPT OF LETTER OR TELEGRAM, PETER ROBINSON'S Experienced Dressmakers and Milliners Travel to all parts of the COUNTRY, FREE of EXPENSE to purchasers, with Dresses, Millinery, and a full assortment of made-up Articles of the BEST and most suitable description. Also materials by the Yard, and supplied at the SAME PRICES as if purchased at the Warehouse in Regent-street.
Mourning for Servants at unexceptionably low rates, at a great saving to large or small Families.
Funerals conducted in Town or Country at stated charges.
Address ONLY to 256 to 262, REGENT-STREET, LONDON. PETER ROBINSON'S.

BLACK VELVET-VELVETEENS, new and superior makes, in appearance equal to Silk Velvet, at 2s. 6d., 2s. 11d., and 3s. 6d. Also the guaranteed fast Pile Velveteens, at 2s. 11d. and up to 5s. 11d. For patterns, please direct only to 256 to 262, Regent-street, PETER ROBINSON'S.

BLACK VELVET-VELVETEEN COSTUMES, at 3 guineas, and up to 7 guineas. BLACK SERGE COSTUMES, from 2 guineas. NEW AUTUMN MATERIAL COSTUMES, from 2 to 7 guineas. Perfectly New Styles. At PETER ROBINSON'S, of REGENT-STREET, Nos. 256 to 262.

EVENING DRESSES.
A New and very Choice Collection for this Season, at 1 guinea and up to 7 guineas. Illustrations and Descriptions, with Patterns, sent on application.
Address only to 256 to 262, Regent-street. PETER ROBINSON'S.

BLACK SILKS. DURING THIS MONTH, we shall sell
Messrs. BONNET et CIE. and JAUBERT et CIE. BLACK SILKS at Manufacturers' prices, and Cheaper than they have ever before been supplied.

Bonnet's..	No. 1 Quality,	4s.	3d.	from 1s. 6d. to 4s. per yard under fair value.
..	No. 2 ,,	5s.	3d.
..	No. 3 ,,	6s.	0d.
..	No. 4 ,,	7s.	0d.
Jaubert ..	No. 1 Quality,	3s.	3½d.	from 1s. to 4s. per yard under their fair value.
	No. 2 ,,	3s.	11d.
	No. 3 ,,	4s.	9d.
	No. 4 ,,	5s.	3d.
	No. 5 ,,	6s.	0d.

To be obtained only at
PETER ROBINSON'S
REGENT-STREET SHOP,
Nos. 256 to 262, Regent-street.
For Patterns please be careful in the address.

NICHOLSON'S NEW COSTUMES,
50 Illustrations free.
NICHOLSON'S NEW MANTLES,
50 Illustrations free.

NICHOLSON'S NEW AUTUMN DRESS FABRICS.
Patterns post-free.
VELOUR CLOTH, at 10½d., 18½d., and 1s. 11½d. per yard.
NEW SERGES, at 15½d., 18½d., and 21½d. per yard.
GRAMPIAN HOMESPUNS, 1s. 7½d. per yard.
NEW POPLINS, from 6½d. per yard.
NEW MELTON CLOTHS, 2s. 3d. per yard.
FRENCH MERINOS, at 1s. 11d., 2s. 9½d., and 3s. 3d. per yard.
BLACK VELVETEENS, from 1s. 9½d. to 5s. 11d. per yard.
COLOURED Ditto, from 2s. 11d. to 3s. 6d. per yard.
BROCADED Ditto, from 2s. 6d. to 3s. 6d. per yard.
Patterns of Black and Coloured Silks post-free.
D. NICHOLSON and CO.,
50 to 53, ST. PAUL'S-CHURCHYARD, LONDON.

THE LONDON GLOVE COMPANY'S GLOVES.

Ladies 2 Button Kid Gloves from	6s. 6d.	per half-d zen.
" 4 "	"	8s. 6d.	"
" 6 "	"	10s. 6d.	"
Gentlemen's Kid Gloves	"	6s. 0d.	"

Single Pairs Sold.
Detailed list of all Makes post-free.
THE LONDON GLOVE COMPANY, 45A, Cheapside, E.C.

ARRASENE.
A New Material in Silk and Wool, for Artistic Embroidery.
Can be used also with Crewels and Embroidery Silks.
Can be procured of Berlin Wool Repositories.
Wholesale only, R. G. GEACH, 137, Cheapside.

THE "ATHOL" COSTUME. HALLING, PEARCE, and STONE beg to direct the attention of ladies to their specialité for the Autumn Season,
THE "ATHOL" COSTUME, which is made of excellent rough Serge, manufactured expressly for the purpose in the various fashionable colours. Engravings of the Costumes (Price 52s. 6d.) and Patterns of the Material, sent post-free.
THE MONK'S DRESS.
A NOVELTY IN COSTUMES,
HALLING, PEARCE, and STONE,
Waterloo House, Pall-mall East; and Cockspur-street, S.W.

TO LADIES.—THE SHREWSBURY WATERPROOF TWEED CLOAKS, SKIRTS, and JACKETS, in every variety of shape and colour, are supplied by the original Makers, E. W. and W. PHILLIPS, 37, High-street, Shrewsbury. Patterns and Prices on application.

AEGIDIUS. — The only non-shrinking Flannel Shirt. Warm as wool, soft as silk, and very elastic. Patterns and self-measure free.
E. FORD, 41, Poultry, London.

PRATT'S WATER PAD TRUSSES are the MOST EFFECTUAL CURE FOR RUPTURES. PRATT'S ELASTIC STOCKINGS, for VARICOSE VEINS, &c.
J. F. PRATT,
Surgical Mechanician to St. Bartholomew's Hospital, 420, OXFORD-STREET, LONDON

ELECTRICITY IS LIFE.
PULVERMACHER'S "GALVANISM," "NATURE'S CHIEF RESTORER OF IMPAIRED VITAL ENERGY."
In this Pamphlet the most reliable proofs are given of the vast and wonderful curative powers of Pulvermacher's Patent Galvanic Chain-Bands, Belts, &c., in Rheumatic, Nervous, and Functional Disorders. Sent post-free for three stamps on application to
J. L. PULVERMACHER'S GALVANIC ESTABLISHMENT, 194, Regent-street, London, W.

JAY'S, REGENT-STREET.

ELIZABETHAN MANTLES.—The richest Novelties of the Season. Made of Plush and Brocaded Velvets and Silks, or trimmed with these materials. The Mantles of this class imported from Paris and Berlin are of novel form, and of the richest kind; but there are also others of more moderate pretensions to be seen.
JAY'S, REGENT-STREET.

NEW SHORT COSTUMES and Graceful DINNER DRESS—Short Dresses.—Messrs. JAY respectfully invite their clientele to view a choice Collection of Pattern Costumes of both kinds, of the newest type of fashion, which have been imported from Paris and Berlin.
JAY'S, REGENT-STREET.

BLACK INDIAN CASHMERE COSTUMES.—The general utility and exquisite drapery of Indian Cashmere has made it one of the most fashionable materials for this season's costumes. Messrs. Jay have imported a variety of costumes made of Indian Cashmere, and they are specially recommended for style and good wear.
JAY'S, REGENT-STREET.

PATTERNS FREE.
IMPROVED JANUS CORD.—Ladies, who at this season of the year wear black dresses from choice, will find JANUS CORD, at 1½ guinea the full-dress length, one of the most economical and best fabrics, at the price, ever manufactured for a lady's dress.
JAY'S, REGENT-STREET.

PATTERNS FREE.
BLACK VELVETEENS.—Almost equal in appearance to good black velvet. As black velveteen is likely to be much worn during the winter season, Messrs. JAY have had manufactured for themselves special qualities of black velveteen, fast colour. These Velveteens are confidently recommended to their customers.
JAY'S,
THE LONDON GENERAL MOURNING WAREHOUSE, REGENT-STREET, W.

PRETTY FLOWERS, Bridal Bouquets, Bridesmaids' Bouquets, Baskets of Flowers, Loose Cut Flowers, Funeral Wreaths. Prices on application.—WILLIAM HOOPER, 88, Oxford-street, W.

MITCHAM LAVENDER.—PIESSE and LUBIN.

LAVENDER, Sweet Lavender.—PIESSE and LUBIN are now distilling, at their Flower Farm, the famed MITCHAM LAVENDER. Samples may be had either at the Stillery, Mitcham-road, Surrey, or at the Laboratory, 2, New Bond-street, London.

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.
ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.
ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.
ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.
ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.
ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.
ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.
ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.
ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT. Trade Mark, "Anti-Fat" (Registered), is purely vegetable, and perfectly harmless. No change of diet required. Will reduce from 2 lb. to 5 lb. a week. Acts upon the food in the stomach, preventing its conversion into fat.

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT is endorsed by those eminent in the medical professional.
The late THOMAS FAIRBANK, M.D., of Windsor, Surgeon to Her Majesty the Queen, referring to ANTI-FAT in the "British Medical Journal" of June 7, 1879, says:—
"I gave some of this extract (Fucus Vesiculosus) to a very corpulent lady, who in three months lost three stones in weight without any change of diet. Since then I have frequently given it for reducing weight depending on the accumulation of adipose tissue, and have never found it fail."

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT Reduces 61 lb.
"Pratville, Ala., July 20, 1878.
"Botanic Medicine Company.—Gentlemen,—About three months ago I commenced using your 'Anti-Fat,' at which time my weight was 219 pounds. By following your directions carefully I have succeeded in reducing my weight to 158 pounds.—Yours truly, "GEORGE BOYD."
Hundreds of letters similar to the above have been received.

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT. Sold by Chemists everywhere, at 6s. 6d., or delivered free on receipt of price. Send stamp for Pamphlet.
Address, BOTANIC MEDICINE COMPANY, 493, Oxford-street.

COLDS CURED BY
DR. DUNBAR'S ALKARAM, or Anti-Catarrh Smelling-Bottle.
ALKARAM. COLDS.
ALKARAM. COLDS.
ALKARAM. COLDS.
IF inhaled on the first symptoms, ALKARAM will at once arrest them, and cure severe cases in half an hour. Sold by all Chemists, 2s. 9d. a Bottle. Address, Dr. Dunbar, care of Messrs. F. Newbery and Sons, 1, King Edward-st., E.C.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT. The Pills purify the blood, correct all disorders of the liver, stomach, kidneys, and bowels. The Ointment is unrivalled in the cure of bad legs, old wounds, gout, and rheumatism.

SUFFERERS FROM CONSUMPTION and Wasting Diseases will find SAVORY and MOORE'S Pancreatic Emulsion a Medicinal Food that arrests the waste and loss of power, while it nourishes and strengthens the system. Descriptive pamphlets on application 143, New Bond-street, London; and of Chemists.

TOOTH-ACHE.
INSTANT CURE.
FORMS A STOPPING.
SAVES THE TOOTH.
J. Hounsell, Esq., Surgeon, Bridport, writes:—"I consider BUNTER'S NERVINE a specific for Toothache. Very severe cases under my care have found instantaneous and permanent relief."
Of Chemists, 1s. 1½d. per Packet.

A NEVER-FAILING REMEDY for LIVER COMPLAINTS.—Dr. SCOTT'S BILIOUS and LIVER PILLS, prepared without mercury, are invaluable to all who suffer from Bilious and Liver Complaints, Indigestion, Wind, Spasms, Foul Breath, Irritability, Loss of Appetite, Sour Eructations, and General Debility. As a General Family Aperient Medicine they have no equal, being mild in their operation and grateful to the stomach. They will be found, in slight cases, by a single dose to restore health to the body with a happy frame of mind. Prepared only by W. LAMBERT, 1A, Vere-street, London, W. 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d.; or, post-free, 15 or 35 stamps, and sold by all Chemists. The Genuine are in a Square Green Package.

BLAIR'S GOUT PILLS, THE GREAT REMEDY FOR GOUT AND RHEUMATISM.
Sold by all Chemists, at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. per Box.

FIVE PER CENT DEBENTURES.
AUSTRALASIAN AGENCY and BANKING CORPORATION (Limited).
Capital £1,250,000. In 125,000 Shares of £10 each.
Subscribed in the Australian Colonies, £312,500; in London, £200,000. Reserve Fund, £25,000.
LONDON DIRECTORS:
Abraham Scott, Esq. | Harry Hankey Dobree, Esq.
Frank C. Capel, Esq. | Joseph Cockfield, Dimsdale, Esq.
BANKERS:
Messrs. Dimsdale, Fowler, Barnard, and Dimsdales.
SOLICITORS:
Messrs. Freshfields and Williams.
The Company are now issuing Debentures at the above rate for four, five, or six years. Forms of application can be obtained at the Office of the Company, 6½, Austin Friars.

SUN FIRE OFFICE.
Threadneedle-street, E.C. Charing-cross. Oxford-street (corner of Vere-street), W.
Established 1710.
Home and Foreign Insurances Effected.
Sum insured in 1879, £262,492,461.
FRANCIS B. RELTON, Secretary.

GOVERNMENT STOCKS and SHARES BOUGHT and SOLD at the Current Rates by DAVID KAUFMANN, Banker, Welckerstrasse No. 6, Hamburg, who has now for SALE Original Government Bonds, Capital 8,672,100 Mk., equal to about £43,360, to be drawn in Series within a few months. Prices for the next drawing:—One Original Debenture, 6s.; one Half ditto, 3s. Prospectus in English sent free on application.

WOOD PAVING.—NOTICE.—Messrs. HARVEY, NICHOLS, and CO. (Limited) respectfully announce that, during the repair of the Knightsbridge-road, Carriages may conveniently set down at their Side Entrance in Charles-street, Lowndes-square: and also in Sloane-street.

SCHWEITZER'S COCOATINA. Anti-Dyspeptic Cocoa or Chocolate Powder.
Guaranteed Pure Soluble Cocoa, with excess of Fat extracted. Four times the strength of Cocoas Thickened yet Weakened with Arrowroot, Starch, &c.
The faculty pronounce it the most nutritious, perfectly digestive Beverage for "BREAKFAST, LUNCHEON, or SUPPER." Keeps in all Climates. Requries no Cooking. A teaspoonful to Breakfast Cup, costing less than a halfpenny. Samples gratis. In Air-Tight Tins, at 1s. 6d., 3s., &c., by Chemists and Grocers. H. SCHWEITZER and CO., 10, Adam-street, London, W.C.

FRY'S COCOA. GOLD MEDAL, PARIS, 1878. FRY'S CARACAS COCOA. A choice prepared Cocoa. most delicious and valuable article."—Standard.

FRY'S COCOA. GUARANTEED PURE. FRY'S COCOA EXTRACT. Pure Cocoa only, the superfluous oil extracted. J. S. FRY and SONS.

HORNIMAN'S TEA for Forty Years has commanded a large sale, because it can always be relied on for strength, flavour, and cheapness. It is the best tea imported. Sold only in Packets.

SEASONABLE DELICACY.
BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR AS BLANCMANGE WITH STEWED FRUIT.

SEASONABLE DELICACY.
BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR AS CUSTARD WITH STEWED FRUIT.

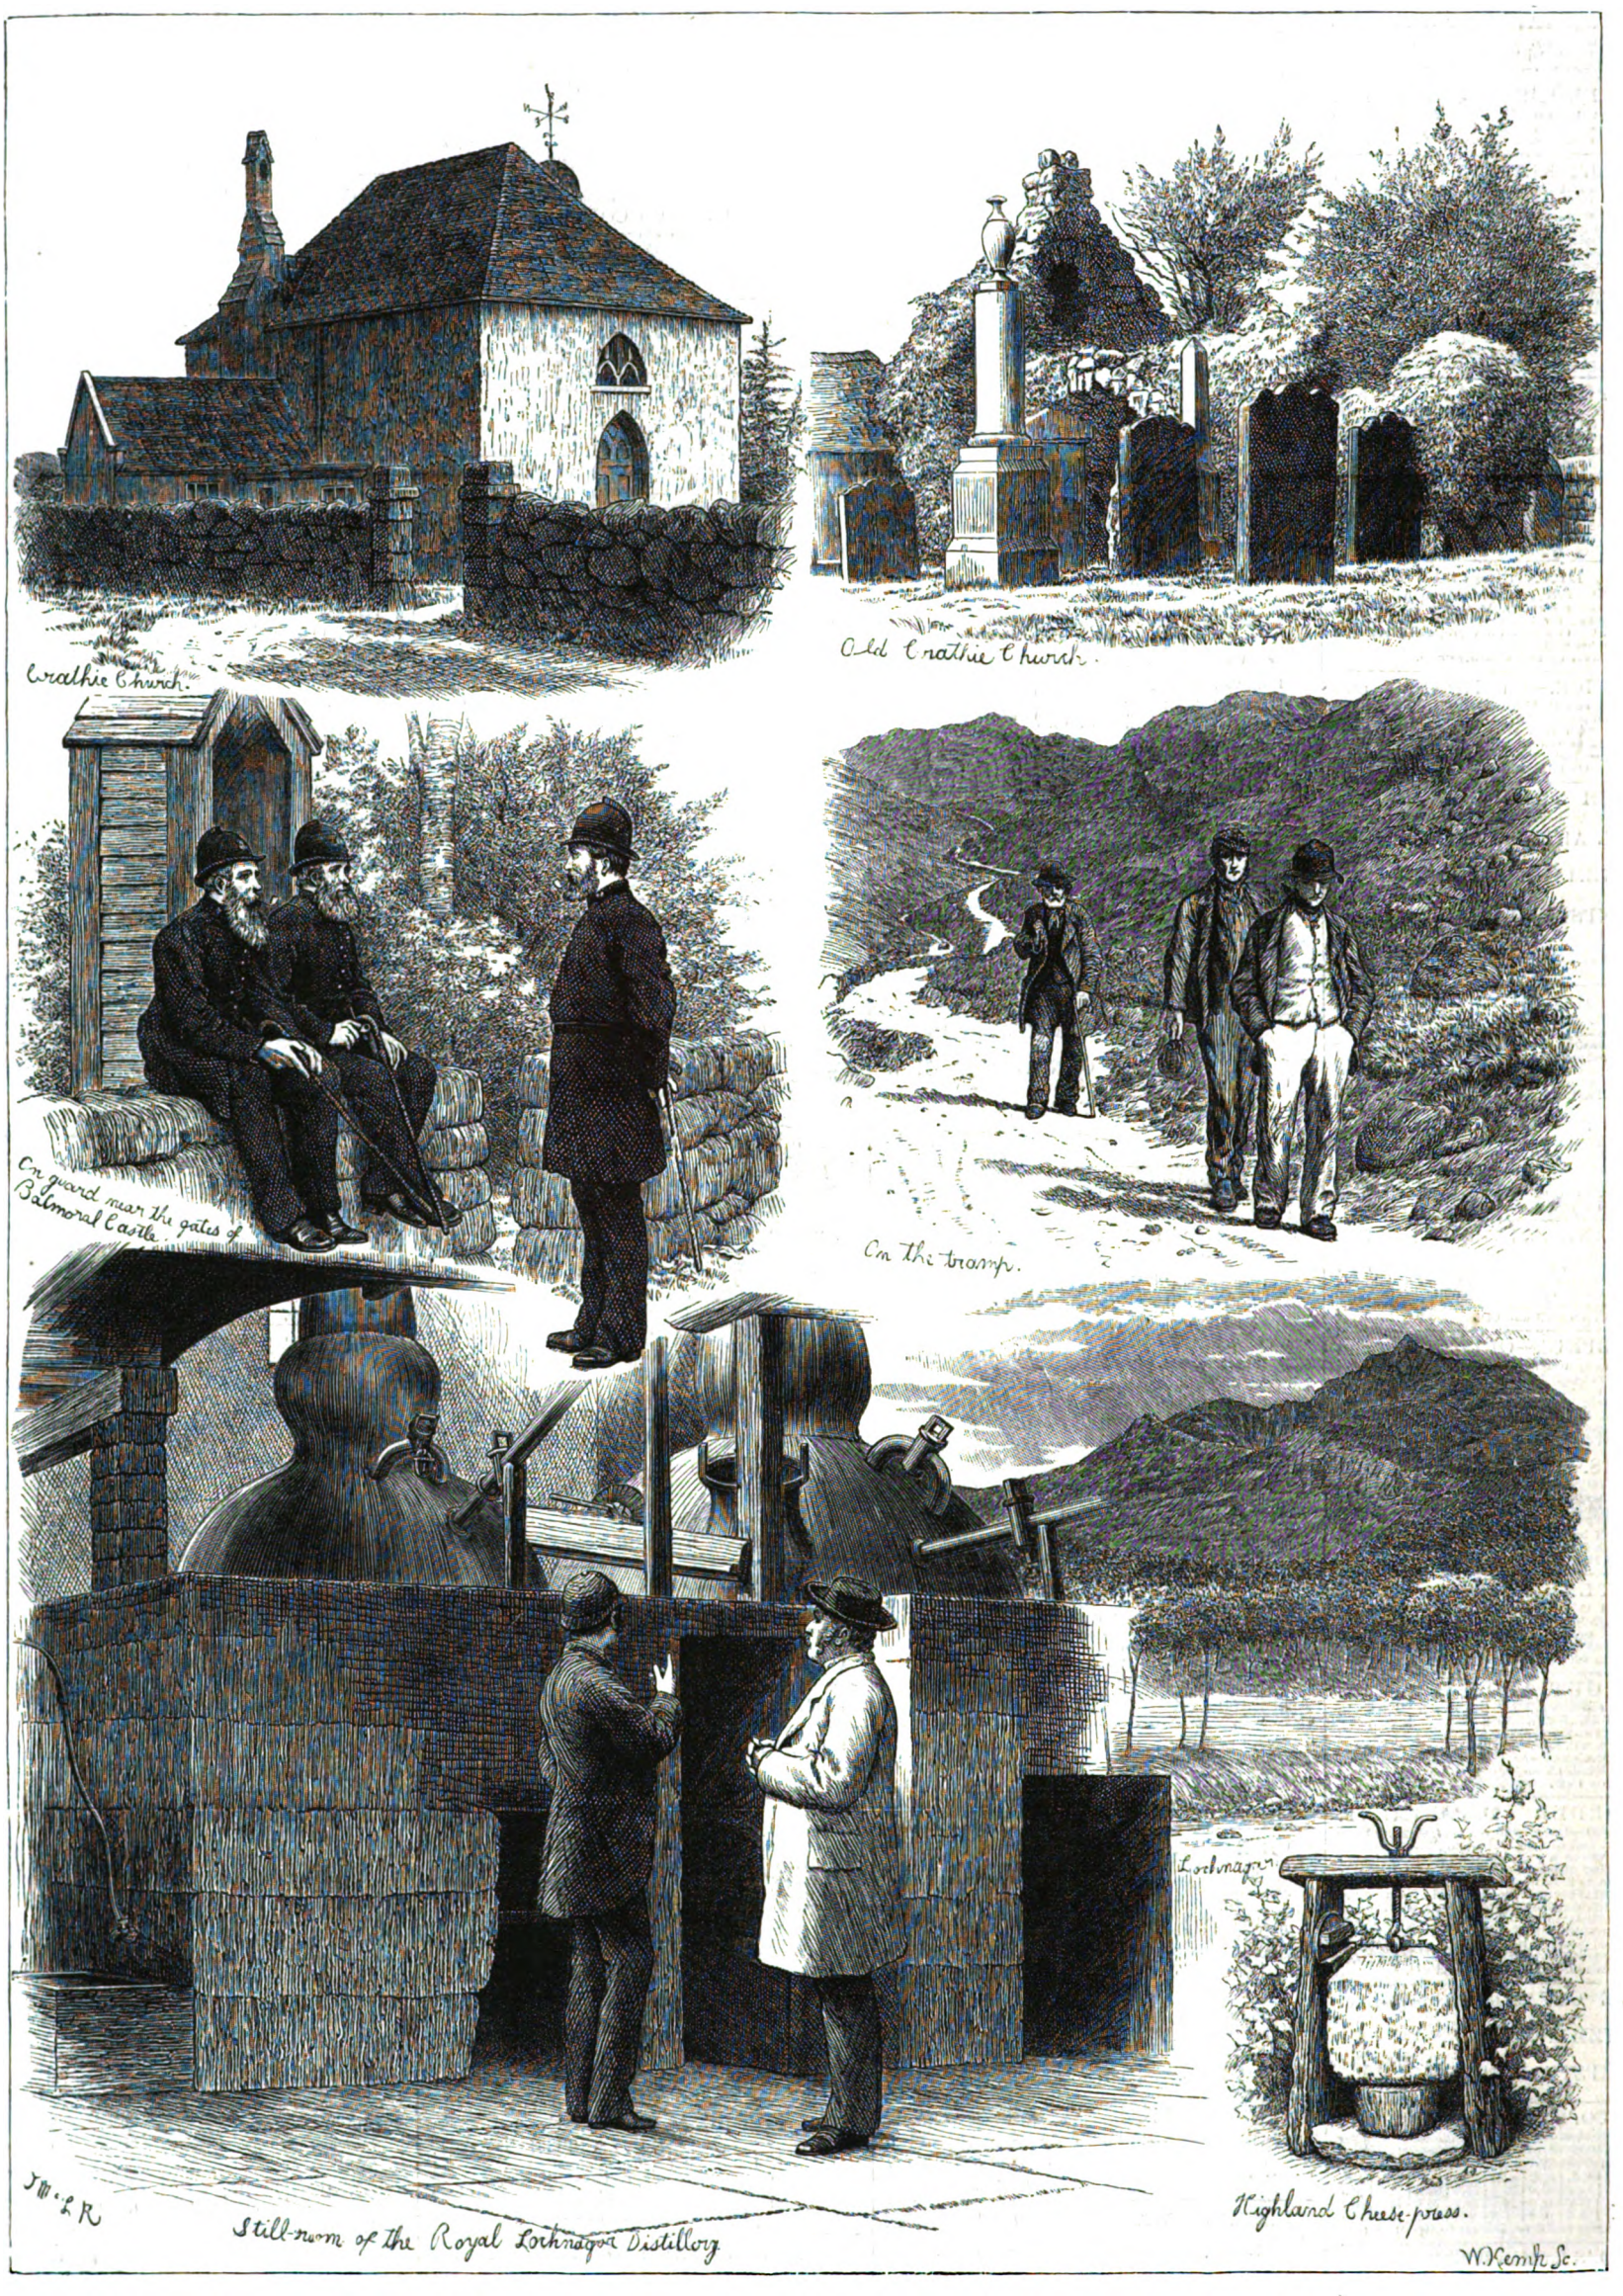
SEASONABLE DELICACY.
BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR AS BAKED PUDDING WITH STEWED FRUIT.

THE ESSEX FLOUR and GRAIN COMPANY, Liverpool-road, London, N., supply the best goods only. Flour: Whites for Pastry, per 5½ lb., 9d. 4d.; Households, for Bread making, 8s. 8d.; Wheaten Meal for Brown Bread, 8s.; Best Scotch Oatmeal for Porridge, per 14 lb., 3s.; American Hominy, 2s.; Barley, Buck Wheat, Maize, and Mixed Corn for Poultry, per bushel, 5s.; Middlings, 2s.; Bran, 1s.; Pearl Split Peas, per peck, 3s.; Split Egyptian Lentils, 3s.; Meat Biscuits, per 14 lb., 2s. 6d.; Barley Meal, per 48 lb., 5s.; Lentil Flour, per 11 lb. tin, 8d.; per 14 lb., 6s. All other kinds of Grain and Seeds. Price-List on application. Special quotations for large orders. P.O. Orders and Cheques to be made in favour of George Young.

WILLS' "WESTWARD HO!" WILLS' "WESTWARD HO!" NEW SMOKING MIXTURE.
"When all things were made, none was made better than Tobacco; to be a lone man's Companion, a bachelor's Friend, a hungry man's Food, a sad man's Cordial, a wakeful man's Sleep, and a chilly man's Fire. There's no Herb like it under the canopy of Heaven."—Kingsley's "Westward Ho!"
In 1 oz., 2 oz., and 4 oz. Packets, lined with tinfoil.
WILLS, W. D. and H. O.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."
CLARKE'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE is warranted to cleanse the Blood from all impurities, from whatever cause arising. For Scrofula, Scurvy, Skin and Blood Diseases, its effects are marvellous. In Bottles, 2s. 6d. each, and in cases, containing six times the quantity, 11s. each, of all Chemists. Sent to any address for 30 or 132 stamps, of the Proprietor, F. J. CLARKE, Chemist, Lincoln.

THOUSANDS whom Drugs have failed to relieve can be cured without pain by Electrical Treatment as carried out under an able Physician at the Galvanic Establishment, 171, New Bond-street. Opinions of the Press—Court Journal, Morning Post, &c.—Prospectus, and "The Grand Problem of Health: What is Vital Force?" forwarded on application to the Manager.

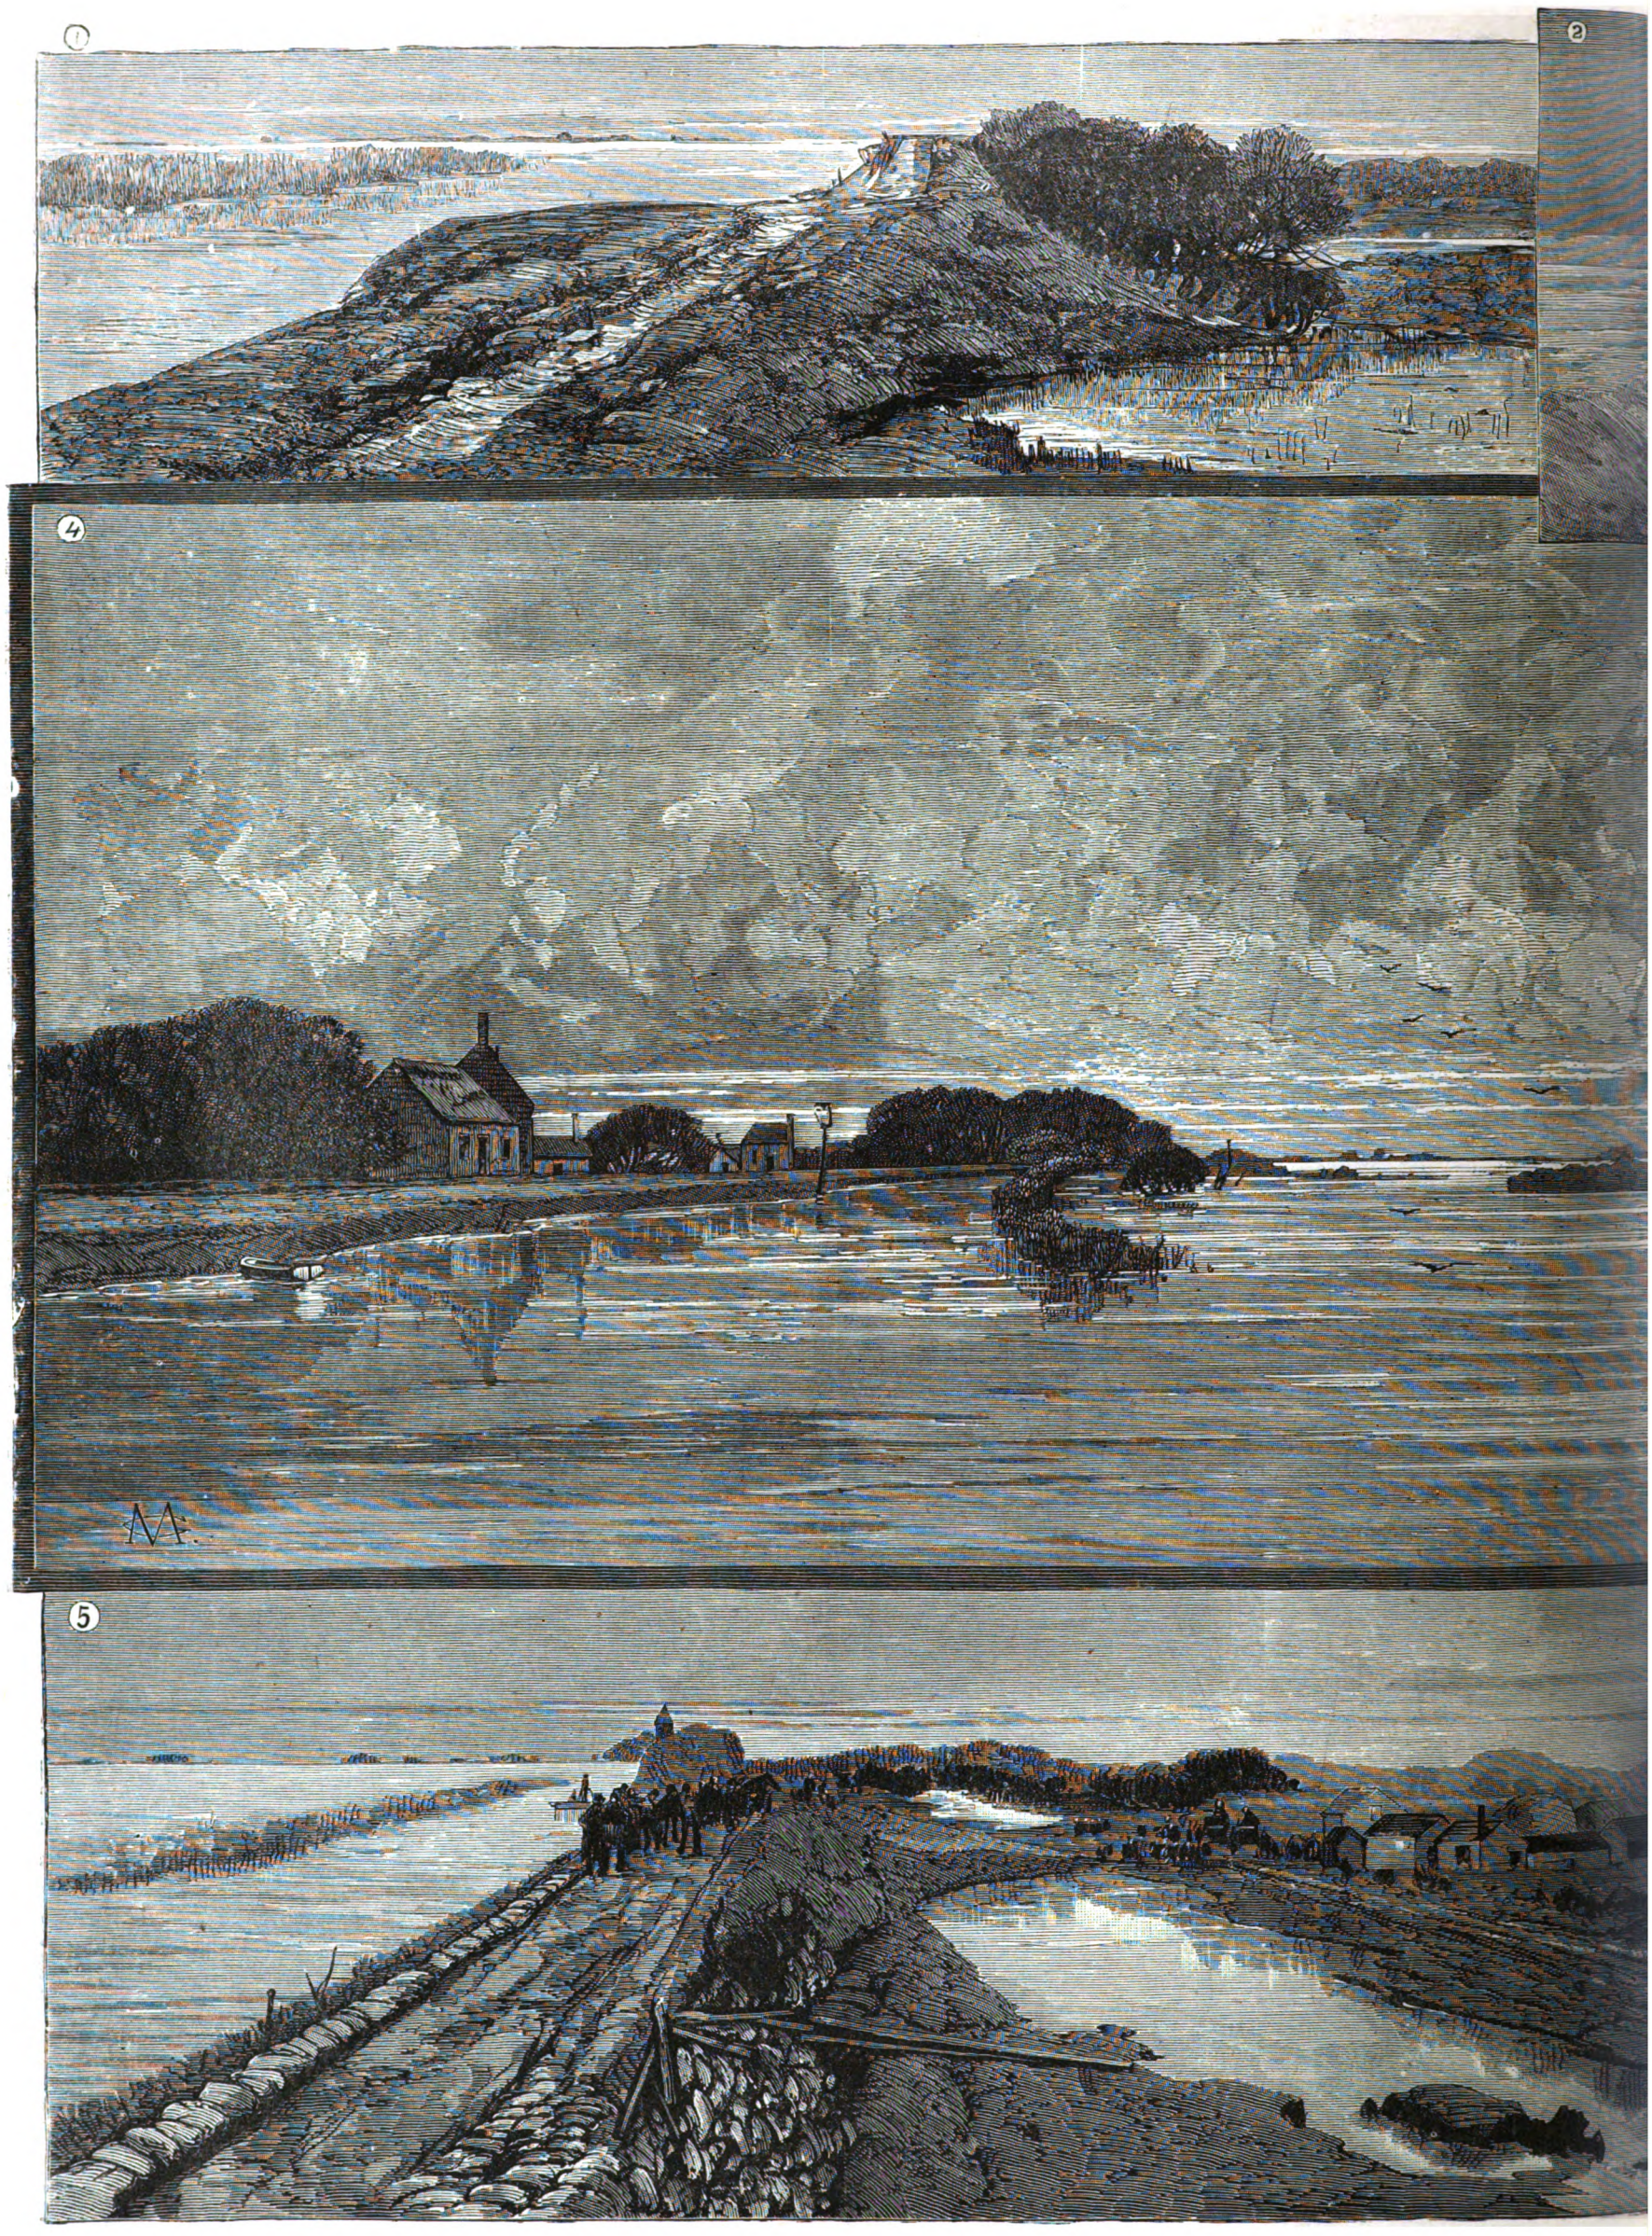


TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON, FOR CONSTIPATION, BILE, HEADACHE.
TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON, A LAXATIVE AND REFRESHING FRUIT LOZENGE UNIVERSALLY PRESCRIBED BY THE FACULTY.
TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON. 2s. 6d. per Box, stamp included. Sold by all Chemists and Druggists. Wholesale—E. GRILLON, 89, Queen-street, London, E.C.

FER BRAVAIS (Bravais' Dialysed Iron). used in every Hospital. Recommended by all Physicians. For Anæmia, Chlorosis, Debility, Exhaustion, &c. FER BRAVAIS (liquid iron in concentrated drops) is the only one entirely free from acid; it is without smell, tasteless, and produces neither constipation, diarrhœa, inflammation, or fatigue in the stomach; it is besides the only iron that never blackens the teeth. It is the cheapest of all Ferruginous Compounds, as a bottle of it lasts a month. General Depôt in Paris, 13, Rue Lafayette (near the Opera); and at all Chemists. Beware of dangerous imitations, and see that the Trade Mark is on every Bottle, which can be had of all Chemists in the United Kingdom. Sold also at 8, Idol-lane; and Messrs. Barclay and Sons', 95, Farringdon-street, London, where the Pamphlet on "Anæmia and its Treatment" can be obtained.

CONSUMPTION, ANY WASTING DISEASES.
TISSUE PHOSPHATE has been so successfully used in the treatment of Consumption, Chronic Cough, Inflamed Lungs, Debility, Emaciation, Nervous Exhaustion, and all Wasting Diseases, that it is now regarded as a real and positive cure for these complaints. A Pamphlet, descriptive of a large number of cases of which careful notes have been taken in every stage of disease, may be had free on application; and the TISSUE PHOSPHATE SYRUP may be obtained through any Chemist, price 3s. 9d. per Bottle, or carriage-paid, from ANDERSON and CO., 80, Gray's Inn-road, London, on receipt of P.O. order.

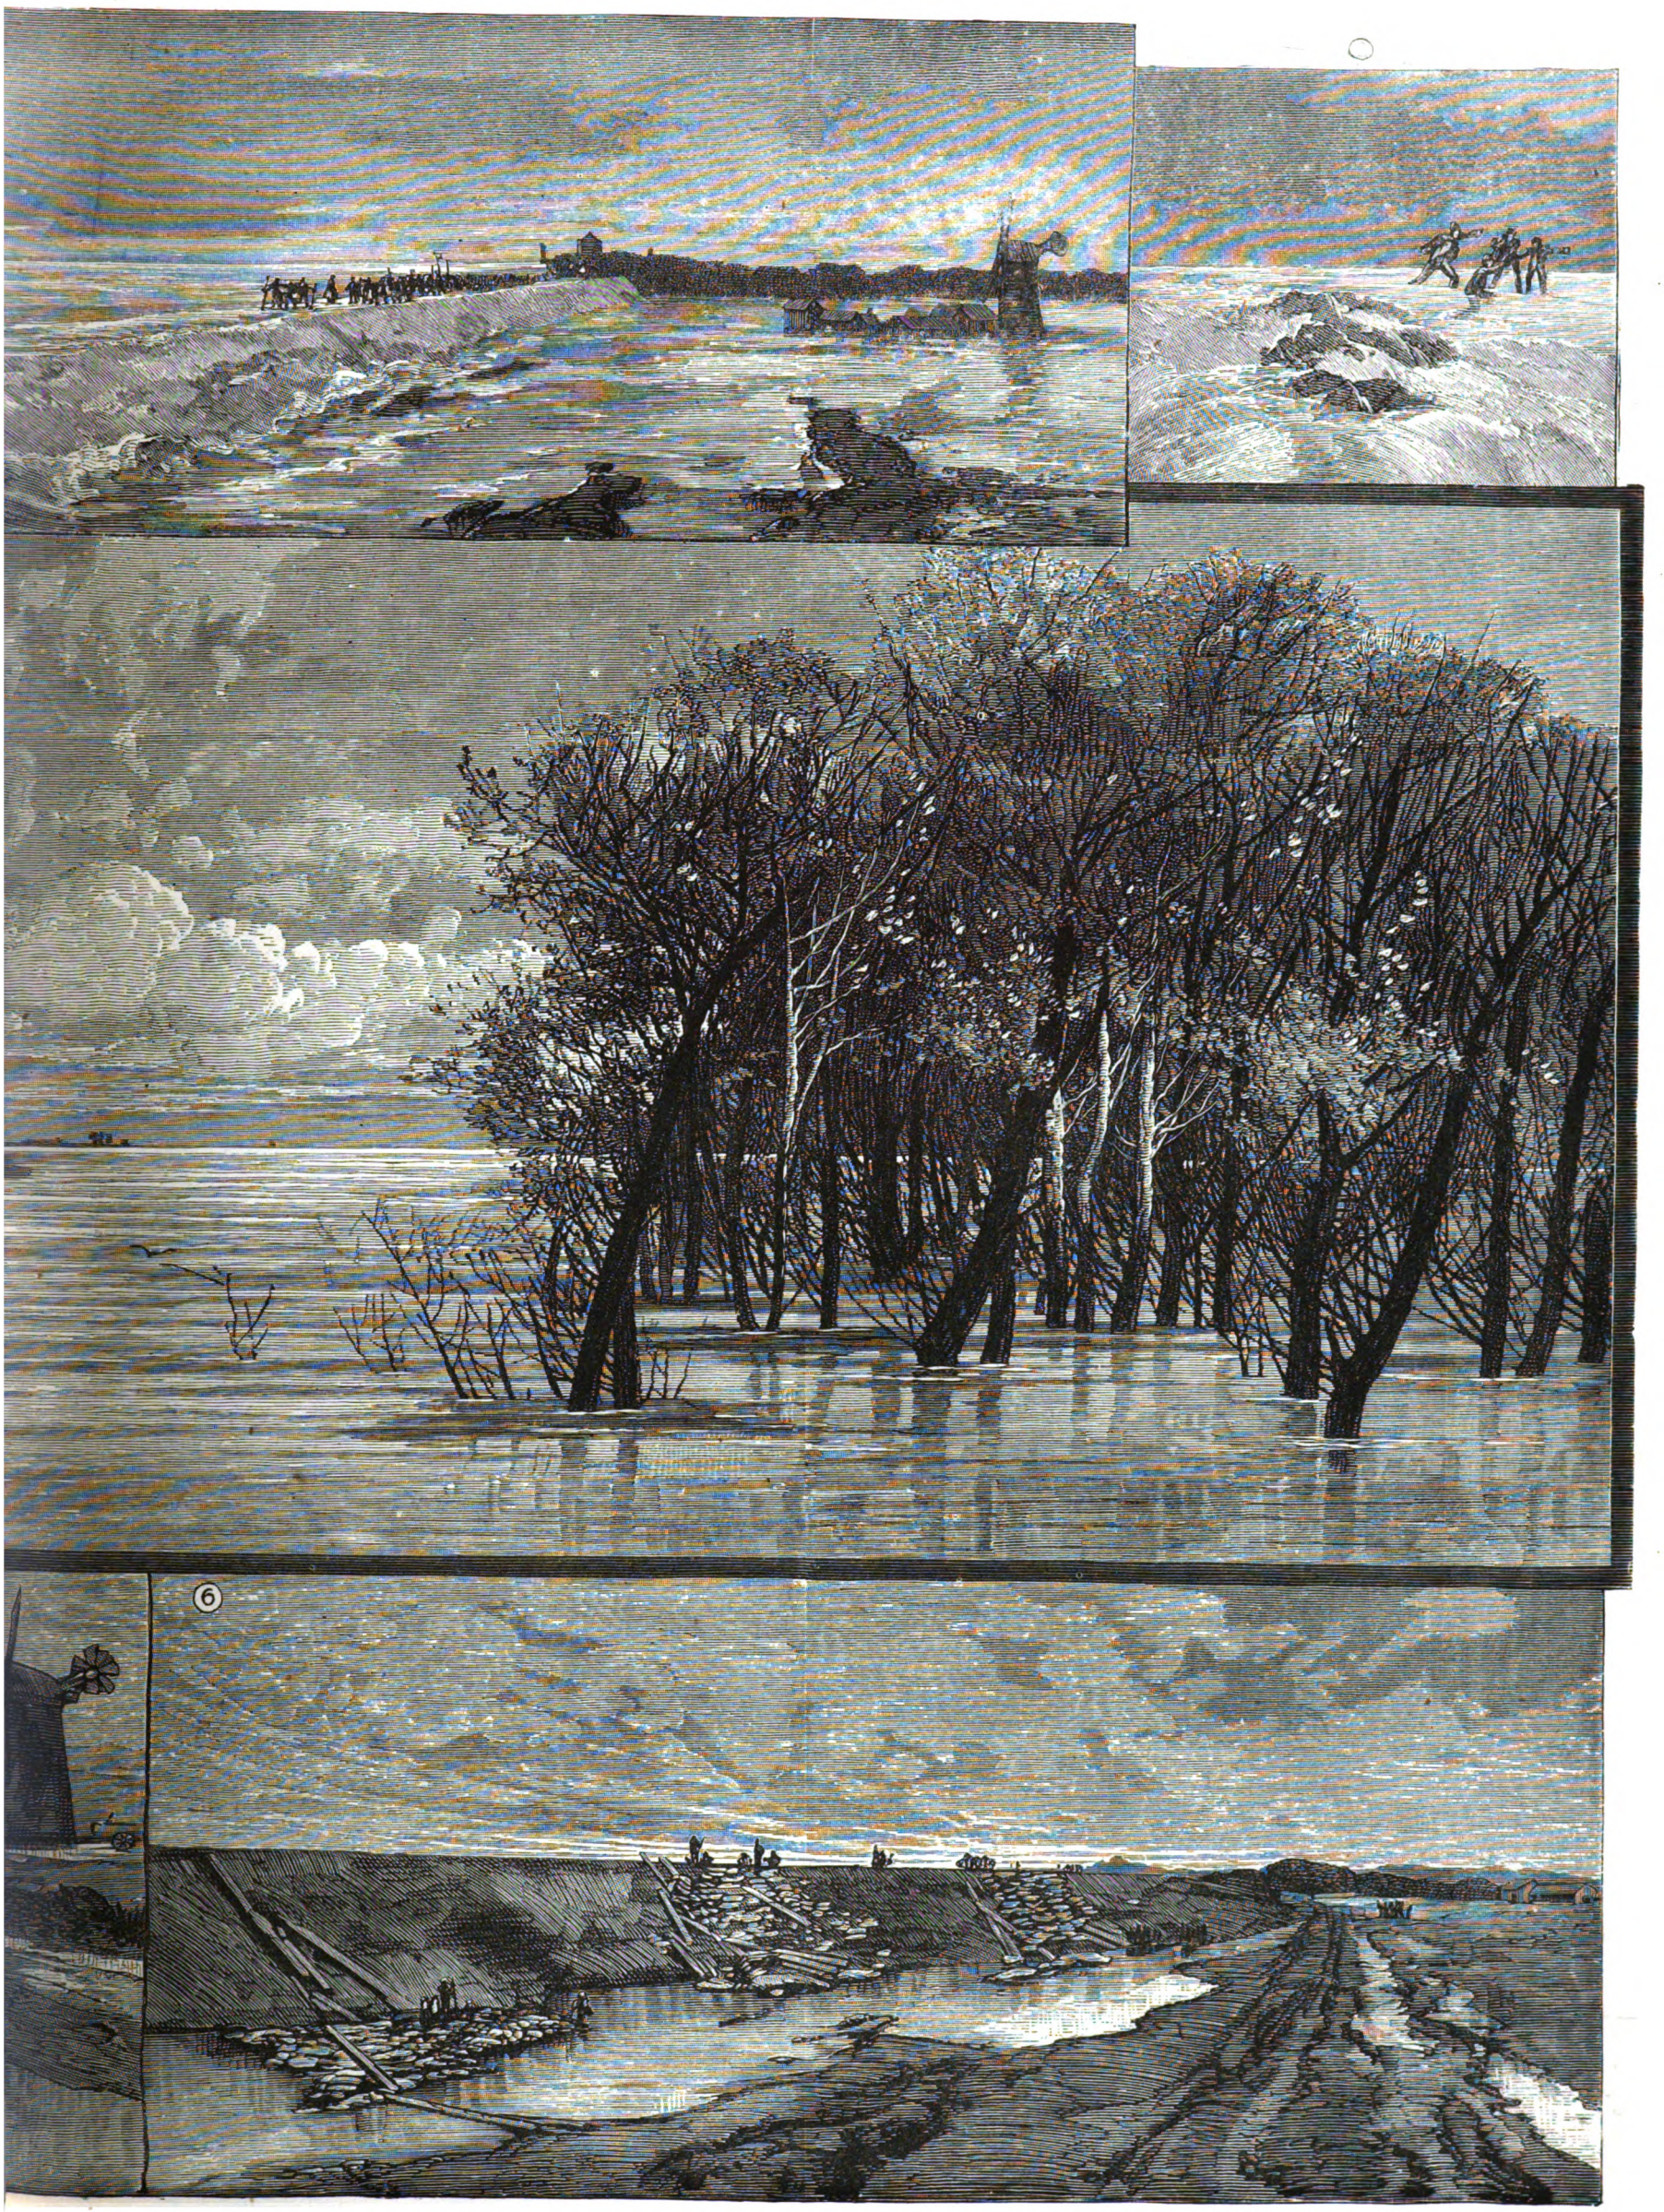
TO CONSUMPTIVES.—CONSUMPTION, BRONCHITIS, and ASTHMA. A certain method of cure has been discovered for these distressing complaints by a physician, who is desirous that all sufferers may benefit from this providential discovery. It is beyond all doubt the most remarkable remedy of the age. Full particulars will be sent by post, free of charge.—Address: Mr. WILLIAMS, 10, Oxford-terrace, Hyde Park, London.



Digitized by Google

SKETCHES AROUND BALMORAL, BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

Digitized by Google



Digitized by Google

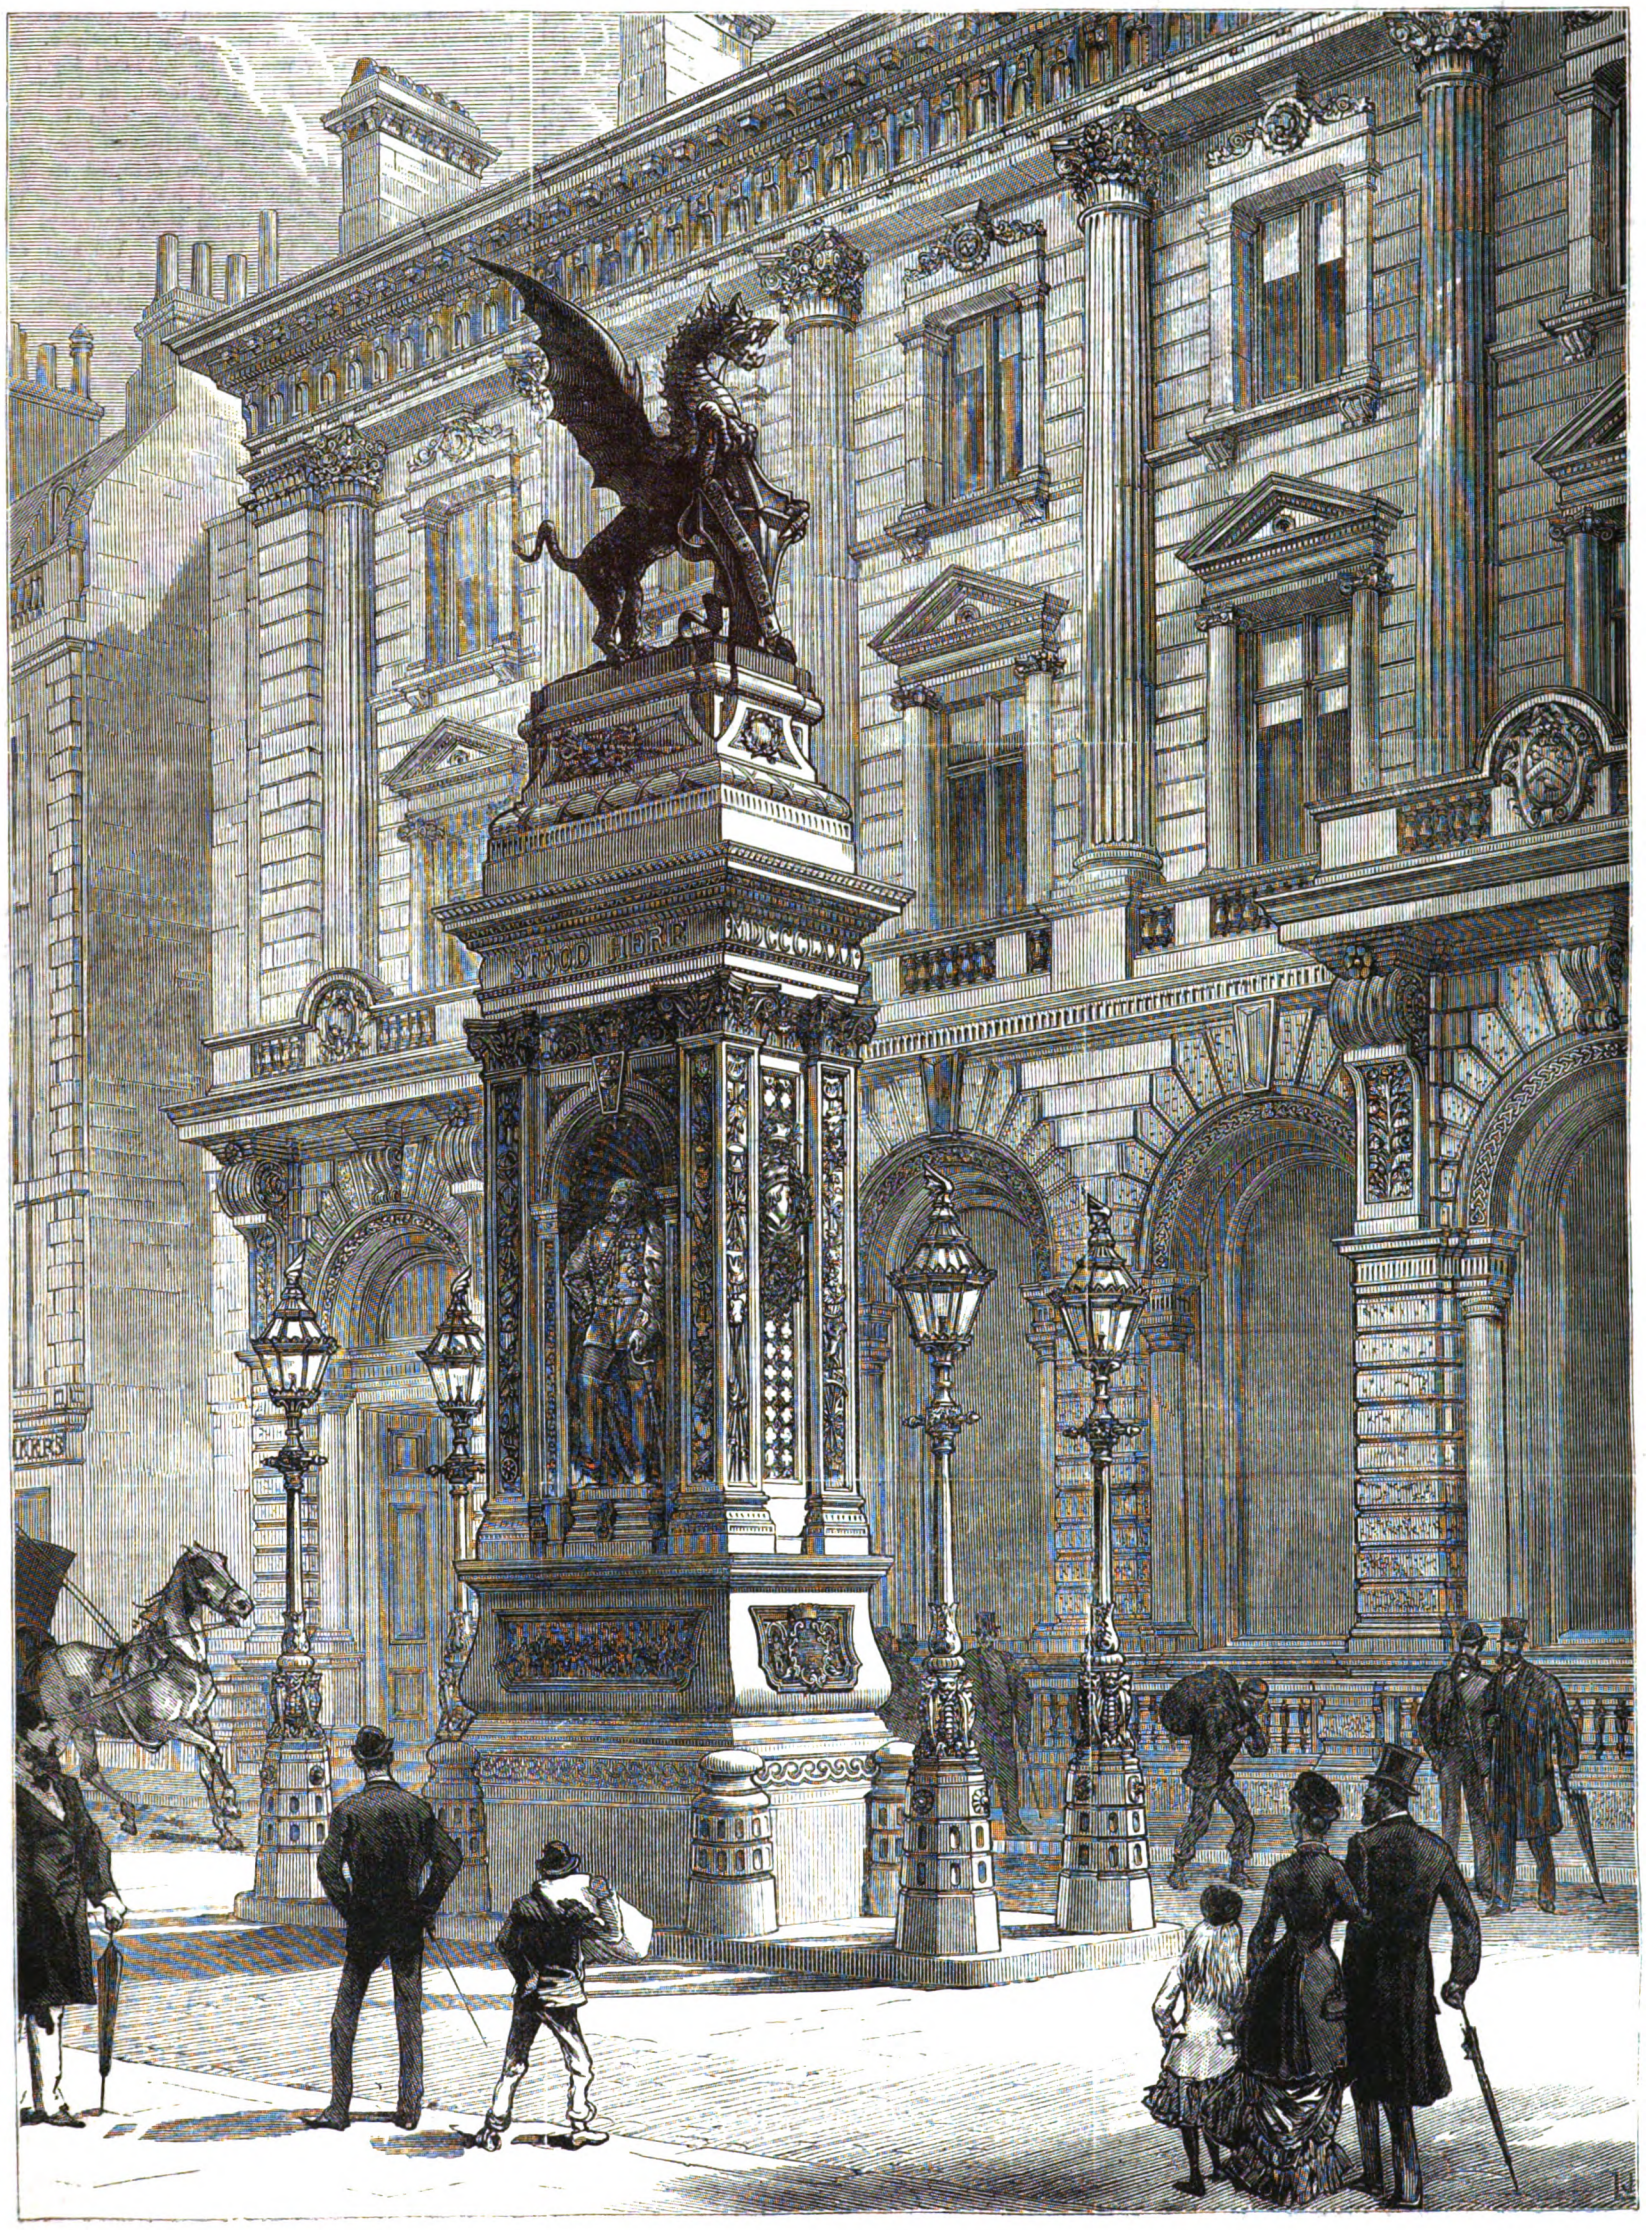
1. The Old Goyl, with land overflowed by former breach of the embankment.
2. Spectators on the embankment, view l
4. General view of the flood at Crowland.
5. Scene on the embankment after the br

THE FLOODS IN THE FEN COU

Digitized by Google

g north. 3. The four men who discovered the breach of the embankment, hastening through the water to give the alarm.
opened. 6. Two breaches in the embankment repaired.

RY: VIEWS AROUND CROWLAND.



Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

REGISTERED AT THE GENERAL POST-OFFICE FOR TRANSMISSION ABROAD.

No. 2161.—VOL. LXXVII. SATURDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1880. WITH TWO SUPPLEMENTS SIXPENCE. By Post, 6½d.

THE TEMPLE-BAR MEMORIAL.—SEE PAGE 422.

Digitized by Google

BIRTHS.

On the 21st inst., at Forest House, Bournemouth, the Lady Lucy Drury Lowe, of a daughter.

On the 6th inst., at Rothesay, New Brunswick, the wife of Thomas Stead, of a daughter.

On the 23rd inst., at 33, Dover-street, the Lady Norah Hodgson, of a son.

On the 21th inst., at Gravelye House, Hayward's-heath, the Lady Elibank, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

On the 21st inst., at St. Peter's, Eaton-square, by the Rev. George R. Winter, M.A., Vicar of Swaffham, father of the bridegroom, assisted by the Rev. N. T. Garry, M.A., the Rev. Edward George Adlington Winter, M.A., Rector of East Bradenham, Norfolk, to Horatia Georgina Isabella, eldest daughter of Major-General A. R. McMahon, of Hollymount, Queen's County.

On the 22nd ult., at San Francisco, California, by the Right Rev. the Bishop of Northern California, Sydney Hampden Peddar, of London, Solicitor, to Cecilia Frances Fanny, eldest daughter of William Arthur Green, Esq., of the Arcade House, San Francisco, and granddaughter of the late General Count de Pregent. No cards.

DEATHS.

On the 30th ult., at Graeme Villa, St. John's, Ryde, Isle of Wight, Margaretta Henrietta, widow of Vice-Admiral Honyman, formerly M.P., for Orkney and Shetland, and granddaughter of Sir John Knight, K.C.B., in her 90th year. Friends will please accept this intimation.

On the 24th inst., at Pera, Constantinople, the Right Hon. James St. Clair, fourteenth Baron Sinclair, aged 77.

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, or Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING NOV. 6.

SUNDAY, OCT. 31.

Twenty-third Sunday after Trinity.
Morning Lessons: Hosea xiv. 2 Tim. ii. Evening Lessons: Joel ii. 21, or iii. 9; Luke xxi. 5.
St. Paul's Cathedral, 10.30 a.m., Rev. J. F. Serjeant, Vicar of St. Mary's, Fulham; 3.15 p.m., Bishop Piers Claughton; 7 p.m., Rev. H. Temple, Vicar of St. John's, Leeds.
Westminster Abbey, 10 a.m. and 3 p.m.
St. James's, noon, Hon. and Rev. F. E. Byng.
Whitehall, 11 a.m., Rev. W. Hulton; 3 p.m., Rev. Francis Garden, Sub-Dean of the Chapels Royal.
Savoy, 11.30 a.m., Rev. Alfred Whitehead, Vicar of St. Peter's, Thanet; 7 p.m., Rev. Henry White, the Chaplain.
Temple Church, 11 a.m.; 3 p.m., Rev. A. Ainger.

MONDAY, NOV. 1.

All Saints' Day.
National Gallery reopened.
Institute of Art Exhibition, 9, Conduit-street, opened.
Royal Institution, general monthly meeting, 5 p.m.
Society of Engineers, 7.30 p.m.
Medical Society, 8.30 p.m.
Musical Association, 5 p.m. (Mr. E. H. Turpin, on Certain Musical Idioms and Expressions).
Haberdashers' Hall, freedom to be presented to Lady Burdett-Coutts.
Institute of British Architects, 8 p.m., address by Mr. J. Whichcord, the president.

TUESDAY, NOV. 2.

All Souls' Day.
New Moon, 3.55 p.m.
Michaelmas Law Sittings begin.
The Lord Chancellor's Reception of the Judges, &c., noon.
Christian Knowledge Society, 2 p.m.
Gresham Lectures, 6 p.m., Dean Burgon on Divinity; and on the 3rd, 4th, and 5th.
South Place Institute, 7 p.m., (Mr. W. C. Coupland on Ethical Principles; 8.30 p.m., Dr. E. B. Aveling on Biology.
Society of Biblical Archæology, 8.30 p.m., (Professor A. H. Sayce on the Hittite Inscription of Tarkondemos; Mr. T. Tyler on the inscription of Tarkutimme, &c.)
Deaf and Dumb Association, 8 p.m. (Sir John Bennett on a Watch.)
Pathological Society, 8.30 p.m.
The Lady Mayoress's Reception, 3 to 5 p.m.
Albert Hall Orchestral Society.
United Kingdom Beneficent Association, Berners-street, elections, noon.

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 3.

Agricultural Society, noon.
Entomological Society, 7 p.m.
Geological Society, 8 p.m.
Pharmaceutical Society, 8 p.m.

THURSDAY, NOV. 4.

Archæological Institute, 4 p.m.
Chemical Society, 8 p.m. (Mr. E. W. E. Kay on Compounds of Vanadium and Sulphur; papers by Messrs. Kingzett, Carnelley, Pattison, Muir, Dr. Frankland, and others).
Linnæan Society, 8 p.m. (Professor G. Watt on the Flora of India; papers by Mr. J. G. Otto Tepper, and Mr. J. G. Baker).
City of London College, 3 p.m. (Sir John Bennett on Paris and the Parisians).
Toxophilite Society, extra target; general meeting and annual dinner.
Edinburgh Literary Institute, opening address by the Earl of Elgin.
London Church Choir Association, annual festival at St. Paul's Cathedral, evening.

FRIDAY, NOV. 5.

Gunpowder Plot, 1605.
Governesses' Benevolent Institution, general court, noon (the Earl of Harrowby in the chair).
City of London College, 6 p.m. (Dr. N. Hememann on Political Economy—Law of Agriculture).
Philological Society, 8 p.m. (spelling Reform meeting).
Aberdeen University, address of Lord Rosebery, as Lord Rector.
Geologists' Association, 8 p.m. (Professor T. Rupert Jones, the President, on the Origin and Progress of the Association).
Edinburgh Philosophical Institution, opening address by Dr. J. Russell Lowell, the American Minister.
Library Association, London Institution, 8 p.m. (Mr. E. B. Nicholson on Buckram—a Palinode).
Dundee Dog Show (two days).

SATURDAY, NOV. 6.

Vintners' Hall, attendance of Prince Leopold to take up his freedom.
Birmingham New Liberal Clubhouse opened (address by Mr. John Bright, M.P.)

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE KEW OBSERVATORY OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY.

Lat. 51° 28′ 6″ N.; Long. 0° 18′ 47″ W. Height above Sea, 34 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF: Barometer Corrected.	Temperature of the Air.	Dew Point.	Relative Humidity.	Amount of Cloud.	THERMOM.: Maximum, read at 10 p.m.	Minimum, read at 10 a.m.	WIND: General Direction.	Movement in 24 hours, read at 10 a.m. next morning.	Rain in 24 hours, read at 10 A.M. next morning.
	Inches.	°	°	°	0–10	°	°		Miles.	In.
Oct. 17	30·078	50·5	46·2	86	10	57·3	47·4	NE. N.	46	0·000
18	30·011	49·1	44·5	85	8	56·2	44·7	WSW., NE.	99	0·010
19	29·993	44·2	38·3	82	9	47·6	42·2	NE. WSW.	188	0·705*
20	29·578	39·1	31·9	86	9	43·4	32·8	NE. NNW.	171	0·055*
21	29·825	39·1	32·1	78	8	46·8	31·2	NW. N.	188	0·135
22	29·656	42·1	35·2	79	10	46·0	38·4	NE.	372	0·235
23	29·893	40·4	31·2	72	6	46·4	36·0	NE.	418	0·000

* Rain and snow.

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, in order, at ten o'clock a.m.:—

Barometer (in inches) corrected	30·088	29·993	29·615	29·670	29·812	29·721	29·776
Temperature of Air	51·3°	50·7°	46·0	43·5°	38·4°	42·0	43·8°
Temperature of Evaporation	49·0	48·7°	42·9	39·1°	36·0	40·2	40·4°
Direction of Wind	NE.	NNE.	NE.	NNE.	NW.	NNE.	NE.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE FOR THE WEEK ENDING NOVEMBER 6.

Sunday.		Monday.		Tuesday.		Wednesday.		Thursday.		Friday.		Saturday.
M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A
h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m
—	0 5	0 23	0 48	1 5	1 25	1 45	2 5	2 25	2 47	3 8	3 30	3 53	4 17

NOW READY.
PRICE ONE SHILLING (INLAND POSTAGE, 2½d.),
THE
ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK
FOR
1881,
CONTAINING
SIX COLOURED PICTURES;
PRINTED BY LEIGHTON BROTHERS' CHROMATIC PROCESS,
FROM ORIGINALS BY EMINENT ARTISTS.
TWELVE FINE-ART ENGRAVINGS;
ASTRONOMICAL PHENOMENA;
TWELVE DIAGRAMS OF THE DURATION OF MOONLIGHT;
The Royal Family of Great Britain; the Queen's Household; her Majesty's Ministers; Lists of Public Offices and Officers; Bankers, Law and University Terms; Fixed and Movable Festivals; Anniversaries; Acts of Parliament passed during the Session of 1880; Revenue and Expenditure; Obituary of Eminent Persons; Christian, Jewish, and Mohammedan Calendars; Tables of Stamps, Taxes, and Government Duties; Times of High Water; Post Office Regulations; together with a large amount of useful and valuable information, which has during the past thirty-eight years made the ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK the most acceptable and elegant companion to the Library; whilst it is universally acknowledged to be by far the cheapest Almanack ever published.
The unprecedented demand for the ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK year after year stimulates the Proprietor to still greater exertions to secure for this Almanack a reception as favourable as that which has hitherto placed its circulation second only to that of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.
The ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK is inclosed in an elegant cover, printed in colours by the same process as the COLOURED PLATES, and forms a useful and pleasing ornament to the drawing-room table.
The SHILLING ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK is published at the Office of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, 198, Strand, and sold by all Booksellers and Newsvenders.

DORÉ'S GREAT WORKS.—"ECCE HOMO" ("Full of divine dignity."—The Times) and "THE ASCENSION;" "CHRIST LEAVING THE PRETORIUM," "CHRIST ENTERING JERUSALEM," with all his other Great Pictures.—DORÉ GALLERY, 35, New Bond-street. Daily, 10 to 6. 1s.

THE SIXTEENTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION of WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS is NOW OPEN, at THOMAS McLEAN'S GALLERY, 7, Haymarket, next the Theatre. Admission, including Catalogue, One Shilling.

SACRED HARMONIC SOCIETY.—Conductor, Sir Michael Costa.—The FORTY-NINTH SEASON will COMMENCE at St. James's Hall on FRIDAY, DEC. 3, with Beethoven's Mass in C, Mendelssohn's "Lauda Sion" and "Christus." The following works will be performed during the season:—Benedict's "St. Cecilia," Sullivan's "Martyr of Antioch," Cherubini's "Requiem," Costa's "Naaman," Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise," "Elijah," "Athalie," Rossini's "Stabat Mater," "Moses in Egypt," Handel's "Samson," "Coronation Anthem," "Messiah," Offices, 7, John-street, Adelphi. Open from Ten till Five o'Clock.
Principal Vocalists already engaged:—Mesdames Sherrington, Anna Williams, Osgood, Marriott, C. Penna, Enequist, Jones, Patey, Enriquez, Hemcock, Mary Cummings, Orridge; Messrs. Vernon Rigby, Edward Lloyd, Maas, Wells, Cummings, G. F. Carter, Santley, Bridson, King, Hilton, C. Henry. Organist, Mr. Willing.
Subscriptions for Series of Nine Concerts, £2 2s., £1, and 3 guineas each. Season prospectus now ready. Offices, 7, John-street, Adelphi. Open from Ten till Five o'Clock.

MR. WALTER BACHE'S PIANOFORTE RECITAL (Ninth season), ST. JAMES'S HALL, MONDAY, NOV. 1, at Half-past Three. Vocalist, Miss Anna Williams. Stalls, 5s.; Balcony, 3s. Admission, 1s. Stanley Lucas, Weber and Co., Chappell and Co., usual Agents, and Austin's Ticket Office, St. James's Hall.

MR. and MRS. GERMAN REED'S ENTERTAINMENT. THE TURQUOISE RING, Mr. Corney Grain's New Musical Sketch, THE HAUNTED ROOM and A FLYING VISIT. Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday Evenings at Eight; Thursday and Saturday Afternoons at Three. Admission, 1s., 2s.; Stalls, 3s. and 5s.—ST. GEORGE'S HALL, Langham-place.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry Irving.—THE CORSICAN BROTHERS Every Night at 8.30—Louis and Fabien dei Franchi, Mr. Irving. At 7.30, BYGONES, by A. W. Pinero. Doors open at 7. Special Morning Performances of THE CORSICAN BROTHERS, Saturdays, OCT. 30, and NOV. 6 and 13; also Wednesday, Nov. 3, and Wednesday, Nov. 10, at 2.30. Box Office (Mr. Hurst) open 10 to 5 daily. Seats booked by letter or telegram.

THE BRIGHTON SEASON.
Frequent Trains from Victoria and London Bridge.
Also Trains in connection from Kensington and Liverpool-street.
Return Tickets, London to Brighton, available for eight days.
Weekly, Fortnightly, and Monthly Tickets, at Cheap Rates.
Available to travel by all Trains between London and Brighton.
Cheap Half-Guinea First Class Day Tickets to Brighton Every Saturday, from Victoria and London Bridge.
Admitting to the Grand Aquarium and Royal Pavilion.
Cheap First Class Day Tickets to Brighton every Sunday, From Victoria at 10.45 a.m., and London Bridge at 10.35 a.m.
Pullman Drawing-Room Cars between Victoria and Brighton.
Through Bookings to Brighton from principal Stations On the Railways in the Northern and Midland districts.
A Special Train for Horses, Carriages, and Servants, From Victoria to Brighton, at 11.15 a.m. every Weekday.

GRAND AQUARIUM AND PAVILION.—Military and other Concerts EVERY SATURDAY AFTERNOON, for which the above Saturday Cheap Tickets are available.

NEW ROUTE to WEST BRIGHTON by the DIRECT LINE, PRESTON PARK to CLIFTONVILLE.
A Morning Up and Evening Down Fast Train Every Weekday between London Bridge and West Brighton.

PARIS.—SHORTEST, CHEAPEST ROUTE.—Via NEWHAVEN, DIEPPE, and ROUEN.
CHEAP EXPRESS SERVICE Every Week Night—First, Second, and Third Class.
From Victoria 7.50 p.m., and London Bridge 8.0 p.m.
Fares—Single, 53s., 24s., 17s.; Return, 55s., 39s., 32s.
Powerful Paddle-Steamers, with excellent cabins, &c.
Trains run alongside Steamers at Newhaven and Dieppe.
SOUTH OF FRANCE, ITALY, SWITZERLAND, &c.—Tourists' Tickets are issued enabling the holder to visit all the principal places of interest.
HAVRE.—Passengers booked through by this route every week night from Victoria and London Bridge as above.
HONFLEUR, TROUVILLE, CAEN, &c.—Passengers booked through from Victoria and London Bridge, via Littlehampton, every Monday and Wednesday.

TICKETS and every information at the Brighton Company's West-End General Offices, 28, Regent-circus, Piccadilly; and No. 8, Grand Hotel Buildings, Trafalgar-square; also at the Victoria and London Bridge Stations. (By Order) J. P. KNIGHT, General Manager.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON: SATURDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1880.

The publication by the Board of Trade of the Wreck Register and Chart of the British Isles for the year 1878-9 reminds us of the practice we have observed, for many years past, of calling our readers' attention to two subjects of high importance in the interests of the country—the loss of life and property at sea, and the instrumentalities in use for lessening, as far as may be, the extent of both. Of these instrumentalities the most powerful by far, as well as the most successful, is the National Life-Boat Institution—perhaps, of all the organisations of philanthropic efforts, the one which best commends itself to the lively sympathy and active support of the British community. Indeed, we know not how affluence can more satisfactorily, either to itself or to the nation, exhibit its liberality for the relief of distress, or for averting misfortune and death, than by providing, at some still vacant station on our coasts, a Life-Boat under the efficient guardianship of this noble Institution. It appeals to one of the deepest and the most beneficent instincts of our common nature. It is free from every objection which almost necessarily besets other charitable modes of doing good to those who, for the time being, are helpless and dependent upon the intervention of other men. It trains up in its service a host of men in manly habits, in daring enterprise, and in experience, the gaining of which ennobles themselves whilst it is invaluable to others. During the past year, we learn that the National Life-Boat Institution, in conjunction with some other agencies, amongst which we may make honourable mention of the Rocket Apparatus of the Board of Trade, succeeded in rescuing from impending destruction at sea no fewer than 3302 lives, which must otherwise have perished. A bare glance at the gratifying fact will suffice to suggest very much more that attaches to it. Every one of those lives was unspeakably precious, at least to the owner of it. The end which threatened it was of no common order. The fury of the elements, the desolation of the waters, the terror which seizes upon most at such a crisis of their fate, and the agony of expectation that deliverance might somehow come to them, they had to endure. Had they gone down, not only would the light and joy of life have gone with them, but each of them, in all probability, would have left an aching vacancy in the hearts of surviving relations, and the bitterness of grief, "refusing to be comforted," would have diffused itself through many circles, while the actual loss of industrious hands would have been inflicted upon their country. We need not further pursue the thought. We can only offer the most heartfelt congratulations to those who have been happily instrumental in accomplishing by their organisation such splendid results.

The Wreck Register and Chart for 1878-9 does not materially differ from those which have preceded it. It presents us with the same classification of the events with which it has to do. It specifies the numbers of wrecks, casualties, and collisions that have occurred on and near the coasts of the United Kingdom. It points out the localities of the wrecks (excluding collisions, of course) and apportions to each one of coast—East, West, North, and South—the approximately accurate number of maritime disasters that have occurred upon it. It distinguishes between vessels belonging to this country and its dependencies and those owned by foreign nations. It gives us a rough notion of the causes to which such wrecks and casualties were mainly due. It informs us of the ages respectively of the vessels to which misfortune happened; the direction and force of the wind at the time when they were most in peril; and some of the conditions under which collisions have taken place. We refrain from giving here the figures we have often given in former instances. They serve, perhaps, rather to bewilder than to elucidate. We have extracted from them much of the story which they tell, and we shall only recur to them in as far as they are essential to the realisation of the events to which they belong.

One of the first topics suggested by this annual Wreck Register and Chart is the vast and still increasing magnitude of the Shipping and Commercial interests of the United Kingdom. The number of British vessels alone entering inwards and clearing outwards to and from our Ports in one year averages 600,000, representing a probable tonnage of 102,000,000, and, reckoning all voyages during the year, carrying on board, from port to port, some three or four million persons. Looking at these stupendous totals, one is less astonished at the number of casualties recorded than at their comparative infrequency. The seas which wash the coasts of Great Britain and Ireland are proverbially difficult for navigation. Shoals lurk underneath their surface. Tides and currents render the waters treacherous. Tempests, sometimes sudden and brief, sometimes continuous and irresistible, try to the utmost the stability and structural soundness of the craft exposed to their force. The master's eye and judgment, and the sobriety, docility, and competency of the crew, are almost incessantly called into requisition. At no time of the year is it possible to forecast, with any certainty, the conditions of a trip, taken whether for business or for pleasure, along the coasts of these isles. Yet, how proportionately small is the number of lives lost! During the year we are speaking of, 490 people perished in the various shipwrecks enumerated in the Board of Trade Report—a large number, no doubt, but scarcely so large as might have been expected from the gross quantity of shipping employed. There is another striking feature of the case before us. The large number of accidents that occur from preventible causes is hardly creditable to our maritime reputation. Thirty-one vessels have been totally lost, or have foundered, on or near our coasts during the past year in consequence of defects in the ships themselves or their equipments, while sixty-nine happened through the errors, &c., of masters, officers, crews, or pilots. Serious casualties occurred during the same time in ninety-seven cases through defects in the ships or their equipments, and in 173 cases through errors or misconduct on the part of those to whom the navigation of them had been intrusted.

We are glad, however, to observe from the Register before us some improvement in this respect. The new "Rule of the Road" at sea, and the recent Acts of Parliament for the regulation of Merchant Shipping, will, we trust, tell favourably upon every future record annually issued by the Board of Trade. The tendencies of the age, moreover, are towards a more watchful care of human life in every department of industrial enterprise. Sea-going will, under any circumstances, continue to be a perilous vocation, though not more perilous, perhaps, than mining. But, in both, accidents are more frequently due to neglect than to natural and unforseeable causes; and when to increased conscientiousness and caution in those who send ships to sea, or who "do business in mighty waters," the unwearying and beneficent organisations for the saving of life are allied, the hope, surely, is not too sanguine that the sailors who perish in their hardy calling will bear a much smaller proportion to the amount of shipping employed than it has been used to do in bygone years.

ST. JAMES'S HALL, PICCADILLY.
On MONDAY NEXT, NOV. 1.,
GRAND GALA NIGHT
IN CELEBRATION OF THE COMMENCEMENT OF THE
MOORE and BURGESS MINSTRELS'
SIXTEENTH CONSECUTIVE YEAR
IN LONDON.
When an entirely
NEW AND BRILLIANT PROGRAMME will be presented.

Digitized by Google

ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

Old Cobbett once expressed a wish to parade all the members of the newspaper press on Kennington-common, in order, as he put it, that the public might see by what an ugly set of fellows they were governed. In the current number of that highly respectable—I had almost said venerable—periodical, the Quarterly Review, a not very successful attempt is made to parade the whole newspaper press of the nineteenth century in Albemarle-street for the inspection, possibly (through double eyeglasses), of the old gentlemen from the clubhouses in Pall-mall and St. James's, who occasionally manifest some anxiety to see "the fellows who write for the newspapers." With a similar intent they repair once a year to the festival of that excellent institution the Newspaper Press Fund; but there they are usually disappointed in their quest: as the great majority of journalists who are really eminent in their profession are content to subscribe to the funds of the charity, and to stay away from the dinner.

The Quarterly article is not, apart from some industriously compiled statistics, a valuable production; but it is in parts highly amusing. The writer is remarkably diffuse on the subject of the remuneration of the gentlemen of the press (do we inquire how many guineas a sheet the Editor of the Quarterly pays his contributors?), and states that a journalist who is able to write a "slashing" leading article—a task which the reviewer thinks can be accomplished "without much labour and without much difficulty"—may earn from fifteen to twenty guineas a week. Dear me! And is that so? But how many "slashing" leaders must the gifted journalist compose in order to earn from seven hundred and fifty to a thousand a year? Two leaders or six? And what is a "slashing" leader? I always thought that the art of inditing "slashing" articles began to die out with Theodore Hook, who, in the Tory John Bull, abused Queen Caroline; with Dr. Maginn, who, in the Tory Fraser, insulted the Countess of Berkeley; and with the Right Honourable John Wilson Croker, who, in the Tory Quarterly itself, vituperated Lady Morgan. Ah! those were the grands jours d'Auvergne—and Albemarle-street.

Just two more excruciatingly diverting items, and I have done with this odd article. The reviewer pathetically laments that Conservatism is not more fully represented in the London daily press. Why, my good man, Liberalism is nowhere, comparatively speaking, among the dailies. We have the Daily News and the Daily Chronicle in the morning, and the Pall Mall Gazette and the Echo in the evening; whereas you, gentlemen Tories, have the Standard, morning and evening, the Morning Post, the Morning Advertiser, the St. James's Gazette, the Globe, and, in the essentials of Conservatism, the Times and the Daily Telegraph. As for us, poor Radicals, we are journalistically a feebler folk than the conies. The wit, the humour, the eloquence, the logic, are all on your side, gentlemen Tories.

The last point to which I advert is the most comical one of all. The reviewer solemnly rebukes as "the worst" and most mischievous of the weekly organs of Radicalism a journal of which he is unable to quote even the name correctly. Lloyd's Weekly Newspaper he calls Lloyd's Weekly London News. Everybody knows that the editor of that widely-circulated journal is Mr. Blanchard Jerrold, the biographer and the apologist of Napoleon III., and who is a conscientious but strictly constitutional and moderate Liberal, who was a stanch supporter of Lord Beaconsfield's foreign policy, and whose political leading articles are couched in the gentlest and least offensive of strains.

"A German," referring to the "Spare the Rod, &c.," discussion, remembers that, some thirty years ago, he was taught as a boy to repeat—

Liebe Ruth
Mach mich gutt;
Mach mich fromm
Dass ich in den Himmel komm.

So that, at all events, we have obtained a little fragment of folklore from this forbidding question. I am yet at issue with Professor W. W. Skeat (who still refrains from assailing me with hundred-ton guns and showers of assegais); but I must defer giving the gist of his last courteous communication until I have written to him privately to ask him to clear up a point in his letter which I cannot quite understand, and which would require too much space to be fully treated, here. The conclusion of "Maria's" clever, cynical letter puzzles me altogether; but I have many puzzling correspondents.

A cheery, bright-spirited letter reaches me from H.M.S. "Conway," at Birkenhead, the youngsters on board which gallant craft have, it appears, "received orders to get two farces ready for performance by Christmas." I like the straightness and terseness of the order. No beating about the bush! No circumlocution! All perfectly ship-shape. "Pipe all hands for skylarking. Aye, aye, Sir." The farces were to be "screaming" ones; so I ventured to recommend a choice of pieces, comprising "The Area Bell," "The Pigskins," "Make Your Wills," "A Philosopher in a Smock-Frock," and "The Birthplace of Podgers." And I wish the youngsters on board H.M.S. "Conway" a merry Christmas, with all my heart.

The schooling I had more than forty years ago was of a very grim and conventual kind; but there were two occasions during the year on which we were permitted to laugh uproariously. On the day preceding that of the annual distribution of prizes a temporary theatre was erected on the drill-ground (one could scarcely call it a play-ground); and a "screaming" farce was performed by the elder boys. One year it was "Le Sourd; ou l'Auberge Pleine"—our English "Deaf as a Post;" next year it was the old original mediæval "Avocat Patelin," in which so frequently occurs the now proverbial locution, "Revenons à nos moutons."

And the other occasion? It was on the twenty-seventh of December. The whole class of which I was a member, which was composed of about forty boys, were permitted to compete for a prize—in the shape of a day added to the ordinary week's holiday at the New Year—for the best humorous essay or "thème" on a text given out by the master. I can see him now, rapping his snuff-box, and looking much wiser than any portrait of Lord Eldon—to say nothing of Lord Thurlow—that ever came under my purview ever looked. At length he spake. "Ma Femme et mon Parapluie." This was the text for the prize essay to be written upon. A shout of laughter burst from forty throats, and was again and again renewed: the suggestor of the subject remaining imperturbably calm and majestic. I may add that "Ma Femme et mon Parapluie" was the title of a vaudeville which, just then, was making all Paris shriek with laughter. I did not come out first in the competition: not having, in the year 1839, much to say that was humorous or otherwise touching either wives or umbrellas. It may be that the prize-winner was one of my class-mates who has since achieved considerable ability as a dramatist: being the author, indeed, of "La Dame aux Camélias."

Within three-quarters of a mile of the house which I inhabit there occurred last Saturday night a most terrible stabbing affray. In a place called Eyre-street-hill, in the heart of the Italian colony in London, a fierce disturbance took place between the foreigners and the English. The former drew their knives, and began stabbing right and left. Two Italians have already been brought before the magistrate at Clerkenwell, and charged with being concerned in the affray; and other arrests will probably be made by a vigilant police, acting "on information which they have received." At least half a dozen persons, one of them a female, were wounded on this terrible Sunday night; and a baby in its mother's arms narrowly escaped being stabbed.

Can there be anything more ruffianly, more cowardly, and more un-English than this use of the knife; and should not the peculiarly Italian crime of stabbing be stamped from out our midst by the utmost rigour of the law. All right-minded persons must be of such an opinion; yet I confess that my own pride and joy at being a native of a non-stabbing nation were considerably modified when, in the self-same paper which contained the report of the Sabbath evening brawl in which the bloodthirsty aliens from the Sunny South ran amuck, I read that a fashionably dressed young gentleman, living in one of the squares of Belgravia, had been committed to take his trial, at the Central Criminal Court, for smashing a decanter over the head of a German waiter at a Regent-street restaurant, who, he said, had been insolent to him. "The blow," says the report, "was so violent that the bottle was shivered in fragments, and blood flowed copiously from the wound which it caused. I hope the German waiter will escape erysipelas.

Again, the enthusiasm of my exultation at belonging to a nation which does not use the knife was somewhat tempered when I read in the selfsame number of the Pall Mall that an "amateur" prize-fight was reported to have taken place last Saturday at Handforth, in Cheshire. There was no money at stake, "the affair being the outcome (I like "outcome") of an old grudge and a discussion as to the relative merits of the two as boxers." The ropes and stakes, for making a ring, were sent to the appointed place of rendezvous in a hearse; but, the police having got scent of the affair and seized the pugilistic paraphernalia, the principals and a large number of their friends and supporters met at Handforth, where the battle took place. Nineteen rounds were, it is stated, fought, and the two men pummelled each other during one hour and a half. Both were severely punished. As neither would give in, at the conclusion of the ninety minutes' fisticuffs the battle was pronounced a drawn one. This, no doubt, was an exhibition of true British bulldog courage; but how about that "old grudge"? In any case, the stabbing brawl in Clerkenwell, the bottle-smashing assault at the Regent-street restaurant, and the "amateur" prize-fight in Cheshire lead one to ponder very gravely over the despairing query of the American poet as to Civilisation being a failure, and as to the Caucasian being "played out."

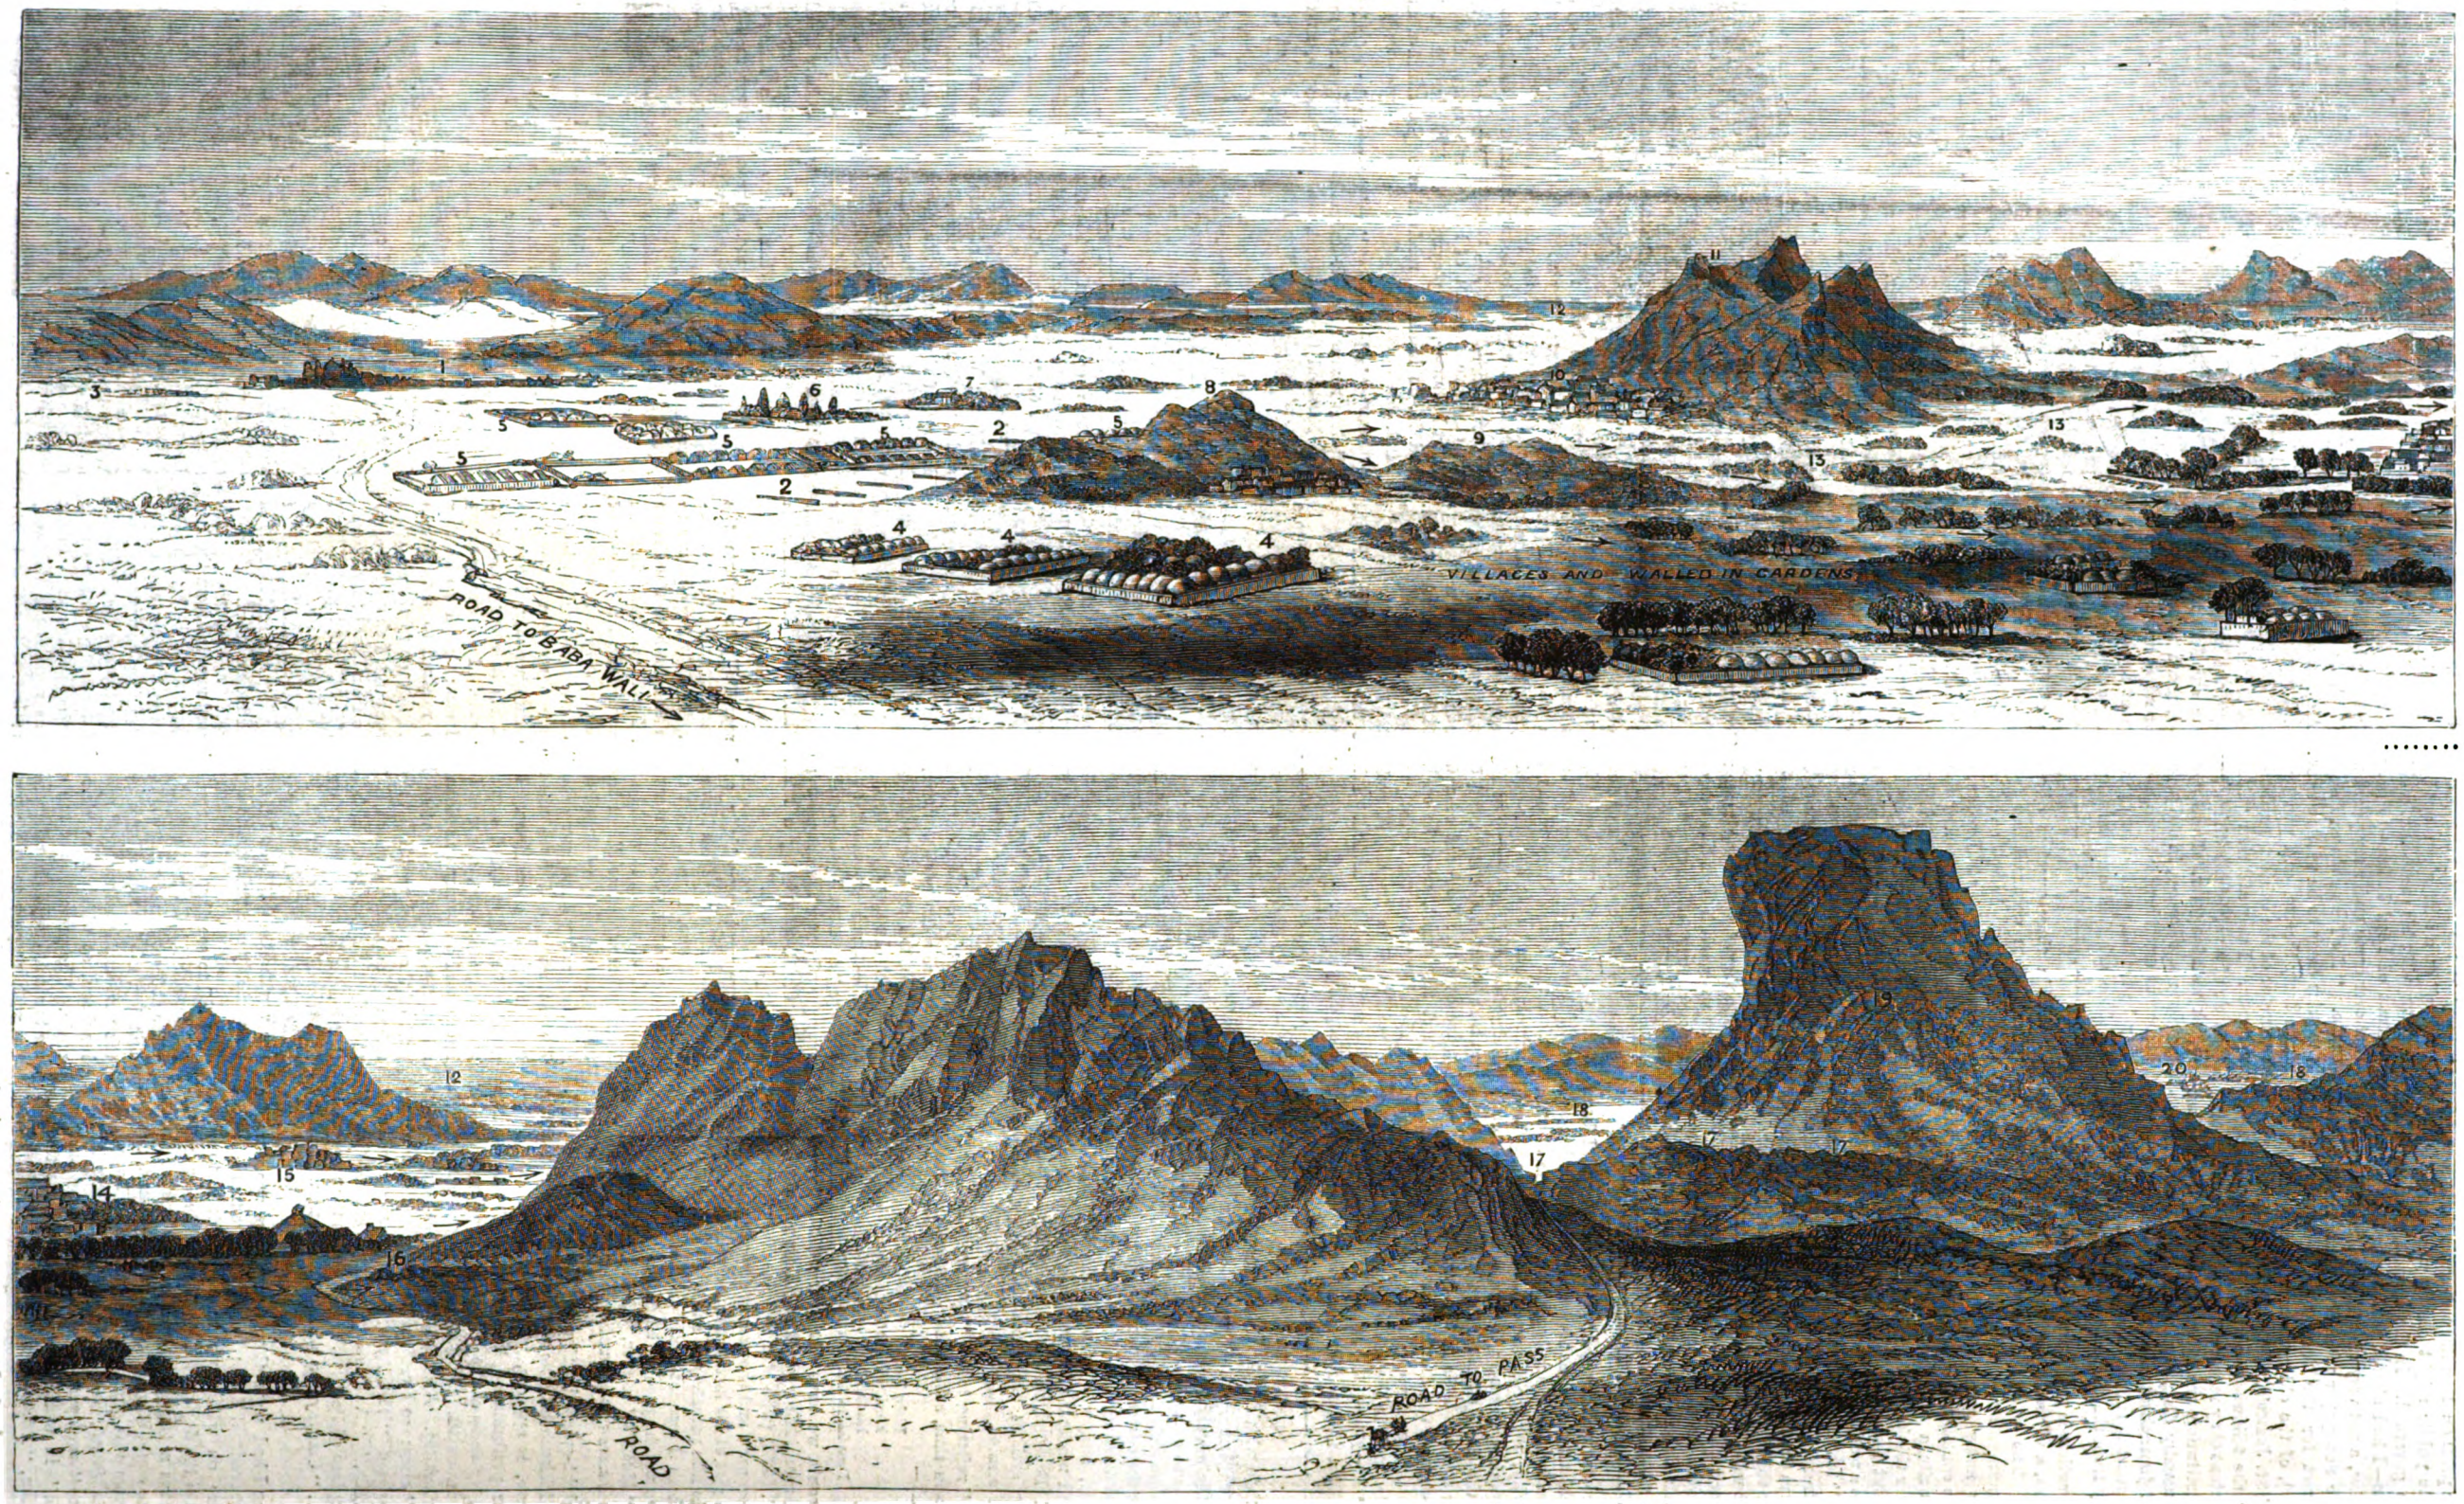
I have most respectfully and regretfully to inform the lady who writes me from Novo Alexandrovsk, in the government of Kovno, Russia, that it is quite out of my power to send her a copy of some stanzas on the death of the Prince Imperial, of which, it would seem, I made mention in some long bygone "Echoes." I have accomplished a journey of twenty thousand miles since I quoted the stanzas in question. I had a good "burning-up day" of old manuscripts before I went away, and have filled a great many waste-paper baskets since I came home. I am always ready, I hope, to assist my great army of correspondents in every quarter of the habitable globe, as far as I am able. I answer as many letters and as many questions as I can; but I do humbly assure my querists that were I to respond to a twentieth part of the missives which they send me, or to thresh out a tithe of the problems which they propound, I should have so to neglect the business which is my only means of livelihood, that before six months were over I should, in all probability, find myself an inmate of St. Pancras Workhouse. And my loftiest ambition is to pay my rates and taxes, and keep out of the workhouse, until, at least, increasing age and infirmities unavoidably constrain me to apply for indoor relief.

I fail to see that any practical good resulted from the late international balloon contest at the Crystal Palace (which took place at least two months too late in the season); and on the first day, the fog rendering aerostatic competition inexpedient, the "international contest" resolved itself into an international luncheon, at which a number of interesting speeches were made. The promoters of the affair were good enough to ask me to act as one of the referees—not as regards the luncheon, but with respect to the aeronauts; but, seeing that thirty years have elapsed since I went "up in a balloon," and that our aerial machine burst ingloriously at the altitude of a mile, and that we were fain to descend involuntarily in an improvised parachute, I fail to discern (not having since risked my life in such a tom-fool's enterprise) what useful purpose I could have served as a "referee." The balloon authorities should have sent for Mr. Sampson or Mr. Asheton Dilke.

At the same time I firmly believe that the secret of aerial navigation will be discovered some day. Whether such a discovery would lead to the abrogation of war is doubtful. The idea of two fleets of iron-clad balloons bombarding or ramming each other in the clouds can be realised—to the mind's eye—quite easily; but the question of obtaining a navigable motive-power in combination with a sustaining power is quite another affair. One thing, however, is certain. Balloons have ceased to be mere scientific toys. Mr. Glaisher has demonstrated how they can be utilised in meteorological investigations; and Mr. Coxwell has made great progress in the development of war-balloons. He and Commander Cheyne are of opinion that aerostats may be rendered serviceable in Arctic explorations; and some Engineer officers hold that balloons will come in very handily in the next war, in the way of dropping torpedoes on the heads of the enemy.

Mem.: As we were coming down—it was right over Fulham—in the improvised parachute, I cut away the grapnel from the side of the car. That grapnel must have fallen somewhere about Fulham. Ever since August, 1851, a vague feeling of remorse has gnawed my conscience with regard to that grapnel. Did it hit anybody?

"What's in a name?" Well, the Shaksperean dictum to the contrary notwithstanding, a gentleman whose father was so unfortunate as to be shot by sentence of court-martial may not care about being reminded of the painful circumstance by a caricature of the execution of his sire on the stage of a theatre. Only thirteen years have elapsed since the unhappy Archduke Maximilian, the "phantom" Emperor of Mexico, was shot by the victorious Juarists at Queretaro. One of his most attached adherents, General Miramon, was sentenced to and suffered the same fate. The tragedy of Queretaro has been recently made the subject of a drama, called "Juarez," by a French dramatist, M. Alfred Gassier. The performance of the piece was prohibited by the Censorship; but it appears to be in print, and M. de Miramon, the son of the unlucky General, resenting what he considered to be an offensive mention of his father's name, challenged Mr. Alfred Gassier, the playwright. They fought on Tuesday; and M. de Miramon received a slight sword-wound in the hand.



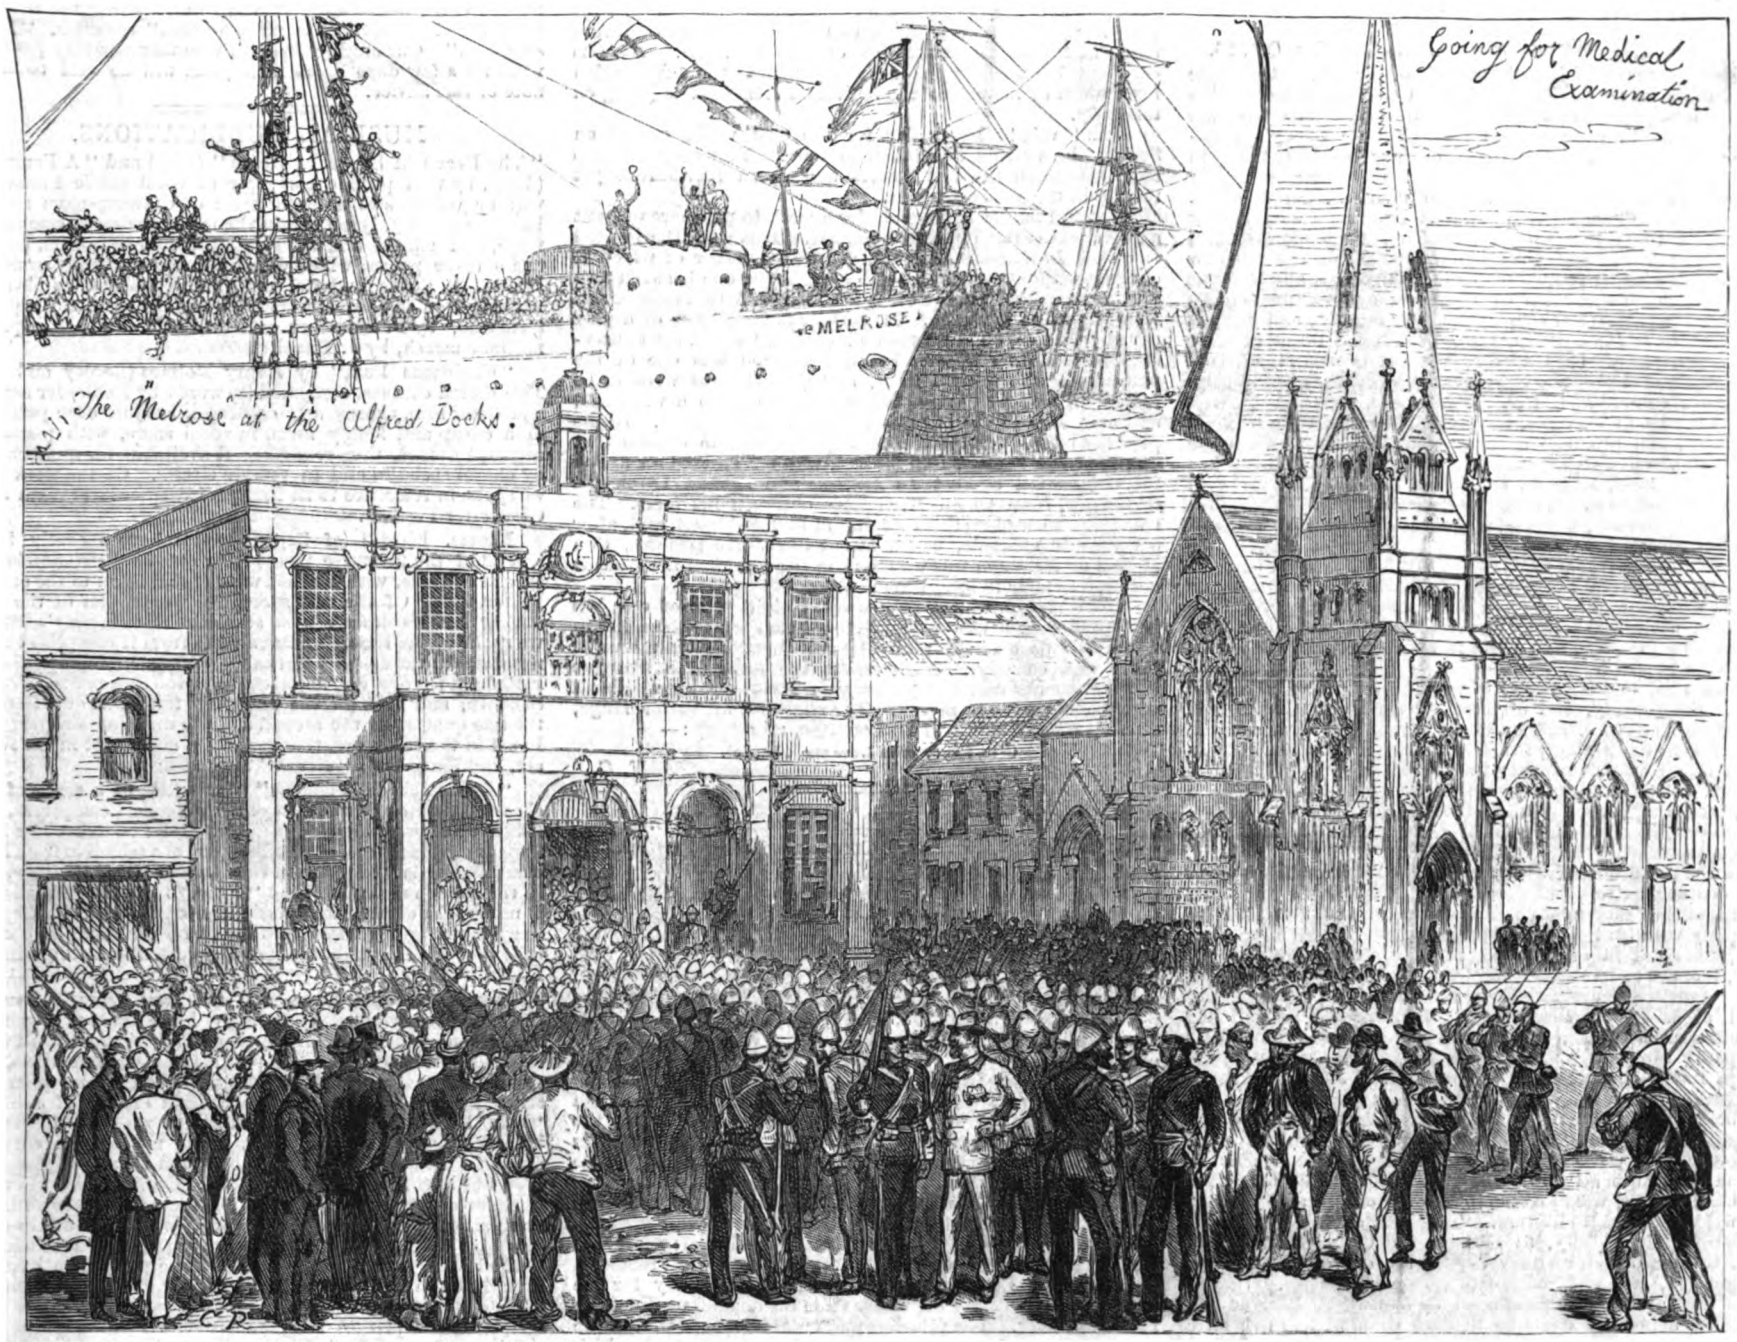
"What's in a name?" might again be asked in a very jubilant manner by Mr. Robert Etzensberger, the manager of the Midland Grand Hotel, St. Pancras, who, at the recent Brewers' Exhibition at the Agricultural Hall, struck by the "happy thought" that the interests of temperance might be served even in the midst of a display of what somebody called the "Technics of Tippling," exhibited a number of his patent tea and coffee filters, with double action apparatus, so as to make both coffee and tea and supply hot water and milk at the same time. To this machine Mr. Etzensberger, by a still happier thought, gave the generic name of "The Wilfrid." Sir Wilfrid Lawson, M.P., was tickled by the felicitous conceit; the Times, and other morning papers, humorously cited "The Wilfrid" in leading articles; and the fortune of this particular tea and coffee filter is as good as made.

Mem.: We took one of these machines with us to America; and a "lady friend" of mine, by kind permission of Captain Haines, of the Cunard Steam-ship Scythia, delivered a brief lecture on the Etzensberger filter in the saloon, and made coffee à la minute for the "first families" among the passengers. At the conclusion of our happy (albeit tempestuous) voyage we presented the tea and coffee filter to Captain Haines (for that kind and courteous commander to have had his due it should have been of silver gilt); but, just before we landed at the Custom House Wharf, New York, a fellow-passenger, hitherto unknown to me, approached me in a mysterious manner, and, in a stealthy whisper, informed me that he had listened to "the coffee biggin' lecture" with great interest, and asked whether I thought the lady could do "something light and graphic in the Patent Fire and Burglar-proof Safe line." Travelling expenses guaranteed and a handsome commission on all cash sales. He thought possibly we "travelled in filters." I hastened to tell him that Mr. Etzensberger was a most ingenious and persevering person, a very old friend of mine, whom I was always anxious to serve whenever I could legitimately do so, in memory of certain kindnesses he did me many years ago in Italy, when I was in the Tyrol with Garibaldi, and the lady who delivered the "coffee biggin lecture" on board the Scythia was shut up in beleaguered Venice.

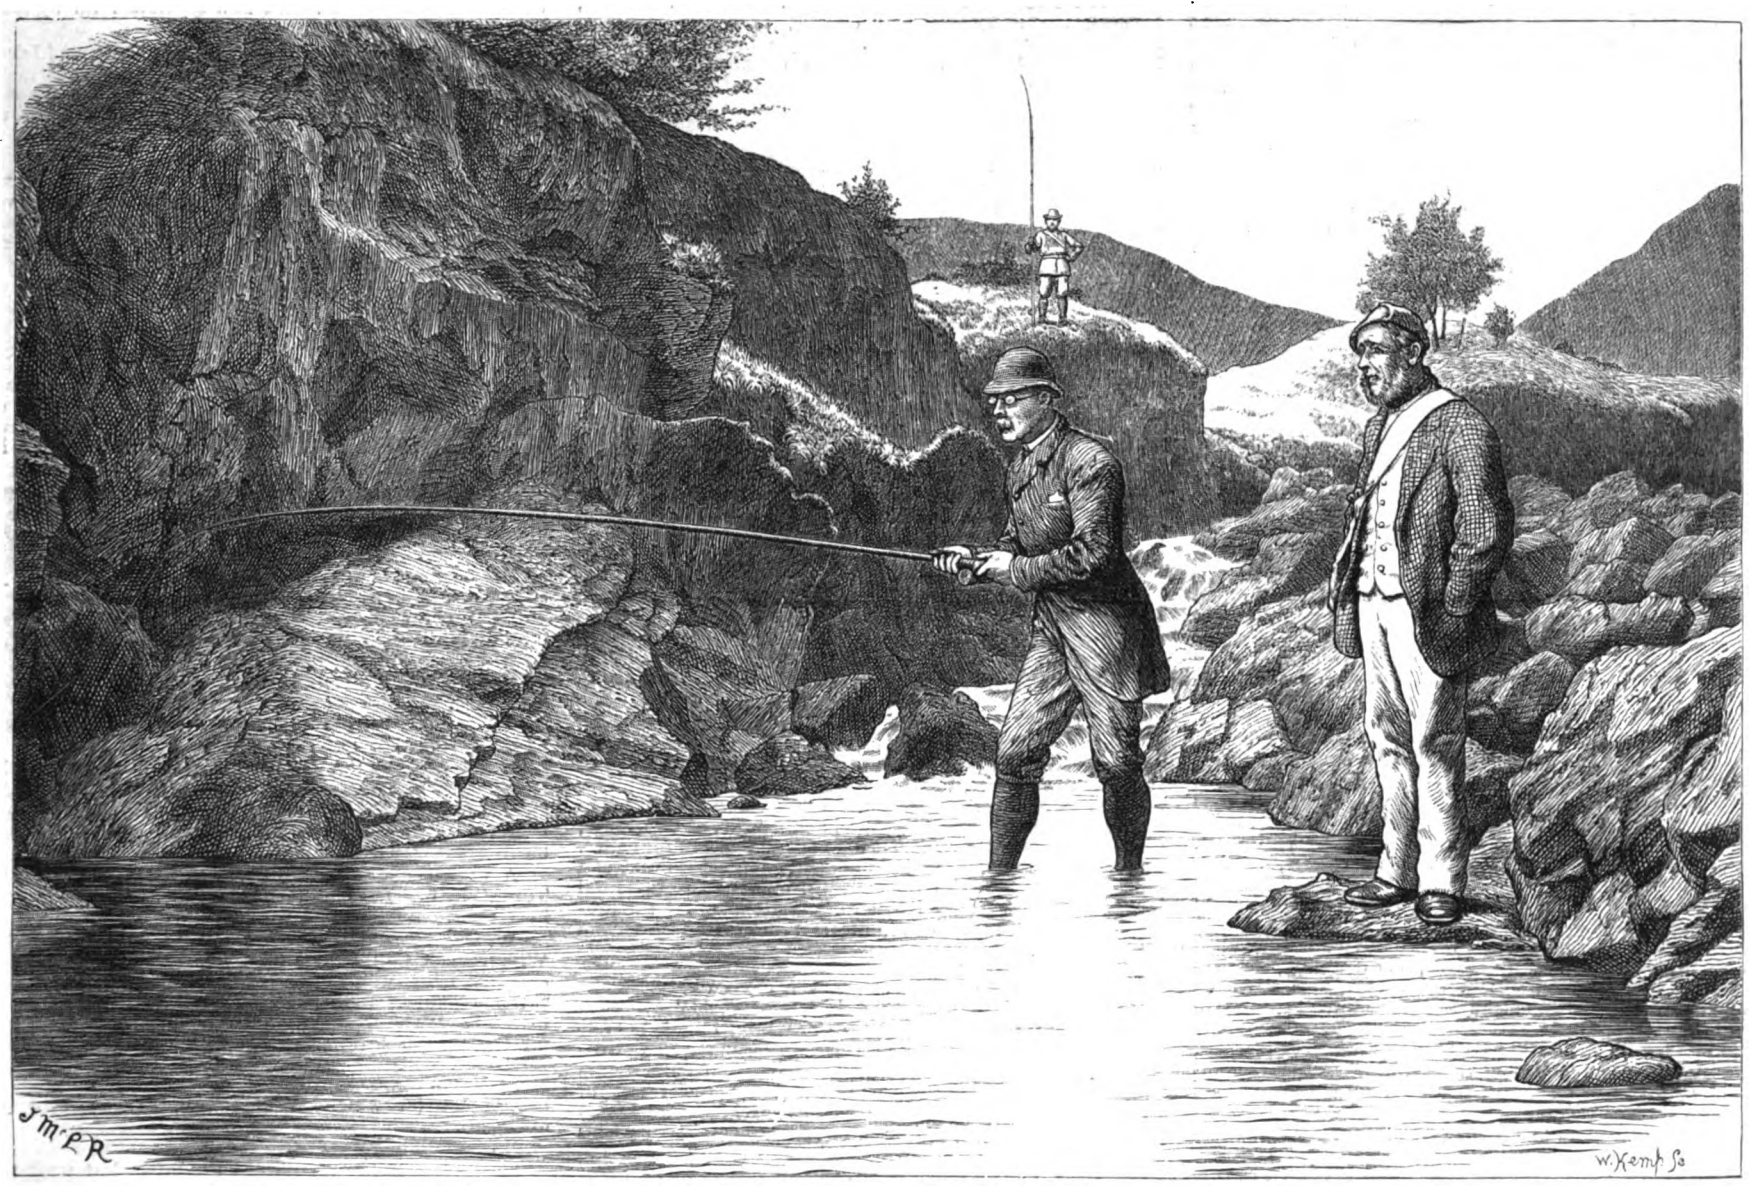
A brilliant cohort of contributors has Mr. Clement Scott gathered round him for the Christmas annual in course of publication by Messrs. Routledge, called "The Green Room: Stories by Those who Frequent it." The dramatists and theatrical critics are adequately represented by sketches and stories by Mr. Clement Scott, the editor himself; Mr. Gilbert a'Becket, Mr. E. L. Blanchard, Mr. Byron, Mr. Savile Clarke, Mr. Frank Marshall, Mr. Robert Reece, Mr. Palgrave Simpson, Mr. Burnand, Mr. Alfred Thompson, and the Hon. Lewis Wingfield. Among the "professionals" I find Madame Modjeska, Miss Marie Litton, Mrs. Bernard Beere, Mr. W. J. Florence (but where is Mrs. Gen'l Gilflory?), Mr. Fernandez, Mr. Pinero, Mr. Howe, Mr. Charles Warner, Mr. Walter Lacy, Mr. J. L. Toole, and Mr. Henry Irving. Truly a dainty dish to set before King Public. But why do not the painters and draughtsmen get up a Christmas annual among themselves, and write their own stories as well as illustrate them? There is a painful want of Solidarity among the professors of British arts, and very little true camaraderie between Rafaelle Smudge, R.A., and poor Dick Tinto, the Bohemian.

G. A. S.

Digitized by Google



1. City of Candahar. 2. Position where General Roberts's force encamped on Aug. 31. 3. English Cemetery. 4. Villages used as British Cantonments. 5. British Cantonments. 6. Head-Quarters' Garden. 7. Engineer Garden. 8. Picket Hill. 9. Karez Hill.
10. Ruins of Old Candahar. 11. Fort. 12. Desert. 13. Herat Road. 14. Village of Sahibzada, taken by 92nd Highlanders and 2nd (P.W.O.) Goorkhas. 15. Villages taken by 72nd Highlanders. 16. Position of some of Enemy's Guns.
17. Baba Wali Pass, and Battery of Enemy's Guns. 18. Argandab Valley. 19. Hill, called Bullock's Hump. 20. Position of Ayoub's Camp. The Arrows show the direction of advance of our troops on Sept. 1.



THE AFGHAN WAR: SCENE OF THE DEFEAT OF AYOUB KHAN BY GENERAL SIR F. ROBERTS, AT BABA WALI, NEAR CANDAHAR.

FROM A SKETCH BY SURGEON-MAJOR WOODFORDE-FINDEN.—SEE PAGE 424.

Digitized by Google

THE BASUTO WAR: DEPARTURE OF VOLUNTEERS FROM CAPE TOWN.
FROM SKETCHES BY MR. DENNIS EDWARDS, CAPE TOWN.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

SKETCHES IN BRAEMAR: FLY-FISHING ON THE CLUNY.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

Digitized by Google

PARISIAN SAYINGS AND DOINGS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Paris, Tuesday, Oct. 26.

The de Cissey scandal is still the topic of the day, and Madame Jung, Baroness de Kaulla, continues to occupy the attention of the newspapers and of the Boulevard. The wits are inexhaustible in their puns on General de Cissey's Kaullaboration in treason. After the revelations that were made in the Jung de Woestyne trial, General de Cissey very naturally demanded an official inquiry or a trial before a Conseil de guerre. This General Farre refused, and, it must be added, hardly anyone was found to approve his conduct. Thereupon General de Cissey, in accordance with the suggestion of the Minister of War, has asked redress of the civil tribunals, and brought an action for defamation of character against Rochefort's Journal, l'Intransigeant, against the Petit Parisien, and against the Phare de la Loire, which have been most bitter in their attacks upon him. On the other hand, it is understood that Madame Jung is about to bring actions against the newspapers that have calumniated her. Meanwhile, the Gaulois, which started the whole business, has appealed against the original judgment, and promises more piquant revelations when the case shall be tried on appeal next month. M. de Cissey has been interviewed, Madame de Kaulla has been interviewed, and their versions of the case have been reported in the newspapers. Yesterday, Edmond About stepped into the lists and gave his version of the story, the incidents of General de Cissey's dismissal from the Ministry of War in 1876, and the shameful traffic in army material which the Baroness de Kaulla was allowed to carry on to her own advantage, and the horror of those who were in the secret. In short, the scandal is becoming gigantic, and there is no foreseeing how wide a sweep it will still take.

And this, unfortunately, is not the only scandal of the hour. On Sunday, the director of the Petit Parisien had organised a meeting, at the Cirque Fernando, to summon the Government immediately to arrest "General Courtot de Cissey et la fille Kaulla," and try him before a competent jurisdiction. This meeting was authorised by the Ministry one day, and the next day the authorisation was withdrawn. Thereupon, anger of the press at the vacillating weakness of the Government.

In the meantime, M. Constans is expelling mendicant friars and contemplative monks from their monasteries, and when his Excellency goes to sup in a restaurant on the Boulevard in company with his friend Coquelin, of the Comédie Française, the guests ask in anything but a discreet whisper whether they, too, are to be "expelled;" whether the "lock-pickers" and "burglars" are about to try their skill upon them, until at last M. Constans finds it advisable to call for his bill and retire from a place where he meets with neither sympathy nor consideration. In Brittany the police officers resign rather than execute the decrees. All over France magistrates are resigning their office; the Jesuits and Capucins are protesting before the tribunals against the illegality of the Government; in the press the wordy warfare is deafening; Conservatives, Opportunists, Irreconcilables, Communists, are all howling against each other and against the Government, which seems to find no one to apologise for its weakness and hesitation. This wretched Cabinet will probably fall, pitifully, as soon as the Chambers meet on Nov. 9. Until then we may expect the din of controversy, indignation, and protestation to go on increasing. One of these days, perhaps, encouraged by la Kaulla, Bazaine will bring an action for damages against those writers who have dared to blame his conduct at Metz. C'est à ne plus savoir où donner de la tête.

The flood of politics, like the Seine, by-the-way, is rising so high that one can hardly escape from it for a moment. Nevertheless I must find room to say something about the Molière Jubilee, which began at the Comedie Française last Wednesday, before a choice audience composed of the notabilities of art, letters, and politics, and which will end, next Thursday, with a splendid performance of "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme," with Lulli's music, the ballets, and the Turkish ceremony. Nearly all Molière is in the current repertory of the Française. The only novelty that has been offered was the performance, last Wednesday, of "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme" and of "L'Impromptu de Versailles," mounted with a splendour and archæological accuracy which does credit to M. Perrin. Frankly, the performance was tiresome in the extreme; and the notabilities of art, letters, and politics make no secret of saying that they bored themselves mortally. The satire of the "Bourgeois Gentilhomme" has lost its point. Even were that not the case, owing to the irreparable outrage of Time, could the points of the "Bourgeois Gentilhomme" be appreciated when the box that had been occupied by Bourbons and Napoleons was occupied by Monsieur Jules Grévy (avocat) et sa dame! As for the "Impromptu de Versailles," it is pushing Molièromania too far to unearth a production which corresponds, ceteris paribus, to a letter of rectification that Emile Augier, for instance, might send to the Figaro. Nobody understood it. Still the Molière Jubilee is a fine thing, and if Europe, in order to please the French and lend verity to their boasts, must envy France something, it is certainly the Comédie Française, where during 200 years worthy successors have been found of the actor Molière, of whom François Coppee truly says:—"Il a son temple, lui qui n'a pas de tombeau!" It is expected that Dumas's new piece will be produced at the Français next February. Paul Deroulède's piece, "La Moabite," has finally been refused at the Français, and the angry author intends to read it in Madame Adam's salon on the 31st. The piece, it may be remembered, was accepted by the committee of the Français eighteen months ago. The thesis maintained by M. Deroulède is that God must have an altar, and the altar a priest; the piece is, in short, an ardent pleading in favour of priests. As the scene takes place in Biblical times, this subject might be thought inoffensive enough, but the execution of the religious decrees has excited religious passions to such a degree that the administrator and the principal sociétaires of the Comédie Française, after consulting M. Jules Ferry, have decided not to play "La Moabite," and so M. Deroulède is left out in the cold, without redress, another victim of politics.

Garibaldi is expected to visit Paris in about a fortnight from to-day. He will be the guest of M. Henri Rochefort in his hotel in the Cité Malesherbes. He will be accompanied by his son-in-law, the deputy Canzio, his daughter, Teresita Canzio, and his two grandsons.

Félix Pyat has discovered an ingenious way of paying his debts to the Treasury. He has just recollected that 575f. are due to him for his pay as deputy at Bordeaux in 1871; and, secondly, that when, on Oct. 28, 1870, he denounced in his journal Le Combat the plan of Bazaine to deliver Metz to the Prussians, the Journal Officiel denied the news, and in consequence the right-thinking people, les honnêtes gens, burst into the office of his paper, assaulted his staff, and robbed the till. (Félix himself, was, as usual, not at hand while this scrimmage was going on). The amount taken out of his till was 5000f. The Treasury thus owes Félix Pyat 5575f., while he owes it 2000f., the amount of the fine to which he was condemned last week. There remains then a balance of 3575f., which M. Pyat begs the Minister of Finance to keep on account of future fines and penalties which he expects to incur. Here is excellent book-keeping indeed. Meanwhile the subscription for a pistol of honour to the regicide Berezowski is going on famously.

Rain! rain! Every day for the past week, except on Sunday, heavy rain has fallen in Paris. Yesterday a sharp frost blackened the few flowers and green leaves that yet remain in the public gardens.

It would hardly be possible for a week to pass here without a duel and the birth of a new journal. This week the journal is called La Comédie-Française, the first number of which is entirely without merit. The duels are two, one between two well-known clubmen, the other between M. Alfred Gassier and Don Miguel de Miramon. M. Gassier is the author of a play called "Juarez, ou la guerre de Mexique," which the Censorship refused to authorise because Bazaine was one of the personages who figured in it, and disturbances were to be feared. There was much talk about the piece a week ago, and now La Lanterne is publishing it as a feuilleton. In the play the late General Miramon is pourtrayed in colours that do not please his son, Don Miguel, who has entered an action for defamation against La Lanterne and against Larousse's dictionary, from which M. Gassier obtained his facts. The encounter took place this morning at Plessis-Piquet, and, after a desperate struggle, which lasted thirty-five minutes, Don Miguel de Miramon was wounded in the arm, and the seconds declared honour to have been satisfied.

Victor Hugo, who is now seventy-eight years of age, has just published a new poem, l'Ane, which closes the series in which the poet treats philosophical questions by means of satire and comedy. L'Ane takes the form of a dialogue between an ass and the philosopher Kant, during which all creation is passed in review. The admirers of Victor Hugo, altering slightly a line of La Fontaine, might say:—

Cette fois on cria bravo sur le baudet.

T. C.

THE TEMPLE BAR MEMORIAL.

The completing, and uncovering to public view, of the monument erected by the Corporation of the City of London to mark the site of Temple Bar, having the grand New Law Courts building on one side of the street, and the handsome new front of Child's Bank on the other, will in a few days be accomplished; but there has been much controversy both with regard to the architectural effect and the convenience of street traffic. The height of this structure, which is the subject of our front-page Illustration, is 34 ft. 6 in. from the pavement. The width is 5 ft. 2 in. at the base, in one direction, across the street, and 7 ft. 8 in. the other way. The pedestal is of polished granite, in which are cut two niches, containing marble statues of the Queen and the Prince of Wales. On each face of the pedestal are bas-reliefs in bronze, that on the west face bearing an ornamental scroll, with an inscription explaining the object of the Memorial; that on the east face being a representation of old Temple Bar; that on the south representing the Queen visiting the City in State after her Accession on Nov. 9, 1837, and receiving an address from the scholars of Christ's Hospital at St. Paul's Cathedral; while that on the north side is a commemoration of the Royal Procession to St. Paul's Cathedral on the Thanksgiving day for the recovery of the Prince of Wales from his dangerous illness in February, 1872. The pilasters and entablature, as well as the pedestal of the bronze dragon, are in Craigleith stone, which is of a delicate grey, and selected to resist the action of our atmosphere. The niches and panels between the pilasters are of Ancaster cream-coloured stone—the panels carved in diaper pattern, with emblems of Art, Science, Peace, and War. In these panels are medallion likenesses, one being that of Sir Francis W. Truscott, the Lord Mayor. Around the frieze, between the architrave and cornice, runs the following inscription:—"MDCCCLXXX. Temple Bar formerly stood here." The bronze dragon which surmounts the whole supports the civic shield, around the foot of which floats a scroll inscribed with the City motto—Domine Dirige Nos. The Memorial stands in the centre of the roadway which connects the Strand with Fleet-street, the western face of the plinth coinciding with the City boundary. At each corner of the raised "refuge" will be placed an ornamental lamp, the columns of which are impressed with the City arms and other emblematic devices. Mr. Horace Jones, the City architect, is to be credited with the entire design. The dragon is the work of Mr. C. B. Birch, A.R.A., sculptor, but was cast by Mr. James Moore, of the firm of Drew and Co., Thames Ditton; the statues are by Mr. J. E. Böehm, A.R.A.; Mr. C. H. Mabey has executed the whole of the carving and the bas-reliefs on the east, west, and south sides; whilst that facing the north is by Mr. C. S. Kelsey; and the masonry of the structure is the work of Messrs. John Mowlem and Co. The cost will be £10,500, entirely defrayed by the City Corporation.

THE CAPETOWN VOLUNTEERS.

The Cape Colony having recently undertaken a war against the Basutos, the nation that inhabits the mountainous country east of the Orange River Free State, it was found requisite to call on a volunteer rifle corps at Capetown, the "Duke of Edinburgh's Rifles," to furnish three hundred men for six month's service. A correspondent, Mr. Dennis Edwards, of Capetown, has sent us two Sketches, under date of Sept. 25, one representing the scene in front of the Townhall, when the men drawn by ballot appeared for medical examination; the other showing their embarkation for departure on board the steam-ship Melrose, belonging to Messrs. Donald Currie and Co.'s line, by which they were to be conveyed to East London. The command of this body of volunteers has, by the choice of the officers of the regiments, been conferred on Captain Whindus, who was at the time in England, but has been recalled by telegraph for the present service. Among the other officers balloted to serve are Captains Fforde, Searle, and Hardy, of Capetown; the two Majors of the regiment were not included in the ballot. The contingent arrived at East London on the 28th ult., and proceeded by railway to Queenstown, on its route to Aliwal North, which is near the frontier of Basutoland. It was preceded by an equal force of volunteers from Port Elizabeth and Grahamstown.

FLY-FISHING IN BRAEMAR.

The season for this sport has long since been closed, but our recent Illustrations of the Braemar scenery may as well be accompanied with a sketch of the Cluny, that romantic stream which descends, below Loch Callater, by the forest of Ballochbuie, to fall into the river Dee nearly opposite Invercauld. It is a tempting place for the angler who sets his heart upon catching trout, and who has the skill and the patient diligence for that pursuit, so fascinating to its adept disciples. We learn from Mr. C. St. John that the best fly they can use in the Scottish Highlands is a small one made as follows: the body, of yellow floss silk, with a bit of the feather of a landrail's wing; the head, made with a turn or two of red hackle. "In most waters," says he, "this fly succeeds." Our angling friends, who may possibly go northward for a few days' sport next year, will do well to make a note of this advice.

MUSICAL PUBLICATIONS.

"The Dear Old Songs of Home" (song) and "A Farewell" (duet), by that prolific composer of vocal music Franz Abt, will be welcome to a large circle of drawing-room singers. Pleasing melody, lying within the most moderate compass of voice, and simple and appropriate accompaniments, characterise these pieces, which will be found generally available. Messrs. R. Cocks and Co. are the publishers, as also of a transcription of Handel's celebrated "Largo" for the pianoforte solo, by F. Lemoine; and "Les Chevaliers," a spirited military march, by J. Duval.

"Christmas Day," by Henry Holmes (Boosey and Co.). This sacred cantata, composed (to words by Keble) for soprano and tenor solo, chorus, and orchestra, has just been published in a cheap and handy form, in vocal score, with pianoforte accompaniment, thus rendering it available for performance by choral societies and in private circles. Of the work itself we spoke in reference to its first performance last month at the Gloucester Festival.

Messrs. Ricordi (of Regent-street) have recently issued several of the favourite pieces from Boïto's "Mefistofele" in special editions, with English words in addition to the original Italian text. Of the very successful production of the work during Mr. Mapleson's past season at Her Majesty's Theatre we spoke at the time. These extracts from it comprise Faust's romanzas in the first act and in the epilogue, Mephistopheles's ballade in the first act, his serenade in the scene of the classical Sabbath, and that (in the same act) for Helen and Pantalis, the fine quartet in the second act, the duet for Margaret and Faust in the third act, that for Helen and Faust in the fourth act, and Margaret's "Nenna" in the third act.

"Biblioteca del Pianista" is the title of a series of very cheap editions of pianoforte works by classical composers, published by Messrs. Ricordi, of Milan and London. The latest issue is the fourth and concluding part of a selection from Bach, comprising the "concerto in the Italian style," the "overture in the French style," and the "Echo," from the "Partita," in B minor, the chromatic fantasia and fugue, the toccatas in F sharp minor and D minor, and the thirty variations on a theme in G major. The pieces are carefully edited, with fingering, by Edoardo Bix.

Messrs. Novello, Ewer, and Co. have recently issued a cheap and portable edition, in large octavo form, of Beethoven's ninth (choral) symphony, the gigantic work which concludes the series of his productions of this class, and stands alone in grandeur of conception as in plan and structure, including, as it does, a vocal setting of Schiller's "Ode to Joy." The edition now referred to is, we believe, the first of its kind, being not only a carefully executed arrangement of the orchestral score for pianoforte solo, but having the vocal parts of the finale printed above the pianoforte part, with the original German text and an English translation by Madame Macfarren; the instrumental version being by Mr. B. Tours. The publication is a welcome addition to the library of a musician. The same publishers have also brought out a second number of their "Pianoforte Albums," being a continuation of selections of pieces by Bach for piano solo, and comprising forty movements for the price of a shilling. Messrs. Novello, Ewer, and Co. have likewise published a sixth set of "Sixty Voluntaries for the Harmonium," a selection of short pieces well arranged for that instrument by Mr. J. W. Elliott.

"O babe, my son, my Saviour," is the favourite air from Mr. Henry Leslie's cantata, "The First Christmas Morn," which extract has been issued in a separate form by Messrs. Novello, Ewer, and Co.

"A bonny, bonny bird," song by Mrs. Harvey, of Ickwell-Bury (J. B. Cramer and Co.), is very expressive in its melody, which is supported by an appropriate and well-written pianoforte accompaniment. The song requires but a moderate compass of voice, and demands appreciative feeling rather than technical skill for its effective rendering.

We have several times spoken of the very characteristic compositions of Heinrich Hofmann, instrumental and vocal, and have now further occasion to notice some of the former class—his Op. 52, consisting of six pieces for two performers on the pianoforte, under the general title of "The Trumpeter of Sakkingen," the movements being respectively headed "Young Werner's Arrival," "Gnomes," "Confession," "Separation," "In Rome," and "Happy Solution." Some lines prefixed to each give the outline of a romantic narrative which is musically illustrated with much success; the pieces being artistically written, pleasing in style, and full of varied character. Messrs. Neumeyer are the publishers; as likewise of a "Gavotte" for pianoforte solo by Sir Julius Benedict, in which the style of the old dance form is well preserved amid some features of more modern treatment.

That clever pianist Miss Lillie Albrecht has frequently proved that she can compose for, as well as perform on, her instrument. Her "Idylle" entitled "Amour Inquiet" (published by Duncan Davison and Co.), is a very pleasing and melodious piece, in which the left hand is of prominent importance, forming a good study for legato playing.

"The Little Blacksmith" and "His Sweetheart's Face," both by Helen Maxwell, are two characteristic songs, with a well-marked melody lying within a moderate compass of voice; and the same may be said of Mr. Cotsford Dick's song, "Good-bye," which is also published by Messrs. Duff and Stewart; as is "Solitude," a pleasing "Nocturne" for the pianoforte, by C. Oberthür.

"A. De Lorme's "A B C Instruction-Book for the Pianoforte" (Duff and Stewart) is a comprehensive and inexpensive method of learning the instrument. A description of the keyboard, the rudiments of music, scales, exercises, and arrangements make up a good four-shillings'worth.

A work similar in design and merit is "The Imperial Tutor," by Carlo Tiesset (Wood and Co), which is published in sections.

W. Smallwood's "Operatic Duets," for the pianoforte (B. Williams and Co.), consist of easy arrangements of popular extracts from well-known operas, calculated to interest juvenile pupils. Rather more elaborate—although not difficult—are "The Exile" (Romance), and "Allegro Scherzo" for the pianoforte solo, by W. Porter; also published by Messrs. B. Williams and Co., as are different arrangements of Mr. Adam Wright's spirited "Festal March"—for piano solo, harmonium (or American organ), and organ with pedal obbligato.

Sir Rupert Kettle distributed the prizes last week to the students of the science classes in connection with the free library at Wolverhampton.

Digitized by Google

THE PLAYHOUSES.

Everybody should go to see Mr. Dion Boucicault's sparkling drama in four acts, "The O'Dowd," at the Adelphi Theatre—first, because the piece comprises some very bustling and picturesque scenes; next, because those scenes give ample scope for some very good acting by Mr. Henry Neville, Mr. Edward Compton, Mr. Proctor, Mr. Gregory, Mr. R. Pateman, Miss Pateman, Miss Lydia Foote, and Miss Le Thiere; next, because the drama is provided with some capital scenery, and is most graphically and tastefully put on the stage; and, finally, because of the consummately artistic impersonation of the part of The O'Dowd by Mr. Dion Boucicault himself. The O'Dowd, in the hands of this accomplished comedian and versatile although uncertain and unequal dramatist, is neither a "spalpeen" nor a "gossoon"—neither a White Boy, a Peep o' Day Boy, a Thresher, a Defender, a Rapparee, a Fenian, nor a member of the Ribbon Society; although, from his undisguised expressions of opinion respecting fixity of tenure and the farmer's right to the fee simple of the soil which he cultivates, he might be an active member of the Irish Land League. But The O'Dowd is, above all things, an Irish "Squireen," a simple-minded, kind-hearted, untutored, but shrewd Galway peasant, who began life as a pilot, and was afterwards a fish salesman, and has, by untiring thrift and industry, acquired a "bit o' land"—that is to say, real estate to the value of some twenty thousand pounds. Believing himself to be the lineal representative of an ancient Irish sept, the enriched fish salesman dubs himself "The" O'Dowd, even as did the less pecuniarily favoured "Mulligan" before him, and is revered by his neighbours accordingly.

Determined to make a "gintleman" of his only son Mike, he sends the lad (who has passed his boyhood on board a pilot-boat) to Trinity College, Dublin, and afterwards to London, there to "hold his head up among the Quality" on a handsome allowance of four hundred a year. The young gentleman obtains admission into fashionable society through his talents as a poet; and it has occurred to him to sign his first-published poetical contributions with the name of a deceased friend, one Mr. Percy Walsingham, who had been his chum at college. Not content, however, with borrowing this nom de plumey, young Mr. Mike O'Dowd, finding an allowance of four hundred per annum insufficient for the maintenance of his position among the "Quality," imprudently assumes the individuality of the dead Mr. Walsingham; and, on the strength of his representations that he is the direct heir to large estates in Ireland, he borrows a sum of no less than twenty thousand pounds from a firm of money-lenders, giving them bills or bonds in the name of Mr. Walsingham, deceased. The absurdity of any money-lender with a head upon his shoulders advancing so much as five hundred pounds to a young prodigal without first satisfying himself thoroughly as to where the estates were situated, and who was the next heir to them, is too glaring to need discussion.

The money-lender Chomley finds out, principally through the garrulity of The O'Dowd, who, with his niece, Kitty M'Coul, has paid an unexpected visit to Mike at his chambers on the Thames Embankment, that he has been grossly duped and swindled. He and his confidential clerk, Chalker, follow the O'Dowds, father and son, to Ireland; and, after the hurry-skurry of the episode of a contested election (which is dragged by the head and shoulders into the piece, hinders its action, and, on the first night of performance, exasperated the audience by its tedious and tasteless political verbiage), bring the O'Dowds to close quarters, and prove to the unhappy father that his son is a forger, a swindler, and a thief. To save Mike from immediate arrest and penal servitude in the background, the O'Dowd surrenders the whole of his estate to the money-lender (who gets no more than what he is entitled to); the scampish Mike, accompanied by a friend, who steadfastly adheres to him in his fallen fortunes, departs for Arizona to begin the world again; and the crushed and stricken down O'Dowd is fain to trundle a fish salesman's barrow once more for a livelihood. He has had a slight paralytic stroke in Act the Third; and in Act the Fourth he is exhibited as suffering from partial imbecility and total loss of memory. Stage cures of the acutest maladies are, however, so rapid that they might astound Sir Henry Thompson, and cause Dr. Benjamin Richardson's hair to stand on end with admiration; and in the last Act, where, after an exciting narrative of a happily-averted shipwreck, the repentant Mike and his devoted friend Bertie Talboys come back from Arizona with large fortunes, enhanced by the salvage money which will accrue through the skill with which Mike's early experience as a pilot has enabled him to steer a storm-beaten ship through a secret passage (pronounced "sacret," and awakening incongruous reminiscences of the Via Sacra), the O'Dowd recovers his reason, his memory, and the full use of his limbs; and it is only to be regretted that he does not dance a concluding jig of convalescence when the curtain falls upon the happiness of all the characters:—for Mr. Chomley, it is to be hoped, on giving the estate, will be repaid the twenty thousand pounds, out of which he has been cheated by Mr. Mike O'Dowd, alias Walsingham.

The thorough and hopeless confusion into which Mr. Dion Boucicault's notions of ethics appear to have fallen is shown by the fact that he throughout endeavours to enlist the sympathies of the audience in favour of the contemptible and fraudulent Mike, and that, in the last Act, he holds up to obloquy and execration the unhappy money-lender, Chomley, who chooses to reside on the estate abandoned to him by the O'Dowd, and who is laid under an interdict by the O'Dowd's indignant neighbours. The market people will not sell him any fish; the butcher scornfully declines to let him have any meat; the baker refuses to let him have any bread; a beggar-child tramples on the twopence which he gives her; and but for the contemptuous compassion of Kitty M'Coul, the unhappy money-lender and his man Chalker would starve. This apparent inability to discriminate between right and wrong might make "The O'Dowd" a very mischievous production were it a powerful play. But it is not a powerful play. It is only a very amusing one; in parts it is as entertaining as "Punch and Judy," and the ethics of "Punch" as a street drama are simply detestable. At the Adelphi one is content to dismiss "The O'Dowd" as a drama as one of Mr. Boucicault's merry little jokes. It is not a new play, having been performed in the United States under the title of "Daddy O'Dowd;" and the frequent recurrence of such Transatlantic expressions as "roomed," "a fraud," "a fashionable tramp"—a tramp in America is quite a different personage from the hereditary English vagrant—and "dead beat," and so forth, have a distinct flavour of American soil. Nor can "The O'Dowd" be strictly called an original play. The leading factor in the plot—the sacrifice of the devoted father to save the honour of his prodigal son—is borrowed from a French piece called "Les Crochets du Père Martin," adapted to the English stage by the late Mr. John Oxenford as "The Porter's Knot." All this, I take it, does not in the least matter. The public should flock to the Adelphi to see and to admire Mr. Boucicault's wondrous impersonation of Irish character, and to mark with applause how chivalrously Mr. Henry Neville bears himself under the weight of an essentially repulsive and contemptible part, and with winning grace and amenity Miss Pateman makes quite a new departure in her art by her assumption of the rôle of a somewhat eccentric but fascinating lady of fashion, Lady Rose Lawless. Mr. E. Compton also was quiet and unobtrusive as Bertie Talboys,

At the Gaiety—which was crammed to the ceiling—was produced on Monday a burlesque extravaganza by Mr. Burnand and Mr. Stephens, called "The Corsican Brothers and Co., Limited." It was not intended, I suppose, by the authors that this droll interlude should be looked upon as anything beyond a rampant piece of absurdity; and from the absurd point of view it does not fall far short of perfection. It is most commendably short; indeed, with a little more closeness of action, it might be played in forty minutes, and it may not have taken Messrs. Burnand and Stevens more than forty minutes to write it. It is a kind of omelette aux fines herbes. The herbs are very fine. Crack your eggs; grease your pan; pop in your yolks; ply your fork; fold your omelette; and dexterously tilt out on to a Gaiety plate. Servez chaud! The dialogue is smart and rattling; the jests and gibes are frequent and pungent; and the fooling is altogether devoid of effusive slanginess and vulgarity. Miss Nellie Farren, who played Château Renaud, looked, acted, danced, and sang delightfully; but she happily refrained from telling us, in coarse doggrel, how "Noah hung out in the Ark." Miss Kate Vaughan made a very sympathetic Emilie de Lesparre; and Mr. Royce presented before an audience, that knew no surcease in its shrieks of merriment, a most grotesque, but wholly good-natured and artistic, travesty of the dress, mien, and diction of Mr. Henry Irving in the twin characters of Fabien and Louis de' Franchi. There are caricatures and caricatures. When Madame Ristori went to the Olympic to see Robson in the burlesque of her own Medea, the illustrious tragédienne, in sheer wonder and admiration, exclaimed "Uomo straordinario!" I scarcely think that Mr. Henry Irving would be very angry, when an afternoon performance is given of "The Corsican Brothers and Co., Limited," at seeing himself reflected in Mr. Royce's harmlessly distorting mirror.

G. A. S.

MUSIC.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

The opening of the autumn and winter season of Italian Opera was recorded by us last week. Since the performances then referred to, new appearances have been made by Mdlle. Julie de Bressolles and Mdlle. Rosina Isidor. The first-named lady, as Amina, in "La Sonnambula," was moderately well received, having failed to make any appreciable impression except in the second finale (the sleep-walking scene), in which she sang with considerable effect. In the final bravura aria, "Ah! non giunge," she was deficient in vocal power and executive skill; but her energies were possibly repressed by the influence of cold and nervousness. Signor Cantoni, as Elvino, gave the scena, "Tutto é sciolto," with much success, and altogether appeared to more advantage in this character than as Fernando in "La Favorita," in which he made his début last week. Other features in the performance of "La Sonnambula" call for no specific mention.

On Thursday week "La Favorita" was repeated, "Carmen" was given on the following evening, and on Saturday Mdlle. Isidor made a very successful first (stage) appearance here as the heroine in Donizetti's "Lucia di Lammermoor." The lady had before been heard in London concert performances, in which, although favourably received, she did not make so great an impression as on Saturday last. Her voice is a soprano, of extensive compass, bright and agreeable in quality, and truthful in intonation. Her sostenuto is excellent, and her execution brilliant and facile—one or two exceptions having been her over-elaborate use of the extreme high notes. Her reception throughout the opera was highly favourable, her delivery of the final "scena, del Delirio," having elicited an enthusiastic demonstration. Signor Vizzani as Edgardo sang and acted with great effect; Signor Quintilli-Leoni as Enrico was earnest but ponderous, and, in vocalisation, excessively tremulous. The cast was completed by Mdlle. Barnadelli, and Signori Z. Conti, Ghilberti, and Bertocchi, in subordinate characters.

On Monday "La Favorita" was given again; and on Tuesday, Mdlle. Lorenzini Gianoli made her first appearance in England, as Norma—with so small an amount of success that we prefer waiting another opportunity for judging her powers. Mdlle. Bauermeister sang the important music of Adalgisa with especial effect, and Signor Antonucci gave that of Oroveso impressively. Signor Vizzani, as Pollione, was not at his best. He, and the prima donna, appeared to be disadvantageously influenced by the weather.

Of the promised debut of Mdlle. Elisa Widmar as Margherita, in "Faust," we must speak next week.

CRYSTAL PALACE.

Last Saturday's concert was rendered special by the production of two orchestral pieces for the first time there—Schubert's overture to his romantic opera, "Des Teufel's Lustschloss," and the third orchestral Suite by the late Georges Bizet. The overture is one of the many specimens of Schubert's precocious powers, having been composed when he was about seventeen. It is full of interest, and is constructed with a clearness and coherence, and instrumented with a mastery over orchestral effects, that are remarkable in the production of a youth.

The "Suite" is entitled "Roma" in its published shape, the author's endorsement on a manuscript copy having classed it as his "Symphonic Première." It consists of four divisions—"Andante tranquillo," "Allegro vivace," "Andante molto," and "Allegro vivacissimo"—each full of musical interest and individuality of character, with much elaborate and masterly instrumentation. The most effective portions were the "Allegro vivace" (a well-sustained "Scherzo"), and the finale, in which carnival revelry is suggested in some extremely animated and characteristic writing. The work was thoroughly appreciated, much applause having followed each movement, especially the "Allegro Vivace," and still more after the finale.

Mr. Sutton—the young violinist (pupil of M. Sainton) who made so favourable an impression at the recent Gloucester Festival—played the first movement of Vieuxtemps' concerto in A with much skilful execution, but with some want of the necessary power of tone and force of style.

Mr. Santley sang, with much effect, the couplets, "Si les filles d'Arles," (from Gounod's "Mireille"), the romance, "L'Adieu," attributed to Schubert (but said not to be by him); and Mr. Arthur Sullivan's song, "Thou'rt Passing Hence." The concert also comprised Herr Hellmesberger's clever adaptation of an air from Handel's "Alcina," for stringed instruments, organ, and harp; and the "Scherzo," "Notturno," and "Wedding March" from Mendelssohn's music to "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

The previous concert included Mr. Oscar Beringer's brilliant performance of a cleverly-written "Andante and Presto Agitato" for pianoforte (with orchestra) of his own composition. This accomplished pianist also played, with much effect, Chopin's "Allegro de Concert," as adapted with orchestral accompaniments by M. Nicodé. The orchestral performances included the bright and characteristic "Carnival in Paris," by the Norwegian composer Johann Svendsen; and Mdlle. Louisa Pyk sang, with much success, the scena from "Der Freischütz," an expressive "Ave Maria" by Verdi (for the first time in England), and some Swedish national melodies.

The Covent Garden Promenade concert of Wednesday week included an excellent performance of "Roma," the orchestral suite by the late Georges Bizet, referred to in the preceding notice of the Crystal Palace. The performance of Wednesday had been carefully prepared by Mr. Weist Hill, by whom it and other portions of the classical programme (including Weber's overture to "Oberon" and Mendelssohn's "Scotch" symphony) were ably conducted. On the same occasion Madame Montigny-Rémaury gave brilliant performances of Mendelssohn's "Capriccio," for pianoforte (with orchestral accompaniments), and Thalberg's second fantasia, on themes from "Don Giovanni;" and vocal pieces were contributed by Mesdames Zimeri, and Madame Cummings, Mdlle. Enequist, and Messrs. W. H. Woodfield and H. Cross.

Mr. Walter Bache's ninth annual pianoforte recital takes place on Monday afternoon at St. James's Hall.

The forty-ninth season of the Sacred Harmonic Society will open on Dec. 3, at St. James's Hall, where the concerts will in future be given, instead of at Exeter Hall, with which they have been associated for many years. The number of performers will be reduced—doubtless with advantage—from the 700 of past seasons. The programme of the opening night will comprise Beethoven's Mass in C, Mendelssohn's "Lauda Sion," and the fragments of his unfinished oratorio "Christus." The Christmas performance of "The Messiah" will take place on Dec. 17. During the season, the following works will be given:—Handel's coronation anthem, "The King shall rejoice," and his oratorio "Samson;" Mendelssohn's music to "Athalie," his "Lobgesang" ("Hymn of Praise"), and his "Elijah;" Cherubini's "Requiem," Sir J. Benedict's "Legend of St. Cecilia," Sir M. Costa's "Naaman;" and Rossini's "Stabat Mater" and "Moses in Egypt." The solo vocalists already engaged are Mesdames Lemmens-Sherrington and Osgood, Misses A. Williams, C. Penna, Marriott, Enequist, and Jones, Mesdames Patey, Enriquez, Hancock, and Orridge; Messrs. V. Rigby, E. Lloyd, Maas, Cummings, Wells, Santley, Bridson, King, Hilton, and C. Henry. Mr. Willing will continue to act as organist, and Sir M. Costa will fulfil the duties of conductor, as during thirty-three years of the past existence of the society.

HOME NEWS.

Lady Burdett-Coutts will be presented with the freedom of the Haberdashers' Company on Nov. 1.

Two beautiful young Polar bears have just arrived at the Zoological Society's Gardens.

Dr. Carpenter gave last Saturday at the Working Men's College his second lecture on "Human Automatism."

The Duke of Portland, the Earl of Durham, the Earl of Northbrook, and the Marquis of Hartington, have been elected life governors of the Royal Agricultural Society of England.

A new park, consisting of sixteen acres of land, presented to the town by the Earl of Stamford, was opened at Altrincham last Saturday.

Mr. David Whittingham, solicitor, of Nottingham, has been elected Coroner for the Nottingham district of the county, in place of the late Mr. D. W. Heath.

The Fishmongers' Company have granted £100 towards the general expenses of the East Anglian Fisheries Exhibition, and the free use of their hall for holding meetings.

Owing to the death of her youngest son, the Lady Mayoress Elect (Mrs. Alexander M'Arthur) will be prevented from taking any part in the ceremonial of Lord Mayor's Day or at the banquet in the evening.

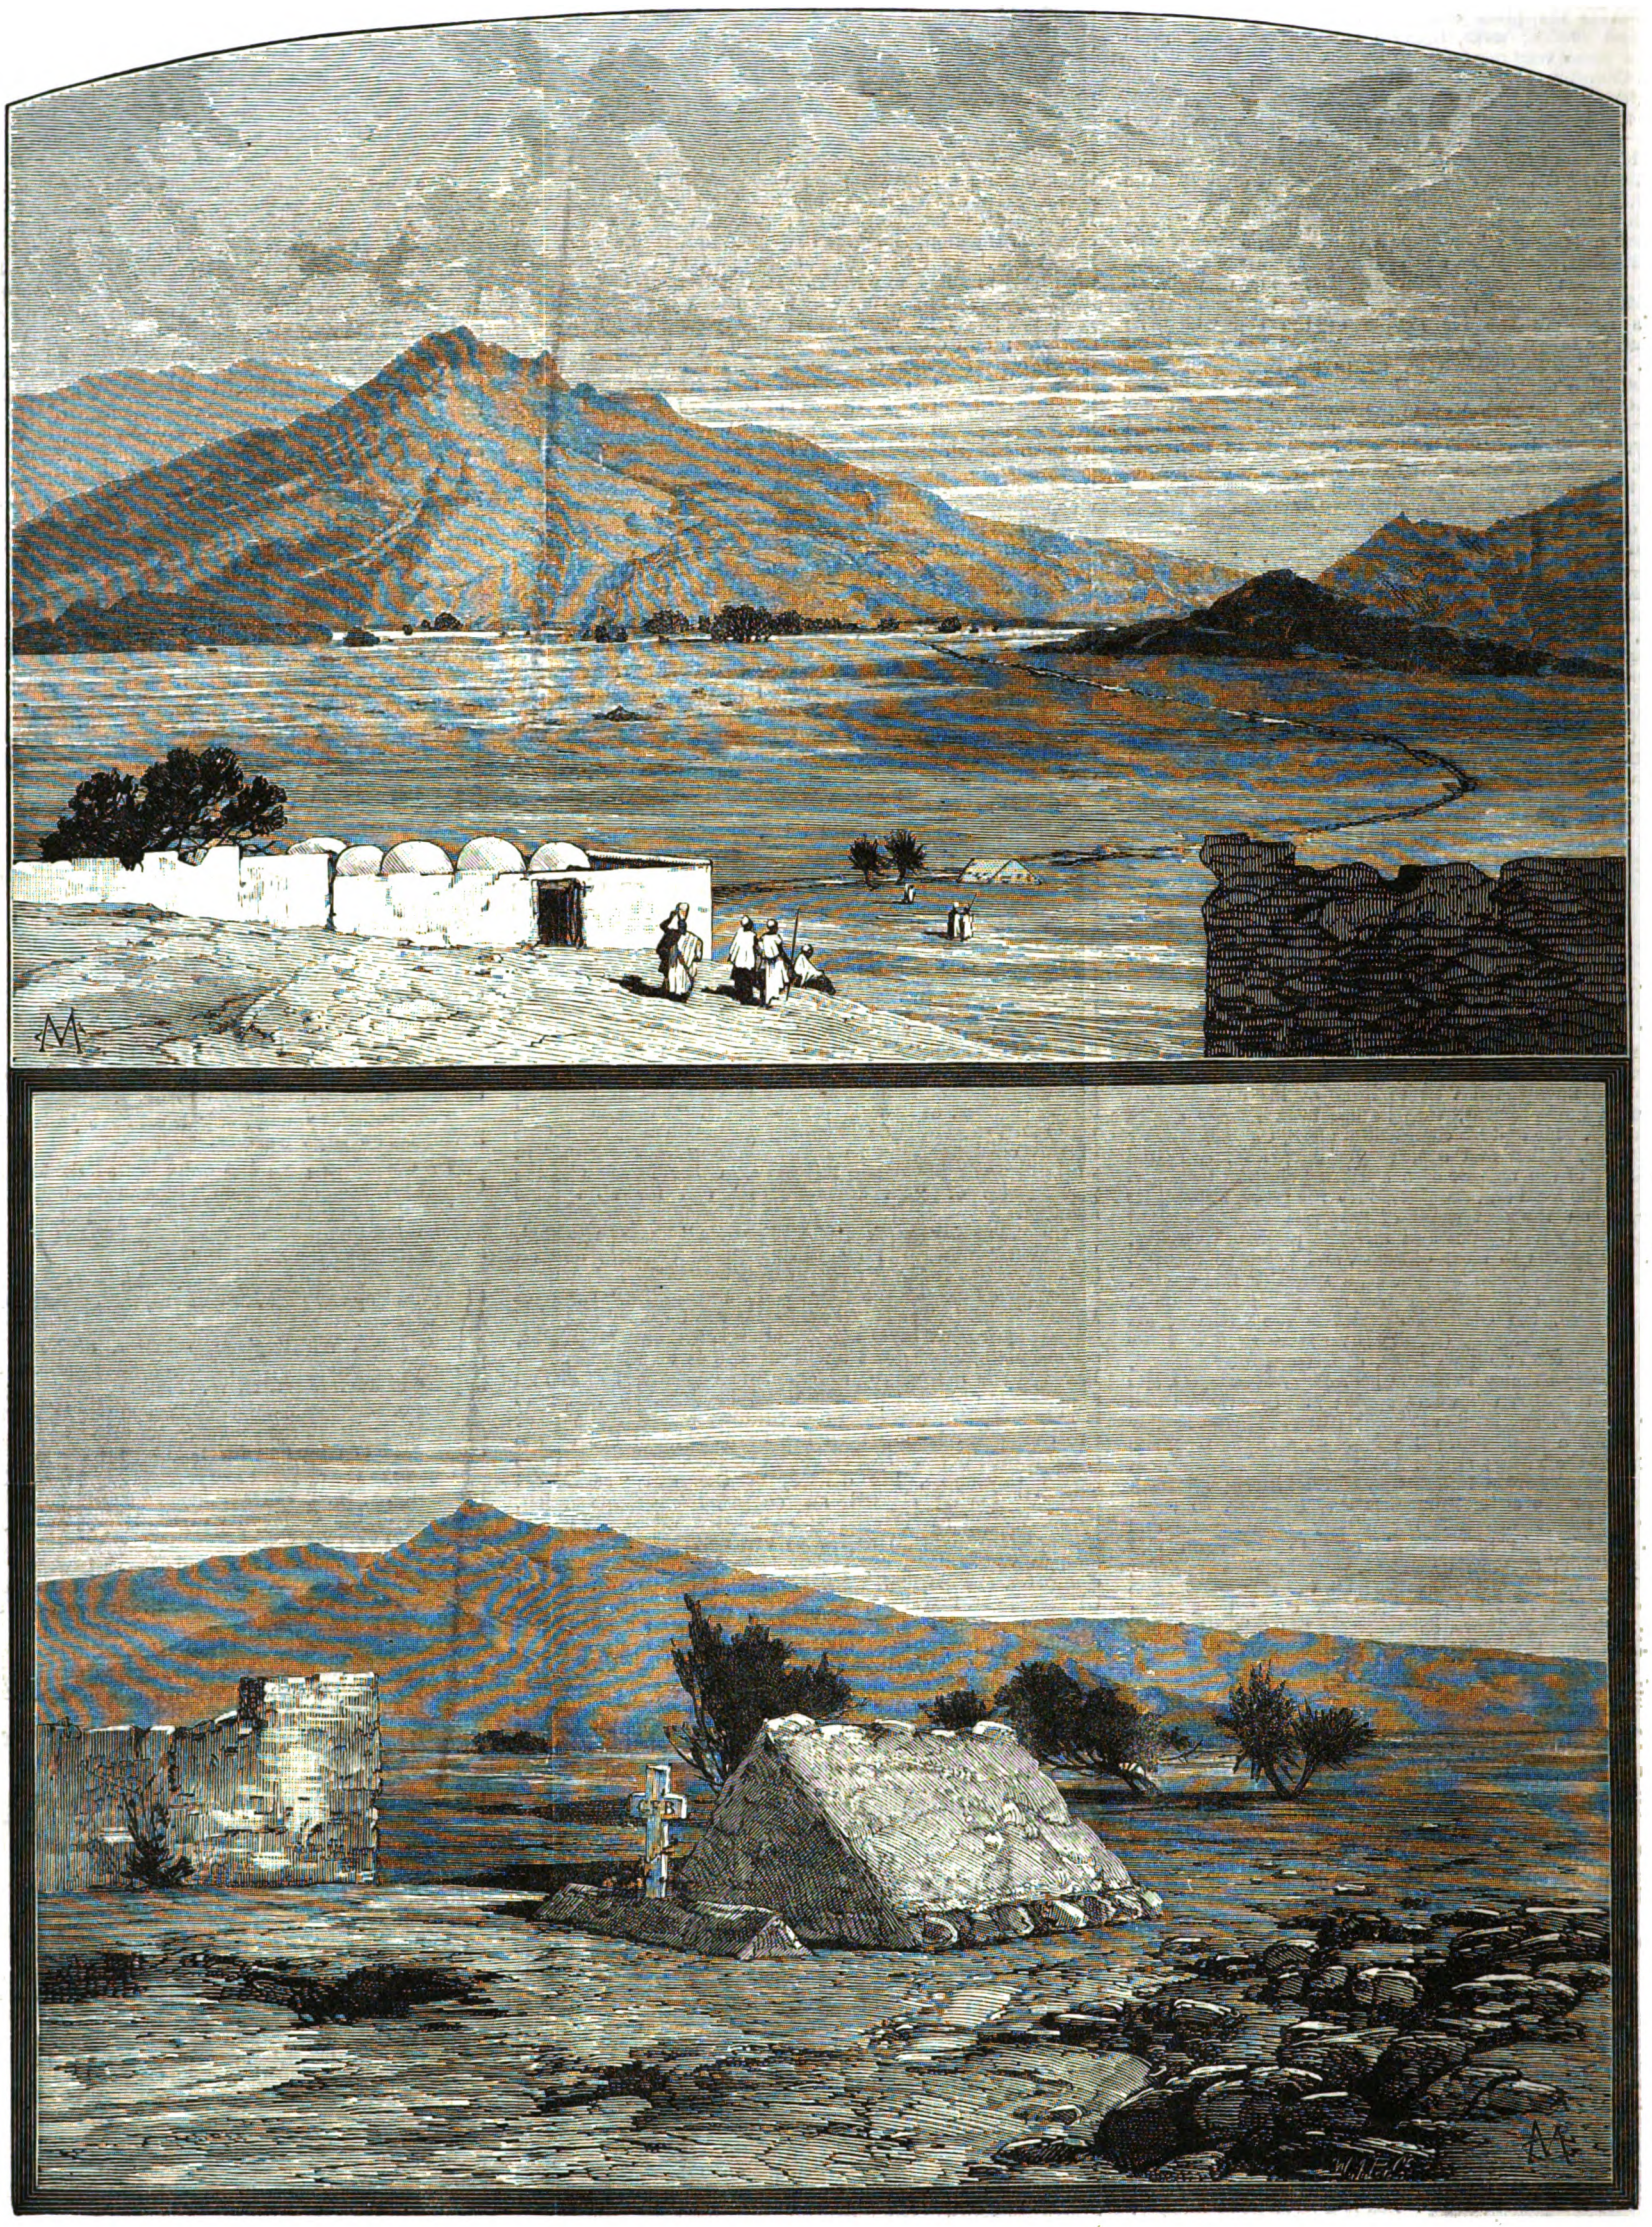
Major H. Danield, Divisional Superintendent of Police at Poonah, has been chosen Chief Constable of Hertfordshire, in room of the late Colonel Robertson. There were sixty-seven candidates for the office.

A scheme for bringing Liverpool into direct communication with the east coast is about to be carried out by the Midland Railway Company. It embraces a new line from Hawes through Swaledale to Hartlepool.

The Duke of Cambridge, as colonel-in-chief of the Royal Artillery, has approved of a regimental memorial being erected by the officers to their comrades of all ranks who have fallen in the recent campaigns in Afghanistan and South Africa,

The Leicester Corporation are at present engaged in carrying out flood works at a cost of over £30,000, and on Tuesday approved a further scheme, designed by Mr. Hawkesley, for the widening and deepening of the river Soar, at an additional outlay of £80,000.

The Ramsay life-boat of the National Life-Boat Institution on Tuesday went to the assistance of the brigantine Victoire, of Irvine, which was in distress about three miles eastward of Ramsay, and succeeded in bringing her into the harbour, with her crew of five men, in safety.



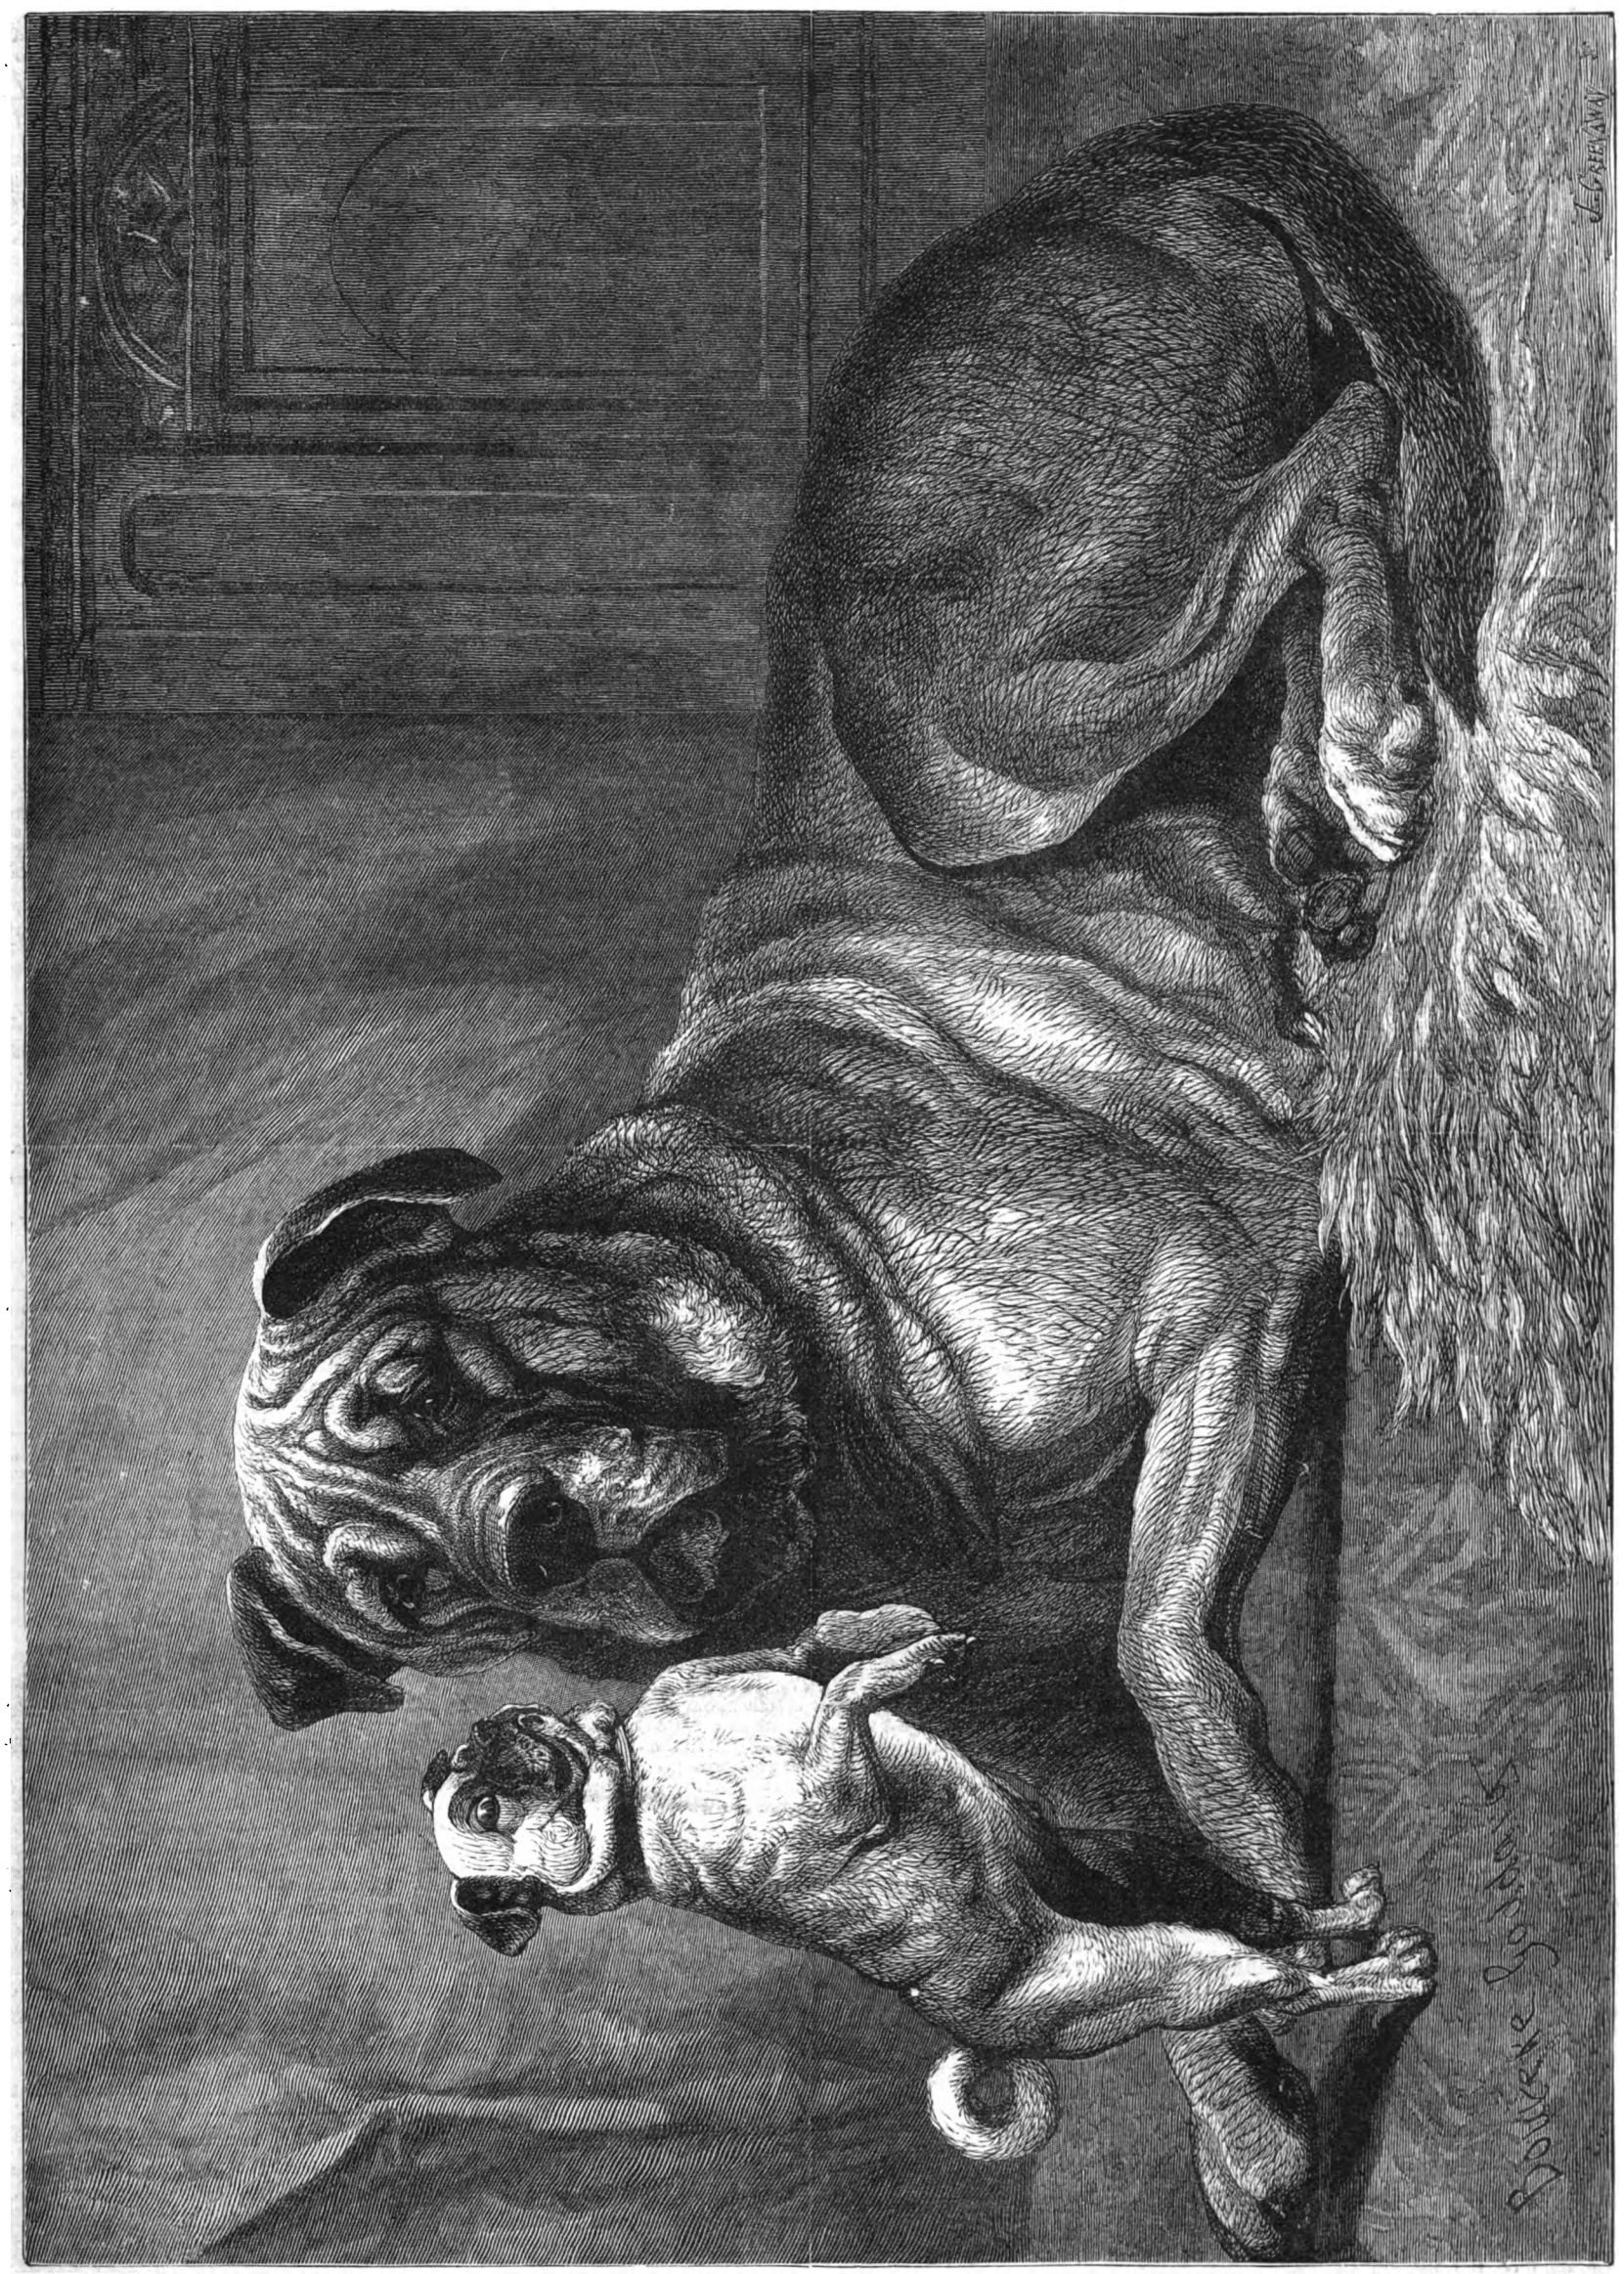
Mr. Spottiswoode, President of the Royal Society, lectured on "Polarised Light," at Trinity College, London, on the 21st inst. The lecturer, who said he fortunately had in his possession instruments unparalleled in the world, exhibited on the screen several new and striking experiments.

The weekly return of metropolitan pauperism shows that the total number of paupers on the last day of the third week in October was 85,357, of whom 48,507 were in workhouses, and 36,890 received outdoor relief. Compared with the corresponding week in 1879, these figures show an increase of 2213. The number of vagrants relieved on the last day of the week was 945, of whom 676 were men, 219 women, and 50 children.

The London School Board, at their weekly meeting on the 21st inst., filled up the vacancies in the representation of Marylebone and Lambeth, caused by the death of Mr. Watson and the disqualification of Mr. Wylie, by electing respectively Dr. Richardson and Mr. Kemp-Welch. The latter gentleman was a member of the old Board. A report from the Bye-laws Committee gave rise to a debate on the question of compulsory education and the proceedings recently taken at the police courts against poor people.

The formal dedication of Rugby, the English colony, which Mr. T. Hughes, Q.C., and other gentlemen and ladies have gone out to Tennessee to establish, took place on the 5th inst. There was a large attendance. The ceremonies were opened by an impressive religious service, conducted by Bishop Quintard, of Tennessee. A poem was read by Miss L. Virginia French, and addresses were afterwards made by Mr. Hughes, Mr. Cyrus Clark, manager of the colony; Judge Temple, of Knoxville, and others.

Digitized by Google



THE AFGHAN WAR: BATTLE-FIELD OF MAIWAND, AND GRAVES OF MAJOR BLACKWOOD, R.H.A., AND MEN OF THE 66TH REGIMENT.
FROM A SKETCH BY CAPTAIN J. R. SLADE, R.H.A.

BATTLE-FIELDS OF AFGHANISTAN.

The disastrous engagement of July 27, between Khushk-i-Nakhud and Maiwand, about forty miles west of Candahar towards the river Helmund, where Brigadier-General Burrows suffered a defeat, with terrible loss, from the Herat Afghan army under Ayoub Khan, is not easily to be forgotten. In addition to the account of this action which was given by official despatches, the Times of the 16th inst. contained a letter from its own correspondent, dated Candahar, Sept. 8, describing the whole affair, of which he was personally a witness; and we have now received from one of the officers engaged, Captain J. R. Slade, of the Royal Horse Artillery, two Sketches belonging to this subject. It is from the Times' correspondent above mentioned that we learn how gallantly Captain Slade, when he succeeded Major G. F. Blackwood in command of the guns, persisted in "doing all that man could do to cover the retreat of the beaten infantry and baggage," and in keeping back the enemy from pursuit of them; while carrying off, upon his guns, many of our wounded men and officers, and finding water to assuage their thirst. After the relief of Candahar by General Sir F. Roberts, early in September, a party of the survivors of the action at Maiwand was sent to that place, Captain Slade being with them, to assist in identifying the bodies of their fallen comrades, and in giving them decent burial. His communication to us, dated Maiwand, Sept. 19, merely furnishes a sketch of the field of battle, showing the position of the opposing troops; and a second one, representing the burial-place of our own dead. There is, he says, "a large grave, containing about forty bodies of the gallant 66th, covered with large stones; and a smaller grave, with a little wooden cross, bearing the initials G. F. B., denoting the resting-place of the late Major G. F. Blackwood, R.H.A., who commanded the E Battery, B Brigade, of the Royal Horse Artillery, and whose body was one of the last found in the open plain on our line of retreat." It appears, however, from the narrative of the Times' correspondent, that Major Blackwood was wounded early in the action, and was obliged to leave his guns in charge of Captain Slade, while he went to get his wounds dressed; but he was afterwards overtaken and cut off in the general retreat of the British force. Captain Slade observes, "There is every hope that these graves may be allowed to remain intact and undesecrated, as those of our poor men who fell in 1842 were all found in a very good state of preservation."

The defeat of Ayoub Khan, and dispersion of his army, by General Sir F. Roberts, on Sept. 1, at Baba Wali, near Candahar, has also been fully described by several newspaper correspondents. We are indebted to Surgeon-General Woodforde-Finden (2nd Prince of Wales's Own Goorkhas), of the Bengal Army Medical Department, for an excellent sketch of the entire battle-field. It extends from the city of Candahar, shown at the extreme left, with the suburban villages and British cantonments, to the Baba Wali Pass, and to the opening, near the village of Mazra, into the Argandab Valley, with the position there occupied by Ayoub Khan that day, which is indicated at the right hand of this view. The enemy were behind several of those rugged hills, which form a broken and interrupted range, stretching in a north-easterly direction, and separating the Argandab Valley from the plain north of Candahar. General Roberts threatened the enemy with an attack by way of the Baba Wali Pass, with the troops of the Candahar garrison; but his real attack, with two brigades he had led from Cabul, under Generals Macgregor and Macpherson, with General Hugh Gough commanding the cavalry, was by the village of Pir Paimal, to the south of Ayoub Khan's position. This would lie in the background, near the centre of the view presented in our Engraving. There are several villages between the hills noted as having been taken by the 92nd and 72nd Highlanders, leading the two Brigades, and supported by the 2nd Goorkhas, 23rd Pioneers, and 24th Punjaub Native Infantry, in the 1st Brigade; and, in the 2nd Brigade, by the 2nd Sikhs, 5th Goorkhas, and 3rd Sikhs, which composed the better part of the forces brought from Cabul. The victory of General Roberts was most complete and decisive, at once breaking up the force of Ayoub Khan, who fled in great haste to his own country of Herat, leaving the whole province of Candahar entirely subject to British authority.

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

"COMPARISONS ARE ODIOUS."

The late Sir Edwin Landseer, who may be called the Shakspeare of animal-painters, often exerted his genius in the dramatic presentment of two or more dogs with such distinct individuality of character that they must be recognised as persons, apparently holding the same kind of moral and social relations to one another as we see among different characters and classes of mankind. It is a fine species of comedy, a gentle satire on the pride of our race, and on its assumed exclusive monopoly of the faculties of intelligence and of self-respecting practical deliberation and conduct. This is set forth in such pictures as "Dignity and Impudence," "Alexander and Diogenes," and others to be admired in the National Collection, or in many published engravings. There is a touch of this kind of ironical humour, which has, indeed, been indulged by many writers, as well as by many artists, from Æsop to those of our own day, in the drawing that appears on a page of the sheet now beneath the eyes of our present reader. Mr. Goddard has also obtained, by sympathetic observation of their manners, such an intimate knowledge of the temper and disposition of varieties of the canine race, that he is able to discern in them, and to show us in his portraiture of them, dramatic expressions of character, the more strongly marked in juxtaposition with each other. His idea of a pert little pug-dog, giving itself airs upon the consciousness that the shape of its muzzle bears a certain queer resemblance to that of a majestic mastiff, and posing in a ridiculous stuck-up attitude for the purpose of being viewed in this comparison, will not fail to be understood; and the notion is certainly amusing.

VOLUNTEERS.

On Monday the annual competition between selected shots from the Royal East Kent Mounted Rifles for a silver cup presented by the Lieutenant-Colonel, the Earl of Guilford, and two similar prizes offered by Major-General the Marquis Conyngham, took place at Bridge, near Canterbury. There were four ties for the first-named prize, which was awarded to Quartermaster Wood, he having made the highest score at the longest range. The other cups were won by Sergeant C. and E. Kelcey, whose scores were equal, and exceeded by fifteen those which were the next highest. The Marquis Conyngham's prizes were competed for on the Loyd-Lindsay principle, by half sections, at two ranges.

Lord Morley, the Under-Secretary for War, yesterday week presented the prizes to the Exeter Rifle Volunteers, and, in doing so, referred at length to the rise and successes of the volunteer movement. He believed that the system carried many benefits into the social life of the people which were quite apart from the appreciable services directly rendered to the country.

The match between twelve of the 1st Battalion Scots Guards, under Lieutenant Crutchley, their musketry instructor, and twelve volunteers of the London Rifle Brigade, under Earl Waldegrave, came off yesterday week at the Rainham ranges. At 200 and 500 yards the volunteers made the highest scores, but at 600 yards the regulars scored 314 as against 286 by their competitors, and won the match by 16 points, with an aggregate score of 988.

The annual distribution of prizes to the members of the First East York (Hull) Rifle Volunteers took place at the Londesborough Barracks yesterday week night. There was a brilliant assemblage of ladies. Amongst those on the platform were Lord Londesborough (hon. colonel of the corps) and Lady Londesborough. Lieutenant-Colonel Longstaff, who had been a member of the corps for twenty years, having risen from a private to the command of the regiment, was presented with a handsomely illuminated and framed copy of the regimental order issued by Major Goddard on the occasion of Lieutenant-Colonel Longstaff's retirement.

Major-General Gordon Cameron, C.B., has accepted the honorary colonelcy of the West Middlesex Rifles, commanded by Lieut.-Colonel Mears.

The largest muster of Volunteers ever witnessed in the south of the metropolis is arranged to be held to-day (Saturday) to commemorate the attainment by the organisation of its majority. Since July last there have been displays in various parts of the country to celebrate the majority, but, with the exception of that fixed for to-day, nothing of the kind has been attempted in the metropolis. It is proposed to have a march, the starting-point being the head-quarters of the 1st Surrey (South London) Rifles, the oldest Volunteer corps with one exception in London and neighbourhood. If, as is expected, the whole of the corps in the district attend, there will be nearly 4000 of all arms present.

The Metropolitan Board of Works has resolved, on the recommendation of the Bridges Committee, that the new bridge at Battersea shall be built on a site as near as possible to that of the existing structure, at a cost of £220,000; and that the new bridge at Putney shall be built parallel to the Aqueduct, at a cost of £376,000.—The Board has resolved not to prepare any additional schemes under the Artisans' Dwellings Act until they have had an opportunity of recommending to the Home Secretary such amendments of the Act as appear to be necessary.

THE RECESS.

"Confound their politics!" With this Masonic injunction looming before them, the illustrious and distinguished Freemasons who on Monday night gathered at the hospitable board of the Lord Mayor of London naturally said naught that calls for anything but casual comment in this column. The memorable banquet was a remarkable social event purely. Rising to respond to the toast of the health of the Grand Master, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales (near whom sat the Duke of Connaught and Prince John of Glücksburg) seized the opportunity to give a flourishing report of the condition of the Craft, dwelt on the facts that there are now 1900 lodges "under the Grand Roll of England," that 10,000 Freemasons join these lodges each year, and that £40,000 per annum is subscribed for the support of the Masonic charities. The Prince, in referring gracefully to the presence of a relative of the Princess of Wales, added, "I shall always look upon my connection with Freemasonry as being a binding link between Sweden, Denmark, and England."

"The Old, Old Story" was sung immediately after the Prince's Masonic speech. But it was an "Old, Old Story" of a very different nature that the Marquis of Salisbury reverted to the following evening in Taunton. The noble Marquis, present at a luncheon given by Canon Woodard in the morning to celebrate the opening of a sixth public school in connection with St. Nicholas College, Lancing, seasonably dwelt on the urgent need of increasing facilities for middle-class education. In parenthesis, it may be stated that Lord Salisbury does not confine himself to words in supporting this opinion: Canon Woodard disclosed that his Lordship is wont to subscribe £1000 now and again to the funds of these excellent schools. That the ex-Foreign Secretary is not a whit less keen in controversial argument than he was as Lord Cranbourne, was quickly shown at the Taunton banquet in his honour on Tuesday evening. His vigorous speech bristled with caustic points against the Government—not new, but telling, as freshly sharpened. At the outset, his Lordship contended that the House of Lords had the sanction of the country in its opposition to a measure that came up from the Commons last Session. Then he advanced the opinion that the light of Parliament ought at this juncture to be thrown upon "the dark and stormy condition of affairs." Particularly severe against the concerted action of the European Fleet to coerce Turkey, he held up to ridicule the notion that orders should have been given "that the crews of those ships should never land, and the guns which those ships carried should never fire." Fresh laughter came when he remarked, "They might for all practical purposes have just as well sent six washing-tubs with flags attached to them." Characterising this as "Chinese energy," he went on to contend that, as Signatories to the Treaty of Berlin, we were bound to exhaust every diplomatic means of securing the fulfilment of its decrees; but ladled out some of his most pungent irony on the devoted heads of the Montenegrins and Greeks with the view of showing they were utterly undeserving of interference by force of arms to enlarge their territories. His Lordship maintained that Lord Beaconsfield at Berlin carefully guarded against any such contingency as forcing Turkey to transfer portions of Thessaly and Epirus to Greece. To do so, in fact, would be "as wholly indefensible as would be the transfer of Liège to France or Trieste to Italy." If it was said "Greece ought to be paid for her extreme goodness and morality in not attacking Turkey when she was down," why, then Lord Salisbury said, "I shall expect that whenever Ireland is pacified, if ever that should happen, those tenants who forbore to shoot their landlords will come forward and ask for compensation." Coming to the unfortunate state of affairs in the sister isle, he had a bolt ready forged to discharge at the Government on that score:—

It is, indeed, a melancholy satire upon all our recent enthusiasm for the good government of Turkey that we should have in the West of Ireland a state of things of which the Sultan himself would feel ashamed.

As a matter of fact, Ireland is not actually in a more disturbed condition now than she was a short twelvemonth ago, when the Administration of which the noble Lord was an ornament failed to relieve the widespread distress that existed, and a Government prosecution was commenced against a few inflammatory agitators. Forgetfulness, however, is convenient in Opposition. Consequently, the rumoured forthcoming prosecution of the harebrained leaders of the Land League by the present Ministry called for wholesale condemnation from the Marquis, who recommended "a simple suspension of the Habeas Corpus Act," or the assumption of additional powers by Government, as the best means of suppressing the outrages and disorderly manifestations complained of. Plentifully supplied with blank ammunition to the last, Lord Salisbury fired this final volley at the Government:—

You will, at all events, endeavour without hesitation to overthrow the policy which has alienated our friendly allies in Europe, which has made us do the work and follow the bidding of Russia, and which has plunged into apparently helpless anarchy the much-tried population of Ireland.

Gladiatorially viewed, it was, perhaps, to be regretted that neither the Prime Minister nor Mr. Bright, neither the Duke of Argyll nor Sir William Harcourt (the latter of whom was warmly welcomed in Glasgow and Edinburgh last week), had opportunely arranged to be present at some dinner or Liberal meeting on Wednesday, in order to reply to the epithets which they might have guessed Vulcan was forging. Mr. Chamberlain, for one, appeared to have surmised at Birmingham on Tuesday what was going on in remote Taunton. It chanced that a Memorial, designed to commemorate the great services the President of the Board of Trade has rendered to Birmingham—by enabling the Corporation to buy the gasworks Mr. Chamberlain is computed to have been the means of saving Birmingham £130,000 in five years, in addition to the creation of a sinking fund which will amount to £150,000 at the close of this year—was unveiled on Tuesday. An address of thanks from the Town Council was afterwards presented to Mr. Chamberlain, who, in modestly acknowledging the compliment, administered the following neat dig in the ribs to the late Conservative Administration:—

I will confess to you that I am so parochially minded that I look with greater satisfaction to our annexation of the gas and of the water, to our scientific frontier in the improvement area (laughter), than I do to the results of that Imperial policy which has given us Cyprus and the Transvaal (laughter); and I am prouder of having been engaged with you in warring against disease, and crime, and ignorance in Birmingham than if I had been the author of the Zulu War, or had instigated the invasion of Afghanistan (Laughter).

Entertained subsequently at dinner in the new Council House, Mr. Chamberlain made another effective speech, in the course of which he said he would have gladly given place in the Cabinet to his intimate personal and political friend Sir Charles Dilke; but owned that the office of President of the Board of Trade was congenial to him, and cited the measures that had been passed, and referred to probable legislation in regard to the mercantile marine, railway companies, the patent law, partnership, and bankruptcy, in justification of the action and intentions of the Government. As for Ireland and the East, the policy of the Ministry would be in accord with the speeches of Ministers before taking office.

Lord Northbrook, though fresh from the sea breezes of the Channel, referred to no Admiralty topic at the political and terpsichorean festival wherewith the establishment of the Winchester Liberal Working Men's Club was celebrated on Tuesday night. The First Lord of the Admiralty plumed the Liberal Party on having gained five seats in Hampshire. He declined to touch upon Ireland and the East. He preferred to name the Employers' Liability Bill, Repeal of the Malt Tax, and Hares and Rabbits Bill as practical proofs of the desire of the Government to relieve all classes of the community. Referring to what he was almost inclined to call the "post-mortem examinations" regarding election corruption in certain boroughs, the noble lord earnestly called upon working men to do their utmost to put down bribery.

In Ireland, Mr. Parnell has been courting prosecution by the outrageous violence of his language. On Sunday he appeared with a congenial clique of Land Leaguers in Galway. Commenting on the rumoured rod the Government was reported to have in pickle for him and his followers—a State prosecution—Mr. Parnell applied such choice epithets as "our hypocritical Chief Secretary," and "Buckshot Forster" to the right hon. gentleman. This was in cold blood. After dinner in Galway, on Sunday evening, Mr. Parnell had the bad judgment to say that if Ireland appealed to Irishmen in America to aid her "in another field and in another way" she would have "their trained and organised assistance for the purpose of breaking the yoke which encircles you." Though this arch-offender was spared for the time, Mr. Parnell's secretary, Mr. T. M. Healy, was on Tuesday arrested at Roche's Hotel, Glengariffe, the stated charges against him being the implied justification of the attempt to murder Mr. Hutchins in speeches made at Bantry on Sunday week and at Castletown, Berehaven, on Sunday last. Meantime, whilst reports of further prosecutions filled the air, Mr. Justin M'Carthy was impelled by these very rumours to quixotically send his adhesion to the Land League; and Mr. F. H. O'Donnell felt bound to do the same in the shape of a characteristically pompous and self-sufficient epistle. It may be added that it was an outspoken speech of Mr. Herbert Gladstone (who has just been made an Ancient Shepherd) in Leeds that gave support to the rumour of the State prosecution of the leaders of the Land League.

Reading between the lines of the unsavoury revelations of almost historic corruption brought to light by the searching inquiries of the Election Commissioners, it is not hard to see here and there that whilst, on the one hand, the most strenuous exertions were made to keep the elections pure, on the other hand the most lavish means were adopted to debauch constituencies. With regard to the Election Petitions lately heard, that at Berwick-on-Tweed resulted adversely to the unfortunate Lord Advocate for Scotland, whose seat will be taken by Captain Milne Home; the Worcester inquiry is pending as we go to press; and on Monday the petition against Mr. Ralli at Wallingford was dismissed.

THE CHURCH.

PREFERMENTS AND APPOINTMENTS.

Bourne, G. D., to be Honorary Canon of Gloucester.
Clayton, E.; Prebendary of Putston Major in Hereford Cathedral.
Dickson, John Phillips; Rector of Cumberwo th, Yorks.
Fowler, C. A.; Rector of Walton-in-Gordano and Western-in-Gordano.
Houghton, H. J., Vicar of Blockley; Rural Dean of Blockley.
Kemp, F. F.; Vicar of Camberwell.
King, J. F., Rector of Little Braxted; Vicar of St. John's, Colchester.
Millar, J., Vicar of Cirencester; Honorary Canon of Bristol.
Robertson, David; Rural Dean of Kidderminster.
Tomkins, Wm.; Curate of St Stephen, Barbourne, Worcester.
Witts, Broome F. E.; Vicar of Norton.
Wylde, Robert; Rector of Northfield, Birmingham.—Guardian.

The Bishop of London will resume his weekly attendance at London House next Monday.

The ancient parish church of Handsworth was reopened on Monday, after restoration, by the Archbishop of York. The nave and chancel of the church probably date from the early part of the thirteenth century.

The congregation of St. John's Episcopal Chapel, Hampstead, of which the late Prebendary Wright, who was drowned in Coniston Lake, was the minister, have raised a sum of £580 for the Church Missionary Society as a tribute of respect to the memory of the deceased gentleman, who was the honorary clerical secretary of that society.

Speaking at the diocesan conference at Gloucester, the Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol said he should conscientiously object to consecrate churchyards of which the land was not specially reserved by trust deed for members of the Church of England. He had drawn up a form for his clergy to be used separately in every case of interment in unconsecrated ground.

A fine example of the new style of spirit fresco painting has been finished in the chancel of St. Peter's, Belsize Park, by Mr. Philip Harry Newman. The subject is "Our Lord Healing the Sick."—The east window of St. Jude's, Gray's-inn-road, has been filled with stained glass, executed by Mr. G. Rees, of Lamb's-conduit-street. It is a gift to the church from the congregation.

Kensington parish church has received an addition in the shape of a magnificent prize medal tower-clock. The clock, which is the work of Messrs. E. Dent and Co., is constructed upon the same design as their great clock at the Houses of Parliament. In addition to striking the hours, it chimes the quarters upon four bells. A singular feature is that the clock has no dials, as it is thought that they would hardly be in harmony with the Gothic character of the building.

The parish church of Sheffield was reopened on Tuesday by the Archbishop of York, after complete restoration. The scheme originated in the munificent gift by the late Mrs. Thornhill-Gill, of Stanton-in-the-Peak, of £10,000. Independent of this gift, a transept has already been completed some months. This addition, together with three beautiful stained windows, was made at a cost of £2500, by Mrs. Samuel Parker, in memory of her late husband, a well-known physician of Sheffield. A further sum of £5000 or £6000 was required, all of which, with the exception of about £1500, has been contributed in the town.

On the 14th inst. the Mexican troops surrounded and, after two day's fighting, annihilated the band of Indians which, for years past, under the leadership of a chief named Victorio, had infested the American border. During the present year 400 persons have been murdered by this band.

The Wreck Register for 1878-9, published by the Board of Trade, shows that last year 3002 wrecks occurred on our coasts and that 490 lives were lost. Of the total number 797 were serious casualties and 1808 minor disasters. During the past twenty-five years there had been 49,322 wrecks, resulting in the loss of 18,319 lives. By means of the life-boats of the National Life-Boat Institution, the rocket apparatus of the Board of Trade, and other agencies, as many as 3302 lives were saved from the various wrecks on our coasts last year.

Digitized by Google

The Extra Supplement.

"PLEASANT COMPANY MAKES THE WAY SHORT."

This was a capital subject for the very promising—nay, already distinguished—young painter, Mr. Heywood Hardy. Few artists paint horses so well, or foreshorten them so accurately; and few paint human figures better, or so well, either. The subject has also just that graceful geniality, that touch of romance, heightened with a dash of olden costume—the expression of refined sympathies and sensibilities—to which Mr. Hardy's works have often borne witness. A trot, breaking now and then into a canter, on a good nag, along a country road, in the heyday of youth, on a pleasant spring or autumn morning, with just cloud enough to veil the sun, and with a lovely companion mounted by your side—what could be more delightful? The pair before us probably would desire nothing better. Having now reached the ford, swollen, perhaps, slightly by recent showers, they rein in a little, and the gentleman, making believe to think that his companion may feel a little nervous, offers his hand as a support while crossing the ford. We have no doubt the sly rogue is ready to offer his hand metaphorically as well as literally, and his heart with it, on the first opportunity or the slightest occasion. But his pretended solicitude is evidently misplaced: judging by her seat, his charming companion is at least as secure as he—in sooth, she may be a very Di Vernon. We look too at the quaint old costume, say, of a hundred years ago—the picturesque tri-corne hats, and the jaunty habit (free from the smug rigidity of the modern garment, with its horrible chimney-pot finial); the gentleman's trim breeches, boots, and coat, not forgetting the sensible, serviceable tippet and his unstarched neckcloth and ruffles. We are led to ask why, now that we are imitating so much from the long-despised but of late, perhaps, over-lauded Georgian era, why, we say, something cannot be borrowed from the costume of that period, or, indeed, from any other period of the past, to relieve the doleful monotony and stiff formality, the absolute hideousness of the male garb—"costume" is too expressive and dignified a word to apply to it—of the present day?

The picture was exhibited at the Dudley Gallery, and is the property of Messrs. H. Mendoza and Son, by whose permission it is engraved for this Journal.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

As far as it has gone, we cannot say that the Houghton Meeting has rivalled the Second October in any respect. The weather was all that could be wished on Monday, but the next two days were simply awful, even for Newmarket. Then, though there have been unusually large fields for some of the events, we have only had one race per day that has created general interest; and, lastly, it must be admitted that the excitement engendered by the Cambridgeshire could not be compared with that involved in the decision of the Cesarewitch. Archer and Cradle made a successful effort in the opening event of Monday, though Lord Wilton's old horse had to gallop in earnest to beat the luckless Lancaster Bowman, who is almost as good a "second" as The Abbot. In the flying Stakes Rowlston actually proved himself as good as Hackthorpe at level weights, and gave Constable another winning mount. By the way, it is stated that Lord Rosebery's favourite jockey will not be seen much more in the saddle, but will devote his time exclusively to training, in which he has proved so thoroughly successful this season. There were no less than twenty-five runners for the Monday Nursery Handicap, and Griselda (6 st. 2 lb.) came in alone. She carried Lord Zetland's time-honoured "spots," and was, we believe, the first winner ever ridden by little Enoch, a son of his Lordship's trainer. The Criterion Stakes, finishing at the top of the town, was, of course, set last on the card. Lord Rosebery depended on Savoyard, as Town Moor was in reserve for the more valuable Dewhurst Plate. St. Louis had no engagement in the race, so once more Mr. Crawfurd was well represented by Thebais. Brag, who was unpenalised, started favourite, but was out of it a long way from home, and Thebais had not the slightest trouble in beating Savoyard and Sir Marmaduke, who were, respectively, second and third.

Though he is now eleven years old, Grand Flaneur has enough speed left to beat a very fair field for the All-Aged Trial Stakes on Tuesday, and the hero of two Portland Plates bids fair to rival the feats of Oxonian, and to win a race or two when in his teens. The next two races fell to sons of Speculum, Goggles defeating a very large field in a Maiden Plate; while Field Glass beat Early Morn and seven others in a handicap over the Bretby Stakes course. The thirty-one runners for the Cambridgeshire were weighed out in capital time, but, between the rain and the haze, it was most difficult to see much of the race. The rush on Fernandez (8 st. 1 lb.) was so strong that it was difficult to back him at any price, Retreat (7 st. 5 lb.) was also in great demand, and weight of money brought Ulster (6 st. 12 lb.) to 12 to 1. When the flag fell—so far as could be learnt—all were off on level terms. There was, however, soon a disposition to make, as in the olden days, for the upper ground, and here, when fairly under weigh, were seen King Priam, Khabara, Lucetta, Castillon, and Fernandez, while in the centre Sybil and Ulster were conspicuous, with Evasion and Pelleas leading the lot on the lower ground. At the heels of the front rank on the top ground were Toastmaster, Cipolata, and Retreat, and among the centre second lot was Experiment, while the rearmost division were Exeter, Nereid, Mirth, and Petronel. When about a quarter of a mile had been covered Petronel improved his position, and Spitzbergen, American Spendthrift, and Leoville dropped back. Meanwhile Pelleas, on the lower ground, had taken up the running from King Priam on the top, the next prominent lot being Castillon, Experiment, Retreat, Dreamland, Toastmaster, and Lucetta, the latter of whom, with Fernandez, rapidly improved their positions as they neared the Red Post. Evasion, King Priam, Castillon, and Toastmaster, who had been conspicuous in the van, were done with before reaching this point, as was Retreat, while Lucetta here had taken a clear lead of Pelleas, Fernandez, and Cipolata. About one hundred and fifty yards past the Red Post Fernandez ran up to Lucetta on the left, while Cipolata ran into third place; Lucetta, however, hanging towards the left, Fordham had to pull up Fernandez and come round on the whip hand of the Station-road filly, and, though he challenged resolutely, he could not get up, and was defeated by half a length. Cipolata finished third, two lengths off, while Pelleas was fourth, Wallenstein fifth, Toastmaster sixth, Evasion seventh, Castillon eighth, Experiment ninth, Buchanan tenth, Retreat eleventh, and King Priam twelfth; while the last lot were Exeter, Dreamland, and American Spendthrift. As soon as they returned to weigh in, Fordham lodged an objection against the winner on the ground of a cross, and as he is the last man to make a frivolous one, as little as 6 to 4 was taken in some cases that Fernandez got the race. The stewards heard the case in the town the same evening, and, after a long consultation, confirmed the judge's placing. Still, there is no doubt but that Mr. Gretton's colt ought to have won, and, in any case, he carries off the honours of the race, as he was giving a year and 14 lb. to Lucetta. Cipolata (8 st. 11 lb.) once more acquitted herself very creditably, and, judging through her, it is clear that 9 st. would not have stopped Robert the Devil from following in the footsteps of Rosebery, and securing the Cambridgeshire as well as the Cesarewitch.

The Dewhurst Plate on Wednesday was a second edition of the Middle Park Plate, as the first five in the latter race again competed. They met on exactly the same terms, with one important exception, and that was in the case of St. Louis, who had a 10 lb. penalty. Still Mr. Crawfurd's crack started with the call of everything except Town Moor, with whom he was in equal demand at 5 to 2. Both ran well to the Abingdon Bottom, where the weight stopped St. Louis, and Town Moor was beaten. Brag then came away in front of Bal Gal and Lucy Glitters, but Lord Falmouth's filly struggled on with great determination, and, catching Brag in the last few strides, won by a neck, Lucy Glitters being the same distance behind the second. As Bal Gal managed to stay this severe seven furlongs, her roaring propensities cannot be so very serious, after all, and she may yet play no unimportant part in the classic races of next season. St. Louis's defeat may be partially condoned, as a 10 lb. penalty is a very serious matter when the ground is heavy; but no excuse can be made for Town Moor.

Coursing men were unusually busy last week, the South Lancashire (Southport) Meeting being only one of three or four good fixtures. The weather in all parts of the country was cold, still sport in Lancashire proved thoroughly enjoyable, as there were plenty of hares, and they ran wonderfully stoutly. The Derby, for dog puppies, was won by Headman, by Beardwood—Happy Lines: and the Oaks fell to Black Bess, by Achilles—a dog whose representatives are doing wonderfully well this season—from Countess Ratcliffe. The Scarisbrick Cup was shared by The Baron, Master Johnny, and Trapper, though Mr. Trap, who owns the last mentioned, must be considered very fortunate, as it was almost universally believed that Sir Richard beat him pretty easily in the fourth round. Public opinion was also dead against Mr. Hyslop's decision in the course between M'Dougal and Hector, in the Cossens Stakes; but it must be admitted that the judge and the spectators are not unfrequently at issue at Southport, as the courses look very different from different positions. There were no less than 106 entries for the Puppy Stakes at Coquetdale, and Dulas, by Meldon—Deceive me Not, won the final course. She is a very promising young lady, and, after her victory, was sold, together with her sister Dora, to Mr. Dunn, for £100, with a further contingency of £500 if either of them wins the Waterloo Cup.

On Tuesday next Elias Laycock and Charles Hosmer will scull from Putney to Mortlake for £200, and thus, for the first time, Australia and America will be pitted against each other on the river.

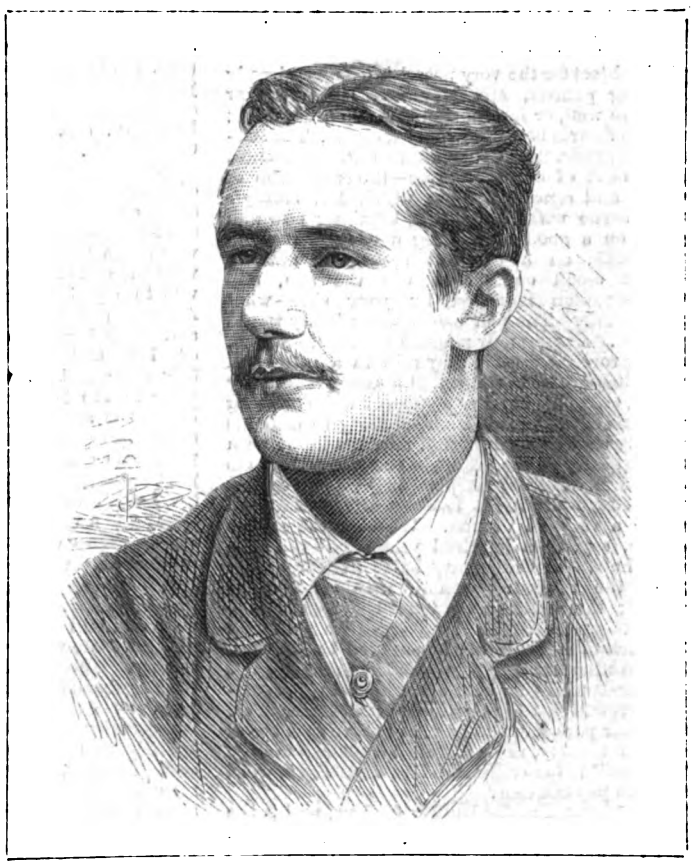
"A HISTORY OF OUR OWN TIMES."

The third and fourth volumes, concluding the work, of the History of our Own Times, by Mr. Justin M'Carthy, M.P., have now been published by Messrs. Chatto and Windus. The two preceding volumes, which appeared about two years ago, contained the narrative of events from the accession of Queen Victoria to the Treaty of Paris after the Crimean War in 1856. In his third volume, the author brings us to the death of Lord Palmerston, which took place in the autumn of 1865, and his last volume terminates with the general election of the present year, and with Mr. Gladstone's return to power. Nearly a quarter of a century past is thus comprised within the portion of history which is here reviewed. Its transactions abide in the personal recollection of all who are not young men, and who have been accustomed to read and reflect upon the discussions of public affairs. We cannot say that Mr. Justin M'Carthy adds much fresh information to that which might be found in the filed copies of the Daily News or any Liberal newspaper during this long period. He deals chiefly with the surface aspects of the time, and with general expressions of the popular sentiment then prevailing. It is convenient that such views, though destined probably to undergo great alteration from more strenuous historical criticism, should be preserved in the form of a book. Standard history, based on diligent collation of all the pieces of evidence to be discovered, with the private opinions of contemporaries in their letters and memoirs, as well as their public declarations and professions, cannot yet be fully made up. It requires a good deal more study than is implied in an ordinary acquaintance, however constant and attentive, with journalism and Parliamentary debates. A judicial faculty of weighing the value of testimony, and correcting the erroneous or exaggerated impressions that were current upon the occasion, is most essential to the true historian. Mr. Justin M'Carthy has not these special qualifications in any remarkable degree. His work is that of an able summary-writer undertaking to recast or digest the net contents of a prolonged series of newspaper reports and newspaper comments into a very readable book. In this task he has perfectly succeeded, and it is all that the majority of his readers will desire.

The state of political parties under Lord Palmerston's Ministry at the beginning of 1857 was most depressing for sincere believers in true Liberal principles. It was, perhaps, the effect of popular indulgence in the passions excited by war during the protracted siege and capture of Sebastopol. A comparative disregard of equity and of the rights of humanity, an arrogant contempt of foreign nations, especially of the unwarlike and unarmed, of those not entitled to rank with European Powers, comes over the public mind. It is caused by the demoralising spectacle of profligate warfare between the civilised States of Christendom. At such a time it was but too easy to commit England to the outrageous course pursued in China. The bombardment of Canton, in revenge for the seizure of a Chinese outlawed vessel which had fraudulently hoisted the British flag, was an act that it was scandalous for our Government to support. But Lord Palmerston did not scruple to do so, and carried the country with him against the best members equally of the Conservative and of the Liberal party. Soon after this came another and fiercer excitement, that of the Indian military revolt, accompanied with the massacres of our countrymen and countrywomen at Delhi, and still worse at Cawnpore, which roused popular feeling to the pitch of reckless fury. The incidents of that fierce struggle in 1857 and 1858 are related by this author somewhat minutely, in four successive chapters, followed by the change of government in our Indian Empire. Then comes the affair of the Orsini conspiracy, the overthrow of Lord Palmerston for alleged subserviency to the French Emperor, and the succession of Lord Derby to office. About the same time, as here described in its turn, occurs the cession of the Ionian Islands to Greece; also, the admission of Jews to Parliament, involving the question of using the formal sanction of the oath, as in Mr. Bradlaugh's case, for excluding persons on the ground of religious belief. "The Tory Diogenes Rolling his Tub" is a flippant and inappropriate way of designating the Ministerial Reform Bill of 1859. The rejection, however, of that measure, along with the crisis of foreign policy at the outbreak of the Italian war of liberation, called Palmerston again to power. We next find Mr. Gladstone appearing in the front rank of statesmen as the great fiscal reformer and free-trader of his time; the French commercial treaty, and the repeal of the paper duty, with the political controversies that arose from those measures, occupy a separate chapter. The massacres in Syria and French intervention there, the joint expedition of France and England against Pekin, the French expedition to Mexico, the commencement of the American Civil War, and the difficulties in keeping our neutrality, the insurrection in Poland in 1862, and the war of Schleswig-Holstein, in 1864, which caused much perplexity to our Foreign Office, are treated of in the remainder of the third volume. It ends with a very fair, just, and kindly estimate of the character of Lord Palmerston, which is one of the best passages in this work.

The fourth volume, opening with Lord Russell's Ministry of 1865, and with Mr. Gladstone's advance to the leadership of the House of Commons, has more immediate bearing on the politics of this day. Gladstone and Disraeli soon appear as the great rivals in public esteem and confidence; while Earl Russell is but the shadow of his former self, better known as Lord John, and the late Earl of Derby is soon to pass off the stage where he has played a brilliant part. The last fifteen years have, indeed, brought in a new era of statesmanship; the Whigs and Tories of old time have vanished into the past, especially since the Reform Act of 1867 was followed by the Gladstone Ministry, with its thorough measures of Liberal policy. On the other hand, there is a dark side to the picture, showing considerable social and political evils, which Mr. Justin M'Carthy does not seek to palliate. With regard to Ireland he speaks with a certain degree of reserve, which must be attributed to his individual position as an Irish member of Parliament associated with the moderate section of the Home-Rule party. He is apparently desirous not to censure any more than he can help either the Fenian conspirators of 1867, or the truculent agitators of these latter days, though he cannot approve their proceedings. We believe that great exaggeration has prevailed in representing the bulk of the Irish population as hostile to their connection with Great Britain; and this is a point on which we are not inclined to accept the testimony of any professional Irish politicians, however personally respectable they may be. All Irish expressions of sentiment, whether agreeable or obnoxious, must be taken with a discount of about seventy per cent, due to the vehement and imaginative temperament of that people. Mr. Justin M'Carthy himself is a calm, temperate, unimpassioned writer; but he seems too much impressed by the strong language and violent behaviour of some of his countrymen, whom English observers regard as self-deluding enthusiasts for a hollow and factitious scheme of pretended national independence. Remembering Smith O'Brien and O'Connell, and their utter failure to produce a really effective national movement for the Repeal of the Union, we cannot accept any high estimate of those who are now giving us trouble rather by their obstructive abuse of Parliamentary privilege than by their power to stir up a revolt in Ireland. Mr. M'Carthy's own views of Home Rule, as we understand them, are perfectly free from the reproach or suspicion of any unconstitutional design. They are obviously consistent with legality, peace, and social order. But this can hardly be said of every professed Irish Home Ruler at the present day.

Leaving aside his remarks upon that question, we have little exception to take to his views of Liberal policy, and of the most important of recent controversies between the party of Lord Beaconsfield and that of Mr. Gladstone. He does not, indeed, cast any fresh light upon the course either of foreign or domestic affairs. His arguments are those which were broached at the time in the ordinary "leading articles" and speeches of the Liberal way of thinking. The style is free, clear, and vigorous, but is too frequently encumbered with small verbal witticisms, with trite poetical quotations, and even with irrelevant far-fetched allusions to incidents of fable and romance, which few readers can be expected to recognise. This habit is more excusable in a literary essayist than in a practical historian, who has little need to mention "a Kyffhaüser cavern," "Rodomonte's bridge in Ariosto," "Prester John," "the son of Tisander," and other recondite apocryphal subjects. In the proper task of narrating and describing real occurrences, the author seems too apt to write from his general remembrance, instead of having the precise documents before him. He is, on the whole, tolerably correct in the main outline, but there is a felt want of statistical and chronological exactness in his statements. For instance, we are not told the amount of the military forces employed in the Abyssinian or in the Afghan, or in the Zulu war, or what was the cost of those wars. Arithmetical facts, which are surely of great consequence in the history of Administrations, seldom obtain their due place in this record. We learn scarcely anything here of the financial conditions of our Government at successive periods—of the revenue, the departmental estimates, the expenditure, the trade returns, the census of population, and the figures indicating the growth or decay of important branches of industry. These historical materials are really more valuable than observations respecting the characters and talents of individual statesmen, or the alternate triumphs and defeats of parliamentary contention. Mr. Justin M'Carthy's work, on the whole, is a very defective history of our times, but a pretty fair account of the varying fortunes of Liberals and Conservatives in Queen Victoria's reign.



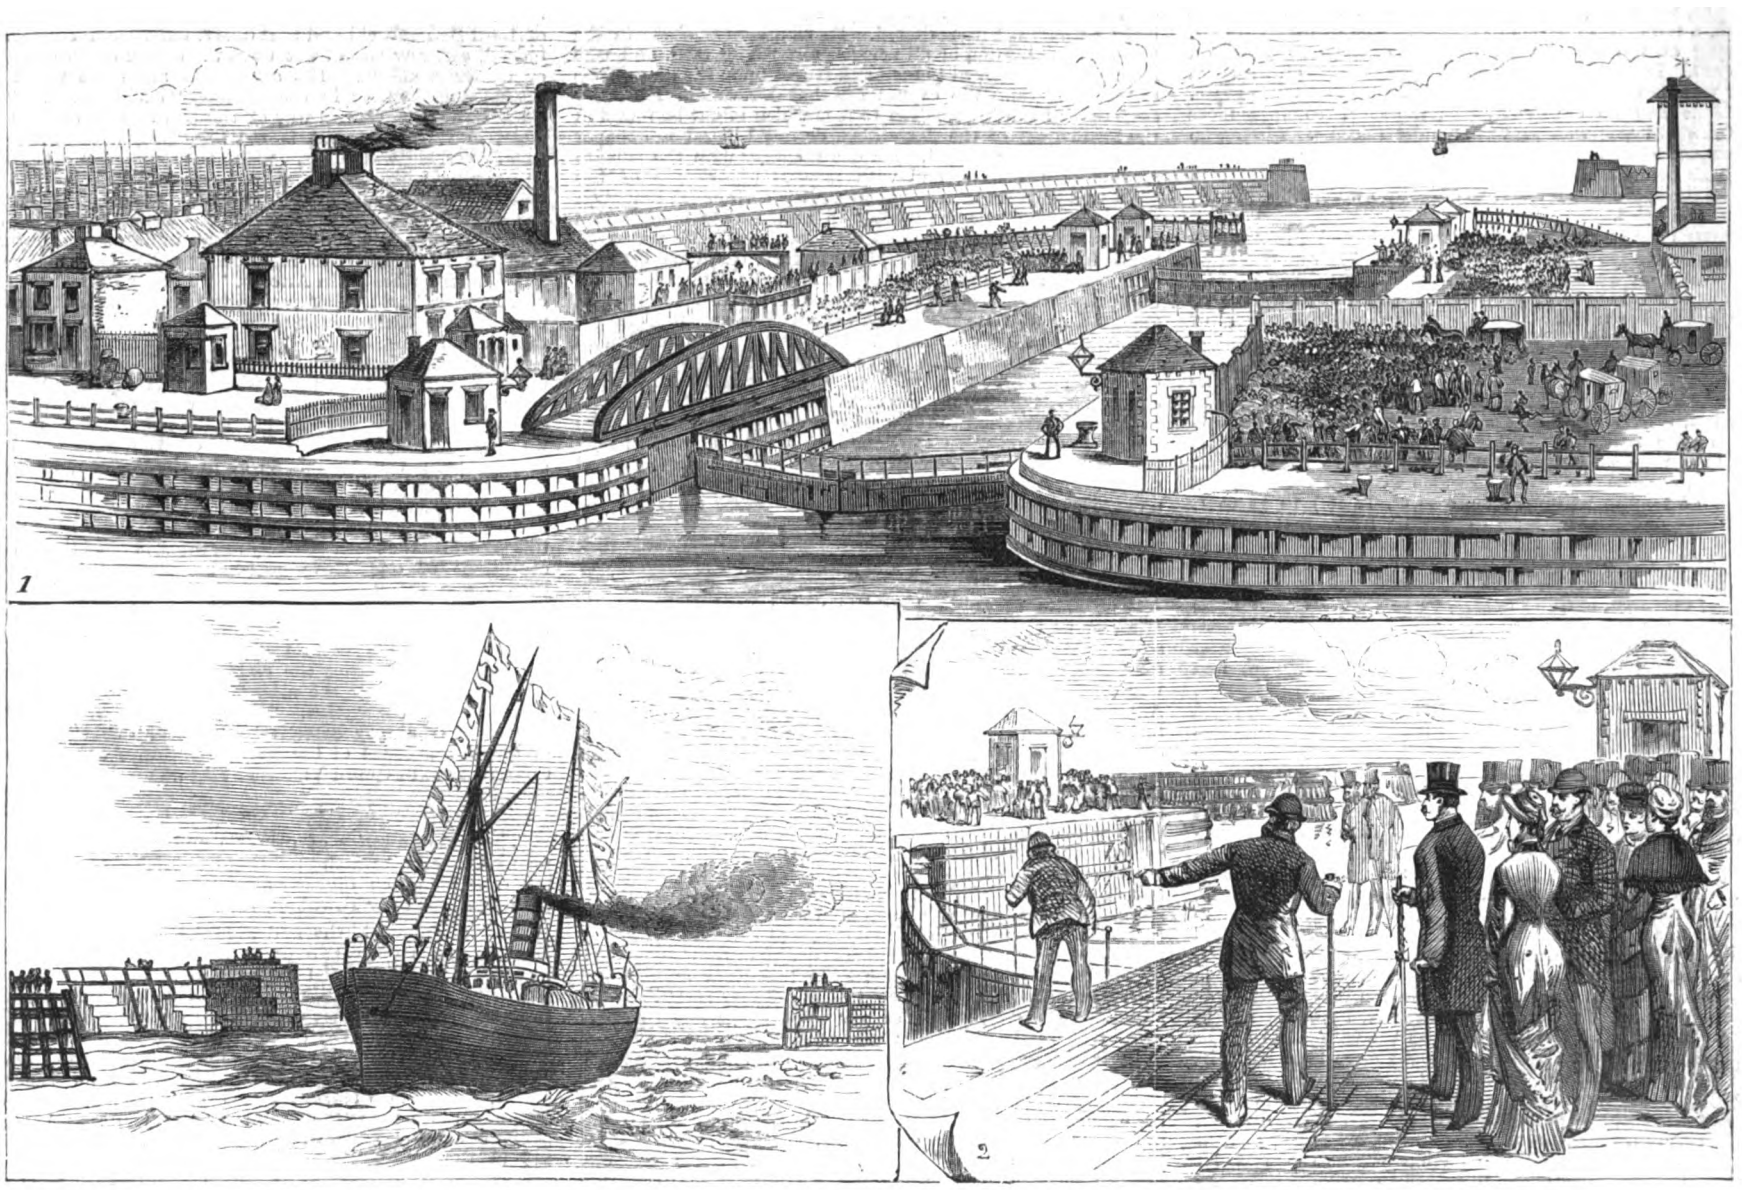
The first of a series of concerts under the title of "Twopenny Concerts," which promise to become very popular with the class for which they are intended, was given on Tuesday evening at the New Townhall, Kensington.

Last week 5537 births and 3748 deaths were registered in London and twenty-two other large towns of the United Kingdom. In London 2361 births and 1518 deaths were registered. Allowing for increase of population, the births were 200 below, whereas the deaths exceeded by 59, the average numbers in the corresponding week of the last ten years. The deaths included 7 from smallpox, 22 from measles, 58 from scarlet fever, 11 from diphtheria, 11 from whooping-cough, 24 from different forms of fever, and 59 from diarrhœa; thus to the seven principal diseases of the zymotic class 192 deaths were referred, against 207 and 214 in the two preceding weeks. The deaths referred to diseases of the respiratory organs, which had steadily increased from 124 to 273 in the six previous weeks, rose to 323 last week, exceeding by 38 the corrected weekly average: 213 were attributed to bronchitis and 77 to pneumonia.

Digitized by Google

THE LATE LIEUTENANT-COLONEL ARTHUR SHEWELL,
KILLED AT CANDAHAR.

THE LATE LIEUTENANT FRANK WHITTUCK,
DIED AT CANDAHAR.

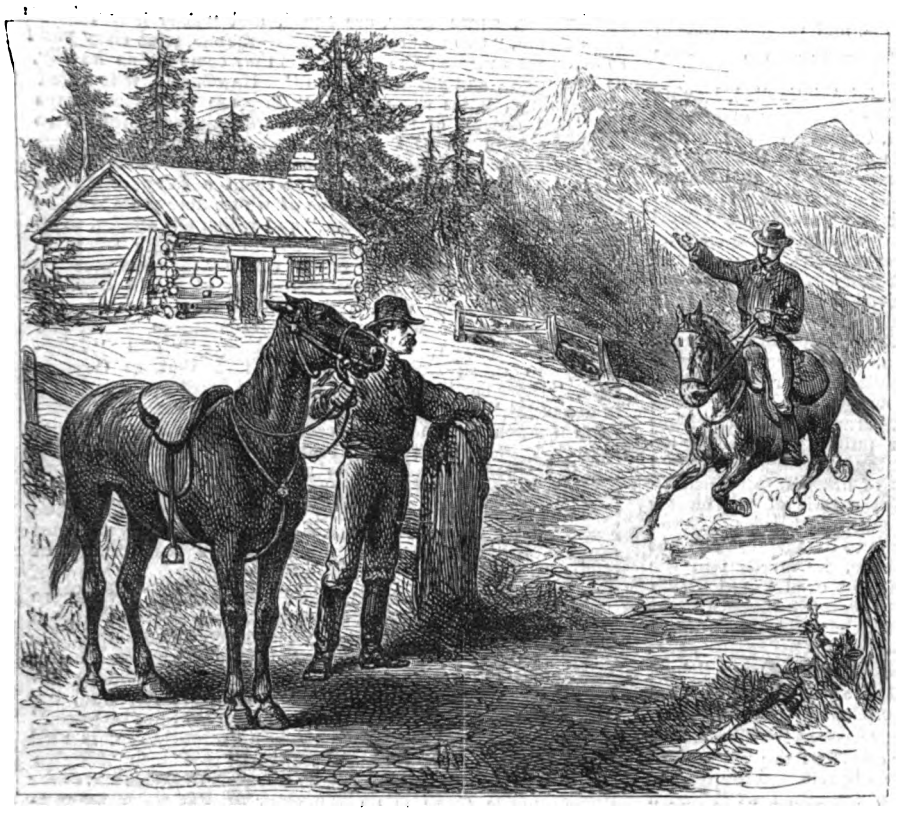


LIEUTENANT FRANK WHITTUCK.

This young officer, who was with his regiment, the 1st Bombay Grenadiers, at the defeat of General Burrows's brigade, on July 27, in the action of Khushk-i-Nakhud, or Maiwand, died shortly afterwards, at Candahar, of disease, probably caused by the hardships suffered in the retreat, or during the siege. He was twenty-four years of age, and was the sixth and youngest son of Captain W. J. Whittuck, late of the 82nd Regiment, of Ellsbridge House, Keynsham, near Bristol. In April, 1876, he joined the 17th (Leicestershire) Regiment; he was made a probationer for the Indian Staff Corps, and went to India, where he was attached to the 12th Bombay Native Infantry, and afterwards to the 20th, and finally posted to the 1st Bombay Grenadiers, forming part of the Candahar force under command of General Primrose. He was much esteemed among his comrades and friends.

The portrait is from a photograph by Mr. Medrington, of Bath.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL A. SHEWELL.



Among the many good officers killed in the Afghan war is Lieutenant-Colonel Arthur Shewell, of the Bombay Staff Corps, Deputy Commissary-General to the Candahar Force. He was wounded on Aug. 16, while assisting to bring the wounded in from the field during the attack on the village of Deh-Kwaja, adjacent to Candahar; and he died on Sept. 2. The order which was issued by the Lieutenant-General commanding at Candahar, and a subsequent Minute of the Governor-General in Council, expressed deep regret for the loss of this officer. In the Standard of Sept. 11, there was a letter from "One who knew him well," stating the facts of his exemplary behaviour in 1864, at Baroda, when there was a fearful outbreak of cholera in the Royal Artillery, B battery, 18th Brigade. The circumstances were also mentioned, as follows, in a lecture upon "Transport Service for Asiatic Warfare," read on June 23 last at the Royal United Service Institution:—"At Eree-ka-Dur there was a commissariat officer who had been up the line on duty and returning to Sukkur. The commissariat officer whom I have just mentioned delayed his return when the cholera appeared, and was alone at first, afterwards with one medical subordinate to assist him. He attended those struck down by this fell disease as if they had been his brothers.

1. View of the new lock and water channel at Sunderland. 2. The Earl of Durham opening the new lock. 3. The Lady Beatrix s.s. entering the new lock.

OPENING OF NEW LOCK AND WATER CHANNEL AT SUNDERLAND DOCKS BY THE EARL OF DURHAM.

Digitized by Google

PONY EXPRESS, ROCKY MOUNTAINS, NORTH AMERICA.

POSTMAN OF THE ROCKY MOUNTAINS.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

Night and day he sat by the side of the sick, ministering to their wants, able only at long intervals to snatch a few minutes of that repose so greatly needed, so hardly earned. And remember that his work was not in the well-ventilated, well-arranged wards of a hospital, but in rudely constructed grass-sheds, exposed to the burning, and I may say almost deadly, heat of June in the Cutchu plain. Not only did he voluntarily give his untiring aid day and night in nursing the sick, but every morning he was to be seen mounted on his pony with a large basket slung on his arm, which was filled with delicacies for the sick women and children, who, being convalescent, were encamped two or three miles off. The delicacies were not provided by Government, but supplied by his own generosity and that of a few friends. Perhaps it needed more moral courage for a young officer thus burdened to ride through the camp than it would to face the enemy; but whenever a kindness or an unselfish action was to be done, Arthur Shewell was the man to do it."

The portrait is from a photograph by Mr. R. Dighton, of Cheltenham.

DOCK IMPROVEMENT AT SUNDERLAND.

A new lock and deep-water channel, recently constructed at the sea outlet of the south docks at Sunderland, were opened on Thursday week by the Earl of Durham, who ships vast quantities of coal in the port. The works thus inaugurated form an important part of an extensive scheme of river, dock, and harbour improvements planned by Sir John Coode, and estimated to cost more than half a million sterling, which are being carried out by the River Wear Commissioners. The lock is 480 ft. long and 95 ft. wide. The depth of water in it will be 30 ft. at ordinary tides, and the lock can be filled or emptied by means of sluices. The lock and the Hudson, or South Dock, which was opened thirty years ago, are connected by a lock 65 ft. wide, with a single pair of gates. The opposite end of the lock is connected with the open sea, and a vessel arriving or sailing passes right from the sea into the dock, or from the dock into the sea, going through the lock on the way, and thus no time is lost. The gateway at the sea end is similar to the inner one, but with eighteen inches more water, and a double pair of gates supported by strut gates which have not before been adopted in England. The gates and sluices will be worked by hydraulic machinery, and provision has been made for working with hand-power as well, so that, should an accident occur to the machinery, there need be no stoppage. The advantages to the port that will accrue from the lock will be very great. There was a large concourse of spectators to witness the opening ceremony, which commenced by the locking in of the Lady Beatrix, one of the fleet of steam-ships belonging to Lord Durham, his Lordship using the lever of the hydraulic apparatus. The sluices having been opened, the water in the lock rose to the level of the water in the Hudson Dock at the rate of about a foot a minute. The inner lock gates were then opened, and the Lady Beatrix passed into the Hudson Dock, three cheers being given as she went through the gates. Mr. E. C. Robson, chairman of the Works Committee, and Mr. James Laing, chairman of the Wear Commission, then addressed the assemblage. The Commissioners afterwards entertained about 300 gentlemen at luncheon in the Laing Warehouse. Mr. Laing presided, supported by Lord Durham, Sir Hedworth Williamson, Sir Henry Havelock Allan, M.P.; Mr. Gourley, M.P.; Mr. Joseph Dodds, M.P.; Colonel Lord John Taylour, Sir William Armstrong, Mr. J. Dent Dent (chairman of the North-Eastern Railway directors), Captain Johnson, R.N., and others.

VILLAGE CLUB, CLAPHAM, BEDFORDSHIRE.

RURAL VILLAGE CLUBS.

In February last year, at a meeting of the Farmers' Club in London, an interesting communication was read from Mr. James Howard, M.P. for Bedfordshire, and High Sheriff of that county, showing the beneficial operation of village clubs in the agricultural districts, for the social recreation and mental improvement of the labouring classes. The successful examples of those lately established by Sir Philip Rose, near Aylesbury, and by Sir Richard Sutton and the late Rev. John Adams at Stock Cross, in Berkshire, as well as the clubs in several parts of Suffolk, one at Woodbridge, were described in some detail; and it was stated that Mr. Howard was about to provide a similar useful institution for the advantage of his own neighbours at Clapham, near Bedford, where he resides. We now present an Illustration of the Clapham Village Clubhouse, which was completed and opened some time since, and which has already done much good among the small population of that place. Mr. Howard, as the well-known proprietor of the great Britannia Works at Bedford for the manufacture of agricultural implements, and as a gentleman extensively connected with the interests of farmers and landowners, can speak with high authority upon the question of the indirect benefit to those interests from such efforts to aid the moral and intellectual culture of the rural working classes. It was admitted, in the discussion at the Farmers' Club, that the service of labourers would be far more valuable to their employers if they could be weaned from the habit of wasting their leisure hours at the low public-houses, where they too often drink a very bad quality of beer at an excessive price, and where the mixture of bad company has a pernicious influence upon the younger men. The approved management of these Village Clubs is not on teetotal principles, but it is found by experience that most of their members will content themselves with a quiet half-pint and a pipe of tobacco, while reading or listening to the newspaper, playing a game of draughts or dominoes, or perhaps enjoying a song. There is tea, coffee, or cocoa for those who prefer it, which many of them do. A lending library, and occasional lectures, concerts, or public readings, are usually combined with the ordinary attractions of the Village Club. We heartily rejoice in the favourable reception of this class of institutions, which are certainly wanted quite as much in the country as in our large towns. We hope to see them become general in every county of England, when the proposed extension of the suffrage in counties shall have aroused public attention to the political and social importance of encouraging adult education, or rather self-culture, among the agricultural labourers of this country. It is desirable, however, that the clubs should ultimately be managed by the working men themselves, although at the first beginning they may be started and directed by clergymen and gentlemen of superior education and local position.

IPSWICH NEW CORN EXCHANGE.

CORN EXCHANGE, IPSWICH.

The first stone of a handsome pile of buildings at Ipswich, for a new Corn Exchange, was laid yesterday week by the Mayor, Mr. D. H. Booth, with Masonic honours, assisted by the Provincial Grand Lodge of Suffolk. The Freemasons went in procession, from their hall in Soane-street, through North-gate-street, Tavern-street, and Cornhill, to the Townhall, where the Mayor and Corporation joined them; and thence proceeded to the site of the intended building in King-street, at the back of the Townhall. The Deputy Provincial Grand Master of Suffolk, the Rev. C. J. Martyn, in the absence of Lord Waveney, presided over the Lodge upon this occasion, and helped, with other local members of the fraternity, in performing the due ceremonial. The Mayor afterwards entertained a large party at luncheon in the Townhall. Among the company were Mr. T. C. Cobbold, M.P., and Sir J. B. Monckton, Town Clerk of the City of London.

Digitized by Google

Our Illustration shows the east and south elevations of the new Corn Exchange, as designed by the architect, Mr. Brightwen Binyon, of Ipswich. It is in the Italian Renaissance style, and these two sides will be of stone, fronting respectively towards King-street and Lower King-street. The basement will consist of shops, the rent of which, and of the cellars beneath, will defray part of the interest on the large cost of this building. The Corn Exchange-hall will be 120 ft. long, 58 ft. wide, and 60 ft. high, with an arched recess at the west end for a platform, when required. It will have a good north light, but no sunshine will be admitted during market hours. The walls are of white brick with a moulding of cream-coloured terra-cotta, the roof of iron, and the floor paved with wooden blocks set in concrete (Homan's patent flooring) upon iron girders. Part of the building will be devoted to municipal business offices in connection with the Townhall. The building contract has been taken for £21,950 by Messrs. Grimwood and Sons, of Sudbury; the site has cost £12,500. It is expected that the new Corn Exchange will be completed in the summer of 1882. The new Post Office at Ipswich is also making good progress.

POSTMAN IN THE ROCKY MOUNTAINS.

The daily business of social life in the wide and thinly-inhabited townships of the American Far West, as in the parts of Colorado and Nebraska about the Rocky Mountains, is sometimes conducted by agencies of a primitive character, but suitable to local conditions. In highland districts that are situated out of the reach of the railway system, though stage-coaches, equipped and "run" with an enterprising audacity characteristic of the West, carry the mails to places of importance, the solitary postman on horseback, or "Pony Express," may often be met with, conveying letters, newspapers, and packets to or from the remotest hamlets of that mountain region. Relays of ponies are kept ready for him to mount without a minute's delay at the appointed stages along the road. In the winter season, when the snow lies deep where the village letter-carrier has to walk from house to village, he is obliged to wear snow-shoes, resembling those used in Canada, to prevent his feet sinking in. The reader of Bret Harte's spirited and humorous or pathetic tales of Western life (a complete edition of which Messrs. Chatto and Windus are now publishing) may be reminded, by our Illustrations, of certain incidents mentioned here and there by that eminently realistic American writer. "The up-stage was stopped at Granger's," he remarks in one instance; "the last mail had been abandoned in the tules, the rider swimming for his life." That was, however, in California, in the valley of the Sacramento. "Yuba Bill," the famous driver of one of Wells, Fargo, and Co.'s stages, is also a great original, and, in spite of strong liquor and strong language, a very good fellow. We only wish that Bret Harte's favourites would not swear so badly as they do, and would have less to do with Bourbon whisky; it would then be much pleasanter at Red Dog or Roaring Camp, at Dow's Flat, Five Forks, or Sandy Bar, and up in Calaveras; and equally so in the magnificent "Parks" of Colorado. There is a racy vigour of thought and expression, a robustness of feeling, in these sketches of hard-living Western society, which is a good substitute for the antiquated romantic element of imaginative fiction. The rustic riding postman, however, as well as the dashing stage-driver, belongs not to fiction but to contemporary fact, though probably doomed ere long to vanish before the advance of more artificial and elaborate vehicles of improved civilisation.

FINE ARTS.

In response to an invitation of Mr. Raphael Tuck, the art publisher, an exhibition of competitive designs for Christmas and New-Year cards has been organised for a few days (ending with to-day, Saturday) at the Dudley Gallery. To those of our readers whom this may reach in time, we would say that half an hour may be agreeably spent in this exhibition. There are, of course, many amateur and weak performances, the antic-simious fancies and the harlequinade of colour of many of the exhibitors will be apt to produce vertigo; but there are also many works creditable as art — pretty imaginings, frolicsome and funny, or grave and pathetic, scriptural story and fairy legend, together with a multitude of floral fancies and bits from the enchanted realm of Nature's still life. The exhibition cannot fail to improve the character of the pleasant missives which are every year growing to be a more recognised institution. Fourteen prizes were offered, amounting altogether to £500. The judges were Sir Coutts Lindsay, Mr. Stacy Marks, and Mr. Boughton. The prize-winners are:—First prize, Miss Alice Squire, charming designs of the four seasons, in the manner of Mrs. Allingham: Miss Squire's drawings in the last exhibition of Lady Artists we specially commended. Second prize, Herbert Alchin; third prizes, Harriet M. Burnett and Patty Townsend; fourth prizes, Helen J. Miles, Mary S. Story, R. J. Abraham, Mrs. G. Koberwein Tyrrell, and Rebecca Coleman; fifth prizes, Marian Croft, Miss Balfour, Elizabeth G. Bayly, G. Clausen, and Kate Sadler. The ladies, it will be observed, carry off a large majority of the prizes—which is as it should be in competition for such a purpose. We noticed several designs quite equal in artistic merit to those of some of the prize-winners—notably Nos. 35, 247, 295, 397, 405, 484, 561, 676, and 806. The catalogue (in which the artists' names do not appear, having been compiled before the decision of the judges) forms a curious collection of mottoes, adages, quotations, &c.

At Messrs. Dowdeswell's tasteful little new gallery in Bond-street, next door but one to the Grosvenor, is being exhibited a series of sixty water-colour drawings, by Mr. David Law, of the lovely scenery of the Upper Thames, from "Oxford to Windsor," which fully justify the rapid rise of this painter-etcher in public favour. Accurate as records of those fascinating haunts, they are, at the same time, free in handling, good in colour, and evince a true feeling for artistic effect. Those who are acquainted with Mr. Law's excellent etchings will be glad to know that ten of these admirable views are to be etched by him, and published as a set by Messrs. Dowdeswell.

The private view of the exhibition of Pictures by British and Foreign Artists at the French Gallery, Pall-mall, takes place to-day (Saturday), and the gallery will open to the public on Monday. The collection includes Luminais' large and pathetic picture "Les Enervés de Jumièges," from the last Paris Salon.

The private views also take place to-day of the exhibitions of water-colour drawings at Mr. McLean's; of oil pictures at Mr. Tooth's; and of pictures, drawings, and various kinds of art-work, mostly by ladies, at the Institute of Art, 9, Conduit-street.

In 1877 an Italian artist named Luigi Asiotis died, leaving the sum of 10,000 lire for the purpose of erecting a statue to Antonio Allegri in his native town, Correggio—whence the master derived his more familiar name. To the eminent sculptor Vela was intrusted the commission for this statue, and it was inaugurated last week. The likeness must necessarily be problematical, for there is no portrait of Allegri perfectly authenticated, although claims to be such are set up for several portraits of very dissimilar persons. The story of Allegri's life is unparalleled in the history of art. It almost exceeds belief that a painter who arrived at the very first rank in the great art epoch of the early sixteenth century should yet have lived a life of the most complete seclusion in or near the obscure little town where he was born, and where, at the early age of forty, he died, never having studied in, nor even visited, the great art-centres of Venice, Florence, and Rome, being unknown even by sight to contemporary artists, receiving little or no patronage from prince or public, but painting his great monumental works for months, leaving no school behind him, and not even a portrait of himself from his own hand or that of any other artist. Not a relic of the master remains of Correggio, and not a single work by him is preserved there. Nevertheless, albeit the statue to his memory can but be a possibly approximate resemblance, its erection in the little out-of-the-way town (which is not even mentioned in Murray), after the lapse of more than three centuries, cannot fail to gratify the sentiment of his countless admirers.

Sir John Mellor distributed the prizes at the Dover School of Art last week. One student, Miss Mary Joyce, received the gold medal of the national competition.

In distributing the prizes yesterday week at the Winchester School of Art, the Bishop of Exeter dwelt on the advantages of art-study, not only as it touched and prompted the various handicrafts of the artisan, but also inasmuch as it had a humanising influence.

A notice has been issued by the Italian Government inviting foreign artists to take part in an open competition for designs for the national monument which it is proposed to erect in memory of the late King Victor Emmanuel. There is no restriction as to conception or style or choice of locality where the monument should be placed, but the cost is not to exceed £360,000. Three prizes—of £2000, £1200, and £800 respectively—will be given for the best designs, but the Government do not bind themselves to accept the designs of the prize-winners. The plans and models are to be sent in before Aug. 25, 1881. Information as to the terms of competition can be obtained of the Italian Consul-General, 31, Old Jewry.

Messrs. Briton Riviere A.R.A., MacWhirter, A.R.A., and F. Holl, A.R.A., judged on Tuesday last, at the galleries of the Society of British Artists, the numerous collection of sketches and studies sent up in competition by the members of the South Kensington, Gilbert, Lambeth, and West London Sketching clubs. By their decision the prize for landscape was awarded to Mr. H. P. Gill, South Kensington; for animals to Mr. E. Caldwell, West London; for figure to Mr. Gandy, Lambeth; and for modelling to Mr. Dixon, West London. The South Kensington Club gained the honorary award for the highest aggregate of marks.

Sir Edward Bates, Bart., who for a number of years represented the Conservatism of Plymouth, and has taken great interest in the poor, is to be presented with a whole-length life-sized portrait of himself, to be executed by Mr. J. Edgar Williams.

Mr. John C. Murdoch, fine-art publisher, of Castle-street, Holborn, has brought out two coloured pictures, after paintings, by Richard Beavis, entitled "Peace" and "War."

Messrs. Cassell, Petter, and Galpin have again increased the size of the Magazine of Art, and raised the price to a shilling. The new number is excellent, and promises well for the future of the magazine.

The October number of St. Nicholas is full of interest and amusement for youthful readers. Many of the illustrations are quite as artistic as those provided for readers of a larger growth.

Amongst the noteworthy contents of the last number of the American Art-Review are some wonderful examples of the new school of American wood engraving. Those reprinted from Scribner's Magazine to illustrate Mr. Linton's history of wood engraving in America are really marvellous productions, however much they may depart from what is considered the legitimate uses of the art. The portrait of William Cullen Bryant is a surprising imitation of a crayon drawing, and is equally remarkable as a specimen of woodcut printing. American wood-engravers are clearly cultivating the art with an earnestness that has already excited the attention of the art world, but their work is generally so fine that they are very much at the mercy of the printers.

The Gazette contains the official announcement of the appointment of Lieutenant-General Sir Donald Stewart to be an ordinary member of the Council of the Governor-General of India, in the room of Sir Edwin Johnston.

The Gazette also announces that the Queen has appointed Viscount Monck, Lord Monteagle of Brandon, Lieutenant-General C. H. Dickens, Major Nolan, Captain Tottenham, Mr. T. A. Dickson, Mr. Ball Greene, and Mr. J. Mulholland, as Commissioners to inquire respecting the system of navigation which connects Coleraine, Belfast, and Limerick.

The Queen has approved of the nomination of Mr. Herries, C.B., chairman of the Inland Revenue Board, to be a Knight Commander of the Bath; and of Mr. Algernon West, deputy chairman, and Mr. Adam Young, secretary to the Board, to be Companions.

It is announced in Tuesday night's Gazette that the Queen has granted unto the Right Hon. Edward Montagu Stuart Granville Stuart-Wortley-Mackenzie, Earl of Wharncliffe, and to Francis Dudley Stuart-Wortley (commonly called the Hon. Francis Dudley Stuart-Wortley), of Scarborough, in the West Riding of the county of York, the only surviving sons of John Stuart-Wortley-Mackenzie, second Baron Wharncliffe, deceased, her Royal license and authority that they may take the surname of Montagu, in addition to and before those of Stuart-Wortley-Mackenzie.

The Queen has made the following promotions in, and appointments to, the Order of St. Michael and St. George: To be Knight Commander—Sir Daniel Cooper, Bart., for services rendered to the colony of New South Wales, more particularly in connection with the International Exhibition held at Sydney in 1879-80; Mr. Patrick Jennings, C.M.G., Executive Commissioner at the Exhibition to be also a Knight Commander; and Mr. W. Davies, Commissioner of the Exhibition, to be Companion of the order.

MUSHROOMS.

Mushrooms, as we know, are fungi, and "they have," says Lord Bacon, "two strange properties—the one, that they yield so delicious a meate; the other, that they come up so hastily, as in a night, and yet are unsown." Hawthorne, who noted most things, notes them, too. "They are mysteries," says he, "and objects of interest to me, springing as they do so suddenly from no root or seed, and growing one wonders why." Shakspeare, in "The Tempest," calls them "midnight" mushrooms, and he gives them a fairy origin, as being the work of that elfin tribe of whose doings we read in "A Midsummer Night's Dream," and which are alluded to by Drayton and by Herrick, too, who—in describing Oberon's entertainment at the Fairy Court, where "the elves present, to quench his thirst, a pure seed-pearl of infant dew"—follows in the same vein, and writes of their "mushroom table," on which we can fancy that there would be that tiny fungus called "fairy-butter," and "fairy-cups" to drink from. From the fact that, as Gerarde says, "those earthly excrescences called mushrooms grow up in one night," we have the term—for an upstart—of mushroom growth, which Bacon comments on, and Dryden, too, in well-known lines; and an allusion to this quick growth we find in Shelley—"And agarics and fungi, with mildew and mould, started like mist from the wet ground cold;" and the pleasant smell also which they have when grown, is thus remarked by Cowper:—"There the turf smells fresh, and fungous fruits of earth regale the sense with luxury of unexpected sweets."

Of these "fungous fruits" the French are fond, even more so than the English, though they prefer such as are cultivated to those that grow wild. The Irish, however, do not appreciate them, as was shown when the land near Drogheda being flooded by the Boyne, myriads of mushrooms sprang up in the fields, which were at once sent off to England, for "as the cows would not eat them they could not be good." In Italy the prejudice against them, it would seem, is still stronger, as one of the favourite maledictions there is "May he die of a pratiola!" and in Rome, where, as at Toulouse and other French towns, there is an Inspector of Fungi—whose permission to sell is placed in a cleft stick stuck into each basket—such mushrooms are always thrown into the Tiber; but with some of the dwellers in Pavia and Milan, they, though not sold in the markets, are eaten. The favourite fungus with the Italians is the one that is known as Lactarius deliciosus, which is freely sold and bought up eagerly, as it is at Marseilles and in Paris, Berlin, and Vienna, as also those of its class, and of Russula allied to it; and the glory of colour on the fungi-stalls—white, cream, and fawn, and chestnut-brown, and yellow, red, and scarlet—has by artists long been recognised, as have the tints, too, of "the plain mushroom"—buff, pink, white, and grey—that tell so well in autumn pictures against a bank of russet leaves.

The generic name of "fungi" for the mushroom tribe is of very olden date, as is that of "pratensis" for the meadow kind, for thus we read in Horace—"pratensibus optima fungis natura est, aliis male creditur;" whilst Ovid aptly calls them "fungos albos," and Pliny, "fungos suillos," as being, as it were, but fit for swine; and it is in this sense that they are noted by Martial—"Sunt tibi boleti; fungos ego sumo suillos"—whose contempt for the mushroom while boleti were at hand was due, no doubt, to the fact that the latter were always regarded as dainties, as they still are, indeed, in Italy, the one liked best there being the "Boletus edulis," which—under the name of "Porcino"—is freely sold in the markets, as it is—as "the Polish mushroom"—at Bordeaux and Bayonne, and in Vienna and Hanover; whilst, for the fasts of the Greek Church, large quantities of it are dried in Russia and kept in readiness. The boleti are strictly agarics; and one of the tribe, that called "Cæsarius," has made its mark in history, through the part it played in the death of Claudius Cæsar. "Mortiferum illum boletum ab uxore Agrippina datum," as we read in Juvenal, who describes it as "boletus species fungarum solus innocuus." Suetonius, too, who says that the fatal food was prepared by the Queen herself—"per ipsam Agrippinam"?—while using the significant words, "boletum medicatum," shows that, when not tampered with, it was safe to eat; or, as it runs, in a note to that passage, "nec enim solus nocet." As with fungi, so with agarics; whilst many are edible, some are hurtful—"some are very venomous," says Gerarde, "and full of poison"—and it needs great care to distinguish them: "for," writes Parkinson, "the danger of eating them is so great that it is not good to licke your honey from such thornes."

Amongst fungi, the common mushroom is the one that is most frequently found, as it grows largely in America—where it is called "pink gills"—and is widely distributed through Europe, extending even to Lapland; and it is also met with in Barbary, Australia, and New Zealand, in which latter country it is so abundant that they do a large trade in it with China, as they also do with that other fungus that is called "Jew's ear," and of which no less than 250 tons were exported thence last year, as the Chinese, who think it purifies the blood, make it into soups, and various dishes. Its name is an odd one, and is thus accounted for: that as the elder, on which it grows, was the tree Judas selected, it has since then, from its shape, been called "Jew's ear." Gerarde denies that the elder was the tree, and says it was the one now called the "Judas;" but the tradition was believed by early writers, and we read thus in "Piers Plowman"—"Judas he japed with jewen silver, and sithen on an eller hanged hymselve;" and, from an association of ideas with "sus per col," this fungus is valued for affections of the throat.

From September till April, in Covent-garden, mushrooms are sold in enormous quantities; those after November being "winter" ones—that is, cultivated; though all the best ones may be thus termed, as the meadow ones from the country come up so bruised that they are mostly used for ketchup. In the London district this cultivation is carried on in vaults and cellars and on covered ridges in the open air; and from this mode of growth thousands of mushrooms are soon procured. The best ketchup-producing ones may, by-the-by, be thus arranged in their order of merit—The Parasol, the Horse, the Common, St. George's, and Champignon. In France the most extensive growth of mushrooms is in caves near Paris—at Moulin de la Roche, Montrouge, St. Germain, and Bagneux; and some of these excavations are so vast that those at work in them have lost their way. As an instance of production, we may mention here that, from the quarries of Méry-sur-Oise, 3000 lb. weight of fungi were sent in one day to Paris; whilst from a cave at Méry the average quantity gathered per day is 880 lb. Besides the supply of fresh ones from these French caves for home consumption, dried mushrooms are sent to many countries, and 14,000 boxes of them are forwarded from one house alone each year to England.

They may be grown almost on anything and anywhere—on boards, on ledges, and in pots and pans, as they have indeed been so grown and shown. Mushrooms, as is well known, are very nourishing, and during the time of the siege of Paris they were of the greatest service to the French as food.

Digitized by Google

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

THE ONE-HUNDREDTH THOUSAND OF "THE CROWN TENNYSON."

NOTICE.

THE ONE-HUNDREDTH THOUSAND OF THE "CROWN EDITION"

OF

MR. TENNYSON'S POETICAL AND DRAMATIC WORKS.

Complete in One Volume.

May now be had of all Booksellers in the United Kingdom.

Price 6s., cloth; 7s. 6d., cloth extra, gilt leaves; and in various special bindings, calf and morocco.

London: KEGAN PAUL and Co., 1, Paternoster-square.

POPULAR NOVELS AT ALL LIBRARIES.
THE RED RAG. By R. MOUNTENEY JEPHSON. 2 vols.
ADAM AND EVE. By Mrs. PARR. 3 vols.
JOHNNY LUDLOW. Second Series. By Mrs. HENRY WOOD. 3 vols.
THE MYSTERY IN PALACE GARDENS. By Mrs. RIDDELL. 3 vols. [Immediately.
RICHARD BENTLEY and SON, New Burlington-street.

TWO NEW MUSICAL BOOKS.
With Portrait, thick crown 8vo, 10s. 6d.,
HENRY SMART: His Life and Works. By Dr. SPARK (of Leeds).

Second Series, very thick crown 8vo, 10s. 6d.,
SCHUMANN'S MUSIC AND MUSICIANS: Essays and Criticisms. Edited by F. R. RITTER. Also Vol. I., Second Edition, 8s. 6d.
W. REEVES, Musical Publisher, Fleet-street.

Now ready, at all Libraries,
TASMANIAN FRIENDS AND FOES: FEATHERED, FURRED, AND FINNED.
By Mrs. LOUISA A. MEREDITH, Author of "My Home in Tasmania," &c. Illustrated with Coloured Plates and numerous Woodcuts. An interesting and chatty work upon the Natural History of Tasmania. Handsomely bound in cloth, forming a very elegant present. Price 21s.
MARCUS WARD and Co., 67, Chandos-street, Strand, W.C.

Now ready, in 1 vol., 8vo, 15s.,
AN ACTOR ABROAD; or, Gossip, Dramatic, Narrative, and Descriptive. By EDMUND LEATHES.
HURST and BLACKETT, Publishers, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

MISS BRADDON'S CHRISTMAS ANNUAL.
Price One Shilling. Illustrated.
THE MISLETOE BOUGH. The New Annual. By the Author of "Lady Audley's Secret."
London: J. and R. MAXWELL, Shoe-lane, Fleet-street.

Price One Shilling,
THE GENTLEMAN'S MAGAZINE for NOVEMBER.
CONTENTS:—Queen Cophetua. By R. E. Francillon—James Russell Lowell, as Essayist. By the Rev. H. R. Haweis, M.A.—Evolution and Geological Time. By Grant Allen—Vers de Société. By Alex. H. Japp—Among the Sugar-Canes. By Redgrave—About Nothing. By W. E. Norris—Science Notes. By W. Mattieu Williams—Table Talk. By Sylvanus Urban.

Price One Shilling, Illustrated.
BELGRAVIA for NOVEMBER.
CONTENTS:—A Confidential Agent. By James Payn. Illustrated by Arthur Hopkins—Some Strangely Fulfilled Dreams. By Richard A. Proctor—Our Old Country Towns. XI. With Four Illustrations. By A. Rimmer—An Expensive Derby—Coursing. By Robert Macgregor—Three Wishes. By H. Francis Lester—Rani Das of Cawnpore. By J. Arbuthnot Wilson—The Leaden Casket. By Mrs. Alfred W. Hunt.
CHATTO and WINDUS, Piccadilly, W.

MACMILLAN'S MAGAZINE, No. 253,
for NOVEMBER.
Price 1s.
CONTENTS OF THE NUMBER.
1. The Portrait of a Lady. By Henry James, jun. Chaps. VI.—X.
2. Political Somnambulism. By Professor J. R. Seeley.
3. Troubadours Ancient and Modern. By Francis Hueffer.
4. He that Will Not When He May. By Mrs. Oliphant. Chaps. XLII.—XLIV. Conclusion.
5. The Mystery of the Pezazi—A Sketch from Ceylon. By Mrs. E. H. Edwards.
6. Note on "The New Renaissance."
MACMILLAN and Co., London.

Now ready (One Shilling), No. 251.
THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE for NOVEMBER. With Illustrations by George du Maurier and W. Small.
CONTENTS.
My Faithful Johnny. (With an Illustration.) Chapters I.—IV Onevelo.
The Natural History of Dress.
Lord Macaulay and Dr. Johnson's Wife.
The Burmese. By Shway Yoe.
Decorative Decorations.
Social Life Amongst the Ancient Greeks.
Washington Square. By Henry James, jun. (With an Illustration.) Chapters XXX.—XXXV.
London: SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 15, Waterloo-place.

MYRA'S JOURNAL is the cheapest Fashion Journal in the World. Price 6d.; by post, 8d.

MYRA'S JOURNAL for NOVEMBER contains:—A BEAUTIFULLY COLOURED PANORAMA FASHION PLATE (Fourteen Figures). The Diagram Sheet, containing Full-size Models for cutting out—1. The Tailor-made Jacket; 2. Dressy Panne; 3. The Lorrimer Corsage; 4. The Lorrimer Tunic. Costumes—Morning, Walking, Indoor, Seaside. Toilettes—Visiting, Reception, Dinner, and Ball. New Mantles—Visites, Confections, Coiffures, Lingerie, and Parures. New Winter Mantles and Chapeaux for Ladies and Young Ladies. Costumes for Children.
The Last News from Paris; Spinnings in Town.

MYRA'S JOURNAL gives advice upon Dress Alterations, and teaches how to make and alter Costumes, Dresses, Mantles, and Underclothing.

MYRA'S JOURNAL is a Complete Guide to Ladies upon the care of Children's Wardrobes, Household Economies, the Cuisine, Fashion in Furniture, Social Etiquette, New Books, Music, Health and Personal Attention, and Miscellaneous Information.
Subscriptions—Yearly, 8s.; Half-Yearly, 4s.

GOUBAUD and SON, 39 and 40, Bedford-street, London, W.C.

THE CHEAPEST MAGAZINE IN THE WORLD.
WELDON'S LADIES' JOURNAL.
3d., Monthly; post-free, 4d.
Contains 32 Pages of Letterpress, and 50 Illustrations of the Latest Winter Fashions for Ladies and Children.
WELDON and Co., 9, Southampton-street, Strand.

Just published, Illustrated, post-free, 1s. 8d.,
DECORATIVE PAINTING.
A Practical Guide to Decorating the Walls of any Apartment, Painting Panels, Screens, and Terra Cotta. By W. R. HARRISON.—WM. BARNARD, 119, Edgware-road, London.

CAN A MAN FLY? or, Fifteen Months in the Moon. Third Thousand. Ninety-six Pages.
SUMMARY OF CONTENTS:—Separation of Mind and Matter. Journey to Moon: Landing: "Try other Side." Second Landing: Signal to Earth: Reply: Reunion of Mind and Matter: Description of Lunar Inhabitants—their Dwellings, Food, Government, Language, Division of Time, Mode of Locomotion, Animals, Birds, Plants, Monocyclic Railways (120 miles per hour), and Utilisation of Electricity; a Spiritual Sense—Natural Telegraphy; Lunar Courtship; Terrible Flood; Festival of the Rising Sun; Solution of the Problems of Aerial Navigation and Diamond Manufacture; Long Ride Through the Air; Awful Combat—Triumph; Earth from entirely New Point of View; Conclusion. Price 6d.; post-free, 7d.
G. H. RYAN, Hornsey, London, N.

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

SELF-CULTURE FOR ALL.
WARD and LOCK'S
UNIVERSAL INSTRUCTOR. A Complete Encyclopædia of Learning and Self-Education. Profusely Illustrated. In Weekly Numbers, 1d.; and Monthly Parts, 6d. Prospectuses post-free on application to the Publishers.

WARD and LOCK'S
UNIVERSAL INSTRUCTOR; or, SELF-CULTURE for ALL.
With Part I. will be PRESENTED GRATIS a valuable CHART of the History of the World, Printed in Colours.
Prospectus, post-free, on application to the Publishers.
London: WARD, LOCK, and Co., Salisbury-square, E.C.

NOTICE TO BOOKSELLERS AND THE PUBLIC.
WARD and LOCK'S UNIVERSAL INSTRUCTOR.
Anticipating a considerable demand for the first number of "The Universal Instructor," the publishers prepared a large first edition, which was speedily exhausted, and further editions have been put to press, amounting to five times the number first printed.
The orders received also for the first monthly part are so large that a fourth edition is already being printed.
The reprinting is being proceeded with as rapidly as possible, and orders for both Weekly Number and Monthly Part will be executed in the order in which they reach the Publishers.
London: WARD, LOCK, and Co., Salisbury-square, E.C.

THE MUSICAL ÆSOP. By TALBOT ERLE. Fables in Prose and Verse, Song and Chorus, with connecting Story, forming a Drawing-room Entertainment for Children. Price 1s.—WEEKES and Co., Hanover-street, W.

PAINTING on CHINA, EARTHENWARE, &c.: Practical Lessons by Madame la Baronne DELAMARDELLE. From the French, by G. A. Bouvier. Fourth Edition, post-free, 1s. 1d.—LECHERTIER, BARBE, and Co., 60, Regent-st., W.

1d. Weekly; Monthly Part, 5d.,
GARDENING ILLUSTRATED.—Villa, Suburban, Cottage, and Town Gardening. Window Plants, Bees, Poultry. All Newsagents. Copy by post, 1½d. Vol. I, 7s. 6d.
37, Southampton-street, Strand, London.

THE NEW FASHION-BOOK.

DEBENHAM and FREEBODY beg to announce the publication of the Twenty-second Number of their NEW FASHION-BOOK. The Book is enlarged to forty-eight pages, and contains numerous Illustrations of selected Models in Costumes, Mantles, Millinery, Evening Dresses, and Lace Goods, with Descriptive Articles, Estimates, Prices, &c.
"It is a complete index to the fashionable novelties of the day, in regard to colour and make, furnishing made-up costumes of all that is choicest and newest, with their price in the respective materials, so that ladies may SHOP AT HOME."

THE NEW FASHION-BOOK Post-free for twelve stamps.
DEBENHAM and FREEBODY, Wigmore-street, Welbeck-street, London, W.

Now ready, 25th Edition, 8vo, cloth, pp. 1102, price 16s.,
HOMŒOPATHIC DOMESTIC MEDICINE. By J. LAURIE, M.D. Completely rearranged, revised, re-written, annotated, and brought down to the present time, with a copious introduction, by R. S. Gutteridge, M.D. The present edition contains many important new chapters and sections, with new features and matter pertaining thereto, including the specific characteristic effects of all the new American remedies, the symptoms and treatment of all general diseases, including those of women and children. Diseases of Tropical Climates are fully considered, and the volume may be pronounced of the greatest value to families, emigrants, and missionaries.
Of this work a Physician of high standing writes:—
"I have gone pretty well through your Edition of Laurie's Domestic Homœopathic Medicine, and I can truly say that it is the most perfect work of its kind ever published; in fact, it is, to my mind, too good for the general public, as it enlightens them too much in the art and mystery of medicine and surgery. For young medical beginners such a work is invaluable, as it would save them a great amount of reading. It is really superior to any Domestic yet published. I have the First and Second Editions of Laurie, and your Edition only shows what the work has developed into."

Just out, Thirtieth Edition, post 8vo, cloth, price 5s.,
EPITOME OF THE ABOVE WORK.
By R. S. GUTTERIDGE, M.D.
This edition contains notices of most of the new medicines, and is brought down to the present time.
LEATH and Ross, 5, St. Paul's-churchyard; and 9, Vere-street, W.

Eighth Edition, cloth, post-free, 33 stamps,
DR. BARR MEADOWS on Skin Disease. Remarks on the Abuse of Arsenic, and specifics.
G. HILL, 154, Westminster-road.

Fourth Edition, cloth, post-free, 18 stamps,
DR. BARR MEADOWS on Homœopathy. "A clever exposé of the system."
G. HILL, 154, Westminster-road.

JUST PUBLISHED. Post-free, Two Stamps.
DYSPEPSIA and the SEVERER FORMS OF INDIGESTION. A Small Pamphlet on those distressing complaints and their complete cures. Published by the Author, RICHARD KING, Esq., Staff Surgeon, R.N., 23, Warwick-st., Rugby.

Third Edition, 1s., post-free,
THE new ELECTROLYTIC TREATMENT of CANCER and of simple Tumours. By G. EDGELOW, M.D.—NELSON and Co., 23, Duke-street, Grosvenor-square, W.

THE Treatment of Cancer, Tumours, and Ulcers, by CHIAN TURPENTINE, and all other Methods. Addressed to sufferers by ALEX. MARSDEN, M.D., Senior Surgeon to the Cancer Hospital, London. Post-free, 1s.
London: WYMAN and SONS, Great Queen-street, W.C.

NOSE and THROAT DISEASES, and their Local Treatment by Medicated Sprays. By GEORGE MOORE, M.D. 1s.; by post, on receipt of 12 stamps.
JAMES EPPS and Co., 170, Piccadilly.

FOR FAMILY ARMS (Lincoln's-inn Heraldic Office) send Name and County. Sketch, 3s. 6d.; in colours, 7s. 6d. Arms Painted and Engraved on Seals, Dies, &c. PUGH BROTHERS, Great Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn, W.C.; and 76, Queen Victoria-street, E.C. Prize Medal, Paris, 1878.

FOR ARMS and CREST send Name and County to T. MORING, Inns of Court Heraldic Offices, 44, High Holborn, W.C. Plain Sketch, 3s. 6d.; Coloured, 7s. 6d. Seals, Dies, and Diplomas. Illustrated Price-Lists post-free.

WHAT IS YOUR CREST and WHAT IS YOUR MOTTO? Send name and county to CULLETON'S Heraldic Office, Plain Sketch, 3s. 6d.; colours, 7s. The arms of man and wife blended. Crest engraved on seals, rings, books, and steel dies, 8s. 6d. Gold seal, with crest, 20s. Solid Gold Ring, 18-carat, Hall-marked, with crest, 42s. Manual of Heraldry, 400 engravings, 3s. 8d.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

VISITING CARDS, by CULLETON. Fifty best quality, 2s. 8d., post-free, including the Engraving of Copper-plate. Wedding Cards, 50 each. 50 Embossed Envelopes, with Maiden Name, 13s. 6d.—T. CULLETON, Seal Engraver, 25, Cranbourn-street, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

CULLETON'S GUINEA BOX of STATIONERY contains a Ream of the very best Paper and 200 Envelopes, all stamped in the very elegant way with Crest and Motto, Monogram, or Address, and the engraving of Steel Die included. Sent to any part for P.O. order.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

RODRIGUES' MONOGRAMS, ARMS, CORONET, CREST, and ADDRESS DIES Engraved as Gems from Original and Artistic Designs.
NOTE-PAPER AND ENVELOPES, brilliantly Illuminated by hand in Gold, Silver, Bronze, and Colours.
BEST RELIEF STAMPING, any colour, 1s. per 100.
The New STYLOGRAPHIC PEN, 12s. 6d., 14s. 6d., and 16s. 6d.
A VISITING CARD PLATE, elegantly Engraved, and 100 Superfine Cards printed, for 4s. 6d.
BALL PROGRAMMES, BILLS OF FARE, GUEST CARDS, WEDDING CARDS, and INVITATIONS in every variety.
HENRY RODRIGUES, 42, Piccadilly, London, W.

BANK OF NEW ZEALAND
(Incorporated by Act of General Assembly, July 29, 1861).
Bankers to the New Zealand Government.
Capital subscribed and paid up, £1,000,000.
Reserve Fund, £335,000.
DIRECTORS.
Hon. James Williamson, M.L.C., President.
G. B. Owen, Esq. | J. C. Firth, Esq.
Wm. Innes, Taylor, Esq. | S. Browning, Esq.
C. J. Stone, Esq.
LONDON BOARD.
Sir Penrose G. Julyan, K.C.M.G., C.B. | Rt. Hon. A. J. Mundella, M.P.
Falconer Larkworthy, Esq. | Robert Porter, Esq.
Thomas Russell, Esq., C.M.G.
Head Office—Auckland.
BRANCHES AND AGENCIES.
In Australia—Melbourne, Sydney, and Newcastle.
In Fiji—Levuka.
In New Zealand—Auckland, Blenheim, Christchurch, Dunedin, Invercargill, Napier, Nelson, New Plymouth, Picton, Wellington, and at eighty-six other towns and places throughout the Colony.
The Bank grants Drafts on all their Branches and Agencies, and transacts every description of banking business connected with New Zealand, Australia, and Fiji on the most favourable terms.
The London Office RECEIVES FIXED DEPOSITS of £50 and upwards, rates and particulars of which can be ascertained on application. F. LARKWORTHY, Managing Director.
No. 1, Queen Victoria-street, Mansion House, E.C.

FIVE PER CENT DEBENTURES.
AUSTRALASIAN AGENCY and BANKING CORPORATION (Limited).
Capital £1,250,000. In 125,000 Shares of £10 each.
Subscribed in the Australian Colonies, £362,350; in London, £300,000. Reserve Fund, £25,000.
LONDON DIRECTORS:
Abraham Scott, Esq. | Harry Hankey Dobree, Esq.
Frank C. Capel, Esq. | Joseph Cockfield, Dimsdale, Esq.
BANKERS:
Messrs. Dimsdale, Fowler, Barnard, and Dimsdales.
SOLICITORS:
Messrs. Freshfields and Williams.
The Company are now issuing Debentures at the above rate for four, five, or six years. Forms of application can be obtained at the Office of the Company, 6½, Austin Friars.

GOVERNMENT STOCKS and SHARES BOUGHT and SOLD at the Current Rates by DAVID KAUFMANN, Banker, Welckerstrasse No. 6, Hamburg, who has now for SALE Original Government Bonds, capital, 8,672,100 Mk., equal to about £43,360, to be drawn in Series within a few months. Prices for the next drawing:—One Original Debenture, 6s.; one Half ditto, 3s. Prospectus in English sent free on application.

WOOD PAVING.—NOTICE.—Messrs. HARVEY, NICHOLS, and CO. (Limited) respectfully announce that, during the repair of the Knightsbridge-road, Carriages may conveniently set down at their Side Entrance in Charles-street, Lowndes-square; and also in Sloane-street.

HOMŒOPATHIC HOME HOSPITAL (SELECT) for LADIES, Bolton House, 192, Clapham-road, Surrey. Established 1867. A Home for the Cure of Internal and External Tumours and other Diseases of Women without cutting. Treatise of successful cures post-free.
Physicians—DAVID JONES, M.D.
HORACE LOWTHER, L.R.C.P.
Dr. Jones attends at his residence, 15, Welbeck-street, London, daily, Eleven till One (except Tuesday and Friday). Dr. Lowther attends daily, Nine till Eleven, at Bolton House, where, on Wednesday and Saturday mornings and evenings, the fee is Half a Crown.

MALVERN COLLEGE. The NEXT TERM will BEGIN on FRIDAY, JAN. 28, 1881.

SMART'S WRITING INSTITUTION, 97B, Quadrant, Regent-street (entrance in Swallow-street). Open from Ten till Nine daily. Persons of all ages received privately, and taught at any time suiting their own convenience. Lessons one hour each. No classes. No extras. Improvement guaranteed in eight to twelve easy lessons. Separate room for ladies. Apply to Mr. Smart, as above.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS.
GOLD MEDAL,
PARIS,
1878.

THE LINCOLN POSTAGE-STAMP ALBUM and CATALOGUE. Illustrated. Fifth Edition. With Spaces for over 3500 stamps. Cloth gilt, 2s. 6d.; post-free, 2s. 10d.—W. LINCOLN, 239, High Holborn, London.

WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS on LOAN, for the use of Amateurs and Students. The Subscription Portfolio contains a choice Collection of leading Artists. Catalogue and Terms on application.
ARTHUR ACKERMANN, 121, Regent-street, London, W.

CHARMING CRAYON PORTRAITS. Send Photo and 10s. 6d. to A. and J. BOOL, Artists (from Royal Academy, National Medallist), 36, Warwick-street, Pimlico, London, who will return photo with faithful Crayon Drawing from it, 15 by 10 inches, post-free, home or abroad. 100 testimonials. Tinted Crayons, 21s.; Water-colour, 21s.; Oil, two guineas; Life-size highly-finished Crayon, £5 5s. On Parle Français.

WHITE WOOD ARTICLES for Painting, Fern Painting, and Decalcomanie, Blotting-Books, Card Plates, Cigar-Cases, Screens, &c. Priced List free.
WM. BARNARD, 119, Edgware-road, London.

BUTLER'S MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS. Violins, Concertinas, Harmoniums, Flutes, Clarionets, Flageolets, Guitars, Banjoes, Accordeons, Flutinas, Cornets, Drums, Fifes, and Musical Instruments of every description, at BUTLER'S, 229, Haymarket, London. Illustrated Catalogue (50 pages) post-free.

MUSICAL BOX DÉPOTS, 22, Ludgate-hill, & 56, Cheapside, London.—Nicole's celebrated Musical Boxes, playing best secular and sacred music. Prices £4 to £200. Snuff-boxes from 18s. to 60s. Largest stock in London. Catalogue gratis and post-free. Apply to WALES & M'CULLOCH, as above.

DIAMONDS. SAPPHIRES. CATS'-EYES. OPALS. EMERALDS.
Mr. STREETER, 18, New Bond-street, W.
INTRODUCER of 18-CARAT GOLD JEWELLERY and ENGLISH LEVER WATCHES, (MACHINE-MADE.)
BRANCH ESTABLISHMENT, COLOMBO, CEYLON.

OROIDE GOLD ALBERT CHAINS, 5s., 7s. 6d., 10s. 6d. Links, Solitaires, or Studs, 2s. 6d. Brooches, 4s. 6d. to 8s. 6d. Earrings, 3s. 6d. to 7s. 6d. Lockets, 4s. 6d. to 12s. 6d. Free by post. Opinions of the Press and Price-Lists post-free.—C. C. ROWE, 92, Brompton-road, London, S.W.

WALKER'S CRYSTAL CASE WATCHES are superseding all others. Prize Medals—London, 1862; Paris, 1867. Silver Watches, from £4 4s.; Gold, from £6 6s. Price-Lists sent free.—77, Cornhill; 220, Regent-street; and 76, Strand.

CHARLES FRODSHAM and CO. By Appointment to her Majesty. THREE GOLD MEDALS for CLOCKS and WATCHES.
Only Address, 84, Strand, London, W.C.

DENT'S WATCHES, CLOCKS, and CHRONOMETERS.—Illustrated Catalogue sent free.—Apply to 61, Strand, or 34, Royal Exchange, London.

THE FINEST WATCHES MADE. | SEWILL'S KEYLESS WATCHES, Prize Medals, London, Paris, and Philadelphia. Damp and Dust-proof, 18-carat cases, adjusted and compensated for all climates, £10 10s., £14 14s., and £25; Ladies', £7 7s., £10 10s., and £18 18s.; in silver cases, for Ladies or Gentlemen, £5 5s., £6 6s., and £8 8s. Forwarded on receipt of remittance.—J. Sewill, 30, Cornhill, London; and 61, South Castle-street, Liverpool.

"A MASS OF CURLS."
COX'S CURLING FLUID
(Protected by Government Stamp)
ensures Curly and Wavy Hair, also assists the growth. Warranted harmless and certain. To be used as a pomade. Beautifully scented. Has been in use by ladies of title for a hundred years. No paper or curling-tongs required. Regularly used two or three times a week will always keep the hair curly. Price 3s. 6d. per Large Bottle, carriage paid, free from observation; or through your local Chemist, who will order it from the Sole Agent for Great Britain, ROBERT P. MARSHALL, Commission Agent, 33, St. Mary's-square, London, S.E.

SPENCE'S ULSTER CLOTHS.
New and Elegant Autumn and Winter Fabrics, light, soft and warm, manufactured expressly by J. S. and Co. for Ulsters in the various fashionable colours and mixtures (four yards required for full-size Ulster).
54 inches wide, price 2s. 6d., 2s. 11d., 3s. 11d., 4s. 11d., 5s. 11d., 6s. 11d., to 10s. 6d. per yard.
Full Sets of Patterns post-free.

SPENCE'S (TAILOR-MADE) ULSTERS.
Made from specially selected Ulster Cloths, for travelling, seaside, or walking. Instructions for self-measurement and patterns of materials post-free.

SPENCE'S PLUSH HOODED ULSTERS.
The Newest Styles and most Fashionable Colours.
"The greatest Novelty as Ulsters."
Price 19s. 6d.

SPENCE'S LOW-PRICED ULSTERS.
Commencing from 10s. 6d. A great variety marked at Wholesale City Prices.
Instructions for Self-Measurement and Patterns of Materials post-free.

SPENCE'S VELVETEENS.
Black and Coloured, guaranteed fast pile, warranted to wear, 100 Shades, full width, 2s. 3d. per yard.

SPENCE'S SERGES.
Sold at Manufacturers' Prices.
"Rough and Ready," 27 inches wide, 8½d. per yard.
All-Wool Winter Estamene, 1s. 3½d. per yard.
New French Cashmere Serge, 10½d. and 1s. per yard.
Knockabout Corduroy Cloth, or the Everlasting Cloth, 1s. 2½d. per yard.
Patterns post-free.

SPENCE'S JOB GOODS.
300 pieces Chambral Tweed, 25 inches wide, 4½d., worth 7½d. per yard.

SPENCE'S (only address), who Sell all Goods at Wholesale City Prices for cash, saving 25 per cent, or 5s. in the pound, is
JAMES SPENCE and CO.,
76, 77, 78, and 79, St. Paul's-churchyard; and 1, 2, and 4, London House-yard, E.C.

FLORILINE. For the Teeth and Breath.
Is the best Liquid Dentifrice in the world; it thoroughly cleanses partially-decayed teeth from all parasites or living "animalculæ," leaving them pearly white, imparting a delightful fragrance to the breath. The Fragrant Floriline removes instantly all odours arising from a foul stomach or tobacco smoke, being partly composed of honey, soda, and extracts of sweet herbs and plants. It is perfectly harmless, and delicious as sherry. Sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere, at 2s. 6d. per Bottle.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY for the HAIR.
If your hair is turning grey, or white, or falling off, use "The Mexican Hair Renewer," for it will positively restore in every case Grey or White Hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting the growth of the hair on bald spots where the glands are not decayed. "The Mexican Hair Renewer" is sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere, at 3s. 6d. per Bottle.

MRS. S. A. ALLEN'S
WORLD'S HAIR RESTORER

THE ADMIRATION OF THE WORLD. Mrs. S. A. Allen's World's Hair Restorer is perfection for its wonderful life-giving properties to faded or falling hair, and quickly changing grey or white hair to its natural youthful colour and beauty. It is not a dye. It requires only a few applications to restore gray hair to its youthful colour and lustrous beauty, and induce luxuriant growth, and its occasional use is all that is needed to preserve it in its highest perfection and beauty. Dandruff is quickly and permanently removed. Sold by all Chemists and Perfumers.

NUDA VERITAS.—GREY HAIR restored by this valuable specific to its original shade, after which it grows the natural colour, not grey. Used as a dressing, it causes growth and arrests falling. The most harmless and effectual restorer extant. One trial will convince it has no equal. Price 10s. 6d., of all Chemists and Hairdressers. Testimonials post-free.—R. HOVENDEN and SONS, London.

GOLDEN HAIR.—ROBARE'S AUREOLINE produces the beautiful Golden Colour so much admired. Warranted perfectly harmless. Prices 5s. 6d. and 10s. 6d., of all Perfumers. Wholesale, HOVENDEN and SONS, 5, Great Marlborough-street, W.; and 33 and 35, City-road, E.C. London. Pinaud and Meyer, 37, Boulevard de Strasbourg, Paris; 31, Graben, Vienna; 44, Rue des Longs Chariots, Brussels.

BREIDENBACH'S WOOD VIOLET. Fresh as the flower itself. Price 2s. 6d., 5s., 10s. Bottle. Sold at all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the Universe; or Breidenbach and Co., Distillers of Wood Violet to the Queen, 157B, New Bond-street, W. Trade-Mark, the "Wood Violet."

ELECTRICITY IS LIFE.
GALVANISM, NATURE'S CHIEF RESTORER of IMPAIRED VITAL ENERGY.—A PAMPHLET on Self-Applicable Electricity, demonstrating the most effectual, rational, and simple Galvanic Treatment of Nervous and Rheumatic Pains, Debility, Indigestion, Nervousness, Paralysis, Neuralgia, Epilepsy, Cramp, Functional Disorders, &c., as results exclusively by the use of PULVERMACHER'S IMPROVED PATENT GALVANIC CHAIN-BANDS, BELTS, and SELF-RESTORABLE POCKET BATTERIES, &c. Approved by the Academie de Medecine, Paris; the Royal College of Physicians, London, &c.; substantiated by medical reports and authenticated testimonials, including Sir C. Locock, Bart., M.D., Sir William Fergusson, Bart., Sir J. R. Martin, Bart., M.D., Dr. A. Clark, Physician to the London Hospital. This Pamphlet (sent post-free) treats "why and wherefore" these galvanic arrangements have proved most efficacious, even in cases where other electrical apparatus and ordinary medical treatment have been tried in vain, especially in those ailments resulting from deficiency of Vital Electricity in the affected organs. Apply to
J. PULVERMACHER, GALVANIC ESTABLISHMENT,
194, REGENT-STREET, LONDON, W.

HOOPING COUGH.
ROCHE'S HERBAL EMBROCATION.
THIS celebrated effectual Cure without internal medicine. Sole Wholesale Agents, W. EDWARDS and SON, 157, Queen Victoria-street (formerly of 67, St. Paul's-churchyard), London, whose names are engraved on the Government stamp.
Sold by most Chemists. Price 4s. per Bottle.

SUBSCRIPTION TO
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.
AT HOME.
Twelve months (including Christmas Number), £1 9s. 3d.
Six months, 14s. Christmas Half-Year, 15s. 3d.
Three months, 7s. Christmas Quarter, 8s. 3d.
Copies will be supplied direct from the Office to any part of the United Kingdom and the Channel Islands, for any period, at the rate of 6½d. for each Number, paid in advance.
ABROAD.
The yearly subscription abroad is 36s. 4d. (on thin paper, 32s.), with the following exceptions:
To Aden, Borneo, Ceylon, India, Java, Labuan, Mozambique, Penang, Philippine Islands, Sarawak, Singapore, and Zanzibar, 41s. (thin paper, 34s.)
To the Hawaiian Islands, Madagascar (except St. Mary), and Pataraway, 45s. (on thin paper, 36s. 4d.)
Subscribers are specially advised to order the thick paper edition, the appearance of the engravings in the thin paper copies being greatly injured by the print at the back showing through.
Newspapers for foreign parts must be posted within eight days of the time of publication, irrespective of the departure of the mails.
Subscriptions must be paid in advance, direct to the Publishing Office, 198, Strand, in English money; by cheque crossed the Union Bank of London; or by Post-Office Order, payable at the East Strand Post Office, to George C. Leighton, of 198, Strand, London.

Digitized by Google

NEW MUSIC.

THE MARTYR OF ANTIOCH. Sacred Musical Drama. Music by ARTHUR SULLIVAN. Performed on the 15th inst. at the Leeds Musical Festival with enormous success. Price 8s. net; bound in cloth, 10s. 6d. net.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry, E.C.

OLIVETTE. New Comic Opera, now being performed at the Strand Theatre with enormous success. Adapted by H. B. Farnie; Music by AUDRAN.

Vocal Score	8s. net.
Pianoforte Solo	2s. 6d. ,,
Nearest and Dearest Waltz. D'Albert	2s. ,,
Olivette Waltz. D'Albert	2s. ,,
Olivette Quadrille. D'Albert	2s. ,,
Olivette Polka. D'Albert	2s. ,,
Torpedo Galop. D'Albert	2s. ,,
I Love my Love so well. Duet	2s. ,,
The Convent Steps	2s. ,,
Where balmy garlic scents the air. Bolero	2s. ,,
Valse Song. First Love	2s. ,,
Torpedo Song	2s. ,,
Bob Song. Sung by Miss St. John	2s. ,,
Romance—"Nearest and Dearest."	2s. ,,
Boyton Smith's Fantasia, introducing all the Favourite Airs	2s. ,,
Nava's Gems, Olivette (1 and 2) each 1s. 6d.	2s. ,,
Franz Nava's Farandole	1s. 6d. ,,
Audran's "Nearest and Dearest" (Pianoforte)	2s. ,,

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

CHARLES D'ALBERT'S NOVELTIES.

ADELINA WALTZ. Illustrated with a beautiful Portrait of Madame Patti	2s. 6d. net
PORTIA WALTZ	2s. 6d. net
DRINK, PUPPY, DRINK! POLKA	2s. 6d. net
CAN'T STOP. GALOP	2s. 6d. net
CONGRESS LANCERS	2s. 6d. net
DISTANT SHORE WALTZ	2s. 6d. net
THE FANFARE POLKA	1s. 6d. net

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

Now ready.
VOLUME TWO OF CHAPPELL'S OLD ENGLISH DITTIES. Handsomely bound in cloth and gold. Price 10s. 6d. net.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S THREE-YEARS' SYSTEM of HIRE of PIANOFORTES, HARMONIUMS, and AMERICAN ORGANS, by which the Instrument becomes the property of the Hirer at the end of the third year, provided each quarter's hire shall have been regularly paid in advance. Pianofortes, from 2 gs.; Harmoniums, from £1 5s.; and American Organs, from £2 10s. a Quarter.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S PIANINOS, from 20 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S COTTAGES, from 27 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S GRANDS, from 50 guineas.

CHICKERING PIANOFORTES, from 120 guineas, with American discount.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S ALEXANDRE HARMONIUMS, for Church, Schools, or Drawing-Rooms, from 6 to 150 guineas; or, on the Three-Years' system, from £1 5s. per quarter.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S IMPROVED AMERICAN ORGANS, combining Pipes with Reeds, Manufactured by Clough and Warren, Detroit, U.S.A. The immense advantages these instruments possess over the Organs hitherto imported have induced Messrs. Chappell and Co. to undertake the sole Agency of this eminent Manufactory. A large variety on view, from 25 to 250 guineas. Price-Lists on application to CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S Favourite ORGAN. Compass, five octaves, ten stops, four sets of reeds, two of two and two thirds octaves and two of two and one third octaves, knee swell, elegant carved Canadian walnut case, price 25 guineas. With twelve stops, sub-bass octave coupler, and two knee pedals, 35 guineas. Illustrated Price-List free by post.
Sole Agents, CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

INSTRUMENTS by ALL MAKERS may be HIRED or PURCHASED on the Three-Years' System.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

A LARGE DISCOUNT TO PURCHASERS FOR CASH.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

JOSEPH WILLIAMS'S LIST.
ALL MUSIC POST-FREE AT HALF PRICE.

FOLI'S GREATEST SUCCESS.
THE RAFT. Descriptive Fantasia. By PINSUTI. In E and G, free, 24 stamps. Now being sung by Signor Foli with the greatest success at all his concerts. Decidedly the finest baritone (or bass) song extant.

I LOVE MY LOVE. PINSUTI'S most celebrated Song, in A flat and B flat; free, 24 stamps. This, the most effective Drawing-room Song ever written, is continually sung by all the leading vocalists, both soprano and contralto.

THREE JOLLY BRITONS, or the ENGLISH, IRISH, and SCOTCH.
New National Song.
"Long may our good Queen on her Throne
O'er her subjects keep a watch,
For the three will fight for her as one,
Though English, Irish, and Scotch.
Words and Music, G. WARE. Post-free, 18 stamps.

SHALL I WEAR A WHITE ROSE? New Song. By EMILY FARMER; poetry by Savile Clark. This charming Song is now being sung by Madame Trebelli at her Provincial Concerts with perfect success. Published in E flat and G, for soprano or contralto. Post-free, 24 stamps.

JOHN GILPIN. Cantata. By GEORGE FOX. 2s. 6d. net. Easy and effective. A liberal discount allowed to choral societies for copies.

LES CLOCHES DE CORNEVILLE.
Vocal Score, English Words, 10s. net, and 4s.
Piano Score, complete, 2s. 6d. net.

HENRY FARMER'S PIANOFORTE TUTOR, considerably Enlarged and Fingered by the Author. Tenth Edition. 4s.
"Decidedly the best and most useful instruction book we have seen."—Musical Review.

JOSEPH WILLIAMS,
24, Berners-street, W.; and 123, Cheapside, E.C.

COWEN'S GREATEST SUCCESS.
THE CHILDREN'S HOME. By COWEN. Sung with brilliant applause by Miss Mary Davies, Miss Jose Sherrington, Madame Florence Lancia, Madame Bolda Pyne, Madame Patey, Madame Evans Warwick, Miss Coyte Turner, Mr. John Cross, and by all the principal Vocalists. Keys for all voices. 24 stamps.
W. MORLEY, Jun., and Co., 70, Upper-street, London, N.

GOOD-BYE. COTSFORD DICK'S New Song. The Poetry by G. J. Whyte-Melville. One of the most charming songs in words and music produced for some time. Post-free, 2s.—DUFF and STEWART, 2, Hanover-street, W.

THE KING'S CHAMPION. New Song, for Baritone or Bass. Composed by MICHAEL WATSON. Sung by Mr. Thurley Beale. Editions in D and E flat. Post-free, 2s.—DUFF and STEWART, 2, Hanover-street, W.

NEW DANCE MUSIC.
SUCCESS OF THE SEASON.
AMITIÉ VALSE. By H. R. CALLCOTT. 4s.
TOUT EST FINI GALOP. By H. R. CALLCOTT. 4s.
AVANT SOUPIR GALOP. By H. R. CALLCOTT. 4s.
Half price post-free.
ALLISON and BRENTNALL, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

NEW MUSIC.

POPULAR NUMBERS OF
BOOSEYS' MUSICAL CABINET.
Price 1s. each.
126. ROBERT FRANZ ALBUM. 36 Songs.
138. GOUNOD'S 10 SONGS, including "The Serenade," and "Où voulez-vous aller?"
2. LONGFELLOW AND BALFE'S 10 CELEBRATED SONGS.
13. HATTON'S 12 SONGS. New Edition.
145. DOLORES' 12 SONGS.
163. A. S. GATTY'S 12 BALLADS.
169. VIRGINIA GABRIEL'S 10 SONGS.
168. ARTHUR SULLIVAN'S 10 SONGS.
83. TWELVE VOCAL DUETS FOR LADIES' VOICES.
173. LILLIE'S SONG BOOK. 50 Songs.
212. BOOSEYS' MARCH ALBUM. 30 Marches.
203, 210, 213. RUBINSTEIN'S 3 ALBUMS. 25 Pieces.
214. ROBERT SCHUMANN'S ALBUMBLATTER.
204. BRAHMS' PIANOFORTE ALBUM.
190. FIELD'S NOCTURNE ALBUM. 10 Nocturnes.
114. BEETHOVEN'S WALTZ ALBUM. 45 Waltzes.
200. LAMOTHE'S WALTZ ALBUM. 6 Waltzes.
201. WALDTEUFEL'S WALTZ ALBUM. 8 Waltzes.
Boosey's Musical Cabinet also contains Beethoven's, Mozart's, Schubert's, and Dussek's Sonatas; Chopin's Waltzes, Mazurkas, and Nocturnes (each complete for 1s.); Mendelssohn's, Schumann's, Heller's, Weber's, and Hummel's works. The cheapest and best editions published. A full Catalogue on application.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

BOOSEYS' SHILLING INSTRUCTORS.

Organ	Best.	Theory	Dr. Callcott.
Harmonium	Elliott.	Violin	Henning.
Pianoforte	Mount.	Violoncello	Howell.
Singing (Male)	Hatton.	Flute	Pratten.
Singing (Ladies)	Hatton.	Cornet	Jones.
Ballad Singing	Balfe.	Concertina	Case.
Choral Singing	Dr. Spark.	Clarionet	Kappey.

New and much enlarged Edition. Price 12s. 6d.,
LOGIER'S SYSTEM OF THE SCIENCE OF MUSIC. "As a guide to the teacher, or for private study, we know of no better work."—Musical Standard.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

SPOHR'S VIOLIN SCHOOL. Edited by HENRY HOLMES. Price 10s. 6d. complete, bound in cloth.—BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

With Fifteen Illustrations, price 2s. 6d.,
LILLIE'S FIRST MUSIC-BOOK. Sixty-four pages. Music size. "The most admirable tutor extant for the pianoforte."—Somerset Herald.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

Next week, price 2s. 6d.,
LILLIE'S SECOND MUSIC-BOOK. Fifty-six pages. Music size, with six full-page Illustrations, forming a sequel to the first book, and completing the work.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

Just published, 2s. 6d., paper covers; 4s., cloth, gilt edges,
HANDEL'S OPERA SONGS.—A Collection of Fifty-two of the choicest Songs from Handel's Operas, with Italian and English Words. Edited by W. T. Best. "The impression produced by turning over this collection is one of astonishment that such a wealth of fine and effective songs should have been neglected so long."—Pall Mall Gazette.—BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

Price 2s. 6d., paper covers; 4s., cloth, gilt edges,
THE SONGS OF ENGLAND—Second Volume—containing 100 celebrated Songs and Ballads. Edited by J. L. HATTON.—THE ROYAL EDITION.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

Price 2s. 6d., paper covers; 4s., cloth, gilt edges,
THE SONGS OF FRANCE. A Collection of Sixty celebrated Songs and popular Romances, all with French and English Words.

THE SONGS OF FRANCE contains songs by Boieldieu, Grétry, Adam, Auber, Gounod, Berlioz, Halévy, Lefort, Alary, Nadaud, Nieriermeyer, Flotow, Félicien David, Wekerlin, Masini, Puget, Henrion and Bordèse, in addition to the popular and National Songs of France. The work is specially for drawing-room use, and contains no extracts from operas. THE ROYAL EDITION.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

STANDARD PIANOFORTE MUSIC IN THE
CAVENDISH MUSIC-BOOKS.
26. RECOLLECTIONS OF THE OPERA. (26 celebrated airs.)
26. CLASSICAL READINGS FOR THE PIANOFORTE. (17 short and beautiful pieces.)
27. SACRED READINGS FOR THE PIANOFORTE. (20 movements from the works of the great masters.)
29. ALBUM OF 12 GAVOTTES by Handel, Bach, Corelli, Rameau, Gotthard, Martini, &c.
34. ALBUM OF MINUETS.
37. CALLCOTT'S HANDEL ALBUM. Part I. (51 Sacred airs.)
38. CALLCOTT'S HANDEL ALBUM. Part I. (61 Secular airs).
Price 1s. each Book.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

NEW SONGS IN THE
CAVENDISH MUSIC-BOOKS.
No. 1. SONGS OF THE DAY. Book 1.
No. 31. SONGS OF THE DAY. Book 2.
No. 32. SONGS OF THE DAY. Book 3.
Each Book contains 10 Songs. Contributors—Arthur Sullivan, Molloy, Louis Diehl, Dolores, Hamilton Aidé, Louisa Gray, F. H. Cowen, Pinsuti. Price 1s. each Book.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

FAVOURITE CANTATAS.
HENRY HOLMES' CHRISTMAS DAY. Words by Keble. 2s. 6d.
ARTHUR SULLIVAN'S PRODIGAL SON. 2s. 6d.
ARTHUR SULLIVAN'S ON SHORE AND SEA. 2s. 6d.
F. H. COWEN'S ROSE MAIDEN. 2s. 6d.
F. H. COWEN'S CORSAIR. 3s. 6d.
F. HOWELL'S LAND OF PROMISE. 2s. 6d.
F. HOWELL'S SONG OF THE MONTHS. 2s. 6d.
KAPPEY'S PER MARE, PER TERRAM. 3s.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

THE PARISH ANTHEM-BOOK.—A collection of Fifty Standard Anthems by the most celebrated composers, suitable for large and small choirs. In Numbers, price One Penny each; or one Volume, paper cover, 3s. 6d.; cloth, gilt edges, 5s.—BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street. Specimen Anthem for one stamp.

THE CHORAL UNION.—A collection of FORTY POPULAR GLEES and PART-SONGS, in four handy books, each containing the music of the forty pieces for one voice—viz., Soprano, Contralto, Tenor, or Bass. Price Sixpence; or in score, with pianoforte accompaniment, price 3s. 6d.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

BOOSEY and CO.'S PIANOFORTES.—A most extensive Stock, Upright and Grand, by all the great Makers, English and Foreign, including Pianettes, at 20 gs.; Over-Strung Pianos, at 40 gs.; and Short Iron Grands, at 60 gs., for Hire or for Purchase, either upon the Three-Years' System or for Cash with Liberal Discount.—295, Regent-street.

PRATTEN'S PERFECTED FLUTES, Cylinder and Cone, commencing at 4 gs. The Siccama Flute and the Boehm Old and New System of Fingering. Particulars of all these Instruments upon application to the Manufacturers, BOOSEY and CO., 295, Regent-street, W.

CHARLES HALLE'S PRACTICAL PIANOFORTE SCHOOL.
Section I.—No. 1, Pianoforte Tutor. Also 67 Numbers of CHARLES HALLE'S MUSICAL LIBRARY are now ready. Catalogues and all particulars may be had from
FORSYTH BROTHERS, London, 272A, Regent-circus, Oxford-street; Manchester, Cross-street and South King-street; and all Musicsellers.

DOMINION ORGAN COMPANY,
Bowmanville, Ontario, Canada.
The best and cheapest 25 Guinea Organ in the Trade.
"PRINCESS LOUISE,"
Ten Stops, including Octave Coupler.
Sole Agents for the United Kingdom,
FORSYTH BROTHERS,
London: 272A, Regent-circus, Oxford-street.
Manchester: Cross-street and South King-street.
Complete Catalogues post-free.

D'ALMAINES' PIANOS HALF PRICE. In consequence of a change of partnership, the whole of this splendid stock, perfected with all the modern improvements of the day by this long-standing firm, of 100 years' reputation, and in order to effect a speedy sale. The easiest terms arranged, with seven years' warranty. Trichord Cottages from hire, or taken in exchange, £10 to £12.
Class 0, £14 | Class 2, £20 | Class 4, £30 | Class 6, £36
Class 1, £17 | Class 3, £23 | Class 5, £27 | Class 7, £40
American Organs from £5.—91, Finsbury Pavement, Moorgate Station, E.C.

P. J. SMITH AND SONS'
IRON-STRUTTED PIANOS.
"The best and most substantial instrument produced."
3 and 4, PRINCES-STREET, OXFORD-STREET, W.

NEW MUSIC.

THE MUSICAL TIMES for NOVEMBER contains:—Home Music—Worship—The Father of the Symphony—The Great Composers: Spohr—Marchetti's Opera, "Don Giovanni d'Austria"—Leeds Musical Festival—Jacques Offenbach—Crystal Palace Concerts, &c.—Reviews, Foreign and Country News, &c. Price 3d.; post-free, 4d. Annual subscription, 4s., including postage.

THE MUSICAL TIMES for NOVEMBER contains:—"Thus Speaketh the Lord of Hosts." Anthem for Christmas, by Dr. STAINER. Price, separately, 1½d.

NOVELLO, EWER, and CO.'S MUSIC PRIMERS. Edited by Dr. STAINER.

		s.	d.
1.	The Pianoforte	2	0
2.	The Rudiments of Music	1	0
3.	The Organ	2	0
4.	The Harmonium	2	0
5.	Singing	4	0
6.	Speech in Song	2	0
7.	Musical Forms	2	0
8.	Harmony	2	0
9.	Counterpoint	2	0
10.	Fugue	2	0
11.	Scientific Basis of Music	1	0
12.	Church Choir Training	1	0
13.	Instrumentation	2	0
14.	Plain-Song	2	0
15.	Instrumentation	2	0
16.	The Elements of the Beautiful in Music	1	0
17.	The Violin	2	0
18.	Tonic Sol-fa	1	0
19.	Lancashire Sol-fa	1	0
20.	Composition	2	0
21.	Musical Terms	1	0

(To be continued.)
London: NOVELLO, EWER, and Co.

COMPOSITION. By Dr. STAINER. No. 20 of Novello's Music Primers. Price 2s.

MUSICAL TERMS. By STAINER and BARRETT. No. 21 of Novello's Music Primers. Price 1s.

THE ONLY COMPLETE EDITIONS.
One Volume, 518 pp., folio, handsomely bound, cloth, gilt edges, price 21s.; ditto, 8vo, paper, 7s. 6d.; cloth gilt, 10s. 6d.
MENDELSSOHN'S ORIGINAL COMPOSITIONS FOR THE PIANOFORTE, including the "Lieder Ohne Worte," an entirely new and carefully revised edition.—London: NOVELLO, EWER, and Co.

LIEDER OHNE WORTE, folio, cloth, gilt edges, 12s. Octavo, paper cover, 4s.; cloth, gilt edges, 6s. Cheap editions, folio, paper cover, 5s.; cloth, gilt edges, 8s. Octavo, paper cover, 2s. 6d.; cloth, gilt edges, 4s. 6d.
The only complete editions, containing books 7 and 8.

ONE SHILLING EACH.
ELLIOTT'S VOLUNTARIES for the HARMONIUM. In six sets, price One Shilling each; or in two volumes, cloth gilt, Four Shillings each. List of contents may be had on application.

JUST PUBLISHED, PRICE ONE SHILLING EACH.
NOVELLO'S PIANOFORTE ALBUMS. Nos. 1 and 2, each containing Twenty Compositions by BACH, edited by Berthold Tours. List of contents may be had on application.—London: NOVELLO, EWER, and Co., 1, Berners-street, W.; and 80 and 81, Queen-street, E.C.

HEADS OF SCHOOLS.—Messrs. ROBERT COCKS and CO. respectfully beg to remind the profession generally, and the heads of schools, that they are, as heretofore, prepared to open accounts, and to send out parcels of music on approbation. References solicited. Returns to be made at the expiration of every half-year. Terms, and new catalogues of popular vocal and piano music (including the Teachers' Green Catalogue) may be had gratis and post-free.
New Burlington-street, London.

THE FAREWELL MARCH (James Waterson). Performed at the Trooping of the Colours and on other state occasions. Transcribed for the Piano by W. SMALLWOOD. Post-free for 18 stamps.
London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

TO MUSICAL STUDENTS. — CARL CZERNY'S (pupil of Beethoven) great WORKS:—
School of Practical Composition. Dedicated, by permission, to the Royal Academy of Music in London. 3 vols., each 21s.
The Royal Pianoforte School. Dedicated, by command, to her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen. 4 vols., each 21s.
Supplement to the Pianoforte School, 12s.
London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

DR. MARK'S GREAT MUSICAL WORKS. School of Musical Composition. Vol. I., 541 pp. royal 8vo. Fourth Edition, 15s.
The Universal School of Music. 367 pp. royal 8vo, 12s.
The Music of the Nineteenth Century. 317 pp. royal 8vo, 12s.
London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

SPOHR'S VIOLIN SCHOOL.—In one handsome volume, folio, cloth, pp. 236. Louis Spohr wrote to the publishers, saying:—"I have carefully looked over this English Edition of my 'Violin School,' and have no hesitation in recommending it as a faithful translation of the original work." Price 21s.; offered at 14s. 9d.
London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

SILVER BELLS OF MEMORY.—Melody. By HARRY DALE. Transcribed for the Piano by George F. West. 3s; post-free for 18 stamps.
London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

IF WISHES WERE HORSES. Song. Written by Charles Mackay; the Music composed by FRANZ ABT. 3s.; post-free, 18 stamps.
London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street.

NEW WALTZ.
DAS WUNDERSCHON (Most Beautiful). By CARL ROSENGARD. Played at the Prince of Wales's Ball at Abergeldie Castle with great success. "A really pretty and melodious waltz."—Graphic. Post-free, 24.
REID Bros., 189, Oxford-street, London, W.

LA PREMIÈRE VOLÉE POLKA. By A. T. TOLLER. "An excellent and very original polka, always well received." Post-free, 1s. 6d.
REID Bros., 189, Oxford-street, London, W.

Just published, price 1s.; post-free, 14 stamps,
WALDTEUFEL'S VALSE ALBUM for CHRISTMAS, 1880-1, containing Emile Waldteufel's Five best Waltzes; 24 pages, full music size, with Elegant Illuminated Cover.—FRANCIS and DAY; 351, Oxford-street, W.

REBUILDING SALE.—PIANOFORTES, £15; Broadwood Pianos, £25; Erard Pianos, £25; Collard Pianos, £28; Harmoniums, £5; American Organs, £10.
THOMAS OETZMANN and Co., 27, Baker-street, Portman-sq.

£20 SCHOOL-ROOM PIANO (Co-operative price for cash). Seven octaves—strong, sound, and substantial. Adapted for hard practice.
THOMAS OETZMANN and CO., 27, Baker-street.

REBUILDING SALE.—Purchasers who can pay cash will do well to take advantage of this exceptional opportunity of obtaining thoroughly good instruments at extraordinary low prices.

BROADWOOD PIANO, 38 guineas. Full compass Pianoforte, in handsome walnut-wood case, good condition, fine tone, at above moderate price, for cash only.
At OETZMANN'S, 27, Baker-street.

COLLARD PIANO, 30 guineas. Full-compass COTTAGE PIANOFORTE, fine full, rich tone, perfect condition. May be seen at OETZMANN'S, 27, Baker-street (exactly opposite Madame Tussaud's).

ERARD PIANO, 40 guineas, fullest compass of Seven Octaves. Trichord COTTAGE PIANOFORTE, in handsome ebonised and gilt case, fine full, powerful tone. Cash only. At OETZMANN'S, 27, Baker-street.

COLLARD'S IRON BOUDOIR GRAND, Seven Octaves.—One of these charming and unique Short Grands, very nearly new, and of sweet tone, is for SALE, at a considerably reduced price, at OETZMANN'S, 27, Baker-street.

REBUILDING SALE. — The PIANOFORTE HIRE and THREE-YEARS' SYSTEM BUSINESS carried on as usual during the Rebuilding.—THOMAS OETZMANN and CO., 27, Baker-st., opposite Madame Tussaud's

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS' Newly-Patented SOSTENENTE GRAND and UPRIGHT PIANOS have gained the two First Prizes and only Special Mention above all competitors at the Sydney International Exhibition, 1879-80. Lists free.—11, Wigmore-street, London, W.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Please direct all Letters and Orders for
PETER ROBINSON,
SILKMERCER AND LINENDRAPER,
TO THE ONLY ADDRESS,
103 to 108, OXFORD-STREET,
LONDON, W.
(where the Business was established in 1833.)
CASH PRICES. PARCELS FREE.

SILKS AND VELVETS.
Now on Sale. All Patterns free.
The entire Manufacturer's Stock, comprising
RICH BROCADED SILKS, SATINS, and VELVETS, in every variety of colour for the fashionable combination Dresses.

	Per yard.
In all the new shades and mixtures of OLD GOLD, &c., for Promenade Wear. In Delicate Tints, for Evening and Dinner Wear. In White, Ivory, and Cream, for Bridal Wear; also in Black.	3s. 6d. 4s. 6d. 5s. 6d. 6s. 6d.

RICH COLOURED VELVET BROCADES.

In splendid variety of New Shades and Mixtures, for making up with Silk, Satin, or other fabrics	5s. 11d. 6s. 11d. 7s. 6d.

BLACK VELVET BROCADES.

In very handsome designs for Dresses and Mantles, much under price	7s. 6d. to 21s. 0d.
400 Pieces Coloured Satin striped Velvets, in every Shade	3s. 9d.
Italian Silk Velvets in every Shade	4s. 11d., 6s. 9d. to 9s. 9d.
Black Lyons Silk Velvet	9s. 6d. to 21s. 0d.
Coloured Lyons Silk Velvet, in all New Shades	11s. 9d. to 16s. 9d.

PLUSHES AND SATINS.

The New Dress and Mantle Plush, in Black and all New Colours	7s. 6d. to 10s. 9d.
Lyons Dress Silks, in every shade of colour	2s. 11d., 3s. 6d., to 4s. 6d.
Extra Double Warp	5s. 11d.
Rich Duchesse Satin, in Black and all the New Shades, 23 inches wide	8s. 9d.
Silk-faced Satins, in all Shades	2s. 11d. to 3s. 6d.

PETER ROBINSON,
103 to 108, OXFORD-STREET.
Patterns post-free.

WINTER DRESSES.

New Materials in New Colours, Cashmir d'Italie, Grain de Poure, Cachmere de la Reine, Angola Foule, &c. All pure wool, and dyed by the most eminent Paris dyers in Black and every new colour. Prices, the Full Dress, from	Each. 14s. 6d. to 25s. 6d.
Also, in Black and the same colours, several thousand pieces of Cashmere and Cashmere Merinos, very wide	per yard. 2s. 2d. to 3s. 6d.
Estamene, Witney, Devonshire and other All-Wool Serges, in Navy, Dark Brown, Prune, Bronze, Black, &c.	1s. 6d. to 2s. 9d.
Cashmere, Merino, and Cashmere, de Paris, in Rich Colourings, very soft and fine, 44 to 47 inches wide, per yard	2s. 2d., 2s. 6d., 2s. 9d. to 3s. 2d.
Also, Black	1s. 11d. to 3s. 6d.
Rich Velvet-Velveteens, Black, White, and all the new colours in Plain, Striped, and Embossed	1s. 6d. to 4s. 9d.
Also the New Black, as advertised, very wide	2s. 11d. to 5s. 6d.
The New Plush Velveteen, in Black and Colours, 27 in. wide	4s. 9d.

EVENING DRESS MATERIALS.

In Plain and Damassé Grenadines	Per yard. 1s. to 2s. 9d.
Tinsel Gauze in great Variety	6½d. to 1s. 9d.
Rich Japanese Silk in Plain and Damassé, at one price	1s. 11d.
The New Grós Grain Japanese, 22 inches wide	2s. 6d.
Light Shades in Merinos, Cashmere, &c.	Patterns free.

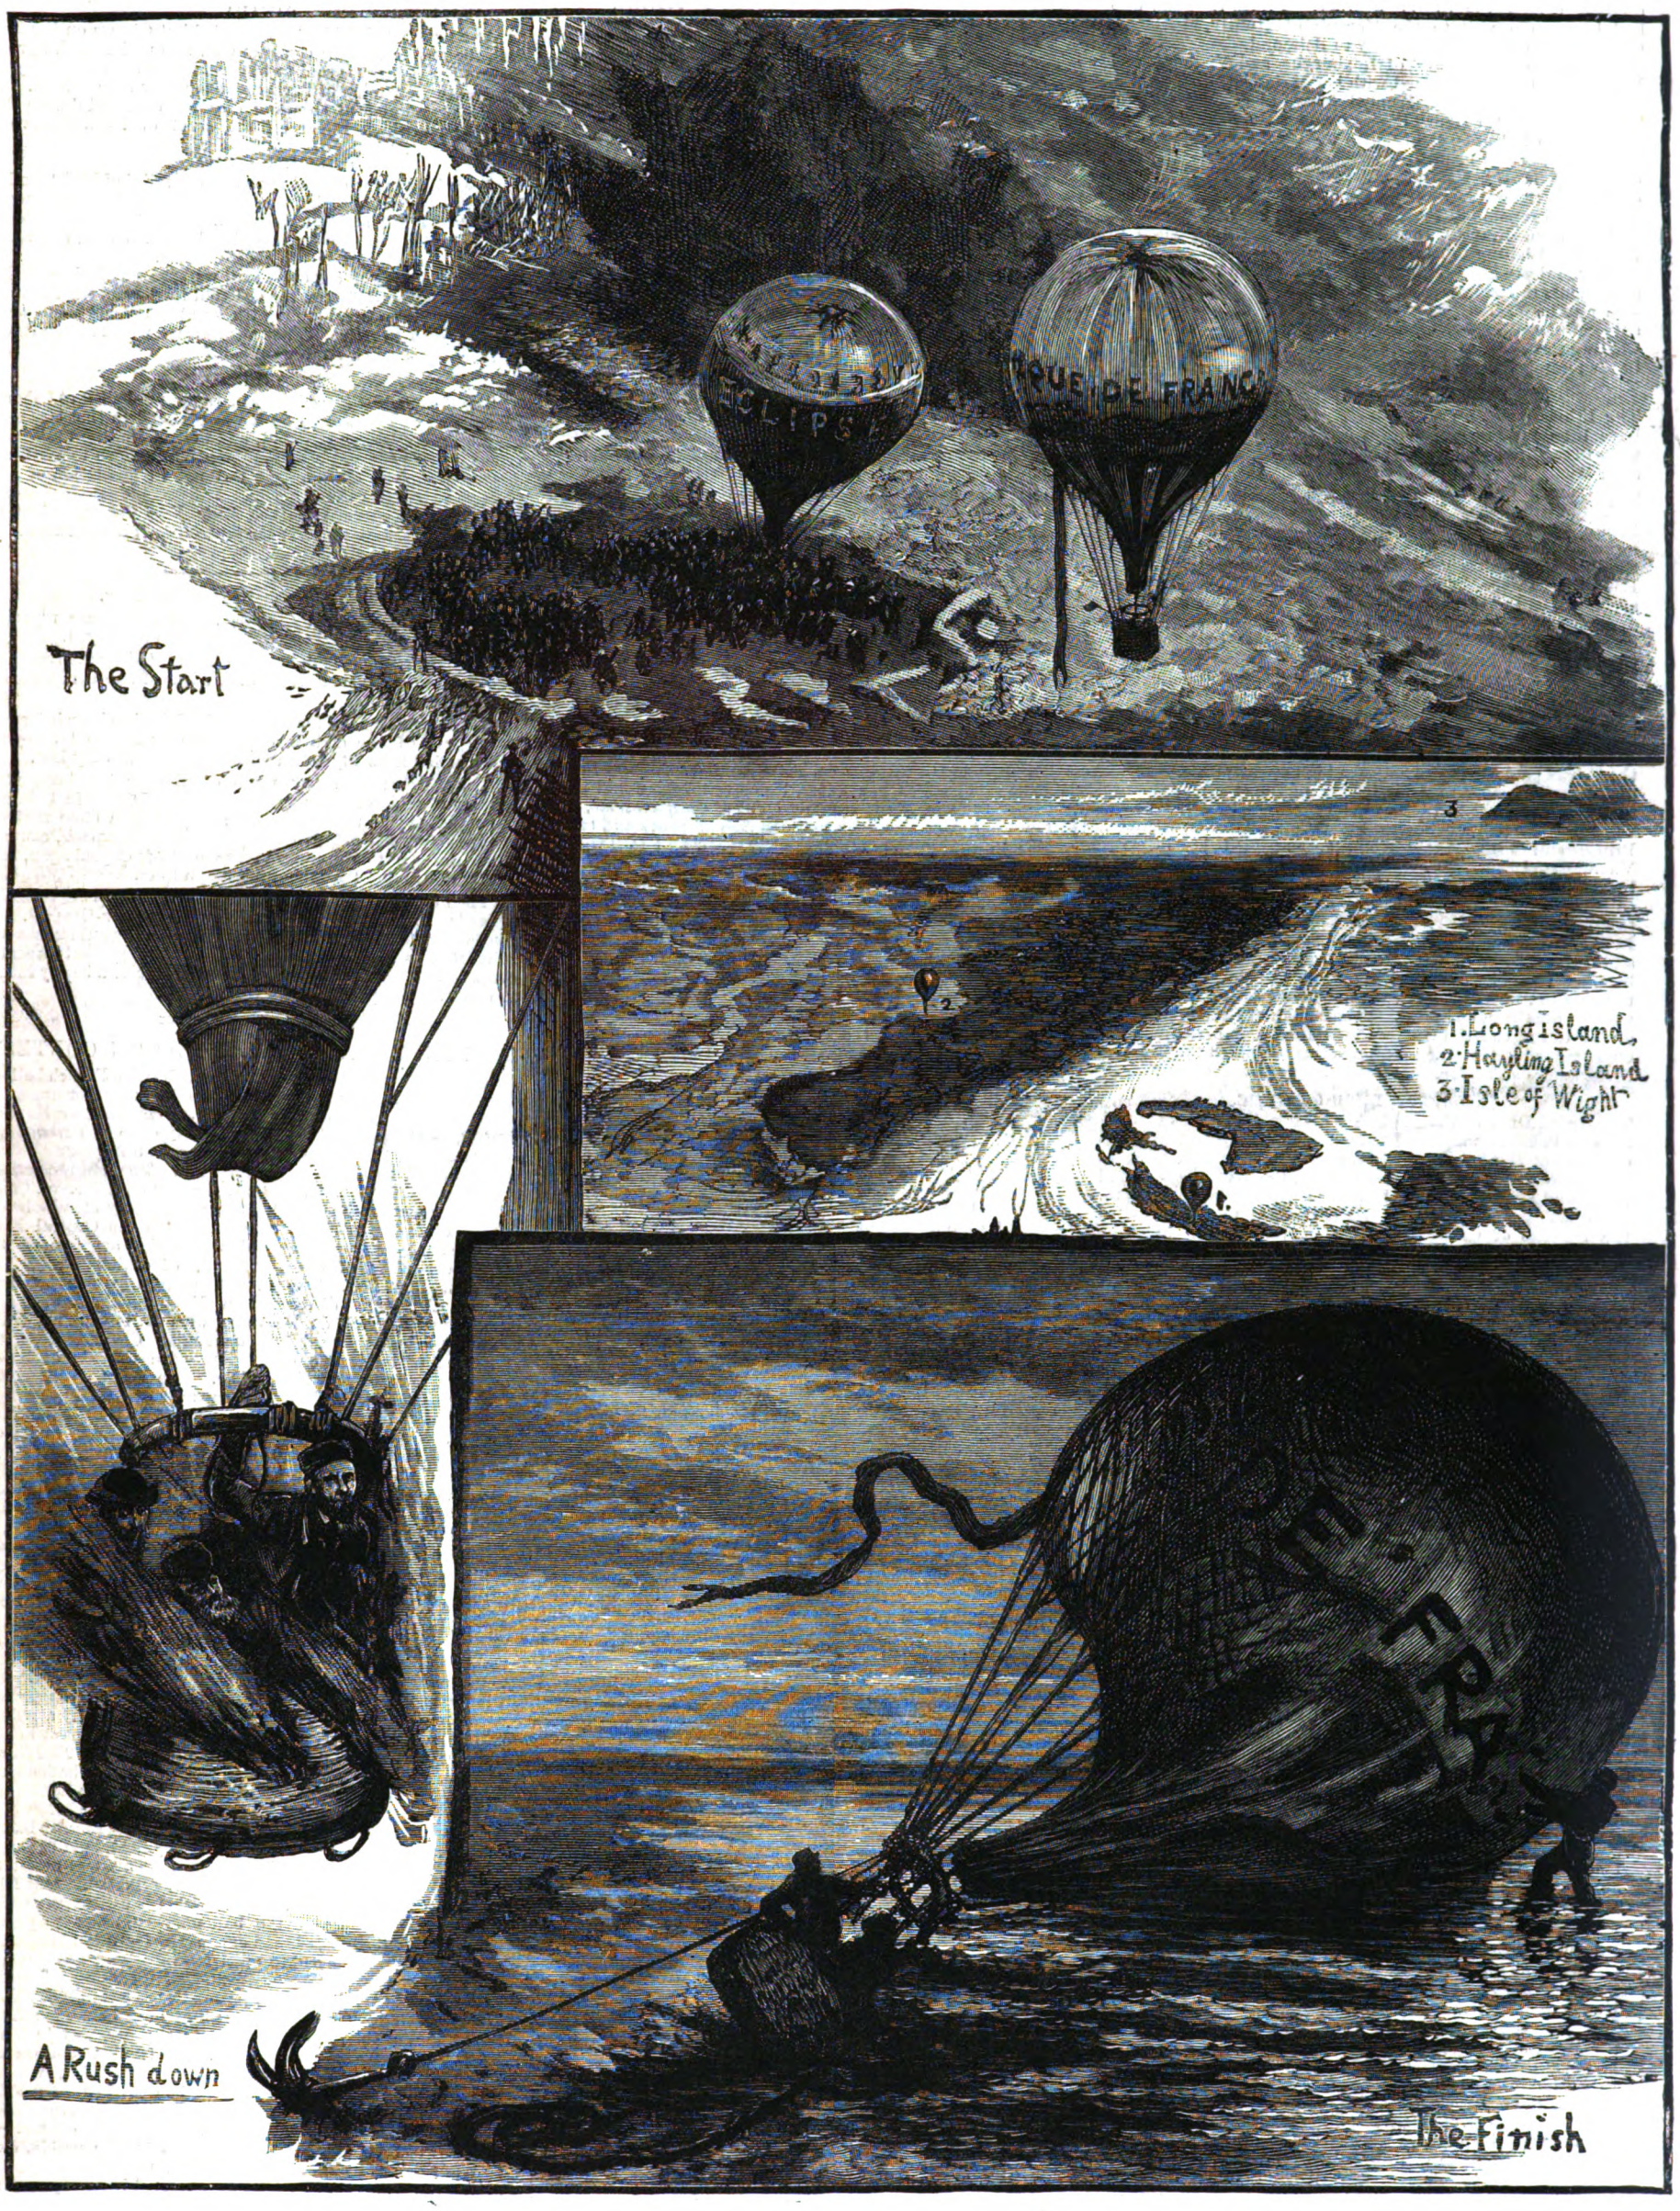
PETER ROBINSON, 103 to 108, Oxford-street.

"LOUIS"
IN ALL THE NEWEST AND MOST FASHIONABLE COLOURS.

"THE QUEEN" of Sept. 11, 1880, says:—
"As this is to be a velvet season, it may be as well to point out some eminently novel features in
LOUIS VELVETEEN,
"LOUIS." now an established favourite for Dresses. The REDS are particularly rich; indeed, so are the many PLUMS and PRUNES, and we have also OLD GOLD (no less than four shades), PEACH, PORCELAIN BLUE, and many DARK GREENS of the WILLOW and MYRTLE tones. The pile, which is both erect and fine, is asserted to be permanently fast.

LE FOLLET says:—
"The Louis Velveteen is a very close and admirably wearing material, with a lustrous silky surface, draping richly and softly, and the brilliant blue light on the folds cannot be surpassed by the best silk velvet. For every purpose to which black velvet can be applied, we can recommend the Louis Velveteen; and a dress of this material would be a most elegant and useful addition to any lady's wardrobe, successfully representing, as it does, a silk velvet at more than four times the cost."
"LOUIS."

THE ENGLISHWOMAN'S DOMESTIC MAGAZINE says:—"This Velveteen costs no more than ordinary velveteen, and is worth at least double, so that purchasers should be sure that it is the Louis Velveteen that they get. It is stamped with the words 'LOUIS VELVETEEN' upon every yard of the fabric."
"LOUIS." Ladies are respectfully informed that on and after this date all Louis Velveteen, both Black and the New Autumn and Winter Colours, have stamped on the back plain instructions for removing all creases, folding-marks, &c., made in conveyance by rail, post, or other causes.



WHOLESALE AGENTS,
who will send on inquiry, post-free, the names of the nearest Drapers from whom the genuine "LOUIS" VELVETEEN can be obtained:—
"LOUIS." J. H. FULLER, 92, Watling-street, London, E.C.
JOHN FREEMAN, 20, Wicklow-street, Dublin.
WILLIAM FIFE, 52, Glassford-street, Glasgow.

INDIAN EMBROIDERY of the most Elegant and Fashionable Designs—viz., Christening Robes, 21s. and 42s. each; Ladies' Handkerchiefs, 35s. and 45s. the half dozen; Babies' Bibs, 20s. the dozen; Children's Frocks, 15s. each; Petticoats, large size, 25s. each; Ladies' Nicktics, 2s. the dozen; Children's Capes, 12s. 6d. each; Narrow Edging, 1s. per yard; Ditto, Wide, 3s. 6d. per yard. The above sent post-free to any address in Great Britain, the United States, and Canada. Remittances to be crossed "Agra Bank," and made payable to J. KENYON and CO., 19, Strand, Calcutta, East Indies.

"THE AMARANT VELVETEEN" supersedes all others for durability and silk-like appearance.
Is not Spotted by RAIN, nor Injured by HEAT.
It is of PERFECT MANUFACTURE and PATENTED FINISH Unfading in Colour, Unequalled in Value, Firm in Pile.
To be had in all Colours and Prices.
Ask for it, and see that the word "AMARANT" is stamped in GOLD on the FACE SELVAGES.
Patterns and Show Cards supplied to the Trade.
RAWSON BROTHERS, Sole Agents,
2, Blue Boar-court, Friday-street, London, E.C.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by GEORGE C. LAKEMAN, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1880.

Digitized by Google

INTERNATIONAL BALLOON-RACE FROM THE CRYSTAL PALACE.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

Digitized by Google

THE COURT.

Since the return of the Queen yesterday week from the Glassalt Shiel, where her Majesty and Princess Beatrice had passed some days at the Royal Lodge, the excursions of the Royal circle have been less extended on Deeside; while at the Glassalt various journeys were made in that romantic district, despite the wintry weather. Prince Leopold, who had been on a visit to the Marquis of Huntly, at Aboyne Castle, returned the previous day to Balmoral.

The Duchess Dowager of Roxburghe and Viscount and Viscountess Dalrymple dined with her Majesty.

On Saturday the Hon. Ismay Fitzroy, Lieutenant-General the Right Hon. Sir Henry Ponsonby, and Mr. Sahl arrived at, and Captain Edwards, R.E., left, the castle.

The Queen and Princess Beatrice attended Divine service on Sunday at Crathie Church. The holy communion was celebrated, the Rev. Archibald Campbell officiating.

Prince Leopold left Balmoral on Monday for Claremont.

The Hon. Frances Drummond has arrived as Maid of Honour in Waiting to the Queen.

Her Majesty has granted to Lady Mountmorres a suite of apartments in Hampton Court Palace.

By order of her Majesty large parcels of old linen for surgical purposes have been sent from Buckingham Palace to Charing Cross, St. George's, the London, and other hospitals in the metropolis.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.

The Prince and Princess of Wales since their return to town have been busy in entertaining their relatives and in paying visits to their personal friends. Their Royal Highnesses shortly after their arrival from the North went to Cliveden, accompanied by Prince John of Glücksburg, and visited the Duke and Duchess of Westminster, with whom they lunched. Prince William of Prussia paid a visit to their Royal Highnesses at Marlborough House upon his arrival from Germany, the Prince returning his visit the same afternoon at the German Embassy. Princesses Louise, Victoria, and Maud of Wales accompanied the Hereditary Grand Duke and Princesses Irene and Alice of Hesse to Madame Tussaud's and to the Aquarium before their cousins' return to the Continent. Last Saturday the Prince and Prince John of Glücksburg went to Windsor for a day's shooting in the Great Park. They were joined by Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein and Prince William of Prussia, and had excellent sport. The Royal party lunched near Cranbourne. In the evening the Prince and Princess and Prince John of Glücksburg went to the Court Theatre, when the Prince paid Madame Modjeska high compliments as to her acting, and expressed his admiration of the excellent manner in which the piece had been put on the stage by Mr. Barratt. Their Royal Highnesses attended Divine service on Sunday. Prince and Princess Christian, accompanied by Princess Victoria, and Princess Caroline Matilda of Holstein-Augustenburg, Prince William of Prussia, and the Duke of Edinburgh, called on the Prince and Princess on Monday, and remained to luncheon. The Prince (Grand Master of the United Grand Lodge of England), accompanied by the Duke of Connaught and Prince John of Glücksburg, was present at a Masonic banquet given by the Lord Mayor at the Mansion House in the evening. The Princess, with the Duchess of Connaught, went to the Strand Theatre. Prince John of Glücksburg paid a visit to Prince and Princess Christian at Cumberland Lodge on Tuesday, and in the evening he accompanied the Princess to St. James's Theatre.

THE GRAND DUKE OF HESSE.

The Grand Duke of Hesse, during his few days' stay at Buckingham Palace, generally dined with the Prince and Princess of Wales at Marlborough House, and also went with them to Her Majesty's Theatre. His children, the Hereditary Grand Duke and Princesses Irene and Alice, paid frequent visits to, and lunched with, their Royal Highnesses; they also visited the Duchess of Cambridge at St. James's Palace and Miss Hildyard at St. Catherine's, Regent's Park. The Prince and the Princesses likewise went to the South Kensington Museum and other places of interest during their stay. Yesterday week the Grand Duke and his family left upon their return to Darmstadt, having dined previously with their Royal Highnesses at Marlborough House, the Prince accompanying them in the evening to Victoria Station, where he took leave. Colonel the Hon. Charles Lindsay attended the Grand Ducal party to Queenborough.

The Duke of Edinburgh, in his capacity of Admiral Superintendent of the Naval Reserves, replying to a letter from Mr. E. Birkbeck, M.P., on the subject of the recent injuries sustained by English fishing-boats on the eastern coast at the hands of Belgian crews, states that a cruiser (cutter) was sent from Harwich to Yarmouth some days since.

Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein went to St. Leonards-on-Sea on Thursday and opened the Hertfordshire Convalescent Home erected at Bopeep, at a cost of £5000, for the accommodation of forty patients. The Earl of Chichester presided at the ceremony. Princess Christian was present on Wednesday morning at the marriage of Captain Holmes, of the Windsor volunteers and librarian of Windsor Castle, and Miss Gee, daughter of Canon Gee, Vicar of Windsor. The ceremony took place at the parish church of St. John, New Windsor.

Sympathising with a charity which ministers to the wants of consumptive patients, the Duke of Connaught, accompanied by the Duchess, laid the foundation-stone of the North London Hospital for Consumption, at Mount Vernon, Hampstead, last Saturday; and the Duchess received purses from ladies and children in aid of the funds of the institution. An address was presented to their Royal Highnesses, and a bouquet was accepted by the Duchess. Bishop Claughton officiated, and a guard of honour of the 3rd Middlesex Rifle Volunteers was in attendance.

Princess Louise of Lorne has been passing the week at Inverary Castle.

The Duke and Duchess of Teck, with their children Princess Mary and Princes Adolphus and Francis, accompanied by the Countess of Hopetoun, visited Dunfermline yesterday week, and inspected the Abbey; and also visited St. Leonard's power-loom works, returning afterwards to Hopetoun. On Tuesday the Duke and Duchess paid a visit to Edinburgh, and went over Holyrood Palace, the Lord Provost and other dignitaries being present to do honour to the Royal visitors. St. Giles's Cathedral was the next object of interest inspected, where the improvements lately carried out through the liberality of ex-Lord Provost Chambers were pointed out. The Parliament House and the divisions of the Court of Session were also gone through. The Duke left Edinburgh for Archerfield, on a visit to Lady Mary Hamilton, and the Duchess returned to Hopetoun House.

Prince William of Prussia, eldest son of the Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Germany, arrived in London on Thursday week from the Continent. His Royal Highness was met at the Charing-cross station by Prince Christian, who accompanied him to the German Embassy, where Prince William dined with Countess Marie Münster, and the next morning left for Cumberland Lodge, where his fiancée, Princess Victoria of Holstein-Augustenburg, is staying with Prince and Princess Christian. The marriage of Prince William and Princess Victoria is arranged to take place the 26th Feb. next.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

ITALY.

Baron Ricasoli, whose name is well known by reason of the prominent part which he took in the consolidation of the kingdom of Italy, died last Saturday night at Broglio. He was born in Tuscany in 1809.

At a reception of former Pontifical functionaries on Sunday at the Vatican, the Pope energetically reaffirmed his right to the temporal power, and described the recent fête in celebration of the entry of the Italian troops into Rome as accursed.

General Garibaldi was on Thursday week waited upon at Genoa by a large deputation of the French colony in that town, and, in reply to an address, said that Italian Democracy was united body and soul to Republican France. Accompanied by his family, General Garibaldi left Genoa last Saturday morning for San Damiano.

SPAIN.

The Queen attended a private thanksgiving mass in the chapel of the Royal Palace at Madrid on the 21st inst. This was her first appearance since her confinement. Her Majesty received a cordial greeting from the large number of distinguished personages who crowded the approaches to the chapel. With an imposing procession, comprising nineteen state carriages, drawn by seventy-four superb horses, and amid enthusiastic manifestations of loyalty on the part of the people, the King and Queen went yesterday week to the Atocha Church to present their infant daughter to the shrine of the Virgin. On Saturday the King and Queen held a reception at the palace, which was attended by representatives of all the great State corporations.

HOLLAND.

The Second Chamber of Parliament on Tuesday rejected, by a majority of forty-one against twenty, the proposal of five members of the clerical fractions for the resumption of capital punishment in the new penal code.

AUSTRIA-HUNGARY.

In the speech with which the Emperor Francis Joseph on Monday opened the Delegations, after referring to the part which his Government had taken in regard to affairs in the East, he said that, as heretofore, his Government would make it their duty to keep the Monarchy out of complications, and will do their utmost for the maintenance of peace and treaty rights; but, under any circumstances, their first task will be the defence of Austro-Hungarian interests.

A Red Book has been published by the Austrian Government, containing diplomatic correspondence with reference to the Eastern Question from the middle of July to the end of August. Among other documents, it includes a copy of the telegram sent by the Austrian Ambassador in London to his own Government, detailing Lord Granville's conception of a Naval Demonstration.

GERMANY.

The Emperor and the Crown Prince, accompanied by Prince Henry, the second son of his Imperial Highness, arrived at Frankfort-on-Main on the 19th inst., and were present in the evening at the opening of the New Opera House. The Royal visitors were everywhere enthusiastically cheered. His Majesty has returned to Berlin.

Count Moltke on Tuesday completed his eightieth year.

Upwards of two hundred members of the German Economical Association met on the 21st inst. at the annual Congress in Berlin. A resolution was passed declaring the extension of the surtaxe d'entrepôt to be an injury to national economy.

DENMARK.

The final accounts of the Budget for the financial year 1879-80 show the total amount of the receipts to have reached forty-seven and a half millions of crowns, or a million and a quarter more than was calculated, while the expenses amounted to forty-four millions of crowns, leaving thus a surplus of three and a half millions of crowns. The balance in hand now amounts to thirty-three millions of crowns, a proof of the wonderfully favourable condition of the finances of this small country.

GREECE.

The Session of the Chamber of Deputies was opened on the 21st inst. by the King in person, who delivered a Speech from the Throne, in which, on the subject of the Turco-Greek frontier, he said that the execution of the decision of the Powers imposed action upon Greece, and that he was firmly resolved to effect, as speedily as possible, the object for which he had made great naval and military preparations.

By ninety-two votes against fifty-five the Chamber yesterday week elected the Opposition candidate as its President. The Ministry, regarding the matter as a Cabinet question, sent in their resignations to the King; and a new Ministry has been formed with M. Coumoundouros as President of the Council and Minister for Foreign Affairs.

A Decree has been issued by the King, ordering the formation of fifty battalions of infantry, each of nine hundred and sixty men. The extraordinary reserves are to number ten thousand men, and their time of service is to be a year and a half.

RUSSIA.

The Berlin correspondent of the Morning Post says that the German Imperial family have received formal notice of the Czar's marriage with the Princess Dolgorouki.

It is stated in a St. Petersburg telegram that the recent indisposition of the Czar was caused by a cold caught while his Majesty was holding a review in the rain, and that he is now completely recovered.

AMERICA.

President Hayes is visiting New Mexico and Arizona.

General Garfield, the Republican candidate for the Presidency, in receiving a deputation of negroes, said that the question of race was one of the most difficult which the country had to deal with. It had already caused a tremendous war; but the problem of slavery would not be solved until the freedmen had an equal chance of securing all the benefits of liberty which the best men of the country purposed giving them.

General Grant presided at a large Republican meeting at Utica on Monday, and in the course of a speech which he delivered on the occasion declared that he took part in the electoral campaign, contrary to his custom, because he could not bear to see the Government transferred to a party composed in great part of the men who had sought to destroy it.

General Grant continues addressing Republican meetings in New York State.

Mr. Sherman, Secretary of the Treasury, spoke at a large Republican meeting on Tuesday.

The Democratic party held a meeting at New York on Tuesday, which was addressed by Generals M'Clellan and Sickles, who subsequently reviewed a torchlight procession, in which 4000 veterans took part.

Mdlle. Sarah Bernhardt arrived at New York on Tuesday night.

The fiery Sioux Chief Sitting Bull has announced his readiness to surrender to the United States Government, with whom he has been for so long at war.

CANADA.

At a protracted Cabinet Council held at Ottawa on the 21st inst. the Pacific Railway contract was, it is understood, agreed to, and the Cabinet is said to be considering the expediency of summoning a Session of Parliament to ratify the contract.

A large number of shipping disasters occurred during the severe gale which raged off the coast of Nova Scotia on Saturday last.

SOUTH AFRICA.

According to the official report of the relief of Mafeteng by Brigadier-General Clarke, the losses on the colonial side were thirty-two killed and ten wounded. The Basutos are said to have occupied the country in Colonel Clarke's rear, and reinforcements are being sent to his assistance.

By the arrival of the Cape mail we have particulars of the first engagement between the Colonial forces and the Basutos. The latter it appears, fought with great pertinacity, but were finally forced to retire. They were armed with modern rifles, and displayed much strategical skill.

INDIA.

The Civil and Military Gazette of India, published at Lahore, reported from Peshawur that it was believed in that city that anarchy was reigning at Cabul, and that, according to general report, the Ameer had been murdered; but, down to Wednesday evening, the Government was not in possession of any positive news upon the subject.

A special telegram from the Daily News Correspondent at Meshed states that there is no foundation for the rumour of an insurrection at Herat.

Mount Vesuvius is showing increased activity.

Fresh depredations by the insurgent Kurds are reported from Teheran. Several villages have been destroyed.

A subsidy of 50,000 dollars has been voted by the Brazilian Legislature for the establishment of a line of steamers between Canada and Brazil.

The Agent-General for New South Wales has been informed by telegram of the arrival in Sydney of the ship La Hogue, which sailed from Plymouth with emigrants in July last.

The weather in many parts of Europe has been very boisterous of late. Yesterday week a hurricane in Calabria was reported; and accounts from Copenhagen state that on Wednesday week a hurricane passed over Denmark, causing much damage to shipping in the port of Copenhagen, and totally destroying the inland telegraph lines.

The Provisional Assembly of Eastern Roumelia was formally opened on Monday by Aleko Pasha, the Governor-General. His Excellency, after announcing that several bills would be shortly submitted to the Assembly, said that the present peaceful condition of the country was the best pledge of a happy future in store for the province.

THE INTERNATIONAL BALLOON CONTEST.

An aeronautic match between an English and a French balloon took place on Thursday week, ascending together from the Crystal Palace, and coming down near Havant, or Hayling Island, on the shore of the Channel to the east of Portsmouth, after a flight of two hours, in order to save being carried down the Channel by a north-easterly wind. The Eclipse balloon was manned by Mr. T. Wright, the aeronaut, Mr. W. Cobb, photographer to the Royal Military Academy at Woolwich, and a literary gentleman connected with the Central Press Association. It was engaged under the auspices of the Balloon Society of Great Britain, of which Mr. H. Le Fevre is President. The French balloon, which belonged to the Académie d'Aërostation Météorologique of Paris, was managed by M. de Fonvielle, with M. Perron, an artist, who were accompanied by Commander Cheyne, R.N., the advocate of an Arctic expedition, with the aid of linked balloons, to reach the North Pole. The French balloon was very much the larger, having a capacity of 42,000 cubic feet, while that of the English balloon was 28,000 ft. The former carried, however, the greater weight, the persons in its car weighing jointly 34 stone, and the apparatus, stores, and instruments 10 cwt., against 30 stone and 6 cwt. in the English balloon car. Among the spectators at the start were Captain Burnaby, Captain Bedford Pim, R.N., Mr. Le Fevre, and several practical aeronauts, Mr. H. Coxwell, Mr. Adams, of Manchester, Mr. Jackson, of Derby, and Mr. Whelan, of Manchester. Sergeant-Major Carthew and assistants, of the Royal Engineers, were posted on the top of the north tower of the Crystal Palace, to take correct observations. Our own Artist, Mr. T. B. Murray, was in the same position to make his Sketch of "the start." There was snow lying on the ground, which rather enhanced the strange effect of the scene; the temperature in the upper air fell to 32 deg. by four o'clock. The wind was from east-north-east, and tolerably strong, which carried the two balloons west-south-west, usually a mile or two from each other. The English balloon kept at heights varying from time to time, but ranging between 2600 ft. and 4200 ft., generally above 3000 ft. The French balloon rose higher, but descended first, at Bedhampton, Long Island, near Havant, where it stuck in the mud of the shore below high-water mark, at a quarter past five o'clock. The English balloon came down five minutes later, in Castney field, land belonging to Mr. J. Hoare, near North Hayling. This was about two miles from where the French balloon alighted. Our Illustration of "the finish" is drawn with the assistance of those who were in the car of the balloon. In order to prevent being carried down the broad expanse of Langston Harbour to the sea, Mr. Wright had to open his valve and discharge his gas for the descent very suddenly. In coming down with extreme rapidity, the balloon passed through clouds of ballast-sand, which it had thrown out not long before; and the appearance of this, to the persons in the car, was just as if the sand were rising around them. The two balloons are to be exhibited at the Royal Aquarium, Westminster, where a series of lectures on ballooning will be delivered. On Friday evening, at a meeting of the Balloon Society of Great Britain, the aeronauts engaged in the international contest gave accounts of their voyages, but it was not found possible, owing to topographical difficulties, to award the prize at present. MM. Perron and De Fonvielle were elected honorary members of the society.

The Police Commissioners have awarded a gratuity of £2 to Police-constable Mooney, who had a severe encounter with burglars at Park Villa, Westcombe Park, Blackheath, on the morning of Monday, the 11th inst. The officer was shot by one of the housebreakers and stunned by a blow from another

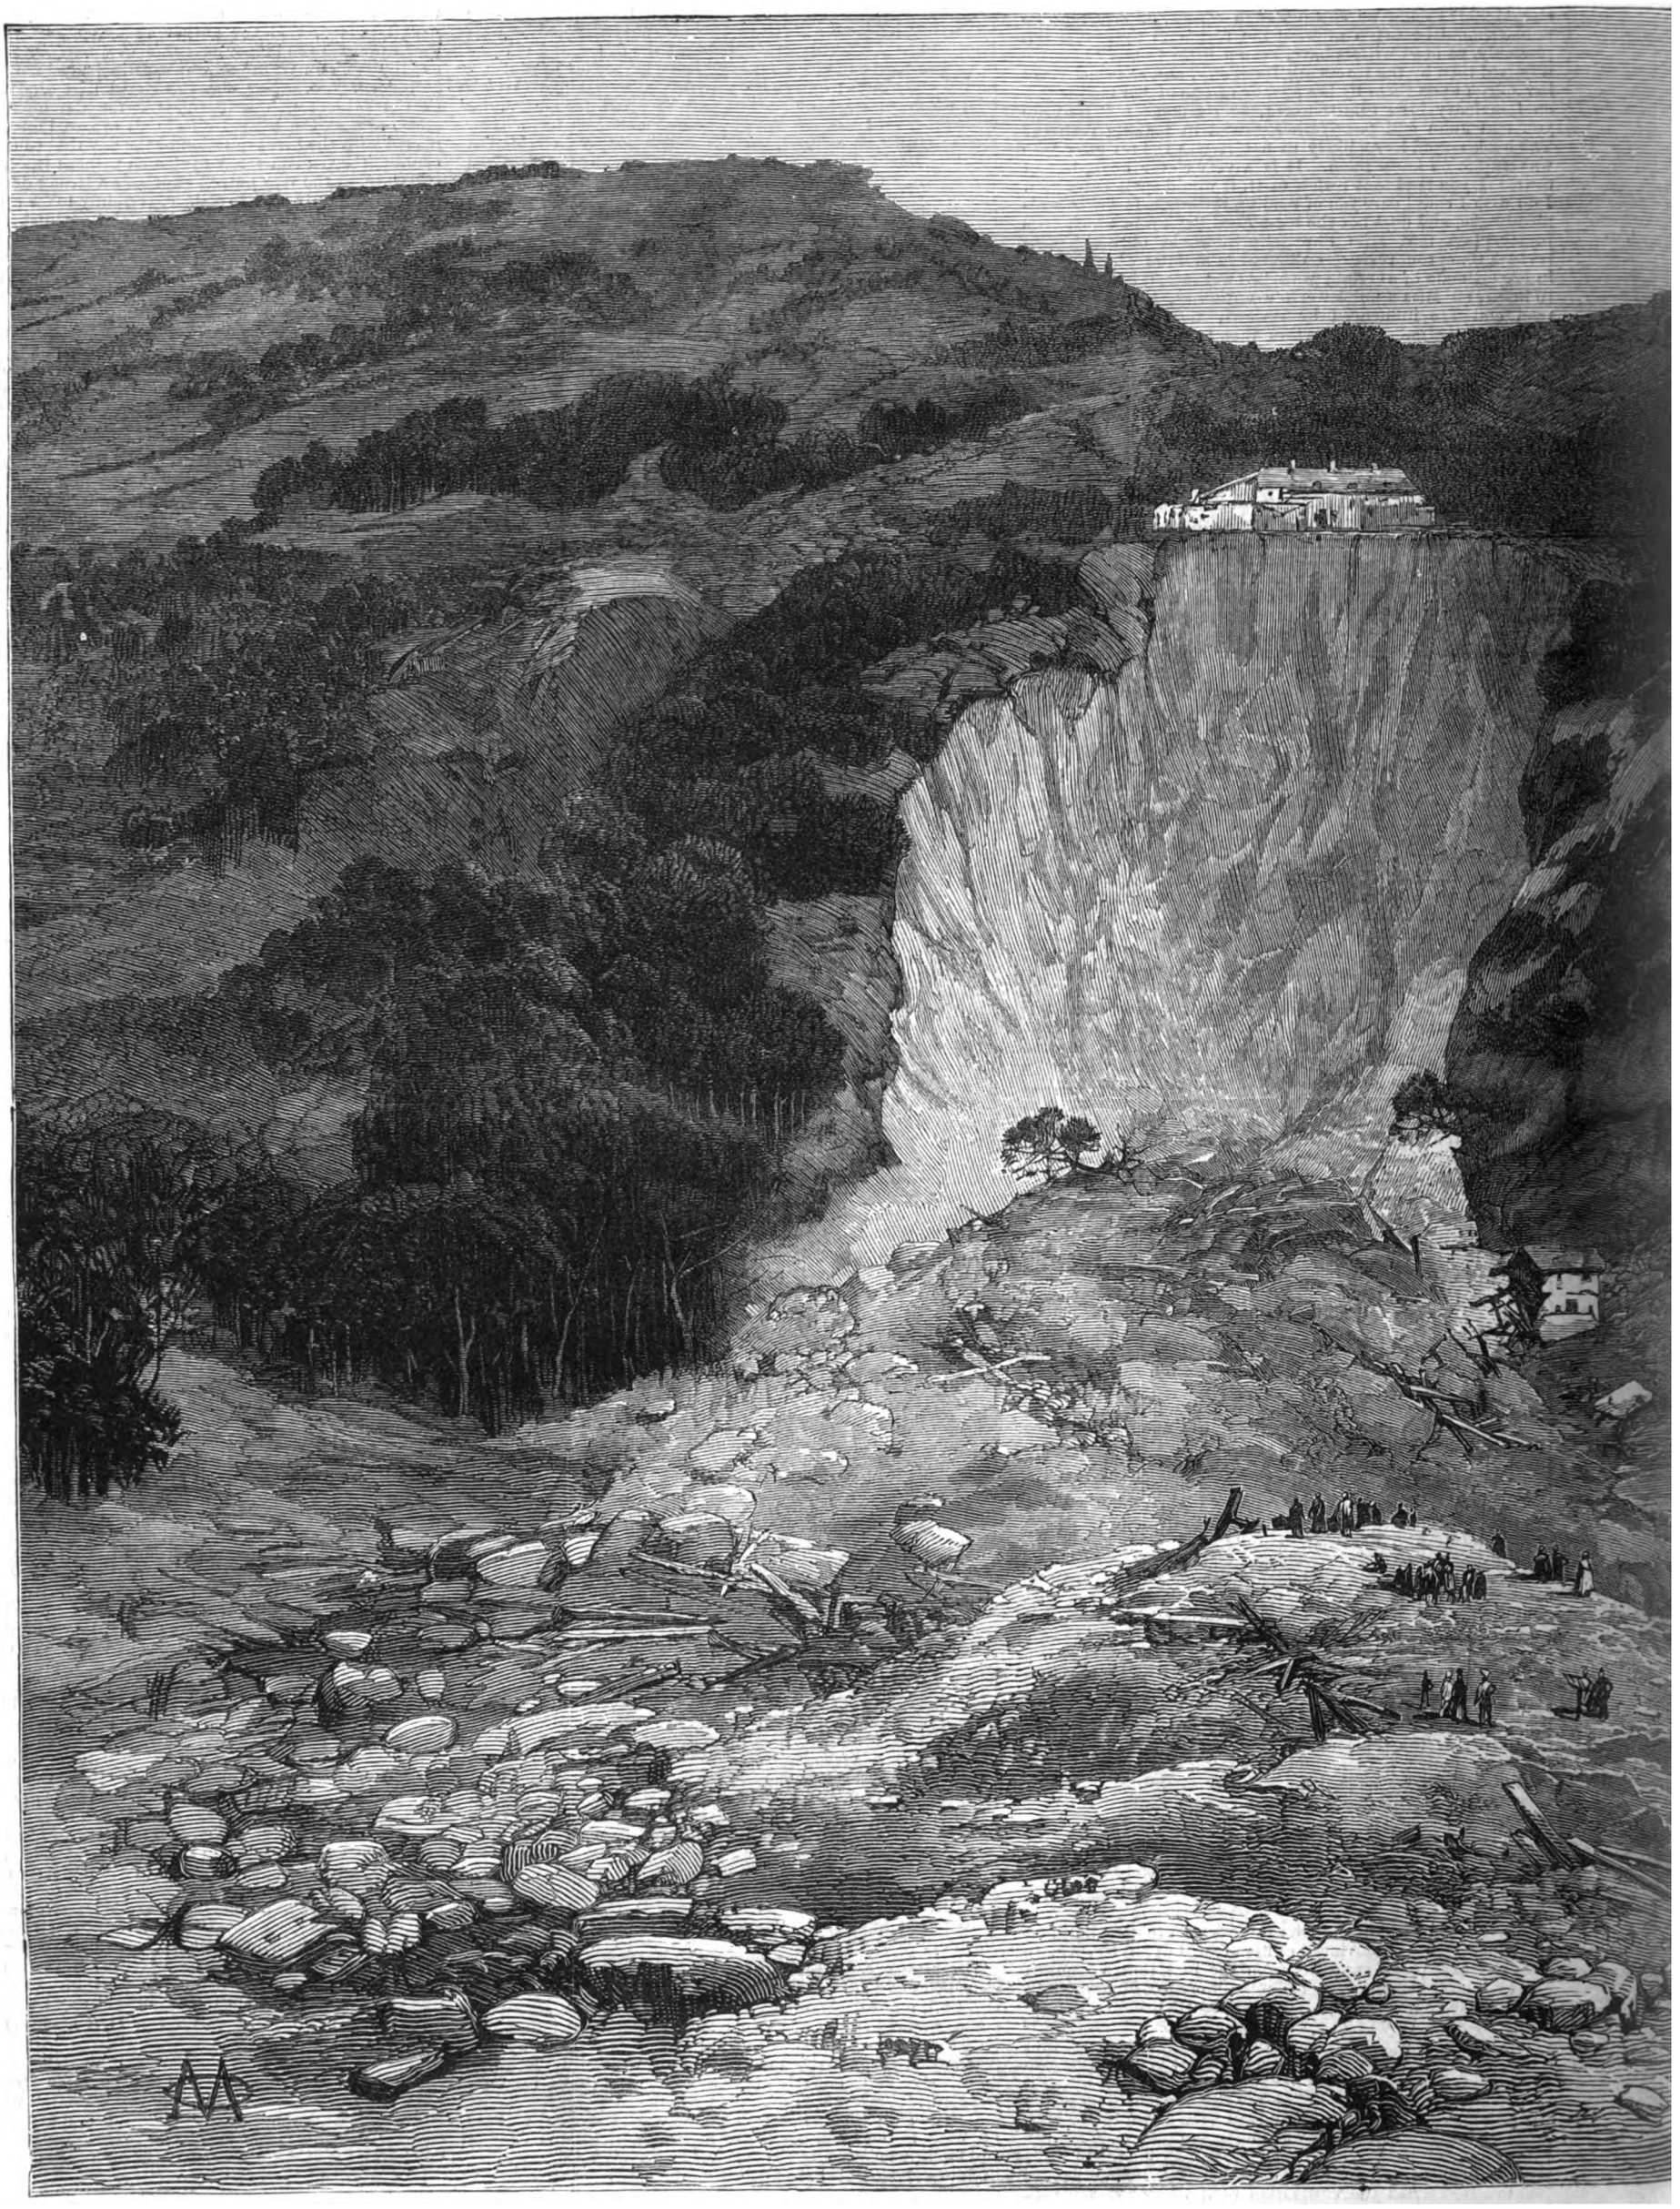
Digitized by Google

NOVELS.

Reviewers are personally interested in The Wellfields: by Jessie Fothergill (Richard Bentley and Son), whether they may have to read it in the way of business or not. The author, who makes it abundantly evident in the course of the three volumes that, in her opinion, severe, uncompromising criticism is not only justifiable and even commendable in the case of painters, musicians, singers, and many other folks, seems to think, so charmingly ingenuous is her disposition, that novelists and story-tellers should be exempt from review, or else that no notice should be taken of what the reviewers say. She has probably, as most writers have, been a little roughly handled now and then by the reveiwing fraternity, and she thus vents her spleen upon them by the agency of one of her characters, an imaginary Miss Shuttleworth, who remarks: "Why do you and John and your father persist in reading reviews? The book stupid! As likely as not it was the reviewer who was stupid. I know them. It is a very clever book, but of course if you read that review of it, it would spoil it for you. I do wish I could cure you of reading reviews. It spoils one's pleasure so, and does not the least good." From which it is pretty plain that Miss Shuttleworth would only object to reviews when the reviewers differed from Miss Shuttleworth in her estimate of a certain work. At any rate, it is satisfactory to know, on Miss Shuttleworth's authority, that people do read and are influenced by reviews, notwithstanding her somewhat contradictory assertion that to read reviews "does not the least good." For, undoubtedly, if the poor reviewer should happen for once to be right in condemning a book as "stupid" and so preventing the readers of his review from undergoing torment or incurring disappointment, it cannot be truthfully affirmed that he "does not the least good." However, as regards the novel under consideration, few reviewers are likely to speak very harshly of it. It is a decidedly readable story, written with considerable force and feeling in many parts; it is seldom or never dull, and the style is remarkable for sprightliness and vivacity. It may not be so clever a tale as "The First Violin" or as "Probation," the author's previously published romances; but it is almost as agreeable as either of them. It is, of course, saturated with German; and, whatever objection may be made on general principles to this saturating process, the objection may be readily answered and even dismissed as unfounded on the ground that nothing could possibly be more effectual for the desirable purpose of intensifying the local colouring and keeping the mixture of foreign and English life and society continually in view. Of inventiveness there is very little, in the plot or the personages or the incidents; but some of the situations, though they have no claim to be considered novel, are invested with a great deal of interest. How a ladies' hero, the irresistible gentleman with the deep eloquent eyes, the elegant figure, and the melodious voice, but with a regard for the main chance, deserted the woman he loved for the woman whose wealth he loved still more, because it would win him back his paternal acres, is really the whole of the story. He came, saw, and conquered in both cases; and in both cases it was chiefly his musical magic, instrumental and vocal, which sealed the victim's fate. In one of the cases there was certainly a rescue also, the musical gentleman displaying an unexpected strength of wrist, great presence of mind, and some readiness of resource, in the stoppage of two runaway ponies; but this is an incident which has so often been turned to account by novelists that it is scarcely worthy of employment any longer as a device for promoting a matrimonial match between the rescued and the rescuer. An insidious Jesuit glides, like a snake, though the story, and performs a part in conformity with the character popularly attributed to his order; but, though the hero and his son and his lands apparently fall at last under the power of the Jesuits, the interest of the tale, whatever may have been the author's intention, derives only very slight support from the way in which the Jesuitical machinations are developed.

Ingenuity is exhibited to a very high degree in that volume of the "Modern Foreign Library," edited by Henri Van Laun, which is entitled A Sheep in Wolf's Clothing, from the French of C. Debans, by Evelyn Jerrold (J. C. Nimmo and Bain); and the ingenuity is even excelled by the romance and pathos. The story has a melodramatic tinge in parts; but it is, on the whole, romantic and touching rather than anything else; startling, indeed, and even horrible here and there, but, given an average amount of credulity on the reader's part, profoundly interesting. Possibly to an English reader the legal proceedings in connection with a criminal charge will appear monstrous and incredible, and the manner in which the hero accomplishes his self-sacrifice utterly impracticable and revolting to common sense; but they manage these things differently in France, it must be remembered. And a more thoroughly French tale, with its mixture of gaiety and misery, recklessness and rectitude, crime and purity, extravagant folly and deep sentiment, improbability and matter of fact, tragic complication and idyllic simplicity, was surely seldom written. The fundamental conception is beautiful; the drunken Bohemian, the wild genius, who might be foremost among successful painters, but prefers to lie in the gutter, a moral wreck at fifty years of age, tracing his ruin in his youth to the wiles of some venal Delilah, and all but reclaimed in his disgraceful prime by his unselfish love for a blameless girl, who cannot love him until he is dead, and for whom he gladly sacrifices both life and fame. And let nobody suppose that the debaucheries of the Bohemian are the burden of the tale and are described in the style which has made French fiction accursed among us English; they are not described at all, beyond an occasional drinking-bout; they are barely hinted at just once or twice, and the moral tone is as wholesome as a breeze from the sea. The central incident, which is believed to have been suggested by a well-known fact, makes a very large demand, nevertheless, upon credulity. There are two brothers, twins, so exactly alike that even the wife of one of them mistakes him for the other, and even denounces him as a scoundrel and probably a murderer. It is true that the circumstances under which she does so are peculiar, and that she is speedily convinced of her error, but not so speedily as might have been expected from the fact that a drunken artist could detect a distinguishing difference of expression between the two, and that a dog persistently declined to have one palmed off upon him for the other. It is humiliating, if not surprising, for us who are of the human race to think that a dog should be a safer witness to identity than a man's own wife, and that a bibulous painter should at a glance discover an identifying and discriminating expression unobserved during years of connubial bliss by a man's own better half. But then a dog is supposed to use another organ than the eye for purposes of identification: and it might be worth while for mankind to cultivate the dog's faculty. The blind are said to have carried the cultivation of it to remarkable perfection. However, to return to the story. One of the twins, who is very poor, with a wife and a pretty daughter on the point of starving in his company, goes to beg for help from the other, who is a bachelor with a good annuity, and who drops down dead of apoplexy at the very moment of the supplication. Now, the annuity would cease, and the surviving twin, having no inheritance to hope for, conceives the bright idea of changing clothes with the dead man, and passing himself off for the annuitant, to save a wife and daughter from beggary. He manages to deceive everybody, except that intelligent dog with the unerring nose, deceiving his wife, his daughter, his friends, his enemies. But, behold, the punishment for his sacrilegious personation at once begins: his wife had excellent reasons for refusing to accept anything from the deceased, and therefore refuses to touch her husband's gifts or to have anything to do with him. Then it becomes suspected that the deceased had committed at least one murder and obtained his money by foul and murderous means; and so the personator finds himself on his trial for murder, with his wife appearing against him, and, for some time, refusing to acknowledge him as her husband. Now the daughter is beloved, in the hopeless way in which a goddess might be loved by a mortal man, by the drunken Bohemian, a painter equal to Zeuxis; and he, to save her father and her family's honour, devotes himself, without her knowledge, to the task of getting himself tried and found guilty of the murder aforesaid. All this part of the story will appear extremely wild and unreal to the English reader; but the closing scene is very naturally, effectively, simply, pathetically described. And throughout the narrative there is a succession of striking and affecting events, hard to realise sometimes, but dramatically and skilfully handled. It is really worth while to read the book, which, though the translation betrays occasional signs of imperfection, is translated with much spirit and quite well enough for the purpose.

Gentlemen who are known to write works of fiction for the sake of propagating certain views concerning political and social subjects are liable to have even their most purposeless novels ransacked for evidence of some didactive design; and, therefore, the two volumes entitled Lisa Lena, by Edward Jenkins (Sampson Low and Co.), will undoubtedly be read, if at all, under a belief that they are intended to inculcate some particular social or political doctrines. The result is likely to be profound disappointment; for it will be impossible for readers with no more than the ordinary powers of seeing into a stone wall to discover from the two volumes what the author's design may have been, if he had any other than the professional novelist's, which, to speak roughly and generally, is to amuse. A number of more or less startling adventures are loosely strung together; some few pleasing and a great many displeasing characters are introduced; several disagreeable topics are discussed, with illustrative examples; the immoral phases of life, especially among circus-riders, their friends and patrons, are dwelt upon and presented in a strong light; and nothing particular comes of it all, unless it be that the writer shows indications of being able, should it seem worth his while, or should he have the time to spare for getting himself into training, to write a really impressive novel in really eloquent and adequate language, without the overstrained, rhapsodical utterances which occasionally disfigure his style. The author—for what reason is, of course, best known to himself—seems to have felt called upon to pay a tribute to the memory of the late Mr. Heenan, the notorious prizefighter, whose heroic encounter with Mr. Sayers will never be forgotten in "fistic" circles or as long as there is a public-house where "Fistiana is kept at the bar," and he goes so far out of his way to pay that tribute that, though the American professor, or at any rate exponent, of the "noble art" has absolutely nothing to do with the course of the story, and might be omitted without the slightest detriment, if not to great advantage, a notable anachronism or parachronism, is boldly confronted for the sake of the introduction. Not that anachronism is of any consequence in a work of fiction, if anything is to be gained thereby; but gratuitous anachronism, totally unnecessary for the development of events, is better avoided, if only because it produces an impression of general carelessness. However, let that pass. The story resolves itself into an autobiography, containing the life and adventures of an American girl, who is supposed to have been born at San Francisco; to have been removed by her parents, people of wealth and position, to Alabama; to have lost her father, and to have been abandoned by her apparently affectionate but by no means admirable, though handsome, mother at the early age of some eight years, towards the close of the American Civil War; to have gone, mere babe as she was, into the service of a sour couple, a farmer and his wife, who endeavoured to instil religious and other principles into her with the help of a leathern strap; to have very naturally, under such circumstances, taken a dislike to religion and all its works; to have run away from her tormentors and from their less hateful successors, and to have ultimately entered upon public life as a "trapezist," like Zazel and others, in which capacity she goes through a great many experiences, such as a comely young woman, who dresses in "tights" and hangs head downwards from a suspended stick, is likely to be exposed to, as writers of fiction have already made known, among vicious professional brethren and equally vicious but wealthier patrons. The way in which she is represented to have been entrapped into a marriage is atrocious, but by no means new; nor is it described with much skill or delicacy. At last the "restless acrobat" escapes from "artistic" life, which, of course, means anything but "proper" life, and becomes a well-behaved, refined, even saintly member of society, so long as her antecedents can be kept concealed, waiting for the still better life of the world to come. Edifying, however, as her end is, her history cannot be regarded as an ensample for her sisters in the acrobatic art; few of them can hope to emerge so miraculously from the overwhelming flood of iniquity, any more than they can hope to possess the spell she exercised over huge mastiffs and savage tigers, or to see such a sight as she saw when the dog Dragon took her part and fought in defence of her life against the vicious horse Jeshurun. This fight is the most original incident in the book, though it is run hard, at any rate as regards credibility, by the fight between Lisa and the tiger; if, indeed, as the tiger might have said, "rixa est ubi tu pulsas, ego vapulo tantùm."

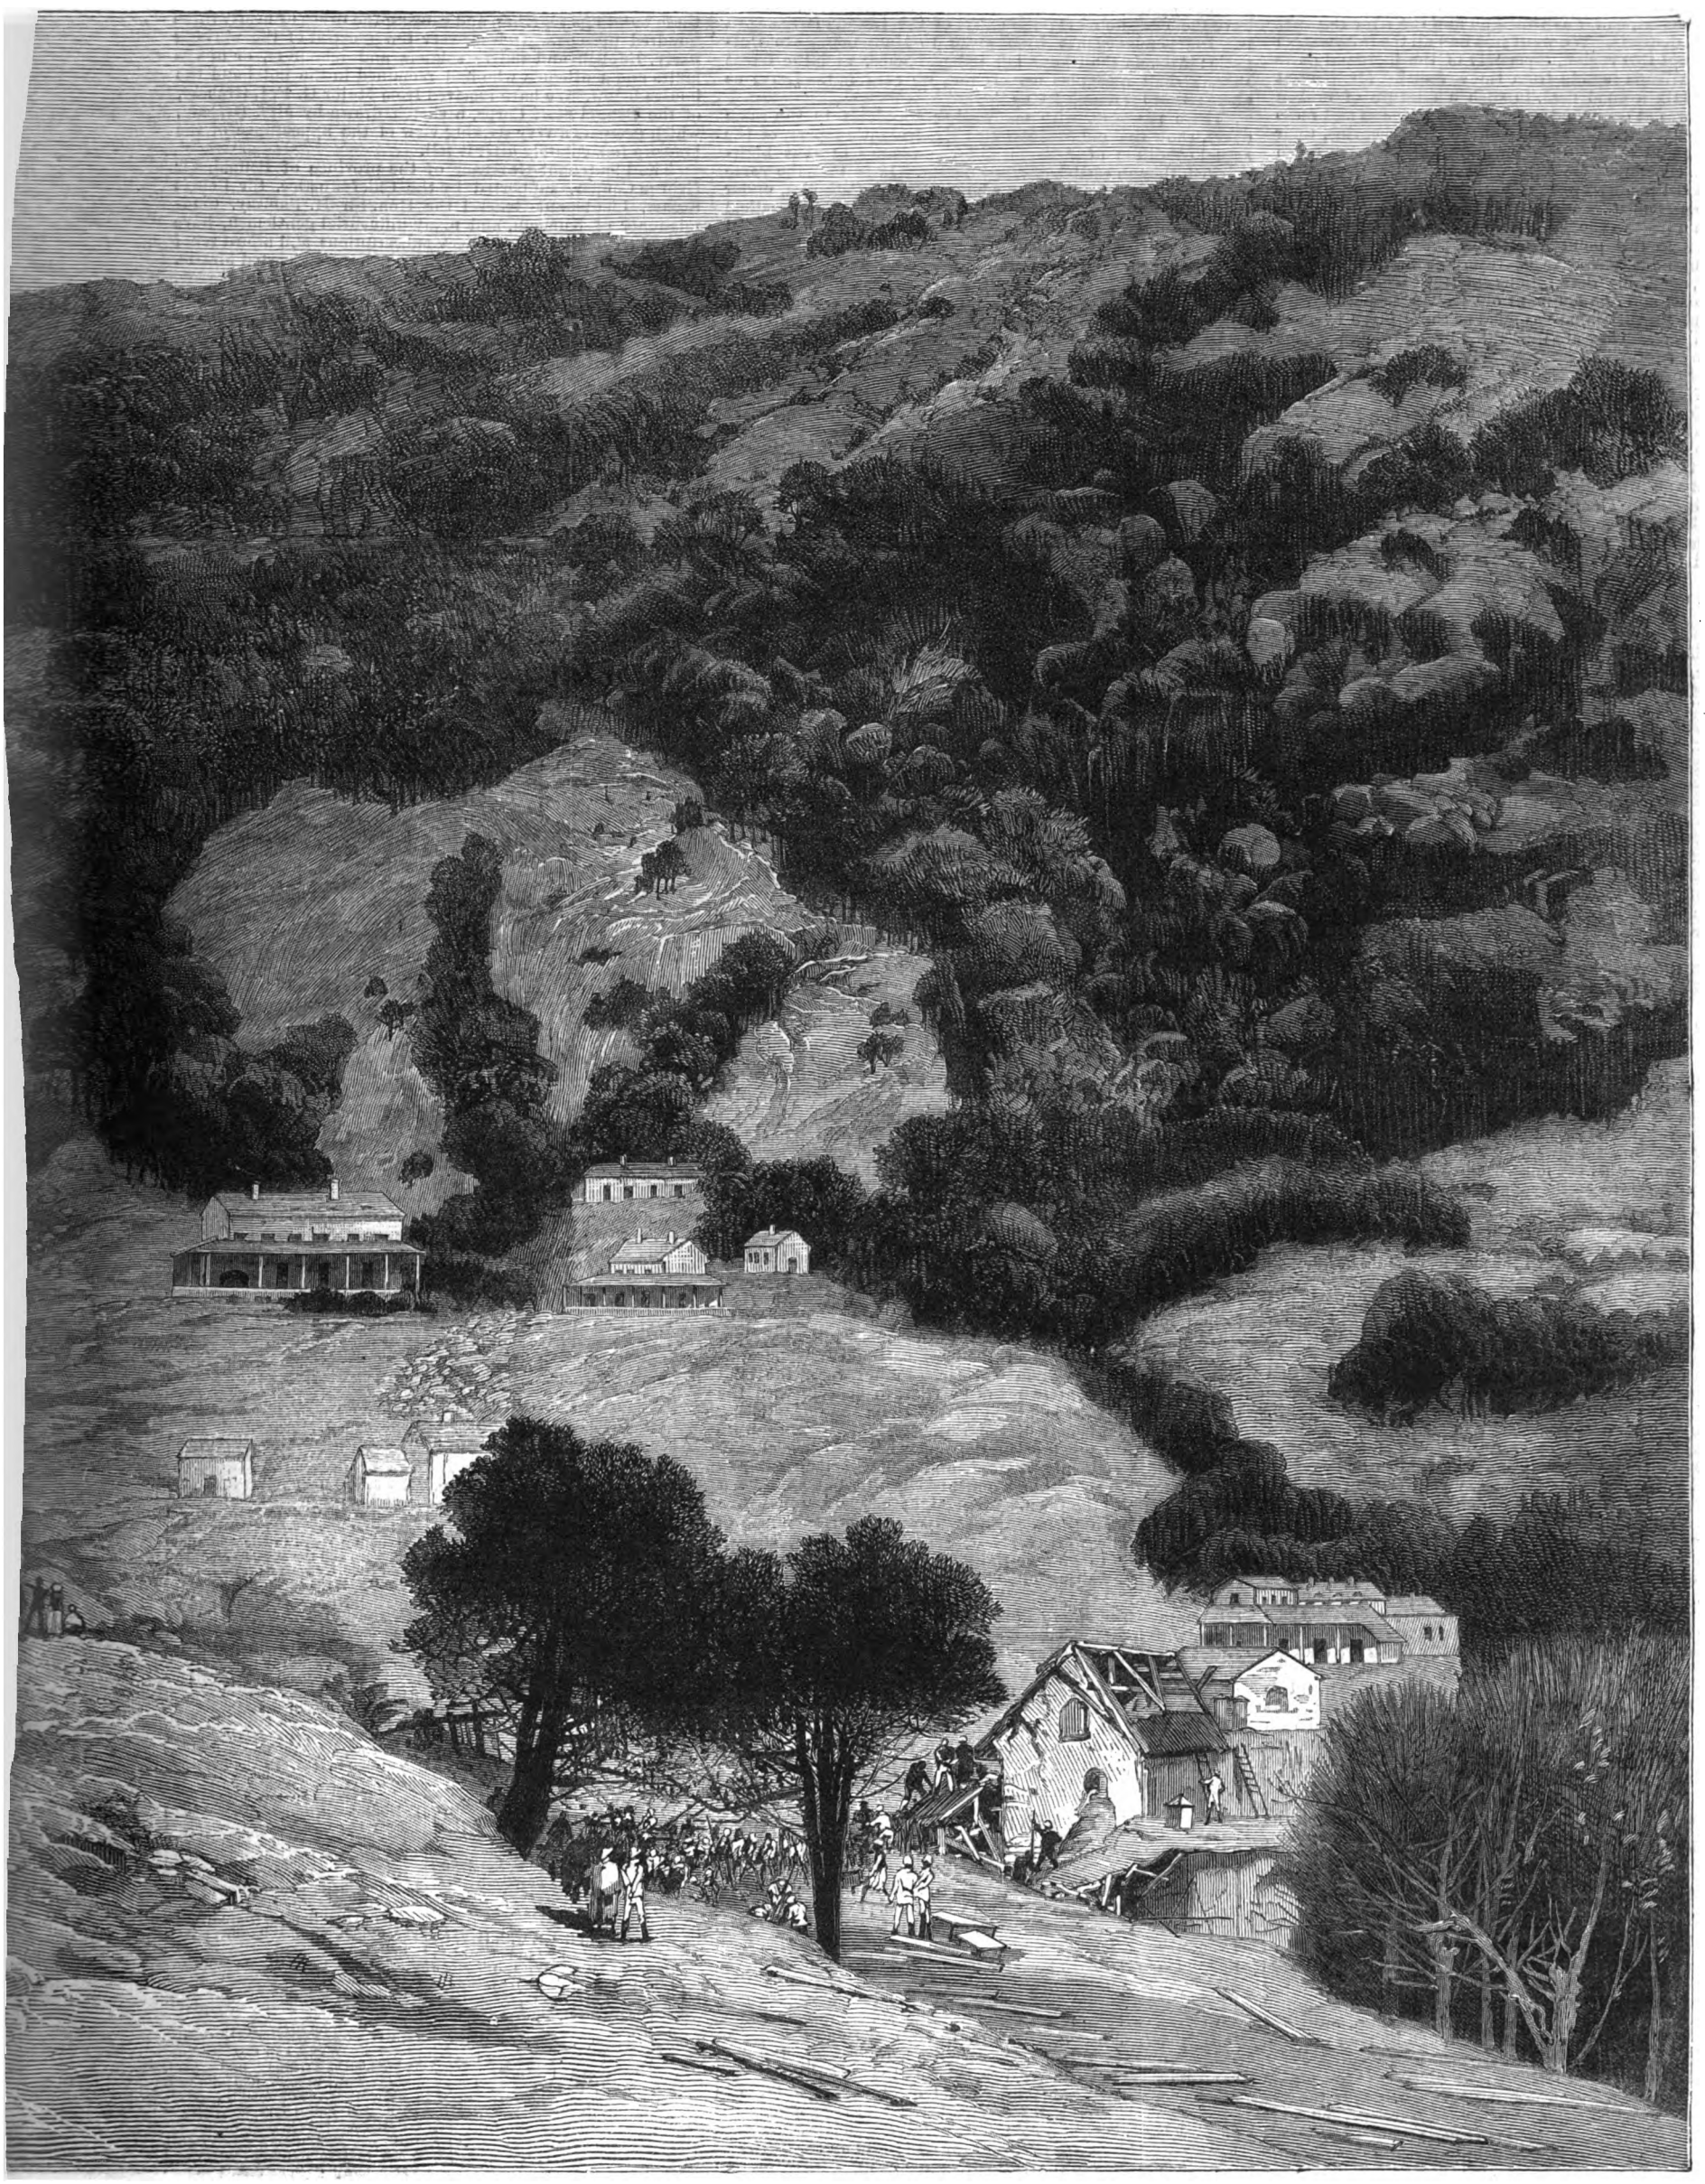


Desultory novels are by no means uncommon, and to that class belongs The Lady Resident, by Hamilton Page (Macmillan and Co.), a novel contained in three volumes overladen with characters and scenes and discourse having little or nothing to do with the main business of the story. In this way the interest is grievously but inevitably weakened, however amusingly and cleverly the extraneous matter may be handled; however lifelike may be the pictures of children and their manners; however true to reality, as well as entertaining, may be the descriptions of the fashion in which affairs are managed at a ladies' college, and of the appearance presented and the lectures delivered by the professors engaged to train the minds of the young ladies. The personage from whom the novel takes its title has not so much to do with the course of events as might have been expected from the prominence assigned to her upon the title-page; and it is scarcely too much to say that she might disappear altogether from the pages without causing the reader to be sensible of an omission; but she is, nevertheless, an excellent conception, consistently worked out, and the mistake whereby she becomes elected to her high position by the managers of the college is one of the best things in the book, a mistake which places the managers, a body of ladies, of whom the more active are the more jealous by reason of age and ugliness, in the vexatious position of finding that they have been misled by a surreptitiously, not to say dishonestly, procured photograph into electing a beautiful creature of six-and-twenty instead of a very different sort of person. It is to be feared, indeed, that the author, though apparently well disposed towards the higher education of women, shows throughout the book an inclination to satirise ladies' management of ladies' colleges. Nor can it be said that the introduction of the subject was necessary for the development of the story, or that the heroine's fortunes are so ingeniously connected with the great question of the day that cause and effect could not be satisfactorily explained without it. The heroine certainly, at the very outset, expresses a strong desire to go to college, certainly goes to college, certainly takes up her abode with "the Lady Resident," and certainly, whilst she is there, makes the acquaintance which is to determine her fate; but the incidents which precede and follow that acquaintance might just as well have happened had there never been any college or any "Lady Resident," and, in fact, are fundamentally the very same that novelists were accustomed to enlist in their service long before there was such a place as a "Ladies' College" or such a person as a "Lady Resident." The novel, therefore, cannot be considered to fulfil the expectation which it seems to hold out at the first commencement; it does not show how a course of training at a "Ladies' College" exercised an influence, for good or evil, upon a young girl's existence, moulding her into some particular type of intellectual, moral, sentimental, and physical phenomenon. Perhaps, however, the very object was to prove that a girl's a girl "for a' that," and that, the "higher education" to the contrary notwithstanding, "it is love that makes the world go round." Indeed, such is the inference to be drawn when we are told that the heroine bears her love-sorrows "just like any other girl who has not been to a college, and has never learnt Latin." But it is clear that, to make the doctrine and example of any value, the heroine should have been placed in situations which to have been to a college and to have learnt Latin had contributed inevitably to bring about, and in which those two conditions would be likely to produce a conflict of feelings. However, let readers determine for themselves whether the novel demonstrates or illustrates anything of the kind; whether the same story might not have been told without a word about colleges, and whether it would not have been much more interesting without the multiplicity of petty details.

According to the most unimpeachable authority, even the divine Homer sometimes nods, and, therefore, if the reader of Just as I Am, by the author of "Lady Audley's Secret" (John and Robert Maxwell), should fail to detect the charm of story-telling for which that author is justly celebrated, there will be more reason for simple regret than for ingenuous wonder. Writers cannot always put together stories in such fashion as to keep readers on the tiptoe of expectation through three long volumes, and in the present instance it is to be feared that the construction is looser than ordinary patience can tolerate, and looseness of construction is especially fatal to interest in the case of a novelist whose great strength lies rather in the clever invention and arrangement of incidents than in profound studies of mankind or in literary composition. The fact is that "Just as I Am" recalls to mind the saying about "three single gentlemen rolled into one." It contains several stories, none very powerful or amusing or touching—connected together, indeed, but so very slightly that they might without much difficulty be separated and published each under its own title instead of the form which it has seemed good to adopt. The murder, too, which is the cardinal incident, is of a kind which, though it may appear very effective to the inexperienced, is likely to strike the veteran novel-reader as a dull, trite, common-place device. If tales are to be founded upon crime, they should have something of novelty and ingenuity to recommend them either in itself or in the mode of treatment. But it can scarcely be said that there is anything new in the conception of a murder committed out a-hunting by a jealous husband of high rank upon one who had been his friend from youth upwards, of a love affair between the children of the murdered man and the murderer, of a contemplated marriage between those children first forbidden, then permitted, and ultimately broken off, and of a tardy confession on the part of the aristocratic murderer when a "common fellow" has already suffered for the deed. Nor is it certain that, upon the present occasion, the ordinary nature of the occurrences is redeemed by extraordinary excellence in the handling. It is true that the poor man who suffers for what he did not do is represented as belonging to that singular class of unhappy beings who, for the sake of a meal and a night's lodging, or from a feeling of blank despair, or from some queer motive influential with queer humanity, make false confession of murders committed years ago, and that so far a certain originality is imparted to the situation. But the main course of the story would have been much the same without any false confession. To discover the murderer—a feat which a keen-scented reader may be expected to accomplish by anticipation very early in the first volume—is undoubtedly the chief business of the novel, and when this is done there is absolutely nothing to detain one over the pages. Yet, strange to say, the title seems to refer to quite a subordinate matter and to a very subordinate personage, though she does finally marry the hero; and the moral of the story, so far as the title and the story bear one upon the other, appears to be the good old doctrine that a lover should marry his lady-love, with all her vulgar relatives in her wake to tax his nerves and plague him direfully. But really, when one sees how many shop-girls seem to be perfectly refined and ladylike in manner and language, it does not appear to be absolutely necessary that the charming girl of a novel who marries "above her" should have a set of relatives steeped in vulgarity; and if novelists would take this view it might tend to smooth the way for many worthy heroes and heroines. One word must be said about the capability displayed both by author and characters to discourse at any length, however great, upon any topic, however small: it amounts almost to genius.

Messrs. Vizetelly and Co., of Southampton-street, Strand, have published a useful little work, entitled "Warnings to Housekeepers," which contains 130 hints and precautions concerning safety, health, and comfort in our dwellings; and near its close is given a long list of works on health and sanitation.

Mr. William Hayward, who was for many years honorary Master of the Carnarvonshire Hounds, has been presented by the subscribers to the hunt with a massive silver centre-piece; and Mrs. Hayward with a diamond suite. Captain Wynn Griffith succeeds Mr. Hayward as master.—Mr. Walter Long resigns the Mastership of the Hambledon Hounds at the end of the season.



Digitized by Google

THE LANDSLIP AT NA

FROM A SKETCH BY MRS

Digitized by Google

II TAL, AFTER THE FALL.

J. GRAHAM.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

Digitized by Google

RECENT TRAVEL IN ALBANIA.

A volume just published by Messrs. Sampson Low and Co. is "Albania, a Narrative of Recent Travel," by Mr. E. F. Knight, Barrister-at-Law, of the Inner Temple. He visited that country about this time last year, accompanied by three friends, whom he calls "Brown, Jones, and Robinson." They spent October and November in rambling about the border region of Montenegro and Albania, and the shores of the Lake of Scutari, as far as Dulcigno and the river Boyana, and the inland districts. We want just now all the information we can get about this region, especially of the highland parts of Northern Albania remote from the seacoast. Mr. Knight contrived to talk a good deal, in such a mixture of broken languages as was at command, with different classes and races of native people. He tells us little of the Montenegrins, their abode, habits, and institutions, beyond what we have often heard or read before. He only went up from Cattaro to Cettinje, stayed a day or two, without calling on Prince Nikita, and descended by Rieka to the Lake of Scutari, which he crossed in a boat to the Albanian or Turkish town of that name. Down to this point his travels present not much of novelty, though his narrative is, from the first, sufficiently entertaining, and his descriptions of the scenery of the Dalmatian coast and of the quaint old Italian seaport towns, now belonging to Austria, are as good as those given by most preceding writers. They are illustrated by six or eight rather effective wood engravings.

Our own Special Artist, Mr. R. C. Woodville, with the co-operation of Mr. Athol Mayhew, our Special Correspondent, has already furnished, as he will continue to do, many Albanian sketches, and notices of the country and people. But we can also recommend Mr. Knight's account of these subjects to the attention of those readers who are desirous of all they can meet with to satisfy an intelligent curiosity aroused by the exciting events of this year. The town of Scutari, which is the capital of the Turkish province, having belonged to the Sultan just 400 years, is "a dingy, dilapidated, bankrupt sort of place." It reminded the author of Cremorne seen by daylight, when its rickety, tumbling edifices, with their broken plaster decorations, mouldy and destitute of paint, had a very shabby appearance. There is an old Venetian fortress on the summit of a lofty rock, but the town stands on a "flat promontory formed by the Boyana, which takes off the waters of the lake to the Adriatic, and another river, which flows into the lake after having crossed the plain between Scutari and the mountains of Biskassi." If the place had an aspect of melancholy decay, the people had a dissipated, unkempt, haggard, and half-starved look, with a savage fierceness in their eyes. "Every man we met, kilted Mussulman or white-clad Arnaut, was armed to the teeth." This is not a strictly correct way of speaking; and Mr. Knight commits the same blunder in other instances, where he applies the name "Arnauts" exclusively to the professedly Christian or non-Mussulman tribes of Albania. It is the name generally given in Turkey to the whole native race of Albania, who call themselves "Skipetars." They are supposed to be identical, as Mr. Knight remarks, with the ancient Pelasgi, and their occupation of the country dates from a period earlier than the commencement of Greek history.

"One cannot be long," he testifies, "among the Arnauts without perceiving that they are evidently of an ancient and noble race, to which the Montenegrin and other Slav races will bear no comparison. The polite manners, the delicacy of perception and tact of these otherwise savage mountaineers are very pleasant. Fierce and cruel as foes, reckless of life, they are yet splendid friends—faithful, knowing not what treachery is; truthful, virtuous; hospitable, jovial companions, abstemious as a rule, yet not disinclined on grand occasions to pass the cheering raki freely round. The men have splendid skulls, lofty and broad brows, and small, delicately-moulded features; the women are the most beautiful in Eastern Europe; the children are lovely—they have large solemn eyes and splendid mouths, slightly turned down at the sides, with a singularly sweet and thoughtful expression. They are supposed to be of a purer race than the modern Greeks, and from the uniformly classic features of the people, I should be inclined to adopt this view."

But this handsome race of people, with many fine moral qualities, have an excessive propensity to the crime of murder. The Christians are just as bad as the Mussulmans in that respect. Mr. Knight tells some remarkably strong stories of homicidal extravagance at Scutari, and of the high social esteem allowed to its exemplary professors, such as "Bektsé Tchotché," or Bekir Kyochi, the greatest bully in that town. It seems to us that the Lieutenant of Turkish gendarmes, though himself a native Scutarine of the Roman Catholic creed, whom Mr. Knight and his companions had met on board the Austrian Lloyd's steamer, was a very questionable local informant. The stories which he told them were scarcely deserving of credit; and they would have done well to eschew his personal introduction to the Albanian notables, whom he charged with such monstrous crimes. We learn also how Nik Leka, the friendly chieftain of the mountains, sheared off a man's head in the bazaar at Scutari. Pride and revenge are the ordinary motives to such ferocious actions, rather than cupidity; for the Skipetars are not commonly robbers, but their tribal and family feuds are endless. We are constantly reminded of what the Scottish Highlanders used to be much less than two hundred years ago; and so probably the Irish and Welsh at a remoter period. It seems that the Turkish Government exercises no civil rule over the Albanians, except in the chief towns. There are a few small military posts, but the Zaptiehs, or police, dare not go into the wilder mountain districts. The Arnauts, both Mohammedans and Catholics, really enjoy a great degree of rude freedom; and the Christians in North Albania, being the stronger and fiercer party, suffer no particular oppression. This is a very different state of things evidently from that which was complained of in Bulgaria and Armenia. It would be a complete misconception to imagine that any part of the population, in this province, are groaning under the tyranny of the Sultan, and longing to be delivered by annexation either to Montenegro, or to Austria, or in the southern region to Greece. Those who confess their need of civilising discipline would tell the foreign visitors that they wish to be placed under English or French Government. But they do not half mean it, and this is a mere form of compliment often used by poor Oriental folk.

The real grievance felt in Albania, we suppose, is the burden of military conscription and war taxation imposed by the late contest with Russia. Local and occasional revolts against the Turkish rule are probably on this account not unfrequent. The formidable Albanian League, however, which came into existence since the Treaty of Berlin, or rather since the Austrian conquest of Bosnia, was inspired by a resolution, in the first place, to defend the integrity of the Albanian territory. As a member of the League at Scutari told Mr. Knight, "The dogs of Montenegro, the Servian and Greek swine, all wish to steal a portion of Albania; but, praise be to Allah! we are strong; the Albanians are brave, and guns and ammunition are not wanting." The latter phase of this patriotic movement, in consequence of the formal consent of Turkey to give up one or another piece of country to Montenegro, has come to be a demand for Albanian political independence. This claim was expressed by the same leader as follows:—"The Turks! what do they do for us? Tax us, rob us—that is all. These effeminate Pashas, these farmers of customs, can they defend us or protect us? No; they have sold us to the cursed Giaours of the Karadagh (Montenegro). I tell you, we will have the Turk no more; the chiefs of the League have sworn it. Independence has been given to Montenegro—to Bulgaria; Albania shall have her independence, and the Great Powers shall recognise us. If not, we care not. Leave us alone; that is enough for us."

These passages, with many other anecdotes to the same effect, show the political drift of Mr. Knight's report of the actual condition of Albania and the temper of that high-spirited though semi-barbarous nation. It is just the same with the "Christian" tribes, who are Roman Catholics, under Italian missionary influences, as with the most fanatical Mohammedans; though the latter are often called "Turks" by their Christian neighbours. They are all equally hostile to the Slavs of the Greek or Orthodox Church; and we are led to believe that a foreign intervention, to force any portion of these Albanian people into a detested union with their hereditary foes, would be attended with the greatest mischief. It is for this reason that the statements made in the volume now before us deserve remark and consideration at the present crisis of affairs.

At the time when Mr. Knight and his companions were in Albania, the national Defence League was assembled at Gusinje, mustering a large armed force, under Ali Bey, to resist the proposed Montenegrin occupation of Gusinje and Plava. The cession of that district, which lies at the head of the Lim valley, on the eastern frontier of Montenegro, had been arranged by the Congress of Berlin. The Turkish Government sent Mahomet Ali to persuade the Albanians, whose League was then sitting at Jakova, that they should allow the cession to be carried out. They answered by killing the Sultan's Chief Commissioner, and by acts of open rebellion. Their attitude was so determined that the European Powers agreed to alter the terms of the Treaty of Berlin, and to substitute for Gusinje and Plava some of the districts lying between Podgoritza and the Lake of Scutari. But this alternative project was not less fiercely opposed by the Clementi and other Catholic tribes, who dwell in the neighbouring mountains, and who would have been deprived by it of the only pasture for their cattle or fields to grow their food. It seems quite evident that, in both instances, the European Conferences had perpetrated enormous blunders, from ignorance of local conditions; and that it would have been grossly unjust, and extremely cruel, to insist upon their decisions. Mr. Knight and one of his travelling friends, whom he calls by the name of "Jones," but whom we are perhaps able to recognise, attempted to get up to Gusinje, while the Albanian League was there. But as they had, just before, visited the Montenegrin head-quarters at Podgoritza, of which the Albanians were informed, it was a somewhat indiscreet attempt. They had already been warned by the British Consul-General, Mr. Kirby Green, that if they went to Podgoritza they must not think of afterwards going to Prisrend, the seat of the Albanian League. But they set off, in Mr. Green's absence, for Gusinje. As was to be expected, they ran no small risk of being put to death as spies. They went up the highlands in company with the Boulim-bashi, or consular agent of the Clementi tribe, and were very hospitably received at Castrati, and at Seltz, the chief hamlet of the Clementi, both by the native chiefs and by the Italian missionaries of the Franciscan Order. All this part of Mr. Knight's narrative has great freshness of interest, with the personal adventures of our two countrymen and descriptions of the wild mountain scenery and life and manners of the Arnaut highlanders. The author and "Jones" were disappointed, however, in their hope of being permitted to enter Gusinje. The Albanian League there, having been apprised of their approach, would not let them come except as hostages, with a pledge that the Montenegrin army should withdraw in three days. The Englishmen, of course, were unable to give this pledge, and had to go back to Scutari, not without some danger of assassination. They had slept in a lonely hut at Gropa, three hours' journey from the Clementi mission-house at Seltz, and two hours from Gusinje. Father John, the kind and merry Piedmontese monk or friar, in concert with the brother of Nik Leka, had been corresponding and negotiating with Ali Bey, on behalf of the English visitors. They were all breakfasting together in the hut, when two armed men from Gusinje suddenly entered, and declared that Ali Bey would see the Englishmen outside Gusinje, but would not admit them into the town. Mr. Knight and Mr. Jones were to go there with them. It was a very suspicious mode of invitation. The worthy priest, speaking in Latin, advised our friends not to go with those fellows, who had a score of their comrades waiting outside, and meant at once to kill our countrymen. "Ille homo," said he, "dixit ad alium, Nunc est tempus intercidere illos homines." They had, in fact, come, with a pretended message from Ali Bey, on purpose to entice the strangers away from the Clementi, and then to slay them. It was fortunate that Father John was present to warn the author and his companion of this treacherous design, and that they refused such a perilous escort. The master of the hut, also, one of the Clementi, stood up manfully to protect his guests, or this story might have had a tragical ending. We are very glad that they got home in safety.

THE NAINI TAL DISASTER.

The terrible catastrophe of Sept. 18 at Naini Tal or Nynee Tal, a favourite place of summer residence in the hills of Kumaon, north of Bareilly, in Northern India, was fully narrated in this Journal several weeks ago. Forty Englishmen and Englishwomen perished, amongst whom were Mr. Leonard Taylor, Assistant Commissioner, Bengal Civil Service; Colonel Taylor, R.E.; Major Morphy, 40th Regiment; Mrs. Morphy, and Mrs. Turnbull; Captain Balderstone, 34th Regiment; Captain H. S. Haynes, R.E.; Captain Goodridge, 35th Native Infantry, Surgeon-Major Hannah, Lieutenants Carmichael, 33rd, and Sullivan, Halkett, and Robinson, 73rd Regiment; the Rev. A. Robinson, Chaplain; Mr. Bell, of Naini Tal; Mr. G. H. Noad, of the police; Mr. W. Morgan, road overseer; and several clerks and assistants in Mr. Bell's shop. It will be remembered that the earth on the side of the steep hill, at the west end of the lake, had been loosened by several days' incessant rain; and on the night of the 17th there was a partial landslip, carrying away a portion of the Victoria Hotel. Nine native servants and one young English child were buried in the ruins. A working party of the Royal Engineers, under the orders of Mr. Leonard Taylor, Assistant Commissioner in charge of the station, helped by several officers and gentlemen, was engaged all the morning, on the 18th, in clearing away the earth and remains of the building, in order to get out the dead bodies. The shop of Messrs. Bell and Sons, a large double-storied building, stood about three hundred yards below the esplanade or terrace where the Victoria Hotel was situated; and seventy yards lower down, on the margin of the lake, were the Assembly Rooms, comprising the library, theatre, ball-room, and other apartments. The second and greater landslip, a few minutes before two in the afternoon, brought down an enormous mass of earth, overwhelming all these buildings together, and causing the death of nearly three hundred persons. Indeed, very few escaped of the working party, English and native soldiers and labourers, or of the ladies and gentlemen who had remained in the hotel and the houses below. We have received from Major G. F. I. Graham, of the Bengal Staff Corps, a sketch drawn by Mrs. Graham, which presents a very striking view of the appearance of the landslip immediately after it fell.

The Lieutenant-Governor of the province of Bengal, Sir George Couper, supported by the Chief Justice, Sir Robert Stuart, Lieutenant-General the Hon. Sir H. Ramsay, Commissioner of Kumaon, and many influential gentlemen, have formed a committee to collect subscriptions and afford relief to the relatives of those killed. They have requested Messrs. Henry S. King and Co., of Cornhill and Pall-mall, and Messrs. Grindlay and Co., of Parliament-street, Indian agents and bankers, to collect subscriptions for the committee at Naini Tal.

Lord Yarborough has made an abatement of 15 per cent to his tenantry from their Michaelmas rent in consideration of the continued depression in agriculture. The Earl of Rosse, Birr Castle, has made a reduction of twenty-five per cent on the current half-year's rents to the distressed portion of his tenantry, and in some cases his Lordship has forgiven all arrears.—The Hon. Mrs. Bingham has given a reduction of forty per cent to the tenants on her North Tipperary estate.

ASTRONOMICAL OCCURRENCES IN NOVEMBER.

(From the Illustrated London Almanack.)

The Moon is near Mars on the 2nd, the day of New Moon; near to both Mercury and Venus on the 4th, to Jupiter in the night hours of the 12th and early morning hours of the 13th, and also in the night hours of the 13th and early morning hours of the 14th. She is near Saturn in the night hours of the 13th and morning hours of the 14th, being situated to the right of the planet, and also in the night hours of the 14th, and morning hours of the 15th, being to the left of the planet. She is nearest the earth on the evening of the 4th, and most distant from it on the evening of the 20th. Her phases or times of change are:—

New Moon	on the	2nd	at 55 min.	after	3h.	in the afternoon.
First Quarter	,,	9th	,, 20	,,	8	,, morning.
Full Moon	,,	16th	,, 39	,,	8	,, afternoon.
Last Quarter	,,	25th	,, 5	,,	2	,, morning.

Mercury sets on the 3rd at 5h. 7m. p.m., on the 8th at 5h. 1m. p.m., on the 13th at 4h. 50m. p.m., on the 18th at 4h. 31m. p.m., and on the 23rd at 4h. 7m. p.m., being 40 minutes, 42 minutes, 39 minutes, 26 minutes, and 8 minutes respectively after sunset on these days. On the 25th he sets at sunset, and after this day he sets in daylight. He rises at sunrise on the 23rd, and at 6h. 35m. a.m., or 1h. 6m. before sunrise, on the 28th. He is at his greatest elongation (23 deg. 14 min.) on the 2nd, near the Moon on the 4th, stationary among the stars on the 13th, in his ascending node on the 21st, in inferior conjunction with the Sun on the 23rd, at his least distance from the Sun on the 25th, and near Mars on the 28th.

Venus is an evening star. She sets on the 6th at 5h. 40m. p.m., or 1h. 18m. after sunset; on the 16th at 5h. 43m. p.m., or 1h. 36m. after sunset; and on the 26th at 5h. 58m. p.m., or 2h. 2m. after the Sun has set. She is near the Moon on the 4th, and at her greatest distance from the Sun on the 14th.

Mars is a morning star, rising on the 6th at 6h. 43m. a.m., or 23 minutes before sunrise; on the 16th at 6h. 43m. a.m., or 39 minutes before sunrise; and on the 26th at 6h. 44m. a.m. or 55 minutes before the Sun. He is due south on the 1st at 11h. 36m. a.m., on the 15th at 11h. 19m. a.m., and on the last day at 11h. 2m. a.m. Is near the Moon on the 2nd, and in descending node on the 26th.

Jupiter sets on the 7th at 3h. 56m. a.m., on the 17th at 3h. 12m. a.m., and on the 27th at 2h. 31m. a.m. He is due south on the 1st at 9h. 58m. p.m., in the middle of the month at 8h. 59m. p.m., and on the last day at 7h. 57m. p.m. He is near the Moon on the 13th.

Saturn sets on the 7th at 5h. 6m. a.m., or 2 hours before sunrise, on the 17th at 4h. 22m. a.m., and on the 27th at 3h. 40m. a.m. He is due south on the 1st at 10h. 48m. p.m., in the middle of the month at 9h. 49m. p.m., and on the last day at 8h. 47m. p.m. He is near the Moon on the 14th.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

BENTLEY AND SON.
Adam and Eve. By Mrs. Parr. 3 vols.

BLACKWOOD AND SONS.
The Organisation of Our Sabbath Schools. By the Rev. D. Miller.

BOGUE.
The Byron Birthday Book. Compiled and Edited by James Burrows.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTITUTE.
Bethlehem to Olivet. A Course of Lessons on the Life of Jesus Christ. By John Palmer.

HODDER AND STOUGHTON.
Health Studies. A Third Course of Lectures Delivered in the Lecture-hall of the Young Men's Christian Association. By Dr. H. Sinclair Paterson.

HURST AND BLACKETT.
An Actor Abroad; or Gossip Dramatic, Narrative and Descriptive, from the Recollections of an Actor in Australia, New Zealand, the Sandwich Islands, California, Nevada, Central America, and New York. By Edmund Leathes.

LONGMANS.
The Early History of Charles James Fox. By G Otto Trevelyan, M.P.
The Angel-Messiah of Buddhists, Essenes, and Christians. By Ernest de Bunsen.
Lays of Ancient Rome, with Ivry and the Armada. By Lord Macaulay. New Edition. With forty-one Illustrations by J. R. Weguelin.

LOW AND CO.
Sarah de Berenger. By Jean Ingelow. 3 vols.
Pretty Peggy, and other Ballads. Illustrated by Rosina Emmet.
Little Britain, The Spectre Bridegroom, and A Legend of Sleepy Hollow. By Washington Irving. Illustrated by Charles O. Murray.
The Naval Brigade in South Africa, during the Years 1877-8-9. By Fleet-Surgeon H. F. Norbury, C.B.
Greece and the Greeks; or, a Historic Sketch of Attic Life and Manners. By the Hon. T. Talbot.

MACMILLAN.
English Men of Letters: Locke. By Thomas Fowler.
The Head of Medusa. By George Fleming. 3 vols.

J. MURRAY.
Japan: Its History, Traditions, and Religions. With the Narrative of a Visit in 1879. By Sir Edward J. Reed, K.C.B. 2 vols. With Map and Illustrations.
Unbeaten Tracks in Japan. An Account of Travels in the Interior, including Visits to the Aborigines of Yezo and the Shrines of Nikkô and Isé. By Miss Isabella L. Bird. 2 vols. With Illustrations.

NISBET AND CO.
The Lonely Island; or, the Refuge of the Mutineers. By R. M. Ballantyne. With Illustrations.

RELIGIOUS TRACT SOCIETY.
My New Toy-Book. Twenty-four Coloured Engravings.
Pictures from the German Fatherland. Drawn with Pen and Pencil. By the Rev. Samuel G. Green.
Words of Friendly Counsel About Turning to God. By the Rev. Geo. Everard.

ROUTLEDGE AND SONS.
Dalziels' Bible Gallery. Illustrations from the Old Testament. From Original Drawings. Engraved by the Brothers Dalziel.

SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, AND CO.
Left to Starve, and No One Wants the Blame. By Mrs. Germains.

SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION.
The Child's Own Magazine. New Series.

TINSLEY BROS.
Stubble Farm; or, Three Generations of English Farmers. By the Author of "Ernest Struggles." 2 vols.
Honor. By Miss Alford. 3 vols.

WARD AND CO.
Tasmanian Friends and Foes, Feathered, Furred, and Finned. By Louisa Anne Meredith. With Coloured Plates and other Illustrations.

WILSON.
Index to Our Railway System and Our Leading Lines: A Comprehensive Analysis of Railway Property, 1879-80. Fourth Number. By William Fleming.

YOUNG ENGLAND OFFICE.
Young England. An Illustrated Magazine for Recreation and Instruction. 1880.

Digitized by Google

FURNISH THROUGHOUT.

SUBSTANTIAL ARTISTIC FURNITURE (Regd.)

OETZMANN & CO.,

HAMPSTEAD-ROAD,

NEAR TOTTENHAM-COURT-ROAD.

FURNISHTHROUGHOUT.—OETZMANN and CO., 67, 69, 71, 73, 77 and 79, HAMPSTEAD-ROAD, near Tottenham-court-road. Cabinet Factory, Albion Works, Drummond-street; Bedding Factory, Eagle-place, London, N.W. CARPETS, Furniture, Bedding, Drapery, Furnishing Ironmongery, China, Glass, Paper Hangings, Pictures, Bronzes, Clocks, Pianos, &c., and every other requisite for completely furnishing a house throughout. Lowest prices consistent with guaranteed quality.—OETZMANN and CO.

EARLY ENGLISH BRACKETS in BLACK and GOLD, or Walnut and Gold, with Decorated Panels, 10s. 6d.; Ebonised Chippendale Hanging Corner Whatnots, with four bevelled plates, 28s. 6d; Richly-Decorated Early English Bracket Girandole, 3 ft. high, with plate-glass back, 42s.; and a large variety of Decorative Furnishing Items on view in the Show-rooms. Illustrations post-free.—OETZMANN and CO.

CARPET DEPARTMENT. — A quantity of ready-made Carpets, in all sizes, made to use up last year's patterns, will be cleared out a bargain. Quotations forwarded per post, without charge, upon receiving size and description required. Large-size Hearthrugs, 4s. 9d. each; Axminster ditto, 8s. 11d. and 12s. 9d.; Best Axminster ditto, 15s. 6d., usual price 21s. Stout Floorcloth, at 9d. per yard. Patent Linoleum Floorcloth and Stairoloth, from 1s. 9d. per yard. Hemp, Dutch Carpet, yard wide, 8d. per yard; Large Kitchen Hearth-rugs, 3s. 3d.; Sheepskin Hearthrugs, from 15s. 9d. upwards; ditto Mats, from 2s.—OETZMANN and CO.

THE NEW "CYPRUS" CURTAINS, 3 yards long by 50 inches wide, 15s. per pair; 3½ yards, 17s. 6d.; 4 yards, 20s.; best Worsted Damask Curtains, in green, crimson, or any self colour, plaited top, bordered with best embroidered silk lace, 3 yards long by 51 inches wide, 25s. per pair; 3½ yards, 30s.; 4 yards, 35s.; best rep ditto, 3 yards by 54 inches wide, 42s.; 3½ yards, 50s.; 4 yards, 57s. 6d. Forwarded same day on receipt of order. One trial will ensure recommendation. No common damasks or rep used, sold, or advised. Descriptive Lists post-free.—OETZMANN and CO.

KITCHEN REQUISITES.—OETZMANN and CO.'S TEN-POUND SET (List No. 2a, page 314 in their "GUIDE TO HOUSE FURNISHING," sent post-free on application) includes Table, Chairs, Clock, &c., with the various Culinary Utensils and requisites, contains all the most useful articles required in every kitchen, each being of superior quality, and is the most practical selection extant. A writer upon domestic matters in "The Queen" Newspaper says of this set:—"Seems very complete and carefully selected with a view to utility and durability."—OETZMANN and CO.

WEDDING PRESENTS, USEFUL and ARTISTIC.—Intending Purchasers should inspect OETZMANN and CO.'S VAST DISPLAY of Elegant Vases, Lustres, Figures, Bronzes, Clocks, Pictures, Cut Glass Decanters, Wines, &c.; Electro-Silver Plate, Table Cutlery, and a large variety of other Useful and Ornamental Articles suitable for Presents.—Descriptive Catalogue post-free.
OETZMANN and CO.

POSTAL ORDER DEPARTMENT. OETZMANN and CO.—Orders sent per post, whether large or small, receive prompt and careful attention. Those residing at a distance, or any to whom a personal visit would be inconvenient, desirous of leaving the selection to the firm, may rely upon a faithful attention to their wishes and interest in the selection. This department is personally supervised by a member of the firm, and O. and Co. continually receive numerous letters expressing the greatest satisfaction with the execution of orders so entrusted. Persons residing in Foreign Countries and the Colonies will find great advantages by entrusting their orders to O. and CO. For further particulars please see page 379 in Catalogue, sent free on application.—OETZMANN and CO.

DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE, post-free.

OETZMANN & CO.,

HAMPSTEAD-ROAD.

ALFRED B. PEARCE, 39, Ludgate-hill, INVITES INSPECTION of all that is new and beautiful in useful and ornamental CHINA and GLASS, including

Dinner Services ("Cottage"), 50 pieces	.. ..	..	20 13 6
Dinner Services for 12 persons (best pieces)	.. ..	..	1 15 0
Gilt China Dessert Services for 12 persons	.. ..	..	0 17 0
Gilt China Tea Services, 40 pieces, 12s.; 28 pieces	.. ..	..	0 8 6
China Breakfast Services for 6 persons	.. ..	..	0 11 0
Toilet Services (for washstands), 6s. 6d., 8s. 6d., and			0 3 9
White Stone Jugs, "The Grecian," set of three	.. ..	..	0 1 3
All really excellent patterns.
Quart Decanters, cut, good quality	.. ..	per pair	0 5 0
Claret Decanters (with handle)	.. ..	.. each	0 4 0
Plain light Claret Glasses, Burgundy shape	..	per doz.	0 6 0
Wine Glasses, plain or cut, Ports and sherries	..	"	0 1 9
Engraved Wine Glasses do do	..	"	0 2 6
Hock Glasses, ruby bowl, 6s. per doz.; green bowl	..	"	0 3 0
Half-pint Cut Tumblers	.. ..	per doz.	0 3 3
Plain light Finger-Glasses, taper shape	.. ..	"	0 0 6

Other articles proportionately cheap.
Descriptive Catalogue post-free.
39, LUDGATE-HILL. Established 1760.

GARDNER'S DINNER and TABLE GLASS SERVICES. Free, graceful, and original designs, of unequalled value. Dinner Services, from 21s. Table Glass Services, of the best Crystal, for twelve persons, complete, 65s. Cash discount, 15 per cent. Coloured Photographic sheets and Illustrated Glass Catalogues post-free.
453 and 454, West Strand, Charing-cross.

NOTICE.—SILVER and ELECTRO PLATE.—ELKINGTON and CO., Manufacturing Silversmiths and Patentees of the Electro-Plate, can at all times Provide Purchasers with every variety of Table and Decorative Plate, Tea and Coffee Services, Salvers, Cruet Frames, Soup Tureens, &c., in Old English, Early English, Queen Anne, Jacobean, Corinthian, and every style of Art, both in Silver and in Electro-Plate. Spoons and Forks of the Old English Rat-Tail Pattern. Drawings and Prices free by post on application.
Address: ELKINGTON and CO.,
22, Regent-street, London; or 42, Moorgate-street, City.

FURNISH YOUR HOUSE at DEANE'S.
Catalogue, with priced Furnishing Estimates, post-free.
1. Table Knives, Ivory, per doz., 13s., 16s., 19s., 24s., 32s., 40s.
2. Electro Forks—Table, 24s. to 64s.; Spoons, 24s. to 96s.
3. Electro Tea and Coffee Sets, Cruets, and Liqueurs.
4. Dish-Covers in Sets—Tin, 22s.; Metal, 65s.; Electro, £11 11s.
5. Fenders—Bright, 45s. to £15; Bronze, 3s. to £6.
6. Baths—Hot and Cold Water, Gas, Travelling, &c.
7. Bedsteads—Brass and Iron, with Bedding.
8. Gaseliers—2-light, 16s.; 3-do., 50s.; 5-do., £4 4s.
9. Kitcheners, from 3 ft., £3; to 6 ft., £33.
10. Kitchen Utensils—Copper, Tin, and Iron.
Deane and Co., 46, King William-st., London Bridge. A.D. 1700.

D. HULETT.—GASELIERS in CRYSTAL GLASS and ORMOLU or BRONZE. Medieval Fittings. A large Stock always on View. Every article marked with plain figures.—Manufactory, 55 and 56, High Holborn.

NOTICE.—GRIME'S SALE OF DUPLEX LAMPS, China, Table Glass, &c., continues for a short time longer. Some great bargains in dinner and other services. A few Duplex Lamps for India and home use.—T. R. GRIMES, 8, New Bond-street, W.

JEWEL ROBBERIES PREVENTED.—J. TANN'S RELIANCE SAFES have never failed to resist the attempts of the most determined burglars. Fire-Resisting Safes, £5 5s. Lists free.—11, Newgate-street, E.C.

RINGS.—The GOLDSMITHS' ALLIANCE, LIMITED, respectfully solicit an inspection of their magnificent and carefully selected Stock of RINGS.

Diamond Half-hoop Rings, from	£7 to £300
Emerald Half-hoop Rings, from	£15 to £40
Ruby Half-hoop Rings, from	£15 to £90
Sapphire Half-hoop Rings, from	£20 to £90
Opal Half-hoop Rings, from	£5 to £50
Pearl Half-hoop Rings, from	£2 to £30
Coral Half-hoop Rings, from	£2 to £30
Turquoise Half-hoop Rings, from	£2 to £20

Single-Stone, Three-Stone, Cluster, and Gipsy Rings of every description, and at various prices, always ready for immediate selection. Drawings and every information forwarded on application.—11 and 12, Cornhill, London.

DIAMONDS.—GOLDSMITHS' ALLIANCE, Limited, 11 and 12, Cornhill, London.—DIAMOND NECKLACES, Bracelets, Brooches, Earrings, Crosses, Lockets, Half-hoop and Single-Stone Rings, &c., in great variety, at fixed net prices for cash.

NOTICE. — For PETER ROBINSON'S Court and General Mourning Warehouse.
"REGENT-STREET" is the only one address.

FAMILY BEREAVEMENTS.
UPON RECEIPT OF LETTER OR TELEGRAM, PETER ROBINSON'S Experienced Dressmakers and Milliners Travel to all parts of the COUNTRY, FREE of EXPENSE to purchasers, with Dresses, Millinery, and a full assortment of made-up Articles of the BEST and most suitable description. Also materials by the Yard, and supplied at the SAME PRICES as if purchased at the Warehouse in Regent-street.
Mourning for Servants at unexceptionably low rates, at a great saving to large or small Families.
Funerals conducted in Town or Country at stated charges.
Address ONLY to 256 to 262, REGENT-STREET, LONDON
PETER ROBINSON'S.

BLACK VELVET-VELVETEENS, new and superior makes, in appearance equal to Silk Velvet, at 2s. 6d., 2s. 11d., and 3s. 6d. Also the guaranteed fast Pile Velvetteens, at 2s. 11d. and up to 5s. 11d. For patterns, please direct only to 256 to 262, Regent-street, PETER ROBINSON'S.

BLACK VELVET-VELVETEEN COSTUMES, at 3 guineas, and up to 7 guineas. BLACK SERGE COSTUMES, from 2 guineas. NEW AUTUMN MATERIAL COSTUMES, from 2 to 7 guineas. Perfectly New Styles. At PETER ROBINSON'S, of REGENT-STREET, Nos. 256 to 262.

EVENING DRESSES.
A New and very Choice Collection for this Season, at 1 guinea and up to 7 guineas. Illustrations and Descriptions, with Patterns, sent on application.
Address only to 256 to 262, Regent-street.
PETER ROBINSON'S.

BLACK SILKS.
DURING THIS MONTH, we shall sell
Messrs. BONNET et CIE. and JAUBERT et CIE. BLACK SILKS at Manufacturers' prices, and Cheaper than they have ever before been supplied.

Bonnet's..	No. 1 Quality,	4s. 3d.	from 1s. 6d. to 4s. per yard under fair value.
..	No. 2 "	5s. 3d.
..	No. 3 "	6s. 0d.
..	No. 4 "	7s. 0d.
Jaubert ..	No. 1 Quality,	3s. 3½d.	from 1s. to 4s. per yard under their fair value.
	No. 2 "	3s. 11d.
	No. 3 "	4s. 9d.
	No. 4 "	5s. 3d.
	No. 5 "	6s. 0d.

To be obtained only at
PETER ROBINSON'S
REGENT-STREET SHOP,
Nos. 256 to 262, Regent-street.
For Patterns please be careful in the address.

NEW FRENCH MILLINERY.
SPECIAL NOVELTIES IN BONNETS, HATS, CAPS, &c., have been imported from Paris.
Our Show-Rooms were never more attractive than now.
Photographs will be sent by return, on application to
PETER ROBINSON, of REGENT-STREET,
Nos. 256 to 262.

JAY'S, REGENT-STREET, W.

ELIZABETHAN MANTLES.—The richest Novelties of the Season. Made of Plush and Brocaded Velvets and Silks, or trimmed with these materials. The Mantles of this class imported from Paris and Berlin are of novel form, and of the richest kind; but there are others of more moderate pretensions and at a cheaper cost.
JAY'S, REGENT-STREET.

NEW SHORT COSTUMES and Graceful DINNER DRESS—Short Dresses.—Messrs. JAY respectfully invite their clientèle to the choice Collection of Pattern Costumes of the newest type of fashion, which have been imported from Paris and Berlin.
JAY'S, REGENT-STREET.

BLACK INDIAN CASHMERE COSTUMES.—The general utility and exquisite draping of Indian Cashmere has made it one of the most fashionable materials for this season's costumes. Messrs. Jay have imported a variety of these costumes, and they are specially recommended for style and good wear.
JAY'S, REGENT-STREET.

PATTERNS FREE.
BLACK VELVETEENS.—Almost equal in appearance to good black velvet. As black velveteen is likely to be much worn during the winter season, Messrs. JAY have had manufactured special qualities of black velveteen, fast colour. These Velveteens are confidently recommended to their customers.
JAY'S, REGENT-STREET.

MOURNING.
Messrs. JAY'S experienced Assistants travel to any part of the Kingdom, free of expense to purchasers. They take with them dresses and millinery, besides materials, all marked in plain figures, and at the same price as if purchased at the Warehouse in Regent-street. Funerals at stated charges conducted in London or country.
JAY'S,
THE LONDON GENERAL MOURNING WAREHOUSE,
REGENT-STREET, W.

THE LONDON GLOVE COMPANY'S GLOVES.

Ladies 2 Button Kid Gloves from	6s. 0d.	per half-dozen.
" 4 " "	8s. 6d.	"
" 6 " "	10s. 6d.	"
Gentlemen's Kid Gloves	6s. 0d.	"

Single Pairs Sold.
Detailed list of all Makes post-free.
THE LONDON GLOVE COMPANY, 45A, Cheapside, E.C.

ARRASENE.
A New Material in Silk and Wool, for Artistic Embroidery.
Can be used also with Crewels and Embroidery Silks.
Can be procured of Berlin Wool Repositories.
Wholesale only, R. G. GEACH, 137, Cheapside.

TO LADIES.—THE SHREWSBURY WATERPROOF TWEED CLOAKS, SKIRTS, and JACKETS, in every variety of shape and colour, are supplied by the original Makers, E. W. and W. PHILLIPS, 37, High-street, Shrewsbury. Patterns and Prices on application.

ULSTER CLOTHS, Sealskins, and other Materials for Ladies' Jackets, at very moderate prices, for ready money only.
CHARLES MEEKING and CO., Woollen Warehouse, Holborn-circus, corner of Hatton-garden, London.

WINTER DRESSES—THE BEST VALUE IN LONDON.—Vecuna Foule Serges, the Fashionable Material for the Season. Price, 8½d. per yard. Patterns free.
JOHN HOOPER, 53, Oxford-street, W.

AEGIDIUS. — The only non-shrinking Flannel Shirt. Warm as wool, soft as silk, and very elastic. Patterns and self-measure free.
R. FORD, 41, Poultry, London.

PRETTY FLOWERS.—Bridal Bouquets, Bridesmaids' Bouquets, Baskets of Flowers, Funeral Wreaths. Prices on application.
WILLIAM HOOPER, 88, Oxford-street, W.

PRATT'S LADIES' BELTS AND ABDOMINAL SUPPORTS ARE CONFIDENTLY RECOMMENDED AS THE MOST COMFORTABLE AND EFFICIENT EVER MADE
Apply to the Ladies' Attendant.
J. F. PRATT,
420, OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.

AN ALARMING DISEASE AFFLICTING A NUMEROUS CLASS.

The disease commences with a slight derangement of the stomach, but, if neglected, it in time involves the whole frame, embracing the kidneys, liver, pancreas, and, in fact, the entire glandular system, and the afflicted drags out a miserable existence, until death gives relief from suffering. The disease is often mistaken for other complaints; but, if the reader will ask himself the following questions, he will be able to determine whether he himself is one of the afflicted: Have I distress, pain, or difficulty in breathing after eating? Is there a dull, heavy feeling, attended by drowsiness? Have the eyes a yellow tinge? Does a thick, sticky mucus gather about the gums and teeth in the mornings, accompanied by a disagreeable taste? Is the tongue coated? Are there pains in the sides and back? Is there a fulness about the right side, as if the liver were enlarging? Is there costiveness? Is there vertigo or dizziness when rising suddenly from a horizontal position? Are the secretions from the kidneys scanty and highly coloured, with a deposit after standing? Does food ferment soon after eating, accompanied by flatulence or a belching of gas from the stomach? Is there frequent palpitation of the heart? These various symptoms may not be present at one time, but they torment the sufferer in turn as the dreadful disease progresses. If the case be one of long standing, there will be a dry hacking cough, attended, after a time, by expectoration. In very advanced stages the skin assumes a dirty brownish appearance, and the hands and feet are covered by a cold, sticky perspiration. As the liver and kidneys become more and more diseased, rheumatic pains appear, and the usual treatment proves entirely unavailing against this latter agonising disorder. It is most important that the disease should be promptly and properly treated in its first stages, when a little medicine will effect a cure, and even when it has obtained a strong hold the true remedy should be persevered in until every vestige of the disease is eradicated, until the appetite has returned, and the digestive organs restored to a healthy condition. This disease is called liver complaint, and the surest and most effectual remedy for this most distressing complaint is "Seigel's Curative Syrup," a vegetable preparation made in America, and sold by A. J. White, Limited, 21, Farringdon-road, London, E.C., and Chemists and Medicine Vendors, at 2s. 6d. and 4s. 6d. per bottle. This syrup strikes at the very foundation of the disease and drives it, root and branch, out of the system.

The following Testimonials prove the efficacy of the Medicine in cases of Dyspepsia, &c.:—

DISORDERED LIVER.

"Prospect House, Bridport, Dorset, Dec. 22, 1879.

"My dear Sir,—I have for years suffered more or less from (to me) an unknown cause, but which from diagnosis I imagined to arise from a disordered liver. Digestion was extremely difficult, and consequently my appetite was much affected. Various medicines (so called) I have repeatedly tried, but failed to derive anything beyond a temporary benefit. I was induced by your agent to give your 'Curative Syrup' a trial, and after taking the contents of one bottle I invested in another, which is yet scarcely finished. I am more than happy to be able to testify to the curative properties of the compound. That languid feeling, which formerly unfitted me for business, I have not since experienced, and, indeed, feel altogether a different being.

"I am, Sir, yours very faithfully,

"A. J. White, Esq." RICHARD ERDON, Journalist."

"Mr. J. Longbotham, Chemist and Druggist, of Chester-le-Street, in the county of Durham, writes, Dec. 19, 1879:—"I should like to have more of your almanacks, with my name printed on them. Please send them as early as possible. We have sold an immense quantity (many dozens) of the Syrup, and the sale is still on the increase; in my long experience (fifty years) I have never known a patent medicine sell so rapidly, and the result so satisfactory."

The attention of readers is directed to the following letter from a highly respectable Chemist at Landport, Hants:—

"323, Commercial-road, Landport, Feb. 9, 1880.

"Dear Sir,—I should say that the sale is increasing very fast. This is the second supply we have had since Christmas, when we ordered half a gross—in fact, we sell more of 'Seigel's Syrup' than any other patent medicine. The secret of the demand is, in my opinion, due to the beneficial effects produced by the medicine. A friend of ours who visits the sick has come across some remarkable cases of cure produced by taking the Syrup.—Yours, very faithfully, W. J. TUCK, Chemist.

"To A. J. White, Esq."

Would it be possible for this gentleman to make such a statement unless his customers really derived benefit?

SEVERE CASE OF RHEUMATISM.

"Cowper-street, California, Ipswich, July 27, 1878.

"Mr. A. J. White.—Dear Sir,—I have much pleasure in informing you that after taking 'Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup' I am quite restored to health, after suffering for four years from the most excruciating pains. At times I could not move in my bed from rheumatism and dropsy; but now, although I am now sixty-three years of age, I am able to work and walk free from pain. I send you this that you may let my fellow-sufferers know the great benefit I have received after taking your valuable medicine. I found great relief after taking for two days, and I am sure no one could have been a greater sufferer than myself.—Yours truly. CHAS. SLATE."

"36, Pitfield-street, Hoxton, London, N., March 24, 1880.

"My dear Sir,—I think if the following case was published in your next issue it might prove of advantage to the public generally. I have sold some hundred bottles of Mother Seigel's most excellent Syrup, but, though well acquainted with its wonderful efficacy in Stomach and Liver Complaints, did not know until a day or two back that in South America it is largely taken for Ague. My informant was Mr. Morris, of 42, Haberdasher-street, Hoxton, N., who came for a bottle, and stated that he and his wife and friends always took 'Mother Seigel's Syrup' when in America for what they call there the Chills and Fever, but what we term Ague. He was very glad to find I sold it, and subsequently returned, in the course of the day, and said that it had the usual effect, and that his wife was already much better. He has been a great traveller, and never knew of so speedy and successful a remedy.—I remain, my dear Sir, yours truly,

"H. W. HORTON, Chemist."

Mr. J. B. Crosby, 22, Fowler-street, South Shields, writes, Nov. 25, 1879:—"I have sold several dozens of your 'Mother Seigel's Syrup.' When parties have come back the second or more times for a fresh supply, I am in the habit of asking them what they think of the medicine, and if it has done them good, and the invariable testimony is that it is a most excellent medicine, and they have derived great benefit from it. Wishing you the success you deserve, I am, yours truly, J. B CROSBY."

NOTE.—No person would buy a second bottle of a worthless medicine, so that the fact of people coming back to Mr. Crosby again and again proves, as he says, that the medicine is excellently adapted to meet the end in view—viz., to relieve sufferers from Dyspepsia and kindred complaints.

Mr. W. C. Hall, Chemist and Mineral Water Manufacturer, Bridge-street, Newark, writing under date of Nov. 27, 1879, says: "Mother Seigel's Syrup has certainly a wonderful effect on the human system. You have certainly not overrated its value. If I did not hear from my customers personally what an efficacious medicine it is, I could not, nor would not, believe it. Although I have sold a large quantity, I have never heard it spoken of other than in terms of praise. If any sufferer writes to me I will certainly give them a satisfactory reply. Make what use of this you like."

"Methley, near Leeds, June 10, 1879.

"Dear Sir,—I suffered from bad Indigestion and Liver Complaint for years, during which time I used various remedies, but all to no purpose. I tried all the medical men, and got no relief. I afterwards went to the Infirmary, but left as 'incurable.' As a last resource, I was induced to try the 'Curative Syrup,' and to my great joy it has almost made a new man of me. I can now do what I had not been able to do for a long time past—viz., I can eat a good dinner without the pain that was formerly caused by it.

"I wish to highly recommend the medicine to suffering humanity, as the best and cheapest in the world.

"I remain, your humble servant. WILLIAM HEWETT."

"Methley, near Leeds."

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

DUC DE MONTEBELLO'S EXTRA CUVEE CHAMPAGNE.—At the competitive tastings recently held at the Wine and Spirit Exhibition in the Agricultural Hall, 20 samples of the leading brands were tasted by 41 members of the Wine Trade, and the above was adjudicated the FINEST. Calculations checked and vouched for by A. B. INGRAM, Chartered Accountant, 2, Gresham-buildings.
This identical Wine, at 70s. per Doz., can be obtained of T. W. STAPLETON and CO., Wine Merchants, 203, Regent-street, W.

GOLD MEDAL, PARIS, 1878.
FRY'S COCOA. FRY'S CARACAS COCOA. A choice prepared Cocoa, most delicious and valuable article."—Standard.

GUARANTEED PURE.
FRY'S COCOA. FRY'S COCOA EXTRACT. Pure Cocoa only, the superfluous oil extracted. J. S. FRY and SONS.

SCHWEITZER'S COCOATINA. Anti-Dyspeptic Cocoa or Chocolate Powder. Guaranteed Pure Soluble Cocoa, with excess of Fat extracted. Four times the strength of Cocoas Thickened yet Weakened with Arrowroot, Starch, &c.
The faculty pronounce it the most nutritious, perfectly digestive Beverage for "BREAKFAST, LUNCHEON, or SUPPER." Keeps in all Climates. Requires no Cooking. A teaspoonful to Breakfast Cup, costing less than a halfpenny. Samples gratis. In Air-Tight Tins, at 1s. 6d., 3s., &c., by Chemists and Grocers. H. SCHWEITZER and CO., 10, Adam-street, London, W.C.

EPPS'S CHOCOLATE ESSENCE. Product of a special refining process, it is Chocolate devoided of its over richness and substantiality. Sugarless, and, when made, of the consistence of coffee. An afternoon Chocolate. Sold only in packets labelled JAMES EPPS and CO., Homœopathic Chemists, 48, Threadneedle-street, London.

"THE BEST SELECTIONS OF THE BEST GROWTHS."
WILLS' CIGARETTES. "DUBEC" (mild). "YENIJEH" (full flavour).
Every Genuine Cigarette bears the name of
W. D. and H. O. WILLS.
Sold by all Principal Dealers.

EXTRAORDINARY TESTIMONIAL. "For 30 years I have tried all the various soaps that have been recommended, and I candidly state that the ALBION MILK and SULPHUR SOAP has no equal in soothing the irritation of the skin."—J. M'Gregor Croft, M.D., M.R.C.P., late Staff Surgeon to her Majesty's Royal Army Hospitals, May 1, 1880. N.B.—Dr. Croft has great pleasure in sending, unasked, his opinion of the Albion Milk and Sulphur Soap.—By all Chemists, in Tablets, 9d. and 1s. Chief Dépôt, 532, Oxford-street London.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON, FOR CONSTIPATION, BILE, HEADACHE.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON, A LAXATIVE AND REFRESHING FRUIT LOZENGE, UNIVERSALLY PRESCRIBED BY THE FACULTY.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON. 2s. 6d. per Box, stamp included. Sold by all Chemists and Druggists. Wholesale—E. GRILLON, 69, Queen-street, London, E.C.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."
CLARKE'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE is warranted to cleanse the Blood from all impurities, from whatever cause arising. For Scrofula, Scurvy, Skin and Blood Diseases, its effects are marvellous. In Bottles, 2s. 6d. each, and in cases, containing six times the quantity, 11s. each, of all Chemists. Sent to any address for 30 or 132 stamps, of the Proprietor, F. J. CLARKE, Chemist, Lincoln.

CONSUMPTION, ANY WASTING DISEASES.
TISSUE PHOSPHATE has been so successfully used in the treatment of Consumption, Chronic Cough, Inflamed Lungs, Debility, Emaciation, Nervous Exhaustion, and all Wasting Diseases, that it is now regarded as a real and positive cure for these complaints. A Pamphlet, descriptive of a large number of cases of which careful notes have been taken in every stage of disease, may be had free on application; and the TISSUE PHOSPHATE SYRUP may be obtained through any Chemist, price 3s. 9d. per Bottle, or carriage-paid, from ANDERSON and CO., 80, Gray's Inn-road, London, on receipt of P.O. order.

COLDS CURED BY DR. DUNBAR'S ALKARAM, or Anti-Catarrh Smelling-Bottle.
ALKARAM. COLDS.
ALKARAM. COLDS.
ALKARAM. COLDS.
IF inhaled on the first symptoms, ALKARAM will at once arrest them, and cure severe cases in half an hour. Sold by all Chemists, 2s. 9d. a Bottle. Address, Dr. Dunbar, care of Messrs. F. Newbery and Sons, 1, King Edward-st., E.C.

THROAT IRRITATION.—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice. For these symptoms use EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES. Glycerine, in these agreeable confections, being in proximity to the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of sucking, becomes actively healing. Sold only in Boxes, 7½d. and 1s. 1½d., labelled "James Epps and Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London." A letter received:—"Gentlemen,—It may, perhaps, interest you to know that, after an extended trial, I have found your Glycerine Jujubes of considerable benefit (with or without medical treatment) in almost all forms of throat disease. They soften and clear the voice. In no case can they do any harm.—Yours faithfully, GORDON HOLMES, L.R.C.P.E., Senior Physician to the Municipal Throat and Ear Infirmary."

THOUSANDS whom Drugs have failed to relieve can be cured without pain by Electrical Treatment as carried out under an able Physician at the Galvanic Establishment, 171, New Bond-street. Opinions of the Press—Court Journal, Morning Post, &c.—Prospectus, and "The Grand Problem of Health: What is Vital Force?" forwarded on application to the Manager.

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES CURE COUGHS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS. Medical testimony states that no other medicine is so effectual in the cure of these dangerous maladies. One lozenge alone gives ease. They contain no opium nor any violent drug. Sold by all Chemists, in Tins, 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d.

THROAT AFFECTIONS, COUGHS, and COLDS are immediately relieved by DR. LOCOCK'S PULMONIC WAFERS. Nothing else gives such a sound, refreshing night's rest. They taste pleasantly.

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT. Purely vegetable, perfectly harmless; will reduce from two to five pounds per week; acts on the food in the stomach, preventing its conversion into fat. Sold by Chemists. Send stamp for pamphlet.—BOTANIC MEDICINE COMPANY, 113, Oxford-street, London, W.C.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.—CONSUMPTION, BRONCHITIS, and ASTHMA. A certain method of cure has been discovered for these distressing complaints by a physician, who is desirous that all sufferers may benefit from this providential discovery. It is beyond all doubt the most remarkable remedy of the age. Full particulars will be sent by post, free of charge.—Address: Mr. WILLIAMS, 10, Oxford-terrace, Hyde Park, London.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT. The Pills purify the blood, correct all disorders of the liver, stomach, kidneys, and bowels. The Ointment is unrivalled in the cure of bad legs, old wounds, gout, and rheumatism.

BLAIR'S GOUT PILLS, THE GREAT REMEDY FOR GOUT AND RHEUMATISM. Sold by all Chemists, at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. per Box.

Digitized by Google

OBITUARY.

LORD SINCLAIR.

The Right Honourable James, Lord Sinclair, in the Peerage of Scotland, whose death is just announced from Constantinople, was born July 3, 1803, the eldest son of Charles St. Clair, of Hermandston, who had his claim to the dormant Barony of Sinclair acknowledged by the House of Lords in 1782. He was educated at Winchester, and was formerly a Captain in the Grenadier Guards. He succeeded his father, Sept. 30, 1863, and was J.P. and D.L. for Berwickshire. His Lordship was also a Representative Peer for Scotland from 1868 till the present year. He married, Sept. 14, 1830, Jane, eldest daughter of Mr. Archibald Little, of Shabden Park, Surrey, by whom he had issue, of which the eldest son, Charles William, Master of Sinclair, Colonel in the Army, succeeds to the Peerage. He was born Sept. 8, 1831, and married, Oct. 6, 1870, Margaret Jane, daughter of Mr. James Murray, of Bryanston-square, by whom he has Archibald James Murray and other issue.

LORD JUSTICE THESIGER.

The Right Hon. Alfred Henry Thesiger, P.C., Q.C., one of the Lords Justices of Appeal, died on the 20th inst., aged forty-two. He was fourth son of Frederick, late Lord Chelmsford, twice Lord Chancellor, by Anna Maria, his wife, youngest daughter and coheir of Mr. William Tinling, and niece of Major Peirson, the heroic defender of Jersey. He was born July 15, 1838, and was educated at Eton, and at Christ Church, Oxford, where he graduated B.A. 1860, and M.A. 1861. The following year he was called to the Bar at the Inner Temple, and in twelve years after was given a silk gown by Lord Selborne. He soon acquired very extensive practice, and few advocates were heard so often in heavy commercial and compensation cases. In 1877 he succeeded Mr. Loch as Attorney-General to the Prince of Wales, and shortly after, in the same year, was appointed, on the retirement of Sir Richard Amphlett, one of the Lords Justices of Appeal. He married, Dec. 31, 1862, Henrietta, second daughter of the Hon. George Handcock, fifth son of Richard, second Lord Castlemaine.

GENERAL LUARD.

General John Kynaston Luard, C.B., died at his residence, Gloucester-gardens, Hyde Park. He was third son of Mr. John Luard, by Charlotte Lucy Kynaston, his wife, and grandnephew of Mr. Peter Robert Luard, of Blyborough, County Lincoln. He entered the Indian army in 1819, and was with the expedition to Ava in 1824. He was subsequently engaged in the China war in 1842, where also he saw much active service. General Luard attained the rank of General in 1870. He received the decoration of C.B. in 1842.

MAJOR-GENERAL LOWE.

Major-General Edward William De Lancey Lowe, C.B., on the 21st inst., at 11, Upper Berkeley-street. He was son of Sir Hudson Lowe, who was in charge of Napoleon at St. Helena. He entered the Army in 1837, and was engaged in the 32nd Regiment at Mooltan and Goojerat. In the Indian Mutiny he commanded that regiment at the defence of Lucknow, for which service he was made a C.B. He became Lieut.-Colonel of the 21st Regiment 1859, the 6th Regiment 1863, and the 87th Regiment 1867. He attained the rank of Major-General in 1868.

We have also to record the deaths of—

Colonel Henry Steinbach, on the 15th inst., at 31, Chepstow-place, Bayswater, in his eighty-first year.

Commander Aaron Stark Symes, R.N., on the 7th ult., at Ballybrack, in the county of Dublin, aged eighty-eight. He was one of the few remaining survivors of the battle of Algiers.

The Rev. Richard Briscoe, D.D., Rector of Nutfield, Surrey, formerly Senior Fellow of Jesus College, Oxford, and Vicar of Whitford, on the 17th inst., in his seventy-third year.

The Rev. J. Rodgers, Vice-Chairman of the London School Board, on Monday evening, at St. Thomas, Charterhouse, School, after a very short illness the immediate cause of death being inflammation of the lungs.

The Rev. William Finch, on the 19th inst., at The Woodlands, Kingston-hill, Surrey. He was elder son of Admiral the Hon. William Clement Finch, and grandson of Heneage, third Earl of Aylesford.

Mr. Joseph Jones, of Abberley Hall, and Pensax Court, Worcestershire, J.P. and D.L., on the 15th inst., at the former seat, near Stourport, aged sixty-three. He served as High Sheriff of Worcestershire 1874.

Captain Charles Alfred Carthew, Deputy-Assistant-Quartermaster-General, Khyber Brigade, on the 12th inst., at Lundikotal, Afghanistan, aged thirty-nine. He was second son of General Carthew, C.B.

Lady Gore (Sarah Rachel), on the 17th inst., at Hampton Court Palace, in her seventy-eighth year. She was the daughter of the Hon. James Fraser, of the Legislative Council of Nova Scotia; and was married, in 1824, to General the Hon. Sir Charles Gore, G.C.B., Lieutenant-Governor of Chelsea Hospital, son of Arthur Saunders, second Earl of Arran, K.P.

Lady Richardson, widow of Sir John Richardson, C.B., M.D., F.R.S., the well-known Arctic navigator and naturalist. Her Ladyship, the daughter of Mr. Archibald Fletcher, of Edinburgh, was married (as his third wife) to Sir John Richardson, and was left a widow in 1865. Sir John had been previously married to a niece of Sir John Franklin.

Charlotte, Lady Jones, widow of Lieutenant-General Sir Harry D. Jones, G.C.B., Colonel Commandant of the Royal Engineers (who died 1866), on the 18th inst., at Bassingbourne Vicarage, Cambridgeshire, aged seventy-four. Lady Jones was daughter of the Rev. Thomas Hornsby, Rector of Hoddesdon. She was married in 1824.

The Rev. John Huyshe, Rector of Clyst-Hydon, Devon, M.A., J.P. He was born in 1800, and educated at Brasenose College, Oxford. Mr. Huyshe was a leading Freemason, formerly Provincial Grand Master of Devon. The family of Huyshe is of great antiquity, and was formerly seated at Doniford, in the county of Somerset.

Lieutenant-Colonel George Michael Keane, late 2nd Regiment, on the 21st inst., at 12, Great Queen-street, Westminster. He was son of Sir John Keane, Bart., of Belmont, in the county of Waterford (so created 1801), by Dorothy, his wife, widow of Mr. Philip Champion Crespigny, of Aldborough, in the county of Suffolk. He married, 1839, Helen Augusta, youngest daughter of Major James Nesbit Jackson, C.B.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All communications relating to this department of the Paper should be addressed to the Editor, and have the word "Chess" written on the envelope.

CH F (Buda Pesth).—The published solution of No. 1909 is correct. What is your special objection to it? When referring to a problem published in this column it is not necessary to send a diagram of the position, the number will suffice.

M M L (Norwich).—Your notation, although it is irregular, is intelligible enough for the purpose; but No. 1913 cannot be solved by way of 1. Q to K 7th (ch). We shall be glad to hear from you again.

N M C (Cork).—The position is inartistic, but it shall be examined and reported upon at an early date.

L S (Staines).—You should look at No. 1913 again. We do not give prizes for solutions. Chess problems are not acrostics.

N R (Freckenham).—Have you not overlooked the check of the Knight at Q 6th? Please to look at the position again.

P A R (Singapore).—We are obliged for the games and the account of the state of chess in the "Settlements." If found suitable, the games shall have early insertion.

A BRAHMIN YOUTH (Cuddapah).—The correction of your problem is noted, and the amended position shall be examined. Your inquiry, "Which is the best book on chess?" is too wide in its scope for a precise answer. It would not be nearly so difficult, although probably less safe, to tell you which is the worst.

UPENDRANATH MAITRA (Calcutta).—The key-move of the problem quoted for identification in our issue of Aug. 7 is 1. Q to Q Kt 8th. Your solution of No. 1906 agrees with the author's, and that of No. 1907 will "serve."

LINCOPENSIS (Sweden).—When the conditions of a chess problem are stated "White to play and mate in three (3) moves," it is understood that the solution must be effected against the best defence, and that the best defence is that which prolongs the struggle between Black and White. Your solution of No. 1910 is correct; the others are acknowledged in the usual place.

VA (U.S.A.).—Your analyses of Nos. 1906 and 1907 are accurate and interesting, and they have been forwarded to the respective authors. Nos. 1909 and 1910 are correct.

F F B (Plymouth).—Thanks for note and inclosure. The problem appears below, and we shall be glad to hear from you again.

D F (Leeds).—Both are good, and shall have early attention.

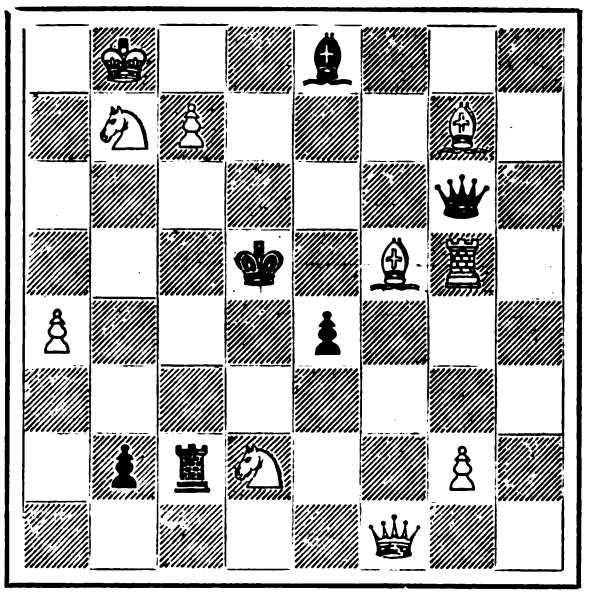
CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1911 received from T Letchford, P S Shenele, E Louden, Lincopensis (Sweden), and W J Eggleston.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1912 received from P S Shenele, H W Hill, Emile Frau, W J Eggleston, and W M Curtis.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 1913 received from H B, T Letchford, East Marden, Shadforth, Julia Short, Alpha, Cant, Ellen Leigeive, C Darragh, G Fosbrooke, C C E, H Brewster, Ben Nevis, One of Them, A Kentish Man, E Elsbury, R Jessop, H Langford, Helen Lee, H Blacklock, R E Turner, S Farrant, T Barrington, D W Kell, R Oswald, W Warren, B L Dyke, T Greenbank, C S Coxe, L Sharswood, Elsie, N Cator, Chesophile, D Templeton, R Ingersoll, An Old Hand, F R Jeffrey, G L Mayne, Walter W, T Kenny (Dublin), S Stripe, E Louden, P S Shenele, Glymm Grylls, Semaj, E P Vulliamy, H Horsfall, Emile Frau, W Hoskins, Hereward, James Dobron, W Biddle, Dr F St, R B Duff, N M, Zigzag, J Tucker, Theodor Willink, W M Curtis, Lulu, C W Dempsey, Jessie Macdonald, Hampsteadian, W J Eggleston, A C (Abergavenny), W J E (Birmingham), G Parker, E L G, and Ernest Sharswood.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS of Mr. Taylor's problem received from T Letchford, East Marden, E Elsbury, H Blacklock, D W Kell, R Oswald, T Greenbank, C S Coxe, L Sharswood, Ernest Sharswood, An Old Hand, F R Jeffrey, T Milner, Quince and Quinsey, Rumbelow, and G L Mayne.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 1912.



WHITE.	BLACK.
1. K to B 7th	K to K 3rd
2. Q to K 4th (ch)	K takes Q
3. Kt mates.

NOTE.—The foregoing is the author's intended solution, but nearly all our solvers point out that it can be defeated by Black playing 1. K to K 2nd. The author proposes to correct it by removing the Black K R P and placing it at his K Kt 2nd, and placing a White Pawn at K R 5th.

PROBLEM No. 1915.

By FRIDESWIDE F. BEECHEY.

BLACK.

WHITE.

White to play, and mate in two moves.

Game played between Mr. BLACKBURNE and Mr. E.—(Vienna Opening).

WHITE (Mr. B.)	BLACK (Mr. E.)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th
2. Kt to Q B 3rd	Kt to Q B 3rd
3. P to K B 4th	B to B 4th
4. Kt to K B 3rd	P to Q 3rd
5. B to Kt 5th	P to Q B 3rd

An oversight, it may be presumed, since it leads to the loss of a valuable Pawn for a very feeble attack. The right move is 5. B to K Kt 5th.

6. B takes Kt	P takes B
7. P takes P	P takes P
8. Kt takes P	Q to Q 5th
9. Kt to Q 3rd	B to Kt 3rd
10. Q to B 3rd	Kt to B 3rd
11. Kt to B 2nd	B to K 3rd
12. P to Q 3rd	Castles (K R)
13. Q Kt to Q sq	Q R to Q sq
14. B to Kt 5th	Q to B 4th
15. B takes Kt	P takes B
16. P to B 3rd	Q to K Kt 4th
17. Castles	B to Kt 5th
18. Q to Kt 3rd	B to K 7th
19. Q takes Q	P takes Q
20. R to K sq	B takes P

Black has recovered his Pawn, but his position is, for all that, far from satisfactory.

21. K to R sq	B to B 5th
22. P to Q Kt 3rd	B to K 3rd
23. R to K 2nd	R to Q 2nd
24. Kt to K 3rd	B takes Kt
25. R takes B	R to Q 7th
26. K to Kt sq	P to K B 4th
27. K to B sq	P to B 5th

27. P takes P seems the best move here.

28. R to Q 3rd	R to Q sq
29. R takes R (ch)	R takes R
30. R to Q sq	R takes R (ch)
31. Kt takes R	B to B 2nd
32. P to Q B 4th	B to Kt 3rd
33. Kt to B 3rd	K to B 2nd
34. P to Q Kt 4th	K to K 3rd
35. P to Kt 5th	R P takes P
36. P takes P	B to K sq

It is not apparent that Black would gain anything by 36. P takes P, for then follows 37. Kt takes P, and if 37. B takes P, then 38. Kt takes P (ch), &c. We should have been inclined to pursue that course notwithstanding.

37. P to Q R 4th	P to K R 4th
38. P takes P	B takes P
39. K to B 2nd	B to Q 2nd

If our record of the play is correct, Black refines too much here. We can see no objection to 39. K to K 4th.

40. P to K R 3rd	K to K 4th
41. K to B 3rd	P to Kt 5th (ch)
42. P takes P	P takes P (ch)
43. K to K 2nd	B to B sq
44. P to R 5th	B to R 3rd (ch)
45. K to B 2nd	B to B 5th
46. P to Kt 3rd	P to B 6th
47. K to K 3rd	P to R 4th
48. Kt to Q sq	K to Q 3rd
49. K to B 4th	B to K 7th
50. Kt to B 2nd	P to B 5th
51. P to R 6th	P to B 6th
52. P to R 7th	P to B 7th
53. P Queens	P Queens (ch)
54. K to B 5th	K to B 2nd
55. Q to R 7th (ch)	K to B sq
56. Kt takes P,

and White wins.

Very few of our correspondents appear to have attempted a solution of Mr Shinkman's pretty self-mate problem, and none have succeeded in solving it. All the failures spring from the same cause, a too hasty study of the resource of Black's position. It is plain enough that the self-mate is to be effected by discovery, and that therefore the White Bishop, which stands at Q 5th, must be removed from the command of K Kt 8th to prevent its being interposed, and so delaying the mate. Where to place this Bishop is consequently the problem submitted to the reader. That is not so easily seen; indeed, it is only discovered when it is perceived that Black can move his Rook from Q square to Q R square, and it is then so very obvious that, having mentioned Black's move, it is unnecessary to specify White's.

We give another of these little puzzles, selecting one dedicated, some years ago, to Count Arnold Pongraez, of Hungary, himself a skilful constructor of self-mate chess problems:—

White: K at Q R 2nd; Q at Q 3rd; R at K R 2nd; B's at K R 5th and K R 8th; Kt at Q R 5th; Pawn at Q R 3rd. (Seven pieces.)

Black: K at Q B 8th; Q at Q 2nd; Pawn at Q R 5th. (Three pieces.)

White to play, and force Black to mate him in three moves.

Sir W. Williams-Wynn, Bart., M.P., has accepted the presidency of the newly-formed National Eisteddfod Association.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will (dated Jan. 26, 1880) with a codicil (dated July 24 following) of Mr. William Henry Poynder, late of Hartham Park and Hillmarton Manor, Wilts, and of Upper Brook-street, Grosvenor-square, who died on Aug. 3 last, was proved on the 14th inst. by Thomas Edward Scudamore and Jacob Phillips, the surviving executors, the personal estate being sworn under £250,000. The testator bequeaths to his cousin Mrs. George Mears, £13,000; to his cousin Mrs. Hugh Mears, £12,000; to the Rev. Frederick Poynder, the Rev. Leopold Poynder, and Captain William Henry Poynder, £10,000 each; to the Royal United Hospital, Bath, and the Salisbury Infirmary, £1000 each; to St. Bartholomew's Hospital, £500; and there are numerous legacies, both pecuniary and specific, to other of his relatives, friends, executors, trustees, and late and present servants. Such part of his plate as is not specifically bequeathed and his statuary are made heirlooms, to go and devolve with the estate of Hartham Park and Hillmarton as entailed by the will of his late brother. He devises several freehold properties to each of his nieces, Mary Harriet Isabella Cumberland Dickson, Caroline Matilda Dickson, and Isabella Emily Dickson; and to the first-named he leaves his shares in the Royal Exchange Corporation, and to the second one his shares in the Rock Life Office. These three ladies are also appointed residuary legatees of his personal as well as of his real estate.

The will (dated May 20, 1868) of the Hon. Alfred Hood, late of Burton Seagrave, Notts, who died on the 14th ult. at The Manor House, Chiswick, was proved on the 9th inst. by Viscountess Hood, the mother and sole executrix, to whom he devises and bequeaths all his real and personal estate absolutely. The personal estate is sworn under £9000.

The will (dated May 1, 1872) of Mr. William Shrubsole, late of Kingston House, St. Albans, Herts, who died on July 17 last, was proved on the 13th inst. by Mrs. Eleanor Shrubsole, the widow and sole executrix, to whom he devises and bequeaths all the real and personal estate to which he should be entitled at the time of his decease absolutely. The personalty is sworn under £4000.

The will (dated Sept. 10, 1872) with two codicils (dated Dec. 31, 1879, and April 30, 1880) of Mr. Thomas Senior Wall, late of No. 120, Maida-vale, Kilburn, who died on the 11th ult., was proved on the 16th inst. by William Wall, the son, Philip Wilkinson, Stanley George Bird, and John Henry Hortin, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £60,000. The testator leaves to his nephew, Charles Barker, £50; to his assistant, Edward Chapman, £200; to St. Mary's Hospital, Paddington, the Western Dispensary, Marylebone-road, the Royal Hospital for Incurables, Putney, and St. Marylebone Almshouses, St. John's-wood, £100 each: to his daughters, Mrs. Emily Wilkinson, Mrs. Charlotte Bird, Mrs Elizabeth Phillips, and Mrs. Helen Smellie, £200 each, and considerable freehold and leasehold house property is settled upon each of them; to his four sons-in-law £1000 each; and to his son William certain freehold and leasehold properties, all his household furniture and effects, and his share of the capital, business premises, stock-in-trade, and goodwill of the business of a corn merchant carried on by him in partnership with his said son. The residue of his real and personal estate he gives to his five children in equal shares, the shares of his daughters being settled upon them.

The will (dated Feb. 28, 1870) with a codicil (dated Feb. 21, 1879) of General Sir John Bloomfield, G.C.B., Colonel Commandant of the Royal Artillery, late of No. 108, Jermyn-street, who died on Aug. 1 last, was proved on the 15th inst. by William Thomas Trench and John Christopher Woollacott, the surviving executors, the personal estate being sworn under £35,000. The testator leaves £50 to each of his executors; and the residue of his real and personal property upon trust for the two sons and one daughter of Mrs. Rebecca Keane, the widow of Major B. B. Keane, and for the son and three daughters of Mrs. Annie A. Dennis, the widow of Lieutenant-Colonel J. H. B. Dennis, in the proportions of two twelfths to each of the children of Mrs. Keane, three twelfths to the son of Mrs. Dennis, and one twelfth to each of her daughters.

The will (dated April 10, 1877) of the Hon. Greville Theophilus Howard, late of Castle Rising, Norfolk, who died on July 28 last, was proved on the 15th inst. by Henry Charles Howard and Henry Thomas Ogilvy, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £35,000. The testator charges his estates in Norfolk with an annuity of £1200 to his wife, Lady Audrey Jane Charlotte Howard, to be reduced to £1000 per annum in the event of his leaving a son, and to £800 per annum on any son of his attaining twenty-one; he also charges his estates with portions for his younger children. The residue of his real and personal estate he leaves to his wife absolutely; and he appoints her guardian of his infant children during their respective minorities. The deceased was the second son of Charles John, seventeenth Earl of Suffolk and Berkshire, and was formerly one of the Commissioners in Lunacy.

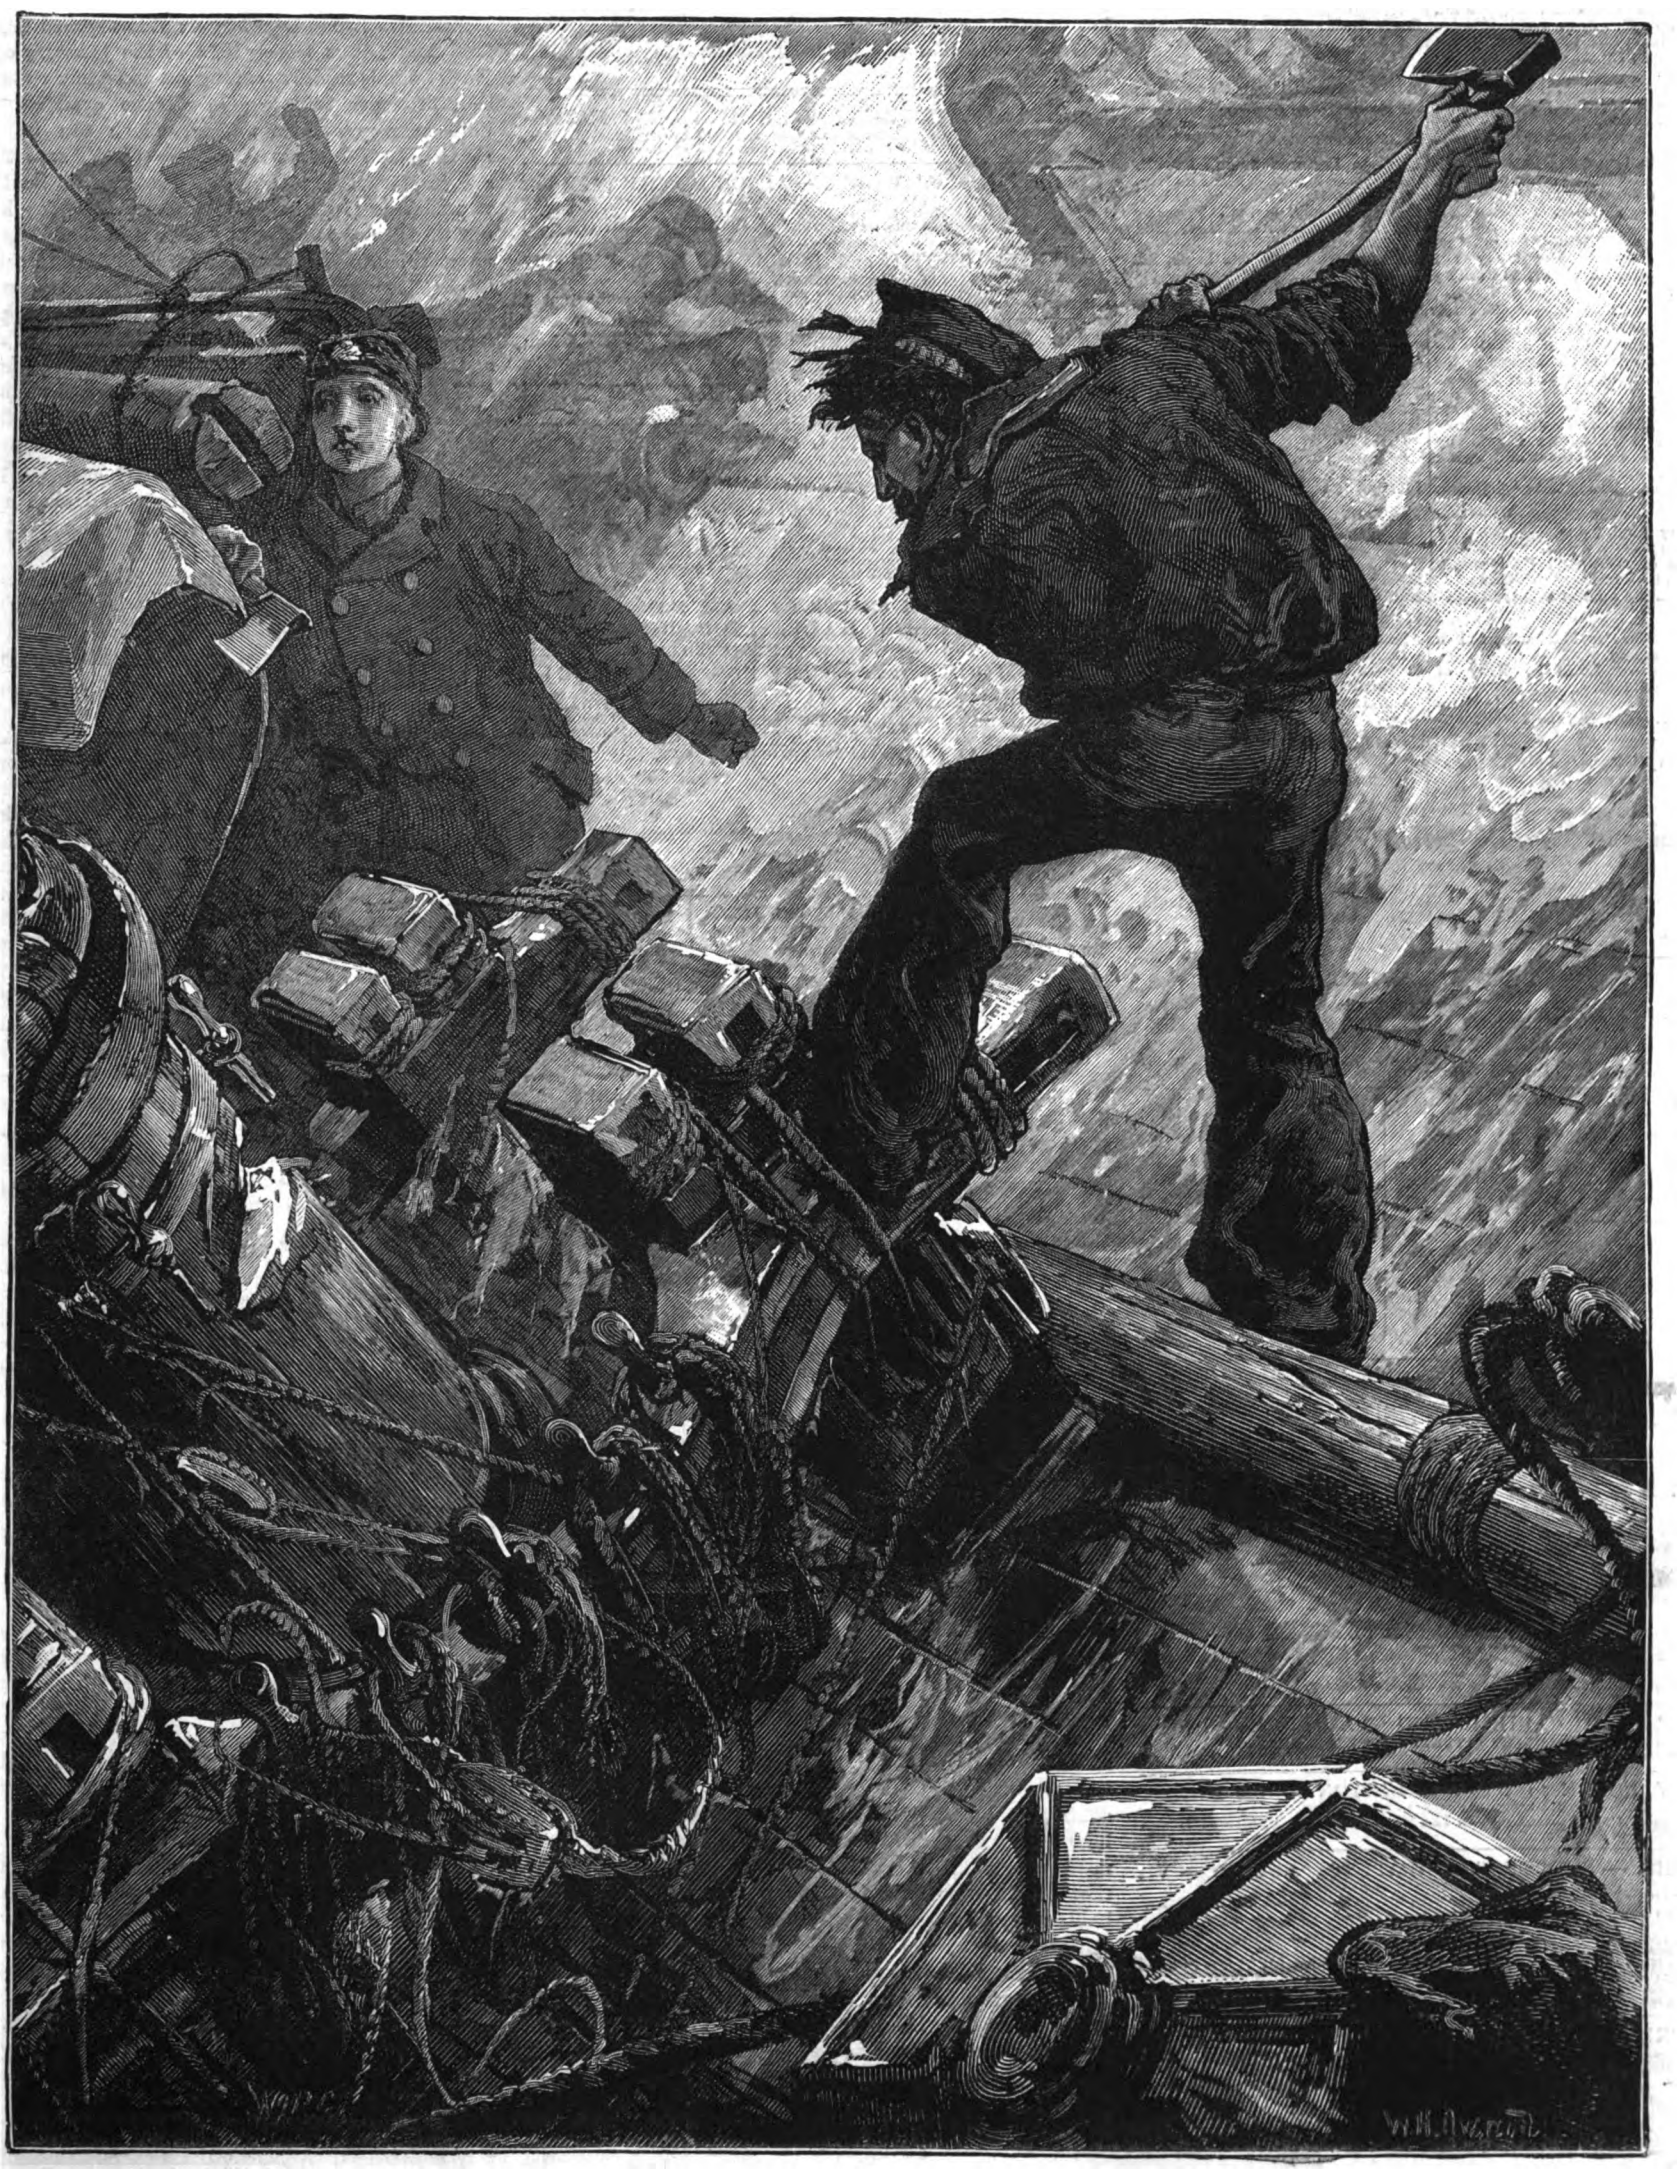
The erection of a public monument to perpetuate the self-sacrificing labours of Thomas Clarkson as the advocate of slave emancipation was inaugurated on Monday by Mr. Algernon Peckover, who laid the first stone of a handsome memorial to be erected in Wisbech. Thomas Clarkson was born in that town in 1760. The memorial will be a statue, with inscription and bas-reliefs, designed by the late Sir Gilbert Scott, R.A.

The fifth annual Dairy Show was opened at the Agricultural Hall, Islington, on Tuesday, and continued the following three days. The exhibition may be divided into three distinct categories—viz., the cattle, their produce, and the various kinds of apparatus used in the dairy—and in all three there is a marked increase of entries, if not in their quality. Amongst the exhibitors were her Majesty, Lady Burdett-Coutts, the Earl of Egmont, the Marquis of Exeter, and Lord Chesham. A sum of £1650 was devoted to prizes.

The Gazette contains the new regulations for the transmission of small sums through the Post Office by "postal orders." These regulations are to come into operation on Jan. 1, 1881. Every postal order is to be for one of the following amounts, and in respect thereof the following poundage shall be paid:—1s., halfpenny; 1s. 6d., halfpenny; 2s. 6d., penny; 5s., penny; 7s. 6d., penny; 10s., twopence; 12s. 6d., twopence; 15s., twopence; 17s. 6d., twopence; 20s. twopence. A postal order may be crossed generally, like a cheque, by the words "and Co.," or specially by inserting a banker's name.

The trial of Mr. Henry Walker for libelling the proprietor of the Monmouth Club in the Bayswater Chronicle was closed on Saturday at the Central Criminal Court. The allegation against the prosecutor, Mr. Copping, was that gambling was carried on at the club through the night and on Sundays, and that to the club had been traced the ruin of many young men in the neighbourhood. The jury found the defendant not guilty, and added that they wished there were more gentlemen like Mr. Walker to take such matters up. The Recorder added that the defendant had performed his duty with zeal and in the public interest, and he allowed him his costs.

Digitized by Google



Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

REGISTERED AT THE GENERAL POST-OFFICE FOR TRANSMISSION ABROAD.

No. 2162.—VOL. LXXVII. SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1880. WITH TWO SUPPLEMENTS } SIXPENCE. By Post, 6½D.

THE DANGERS OF THE DEEP: CUTTING AWAY THE MASTS IN A STORM.

Digitized by Google

BIRTHS.

On the 30th inst., at 65, Cromwell-road, South Kensington, the wife of William Ingram, of a son.

On the 2nd ult., at Kasauli (Punjaub), the wife of Lieutenant-Colonel, Mackesy, Bengal Staff Corps, of a son.

On the 30th ult., at Richmond Surrey, the wife of Ernest Claude Lee, of a daughter.

MARRIAGE.

On the 27th ult., at St. Mark's Church, North Audley-street, by the Lord Bishop of St. Albans, assisted by the Hon. and Rev. L. Neville, uncle of the bride, and the Rev. R. Joynes, Rector of Gravesend and father of the bridegroom, R. Joynes, Esq., R.A., to the Hon. Mary Isabella Neville, daughter of the late and niece of the present Lord Braybrooke.

DEATHS.

On the 30th ult., suddenly, at The Lodge, Gatton Point, near Redhill, Surrey, Lieutenant-Colonel Arthur Trotter, late of H.M. Indian forces, aged 79.

On the 24th ult., at Pera, Constantinople, the Right Hon. James St. Clair, fourteenth Baron Sinclair, aged 77.

On the 26th ult., at Ballyglan, county Waterford, of dysentery, Ellen Elizabeth Amy, dearly-beloved daughter of Sir Robert Paul, Bart., aged 22.

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, or Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING NOV. 13.

SUNDAY, Nov. 7.

Twenty-fourth Sunday after Trinity.
Morning Lessons: Amos iii.; Philemon. Evening Lessons: Amos v. or ix.; Luke xxiii. 50—xxiv. 13.
St. Paul's Cathedral, 10.30 a.m., Rev. J. R. Stock, Lord Mayor's Chaplain; 3.15 p.m., Rev. Canon Gregory; 7 p.m., Rev. Prebendary Perry.
Westminster Abbey, 10 a.m., Rev. Professor Momerie; 3 p.m., Rev. Canon Farrar.
St. James's, noon, Rev. Francis Garden, Sub-Dean of the Chapels Royal.
Whitehall, 11 a.m. and 3 p.m., Rev. H. Stanton.
Savoy, 11.30 a.m., Rev. Henry White, the Chaplain; 7 p.m., Rev. W. M. Sinclair, Vicar of St. Stephen's, Westminster.
Temple Church, 11 a.m., uncertain; 3 p.m., Rev. A. Ainger, the Reader.

MONDAY, Nov. 8.

Medical Society, 8.30 p.m.
Geographical Society, 8.30 p.m., Mr. Joseph Thomson on his Journey to Lukuga Outlet of Lake Tanganyika.
Royal School of Mines, 8 p.m., first of Professor Frankland's course of six lectures on Water, to working men.
Gresham Lectures, 6 p.m., Rev. E. Ledger on Astronomy (and on 10th, 11th, and 12th).
Royal Academy, 8 p.m., Professor A. H. Church on Chemistry (and on Thursday).
Monday Popular Concerts begin, St. James's Hall, 8 p.m.

TUESDAY, Nov. 9.

Moon's first quarter, 8.20 a.m.
The Prince of Wales born, 1841.
Lord Mayor's Day: Dinner to the Cabinet Ministers at the Mansion House.
Anthropological Institute, 8 p.m. (Dr. J. Beddoe on Anthropological Colour Phenomena; Papers by Mr. J. F. Rowbotham and Prince Paul Poutiatin).
West London Scientific Association, 8.
Institution of Civil Engineers, 8 p.m. (Mr. B. Walker on Machinery for Steel-making by the Bessemer and the Siemens Processes).
Photographic Society, 8 p.m.
Medical and Chirurgical Society, 8.30.
South-place Institute, 7 p.m. (Mr. W. C. Coupland on Ethical Principles; 8.30 p.m., Dr. E. B. Aveling on Biology).
Liverpool Races.

WEDNESDAY, Nov. 10.

Literary Fund, 3 p.m.
Graphic Society, 8 p.m.
Society of Telegraph Engineers, 8 p.m., the President's reception.
Amateur Mechanical Society, 8 p.m.
Gaelic Society, 8 p.m. (Mr. R. G. Tolmie, on Migrations and Homes of the Celtic Race).
Microscopic Society, 8 p.m.
Hunterian Society, 8 p.m.

THURSDAY, Nov. 11.

Half Quarter Day. Martinmas, Scotch Quarter Day.
Accession of Louis I., King of Portugal, 1861.
Mathematical Society, 8 p.m. (address by Mr. Merrifield, the President).
Albert Hall Choral Society, 8 p.m. (Handel's "Judas Maccabæus.")
Corporation of the Sons of the Clergy, annual court for Election of Governors, &c., 11.30 a.m.

FRIDAY, Nov. 12.

Quekett Microscopical Club, 8 p.m.
Astronomical Society, 8 p.m.
New Shakspere Society, 8 p.m. (Dr. Brinsley Nicholson on Three Passages in "Henry V.;" Mr. James Spedding on "Henry V.")
City of London College, 6 p.m. (Dr. N. Heinemann on Political Economy—Modes of Distribution).
Clinical Society, 8.30 p.m.
Alexandra Park Races.

SATURDAY, Nov. 13.

Fall of meteors expected.
Botanic Society, 3.45 p.m.
Photographic Society's Exhibition closed.
Colston Anniversary, Bristol.
Popular Saturday Concerts begin, St. James's Hall, 8 p.m.

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE KEW OBSERVATORY OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY.

Lat. 51° 28' 6" N.; Long. 0° 18' 47" W. Height above Sea, 34 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF Barometer Corrected.	Temperature of the Air.	Dew Point.	Relative Humidity.	Amount of Cloud.	THERMOM. Maximum, read at 10 p.m.	Minimum, read at 10 p.m.	WIND. General Direction.	Movement in 24 hours, read at 10 a.m. next morning.	Rain in 24 hours, read at 10 a.m. next morning.
	Inches.	°	°	°	0-10	°	°		Miles.	In.
24	30·242	42·3	31·8	·69	4	47·8	30·6	NNE. NW.	79	0·000
25	30·086	42·0	38·7	·89	9	48·3	33·8	NW. WSW. SW.	138	0·180
26	29·502	39·5	39·2	·99	10	45·2	39·5	SW. ESE. E.	210	0·735
27	29·250	49·0	48·8	·99	10	57·5	41·4	NE. E. S.	327	0·370
28	28·989	44·1	42·8	·95	10	56·8	39·9	SSW. SW. W.	484	0·135
29	29·607	38·2	33·3	·84	8	45·6	35·7	NW.	298	0·020
30	30·126	37·2	31·7	·82	2	46·2	30·3	WSW. W.	136	0·000

Oct.

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, in order, at ten o'clock a.m.:—

Barometer (in inches) corrected ..	30·259	30·186	29·695	29·376	28·733	29·542	30·127
Temperature of Air	40·5°	42·5°	40·3°	46·3°	51·2°	41·0°	36·5°
Temperature of Evaporation ..	36·8°	40·5°	39·6°	45·8°	49·4°	37·3°	35·9°
Direction of Wind	NE.	WSW.	SSW.	E.	SW.	NW.	WSW.

THE BRIGHTON SEASON.
Frequent Trains from Victoria and London Bridge.
Also Trains in connection from Kensington and Liverpool-street.
Return Tickets, London to Brighton, available for eight days.
Weekly, Fortnightly, and Monthly Tickets, at Cheap Rates.
Available to travel by all Trains between London and Brighton.
Cheap Half-Guinea First Class Day Tickets to Brighton
Every Saturday, from Victoria and London Bridge,
Admitting to the Grand Aquarium and Royal Pavilion.
Cheap First Class Day Tickets to Brighton every Sunday,
From Victoria at 10.45 a.m., and London Bridge at 10.35 a.m.
Pullman Drawing-Room Cars between Victoria and Brighton.
Through Bookings to Brighton from principal Stations
On the Railways in the Northern and Midland districts.
A Special Train for Horses, Carriages, and Servants,
From Victoria to Brighton, at 11.15 a.m. every Weekday.

GRAND AQUARIUM AND PAVILION.—Military and other Concerts EVERY SATURDAY AFTERNOON, for which the above Saturday Cheap Tickets are available.

NEW ROUTE to WEST BRIGHTON by the DIRECT LINE. PRESTON PARK to CLIFTONVILLE.
A Morning Up and Evening Down Fast Train Every Weekday between London Bridge and West Brighton.

PARIS.—SHORTEST, CHEAPEST ROUTE.—Via NEWHAVEN, DIEPPE, and ROUEN.
CHEAP EXPRESS SERVICE Every Week Night—First, Second, and Third Class.
From Victoria 7.50 p.m., and London Bridge 8.0 p.m.
Fares—single, 35s., 24s., 17s.; Return, 55s., 39s., 30s.
Powerful Paddle-Steamers, with excellent cabins, &c.
Trains run alongside Steamers at Newhaven and Dieppe.
SOUTH OF FRANCE, ITALY, SWITZERLAND, &c.—Tourists' Tickets are issued enabling the holder to visit all the principal places of interest.
HAVRE.—Passengers booked through by this route every week night from Victoria and London Bridge as above.

TICKETS and every information at the Brighton Company's West-End General Offices, 28, Regent-circus, Piccadilly; and No. 8, Grand Hotel Buildings, Trafalgar-square; also at the Victoria and London Bridge Stations. (By Order) J. P. KNIGHT, General Manager.

NOW READY.
PRICE ONE SHILLING (INLAND POSTAGE, 2½d.),
THE
ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK
FOR
1881,
CONTAINING
SIX COLOURED PICTURES;
PRINTED BY LEIGHTON BROTHERS' CHROMATIC PROCESS,
FROM ORIGINALS BY EMINENT ARTISTS.
TWELVE FINE-ART ENGRAVINGS;
ASTRONOMICAL PHENOMENA;
TWELVE DIAGRAMS OF THE DURATION OF MOONLIGHT;
The Royal Family of Great Britain; the Queen's Household; her Majesty's Ministers; Lists of Public Offices and Officers; Bankers, Law and University Terms; Fixed and Movable Festivals; Anniversaries; Acts of Parliament passed during the Session of 1880; Revenue and Expenditure; Obituary of Eminent Persons; Christian, Jewish, and Mohammedan Calendars; Tables of Stamps, Taxes, and Government Duties; Times of High Water; Post Office Regulations; together with a large amount of useful and valuable information, which has during the past thirty-eight years made the ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK the most acceptable and elegant companion to the Library; whilst it is universally acknowledged to be by far the cheapest Almanack ever published.
The unprecedented demand for the ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK year after year stimulates the Proprietor to still greater exertions to secure for this Almanack a reception as favourable as that which has hitherto placed its circulation second only to that of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.
The ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK is inclosed in an elegant cover, printed in colours by the same process as the COLOURED PLATES, and forms a useful and pleasing ornament to the drawing-room table.
The SHILLING ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK is published at the Office of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, 198, Strand, and sold by all Booksellers and Newsvenders.

THE SIXTEENTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION of WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS is NOW OPEN, at THOMAS McLEAN'S GALLERY, 7, Haymarket, next the Theatre. Admission, including Catalogue, One Shilling.

DORÉ'S GREAT WORKS.—"ECCE HOMO" ("Full of divine dignity."—The Times) and "THE ASCENSION;" "CHRIST LEAVING THE PRÆTORIUM," "CHRIST ENTERING JERUSALEM," with all his other Great Pictures.—DORÉ GALLERY, 35, New Bond-street. Daily, 10 to 6. 1s.

ARTHUR TOOTH and SON'S ANNUAL WINTER EXHIBITION of high-class PICTURES, by British and Foreign Artists, is NOW OPEN at 5, Haymarket, opposite Her Majesty's Theatre. Admission, One Shilling, including Catalogue.

MR. ERNEST PAUER will deliver SIX LECTURES on The HISTORY of PIANOFORTE PLAYING, in the Lecture Theatre of the South Kensington Museum. The first Lecture will be given on FRIDAY, NOV. 12, at 2.30 p.m. Tickets for the course, 10s.; Schools, 7s. 6d.; Single tickets, 2s. 6d. Can be obtained of the Hon. and Rev. FRANCIS BYNG, Hon. Treasurer; and at the Catalogue Stall, South Kensington Museum.

SATURDAY ORCHESTRAL CONCERTS, ST. JAMES'S HALL.—These Concerts have been organised with a view to supplying a want for a long time felt in London—that of hearing high-class orchestral music during the winter at popular prices. A special feature will be the production at each concert of at least one important work by an English composer. The FIRST SERIES will take place on SATURDAY EVENINGS, NOV. 13, 27, DEC. 4, 18. Vocalists: Mrs. Osgood and Miss Mary Davies, Madame Patey and Miss Orridge; Mr. Santley, &c. Pianoforte, Madame Frickenhaus, Miss Bessie Richards, Mr. Oscar Beringer, &c. Violin, M. Sainton and M. Ovide Musin. Conductor, Mr. Frederick H. Cowen.—Subscription Tickets (for the series of four concerts), One Guinea; Single Tickets, 7s. 6d., 3s., and 1s., at AUSTIN'S, St. James's Hall, and the usual Agents'.

THOROUGH CHANGE OF PERFORMANCE.
ST. JAMES'S HALL, PICCADILLY.
THE NEW PROGRAMME PRESENTED BY
THE MOORE and BURGESS MINSTRELS
on the 1st inst. having been received with the warmest marks of approbation BY CROWDED AUDIENCES EVERY NIGHT DURING THE PAST WEEK, will be repeated
EVERY NIGHT, at EIGHT, and on MONDAY, WEDNESDAY, and SATURDAY,
at THREE and EIGHT.
The new Songs and the new Musical and Terpsichorean Sketch entitled,
THE OLD KENTUCKY HOME,
have proved the greatest successes of the season.
The inimitable MOORE, together with the powerful phalanx of Comedians, Charles Sutton, Walter Howard, John Kemble, Sully, Cheevers, Ernest Linden, all take part in the New Programme.
SPECIAL NOTICE.
On TUESDAY AFTERNOON NEXT (Lord Mayor's Day), there will be an EXTRA GRAND DAY PERFORMANCE at Three o'Clock.

LORD MAYOR'S DAY.
THE MOORE and BURGESS MINSTRELS will give
AN EXTRA GRAND DAY PERPORMANCE at the
ST. JAMES'S HALL,
ON LORD MAYOR'S DAY (TUESDAY NEXT),
at Three o'Clock,
when the new and brilliantly successful Programme will be given in its entirety.

MR. and MRS. GERMAN REED'S ENTERTAINMENT. THE TURQUOISE RING, Mr. Corney Grain's New Musical Sketch, THE HAUNTED ROOM and A FLYING VISIT. Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday Evenings at Eight; Thursday and Saturday Afternoons at Three. Admission, 1s., 2s.; Stalls, 3s. and 5s.—ST. GEORGE'S HALL, Langham-place.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry Irving.—THE CORSICAN BROTHERS Every Night at 8.30—Louis and Fabian de Franchi, Mr. Irving. At 7.30, BYGONES, by A. W. Pinero. Doors open at 7. Special Morning Performances of THE CORSICAN BROTHERS, Saturdays, NOV. 6 and 13; also Wednesday, Nov. 10, at 2.30. Box Office (Mr. Hurst) open 10 to 5 daily. Seats booked by letter or telegram.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON: SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1880.

The political campaign for the ensuing year has already opened. The holidays have been short. They commenced later than usual, they have come to an end earlier. Public opinion was first summoned to the strife by a speech of the Marquis of Salisbury. Lord Northbrook followed him. Mr. Chamberlain and Lord Sandon have since joined in the fray; presently we expect to hear something at the Guildhall dinner, on Lord Mayor's Day, from the lips of Mr Gladstone. These preliminary skirmishes, we need hardly say, do but faintly foreshadow the struggles which will ensue when Parliament meets. Between now and then a great deal of rhetoric will be expended, some of it, no doubt, to good purpose; much of it to no purpose at all. Unhappily, there is plenty of material upon which to exercise both criticism and speculation. Public affairs, like the weather, are in a very unsettled state; not here only, but abroad. The policy of the present Government, necessitated, it would appear, in part at least, by that of their predecessors, and not yet fully developed, holds every one in suspense. India and Afghanistan, the Cape and the native populations of her Frontiers, Constantinople, Montenegro, the Naval demonstration, and the European Concert; and, to come nearer home, the disturbed state of Ireland; the Land question in the special form which it has there assumed, and in that more reasonable one in which it appears in England; the disclosures of Electoral corruption; the mischiefs produced by the action of the present Bankruptcy Laws;—and various other questions more remotely affecting the domain of politics, offer a wide scope to public men for difference of opinion, party conflicts, and wise as well as unwise suggestions.

We can give but a very hasty glance at some of these topics. We need not now deal with the Afghan difficulty, which, it is to be sincerely hoped, is all but solved. The evil rumours that found their way from Cabul to Simla, touching the condition of the Capital of North Afghanistan, and hinting at the death by violence of the Ameer Abdurrahman, have turned out to be mere fabrications. The City is quiet. The Ameer is slowly consolidating his power. Candahar remains, for the present, in occupation by British forces, but will probably be evacuated in early Spring, unless, indeed, Yakoub Khan, who is at Herat, should find himself strong enough to take the field once more. For the present, at all events, no serious anxiety is felt by the Viceroy of India as to the course of affairs in that country. More disquietude is felt respecting the relations of the Cape Government to the Kaffir Races populating the Territory known as the Transkei district. Rebellion is rife in Basutoland; it has spread into Griqualand East; it is taking hold of the territory of Tembuland; and is rapidly gaining an ascendancy the suppression of which will require all the available resources, both in men and in money, which can be furnished by the Cape Colony. Few, we think, save those who are interested in stirring up disorder in South Africa, will hesitate to condemn the policy which has led to this uprising; few, we hope, will not see in it sufficient ground upon which to base new and better relations between the Cape Colony and the Native Races surrounding its frontiers. Much good advice has been thrown away upon those invested with authority, whether legislative or executive, at Cape Town. It has been rejected with a high hand, and it will be seen presently whether the course upon which the Government and Parliament of that Colony are evidently and obstinately bent, will result in most damage to themselves or to the foes they have wantonly provoked.

The Cession of Dulcigno may be looked upon as a foregone movement. While we write, the event is still in the future. But there can be little doubt that the European Concert will be maintained until that affair at least is settled with Turkey. But who is to say what will be the course, or the issue, of the Greek Question? Strong measures are being taken for the levy and equipment of a formidable military force in the little Kingdom of Greece, with a view to take possession of the territory assigned to it by the Berlin Conference. It would seem certain that Turkey will not relax her hold upon Thessaly and Epirus. It is extremely questionable whether the Signatary Powers can agree to aid coercively in bringing about such a consummation. It is a well-known fact that Greece does not possess within herself adequate means of giving immediate effect to that part of the Berlin Treaty upon which she founds her claims. The King and Parliament of Greece evince a settled determination to profit, sooner or later, by the award made to them; but whether they will rush into war on their own responsibility, or will abide by the advice of the Powers to wait patiently the development of events in South-Eastern Europe, is a question becoming every day more doubtful—or, to put the matter in a preciser form, more menacing to the peace of Europe. Much will depend upon the decision of France.

Ireland bids fair to concentrate the chief attention of British politicians for some months to come. Things cannot much longer be suffered to remain as they are in that part of the United Kingdom. But, perhaps, the outcries which reach the English public from not a few districts of that part of her Majesty's dominions, whether raised by Landlords or Tenant-Farmers, have in them a tone of passionate exaggeration. The noise is, on the whole, greater than the actual damage. Not that the latter is to be under-estimated, and, perhaps, the sufferers know best to what extent the shoe pinches them. It may, however, be taken for granted that Government is in possession of information which, for the present, is unknown to the public. They are about to prosecute for conspiracy the chiefs of the Land League Agitation. They will probably fail in getting a verdict against them. They will then ask Parliament for fresh powers—powers which they may use with the certain effect of dispelling the terrorism which now paralyses the social system in Ireland. Should such be the line which affairs will take, it will have to be followed up by a policy more indulgent, perhaps, than permanently beneficial. Here, however, is the disputable point, the settlement of which will demand thorough statesmanship both in counsel and in administration. We have no doubt that Her Majesty's Ministers are giving their best attention to the question. That they will succeed in permanently adjusting the differences which now rend society in twain we cannot reasonably expect. But it may be hoped that they will advance some steps towards solving the difficulty with which they have to deal; and this they will be all the more likely to do by firmly disregarding the promptings of a partisan spirit, and by imbuing the advice they tender to her Majesty and the country, as fully as possible, with the soul of justice.

Digitized by Google

ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

Many years ago, possibly when I was quite a lad, I remember to have felt quite awe-stricken while gazing on an engraving in the Illustrated London News representing a clergyman in prison. The reverend and incarcerated gentleman was, I believe, a Nonconformist minister in the west of England, whose name I have completely forgotten, as well as that of the legal imbroglio in which he was defendant; but I know that he was worsted in the conflict, and that he was put in prison at the suit of the then Bishop of Exeter, the pugnacious Dr. Philpotts. I thought it a very shocking thing that a gentleman in a white cravat and a stand-up collar should be committed to the county gaol; but I was somewhat consoled when, in the engraving of which I speak, I noted that the reverend captive was surrounded by a numerous group of gentlemen all in white cravats and with stand-up collars to their coats, and who were gazing with looks of earnest and admiring sympathy on the prisoner.

We have just now, and (to my thinking) very unfortunately, another clergyman in prison: the Rev. Pelham Dale to wit, who, for certain contumacies in disobeying the decrees of the Ecclesiastical Courts, has been committed to Holloway Gaol. The spectacle of a priest in durance for conscience sake must always be a disagreeable one; but I do not desire to enter into any discussion concerning the Ritualistic practices in which, it is alleged, the Rector of St. Vedast indulged, or his defiance of the orders of the Courts which has brought him into his present straits. I only look at the patent facts, that he is a blameless Christian gentleman, and that he has not done any shameful thing, however wrongheaded or mutinous he may have been.

Thus, it is with pain that I read that the Rector of St. Vedast is debarred from many of the privileges accorded to détenus of his stamp in the fierce old days of Harry of Exeter; that he is bound to rise at six in the morning, and that the gas in his room is turned off at 8.30 p.m.; that he may not smoke even so much as a cigarette; that, with the exception of his wife and his legal advisers, he is not permitted to receive any visitors; and that, although on weekdays he is suffered to have his meals from the outside, he was forced on Sunday last to content himself with the prison dietary. These are the gaol regulations, you may say; and the rules of her Majesty's Prisons are inflexible, and cannot be departed from because a clergyman happens to stumble into a criminal prison for conscience sake.

But this happens to lead me to precisely the point on which I wish to say a few words, and to which I would respectfully draw the attention of Sir Edmund Ducane and his fellow Commissioners of Prisons. Was there not committed a very grave blunder, when the Old "Bench" (the proper name of which was "the Queen's Prison") was disestablished, in neglecting to provide a place for the confinement of persons to whom the temporary deprivation of liberty, without a number of harassing and afflicting disciplinary regulations would be quite sufficient punishment? The Bench was suppressed in consequence of the supposed abolition of Imprisonment for Debt. I say "supposed," for I learn from the just-published Report of her Majesty's Commissioners of Prisons that, in the course of last year, more than six thousand persons were thrown into gaol for debt. But the old Bench, although practically a debtors' prison, was not theoretically one. You were arrested, for example, for a debt of a hundred pounds and costs, and when you grew tired of the expensive hospitality of the spunging-house, kept by the sheriff's officer, it was competent for you to sue out a writ of habeas corpus (which cost the modest sum of fifty shillings); and your creditors were bound to bring up your body and show cause why you were kept in custody. The Court of Queen's Bench were unanimous as to the propriety of your being imprisoned until you had satisfied your detaining creditor; but (looking at the circumstance, perhaps, of your having paid two pounds ten for a habeas) you were relegated, not to the common gaol for debtors (Whitecross-street in Middlesex, Horsemonger-lane in Surrey) but to "the Bench"—"Queen Victoria's own Prison," as Mrs. Brown would say.

In the "Bench" you could furnish your room to your own liking, smoke, drink your pint of wine a day, if you were a wine drinker, play rackets in the court-yard, receive as many visitors as you like until eight o'clock at night, and keep your gas burning until eleven. In the old days, many newspapers were edited and magazine articles written in the "Bench." The inmates of the place were not all debtors. They comprised "Crown" prisoners, Chancery prisoners committed for the mysterious offence of "contempt of court," offenders against the revenue laws, and persons convicted under exceptional circumstances of assault or of libel. The "Bench" in this respect precisely resembled the Parisian prison of Ste. Pélagie, in which M. Félix Pyat will have to pass two years, should his appeal from the sentence of the Correctional Tribunal be rejected. But M. Félix Pyat will be allowed to smoke his cigar, and to drink his claret, and edit the Commune; the law deeming in such a case that the mere deprivation of freedom is an adequate punishment. The law, in fine, recognises an imprisonment which is wholly devoid of ignominy. Now, the Rev. Mr. Dale in Holloway prison is not deliberately treated with ignominy; but, in the mere fact of his being subjected to the unbending regulations of a criminal prison, there is something per se ignominious. We want a Ste. Pélagie. It need not be a large one.

Touching books for "general reading" (a topic which brought me into terrible trouble; seeing that everybody who had a pet book—and we have all our pet books—and did not find it on my list, was much scandalised by the omission, and hastened to denounce me as an ignoramus), a correspondent writes me from Constantinople, calling attention to a list of works cited in Southey's "Doctor" (Longmans, 1849), none of which are included among the publications of any Society for the Promotion of Knowledge, religious or profane. Among these I note Copland's "Morte d'Arthur," Plutarch's "Morals," Pliny's "Natural History," translated by Philemon; Sir Kenelm Digby's "Discoveries," Stow's "Chronicle," Latimer's "Sermons," the last volume of Foxe's "Martyrs," and the "Pilgrim's Progress." But surely some of these omissions have been remedied since Southey wrote the "Doctor."

I suppose that by this time General Garfield—or Mr. Garfield—will have been elected President of the United States. I am afraid that the editor of the Okolona Southern States will "feel bad" at the defeat of General Hancock. Did you ever come across a number of the Okolona Southern States? It is certainly, in the way of diction, the most remarkable journal published in the State of Mississippi, or, for the matter of that, in the whole Union. I will just quote (in double column) two brief extracts from a leading article in this formidable Democratic organ, which I read with much delight and edification when I was down South last winter:—

"A Strong Government is wanted."
So says the stalwart Saltimbanco of the New York Tribune.
The old Continentals had
"A strong Government"
Prior to 1776,
But they read the law of liberty to
The Palace-born whelp of St. James's
And they rammed it down the throats of his soldiers
With a seasoning of saltpetre.
That was the way our fathers served a Strong Government,
And their sons havn't forgotten the trick.

The Confederated Commonwealths were subjected to
"A Strong Government"
From 1865 until 1875,
But a storm kept brewing and blowing throughout that Dark Decade.
It broke in Blood and Flame, and our people
Sabred and Shot-gunned
Their way to liberty.

I should like to see the staccato mode of writing leaders introduced in the London press. What do you say to—

A Liberal Leader.	A Conservative one.
The Unspeakable Turk	The Turkish Empire
Must Go	Must be maintained, even at the cost of
Bag and Baggage,	Blood,
Root and Branch,	Treasure,
Lock, stock, and barrel.	Dynamite,
Delenda est Carthago.	And Fulminating Picrate of Potash.

The eldest son of Shirley Brooks intends, I have good reason to know, to publish a carefully arranged and annotated selection from the correspondence of his distinguished father. Persons being in possession of interesting letters from the whilom editor of Punch and contributor of "Nothing in the Papers" in the Illustrated London News, and who are willing that discriminating publicity should be given to such letters, have been invited by public advertisement to communicate with the author's eldest son, Mr. Reginald Shirley Brooks, who, as a journalist, is treading most worthily in the footsteps of his accomplished sire. I am very glad to be able to second the appeal in this page, because I hope that it is still read by many friends of dear Shirley who have had epistolary commerce with him. He was one of the wittiest and most graphic letter-writers of his time. My own contribution to the selection contemplated by Mr. Reginald Shirley Brooks can only be a scanty one. My lamented friend his father (whom I knew ever since the year 1846) was a constant correspondent of mine; and I have bundles upon bundles of deeply interesting letters from him addressed to me in all sorts of out-of-the-way countries and places. But the majority of these letters, as it is with those I have from Mr. Dickens and Mr. Thackeray, may not be published until I am dead—and very dead.

I deferentially observed last week that I was wholly unable to answer a tithe of the questions addressed to me by a large army of correspondents. Here, however, is a query to which I am myself unable to give a satisfactory reply, but which presents some literary interest, and may be susceptible of solution by some student of Tasso. "Rinaldo" asks where he can meet with a copy of the "Jerusalem Delivered," translated by Doyne (1797) in blank verse, and one by Broadhead (1837) in rhymed couplets. "Rinaldo" has searched all the bookstalls high and low for copies of these versions, but in vain. There are, he adds, so far as he knows, only eight English translations of the "Gerusalemme," Fairfax's, Hoole's, Whiffen's, Hunt's, Smith's, Robertson's, and the two of whom "Rinaldo" is yet unsuccessfully in search, Doyne's and Broadhead's. I have only, in English, the fourth edition of "Jerusalem Delivered; or Godfrey of Bulloign, Done into English in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, by Edward Fairfax, Gent.," and Hoole's version, in a splendid library edition in three volumes, of English "Translations of Ancient and Modern Poets," published in 1810 by what would seem to have been a syndicate of booksellers, Nicholls, Baldwin, Rivington, Leigh and Sotheby, Faulder (who published Gifford's "Baviad" and "Mæviad," and was sued for libel by "Pole-cat" Williams), Lackington, Longman, Hurst, Rees and Orme, Cadell, Davies, Hatchard, Bagster, Miller and John Murray—"though Murray with his Miller should combine" (Byron)—with other names of bibliopolic renown are to be found in the list.

Mem.: The volume which contains Hoole's "Gerusalemme" also comprises his translation of the "Orlando Furioso" of Ariosto, and is full of splendid engravings by such princes of the chalcographic art as De Longeuil, De Launay, Prévost, and Bartolozzi; after such superb draughtsmen as Cipriani, Moreau le Jeune, Cochin, and Charles Eisen, the famous illustrator of the "Farmer General's Edition" of the "Contes de La Fontaine." I picked up the three volumes in very good condition on a bookstall, for less than a pound sterling. Looking at the existing craze of the French for old engravings, I am minded to take my tomes over to Paris, and sell them to the Egyptians of the Passage des Panoramas.

No; that would scarcely do. Authors make but poor bibliopoles. Thomas Miller, the "basket-weaving Poet" and author of "Gideon Giles the Roper," started as a publisher, but failed to do well. My late worthy friend Frederick Guest Tomlines, a historian and journalist of repute, concluded in the autumn of his life that he would set up as a retail bookseller. He proposed to deal chiefly in mediæval literature, in which he was profoundly versed. This venture was scarcely successful. A customer entered his shop one day, and asked for a particular book, say, "Vegetius De Re Militari, 1620," as marked in the catalogue. "I had really no idea that it was there," meditatively remarked Mr. Tomlines, as he ascended a ladder to a very high shelf, and pulled out a squabby little tome. Then he remained about five-and-twenty minutes on the ladder absorbed in the perusal of the squabby little volume; when the customer, growing impatient, began to rap on the counter with his stick. Then Mr. F. G. Tomlines came down the ladder. "If you think," he remarked, with calm severity, to the intending purchaser, "that any considerations of vile dross will induce me to part with this rare and precious little volume you are very much mistaken. It is like your impudence. Be off with you!" Exit intending purchaser, furious. I am in favour of upholding the dignity of literature; but I am afraid that this was scarcely the way to make a fortune by retail bookselling.

I am not a numismatist, although for more than a quarter of a century I have been trying to collect the precious coins known as pounds, shillings, and pence. But the annexed communication from "R. M. P., Working Man's Club, Walthamstow," may be of interest to those who can form cabinets of coins—and keep them:—

In trenching some land at Marsh-street, Walthamstow, I turned up one of those rare old coins of Alfet Terrises, over one thousand years of data, said to be a coin of the Thirty-third Great Grandfather of our present Prince of Wales, and I do consider the workmanship equal to any of the present time; in fact, I turned up a coin of George I. (1724) in the same ground, the Fifth Great Grandfather of the Prince of Wales; but as to the workmanship, Alfred the Great far surpasses it, though nearly nine hundred years difference in the coinage.

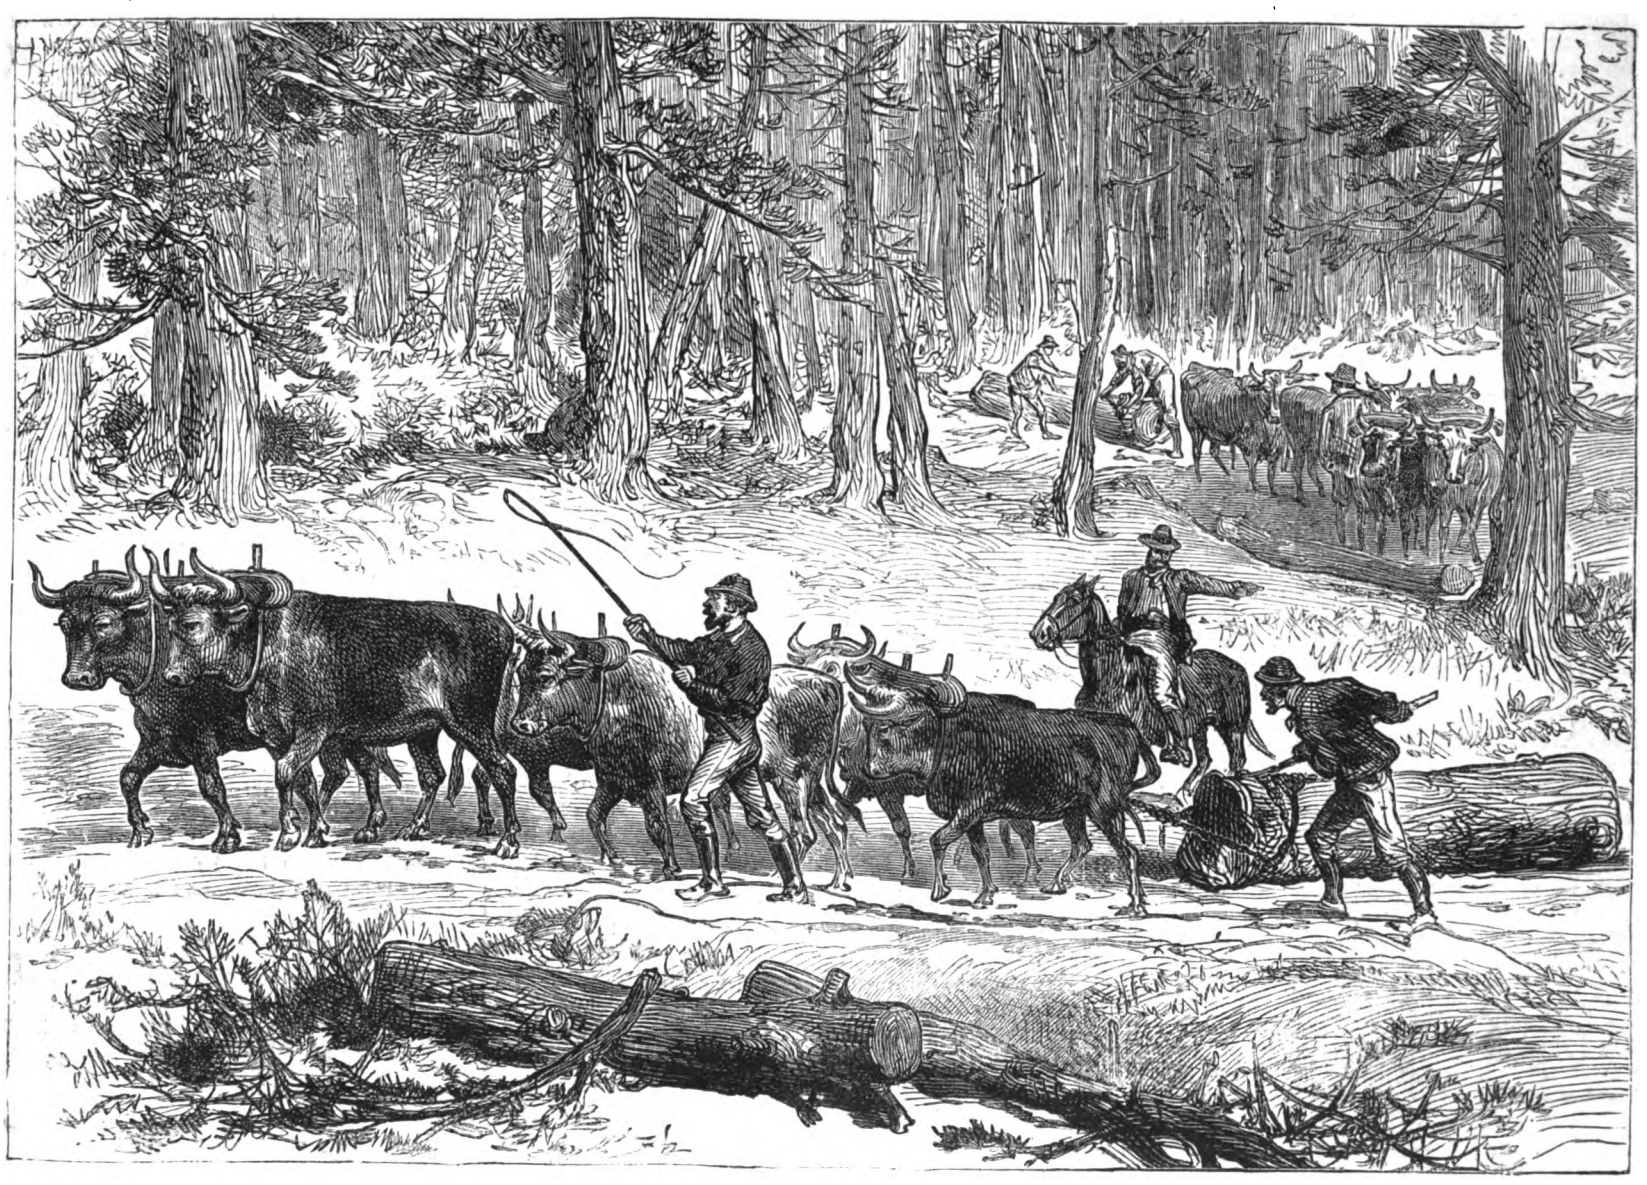
With the genuineness of the coin I have, of course, nothing whatever to do; but there is no reason why Alfred the Great should not have encouraged skilful die-sinkers as well as the dexterous workers in gold and silver whom he did undoubtedly patronise. Few of our modern Orfèvres could produce work more beautiful than the famous "Alfred Jewel" found in 1693 at Newton Park, not far from the site of Ethelney Park, in Somersetshire, and which bears the legend: "Æfred me haet gewercan," "Alfred has worn me." By-the-way, the lower end of the jewel is fashioned in the shape and the head of a gryphon or griffin, a national emblem with the Saxons. Notwithstanding the dogmatic assertions of the heraldic archæologists, I should not be at all surprised to find out that the so-called Dragon on the City arms (and on the Temple-Bar Memorial) was a Griffin after all.

Coins and medals suggest a question which I have asked over and over again (not in this place), but which will bear repetition. The other day a wretchedly poor woman went into baker's shop in the suburbs and purchased two loaves of bread, in payment for which she tendered that which purported to be a sovereign, but which on examination turned out to be one of the base gilt testoons known as "Hanover Sovereigns," from the reverse of the medal being decorated with a bas-relief of the Enemy of Mankind flying away with the late King Ernest of Hanover. These medals were originally struck in 1837, the year of her Majesty's happy accession to the throne. Originally having a harmless political signification, they were subsequently made to serve the purposes of fraud and swindling. The "Confidence Trick" is scarcely complete without the production of a few Hanover Sovereigns; and it was stated at the examination of the wretchedly poor woman (who declared that she had picked up the worthless but deceptive medal in the street) that these mischievous caricatures of the gold currency of the realm are still manufactured at Birmingham "by the ton." I hope that there is some exaggeration in this statement.

Mr. Archibald Forbes has made, it would seem, a distinct and brilliant success as a public lecturer in the United States. The first Transatlantic address of the famous War Correspondent was delivered at Chickering Hall, Fifth Avenue, New York, a very spacious salon, which would seat, I should say, some two thousand five hundred auditors. I lectured there myself last December with indifferent success. I had dictated my lecture in the morning to a shorthand writer (who charged me the modest sum of forty dollars, or eight pounds, for "taking" me); but when I ascended the platform at Chickering Hall I found to my horror that I had forgotten my spectacles, and I was unable to read one word of the manuscript transcribed from the shorthand writer's notes. But there was the audience thirsting for my blood, in a lecturing sense; so I put my hands in my pockets and began to talk (I scarcely know about what); and when I found by my watch that I had been talking for an hour and a half, I thanked the audience for their kind consideration, bade them good-night, and went home to bed quite happy. But the dire agonies that I had suffered! Whenever I found myself rapidly drifting to a dead stop, I always took care to bring in something about Queen Victoria and the Prince and Princess of Wales; and those allusions never failed to "fetch" my auditors. I made a little "running" by reciting the penultimate stanza of Campbell's "Last Man;" but the efflux of time happily saved me from adopting that which I had determined should be my last desperate resource, the recitation in extenso of Byron's "Isles of Greece."

Mr. Archibald Forbes is too young to need spectacles. He is, moreover, a practised lecturer, and learns his discourses by heart. The New York reporters seem to have been much struck by Mr. Forbes's stalwart presence and military mien. "Standing over six feet in height," I read, "he has a physique which might be envied by many an officer in the Royal Horse Guards." And again, "Standing behind the reading-desk, the severely plain lines of his evening dress showed with flattering distinctness his wonderful physique."

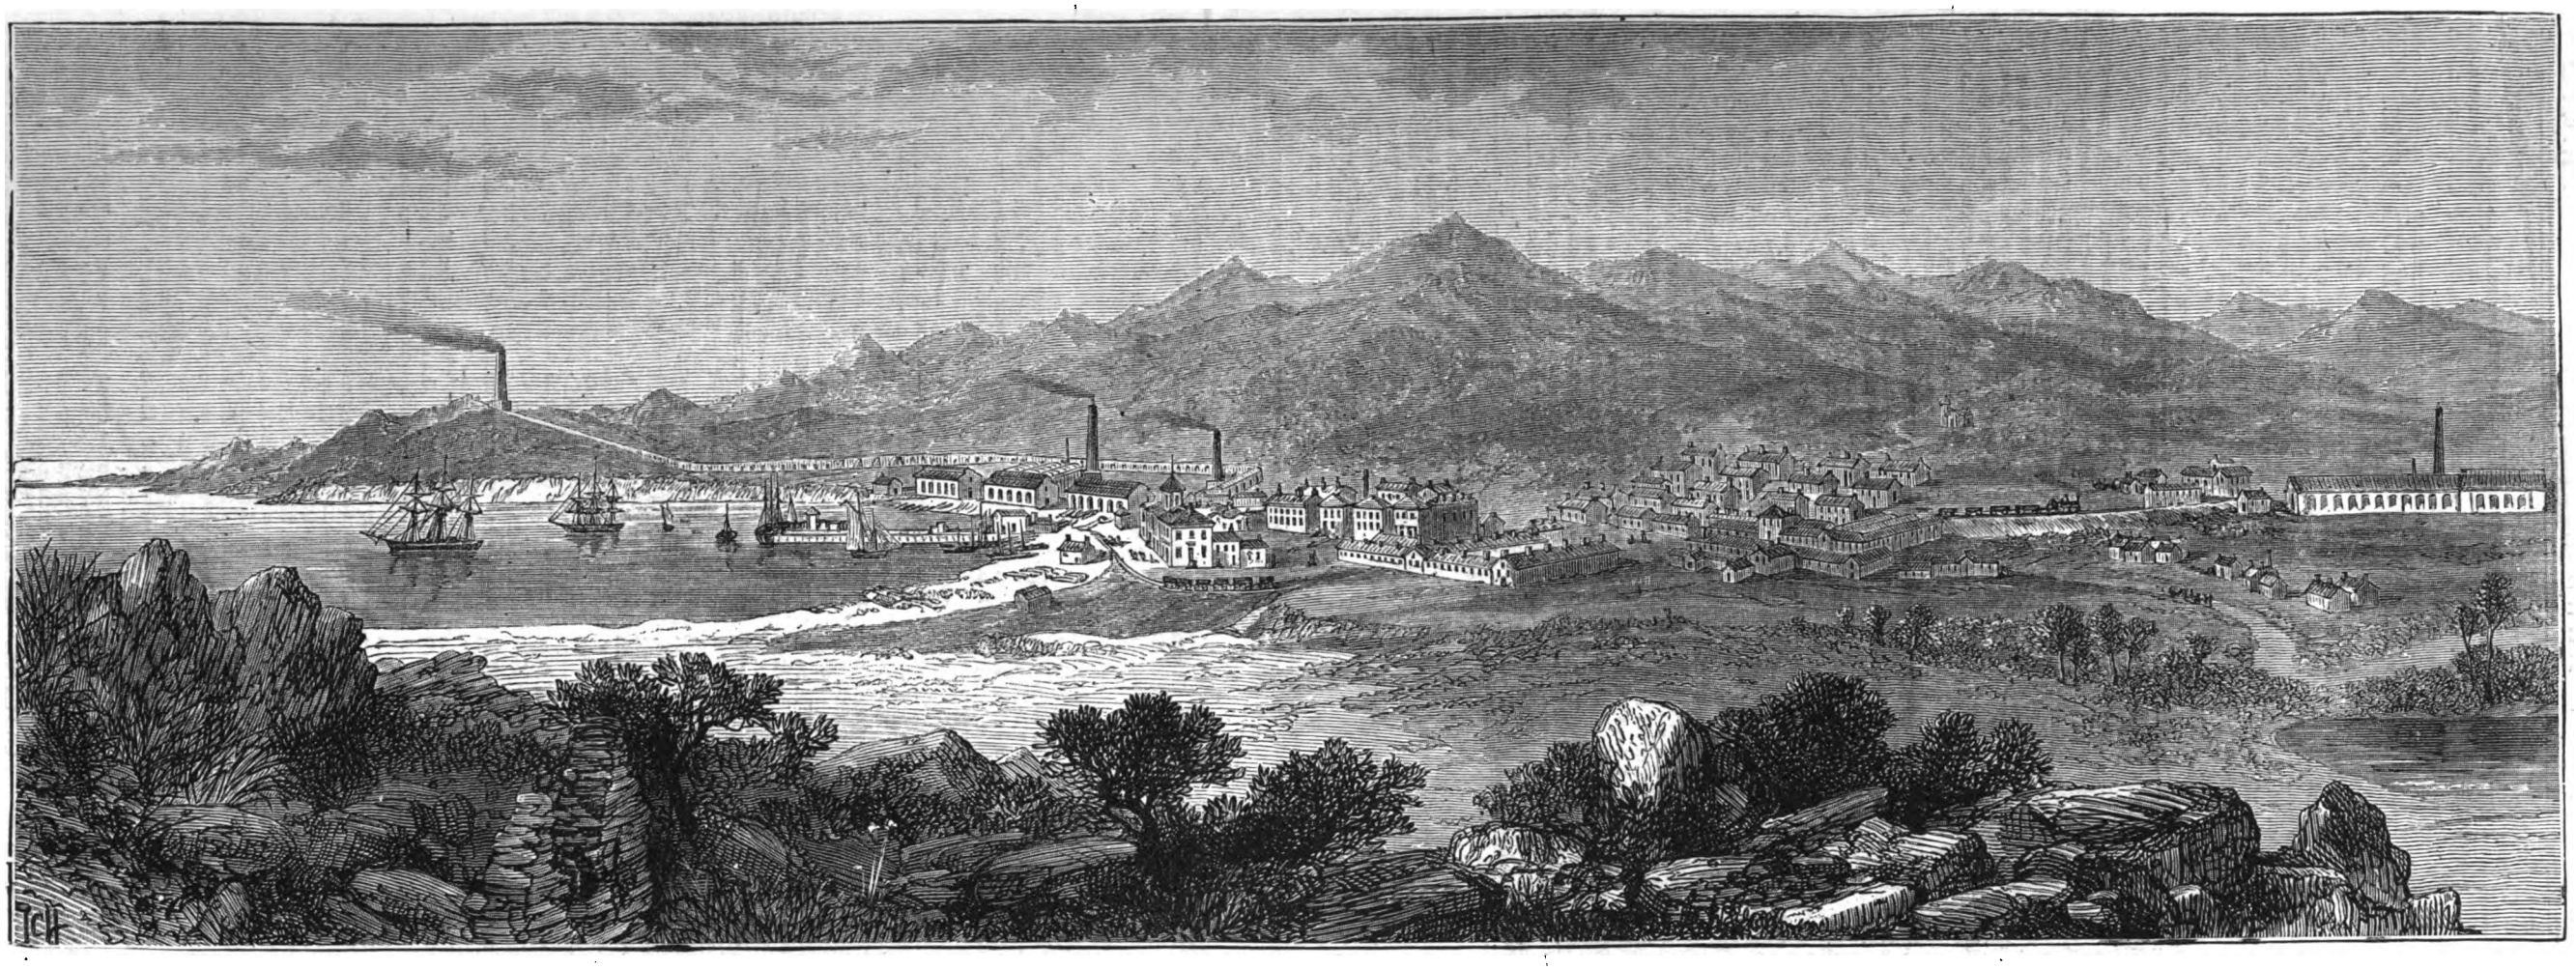
G. A. S.



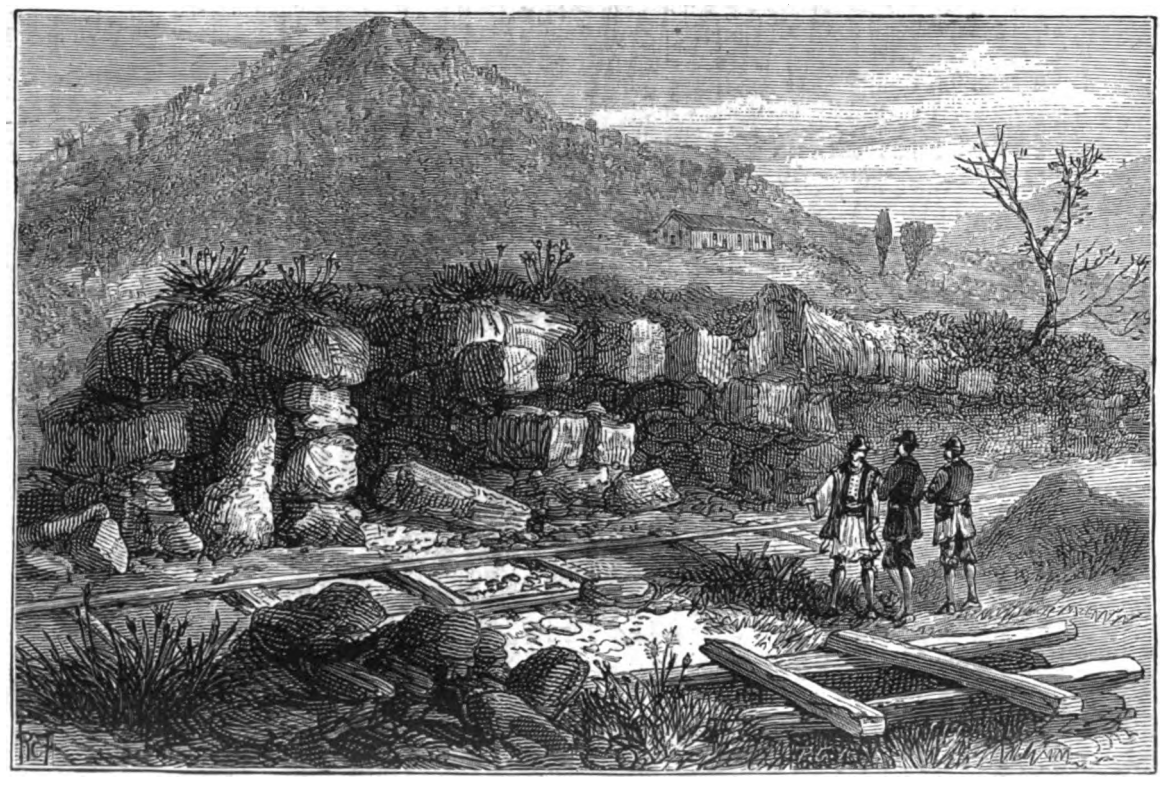
Digitized by Google

SKETCHES IN THE COLORADO MINING DISTRICTS, NORTH AMERICA.

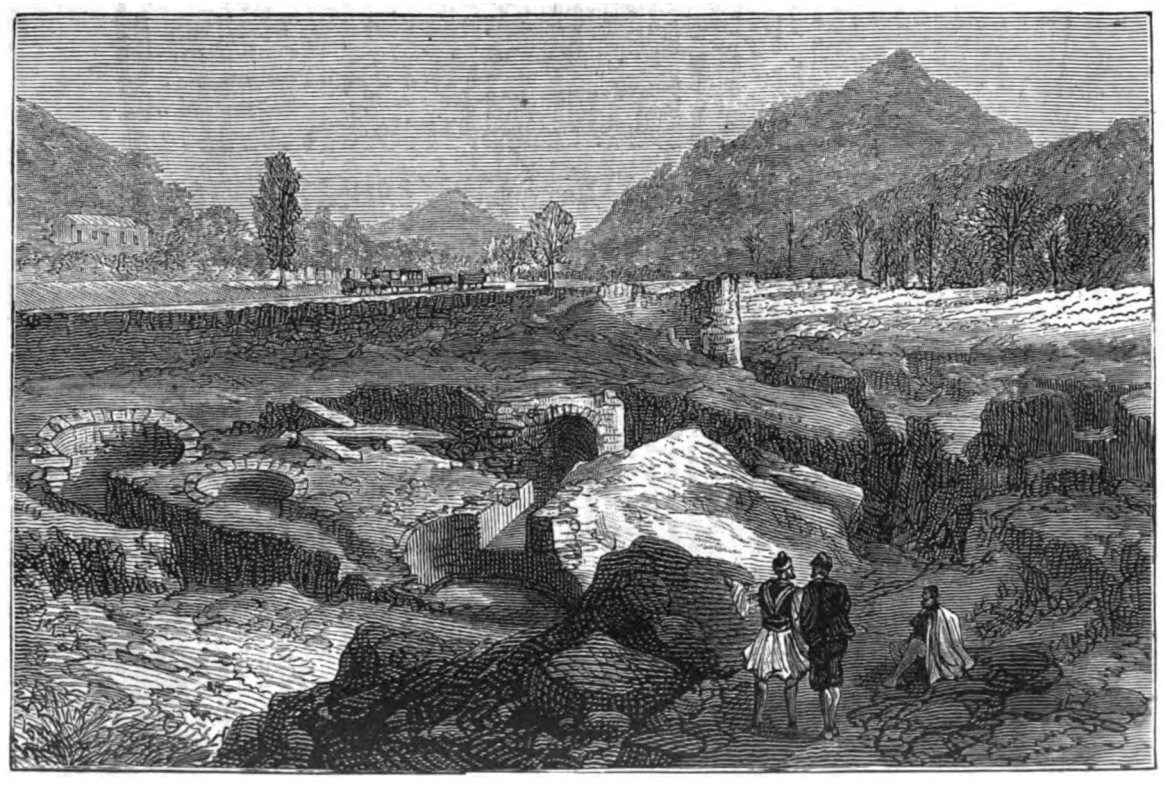
SEE PAGE 446.



MULES LOADED WITH WINTER STORES, REVENUE MINES.



HAULING LOGS FOR HUT BUILDING IN COLORADO.



Digitized by Google

THE LAURIUM SILVER MINES IN GREECE: GENERAL VIEW OF THE TOWN AND PORT.

ANCIENT FURNACES.

ANCIENT WASHING-PLACE.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

Digitized by Google

PARISIAN SAYINGS AND DOINGS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Paris, Tuesday, Nov. 2.

To-day and yesterday were devoted by the Parisians to the cult of the dead. Thousands of persons visited the cemeteries; the curious went to see the crowds and to gape at the celebrated tombs; the pious, to lay wreaths and fresh flowers on the graves of their departed friends. The reactionary and religious journals have endeavoured to make out that the visits to the cemeteries this year were more numerous than ever, and that the French thus made an imposing manifestation against the irreligious and profane conduct of the Government. I only mention this as an instance of the ingenuity of party spirit. In point of fact, the cult of the dead, as now practised, did not come into vogue until 1830; and before that time expensive monuments and the custom of placing wreaths and flowers on graves was little practised. Now they are all the rage. The commerce in sepulchral ornaments, immortelles, bead and wire-work wreaths, medallions and plaster angels, represents in Paris alone four millions of francs annually. In speaking of this cult of the dead as a fashion, I do not intend to be cynical; it is literally a fashion which has become very rapidly in vogue during the last ten years. More than half the Parisians who crowd the cemeteries are empty-handed sight-seers, and after having gazed to their hearts' content at the mourners, the monuments, and each other, they go the play.

Apropos of theatres, the Paul Deroulède bubble has at last burst; his piece, the "Moabite," was read in Madame Edmond Adam's salon last Sunday before the assembled critics of Paris, and was found to be—a five-act tragedy in verse. The verses are poor and the plot is of moderate interest; its withdrawal from the Français has probably saved its author from the qualified failure known here as a succès d'estime. But the strange part of the whole affair is that M. Deroulède brings the blackest charges against M. Jules Ferry and the Ministry, whom he accuses of having influenced the manager of the Français and caused the performance of his piece to be indefinitely postponed.

The political atmosphere is about as far from set fair as ever. During the past week M. Constans has caused the religious decrees to be executed all over the country against the unauthorised congregations. Nearly everywhere the monks, fanaticised by the Royalists, barricaded themselves in their convents, and caused the police to lay a regular siege in order to evict them. Their resistance was evidently political rather than religious. It is natural that the congréganistes, reserving their eventual right, should resort only to force. The simple turning of a key, the placing of a policeman's hand on a shoulder sufficed for this protestation, which remained dignified and legal. This was the way in which the Jesuits acted at the beginning. But this did not answer the purpose of the Legitimist agitators, which, above all, is to habituate the minds of the people to riotous resistance and rebellion. As one of the most influential Legitimist journals said this morning, their desire is to agitate the country, and to command the attention even of the indifferent by noisy and tumultuous protestation, going even as far as scandal and riot. Magistrates and police commissioners continue to resign, and are immediately replaced. Last week the Attorney-General Campenon, in pronouncing sentence against a criminal, seized the occasion to announce in full Court his intention of resigning. This official was immediately revoked.

It is curious at the present moment to watch the ingenious way in which some of the most unscrupulous boulevard journals are turning this religious decree question to their own advantage. The reader is perhaps surprised that I have not yet mentioned the creation of a new newspaper this week. Patience! One has appeared. It is called l'Emancipation, organe du parti ouvrier. It is a one-sou daily, edited by the Socialist Benoît Malon. But in a few days the weekly Legitimist journal, Le Triboulet, is to become a daily political journal. It is largely subventioned by some leading Royalists, and a number of the staff of the Figaro and Gaulois and other Legitimist journals have deserted to man the new ship. The consequence is that the Figaro and Gaulois are "putting on a spurt" in order to keep their circulation up. The Figaro has not only started a huge memorial or protest "in favour of liberty of conscience," but it has undertaken to find employment in banks, financial companies, and railways, for magistrates and functionaries who have resigned or been revoked in consequence of the religious decrees. The idea is worthy of Villemessant. If he were alive, he would exclaim, with his hoarse voice: "Ah! elle est bien bonne celle-là!" What next may we expect?

After all, this religious question is causing immense agitation in the country and doing the Republican cause no good. The latest protest against the decrees comes from the group of Comtists, of whom Dr. Sémerie is the president. The Positivists demand entire spiritual liberty, with the suppression of the budget of public worship.

After M. Floquet, M. Clémenceau has pronounced a programme-speech at Marseilles. M. Clémenceau's criticisms of M. Gambetta's policy and position command more attention than his programme.

And now yet another war has arisen. The veteran publicist, Emile de Girardin, has begun a vigorous campaign against the irreconcilable Radicals, against MM. Clémenceau, Rochefort, Félix Pyat, &c., whom he accuses of being mere promotors of revolution for the sake of revolution.

Meanwhile Félix Pyat continues to thunder against Gambetta. His Berezowski subscription is at an end. Last Sunday he presided over a "regicide punch" or banquet at Belleville; showed the pistol of honour to an admiring audience, who cried "Vive la Commune!" while one woman suggested that the arm was intended to shoot Gambetta. Félix Pyat then delivered a panegyric of regicide, and announced that he had opened a petition to demand the destruction of the Chapelle Expiatoire, erected in memory of Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette. The champion of regicide has, by-the-way, appealed against the judgment which condemned him to two years' imprisonment on account of this Berezowski subscription. The case will be heard on Thursday.

This mere bare statement of a few of the incidents of the week must convey to the reader a bewildering idea of disorder and agitation. Here is the Government waging war against monks, and against Communist journalists; here is Félix Pyat thundering against Gambetta and M. Clémenceau, and a dozen others joining in the chorus: there are the Royalist journals doing their best to stir up civil war to the cry of Vive le Roi! While in the background loom the angry faces of General de Cissey and the Baronne de Kaulla, both eager to throw mud at a Republican officer, and to reveal scandals upon scandals in the administration of the country. It is in truth a far from satisfactory state of affairs.

At the Ministerial Council held this morning it was decided to resume the execution of the decrees in the provinces to-morrow. It was also decided that Félix Pyat's journal, La Commune, should be prosecuted again for an article published in yesterday's number, "A bas l'Armée de Cissey," signed General Cluseret.

T. C.

The Extra Supplement.

LIFE-BOAT SERVICE ON THE COAST.

The large Engraving, presented as an Extra Supplement to this week's Number of our Journal, will be regarded with interest by our readers, whose attention was called last week, in a leading article, to the annual reports of wrecks and maritime disasters on the shores of the British Islands, published by the Royal National Life-Boat Institution. It is a subject which has always engaged the sympathy and earnest goodwill of the conductors of the Illustrated London News; and the life-boat stationed at Skegness, on the Lincolnshire coast, bearing the name of "Herbert Ingram," attests the degree of practical consideration with which that work of saving lives from shipwreck has been regarded in this quarter for many years past. Some of the Illustrations, moreover, which represent the actual incidents of the past few days, and which appear in the ordinary Supplement, are Sketches of the scenes recently witnessed at Scarborough and at Plymouth, during the violent gale of Thursday week, when the life-boat crews and the coastguard men, with their rocket and line apparatus, rescued a great many persons from drowning on board different vessels that were driven ashore, and that were quickly broken up by the force of the waves. It will, probably, be sufficient here to refer to the simple account of a few such incidents, entitled "The Late Storms and Wrecks," as the best commentary upon the subject of our artist's drawing, "Life-Boat Service," in which we see the life-boat crew, each man equipped with his cork belt, close under the lee of the stranded ship; one of them stands holding the loaded stick or handle attached to the line of rope, which he is about to cast on board the vessel, for the escape of her crew. We may here also notice the Engraving, which occupies our front page, representing a vessel in distress at sea, and the act of cutting away her masts to relieve her, in some degree, from the stress of the gale driving her swiftly to destruction. The imagination even of landsmen, and of dwellers inland, must have been familiarised with these conditions of peril in the raging waters, and with the means of possible escape, from a perusal of narratives which could scarcely exaggerate the tremendous nature of such experiences in a storm at sea upon a dangerous lee shore, where the coast affords no ready entrance into a sheltering harbour. We can but again and again recommend to a continuance of public liberality the claims of that excellent institution, at 14, John-street, Adelphi, whose administration, directed by the best official and nautical experience, and the most exact knowledge of local wants and agencies, provides so admirably the kind of help needful upon these terrible occasions. Subscriptions to the funds of the Royal National Life-Boat Institution are sure to be applied to a purely beneficent purpose, for which it is, perhaps, natural to feel more lively concern at this season of the year, when the storms of winter have begun to vex all floating craft, with their crews and passengers, around this island of Great Britain.

THE COLORADO MINING DISTRICTS.

The precious metals are abundantly procured by mining in several States and territories on both sides, east and west, of the Rocky Mountains. Colorado, which extends southward of the Union Pacific railroad line, including the elevated districts situated between the Great Divide Range of the Continent and the Mosquito or other secondary ranges, is especially rich in silver-lead ore. It has attracted a large immigrant population within the last twenty years; but their first rush was for gold on the "placers" or surface diggings. It was not till 1870 that silver was obtained in large quantities in Colorado. Silver is got from lodes or veins in the rock, not from placers or alluvial deposits. There are now many important silver-mining districts in Boulder County, Park, Clear Creek, Gilpin, Fremont, San Juan, and Summit County, the silver being accompanied sometimes with copper, sometimes with lead. Not a few large fortunes have been quickly gained by the discovery of a "bonanza," which is the Spanish Mexican word for a rich body of ore; and a great deal of capital has been sunk in excavating deep shafts, galleries, levels, and drifts, and in erecting the machinery, stamping-mills, smelting-furnaces, and other apparatus, to extract the valuable metal. The town of Leadville, near the head of the Arkansas river, 10,000 ft. above the level of the sea, has grown up since July, 1878, from a village of 500 souls, to contain a population of 15,000, with signs of still increasing prosperity; and its production of silver ore is 15,000,000 tons in the year, but this has hardly made up for the decline of the great Comstock Mine in Nevada. At Denver, the capital of this State, are the Argo Smelting Works of the Boston and Colorado Mining Company, which form a vast concern, treating more than 100 tons of ore daily. It is furnished with thirty large roasting-kilns, and different furnaces to perform the operations of calcining, smelting, and melting down, after which the "matte" of silver is separated by precipitation, while in a fluid solution, from the slag or refuse matter, and is finally cast into solid bars, each weighing about 1700 ounces. A ton of silver is worth £5000 sterling.

The Rocky Mountains in Colorado are now pierced by three narrow-gauge railroads to the very backbone. Following the streams, now through "canyons," or ravines, that were altogether impassable on foot, with walls almost touching in places, and shooting up in pinnacles 1000 to 1500 feet high, then climbing inclines that were impracticable a few years ago, and passing round dizzy curves, the engineer has made a foothold for the "iron horse." The traveller now reaches the heart of the mineral belt luxuriously reposing in a Pullman car; and preparations are being made to carry the three-feet gauge right over the range, at more than 11,000 feet above sea level, to the Pacific Slope, and on to the wilderness which is still held, for a short time to come, by the Red Indian, the bear, the big-horn, and the Wapiti deer.

Whatever may be the delights of a summer residence in these grand mountain scenes, more substantial temptations are required to induce mankind to face the rigorous climate of winter. These advantages are provided by the gold and silver mines. Above 10,500 feet high on the mountain range, which is about the limit at which timber grows, snow may be said to prevail for half the year. But this is not permitted to interfere with the underground operations in the silver-mines. Before the heavy snows set in, the storehouses are filled with every requisite, and work goes on as usual through the winter.

Our sketches are from the property of the Revenue Mineral Company, Limited, of London, which has some years been opening up an extensive mining interest, about sixty miles from Denver. The mining work is almost exclusively done by Cornishmen, who cherish their home customs; their Saturday night's toast, and the Christmas cheer, are never forgotten. They earn very good wages, the average pay being 12s. a day, and enjoy excellent health. It should be observed that life at these mines even in winter is not nearly so isolated as these sketches would seem to indicate. The railroad is but thirteen miles distant, and frequent runs are taken, on Norwegian snow shoes, to the station, where home letters for some of the "boys" are usually found, of not longer date than fourteen days from England.

THE LAURIUM SILVER MINES.

On the southern promontory of Attica, near Cape Colonna and the conspicuous ruins of the ancient Temple of Minerva overlooking the Ægean Sea, is the little port, with the village and extensive ranges of building, occupied by the modern industry of the Laurium Silver Mines. Sketches of these were made by our Special Artist, Mr. Melton Prior, when he visited Greece towards the end of 1876, upon the occasion of the Prince and Princess of Wales being entertained by the King and Queen of that country at Athens. We read in Herodotus that, when Themistocles proposed to increase the Athenian naval force to carry on the war with Egina and to prevent Xerxes bringing over his great army from Asia, that statesman found a valuable financial expedient for the purpose. There was a large sum just then accruing to the State from the Laurium silver mines, either by the accumulation of annual rents or fines during a period of years, or by the purchase money of a new lease or contract for working these mines. It was to be distributed, in the usual course, among the privileged citizens of Athens, as a sort of bonus or bounty, ten drachmas being the share of each Athenian freeman. But the public-spirited wisdom and eloquence of Themistocles persuaded his fellow-citizens to forego this gratification, and apply the money to the cost of strengthening their fleet with new ships. The subject is discussed in the fifth volume, page 74, of Grote's History of Greece.

The Laurium silver mines began to be worked, in a rude and primitive fashion, very early; but such operations were probably not undertaken, on a considerable scale, until after the expulsion of Hippias and the establishment of a democratic constitution by Cleisthenes. It seems to have been the practice of the Athenian Government to lease out particular sections of the mining district, for a long term of years, to individuals or to companies who carried on the industry, and who paid down a large sum, by way of fine, at the granting of the lease, besides a reserved yearly rent, estimated at the twenty-fourth part of the gross produce. Whatever has been ascertained of this matter will be found in the learned dissertation by Böckh, appended to his work on the "Public Economy of Athens." The Laurium district was surveyed in 1836 by Dr. Fiedler, and described in his "Reisen durch Griechenland," which contains an account of the ancient mining-shafts, washing-places for ore, and furnaces constructed and used by the Greeks more than two thousand years ago. All the work then was done by gangs of slaves.

Two of our Illustrations, sketched by Mr. Prior, represent those ancient remains of the mining industry which served to enrich the Athenian Republic. We also give a view of the town on the seacoast, as it now appears, since the revival of mining operations with modern appliances; the extensive smelting furnaces, and their tall smoky chimneys, reminding us of a manufacturing village in the North of England. Both gold and silver are obtained here, in paying quantities, from the refuse which the ancients had thrown aside in their diggings at the mines up in the neighbouring mountain district. There is a short line of railway, about six miles, with a locomotive to draw trucks, from the seaport up to the mines, by which the material is sent down to be operated upon for the extraction of the precious ore. This railway is shown, towards the right hand of our Engraving, in our general view. To the left hand will be observed a long low wall, extending up the hill to a smoking chimney erected some considerable distance from the main buildings of the refiners' factory, and from the dwelling-houses of the work-people. This wall is that of a covered or vaulted passage by which the smoke from some of the furnaces, where quicksilver is used to extract the precious metal from the ore, passes off so as to discharge its poisonous fumes away from human habitations. The passage is opened but once a year, and we are told that the soot is then carefully scraped from the roof and walls of the vault, and that particles of gold and silver have been obtained from this soot.

The Laurium mines were formerly leased by the Government of the Kingdom of Greece to a mixed Company of French, Italian, and other adventurers, who disagreed with the Government upon financial arrangements. The working of the mines was then for some time suspended. But, a few years since, the privilege of collecting the scoriæ left from the ancient mining operations, and extracting the gold which remained in that substance by means of chemical processes unknown to the Greeks of antiquity, was granted to a new Company, and its undertaking has been very successful. The members of the present company, we understand, are all Greeks.

At a meeting convened by the Mayor of Birmingham, held at the Townhall on Thursday week, it was resolved to hold a dairy show at Bingley Hall in September, 1881. The Mayor of Birmingham was elected chairman, and several vice-presidents were appointed, including the Duke of Westminster, Earl of Powis, and the Right Hon. J. Chamberlain, M.P.

The proprietors of the Albion Eyelet Manufactory at Birmingham have patented a new and economical process for the production of eyelets and washers, sail thimbles, and hollow rings in Bessemer steel annealed. Under this patent all eyelets are tinned and then stamped, the latter process giving a perfectly clear surface, and, by closing the pores of the metal, prevents rust.

Lectures have been given under the auspices of the National Providence League, at Trowbridge, Hereford, Liverpool, Macclesfield, and Leamington, and others are arranged. At Trowbridge a local branch of the league has been formed. At the conclusion of the lecture at Hereford, at which the Bishop presided, a resolution in favour of the views of the lecturer, the Rev. W. L. Blackley, was moved by Mr. Raulken, M.P., and carried unanimously.

Sir E. Henderson, Commissioner of Police, was present on Monday evening at the annual public meeting of the Metropolitan Cabmen's Society. In the course of a brief address, he said that although the number of charges for drunkenness against cabmen was steadily decreasing, the public-house was their special failing. He was of opinion that London cab-drivers displayed much skill in their profession, and said it was the desire of his department to deal leniently with licensed drivers.

According to the quarterly return of the Registrar-General, in the United Kingdom the births of 279,210 children, and the deaths of 169,427 persons, were registered in the three months ending Sept. 30. The recorded natural increase of population was thus 109,783. The registered number of persons married in the quarter ending June 30 was 113,511. The resident population of the United Kingdom in the middle of 1880 is estimated at 34,505,043; that of England and Wales at 25,480,161, of Scotland 3,661,292, and of Ireland at 5,363,590.

Digitized by Google

THE PLAYHOUSES.

Among the many mysteries of the Stage there is not one to me more inscrutable than the seemingly total and hopeless incapacity of dramatists, managers, stage managers, and actors and actresses, whose standing entitles them to be listened to with deference, to discover prior to the production of a play that it is too long, and that it contains a number of uninteresting scenes. All these good people are, or should be, experts, and long experienced experts in their craft. Over and over again they have tried the temper and gauged the patience of critical audiences, and they should be trustworthy judges of the fitness of things dramatic. When a novice in play writing submits a piece to a manager, that worthy functionary will frequently say to him, "My good Sir, I have read your play. In many parts it is a capital one. I admire it very much, and should like to produce it; but it is not practicable; and it can't be done." Exit ambitious dramatist, bitterly disappointed. But how is it when a drama by a recognised and practical playwright has been accepted, when it has undergone numerous rehearsals, when every line in it has been weighed and reweighed, when all the performers have been thoroughly drilled in their parts, and when the piece has gone through the final ordeal of a dress rehearsal, that all these clever and experienced people are as blind as bats and as deaf as adders to the fact that the recognised playwright's production is twice or thrice as long as it should be, and that a considerable proportion of its scenes and characters are intolerably dreary and wearisome? I will not say anything about the professional dramatic critics; but how does it happen that the persons who are usually unerring in discovering that a play is too lengthy and deficient in interest are not the fine folks in the boxes and stalls, but the occupants of the gallery?

The Dutch drama of "Anne-Mie," written by Mynheer Rosier Faassen, very skilfully and sympathetically translated from the Batavian vernacular by "an unknown hand"—which I suspect to be a feminine one—and adapted to English stage purposes by a gentleman whose desire to preserve the anonymous I respect, but who is very well known in literary and theatrical circles as a dexterous dramatist and an accomplished dramatic critic, was produced on Monday last at the Prince of Wales's Theatre. The play enjoyed, to begin with, the very precious advantage of the part of the heroine being sustained by Miss Geneviève Ward, the famous impersonator of "Forget me Not," and one of the most earnest, studious, and scholar-like of living tragédiennes, and of including in its "cast" actors of the acknowledged merit of Mr. Fernandez, Mr. Flockton, and Mr. Forbes Robertson. Let me hasten to say that everybody engaged in the piece, from the stately heroine to the pudgy little Dutch boy and girl who take part in the "Kissing-Bridge" scene, did their very best to promote the success of the drama, which was admirably although unpretentiously mounted; but, all this notwithstanding, "Anne-Mie" only achieved, on the first night, a moderate amount of success. The inordinate length to which it was protracted, and the intolerable amount of "talkee talkee" in which the characters indulged fairly tired out an audience normally good-natured, and who had evidently come prepared to be pleased and to manifest their gratification in no stinted manner. Whenever there occurred a situation, or even a speech, which fairly deserved applause, that tribute of admiration was instantly and ungrudgingly given; but rarely have I witnessed a drama presenting so few opportunities for the manifestation of even what may be termed "First Night Enthusiasm."

"Anne-Mie" was produced so recently in its original language at the Aquarium Theatre, and its painful and (to English feelings) somewhat repulsive plot was so ably summarised by my esteemed predecessor in this column, that I am happily absolved from telling the dismal story in detail again. It is sufficient to hint that in the first act Anne-Mie appears as the youthful and beauteous daughter of an old Dutch miser, and that she is cruelly wronged by an English engineer named Herbert Russell. When her father discovers the injury his daughter has suffered, he pursues her betrayer and stabs him in the back. In the interval between the first and second acts he is supposed to have undergone a sentence of three years' solitary confinement for attempting to murder the engineer. Fifteen more years also intervene. We begin in 1850, and Act the Second takes us to 1868. The liberated miser and his family have removed from their farm at West Kapelle, in the island of Walcheren, to the village of Heer-Arendskerke, in the island of South Beveland. "Anne-Mie" is eighteen years older, and there resides with her a pretty girl who is supposed to be her niece, but who is in reality her daughter by the engineer Russell, who has not been heard of since his mischance at West Kapelle. Lise, the supposititious niece of Anne-Mie, loves and is beloved by a gallant young fellow of good family, named Koenraad Deel, whose parents are ready to sanction his marriage with any eligible young damsel of spotless lineage and surroundings. Anne-Mie has been sworn to secrecy by her father as to the melancholy parentage of her daughter; but the secret also has been discovered by a revolting villain and misanthropist called Jan Schuif, alias "The Fiend." This morose scoundrel wants to marry Lise, but his matrimonial proposals meet with an indignant repulse from Anne-Mie. Then Lise, half by intuition and half by accident, discovers that Anne-Mie is not her aunt, but her mother. The wretched Anne-Mie is constrained to write a letter to Koenraad to confess her daughter's parentage; and that fine young fellow, dreading the paternal malediction, is about reluctantly to break off the match, when Herbert Russell, the engineer, returns completely repentant, begs pardon all round, claims Anne-Mie as his bride, and is enabled, by Dutch law, to legitimatise his daughter; so that Koenraad Deel is in a position to marry Lise without derogating from the respectability of his family. All this involves a great deal of moaning and grouning, sighing and sobbing, to which the audience (since the wind for the nonce blows from the Lachrymose Latitudes) might not object, were the anguish confined to Anne-Mie and her daughter; but the adaptor has distributed the misery impartially among the dramatis personæ; and Miss Geneviève Ward, with the characteristic generosity of a real artist, has refrained from taking the lion's share of sorrow to herself. In fact, in some portions of the play, she is the all but impassible spectatress of the woes of others.

That excellent actor Mr. Flockton, who might have made a real hit in the part of Jan Schuif, "The Fiend," becomes absolutely unbearable, through the dreadful iteration, in long-drawn expositions, of the wrongs which he has endured and of the reasons which have led him to abhor mankind in general, and the inhabitants of the village of Heer Arendskerke in particular. Jan Schuif, in the end, is worse than any villain that ever trod the stage. He becomes an unmitigated Bore. Mr. James Fernandez as the miser, Dirksen, alias Father Brouwer, plays most intelligently and forcibly, reminding one from time to time (not that Mr. Fernandez is by any means an imitative artist) of Mr. Benjamin Webster in the "Dead Heart." But Anne-Mie and her daughter, in whom the chief interest of the piece should be concentrated, are over-weighted by the prominence which Mr. Fernandez cannot help giving to his part. His scenes of anger, madness, and remorse are so inevitably conspicuous that they occasionally place the heroine in a secondary rank, and cause the spectator to speculate whether the drama might not as well be called "Dirksen; or, the Provoked Father," instead of "Anne-Mie." Mr. Forbes Robertson as Koenraad Deel bore himself very manfully, and was a frank, cordial, and sufficiently tender lover; and Miss C. Grahame looked very comely, and was alternately arch and pathetic as Lise. She is a very promising young lady, although she has a great deal to learn. Mrs. Leigh Murray showed all the aplomb of an experienced actress as Neeltje Kwak, the shrewish but kind-hearted wife of a village inn-keeper; and Mr. De Lange as Kwak himself was mildly and inoffensively humorous. Mr. Edgar Bruce played the disagreeable part of Herbert Russell carefully; but the character is essentially unsympathetic, and he could do little with it. What on earth could have suggested to the adapter the idea of making a Lovelace of Mr. Herbert Russell? I have met with some hundreds of English engineers in foreign parts, and have generally found them to be too much occupied with their theodolites and spirit-levels to waste their time in carying ruin and disgrace into the bosoms of respectable families.

Miss Geneviève Ward showed herself in Anne-Mie that which she can never fail to be, a consummate dramatic artist, capable of expressing certai n emotions in the noblest and most eloquent manner. It is hers to denounce, to inveigh, and to command. Bitter sarcasm and passionate remonstrance are her forte; but she leans towards somewhat too rigid measure and proportion and balance in her interpretation of character. She is academical rather than spontaneous; and real pathos is unmeasured and full of spontaneity. Anne-Mie is a part wholly unsuited to her. It is much more below than above her capacity, since it affords her the scantiest opportunities of doing justice to the really great qualities which she possesses. Still, had the piece been shorter, Miss Geneviève Ward would have been able to obtain a far firmer hold on her audience than she secured on the first night. Compressed into two, or, at the most, into three acts, "Anne-Mie" may still become a successful play. As I saw it on Monday, it was suggestive to me of little beyond a great Dutch treykschuyt, dragged through a canal by several mourning-coach horses on the towing-path, with a numerous crew of undertakers' men—who, alas! were not mutes—and several Bodies on board.

G. A. S.

MUSIC.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

The specialty of last week—occurring too late for notice until now—was the first appearance of Mdlle. Elisa Widmar. The opera was "Faust," in which, as Margherita, the lady was to have appeared on the opening night of the season (Oct. 18); but, as already recorded, indisposition prevented her, and she was then very efficiently replaced by Mdlle. Bauermeister. The début of Mdlle. Widmar was highly successful, although she had not entirely recovered from the effects of her indisposition. She sang with much charm and refinement in the love-music of the garden scene, a little more brilliancy having been desirable in the jewel-song. In the cathedral scene and the closing situation of the opera Mdlle. Widmar displayed much capacity for pathetic expression; her singing and acting having both been commendable for earnest intensity without exaggeration. On this occasion Madame Trebelli resumed the character of Siebel, with great advantage to the general effect. Signor Runcio was the Faust, the cast otherwise having been as before. During last week Mdlle. Rosina Isidor repeated her artistic performance as Lucia, and on Saturday evening gained a fresh success by her effective singing as Gilda in "Rigoletto," the cast of which introduced, for the first time on this stage, Signor Aldighieri in the title-character. This gentleman achieved a genuine success by his fine singing and intelligent acting. His voice is an excellent baritone, which he uses with skill and facility—his intonation and phrasing being especially good. Some degree of tremolo, however, has to be objected to. If Signor Aldighieri will refrain from this his vocal performance will gain in effect. His impersonation of the unhappy Court Jester was free from the excess of buffoonery in which some representatives of the character indulge. He gave a powerful rendering of the sentiment of paternal love, and of the revengeful feelings of the wronged and insulted father. In the great scene, in the palace of the Duke, where Rigoletto recovers his daughter and vows to be revenged, Signor Aldighieri acted—as well as sang—with great effect. His reception throughout the opera was highly favourable. Signor Runcio, as the Duke, sang well in several instances—especially in the canzone, "La donna è mobile"—which was encored—and in the quartet, "Un di se ben," which also had to be repeated. In this piece, the co-operation of Madame Trebelli, as Maddalena, was of special value. The remaining features of the cast call for no notice. The first of the morning performances took place on Saturday, when "La Favorita" was repeated.

The first three nights of this week have been occupied with repetition performances—"Norma" on Monday, "Faust" on Tuesday, and "Carmen" on Wednesday. For Thursday "Les Huguenots" was announced, with the first appearance in England of Madame Giovannoni Zacchi as Valentina. Of this we must speak next week, as also of the début of Signor Manfrini, as Fernando in "La Favorita" yesterday (Friday), and of Mdlle. Isidor's first assumption here of the character of Violetta in "La Traviata" this (Saturday) afternoon.

Signor Tito Mattei's opera "Maria di Gand," and the Italian version of Wallace's "Maritana," are in preparation.

Last Saturday's Crystal Palace Concert programme included Mr. Wingham's overture entitled "Mors Janua Vitæ" (written in memory of a deceased relative). The work has already been spoken of with commendation in reference to its first performance at the recent Leeds Festival. Another speciality at Saturday's concert was a concerto for pianoforte, with orchestra, composed and performed by Herr Bonawitz, whose playing was more effective than his composition. The pianist was also heard in unaccompanied solos by Chopin. Two orchestral movements from M. Massenet's "Sacred Legend," "La Vierge," were given for the first time here. One—"Dernier Sommeil de la Vierge"—(for stringed instruments only), is of a graceful character; the other—"Danse Galiléenne"—is eccentric almost to grotesqueness. Schumann's overture to "The Bride of Messina," Beethoven's C minor symphony, and vocal pieces effectively rendered by Mdlle. Louise Pyk, completed the programme.

Mr. Walter Bache's ninth annual Pianoforte Recital (at St. James's Hall) on Monday afternoon, included his clever performances of Bach's fifth "Suite Anglaise;" and other unaccompanied solo pieces by Liszt, Chopin, and Tschaïkowsky; in all which he was much applauded by a large audience. Miss Anna Williams sang with much effect Cornelius's "Christmas Songs," and two performances by Von Bülow.

The twenty-third season of the Monday Popular Concerts begins next week with a strong programme, including Mozart's serenade in E flat for wind instruments, Beethoven's trio in B flat, Mendelssohn's variations in E flat for piano solo. Madame Koch-Bossenheimer is to be the vocalist and Mdlle. Janotha the pianist. The Saturday afternoon performances commence on Nov. 13.

A series of six opera recitals is being given on Saturday evenings at St. George's Hall, Langham-place, under the direction of Mr. Wm. Carter. The first of the series, "Il Trovatore," was performed last Saturday evening, and will be followed by Don Giovanni," "Norma," "La Sonnambula," "Lucrezia Borgia," and "Faust." The principal vocalists were Madame Ida Gillies Corri, Miss Beatrice Elmslie, Mr. James Sauvage, Mr. C. De Wolfe, Mr. H. Pope, and Signor Fabrini, and the chorus consisted of one hundred voices.

Last Saturday afternoon a Harvest Thanksgiving Evensong took place in Westminster Abbey, the service having been arranged, with the permission of Dean Stanley, by the London Gregorian Choral Association, and the music being all of "Gregorian" character. There were about 350 singers, composed of members of different church choirs.

The Musical Association inaugurated its seventh season on Monday at its usual meeting-place, the Beethoven Rooms, in Harley-street. The room was well filled. The subject of the paper was An Inquiry into the Origin and Growth of Certain Musical Idioms and Expressions. Dr. Stainer (who was in the chair), Mr. Cumings, Mr. Helmore, Mr. Stephens, and others took part in a subsequent discussion.

THE CHURCH.

The Archbishop of York has been ordered to leave England for the winter. He will go to Biarritz in a few days.

Dean Burgon, of Chichester, has presented a valuable stained-glass window to the parish church of Houghton Conquest, near Bedford, in memory of his brother-in-law, the late Archdeacon Rose. The event has been celebrated by special services and a public luncheon.

The Duke of Devonshire, as the present trustee of the will of the late Hon. Robert Boyle, has, upon the recommendation of the Bishop of London, appointed the Rev. Robinson Thornton, D.D., Vicar of St. John's, Notting-hill, to be Boyle Lecturer, in succession to the Rev. Dr. Maclear.

The Bishop of Manchester, replying to a correspondent, condemns the expenses in connection with funerals as wasteful and extravagant, and says that an improvement in this respect will come about as soon as people bring their common sense to bear upon the consideration of the matter.

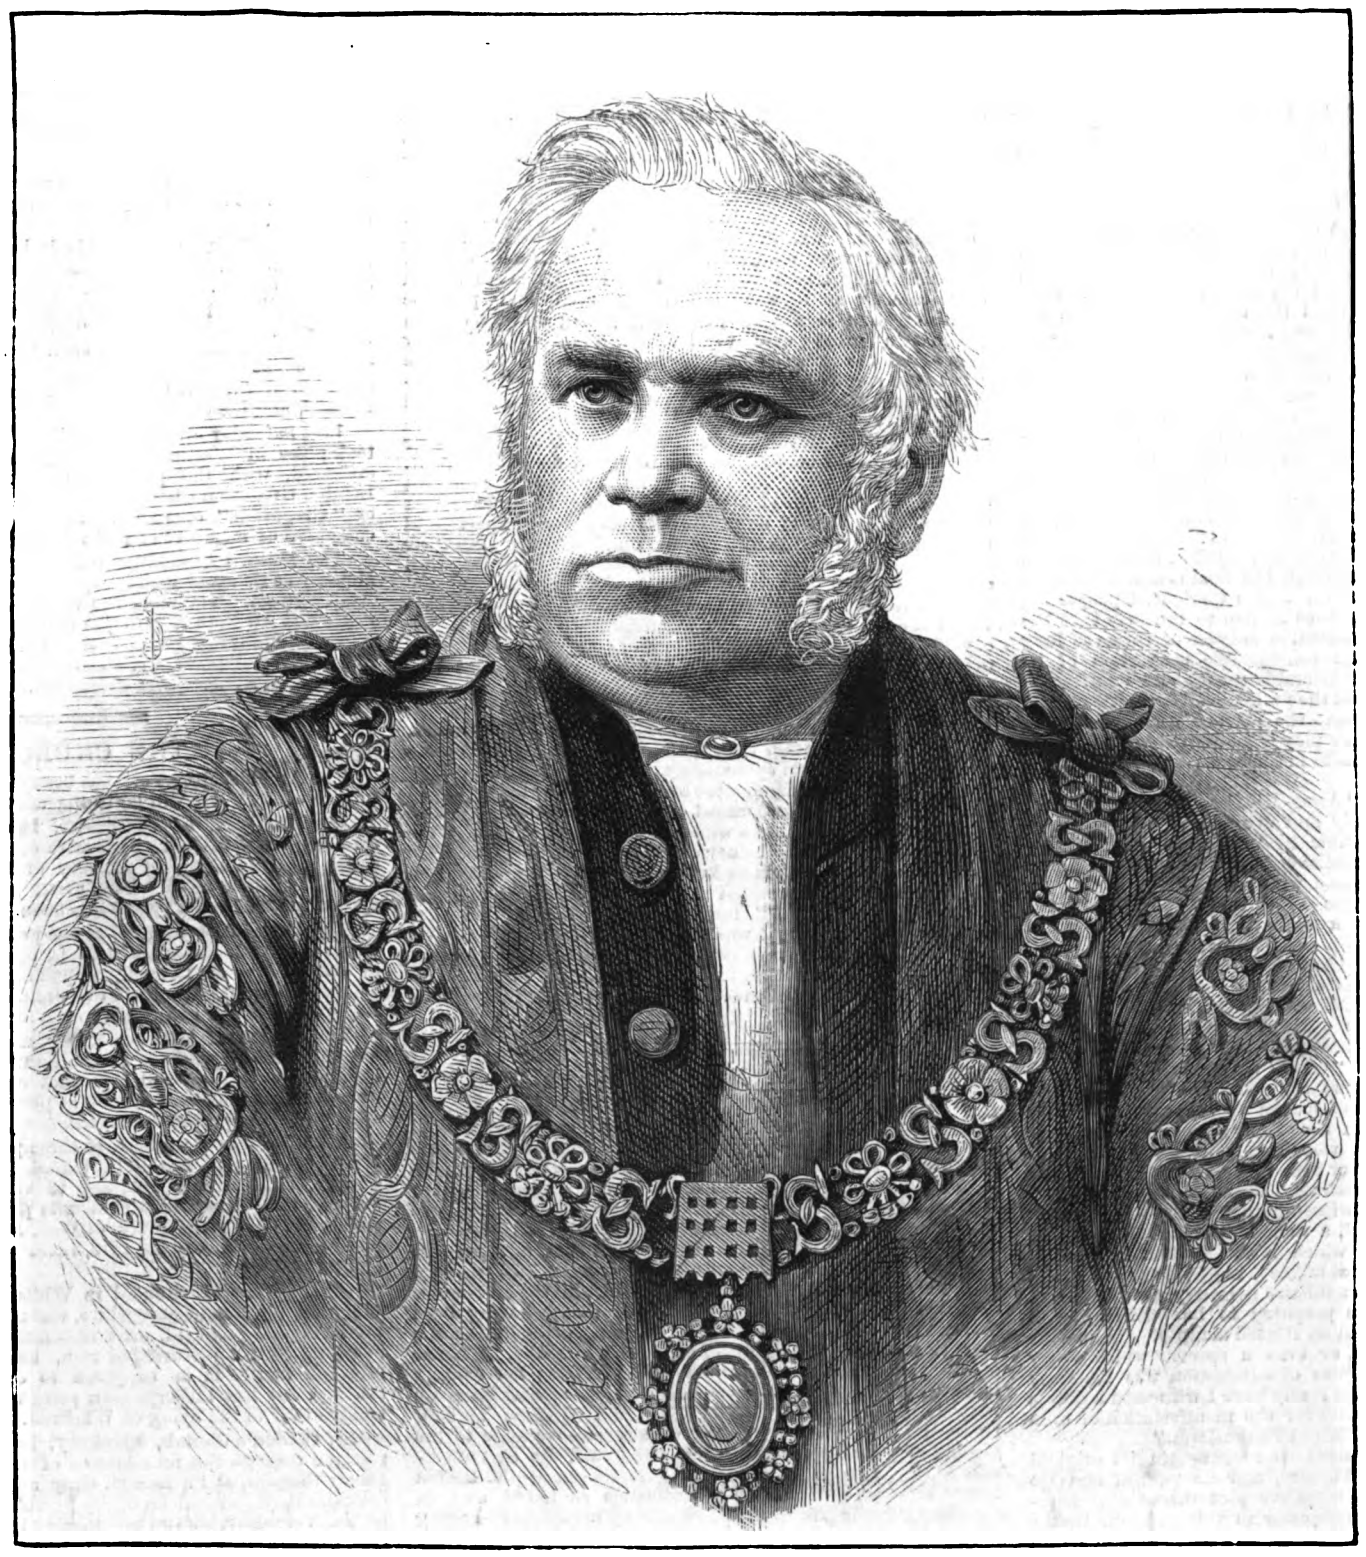
A stained-glass window, in three parts, to the memory of Mr. Mark Lemon, has been placed in the aisle of Crawley Church, Sussex. In addition to various texts round the borders, the following inscription is placed at the foot of the memorial:—"To the glory of God, and in memory of Mark Lemon, who died May 25, 1870, these three lights are placed by his family."

Streetley chapel, situated in Whitwell, a few miles from Worksop, but within Derbyshire, was reopened on Tuesday by the Bishop of Lichfield, after restoration. The chapel, which has long been a picturesque ruin, has considerable interest attached to it. It is supposed to date from the eleventh century. It has hitherto been private property, but is now handed over to the living of Whitwell.

St. Oswald's Church, Blankney, having been thoroughly restored through the munificence of Lady Florence and Mr. Henry Chaplin, M.P., Messrs. Gray and Davison were lately commissioned to build an organ from specifications prepared by Dr. Verrinder, who on Sunday last played at the morning and evening services, which were fully choral. The choir numbered over thirty voices.

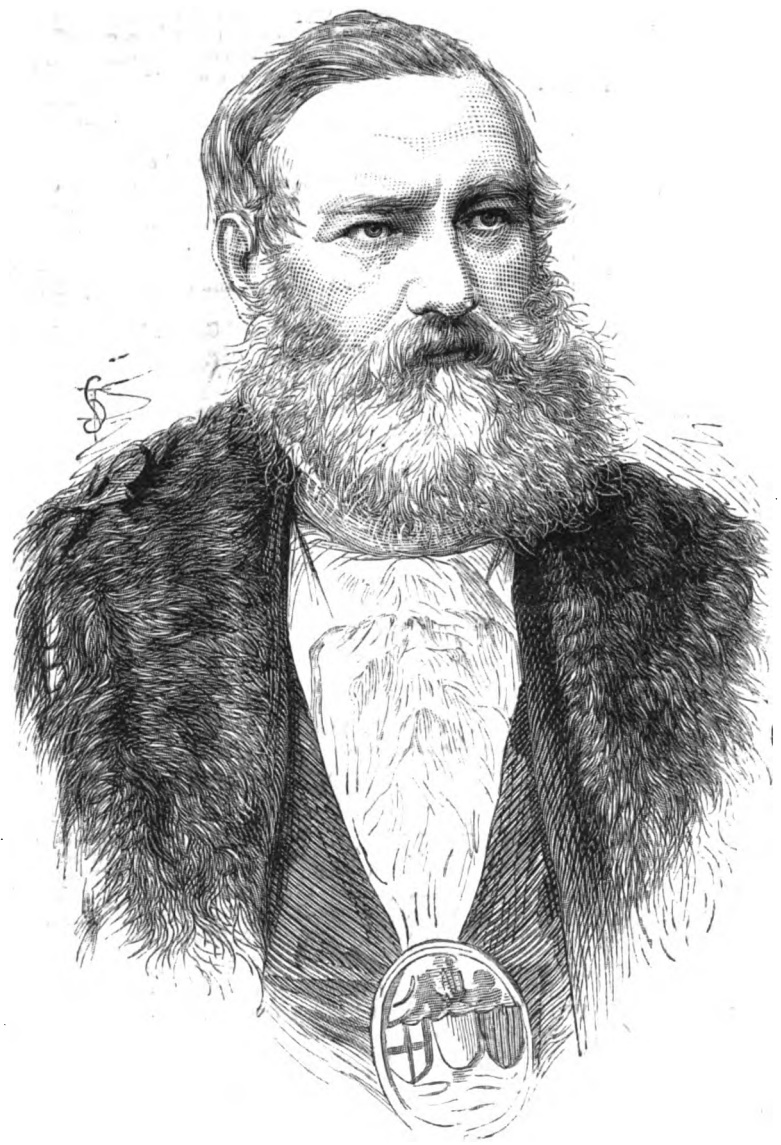
The Bishop of Chichester, in presiding over the annual Diocesan Conference at Chichester last week, alluded to the fact that next year was said to be the 1200th anniversary of the foundation of the see. It was reported that the Bishop of Chichester's Fund, started two years since, had reached the amount of £15,486, and that, reckoning local efforts, £80,000 had been, or was being, spent in the diocese in church extension or restoration.

Lord Penzance, on Thursday week, held a Court of Arches, and gave judgment in the suit instituted by the churchwarden of the parishes of St. Vedast, Foster-lane, Cheapside, and St. Michael-le-Querne, against the Rector, the Rev. T. Pelham Dale, for Ritualistic practices. His Lordship issued a writ for the imprisonment of the defendant for disobeying a monition of the Court of Chancery, and on Saturday Mr. Dale was taken to Holloway prison.



Lady Gooch, wife of Sir Daniel Gooch, Bart., M.P., laid the foundation of a new church at New Swindon on Thursday week. The edifice, which is to seat 700 or 800 persons, and will be dedicated to St. Paul, will, with vicarage house, &c., cost £10,000. The site was given by Mr. A. L. Goddard, lord of the manor of Swindon. At present only the nave will be built, at a cost of £4000; the chancel, vicarage, and other works will be proceeded with as funds flow in.

On Thursday week the Archbishop of Canterbury consecrated at St. Paul's Cathedral the Rev. George Evans Moule, D.D., as Bishop in Mid-China; the Rev. Charles Perry Scott, D.D., as Bishop in North China; and the Rev. E. Nuttall, D.D., as Bishop of Jamaica. The ceremony was of a very imposing character. The sermon was preached by the Ven. T. T. Perowne, B.D., Archdeacon of Norwich. The Primate was assisted by the Bishops of London, Winchester, Rochester, and several colonial bishops.



The Church of St. Paul, Spalding, which has been built and endowed by Miss Charington, and provided with a parsonage and school, was consecrated by the Bishop of Lincoln on Wednesday week. The building was designed by the late Sir Gilbert Scott, whose plans have been carried out by his son. It is in the Early English style, and is constructed of Ancaster stone and red brick. The steeple is 135 ft. high, and is set some distance from the nave, but connected with it by a vestibule. The church consists of nave with north and south aisles, south porch, priest's vestry with organ gallery over, choir vestry, and offices. The church will accommodate 500 worshippers. The tower contains a peal of eight bells, by Mr. Lewis.

In anticipation of the 216th anniversary festival of the Scottish Corporation, at which the Earl of Fife will preside, on St. Andrew's Day next, the following donations have been received to meet the charitable claims and defray the expenses of the new hall:—From her Majesty, 100 gs.; the Earl of Fife, 100 gs.; the Earl of Dalhousie, £100; the Duke of Richmond and Gordon, 50 gs.; the Earl of Derby, £10; the Earl of Stair, 10 gs.; Mr. Peter Reid, £50; Mr. George Shaw, 10 gs.; Mr. Notman, £50; Mr. William Scott, Mr. C. Gooden, and Mr. James Laurie, 10 gs. each; in addition to £50 previously given.

Digitized by Google

THE RIGHT HON. ALDERMAN W. M'ARTHUR, M.P., LORD MAYOR ELECT OF LONDON.—SEE PAGE 450.

ALDERMAN AND SHERIFF R. N. FOWLER, M.P.

MR. SHERIFF HERBERT WATERLOW.

Digitized by Google

IN THE GARDEN.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

Digitized by Google

THE RECESS.

The political dining season has set in heavily. The dainty and piquant menu framed by the Conservative chef at Taunton, and not unflavoured with salt that was meant to be Attic, provoked a rival bill-of-fare from a pair of Liberal cooks at Birmingham. Not to be behindhand, Edinburgh gave a banquet to Mr. Adam, the Liberal Whip, on Tuesday. The City of London, put on its mettle, will crown the feasting season at Guildhall with the Lord Mayor's Banquet to the Prime Minister and a host of distinguished citizens on Nov. 9.

Although Mr. Gladstone, Earl Granville, and Lord Hartington were conspicuous by their absence (which they duly regretted) from the Edinburgh dinner to Mr. Adam, on Tuesday, there was a strong gathering of the Liberal chieftains of North Britain present. The Chief Commissioner's coming assumption of the office of Governor of Madras was the occasion of this warm demonstration in honour of Mr. Adam, who had in the first place to say farewell to the Fife Liberal committee at Cupar. The Earl of Rosebery presided with habitual neatness at the banquet in the Music Hall; bestowed sly digs at the Marquis of Salisbury; and felicitously proposed the health of Mr. Adam as "Adjutant-General of the Party" and "as the organiser of Victory." Mr. Adam, in his earnest reply, disclosed the fact that it was Lord Rosebery and himself who last year conceived the idea that Mr. Gladstone should be brought forward for Midlothian. The right hon. gentleman modestly disclaimed the notion that his exertions had brought about the Liberal successes at the General Election, and attributed the victory mainly to Mr. Gladstone's "matchless eloquence" and the Marquis of Hartington's patient leadership of the Opposition in the House of Commons. Hearty in the extreme were the cheers Mr. Adam (who mentioned that he had been in India before) received from the large assemblage of members of the Scottish Liberal Club, and the stanch friends from Clackmannan, Kinross, and Fife.

An episode which occurred at the close of the banquet to Mr. Adam may give a seasonable hint to the civic magnates invited to the Guildhall on Tuesday next. A toast having been intrusted to Mr. Herbert Gladstone, he said he would read a telegram sent by his father—the mention of whose name elicited a ringing round of cheers, which were delivered upstanding. This was Mr. Gladstone's message:—

> May your banquet be worthy of its occasion. The fervent good wishes Mr. Adam will carry with him proceed from a party not less united nor the less strong than when it achieved the success to which he so ably contributed.

Placidly chewing the cud of agricultural, social, or moral topics in Devonshire, Sir Stafford Northcote has resolutely eschewed the political pellets which the Marquis of Salisbury presumably hurls because "it is his nature to." The right hon. Baronet is reserving himself for Bristol. Meanwhile, he keeps his hand in by dealing with the spread of the Gospel and literary institutions at Exeter; by presenting school-prizes near Tiverton; and by throwing encouraging crumbs to some Welsh Conservatives who are looking forward to a banquet.

Lord Sandon is less reticent. His Lordship, speaking to the Sheffield Junior Conservative Association, on the 27th ult., seriously condemned the action of the Government in Ireland as encouraging a revolutionary spirit. Mr. E. Clarke, greatly daring, even proceeded to place the blame on Mr. Gladstone's shoulders chiefly. Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, on the other hand, confined himself to dilating on the need of increased facilities for middle-class education, in addressing a diocesan conference at Gloucester the same day.

Lord Northbrook has been chaperoned round Birmingham by Mr. Chamberlain. Yesterday week, the ex-Governor-General of India and present First Lord of the Admiralty, opened the session of the Midland Institute at Birmingham, of which his Lordship is President, with a valuable address on India. Lord Northbrook spoke with due gravity of the responsibility of the task of governing India; and emphatically advocated the association of the native nobles and leaders with our representatives in the work of administration, together with economy in the finances, judicious expenditure on public improvements, and, above all, no enlargement of our Indian Empire. On Saturday the noble Lord opened the "Forward Liberal Club," and briskly answered each of Lord Salisbury's attacks upon the Government. Mr. Chamberlain reminded the Irish agitators that the Government would firmly maintain the law, quite in accordance with which were the prosecutions contemplated.

The doings of the Election Commissions are too tame to need comment this week.

Mr. Parnell, heedless of the threatened prosecution, on Sunday flung his inflammatory rhetoric before a Tipperary throng, and on Monday served up his views afresh for the benefit, or otherwise, of the Limerick tenant-farmers, who cheered his declaration that there must be established in Ireland a system of peasant proprietorship such as existed in France, Prussia, and Belgium, by the aid of the State. Limerick honoured Mr. Parnell on Tuesday with the freedom of the city. The same day, it is said, criminal informations were lodged against Mr. Parnell, Mr. Biggar, Mr. John Dillon, Mr. D. Sullivan, and others, who are alleged to have delivered speeches calculated to excite to breaches of the peace. The two minor members of the Land League, Mr. T. M. Healey and Mr. Walsh, were on Monday committed for trial at the Bantry Sessions.

Weighty words of warning have not been wanting to dissuade the extreme members of the Irish Land League from using lawless language. That undoubted and well-tried friend of Ireland, Mr. Bright, for example, wrote to Mr. Villiers Stuart, M.P., to the effect that, whilst plans were being devised for the reform of the land system, which would, doubtless, be amended, "unless the agitation creates a temper and a condition of things which will make amendment impossible." Mr. Labouchere (who has been seconded by his colleague, Mr. Bradlaugh, on this point) addressed a less pithy but similarly conceived message to the meeting of Radical Clubs on Saturday at the Cannon-street Hotel. The orators of the occasion, however, being Mr. Finigan, M.P., Mr. T. P. O'Connor, M.P., and Mr. Justin McCarthy, M.P. (who is sane enough in other matters), the "Radical" gathering passed a resolution disapproving the Irish prosecutions. A meeting of a very different kind, an assemblage of some thousands, it is stated, yesterday week protested in Belfast against the dangerous agitation of the Land League. Mr. Joseph Cowen, for his part, on the 27th ult., contributed his solution of the Irish Land problem in the shape of Mr. Bright's plan. Finally, Mr. Gladstone, answering a leading question from Sir George Bowyer, fails to see any likeness between the land grievance in Ireland and the English land question.

The first meeting of the 127th Session of the Society of Arts is announced for the 17th inst., when the opening address will be given by Mr. Bramwell, chairman of the council.

THE COURT.

Her Majesty, with Princess Beatrice, has gone out every day this week, notwithstanding the severity of the weather. Sleighing has been the chief pleasure, although the Queen has generally walked out during some part of each day. Divine service was performed on Sunday at Balmoral Castle by the Rev. W. W. Tulloch, of Maywell church, Glasgow; and in the evening Mr. Tolloch and the Rev. Archibald Campbell dined with her Majesty.

Halloween was celebrated in the usual manner on Monday evening. The servants and tenants, carrying torches, walked in procession up to the castle, where a bonfire was lighted and reels were danced. The Queen, Princess Beatrice, and the ladies and gentlemen of the household were present. Colonel the Hon. Henry Byng left the castle and Lord Sackville arrived.

The Earl of Aberdeen was received by her Majesty a day or two since, and kissed hands on his appointment as Lord Lieutenant of Aberdeenshire. The Earl dined with the Queen, as also have the Marquis and Marchioness of Huntly.

The following are appointed by her Majesty to be Companions of St. Michael and St. George:—Colonel Richard Thomas Glyn, C.B., Colonel William Pole Collingwood, Captain Claude Bettington, and Mr. Francis William Rowsell.

Her Majesty has presented £500 towards the restoration of the abbey church of Minster, in Sheppey.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.

The Princess of Wales, accompanied by her youngest daughter, Princess Maud, went to Eastwell Park yesterday week on a visit to the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh, returning the next day to Marlborough House. Her Royal Highness travelled by the South-Eastern Railway between Charing-cross and Ashford stations on her journey to and from Eastwell. The Prince of Wales, who passed a few days last week on a visit to the Duke of Grafton at Euston, returned to town also last Saturday, having had some good shooting over his noble host's preserves; and Prince John of Glücksburg, who had been on a visit to Mrs. Gerard Leigh, at Luton Hoo, Luton, returned to Marlborough House the same day. Their Royal Highnesses went to Her Majesty's Theatre in the evening; and on Sunday they attended Divine service. On Monday the Prince presented to Lieutenant Graham, R.N., of the Royal yacht Osborne, at Marlborough House, the medal of the Royal Humane Society for his gallant conduct in saving life from drowning in Portsmouth Harbour on the night of Sept. 14 last. The Princess was present at the ceremony, and a deputation of the committee of the society attended. The Duke of Edinburgh lunched with their Royal Highnesses, and Prince John of Glücksburg subsequently accompanied the Duke on his return to Eastwell, on a visit to his Royal Highness and the Duchess. The Prince and Princess went to the Prince of Wales's Theatre in the evening. The Duke of Cambridge visited their Royal Highnesses on Tuesday. The Prince went to the studio of Mr. J. R. Herbert, R.A., at Kilburn, to inspect the picture of "The Judgment of Daniel." Prince John of Glücksburg returned to Marlborough House from visiting the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh at Eastwell Park, and left in the afternoon for Claremont on a visit to Prince Leopold. The Prince and Princess went to St. James's Theatre in the evening. On the occasion of his approaching visit to Norwich for the purpose of attending the Norfolk and Norwich Fat Cattle Show the Prince will be the guest of Mr. E. Birkbeck, M.P., at Horstead Hall, a few miles from Norwich. After attending the show his Royal Highness will be entertained at luncheon by Mr. J. J. Colman, M.P. The Prince will spend a few days shooting at Horstead, and the following week will attend the Oakham Fat Cattle Show, when he will be the guest of Lord Aveland.

The Bacchante, with Princes Albert Victor and George of Wales on board, accompanied the Inconstant, flag-ship of Rear-Admiral the Earl of Clanwilliam, commanding the Detached Squadron, from Vigo en route for Maderia on Sunday.

Princess Louise of Lorn arrived in Edinburgh on Saturday from Inverary. Her Royal Highness attended Divine service in St. Mary's Scottish Episcopal Cathedral, Edinburgh, on Sunday forenoon, and in the evening she was present at the service in St. Cuthbert's Established church. On Monday the Princess visited Sir Noel Paton's studio in George-square, and she also went to see Sir Noel's painting "Lux in Tenebris," on view in Messrs. Hugh Paton and Son's gallery, in Princes-street. Her Royal Highness left in the evening for London, arriving at Kensington Palace on Tuesday morning.

The Duke of Connaught visited Woolwich last Saturday to lay the memorial-stone of a coffee tavern in course of erection, at a cost of £10,000, adjacent to the principal entrance to the Royal Arsenal. The funds for its erection have been provided by a local company, whose shareholders are mostly of the working-classes, including upwards of 1000 of the employés of the Royal Arsenal. The directors of the company met the Duke, who was received by a guard of honour of the 3rd Kent (Royal Arsenal) Artillery Volunteers. Having lunched at the Royal Artillery Barracks, his Royal Highness proceeded to the site of the coffee tavern in New-road. The Hon. and Rev. Adelbert Anson, Rector of Woolwich, Earl Sydney, and others interested in the event, being present. The Duke performed the ceremony with the customary silver trowel, and sanctioned the naming of the tavern "The Duke of Connaught;" and the public hall of the building "The Royal Assembly-Rooms." The 4th Kent Volunteer Rifles and the 2nd Kent Artillery were in attendance.

Yesterday week the Duchess of Teck and party arrived in Edinburgh from Hopetoun House, and visited the Museum of the Society of Antiquaries, the rooms of the Royal Society, Royal Infirmary, Heriot's Hospital, and the studio of Sir Noel Paton; and on Monday the Duke, with the Duchess and the Countess of Hopetoun, paid another visit to the city, and inspected the Exhibition of the Works of Scottish Artists in in the Royal Scottish Academy, and also the National Gallery of Paintings, returning in the evening to Hopetoun.

The Archbishop of York, who has been ordered to leave England for the winter, is about leaving for Biarritz.

His Excellency Count Munster has returned to the German Embassy, Carlton House-terrace.

His Excellency the United States Minister has left town on a short visit to Scotland.

On Monday Lady Burdett-Coutts visited the City and was presented with the freedom and livery of the Haberdashers' Company, at their hall in Gresham-street West. The Baroness was accompanied by Sir Francis Burdett, Bart., and Lady Burdett, Mr. W. Ashmead-Bartlett, and others. Her Ladyship was met at the entrance by the Master, the Lord Mayor, and other dignitaries. After the investiture, the badge was placed round the neck of the Baroness by the Master, the additional honour of the livery being conferred on her, the Master placing the blue and white cloak over her shoulders. It is noteworthy that no lady has been admitted to the guild since the reign of Queen Elizabeth, and the only other honorary member is the Duke of Connaught. The Baroness was entertained at luncheon by the Master.—She has sent to the Lord Mayor £100 towards the Truro Cathedral fund.

FASHIONABLE MARRIAGES.

The marriage of Mr. Walter H. Hadow, eldest son of the late Mr. Patrick Douglas Hadow, with Lady Constance Blanche Louisa Hay, eldest daughter of the Earl and Countess of Kinnoull, was celebrated on Thursday week in the private chapel at Dupplin Castle, Perth. The bride's dress was white satin, covered with Brussels lace flounces, the gift of the Dowager Countess of Kinnoull. The corsage was high, sleeves of Brussels net, and on the skirt were bunches of orange-blossom, myrtle, and white heather; her wreath was composed of the same, and the veil was Brussels lace. The ornaments worn were a pearl bracelet and pearl star, the gifts of the bridegroom; a pink coral, pearl, and diamond pendant, the gift of Mrs. Hadow; a diamond star, the gift of the Earl of Kinnoull; a ruby and diamond bracelet, the gift of the Duke and Duchess of Beaufort; a pearl and diamond bracelet, the gift of the Countess of Dudley; and a large single pearl bracelet, set in diamonds, the gift of Mrs. Thornburgh. The bridesmaids were the Lady Muriel Hay and the Hon. Marie Hay, sister and niece of the bride; Miss Hadow, sister of the bridegroom; the Hon. Sybil Denison, Miss Walsh, and Miss Maud Lovell, cousins of the bride. They wore cream-coloured broché cashmere dresses, trimmed with cream lace, and a dark red snood in the hair; each carried a bouquet of red and white flowers, and wore a gold bangle with the bride's pet name, "Sissy," in blue enamel on it, the gift of the bridegroom. The bride's mother wore a dress of ruby velvet trimmed with satin and bead passementerie of the same colour, and old lace. The Hon. and Rev. Robert Liddell, Vicar of St. Paul's, Knightsbridge, officiated, and was assisted by the Rev. John Mitchell, domestic chaplain to the Earl of Kinnoull. Lady Constance's travelling dress was of sapphire velvet trimmed with satin and jet of the same colour; bonnet and jacket to match. The newly-married pair started for Moncreiffe House, en route for Londesborough Lodge, Scarborough.

Mr. Basil Templer Montgomery, 60th Rifles, second son of Sir Graham and Lady Montgomery, of Stobo Castle, was married last week to Mary Katherine Moncreiffe, youngest daughter of Lady Louisa and the late Sir Thomas Moncreiffe, at St. John's Episcopal Church, Perth, by the Very Rev. J. F. Montgomery, Dean of Edinburgh, in the presence of a party of the relatives of both families.

On Monday at St. Mary's, Marylebone, the Earl of Malmesbury, G.C.B., was married to Miss Hamilton, daughter of the late Mr. John Hamilton, of Fyne Court, Somerset.

The marriage of the Hon. Edward Knatchbull-Hugessen (Coldstream Guards), eldest son of Lord Brabourne, with Miss Amy Virginia Beaumont, second daughter of Mr. W. B. Beaumont, M.P., and Lady Margaret Beaumont, was solemnised at St. Margaret's Church, Westminster, on Tuesday. Mr. Horace R. Stopford (Coldstream Guards) was best man. The bride, who came with her mother, was received by her father, who gave her away. The bridesmaids were Miss Beaumont, her sister; the Hon. Katherine and the Hon. Eva Knatchbull-Hugessen, sisters of the bridegroom; Miss Weyland, cousin of the bride; Miss Dimsdale, cousin of the bridegroom; and Lady Maud Grimston. Lord Brabourne and Lady Margaret Beaumont followed the bridal train to the chancel. The bride's dress was of ivory white satin, covered with old point lace, fastened with bunches of orange-flowers; and over a wreath of orange-blossoms an old point lace veil fastened by diamond brooches, the gift of her uncle, the Marquis of Clanricarde. Her other jewels comprised a diamond tiara and diamond bracelets, gifts of her father; pearl and diamond earrings, a present from Mr. S. Beaumont; and a diamond brooch, presented by Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Hodgson. The bridesmaids were dressed alike in crimson brocade trimmed with cream-coloured lace, and bonnets of the same material, also trimmed with lace. Each lady wore a diamond, pearl, and ruby tortoise brooch, the gift of the bridegroom, and, like the bride, carried a bouquet of varied white flowers, bordered with maidenhair fern. Lady Margaret Beaumont wore a dress of heliotrope satin, embroidered in the same colour, mauve bonnet covered with lilac and other flowers, necktie of Valenciennes lace, and diamond and pearl ornaments. Lady Brabourne, who appeared quite recovered from her recent severe illness, wore a dress of grey plush, trimmed with lace, and bonnet of the same, trimmed with crimson velvet. The Archbishop of Canterbury performed the religious ceremony, assisted by the Rev. Canon Farrar and the Rev. Reginald Bridges Knatchbull-Hugessen, Rector of Mersham, Kent. A number of non-commissioned officers of the Coldstream Guards occupied seats in the nave. Mr. and Lady Margaret Beaumont welcomed a large party at breakfast at their residence on The Terrace, Piccadilly, after which the bride and bridegroom left for Smeeth, Lord Brabourne's seat near Ashford, Kent, for their honeymoon. The bride's travelling dress was of sapphire blue velvet, cloak, bonnet, and muff to match, trimmed with brown marabout feathers. The wedding presents were of great value, one of much interest being a parure of chrysolites, presented by Queen Charlotte, consort of George III., to Dorothea Hugessen, great-great-aunt of the bridegroom. Gifts were also sent by the households of Mr. Beaumont and by the employés and others upon his landed and mining estates.

A marriage has been arranged between Sir William Williams, of Tregullow, Bart., and Miss Beauchamp, eldest daughter of Mr. Edmund Beauchamp Beauchamp, of Trevince.

IN THE GARDEN.

This young lady, who screens her pretty head from the summer sun with a Japanese rustic parasol of something like the palm-leaf, would be an agreeable companion, if favourably inclined, to the gentleman visiting at her father's house when he strolls round the garden, half an hour before lunch-time, pretending to be a curious amateur of horticultural and floricultural operations. He may entertain a private opinion that there is something far more attractive in the conversation of a pretty girl who has tact and intelligence enough to make her talk with him, upon a variety of general topics, and even some of personal interest, suggestive of amiable sentiments which can be freely indulged with entire safety to their mutual freedom. This is more agreeable than one-sided flirting, of which pursuit, to do her justice, there is no reason to suspect the young lady would be capable in any situation, and which she would never tolerate in the opposite party. She is not the Maud, either, who was once passionately implored to "Come into the garden," at an unreasonably early hour of the morning; but here she is, at a very proper time, and here we are glad to see her.

THE NEW LORD MAYOR AND SHERIFFS.

The new Lord Mayor of London, the Right Hon. William McArthur, M.P. for Lambeth, is the eldest of three sons of the late Rev. John McArthur, of Londonderry, a Wesleyan minister. His brother, Mr. Alexander McArthur, is M.P. for Leicester. Alderman William McArthur has been established in London, since 1857, as a merchant in the Australian trade, his brother, now his partner, having gone to New South Wales in 1843, and having founded a large business connection in that colony. The new Lord Mayor served the office of Sheriff in 1867. He was first elected for Lambeth in 1868, and is an advanced Liberal politician, but has especially laboured in Parliament for the abolition of tolls on the metropolitan bridges, and for objects connected with the interests of our Australasian colonies and South Africa. He visited Australia two years ago. Alderman McArthur is Deputy Lieutenant of the City of London, a magistrate for the county of Surrey, a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society, a member of the City, Reform, and City Liberal Clubs, a director of the City Bank, of the Australian Telegraph Company, of the Bank of Australia, and chairman of the Star Assurance Company. He is also an active member of the Aborigines Protection Society, and a prominent supporter of various undertakings connected with the Wesleyan body. On Tuesday last, the new Lord Mayor, with the Corporation officers, waited upon the Lord Chancellor, Lord Selborne, at his private residence in Portland-place, to be introduced by the Recorder of the City of London. The Lord Chancellor greeted him in the usual style, and signified the Queen's approval.

Digitized by Google

The senior Sheriff of London and Middlesex is Alderman Robert Nicholas Fowler, M.P. for the City of London. He is son of Mr. Thomas Fowler, banker, and was born at Tottenham in 1828. He was educated at University College, London, of which institution he is a Fellow. He graduated at the University of London, B.A., in 1848, and was second in mathematics and fifth in classical honours. He became an M.A. of his University two years later. Mr. Alderman Fowler is head of the banking firm of Dimsdale, Fowler, and Co., Cornhill, which was formed by the amalgamation, in 1851, of the firm of Messrs. Drewett and Fowler with Messrs. Barnard, Dimsdale, and Co. He is a member of the Bankers' Committee, and, in addition to other offices, holds the position of director of some public companies. He has long been an active member of the Conservative party, and was candidate for the City in 1865. He was elected for Penrhyn and Falmouth in 1868, but lost his seat in 1874. He was returned second on the poll for the City this year.

The junior Sheriff is Mr. Herbert Jameson Waterlow, third son of Mr. Alfred James Waterlow, of the firm now styled Messrs. Waterlow Brothers and Layton, wholesale stationers, of Birchin-lane, Lime-street, and Wilson-street, Finsbury. He was born in 1846, and is engaged in the business of that firm. In April, 1867, Mr. Waterlow took up his Livery in the Stationers' Company, and was elected to serve as Renter Warden of the Guild in 1873. The new Sheriff joined the Honourable Artillery Company in January, 1867, and has ever since been an extremely active and zealous member. He is now a member of the Court of Assistants and Quartermaster-Sergeant of the Gun Division of the ancient corps. He is punctual in the performance of every military detail; and, besides attending nearly all private parades, invariably takes part with his regiment in field-day manœuvres and camps of instruction.

The Portraits of the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs are from photographs by the London Stereoscopic Company.

SALMON-SPEARING ON THE DEE.

The reader of Sir Walter Scott's Waverley Novels cannot fail to recollect the spirited description, in "Redgauntlet," of a party of horsemen and others, at night, killing salmon with spears by torchlight, in the shallows of the Solway Firth. This method of taking fish, as we learn from travellers in Australia, is frequently practised by the savage tribes of that region, standing in their rude canoes and striking with their spears at the finny prey, often at arm's length, beneath the surface of the stream. In the Highlands of Scotland, though generally it is now a forbidden practice there, large numbers of salmon have often been killed by "leistering," as it is called, which is thus described by Mr. C. St. John, in a book of his lately quoted:—

"A most exciting and interesting scene it was. The night was calm and dark. The steep and broken rocks were illuminated in the most brilliant manner by fifteen or sixteen torches, which were carried by as many active Highlanders, and glanced merrily on the water, throwing the most fantastic light and shade on all around, as they moved about. Sometimes one of them would remain motionless for a few moments, as its bearer waited in the expectation that some fish, which had been started by his companions, would come within reach of his spear. He stood with it ready poised, and his eager countenance was lighted up by the torch, as he bent over the water. Then would come loud shouts, and a confused hurrying to and fro, as some great fish darted among the men; and loud and merry peals of laughter, when some unlucky fellow, darting at a fish in too deep water, missed his balance, and fell headlong into the pool. Every now and then, a salmon would be seen hoisted into the air and quivering on an uplifted spear. The fish, as soon as caught, was carried ashore, where it was knocked on the head and taken charge of by some man older than the rest, who was deputed to this office. Thirty-seven salmon were killed that night. I must say that I entered into the fun, and enjoyed it probably as much as any of the wild lads who were engaged in it." (From "Wild Sports and Natural History of the Highlands.")

In the Queen's book, "Leaves from the Journal of our Life in the Highlands," her Majesty thus describes a performance of this kind by daylight near Balmoral, in the river Dee:—

"Sept. 13, 1850.

"We walked with Charles, the boys, and Vicky to the riverside above the bridge, where all our tenants were assembled with poles and spears, or rather 'leisters,' for catching salmon. They all went into the river, walking up it and then back again, poking about under all the stones to bring fish up to where the men stood with the net. It had a very pretty effect: about one hundred men wading through the river, some in kilts, with poles and spears, all very much excited. Not succeeding the first time, we went higher up, and moved to three or four different places, but did not get any salmon; one or two escaping. Albert stood on a stone, and Colonel Gordon and Lord James Murray waded about the whole time. Duncan, in spite of all his exertions yesterday, and having besides walked to and from the Gathering, was the whole time in the water.

"Not far from the laundry, there was another trial, and here we had a great fright. In one place, there was a very deep pool, into which two men very foolishly went, and one could not swim; we suddenly saw them sink, and in one moment they seemed drowning, though surrounded by people. There was a cry for help, and a general rush, including Albert, towards the spot; which frightened me so much, that I grasped Lord Carlisle's arm in great agony. However, Dr. Robertson swam in and pulled the man out, and all was safely over; but it was a horrid moment.

"A salmon was speared here by one of the men; after which we walked to the ford, or quarry, where we were very successful, seven salmon being caught, some in the net, and some speared. Though Albert stood in the water some time, he caught nothing; but the scene at this beautiful spot was exciting and picturesque in the extreme. I wished for Landseer's pencil. The sun was intensely hot. We did not get back till after three o'clock, and then took luncheon."

Our Illustration is from a sketch representing this sport as practised on the Dee six or seven years ago. Our artist says of it: "The salmon, when frightened, puts his head under a stone, and is easily speared. Sometimes a net was stretched across the river, and the spearers drove the fish up to it; sometimes a greenhorn would tumble into a deep pool, causing great amusement to the others, who would pretend to spear him, making believe that he was a big salmon. The spearing was done mostly by the Queen's gamekeepers and their friends. Kilts are not usually worn, as they get too heavy when soaked with water."

NATIONAL SPORTS.

The awful weather, for which the recent Houghton Meeting will long be remembered, continued "to the bitter end," and very few people remained at Newmarket for the last couple of days' racing, when, indeed, there was not sufficient in the way of sport to recompense them for a daily soaking. On Thursday the Subscription Stakes ended in a match, and Dourance, who had previously been beaten every time she has run this season, cleverly upset the odds laid on Myra. One of the best performances of the week was that of Foxhall, the crack American two-year-old, who won the Bretby Nursery Handicap Plate with the top weight (8 st. 12 lb.) on his back. Heyday must have been pretty well tried at Kingsclere, but he received no less than 28 lb. and a head beating from Mr. Keene's promising representative. After his exertions in the Cambridgeshire, Fernandez was withdrawn from the Free Handicap, which then looked a good thing for Poulet, who, however, would have been better suited by a longer course, and had all his work to do to beat Master Waller; Sword Dance ran badly, and Apollo was asked to give far too much weight to the first and second. The Duke of Westminster scored another win in the Troy Stakes with Thora, who, however, could not have beaten Savoyard, had not the latter stopped to savage her at the finish; and then Dourance was pulled out for the second time during the day, and defeated a large and very fair field in a Welter Handicap.

On Friday, the Home Bred Foal Stakes enabled Thebais to score her ninth successive victory, and she is not likely to be seen in public again until she is saddled for one of the great events of next season. Town Moor and St. Louis met for the third time in a Post Sweepstakes over the T.Y.C. Considering the frightful state of the ground, and the fact that St. Louis was again asked to concede 10lb., it seemed almost a pity to start him for a stake of comparatively small value, and he suffered defeat by half a length, though, under all the circumstances, his prospects of next year's Derby are not much affected by this reverse. The All-Aged Stakes was noticeable for the reappearance of the flying Océanic, who has not run since her two victories of last season. Though the worst favourite of the three runners, she disposed of Dourance and Hackthorpe without an effort, and it was lucky for Jenny Howlett, Bonnie Marden, and Co., that Jennings could not train her for the Oaks. Chippendale made a sad example of Out of Bounds and the other three that opposed him in the Jockey Club Cup; and, after Mowerina had secured her second victory of the week in the Houghton Handicap, Tunis wound up the meeting by running away with the Houghton Stakes.

There has been a postponement of the Worcester races, owing to parts of the course being covered by some feet of water; and the sport at Brighton, though good enough in its way, requires no comment.

The Border Union (Longtown) Meeting was a grand affair in every respect, and attracted admirers of coursing from all parts of the United Kingdom. No less than eighteen out of the sixty-four dogs that took part in the Netherby Cup had previously performed in the Waterloo Cup, and, besides these cracks, there were several other well-known greyhounds. We did not expect to see Honeywood, the winner of last year's "blue ribbon," pulled out here, as he was understood to be in reserve for the same prize next spring. As it turned out, it was very unfortunate that the Earl of Haddington made up his mind to run him, for, after winning three very severe courses in grand style, he pulled up lame, and was drawn in favour of Free Flag. Hilda performed brilliantly until the last course, when, having had two or three pumping trials, she declined to do her best, and allowed Free Flag to win the cup. The latter is a good honest dog, and a rare stayer; but he just lacks the turn of speed requisite to make him a greyhound of the first water, and was rather lucky to get to the end of such a stake. There were several good puppies in the Border Union Stakes, which was divided between Melbourne, by Meldon—Deceive-me-Not, and Honeyburn, by Neck or Nothing—Bugle Eye. Perhaps Bernera was the best of the lot, and she was terribly unlucky in being put out by Dorcas in the first ties. Mr. Hedley and Wilkinson, who acted respectively as judge and slipper, gave the greatest satisfaction to all present at the meeting.

On Tuesday Elias C. Laycock and George H. Hosmer sculled from Putney to Mortlake for £200. As this was the first meeting of an Australian and an American sculler, the race attracted a good deal of notice, and there was a very fair attendance. Laycock has been favourite ever since there has been any betting on the event, but the odds of 2 to 1 that have been laid upon him were reduced to 6 to 4 prior to the start, as the American division supported Hosmer with great spirit. The latter started at a rare pace, and led Laycock for a mile, when the Australian closed up the gap between them, and, after a very close race for another mile, in which Laycock was never more than a length in front, he fairly rowed Hosmer to a standstill just below Chiswick Eyot, and, going on at his leisure, won by four lengths. To-day (Saturday) he will meet J. H. Riley, of Saratoga, over the same course, for £400; and, among other items of interest, we may note that Warren Smith has arrived from America, and is hard at work on the river; that Wallace Ross has been matched with Trickett; and that, after a very unreasonable delay, the arrangements for the Hop Bitters Regatta on the 22nd inst. seem in a fair way to be settled.

England v. America, at the Agricultural Hall, Islington, bids fair to prove a great success in every way, and, bar accidents, the winner will throw all previous performances in six days' races into the shade. Each country had three representatives at the start, and now two on each side are hard at work, "Blower" Brown, the holder of the Championship of England Belt, and William Pegram, the negro, having collapsed on the first day. Charles Rowell, who ran the first seventy miles with only one break, when he walked for about three minutes, has cut every previous record, from eighty miles upwards, and Dobler, the best of the Americans, is sticking well to him. At the time of writing the score is as follows:—Rowell, 313 miles; Dobler, 298 miles; Littlewood, 259 miles; Howard, 239 miles.

HOME NEWS.

The inhabitants of Lewes have at a public meeting resolved to apply for a charter of incorporation.

Mr. Baron Huddleston has been ordered by his medical advisers to spend the winter abroad. He has left for Cannes.

Bishop Fraser on Thursday week preached the annual sermon on behalf of Nottingham General Hospital, and the collection realised over £200.

The churchyard of St. Botolph Without, Aldersgate, laid out as a recreation-ground, about an acre in extent, has been opened to the public.

Mr. A. P. Luff has obtained the open scholarship of £150, and Mr. J. Oldsworth Fisher that of £125 at St. Mary's Hospital Medical School.

The Company of Mercers have voted twenty guineas in aid of the funds of the National Hospital for Diseases of the Heart and Paralysis, Soho-square.

The Globe states that the American water-weed (Anacharis alsinastrum), which has resisted all attempts to extirpate it, is at last dying out of itself.

A five-days' fancy fair, with theatrical performances, concert, and acrobatic feats, has been held this week at Brighton in aid of the building fund of the Brighton Children's Hospital.

The total number of paupers in the metropolis, exclusive of lunatics in asylums and 978 vagrants, on the last day of last week was 86,307, of whom 49,122 were in workhouses and 37,185 received outdoor relief.

The Mayor of Cardiff last week laid the foundation-stone of a new Free Library, in Trinity-street. The building will cost nearly £8000. The site was bought by the Corporation a few years since at great cost.

Sir Bartle Frere has accepted an invitation to a banquet of welcome and congratulation on his return from South Africa, which is to be given to him by his friends, in Willis's Rooms, this (Saturday) evening.

Mr. Arthur Cohen, Q.C., M.P., has been elected president of the board of deputies of British Jews; and Mr. Joseph Sebag has been elected vice-president. They are both nephews of Sir Moses Montefiore.

At a meeting of the committee of the Essex Agricultural Society, held at Chelmsford yesterday week—Mr. T. W. Nunn presiding—it was decided that the show for 1881 should be held at Southend on June 15 and 16.

The annual poultry and pigeon show at Oxford was held last week in the City-buildings. Owing to the favourable season, the exhibits were of exceptionally fine quality, and there were 2130 pens, 880 being poultry and 1250 pigeons.

The Barrow Shipbuilding Company on Tuesday launched two composite gun-boats for her Majesty's Government, named the Banterer and Espoir. They are intended for foreign service, and each carries four guns, two 64 and two 25 pounders.

On Monday the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, accompanied by Lieutenant Barry, attended at the New Cattle Market, Dublin, and laid the foundation-stone of a new abattoir. The Lord Mayor and about thirty members of the Corporation were present.

The first of a course of five lectures on "The Literature of To-day" was delivered on Monday night at the Westbourne Park Institute by Professor Henry Morley, the subject chosen being the earlier poems of Robert Browning and Mr. Tennyson's "In Memoriam."

Yesterday week the Manchester Chamber of Commerce presented an address to Sir Thomas Bazley, on the occasion of his retirement from the Board of Directors, with which he has been connected—save for an interval of three years—from 1832 until the present time.

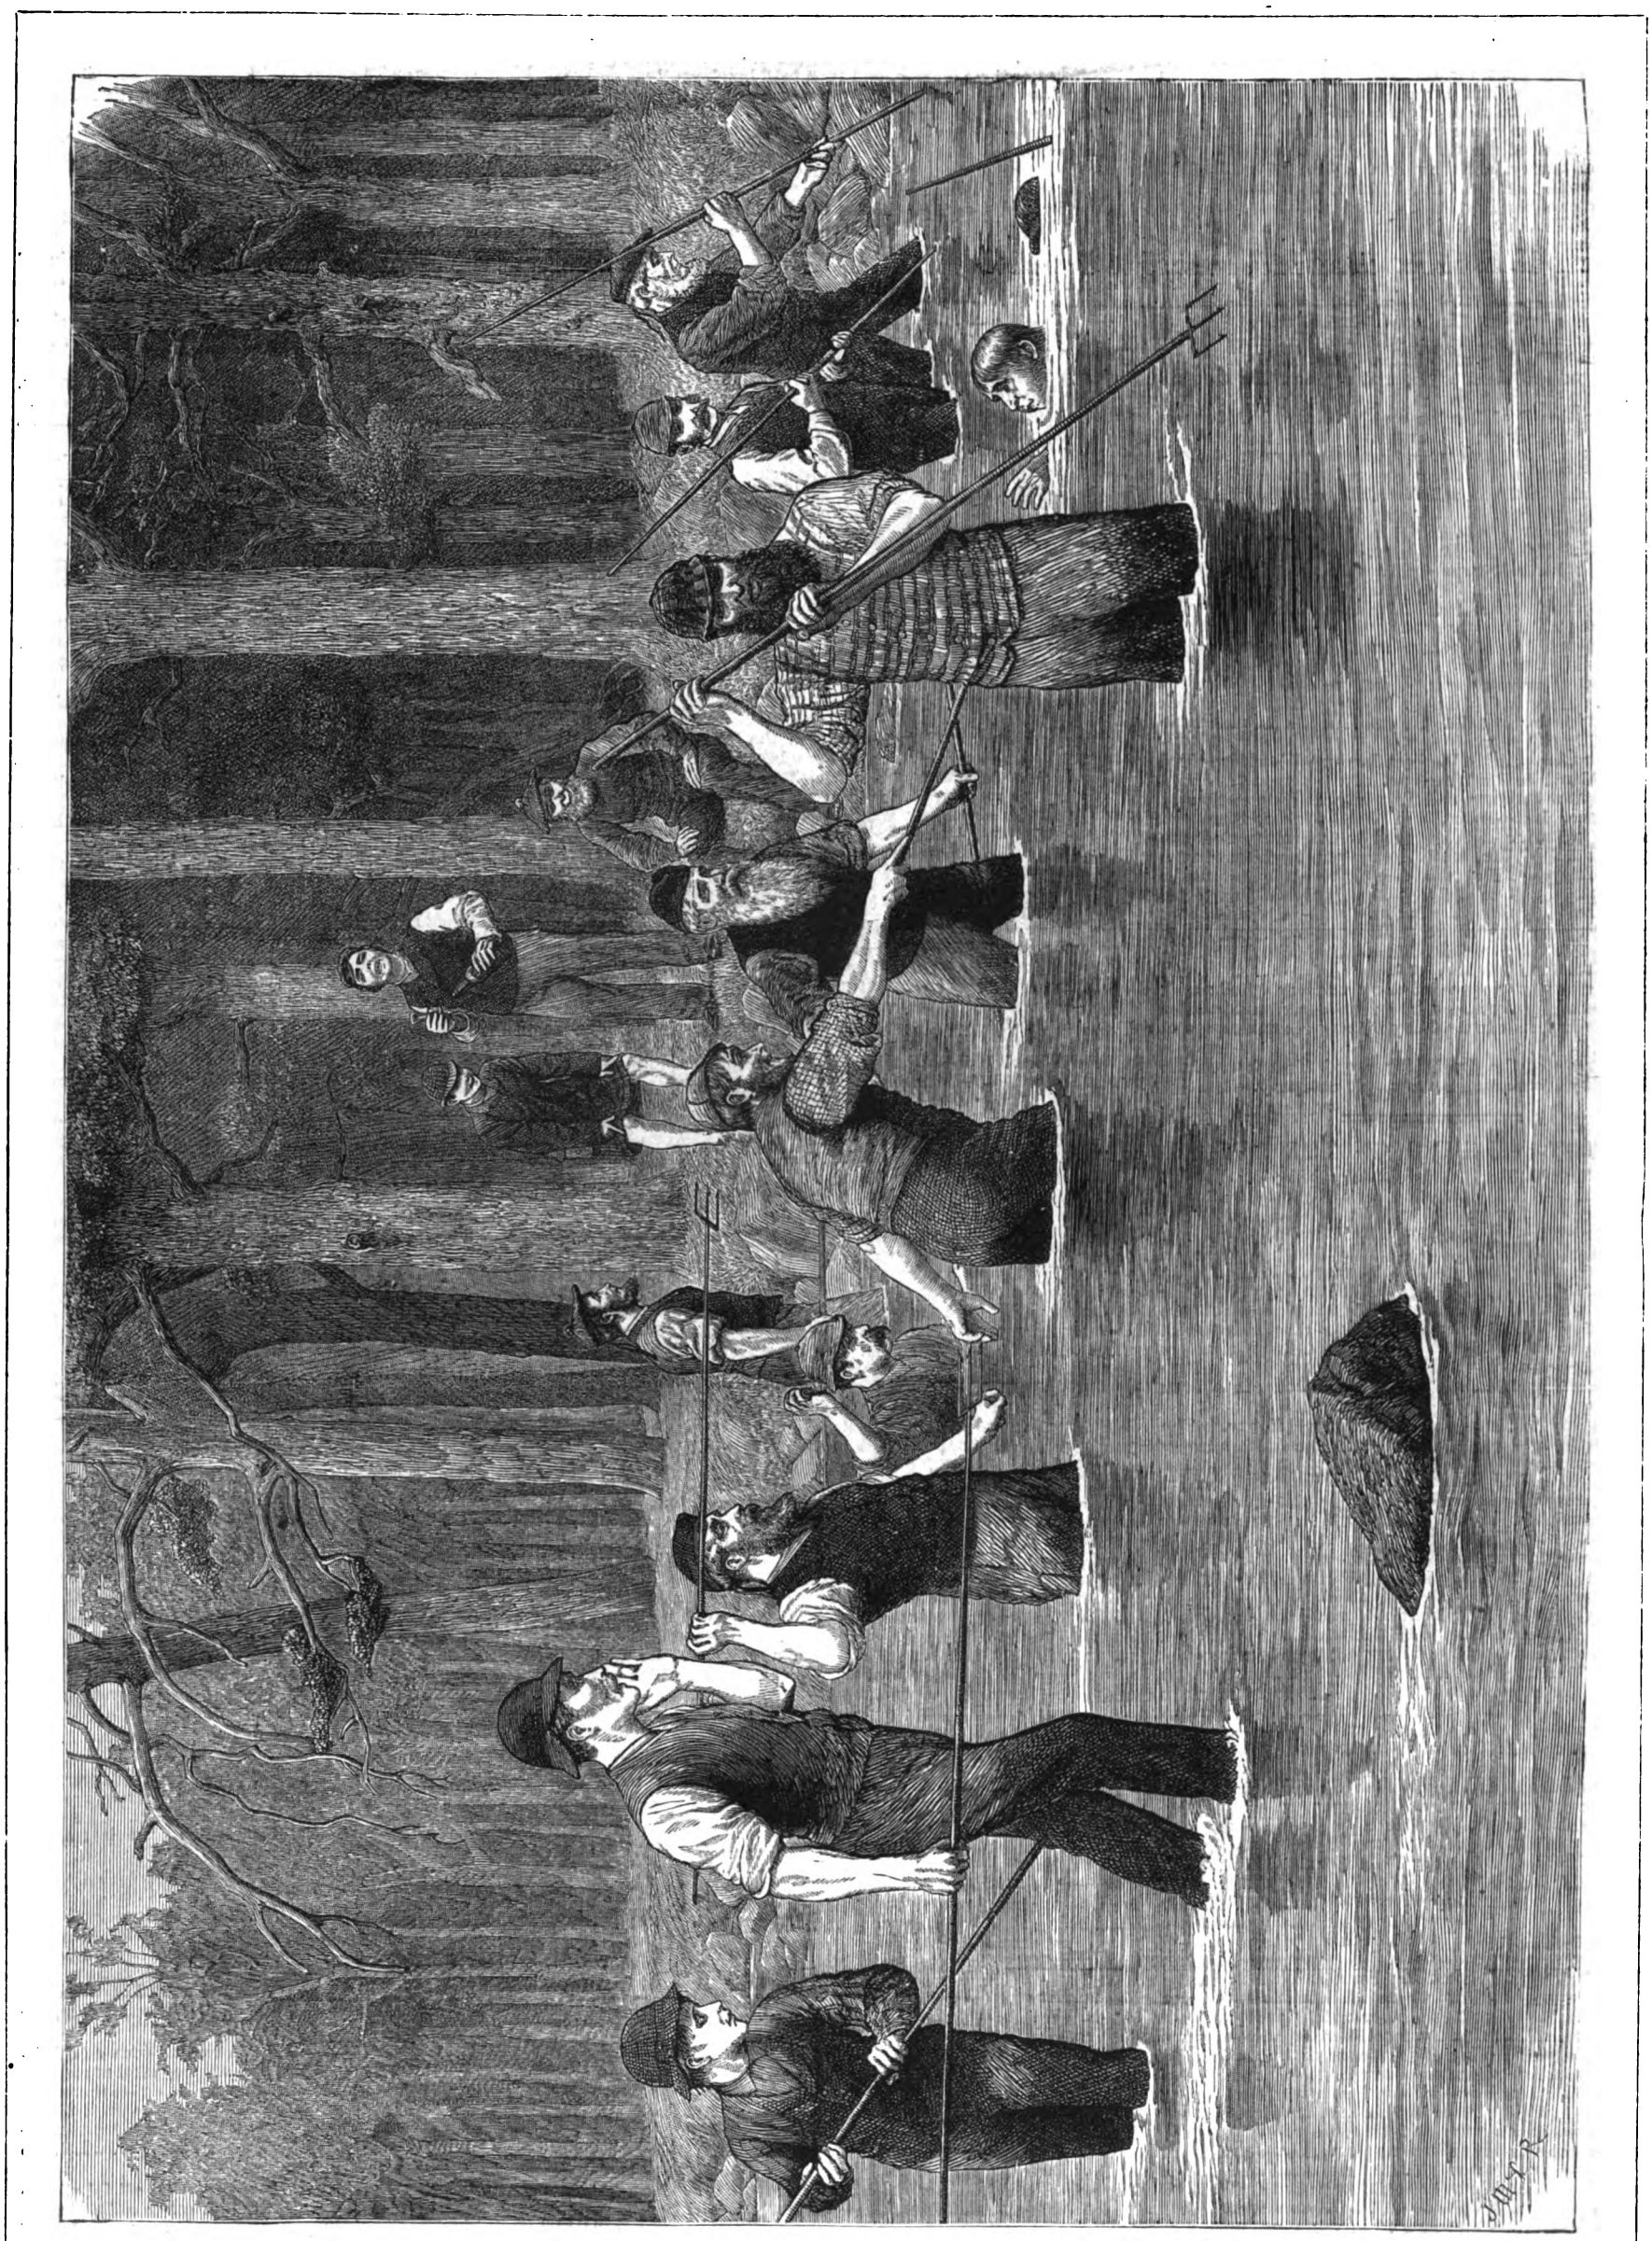
Mr. Justice Lush has accepted the appointment of Lord Justice of Appeal, in the room of the late Lord Justice Thesiger; and it is stated that Mr. Watkin Williams, M.P., Q.C., will succeed him as one of the Judges of the Queen's Bench Division.

The Architectural Association opened its thirty-seventh session yesterday week by a conversazione in the Association's Rooms, at 9, Conduit-street. There was a large attendance of ladies and gentlemen. Mr. Ernest C. Lee, the president, took the chair, and distributed the prizes to the successful students.

On Sunday the twenty-first official year of the Volunteer organisation was brought to a close, and, in accordance with the regulations, returns must be forwarded at once to the War Office by every regiment, setting forth the enrolled strength, number of efficients, &c. At the date of the last returns there were, out of 206,250 volunteers, 197,485 efficients.

The Municipal Elections throughout England and Wales took place on Monday. In many places there were contests, which chiefly turned on political considerations; while in others there was no opposition to the retiring officials.—On Tuesday the annual municipal elections took place throughout Scotland. In Edinburgh there was only a contest in one ward.

The Metropolitan Board of Works have resolved to appoint an assistant chief officer of the Fire Brigade. Plans have been adopted for the new works at Vauxhall Bridge. The three centre arches are to be made into one, and the bed of the river deepened, with a view to improve the navigation. The cost of the works is estimated at £55,000. The bridge over Deptford Creek is to be rebuilt, at a cost of £20,000.



On Monday the gardens of the Inner Temple were thrown open to the public for the annual show of chrysanthemums. Several new varieties have been added to the collection by the head-gardener, Mr. Newton. The show will remain open during November. We are promised the revival of the chrysanthemum show in the Middle Temple Gardens this year, the opening of which will take place next Monday.

Under the name of "the kiosk" a commodious establishment for the purpose of supplying almost every kind of refreshments except intoxicating liquors opened its doors to the public on Tuesday evening. The address is 36, Bow-street, nearly opposite the Theatre Royal, Covent-garden, and the enterprise has been undertaken by the "Kiosk Company," of which the Duke of Westminster is the president.

Sir R. Cunliffe Owen has returned from an official visit to the museums and to the Imperial and other collections of St. Petersberg and Moscow. He brings back a selection of facsimiles of about 250 objects, ranging from goldsmith's work of early Greek art exhumed at Kertch through mediæval times to English plate of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, and excellent pieces of French art of the period of Louis XV.

According to annual custom, the Lord Chancellor on Tuesday received, at his private residence, the Judges Queen's Counsel, Benchers of the Inns of Court, and also the Registrars and Masters of the several Divisions of the Supreme Court of Judicature, as well as the Lord Mayor Elect and other officers of the city of London.—The law courts were, on the same day, the first day of the Michaelmas sittings, opened with the customary ceremonies.

Digitized by Google

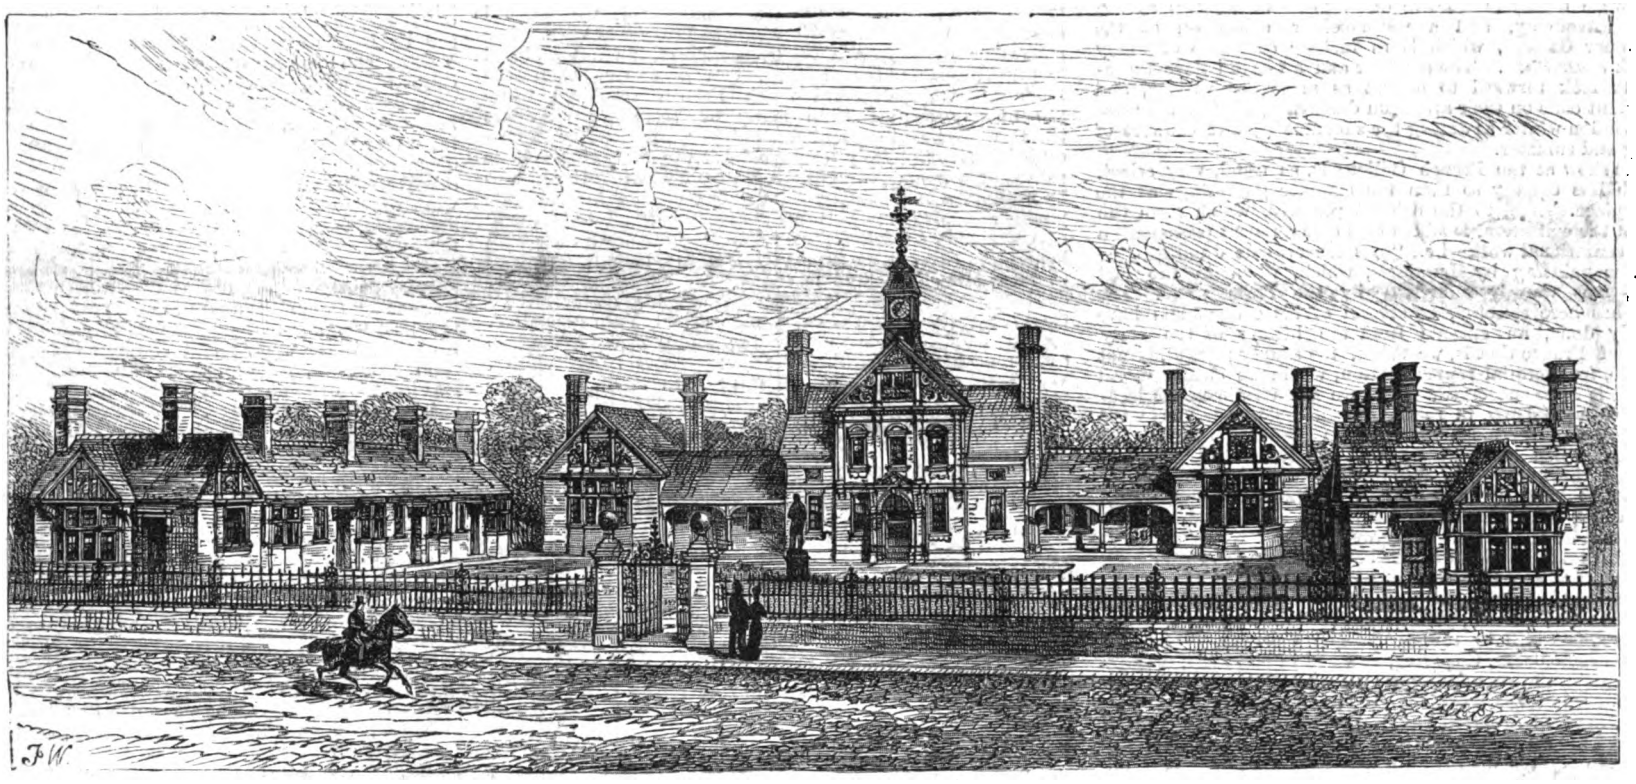
SKETCHES IN BRAEMAR: SALMON-SPEARING ON THE DEE.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

Digitized by Google

LIEUTENANT-GENERAL R. O. BRIGHT, C.B.

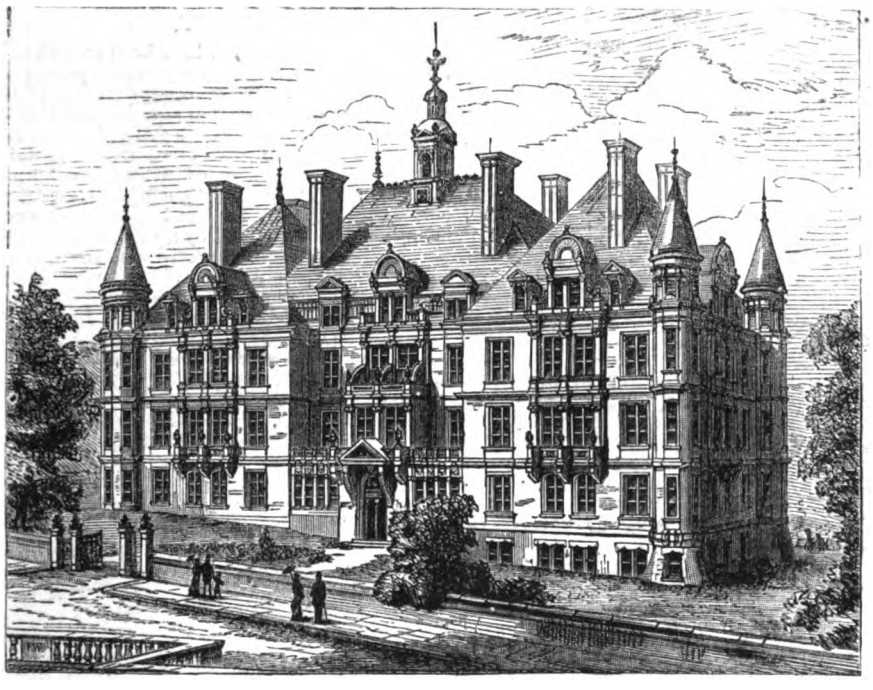
Among the distinguished officers lately engaged in the war in Afghanistan, and holding a command in the advance to Cabul from Peshawur, we present the portrait of Lieutenant-General Robert O. Bright, C.B. He served in the Crimean campaign of 1854 and 1855, including the battles of Alma and Inkerman, the siege and fall of Sebastopol, and storming of the Redan on June 18 and Sept. 8, when he was mentioned in the despatches with commendation. He afterwards commanded a brigade in the Hazara war, on the north-west frontier of India, and was in command of the brigade of Morar until he was made Major-General, in 1868. He was appointed to command the Meerut division in 1878. In the following year he was given the command of the second division of the force under General Sir S. Browne, for the Afghan war. He was then appointed Inspector-General of the Khyber Force, for the purpose of keeping open the communications between Cabul and Peshawur. His services in this capacity have been of the greatest efficiency and utility during the past two years.

The portrait of Lieutenant-General Bright is from a photograph by Mr. C. V. Bark, of Clifton, Bristol.



LIEUTENANT-GENERAL R. O. BRIGHT, COMMANDING IN THE KHYBER PASS.

NORTH LONDON HOSPITAL FOR CONSUMPTION.



The building on Frognal-rise, Hampstead, of which their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught laid the foundation-stone on Saturday, the 23rd ult., is shown in our Illustration. The North London Hospital for Consumption was founded in 1860, with a dispensary for out-patients in Tottenham-court-road. A large house at Hampstead was hired, some years afterwards, for the reception of in-patients. The institution has done much good, six or seven thousand patients being attended to in the course of a twelvemonth. The proposed new building will cost, when finally completed, about £25,000, and will then accommodate 112 in-patients; but only the western block is now under construction. The architect is Mr. T. Roger Smith, of Lancaster-place, Strand. The building is of red brick, with stone in the windows, cornices, and other features. It has high-pitched tile roofs, broken by dormer windows and high chimneys. It consists of a basement, three square stories, and a story of attics. The style of architecture is the French Renaissance of the seventeenth century. In plan, the entire hospital is to be a compact rectangular structure, about 163 ft. long by 55 ft. 6 in. deep. It has a very ample and light corridor of fireproof construction, running from end to end on each floor. The principal entrance is at the centre of the north-east front. An open and roomy main staircase rises through the principal floors, and a service staircase is carried from the basement to the attic floor, combined with which will be a lift for patients and a lighter one for general purposes. The basement floor, owing to a rapid fall of the ground, is almost entirely above ground at the western end. Here is the out-patients' department, with surgery, dispensary, and ample waiting-rooms. The last will be subdivided by movable partitions, by removing which a single room of considerable size can be readily formed, suitable for an occasional gathering of patients or their friends, and available, till a chapel is built, for Sunday services. No ward will have more than eight beds; in some there will be only four, and in others only two. On the sunny side of the building are open arcades, communicating with the day rooms and with the wards. These will form large and sheltered, but airy balconies, in which patients may sit and enjoy the air, the sunshine, and the fine view. There will be eight of these in all, four on each floor. The kitchen and servants' offices will be in the attic story. The air of the corridors and staircases is to be warmed by a heating apparatus.

CARDIFF FREE LIBRARY AND MUSEUM.

The new building to be erected for the Free Library, Museum, and Science and Art Schools, at Cardiff, is shown in our Illustration. In spite of the depression in the coal and iron

THE ROUS MEMORIAL BUILDINGS, NEWMARKET.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

THE NORTH LONDON CONSUMPTION HOSPITAL AT HAMPSTEAD.

CARDIFF FREE LIBRARY AND SCHOOL OF ART.

Digitized by Google

trades, from which South Wales has long been suffering, the population of the borough has nearly doubled within the past ten years, chiefly by the amalgamation of the suburbs. The Corporation have done their utmost to keep pace with this extension in their works of public improvement. Two years ago a large block of buildings, containing new municipal offices, police buildings, and a council chamber, was completed from the designs of Messrs. James, Seward, and Thomas, Cardiff. They are also now the architects of the new Free Library buildings. The present rooms have long been found inefficient. The laying of the foundation-stone, on Oct. 27, was performed by Mr. John McConnochie, Mayor of Cardiff, and chief engineer to the Bute Docks. In reply to advertisements, 107 sets of designs were submitted to the Corporation in open competition, and the first premium of £100 was awarded to the one we illustrate, on the condition that the cost should not exceed £8000, the amount of the architects' estimate. From about twelve tenders for the erection of the building, which were submitted, that of Mr. Richard Roberts, of Cardiff, for £7986, was accepted by the Corporation.

The library is to be arranged to accommodate 100,000 volumes eventually, and it will contain, besides, the usual newspaper and magazine rooms, and a large reference library surrounded by alcoves for private study of the books in that department. The librarian's office will be so placed as to allow a full view of the whole establishment. A school for science and art will occupy the first floor, divided into separate class-rooms for the teaching of painting, drawing from casts, and general elementary art-work, and for the study of the various sciences. By raising movable partitions two large lecture-rooms can be provided, one for science, the other for art; while adjoining the former will be a large laboratory for the practical study of chemistry. The whole of the floor above will be occupied as a museum, roofed with semicircular arch-ribs of iron, and lit from the top. In this room will be located the valuable and notable collection of geological specimens contained in the present Cardiff Museum; and it is intended to form a collection of art specimens, which will be placed in a section of the museum set aside for the purpose. The plans for the building, together with the site, have lately been inspected and approved by Lieutenant-Colonel Festing, architect to the Science and Art Department.

THE WINTER EXHIBITIONS.

FRENCH GALLERY.

The winter art season—now become so busy and so pleasant—which the French Gallery, Pall-mall, did much towards initiating, was reopened this week with the twenty-seventh annual exhibition at that gallery and with other exhibitions in the neighbouring Haymarket. Following close upon these will be opened in rapid succession the exhibitions at the Dudley Gallery, at the Society of British Artists, at the Hanover Gallery (an assemblage of British and Foreign works), at the Water-Colour Societies, and, nearer the end of the year, the always highly instructive display of Old Masters at the Royal Academy, and a water-colour exhibition at the Grosvenor Gallery, which is to include examples of many French aquarellistes. The amateur and art-critic have therefore to look forward to almost as many, as various, and important calls on their attention during the fogs and rigours of a London winter as during the sunshine (?) and showers of spring and summer.

The show at the French Gallery is, as usual, very select, though less equally so than the summer gatherings at the same place. And to the cabinet pictures, which form the bulk of the collection, is added (following recent precedent) a large sensational work—i.e., "Les Enervés de Jumièges"—the fine painting by Luminais, which, when in the last Salon, was warmly eulogised by the Paris press. The artist has here selected, as several of his compatriots have recently done, an episode from the history of the early Kings of France that is, we think, too simply painful, if not horrible, for pictorial representation, where no clearly moral purpose is to be subserved. Our own Alma Tadema has likewise drawn incidents, in rather questionable taste, from the troublous and atrocious Merovingian period. The ruthless Clovis II., when he had conquered his two rebellious sons, rendered them estropiés for life, and incapable of further mischief to him, by cutting their Achilles' tendons. Thus maimed, he placed them in a barge and abandoned them to the current of the Seine. They were, however, rescued and thereafter tended by some monks of the Monastery of Jumièges. In the picture we see the barge, with a shrine of the Virgin suspended at its prow, drifting, head-on towards us, along the rapid river, swollen, yellow, and turbid, from rain, which the sky seems still to threaten. The unhappy Princes lie prone on their backs, their feet, swathed in bandages, towards the s[illegible] of the barge nearing us; thus their figures are necessarily much foreshortened, but, the heads being propped by pillows, their ill-favoured faces—wan, suffering, and despairing—are brought well into view. The piteous appeal of the picture is only too distressingly poignant and direct; while technically it leaves small ground for criticism. The largeness of execution is merely commensurate with the scale, though, turning from the highly finished gems on either side, it may appear coarse.

Another deservedly prominent picture of the French school, and also a former acquaintance, is Henriette Browne's "Preparations for the Fête"—an acolyte furbishing the plate of his church: broad in handling and effect, and fine in colour, we need hardly say. No such commendation can, however, be given to the "Satyr Family" (162), by L. Priou; it is weak in drawing, and pallidly insipid in colouring. How the excellent taste which governs the hanging, no less than the selections, at this gallery should have deemed such a picture worthy to serve as a vis-a-vis to the "Enervés" of Luminais is not easy to comprehend. With mention of an excellent small picture by P. Beyle, in which "Church and State" are respectively personified by a monk and courtier, in dispute, and of still-life by Muraton and Charlemont, and subjects of child-life by Dargelas and Seignac, followers of Edouard Frere—unfailingly naif and pleasing, but presenting no fresh feature for comment—we have noticed the few remarkable French pictures; unless, indeed, we include a very admirable picture by Cermak, on view in the room upstairs. For, although Cermak was Hungarian by birth, and some time a pupil of the Belgian, Gallait, his training and characteristics are mainly referable to Paris. This picture, "An Episode of the War in Montenegro, 1862," representing an aged chieftain borne wounded, apparently mortally, on a litter down a precipitous defile in his native mountains (and which, perhaps, derives additional interest from the present political situation), fully bears out the high estimate we formed of it in the great Paris Exhibition of 1878, and in a previous Salon.

Of the examples of Belgian and Dutch painters we may name Gabriel's fresh and limpid "Early Morning, Holland," Weber's marine pieces, with yeasty waves and dancing craft, "A Fisherman's Family" by Blommers, and "The Fishermen's Dole" by Sadée, a pathetic subject—poor women waiting on the Scheveningen beach for the odd and stray fish that are thrown out to them from the pinks or schuyts—a subject which has been treated not less pathetically, though with less precision of hand, by the artist's master, Israels. But there is more artistic novelty and interest in a few works by Italian or Romano-Spanish painters; such as the small view "In the Bay of Naples" by Maas-y-Fondevila; and—by far the most noteworthy in this connection—the "Street in Pompeii" by Capobianchi; all which evince the influence of Fortuny, and his insistance that painting in oil may be as pure in hue and tint as the painting in water colour, which he so much practised and recommended, with this end in view. Oil-pictures painted on this principle are apt to look at first sight somewhat startling in an exhibition, owing to the comparative absence of the "chiaroscuro" that is so often a mere studio convention; yet where shadow tone is looked for, as in the shadowy shop of the last-named picture, we often find it as well observed as the effect of open air and sunlight. The Roman artist, Capobianchi, was long a friend of and co-worker with Fortuny, and is the most distinguished of his followers, probably because the least servile; he nearly approaches that genius in exquisite purity of colour and brilliancy of touch; while he has a refinement of feeling not always found in the works of the Spanish master. He is, moreover, well versed in archæology, as may be seen in this "Street of Pompeii" before the burying of the city, wherein a patrician damsel is bargaining at the shop of a dealer in objets-d'art. The coloured fictile balsamario, the opalescent glass bowl, the bronze statuette of "Silenus" (preserved in the Naples Museum), here ingeniously made to sustain a huge glass basin, probably for wine, the Portland vase—all on the counter—the small bronze-gilt flying Victory the dealer offers (similar in motive to the statue by Paeonios found at Olympia), the statues inside (now in the Capitol), the carpets from Egypt and Assyria, the terra-cottas outside; and the itinerant tinker, with his wood fire and goat-skin wind-bag (whose modern counterpart we have actually seen near Pompeii), all have their authority in ancient remains mostly found on the spot. We have here no jumble of incongruous materials, forced together to give an air of learning, such as we get from artists nearer home who study the vestiges of antiquity from books and at a distance. This pure and sparkling colouring, too, can only be obtained by that masterly self-assurance which enables an artist to secure his ultimate effect in one painting (alla prima), without a second touch, glaze, or scumble. J. Beullíure, a Spanish artist painting in Italy, is another noteworthy exhibitor in this category. He has an "Interior of a Spanish Bodega" of microscopic dimensions, and a wildly fantastic composition in which the delicately painted fair form of a sleeping lady, air-borne, as in a dream, above the low moon, is contrasted with dark figures of mouthing, grinning imps and goblins.

The German schools, speaking generally, fall into the opposite fault of exaggerated shadows—smoky and black at Düsseldorf, heavy and bituminous at Munich. The German artist of to-day has taken a new departure from the religious, philosophic, and legendary themes, and ascetic or "high-art" treatment, initiated by the Overbeck revival, which could hardly have been anticipated twenty or thirty years ago. The genre and landscape painters in particular, if unoriginal and less subtle than the French, less decorative than the Italians, have assimilated much French teaching, while the homely sentiment in many of their works renders them welcome in England. They are largely represented here. Specially commendable are A. Spring's little canvas of a monk painting "A Votive Picture," the groups by Breling, à la Meissonier, the dainty costumed heads by the younger Kaulbach; C. Hoff's "Forest Glade"—a girl with dog, watching a startled fawn; Von Bochmann's figures with landscapes—very true in aspect though a little brown; and C. Zimmerman's humorous characterisation in two monks, one with his "Straduarius," the other with his "Guarnerius," together with Braith's cattle-pieces and Yutz's poultry. Equally good in their way are the winter pieces (though so often repeated) of Munthe, the landscapes by Oeder, Lier, Wopfner, Wahlberg (who, though Scandinavian, studied at Düsseldorf), Heffner, and others. The last-named—Heffner—had already made his mark in this gallery, but now shows his art to be of much wider grasp and greater strength than before. His landscapes range in effect from broad daylight, in "Bavarian Marshlands," through the darkling shadows of many-folded gathering cumuli, relieved by "A Flitting Gleam," and the duskier "Gloaming," tinctured by ruddy afterglow, to "A Rift in the Cloud," pierced by a full-orbed silver moon.

As customary in the Winter Exhibition at this gallery, works by English artists were admissible: but they are too few, and for the most part too unimportant to admit of fair comparison with the foreign productions. Mr. Goodall's "Rebekah at the Well" fairly sustains such comparison; but hardly so Mr. Pettie's "Council of War," two Roundhead soldiers inspecting a map: the execution is more than usually loose, and the picture is of not much account otherwise. J. Morgan's school inspector proposing the question, "Who Killed Cain?" and cheiting a dozen raised hands from so many little ones ready with an answer, is a painted joke which will please many. Mr. Leader sends one of his Academy landscapes and a Welsh view, tenderly aerial in effect; and James Webb, scenes at Dordrecht and Rotterdam, picturesque, sunny, and delicately pencilled. W. H. Bartlett makes a long stride in advance in his strikingly effective "Netting Eels on the Loire." Mrs. Anderson's "Alone," a nymph in a wood, and "Corfu Gipsy," evince a true sense of beauty and feeling for tone. Other works we would commend to notice, though scarcely requiring detailed observations, are those by E. Croft, G. H. Boughton, A. H. Burr, L. Pickering, C. Bauerlé, J. W. Chapman, and Misses A. and Hilda Montalba.

MESSRS. TOOTH'S GALLERY.

In the exhibition here, as at the French Gallery, there is an increased proportion of foreign works—to the advantage, it must be owned, of the display. Here, besides additional examples of Munthe, Breling, Sadée, Blommers, Dargelas, Von Bochmann, Heffner, and other painters represented in Pall-mall, we have some French and other artists, whose names do not occur in the French Gallery catalogue, but whose works demand notice, not only because we have not had occasion to discuss their characteristics already, but also on account of their great merit.

"The Cobbler's Shop," by L'Hermitte, for instance, though excessively negative in colour, is very admirable for its truth of lighting and breadth of treatment. "An Accident," by Dagnan—a young surgeon dressing the seriously wounded hand of a peasant boy, must be ranked still higher in virtue of the touching truth of the expressions—of fortitude in the pale boy, of sympathy in the aged grandam looking helplessly on. The work recalls that far more terrible picture in the last Salon by Gervex illustrative of Victor Hugo's line "L'enfant avait reçu deux bals dans la tête. C. Moreau's idyl of a rustic father giving "The First Lesson" on a wooden whistle to his little child between his knees has likewise excellent qualities of simple naturalness, with unvulgar colour.

Here, too, we may further study the Italian and Romano-Spanish schools in works by L. Rossi (more than ever meretricious), Tamburini, Garcia y Ramos, Jimenez y Aranda—"The Book Worm," which very closely rivals Meissonier not only in delicacy and felicity of handling, and command of technical resources generally, but also in closeness of observation; and Louis Jimenez (brother of the last)—"Engaged Couples," in which, admitting the humour of the coquetting and quarrelling, and of the extravagant costumes of the Directorate, which forms the sole wardrobe of several of these painters; admitting also the brio of the brushwork and the "chic" of those palpitating and titillating flecks of contrasted colour, we yet find most of the faults of several of the too-clever followers of Fortuny—notably, the want of repose, tone, and keeping, and exaggeration of the cold colours to secure freshness and brightness. At the very antipodes to these painters is the Dutch Israels, in so many of whose works everything is sacrificed or attuned to a sombre and, sometimes, funereal pathos. In the often-painted subject here of a young mother watching her cradled baby, entitled "The First Charge," we think the sentiment is just missed that might have redeemed the needlessly ugly types and the fumbling execution.

Several popular or rising English painters—such as Messrs. Burgess (with two Spanish belles), J. Webb, E. Hayes, E. Parton, R. Beavis, C. E. Johnson, S. E. Waller, and J. Syer—are represented, but are scarcely in sufficient force to need comment. We may, however, except as deserving mention Mr. Leader's large landscape at the head of the room; Mr. Frank Holl's "Besieged"—French peasant-women during the Franco-Prussian War near their cottage window, which is made to yield exaggerated effects of light and shade; Mr. Croft's "Napoleon's Last Grand Attack, Waterloo," in which the artist barely does himself justice; and a picture of Highland cattle, by Mr. Peter Graham, in which the landscape is startlingly vivid, if not crude.

MR. McLEAN'S GALLERY.

The display of water-colour drawings at this gallery may be regarded as an interesting adjunct to the exhibitions of the several Societies—rather than a succursale or feeder to them, seeing that some of the works had been previously exhibited; or are finished studies for such works—as in the case of Mr. Carl Haag's modification of his "War"—which deservedly occupies the post of honour. The collection is, as usual, generally well chosen; assuming, that is, the selection to have been made more with regard to average good quality than relative importance. For this reason criticism may be justifiably deferred in many instances till the proximate opening of the Societies' doors. It will suffice, therefore, to say (in our limited space) that there are examples of Sir John Gilbert—"The Ambuscade," small but very good; Mrs. Allingham, Birket Foster, T. Collier, J. Aumonier, E. Frère, R. Beavis, S. Read, G. Dodgson, J. Israels, H. G. Hine, Guido Bach, G. H. Boughton, E. J. Gregory, J. Syer, J. Smart, Rosa Bonheur, F. Tayler, E. A. Waterlow, E. K. Johnson, G. F. Grace, Mrs. Angell (flower-pieces of her best) and A. W. Weedon. There is also a small drawing by Mr. Millais, called "Selling her Locks." Mr. John Varley, who has been studying in the East, makes a promising début with a large drawing of "The Canal at Alexandria," with darbehehs, and female water-carriers, which is glowing in effect. By Mr. Carl Haag there are two studies besides his "War." An elaborate drawing representing "Pilgrims departing for Mecca," or rather Pilgrims assembling for their departure, by C. Biseo, might be taken at first sight for a work of the last-named painter. It is, in some respects, admirable, but the aerial effect seems too cold and palpable for the Eastern climate and atmosphere. Fortuny's "Muscateer" has been exhibited before, and was, we believe, slightly damaged in a fire at the house of a former owner. Gérome's "Dante" is a replica of his oil-picture representing the poet walking in lonely melancholy in the fields outside Florence, while women and children draw, half in terror, from his path, as the man who had visited l'Inferno. E. Fichell's appearance in water colours (No. 104) is new to us: he shows to advantage. There are, lastly, samples of the French Vibert and Leloir, the Italian Peralta and Simoni, and the Spanish Pradilla.

The Institute of Art, 9, Conduit-street, opened an exhibition last Monday consisting of pictures, drawings, and various productions in the "minor arts," mostly by ladies. Further particulars must be postponed till next week.

Messrs. Maclure and Macdonald, of Glasgow, have sent us an Art-Album, containing twenty-four reproductions in unchangeable phototype of pictures in the Glasgow Institute of Fine Arts. The process gives rather a foggy rendering of some of the pictures; but, on the whole, the collection is interesting.

Messrs. J. and W. Vokins have just opened their gallery, in Great Portland-street, with a collection of high-class pictures, amongst which are "The Pool of Bethesda," and an "Egyptian Dancing Girl," by E. Long, A.R.A.; "Sea-Side Ducks," "The Land of Cuyp," and others, by J. C. Hook, R.A.; "The Holy Mother," by F. Goodall, R.A.; also a fine work of J. W. M. Turner's; and good examples of Phillip, Alma Tadema, Ansdell, Frith, Madrazo, and others well worthy of attention.

THE ROUS MEMORIAL BUILDINGS, NEWMARKET.

These buildings, recently completed, have been erected to the memory of Admiral Rous, the late esteemed patron and dictator of racing business. They occupy a conspicuous position at the junction of the Station and Rutland roads, at Newmarket, on a site given by Sir Richard Wallace, Bart. The buildings are arranged to form a picturesque group on three sides of a quadrangle, and consist of an hospital, planned on the pavilion system, to accommodate ten patients, and two blocks of almshouses, for the habitation of twelve persons. The quadrangle is inclosed by a wrought iron railing and gates of ornamented design, to accord with the period of architecture chosen for the buildings, which are of English Renaissance character. The materials employed are red brick for the walls, and plum-coloured tiles for the roofs. The sculptured gables and panels represent monograms, heraldic and other devices, and are all executed in red brick—no stone being used in the construction of the buildings above the floor level. The statue to occupy the centre of the quadrangle has not yet been erected; but the hospital is open for the reception of patients, and the almshouses will shortly be occupied. The architect is Mr. Frederick W. Roper, of Adam-street, Adelphi, whose design was chosen in competition.

The Rous Memorial Committee came together at Newmarket in the week of the Houghton Meeting. The Prince of Wales was in the chair, and Sir J. D. Astley, Mr. Craven, Lord Hardwicke, Lord Hartington, Mr. Lowther, and Lord Stradbroke were present. It was unanimously agreed that the Bentinck Benevolent Fund Committee be appointed the committee to decide on applications for residence in the Rous Memorial Buildings.

Digitized by Google

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

Ready, in One Volume, handsomely bound and extra gilt. price 6s.,
THE THIRD AND COMPLETELY REVISED EDITION OF THE STORY OF THE DIAMOND NECKLACE,
TOLD IN DETAIL FOR THE FIRST TIME
By HENRY VIZETELLY.
Illustrated with a Steel Engraving of the Diamond Necklace and a Portrait of the Countess De la Motte.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS ON THE FIRST EDITION.

"Mr. Vizetelly's tale has all the interest of a romance which is too strange not to be true. . . . His summing-up of the evidence, both negative and positive, which exculpates Marie Antoinette from any complicity whatever with the scandalous intrigue in which she was represented as bearing a part is admirable."—Saturday Review.

"We can, without fear of contradiction, describe Mr. Henry Vizetelly's "Story of the Diamond Necklace" as a book of thrilling interest. He has not only executed his task with skill and faithfulness, but also with tact and delicacy."—Standard.

"Let us say at once that Mr. Vizetelly has performed his work admirably. His two volumes are absorbing in their interest, and, after a perusal of them, the best novels are dull."—Daily Telegraph.

POPULAR FRENCH NOVELS,
Translations of the best examples of recent French Fiction of an unobjectionable character.
ONE SHILLING EACH.
FROMONT AND RISLER. By A. DAUDET.
SAMUEL BROHL AND PARTNER. By V. CHERBULIEZ.
MAUGARS, JUNIOR. By A. THEURIET.
DRAMA OF THE RUE DE LA PAIX. By A. BELOT.
WAYWARD DOSIA. By H. GREVILLE.
A NEW LEASE OF LIFE. By E. ABOUT.
VIZETELLY and Co., 10, Southampton-street, Strand.

SMITH, ELDER, and CO.'S
NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Now ready, royal 8vo, price 25s.,
THE POWER OF SOUND. By EDMUND GURNEY, late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge.

Now ready, crown 8vo, 10s. 6d.,
THE POETRY OF ASTRONOMY. By RICHARD A. PROCTOR, Author of "The Borderland of Science," "Science Byways," &c.

NEW NOVELS.
Now ready at all the Libraries,
THE TRUMPET MAJOR. By THOMAS HARDY, Author of "Far from the Madding Crowd," &c. 3 vols., post 8vo.

At all the Libraries, in Two Vols., post 8vo,
MEHALAH: A Story of the Salt Marshes.
London: SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 15, Waterloo-place.

SELF-CULTURE for ALL.

THE UNIVERSAL INSTRUCTOR, in WEEKLY NUMBERS and MONTHLY PARTS,

THE UNIVERSAL INSTRUCTOR.
Numbers 1, 2, and 3 now ready, price 1d. each.

THE UNIVERSAL INSTRUCTOR.
Part I. now ready, price 6d., containing a valuable CHART or the HISTORY of the WORLD, printed in Colours. Prospectus post-free on application.

NOTICE TO BOOKSELLERS AND THE PUBLIC.
WARD and LOCK'S UNIVERSAL INSTRUCTOR.
Anticipating a considerable demand for the first number of "The Universal Instructor," the publishers prepared a large first edition, which was speedily exhausted, and further editions have been put to press, amounting to six times the number first printed.
The orders for the first monthly part are so large that a fifth edition is already being printed.
The reprinting is being proceeded with as rapidly as possible, and orders for both Weekly Number and Monthly Part will be executed in the order in which they are received.
London: WARD, LOCK, and Co., Salisbury-square, E.C.

THE NEW FASHION-BOOK.

DEBENHAM and FREEBODY beg to announce the publication of the Twenty-second Number of their NEW FASHION-BOOK. The Book is enlarged to forty-eight pages, and contains numerous Illustrations of selected Models in Costumes, Mantles, Millinery, Evening Dresses, and Lace Goods, with Descriptive Articles, Estimates, Prices, &c.
"It is a complete index to the fashionable novelties of the day, in regard to colour and make, furnishing made-up costumes of all that is choicest and newest, with their prices in the respective materials, so that ladies may SHOP AT HOME."

THE NEW FASHION-BOOK
Post-free for twelve stamps.
DEBENHAM and FREEBODY, Wigmore-street, Welbeck-street, London, W.

CAN A MAN FLY? or, Fifteen Months in the Moon. 3rd Thousand. 96 Pages. SUMMARY OF CONTENTS:—Separation of Mind and Matter. Journey to Moon: Landing; "Try other Side." Second Landing: Signal to Earth; Reply: Reunion of Mind and Matter; Description of Lunar Inhabitants—their Dwellings, Food, Government, Language, Division of Time, Mode of Calculation, Animals, Birds, Plants, Monocyclic Railways (120 miles per hour), and Utilisation of Electricity; a Sixth Sense—Natural Telegraphy; Lunar Courtship: Terrible Flood; Festival of the Rising Sun; Solution of the Problems of Aerial Navigation and Diamond Manufacture; Long Ride Through the Air; Awful Combat—Triumph; Earth from entirely New Point of View; Conclusion. Price 6d.; post-free, 7d.—G. H. RYAN, Hornsey, London, N.

8vo, pp. 724, cloth, 8s.; or half bound, 10s. 6d.,
HOMŒOPATHIC DOMESTIC PHYSICIAN. By Drs. PULTE and EPPS.
Revised, with important additions and many new remedies, by WASHINGTON EPPS, L.R.C.P.
CONTENTS:—General Diseases—Casual Diseases—Cutaneous Diseases—Fevers—Affections of the Mind—the Head—the Eyes—the Ears—the Nose—the Face, Lips, and Jaws—the Teeth, Gums, and Mouth—the Windpipe and Chest—the Stomach and Bowels—the Urinary and Genital Organs. Diseases of Women—Treatment of Children—Anatomy and Physiology—Hygiene and Hydropathy—Materia Medica—Domestic Surgery—Medical and Surgical Appliances—Dislocations and Luxations—Fractures.
London: JAMES EPPS and Co., 48, Threadneedle-street.

Eighth Edition, cloth, post-free, 33 stamps,
DR. BARR MEADOWS on Skin Disease.
Remarks on the Abuse of Arsenic, and specifics.
G. HILL, 154, Westminster-road.

Fourth Edition, cloth, post-free, 13 stamps,
DR. BARR MEADOWS on Homœopathy.
"A clever exposé of the system."
G. HILL, 154, Westminster-road.

JUST PUBLISHED. Post-free, Two Stamps.
DYSPEPSIA and the SEVERER FORMS OF INDIGESTION. A Small Pamphlet on those distressing complaints and their complete cures. Published by the Author, RICHARD KING, Esq., Staff Surgeon, R.N., 23, Warwick-st., Rugby.

SKIN DISEASES due to nervous derangements: their Curative Treatment. By Dr. STRETCH DOWSE, Author of "Brain and Nerve Exhaustion." Price 2s., post-free. BAILLIERE and Co., King William-street, Strand.

Third Edition, 1s., post-free,
THE new ELECTROLYTIC TREATMENT of CANCER and of simple Tumours. By G. EDGELOW, M.D.—NELSON and Co., 23, Duke-street, Grosvenor-square, W.

THE Treatment of Cancer, Tumours, and Ulcers, by CHIAN TURPENTINE, and all other Methods. Addressed to sufferers by ALEX. MARSDEN, M.D., Senior Surgeon to the Cancer Hospital, London. Post-free, 1s.
London: WYMAN and SONS, Great Queen-street, W.C.

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

THE NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.
Now ready, at all the Libraries, in 3 vols.,
DIMPLETHORPE. By the Author of "St. Olave's," &c.
STRICTLY TIED UP.
ROY AND VIOLA. By Mrs. FORRESTER, Author of "Viva," &c. SECOND EDITION.
LORD BRACKENBURY. By AMELIA B. EDWARDS, Author of "Barbara's History." SECOND EDITION.
ST. MARTIN'S SUMMER. By SHIRLEY SMITH.
LITTLE PANSY. By Mrs. RANDOLPH, Author of "Gentianella," &c. 3 vols. [Nov. 12.
HURST and BLACKETT, Publishers, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

POPULAR NOVELS AT ALL LIBRARIES.
GRISEL ROMNEY. By M. E. FRASER TYTLER.
CROSS PURPOSES. By CECILIA FINDLAY.
MATE OF THE JESSICA. By F. FRANKFORT MOORE.

Now ready, at all Libraries,
TASMANIAN FRIENDS AND FOES: Feathered, Furred, and Finned.
By Mrs. MEREDITH. An entertaining and chatty account of the Natural History of Tasmania. Illustrated. Price 21s.

Now ready, at all Libraries,
HOW THEY WERE CAUGHT IN A TRAP: A Tale of France in 1802. By ESME STUART. Price 5s.
MARCUS WARD and Co., London and Belfast.

Seventh Edition. 2s.; post-free for 26 stamps,
STAMMERING; Its Causes and Cure.
By a Physician of Twenty-five Years, Special Experience. Published by G. PITMAN, 140, Gower-street, London.

Just published, demy 8vo, price 12s. 6d.,
ROUND THE WORLD IN 124 DAYS.
By R. W. LEYLAND, F.R.G.S. With Map and Illustrations.—London: HAMILTON, ADAMS, and Co., Paternoster-row.

NOTICE.
THE MAGAZINE OF ART.—The Large First Edition of PART I., of the ENLARGED SERIES, having been subscribed for by the Trade on the day of publication, and a Second Edition having been exhausted, a THIRD EDITION has been prepared, and is now ready.
CASSELL, PETTER, GALPIN, and Co., Ludgate-hill, London.

Now ready, price 10s. 6d.,
THE MAGAZINE OF ART.—Yearly volume for 1880 (Vol. III.). With about 300 Illustrations by the first Artists of the day, and Etching for Frontispiece. Handsomely bound in cloth gilt, gilt edges.
The price of Vols. I. and II., each containing 200 Illustrations, has been raised from 7s. 6d. to 10s. 6d. each.
CASSELL, PETTER, GALPIN, and Co., Ludgate-hill, London.

Just Published, price 9s.,
SCIENCE FOR ALL YEARLY VOLUME FOR 1880. Edited by Dr. ROBERT BROWN, M.A., F.L.S., Assisted by eminent Scientific Writers. With about 350 Illustrations and Diagrams.
The Athenæum of Oct. 30, 1880, says:—"Whatever branch of science a man may happen to be studying, he is sure to find something to his taste in turning over the pages of this work. After looking through the work we are disposed to think that, on the whole, each volume is an advance upon its predecessors, both in the character of the articles and in the excellence of the illustrations."
CASSELL, PETTER, GALPIN, and Co., Ludgate-hill, London.

MISS BRADDON'S CHRISTMAS ANNUAL.
Price One Shilling, Illustrated.
THE MISLETOE BOUGH. The New Annual. By the Author of "Lady Audley's Secret."
London: J. and R. MAXWELL, Shoe-lane, Fleet-street.

TWO NEW MUSICAL BOOKS.
Second Series, very thick crown 8vo, 10s. 6d.,
SCHUMANN'S MUSIC AND MUSICIANS: Essays and Criticisms. Edited by F. R. RITTER. Also Vol. I., Second Edition, 8s. 6d.

With Portrait, thick crown 8vo, 10s. 6d.,
HENRY SMART: His Life and Works.
By Dr. SPARK (of Leeds).
W. REEVES, Musical Publisher, Fleet-street.

Just published, Illustrated, post-free, 1s. 8d.,
DECORATIVE PAINTING.
A Practical Guide to Decorating the Walls of any Apartment, Painting Panels, Screens, and Terra Cotta. By W. R. HARRISON.—WM. BARNARD, 119, Edgware-road, London.

PAINTING on CHINA, EARTHENWARE, &c.: Practical Lessons by Madame la Baronne DELAMARDELLE. From the French, by G. A. Bouvier. Fourth Edition, post-free, 1s. 1d.—LECHERTIER, BARBE, and Co., 60, Regent-st., W.

SCRIBNER'S ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE for NOVEMBER commences a new volume; contains 25 distinct Articles and 70 high-class Illustrations. Price 1s. 4d.
F. WARNE and Co., Bedford-street, Strand.

Just published, price 4d.,
TIBBIE DUNBAR. Part-Song. The Words written by Robert Burns; the Music composed by E. MARWOOD TUCKER.—London: NOVELLO, EWER, and Co.

THE VIRTUOUS GARDENER. Ballad. Encored nightly.
ALL ON ACCOUNT OF ELIZA. Romance. The success of the Opera.
THE SELF-MADE MAN. Sir Mincing Lane Song.
From Solomon's Nautical Comic Opera, "Billee Taylor." 2s. each, post-free.
JOSEPH WILLIAMS, Berners-street and Cheapside.

THE LINCOLN POSTAGE-STAMP ALBUM and CATALOGUE. Illustrated. Fifth Edition. With Spaces for over 3,000 stamps. Cloth gilt, 2s. 6d.; post-free, 2s. 10d.—W. LINCOLN, 229, High Holborn, London.

CATALOGUES of SECONDHAND BOOKS published by L. M. GLOGAU SOHN, Bookseller at Hamburg, 21 gr. Burstah. The latest Catalogues, Nos. 21 to 26 contain 300,000 vols. of all sciences. These Catalogues will be sent, post-paid, on application, inclosing 6d. in postage-stamps. State the sciences desired.

SCRAPS for SCREENS and SCRAP-BOOKS (Coloured).—Immense variety of Flowers, Figures Birds, and Landscapes, from 1s. per sheet; 1 doz. assorted, 10s. 6d.
London: WM. BARNARD, 119, Edgware-road.

WEDDING and BIRTHDAY PRESENTS at RODRIGUES', 42, Piccadilly, London.
SETS FOR THE WRITING-TABLE AND BOUDOIR, IN POLISHED BRASS, ORMOLU, SEVRES CHINA.

BRONZE, and OXIDIZED SILVER, from ..	21s. to £10
TRAVELLING DRESSING BAGS ..	63s. to £50
DRESSING CASES	21s. to £50
DESPATCH BOXES	21s. to £10
TOURISTS' WRITING CASES	42s. 6d. to £5
ENVELOPE CASES and BLOTTING BOOKS..	10s. 6d. to £5
STATIONERY CASES AND CABINETS ..	30s. to £5
INKSTANDS	5s. to £5
CANDLESTICKS (per pair)	7s. 6d. to £5
WORK BOXES and BASKETS	15s. to £5
PORTRAIT ALBUMS	42s. 6d. to £4
THE NEW "TANTALUS" LIQUEUR STAND ..	105s. to £10
THE NEW "EPITOME" WRITING CASE ..	12s. to 30s.
THE NEW STYLOGRAPHIC PEN, 12s. 6d., 14s. 6d., and 16s. 6d.

And a large and choice assortment of ENGLISH, VIENNESE, and PARISIAN NOVELTIES, from 5s. to £5.
HENRY RODRIGUES', 42, Piccadilly, London.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS.
GOLD MEDAL,
PARIS,
1878.

PENS.—MACNIVEN AND CAMERON'S ARE THE BEST.
"They are a treasure."—Standard.
6d. and 1s. per Box. Sold by all Stationers.
Specimen Box of all the kinds, by post, 1s. 1d.
23, Blair-street, Edinburgh.
Penmakers to Her Majesty's Government Offices.
Established 1770.

WANDERERS' CLUB, PALL-MALL.
President—Lord HEADLEY.
Honorary Secretary—Major-General S. STALLARD, R.A.
This Club was established in 1874, in consequence of the overcrowded state of the leading West-End Clubs.
ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTIONS.
Town Members, Eight Guineas; Country Members, Four Guineas; Officers on Foreign Service, Three Guineas. Entrance-fee, Ten Guineas. Applications to be made to C. W. E. PINEO, Secretary.

WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS on LOAN, for the use of Amateurs and Students. The Subscription Portfolio contains a choice Collection by leading Artists. Catalogue and Terms on application.
ARTHUR ACKERMANN, 191, Regent-street, London, W.

DIAMONDS. SAPPHIRES. CATS'-EYES. OPALS. EMERALDS.
Mr. STREETER,
18, New Bond-street, W.
INTRODUCER of 18-CARAT GOLD JEWELLERY and ENGLISH LEVER WATCHES, (MACHINE-MADE.)
BRANCH ESTABLISHMENT, COLOMBO, CEYLON.

WALKER'S CRYSTAL CASE WATCHES are superseding all others. Prize Medals—London, 1862; Paris, 1867. Silver Watches, from £4 4s.; Gold, from £10. Price-Lists sent free.—77, Cornhill; 220, Regent-street; and 76, Strand.

THE FINEST WATCHES MADE.
SEWILL'S KEYLESS WATCHES, Prize Medals, London, Paris, and Philadelphia. Damp and Dust-proof, 18-carat cases, adjusted and compensated for all climates, £10 10s., £14 14s., and £25; Ladies', £7 7s., £10 10s., and £18 10s.; in silver cases, for Ladies or Gentlemen, £3 5s., £5 5s., and £8 8s. Forwarded on receipt of remittance.—J. Sewill, 30, Cornhill, London; and 61, South Castle-street, Liverpool.

CHARLES FRODSHAM and CO. By Appointment to her Majesty. THREE GOLD MEDALS for CLOCKS and WATCHES.
Only Address, 84, Strand, London, W.C.

THE BEST ENGLISH WATCHES.
GOLDSMITHS' ALLIANCE, Limited, request the attention of Purchasers to their PATENT LEVER WATCHES, which, being manufactured on the Premises, are confidently recommended for accuracy and durability.
Prices of Silver Watches.

Patent Lever Watch, jewelled, enamel dial, and seconds	£4 14 6
Ditto, jewelled in four holes and capped	6 6 0
Ditto, the finest quality, jewelled in six holes ..	8 8 0
Silver Watches in hunting cases, 10s. 6d. extra.
Gold Watches.—Size for Ladies.
Patent Lever Watches, with gold dial, jewelled	11 11 0
Ditto, with richly engraved case	12 12 0
Ditto, with very strong case, and jewelled in four holes	14 14 0
Gold Watches.—Size for Gentlemen.
Patent Lever Watches, jewelled, seconds, and capped ..	13 13 0
Ditto, jewelled in six holes, and gold balance	18 18 0
Gold Watches in hunting cases, £4 4s. extra.

Lists of Prices, with remarks on watches, gratis, and post-free.
The Goldsmiths' Alliance, Limited, 11 and 12, Cornhill, London.

ORIDE GOLD ALBERT CHAINS, 5s., 7s. 6d., 10s. 6d. Links, Solitaires, or Studs, 2s. 6d. Brooches, 4s. 6d. to 8s. 6d. Earrings, 3s. 6d. to 7s. 6d. Lockets, 4s. 6d. to 12s. 6d. Free by post. Opinions of the Press and Price-Lists post-free.—C. C. ROWE, 92, Brompton-road, London, S.W.

JAY'S, REGENT-STREET, W.

NEW MANTLES, Lined with Plush and other Seasonable Doublures.—These Mantles are noticeable for their special neatness and convenient arrangements. Messrs. JAY confidently trust that the selections they have recently made will ensure a continuance of the reputation which their Mantle Department has so long maintained in the fashionable world.
JAY'S, REGENT-STREET.

NEW SHORT COSTUMES and Graceful DINNER DRESS—Short Dresses.—Messrs. JAY respectfully invite their clientele to the choice Collection of Pattern Costumes of the newest type of fashion, which have been imported from Paris and Berlin.
JAY'S, REGENT-STREET.

PATTERNS FREE.
BLACK VELVETEENS.—Almost equal in appearance to good black velvet. As black velveteen is likely to be much worn during the winter season, Messrs. JAY have had manufactured special qualities of black velveteen, fast colour. These Velveteens are confidently recommended to their customers.
JAY'S, REGENT-STREET.

Patterns free.
BLACK KASHGAR CASHMERE.—A mixture of camel's hair and the finest wool; one of the lightest and warmest fabrics of the season, perfectly fast colour, will not shrink when wetted, and hangs most gracefully when made up in costumes. In various qualities, 46 in. wide, from 5s. 6d. to 10s. 6d. per yard.
JAY'S, REGENT-STREET.

EVENING DRESSES.—The Newest and Most Fashionable Styles made of GRENADINE and NON-CRUSHING SILK NET. Pencil Drawings of the same postage free on application.
JAY'S,
THE LONDON GENERAL MOURNING WAREHOUSE,
REGENT-STREET, W.

FAMILY DRAPERY STORE, 116 to 122, EDGWARE-ROAD, W. Every description of General Drapery, Household Linens, Velveteens, Dress Materials, &c., at Merchants' prices for Cash.
Special.—Now on Sale, a large Stock of Fine Thick Wool Dress Goods and Flannels from 6d. to 1s. 6d. yard.
All Patterns post-free.

CHUBB'S PATENT SAFES, FIRE AND THIEF RESISTING.

CHUBB'S SAFES FOR JEWELS, DEEDS, PLATE, BULLION, &c.

CHUBB'S LOCKS AND LATCHES, CHESTS, BOXES, &c.

CHUBB'S ILLUSTRATED PRICE-LISTS POST-FREE.

CHUBB and SON, 128, Queen Victoria-street, E.C.; and 68, St. James's-street, London.

EPPS'S COCOA. GRATEFUL and COMFORTING.
"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operation of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.
JAMES EPPS and CO., HOMŒOPATHIC CHEMISTS.
Also, EPPS'S CHOCOLATE ESSENCE, for Afternoon Use.

A PERSIAN CARPET for 42s.—The reason why the price is so low (being, indeed, less than cost) is that the market has been suddenly overstocked.—TRELOAR and SONS, 69, Ludgate-hill.

A PERSIAN CARPET for 45s., carriage paid to any railway station in England. There is now the opportunity of purchasing for 42s., or, carriage paid as above, for 45s., a splendid carpet, about 3¼ to 3½ yards long.—TRELOAR and SONS, 69, Ludgate-hill.

"THEY HAVE NO EQUAL."
This is the universal opinion of everybody who has tried
DR. SCOTT'S BILIOUS and LIVER PILLS, for bilious and liver complaints, indigestion, wind, spasms, foul breath, nervous depression, irritability, lassitude, loss of appetite, dyspepsia, heartburn, giddiness, dizziness of the eyes, &c. Being a mild and tonic in their action as they are certain in their curative effects.—Prepared by W. Lambert, 173, Seymour-place, London, W., in Boxes, 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d., and sold by all Chemists. The genuine are in square green packages. Take no other.

FIVE PER CENT DEBENTURES.
AUSTRALASIAN AGENCY and BANKING CORPORATION (Limited).
Capital £1,250,000. In 125,000 Shares of £10 each.
Subscribed in the Australian Colonies, £962,320; in London, £300,000. Reserve Fund, £25,000.
LONDON DIRECTORS:
Abraham Scott, Esq. | Harry Hankey Dobree, Esq.
Frank C. Capel, Esq. | Joseph Cockfield, Dimsdale, Esq.
BANKERS:
Messrs. Dimsdale, Fowler, Barnard, and Dimsdales.
SOLICITORS:
Messrs. Freshfields and Williams.
The Company are now issuing Debentures at the above rate for four, five, or six years. Forms of application can be obtained at the Office of the Company, 6½, Austin Friars.

TEA GARDEN IN INDIA.—WANTED, a PARTNER, with £2000. Healthy climate; reasonable distance from Calcutta.—Apply, Rev. F. W. MACDONALD, Staplefond Vicarage, Salisbury.

ST. JOHN'S-WOOD ART-SCHOOLS, 7, ELM-TREE-ROAD, N.W.—Drawing from the Life and the Antique. Painting from the Model and Still-Life. Students specially prepared for Royal Academy Schools; twelve successful at last competition.
Apply to A. A. CALDERON, Esq., Principal.

MALVERN COLLEGE.
The ANNUAL EXAMINATION for SCHOLARSHIPS and ENTRANCE EXHIBITIONS will be held on DEC. 7 and 8.

SMART'S WRITING INSTITUTION, 97B, Quadrant, Regent-street (entrance in swallow-street). Open from Ten till Nine daily. Persons of all ages received privately, and taught at any time suiting their own convenience. Lessons one hour each. No classes. No extras. Improvement guaranteed in eight to twelve easy lessons. Separate room for ladies. Apply to Mr. Smart, as above.

FOR ARMS and CREST send Name and County to T. MORING, Inns of Court Heraldic Offices, 44, High Holborn, W.C. Plain Sketch, 3s. 6d.; Coloured, 7s. 6d. Seals, Dies, and Diplomas. Illustrated Price-Lists post-free.

WHAT IS YOUR CREST and WHAT IS YOUR MOTTO? Send name and county to CULLETON'S Heraldic Office, Plain Sketch, 3s. 6d.; colours, 7s. The arms of man and wife blended. Crest engraved on seals, rings, books and steel dies, 5s. 6d. Gold seal, with crest, 20s. Solid Gold Ring, with seal, Hall-marked, with crest, 42s. Manual of Heraldry, 400 engravings, 3s. 6d.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

VISITING CARDS, by CULLETON.
Fifty best quality, 2s. 6d., post-free, including the Engraving of Copper-plate. Wedding Cards, 50 each. 50 Embossed Envelopes, with Maiden Name, 13s. 6d.—T. CULLETON, Seal Engraver, 25, Cranbourn-street, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

CULLETON'S GUINEA BOX of STATIONERY contains a Ream of the very best Paper and 500 Envelopes, all stamped in the most elegant way with Crest and Motto, Monogram, or Address, and the engraving of steel Die included. Sent to any part for P.O. order.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

SAMPLES GRATIS.
PAPIER MARION.—The Finest Writing Paper. Apply to 24, Soho-square, W., for specimen Sheets and Envelopes. Sent gratis per post. To be had of all Stationers; and wholesale only of the Manufacturers, MARION and CO., London.

FLORILINE. For the Teeth and Breath.
Is the best Liquid Dentifrice in the world; it thoroughly cleanses partially-decayed teeth from all parasites or living animalcules, leaving them pearly white, imparting a delightful fragrance to the breath. The Fragrant Florilline removes instantly all odours arising from a foul stomach or tobacco smoke, being partly composed of honey, soda, and extracts of sweet herbs and plants. It is perfectly harmless, and delicious as sherry. Sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere, at 2s. 6d. per Bottle.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY for the HAIR.
If your hair is turning grey, or white, or falling off, use "The Mexican Hair Renewer," for it will positively restore in every case Grey or White Hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting the growth of the hair on bald spots where the glands are not decayed. "The Mexican Hair Renewer" is sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere, at 3s. 6d. per Bottle.

ROWLANDS'
ODONTO
Whitens the Teeth, Prevents Decay, and gives a pleasing Fragrance to the Breath. It is the purest and most fragrant Dentifrice ever used, and contains no mineral, acid, or gritty substances.

ROWLANDS'
MACASSAR OIL,
known for the last eighty years to be the best and safest preserver and beautifier of the hair; it contains no lead or mineral ingredients, and is especially adapted for children's hair. Sold by all Chemists, &c., in usual four sizes, 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d. (family bottles, equal to four small), and 21s.

NUDA VERITAS.—GREY HAIR restored by this valuable specific to its original shade, after which it grows the natural colour, not grey. Used as a dressing, it causes growth and arrests falling. The most harmless and effectual restorer extant. One trial will convince it has no equal. Price 10s. 6d., of all Chemists and Hairdressers. Testimonials post-free.—R. HOVENDEN and SONS, London.

GOLDEN HAIR.—ROBARE'S AUREOLINE produces the beautiful Golden Colour so much admired. Warranted perfectly harmless. Prices 5s. 6d. and 10s. 6d., of all Perfumers. Wholesale, HOVENDEN and SONS, 5, Great Marlborough-street, W.; and 93 and 95, City-road, E.C. London, Paris, and Meyer, 37, Boulevard de Strasbourg, Paris; 31, Graben, Vienna; 44, Rue des Longs Chariots, Brussels.

TURKISH PASTILS.
"Through all my travels few things astonished me more than seeing the beauties of the harem smoking Narghilés at Stamboul. After smoking a sweet aromatic lozenge or pastil is used by them, which is said to impart an odour of flowers to the breath. I have never seen the breath lozenge but once in Europe, and that was at PIESSE and LUBIN'S shop in Bond-street."—Lady W. Montagu.
In Boxes, 2s.; by post, 2s. 2d.
2, NEW BOND-STREET, LONDON.

PALACE SOAP.
PIESSE and LUBIN are the only makers of this exquisite Soap. Single Cakes, 2s.; or six, in a carton, 2?s. 6d. PIESSE and LUBIN also make a great variety of fine Toilet Soaps, such as Opoponax Soap, Frangipanni Soap; also charming flower scented soaps, as Rose Soap, Violet Soap, Melange Soap, &c. Single Cakes, 2s. 6d.; or six, in a carton, 14s. Suitable for superior use.—2, New Bond-street.

SWEET SACHETS.
PIESSE and LUBIN compose every variety of Sachet Powder the same odours as their many perfumes for the handkerchief. Placed in a drawer, coat, or travelling-bag, they impart a grateful and pleasing perfume without being pungent. Piesse and Lubin also have, on demand, Dried Odorous Flowers, Spices, and Odoriferous Gums. For ounce, 1s. 6d.; per lb., 21s.
2, New Bond-street, W.

BREIDENBACH'S WOOD VIOLET.
Fresh as the flower itself. Price 2s. 6d., 5s., 10s. Bottle. Sold at all Chemists and Perfumers throughout the Universe; or Breidenbach and Co., Distillers of Wood Violet to the Queen, 157a, New Bond-street, W. Trade-Mark, the "Wood Violet."

"A MASS OF CURLS."
COX'S CURLING FLUID
(Protected by Government Stamp)
ensures Curly and Wavy Hair, also assists the growth. Warranted harmless and certain. To be used as a pomade. Beautifully scented. Has been in use by ladies of title for a hundred years. No paper or curling-tongs required. Regularly used two or three times a week will always keep the hair curly. Price 3s. 6d. per Large Bottle, carriage paid, free from observation; or through your local Chemist, who will order it from the Sole Agent for Great Britain, ROBERT P. MARSHALL, Commission Agent, 35, St. Mary Axe, London, E.C.

Digitized by Google

NEW MUSIC.

THE MARTYR OF ANTIOCH. Sacred Musical Drama. Music by ARTHUR SULLIVAN. Performed at the Leeds Musical Festival with enormous success. Price 2s. net; bound in cloth, 10s. 6d. net.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry, E.C.

COME, MARGARITA, COME! The favourite Tenor Song from Arthur Sullivan's Sacred Musical Drama "The Martyr of Antioch." Sung by Mr. Edward Lloyd. Price 2s. net.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry.

OLIVETTE. New Comic Opera, now being performed at the Strand Theatre with enormous success. Adapted by H. B. Farnie; Music by AUDRAN.

Vocal Score	8s. net.
Pianoforte Solo	2s. 6d. ,,
Nearest and Dearest Waltz. D'Albert	2s. ,,
Olivette Waltz. D'Albert	2s. ,,
Olivette Quadrille. D'Albert	2s. ,,
Olivette Polka. D'Albert	2s. ,,
Torpedo Galop. D'Albert	2s. ,,
I Love my Love so well. Duet	2s. ,,
The Convent Slept	2s. ,,
Where balmy garlic scents the air. Bolero	2s. ,,
Valse Song. First Love	2s. ,,
Torpedo Song	2s. ,,
Sob Song. Sung by Miss St. John	2s. ,,
Romance—"Nearest and Dearest"	2s. ,,
Boyton Smith's Fantasia, introducing all the Favourite Airs	2s. ,,
Nava's Gems, Olivette (1 and 2) each 1s. 6d.	2s. ,,
Franz Nava's Farandole	1s. 6d. ,,
Audran's "Nearest and Dearest" (Pianoforte)	2s. ,,

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

CHARLES D'ALBERT'S NOVELTIES.

ADELINA WALTZ. Illustrated with a beautiful Portrait of Madame Patti	2s. 0d. net
PORTIA WALTZ	2s. 0d. net
DRINK, PUPPY, DRINK! POLKA	2s. 0d. net
CAN'T STOP! GALOP	2s. 0d. net
CONGRESS LANCERS	2s. 0d. net
DISTANT SHORE WALTZ	2s. 0d. net
THE FANFARE POLKA	1s. 6d. net

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

Now ready,
VOLUME TWO OF CHAPPELL'S OLD ENGLISH DITTIES. Handsomely bound in cloth and gold. Price 10s. 6d. net.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S THREE-YEARS' SYSTEM of HIRE of PIANOFORTES, HARMONIUMS, and AMERICAN ORGANS, by which the Instrument becomes the property of the Hirer at the end of the third year, provided each quarter's hire shall have been regularly paid in advance. Pianofortes, from 2 gs.; Harmoniums, from £1 5s.; and American Organs, from £2 10s. a Quarter.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S PIANINOS, from 20 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S COTTAGES, from 27 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S GRANDS, from 50 guineas.

CHICKERING PIANOFORTES, from 120 guineas, with American discount.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S ALEXANDRE HARMONIUMS, for Church, Schools, or Drawing-Rooms, from 5 to 150 guineas; or, on the Three-Years' System, from £1 5s. per quarter.

CHAPPELL' and CO.'S IMPROVED AMERICAN ORGANS, combining Pipes with Reeds, Manufactured by Clough and Warren, Detroit, U.S.A. The immense advantages these instruments possess over the Organs hitherto imported have induced Messrs. Chappell and Co. to undertake the sole Agency of this eminent Manufactory. A large variety on view, from 25 to 250 guineas. Price-Lists on application to CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S Favourite ORGAN. Compass, five octaves, ten stops, four sets of reeds, two of two and two thirds octaves and two of two and one third octaves, knee swell, elegant carved Canadian walnut case, price 25 guineas. With twelve stops, sub-bass octave coupler, and two knee pedals, 35 guineas. Illustrated Price-List free by post.
Sole Agents, CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

INSTRUMENTS by ALL MAKERS may be HIRED or PURCHASED on the Three-Years' System.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

A LARGE DISCOUNT TO PURCHASERS FOR CASH.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.
City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

JOSEPH WILLIAMS'S LIST.
ALL MUSIC POST-FREE AT HALF PRICE.

FOLI'S GREATEST SUCCESS.
THE RAFT. Descriptive Fantasia. By PINSUTI. In E and G, free, 24 stamps. Now being sung by Signor Foli with the greatest success at all his concerts. Decidedly the finest baritone (or bass) song extant.

I LOVE MY LOVE. PINSUTI'S most celebrated Song, in A flat and B flat; free, 24 stamps.
This, the most effective Drawing-room Song ever written, is continually sung by all the leading vocalists, both soprano and contralto.

THREE JOLLY BRITONS, or the ENGLISH, IRISH, and SCOTCH.
New National Song.
"Long may our good Queen on her Throne
O'er her subjects keep a watch,
For the three will fight for her as one,
Though English, Irish, and Scotch.
Words and Music, G. WARE. Post-free, 18 stamps.

SHALL I WEAR A WHITE ROSE? New Song. By EMILY FARMER; poetry by Saville Clark. This charming Song is now being sung by Madame Trebelli at her Provincial Concerts with perfect success. Published in E flat and G, for soprano or contralto. Post-free, 24 stamps.

JOHN GILPIN. Cantata. By GEORGE FOX. 2s. 6d. net. Easy and effective. A liberal discount allowed to choral societies for copies.

LES CLOCHES DE CORNEVILLE.
Vocal Score, English Words, 10s. net, and 4s.
Piano Score, complete, 2s. 6d. net.

HENRY FARMER'S PIANOFORTE TUTOR, considerably Enlarged and Fingered by the Author. 1000th Edition. 4s.
"Decidedly the best and most useful instruction book we have seen."—Musical Review.

JOSEPH WILLIAMS,
24, Berners-street, W.; and 128, Cheapside, E.C.

THE BEST NEW WALTZ.
DAS WUNDERSCHON (Most Beautiful) WALTZ, by CARL ROSENGARD. Played with great success at the Prince of Wales's Ball at Abergeldie Castle. "A really pretty and melodious waltz."—Graphic. Post-free, 24.
REID Bros., 159, Oxford-street, London.

LA PREMIÈRE VOLÉE POLKA. By A. T. TOLLER. "This excellent and very original polka is always well received, and will shortly become very popular." Post-free, 18. 6d.
REID Bros., 159, Oxford-street, London.

By the Author of "Sparkling Cascades."
ON PARADE. LANGTON WILLIAMS' Brilliant March Movement. Just published, 2s. net.
W. WILLIAMS and Co., 221, Tottenham-court-road.

NEW MUSIC.

STANDARD PIANOFORTE MUSIC IN THE
CAVENDISH MUSIC-BOOKS.
26. RECOLLECTIONS OF THE OPERA. (26 celebrated airs.)
26. CLASSICAL READINGS FOR THE PIANOFORTE. (17 short and beautiful pieces.)
27. SACRED READINGS FOR THE PIANOFORTE. (20 movements from the works of the great masters.)
29. ALBUM OF 12 GAVOTTES by Handel, Bach, Corelli, Rameau, Gotthard, Martini, &c.
34. ALBUM OF 19 MINUETS.
37. CALLCOTT'S HANDEL ALBUM. Part I. (51 Sacred airs.)
38. CALLCOTT'S HANDEL ALBUM. Part I. (61 Operatic airs)
Price 1s. each Book.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

NEW SONGS IN THE
CAVENDISH MUSIC-BOOKS.
No. 1. SONGS OF THE DAY. Book 1.
No. 31. SONGS OF THE DAY. Book 2.
No. 32. SONGS OF THE DAY. Book 3.
Each Book contains 10 Songs. Contributors—Arthur Sullivan, J. L. Molloy, Louis Diehl, Dolores, Hamilton Aidé, Louisa Gray, F. H. Cowen, Pinsuti. Price 1s. each Book.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

FAVOURITE CANTATAS.
HENRY HOLMES' CHRISTMAS DAY. Words by Keble. 2s. 6d.
ARTHUR SULLIVAN'S PRODIGAL SON. 2s. 6d.
ARTHUR SULLIVAN'S ON SHORE AND SEA. 2s. 6d.
F. H. COWEN'S ROSE MAIDEN. 2s. 6d.
F. H. COWEN'S CORSAIR. 2s. 6d.
F. HOWELL'S LAND OF PROMISE. 2s. 6d.
F. HOWELL'S SONG OF THE MONTHS. 2s. 6d.
KAPPEY'S PER MARE, PER TERRAM. 3s.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

THE PARISH ANTHEM-BOOK.—A collection of Fifty Standard Anthems by the most celebrated composers, suitable for large and small choirs. In Numbers, price One Penny each; or one Volume, paper cover, 3s. 6d.; cloth, gilt edges, 5s.—BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street. Specimen Anthem for one stamp.

THE CHORAL UNION.—A collection of FORTY POPULAR GLEES and PART-SONGS, in four handy books, each containing the music of the forty pieces for one voice—viz., Soprano, Contralto, Tenor, or Bass. Price Sixpence; or in Score, with pianoforte accompaniment, price 3s. 6d.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

2 vols., 2s. 6d. each, paper covers; 4s., cloth, gilt edges,
SONGS FROM THE OPERAS. A Collection of celebrated Songs, in medium keys, for the use of Amateurs.
Vol. I.—Mezzo-Soprano and Contralto.
Vol. II.—Tenor and Baritone.
Each Book contains 50 Songs, with English and Italian Words.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

LILLIE'S SECOND MUSIC-BOOK. containing Instructions and Exercises for playing the Pianoforte, for the use of more advanced pupils, and forming a sequel to "Lillie's First Music-Book," with Six full-page Illustrations. Price 2s. 6d.—BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

POPULAR NUMBERS OF
BOOSEYS' MUSICAL CABINET.
Price 1s. each.
216. ROBERT FRANZ ALBUM. 38 Songs.
138. GOUNOD'S 10 SONGS, including "The Serenade," and "Où voulez-vous aller?"
2. LONGFELLOW AND BALFE'S 10 CELEBRATED SONGS.
13. HATTON'S 12 SONGS. New Edition.
145. DOLORES' 12 SONGS.
163. A. S. GATTY'S 12 BALLADS.
169. VIRGINIA GABRIEL'S 10 SONGS.
168. ARTHUR SULLIVAN'S 10 SONGS.
83. TWELVE VOCAL DUETS FOR LADIES' VOICES.
173. LILLIE'S SONG BOOK. 50 Songs.
212. BOOSEYS' MARCH ALBUM. 35 Marches.
203, 210, 213. RUBINSTEIN'S 3 ALBUMS. 25 Pieces.
214. ROBERT SCHUMANN'S ALBUMBLATTER.
204. BRAHMS' PIANOFORTE ALBUM
190. FIELD'S NOCTURNE ALBUM. 10 Nocturnes.
114. BEETHOVEN'S WALTZ ALBUM. 45 Waltzes.
200. LAMOTHE'S WALTZ ALBUM. 6 Waltzes.
201. WALDTEUFEL'S WALTZ ALBUM. 8 Waltzes.
Boosey's Musical Cabinet also contains Beethoven's, Mozart's, Schubert's, and Dussek's Sonatas; Chopin's Waltzes, Mazurkas, and Nocturnes (each complete for 1s.); Mendelssohn's, Schumann's, Heller's, Weber's, and Hummel's works. The cheapest and best editions published. A full Catalogue on application.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

BOOSEYS' SHILLING ORATORIOS, MASSES, and CANTATAS.

HYMN OF PRAISE.	MOUNT OF OLIVES.
HAYDN'S IMPERIAL MASS.	WALPURGIS NIGHT.
GOUNOD'S ST. CECILE.	BEETHOVEN'S MASS IN C.
MOZART'S TWELFTH MASS.	ACIS AND GALATEA.
ROSSINI'S STABAT MATER.	MOZART'S REQUIEM.
JUDAS MACCABÆUS.	DETTINGEN TE DEUM.
THE MESSIAH.	ISRAEL IN EGYPT.
BACH'S PASSION (Matt.) 1s. 6d.	THE CREATION.

Also,
Boosey's Handy Editions of "The Messiah" and "The Creation." Price 1s. each.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

BOOSEYS' SHILLING INSTRUCTORS.

Organ	Best.	Theory	Dr. Callcott.
Harmonium	Elliott.	Violin	Henning.
Pianoforte	Mount.	Violoncello	Howell.
Singing (Men)	Hatton.	Flute	Pratten.
Singing (Ladies)	Hatton.	Cornet	Jones.
Ballad Singing	Balfe.	Concertina	Case.
Choral Singing	Dr. Spark.	Clarionet	Kappey.

BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

BOOSEY'S HALF-GUINEA BEETHOVEN. The 32 Sonatas, from engraved plates (nearly full music size), bound in cloth, gilt edges, 10s. 6d. Edited by W. Dorrell. The handsomest edition published.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

THE MUSICAL ÆSOP. By TALBOT ERLE. Fables in Prose and Verse, Song and Chorus, with connecting Story, forming a Drawing-room Entertainment for Children. Price 1s.—WEEKES and Co., Hanover-street, W.

BOOSEY and CO.'S PIANOFORTES.—A most extensive Stock, Upright and Grand, by all the great Makers, English and Foreign, including Pianettes, at 20 gs.; Over-Strung Pianinos, at 40 gs.; and Short Iron Grands, at 60 gs., for Hire or for Purchase, either upon the Three-Years' System or for Cash with liberal Discount.—295, Regent-street.

PRATTEN'S PERFECTED FLUTES, Cylinder and Cone, commencing at 4 gs. The Siccama Flute and the Boehm Old and New System of Fingering. Particulars of all these Instruments upon application to the Manufacturers, BOOSEY and CO., 295, Regent-street, W.

SECONDHAND PIANO SALE.—PIANOS, £15; Broadwood Pianos, £25; Erard Pianos, £25; Collard Pianos, £28; Harmoniums, £5; American Organs, £10.
THOMAS OETZMANN and Co., 27, Baker-street, Portman-sq.

£20 SCHOOL-ROOM PIANO (Co-operative price for cash). Seven octaves—strong, sound, and substantial. Adapted for hard practice.
THOMAS OETZMANN and CO., 27, Baker-street.

PIANOFORTE SALE.—Purchasers who can pay cash will do well to take advantage of this exceptional opportunity of obtaining thoroughly good instruments at extraordinary low prices.

BROADWOOD PIANOS, 24 guineas. Full compass Pianofortes, in handsome cases, good condition, fine tone, at above moderate price, for cash only.
At OETZMANN'S, 27, Baker-street.

COLLARD PIANOS, 28 guineas. Full-compass COTTAGE PIANOFORTES, fine full, rich tone, perfect condition. May be seen at OETZMANN'S, 27, Baker-street (exactly opposite Madame Tussaud's).

ERARD PIANOS, 38 guineas, fullest compass of Seven Octaves. Trichord COTTAGE PIANOFORTES, in handsome ebonised and gilt cases, fine full, powerful tone. Cash only. At OETZMANN'S, 27, Baker-street.

PIANOFORTE SALE.—The PIANOFORTE HIRE and THREE-YEARS' SYSTEM BUSINESS carried on as usual during the Sale.—THOMAS OETZMANN and CO., 27, Baker-st., opposite Madame Tussaud's.

D'ALMAINES' PIANOS HALF PRICE. In consequence of a change of partnership, the whole of this splendid stock, perfected with all the modern improvements of the day by this long-standing firm, of 100 years' reputation, and in order to effect a speedy sale. The easiest terms arranged, with seven years' warranty. Trichord Cottages from hire, or taken in exchange, £10 to £12.

Class 0, £14	Class 2, £20	Class 4, £30	Class 6, £35
Class 1, £17	Class 3, £23	Class 5, £27	Class 7, £40

American Organs from £5.—91, Finsbury Pavement, Moorgate Station, E.C.

NEW MUSIC.

THE MUSICAL TIMES for NOVEMBER contains:—Home Music-Worship—The Father of the Symphony—The Great Composers: Spohr—Marchetti's Opera, "Don Giovanni d'Austria"—Leeds Musical Festival—Jacques Offenbach—Crystal Palace Concerts, &c.—Reviews, Foreign and Country News, &c. Price 3d.; post-free, 4d. Annual subscription, 4s., including postage.

THE MUSICAL TIMES for NOVEMBER contains:—"Thus Speakest the Lord of Hosts." Anthem for Christmas, by Dr. STAINER. Price, separately, 1½d.

NOVELLO, EWER, and CO.'S MUSIC PRIMERS.

		s.	d.
1. The Pianoforte	F. Pauer	2	0
2. The Rudiments of Music	W. H. Cummings	1	0
3. The Organ	Dr. Stainer	2	0
4. The Harmonium	King Hall	2	0
5. Singing	A. Randegger	4	0
6. Speech in Song	A. J. Ellis, F.R.S.	2	0
7. Musical Forms	F. Pauer	2	0
8. Harmony	Dr. Stainer	2	0
9. Counterpoint	Dr. Bridge	2	0
10. Fugue	James Higgs	2	0
11. Scientific Basis of Music	Dr. Stone	1	0
13. Church Choir Training	Rev. J. Troutbeck	1	0
14. Plain-Song	Rev. T. Helmore	2	0
15. Instrumentation	E. Prout	2	0
16. The Elements of the Beautiful in Music	F. Pauer	1	0
17. The Violin	Berthold Tours	2	0
18. Tonic Sol-fa	J. Curwen	1	0
19. Lancashire Sol-fa	James Greenwood	1	0
20. Composition	Dr. Stainer	2	0
21. Musical Terms	Stainer and Barrett	1	0

(To be continued.)
London: NOVELLO, EWER, and Co.

Just published,
MUSICAL TERMS. By STAINER and BARRETT. No. 21 of Novello's Music Primers. Price 1s.
COMPOSITION. By Dr. STAINER. No. 20 of Novello's Music Primers. Price 2s.

THE ONLY COMPLETE EDITIONS.
One Volume, 518 pp., folio, handsomely bound, cloth, gilt edges, price 21s.; ditto, 8vo, paper, 7s. 6d.; cloth gilt, 10s. 6d.
MENDELSSOHN'S ORIGINAL COMPOSITIONS FOR THE PIANOFORTE, including the "Lieder Ohne Worte," an entirely new and carefully revised edition.—London: NOVELLO, EWER, and Co.

LIEDER OHNE WORTE, folio, cloth, gilt edges, 12s. Octavo, paper cover, 4s.; cloth, gilt edges, 6s. Cheap editions, folio, paper cover, 2s.; cloth, gilt edges, 3s. Octavo, paper cover, 2s. 6d.; cloth, gilt edges, 4s. 6d.
The only complete editions, containing Books 7 and 8.

Just published.
DIVIDED. Duet for Soprano and Tenor.
The Words written by Jean Ingelow; the Music composed by The Viscountess FOLKESTONE. Price 4s.

One Shilling each.
ELLIOTT'S VOLUNTARIES for the HARMONIUM. In six sets, price One Shilling each; or in two volumes, cloth gilt, Four Shillings each. List of contents may be had on application.

Just published, price One Shilling each.
NOVELLO'S PIANOFORTE ALBUMS. Nos. 1 and 2, each containing Twenty Compositions by BACH, edited by Berthold Tours. List of contents may be had on application.—London: NOVELLO, EWER, and Co., 1, Berners-street, W.; and 80 and 81, Queen-street, E.C.

DEAR ENGLAND.—The Popular Song, always encored when sung by Signor Foli. Written by Charles Mackay; the Music composed by LOUIS DIEHL. 3s., post-free at half price. As a part-song, post-free 2 stamps.
London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

CLASS COPIES.—VOCAL DUETS for LADIES' VOICES. Six Duets by Pinsuti, Stephen Glover, Franz Abt, and R. Schumann. 1s. net.
London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street. Order everywhere.

EASY MUSIC FOR THE PIANOFORTE.
By WILLIAM SMALLWOOD.
HOME TREASURES, Nos. 1 to 25, easy, 2s. 6d. each.
ECHOES OF HOME, Nos. 1 to 25, easy, 2s. 6d. each.
EARLY FLOWRETS, Nos. 1 to 25, very easy, 1s. each.
LITTLE FOOTPRINTS, Nos. 1 to 25, very easy, 1s. each.
LITTLE BUDS, Nos. 1 to 25, very easy, 1s. each.
THE FAREWELL MARCH, easy, 3s.
All post-free at half-price.
London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

HAND-IN-HAND SCHOTTISCHE, for the Pianoforte. By J. PRIDHAM. 2s., post-free for 18 stamps. London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

NEW HISTORY OF MUSIC. By W. S. ROCKSTRO. "We can award high praise to Mr. Rockstro's treatise."—Musical Times. Post-free for 24 stamps.
London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

MUSIC Promptly COLLECTED and sent post-free at half price to any part of the Kingdom. Great facilities in this branch, and in constant communication with all the leading publishers.—London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.
HAMILTON'S DICTIONARY OF 3500 MUSICAL TERMS. A New Edition. By JOHN BISHOP. 1s.; in cloth, 1s. 6d.
A NEW DICTIONARY OF MUSICIANS, PAST AND PRESENT. In paper cover, 1s.; in cloth, 1s. 6d.
London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street.

GOOD-BYE. COTSFORD DICK'S New Song. The Poetry by G. J. Whyte-Melville. One of the most charming songs in words and music produced for some time. Post-free, 2s.—DUFF and STEWART, 2, Hanover-street, W.

THE KING'S CHAMPION. New Song, for Baritone or Bass. Composed by MICHAEL WATSON. Sung by Mr. Thurley Beale. Editions in D and E flat. Post-free, 2s.—DUFF and STEWART, 2, Hanover-street, W.

Just published, price 1s.; post-free, 14 stamps,
WALDTEUFEL'S VALSE ALBUM for CHRISTMAS, 1880-1, containing Emile Waldteufel's Five best Waltzes; 24 pages, full music size, with Elegant Illuminated Cover.—FRANCIS and DAY, 351, Oxford-street, W.

CHARLES HALLE'S PRACTICAL PIANOFORTE SCHOOL.
Section I.—No. 1, Pianoforte Tutor. Also 67 Numbers of CHARLES HALLE'S MUSICAL LIBRARY are now ready.
Catalogues and all particulars may be had from FORSYTH BROTHERS, London, 272A, Regent-circus, Oxford-street; Manchester, Cross-street and South King-street; and all Musicsellers.

DOMINION ORGAN COMPANY,
Bowmanville, Ontario, Canada.
The best and cheapest 25 Guinea Organ in the Trade.
"PRINCESS LOUISE,"
Ten Stops, including Octave Coupler.
Sole Agents for the United Kingdom,
FORSYTH BROTHERS,
London: 272A, Regent-circus, Oxford-street.
Manchester: Cross-street and South King-street.
Complete Catalogues post-free.

ERARDS' PIANOS.—Messrs. ERARD, of 18, Great Marlborough-street, London, and 13, Rue de Mail, Paris, Makers to her Majesty and the Prince and Princess of Wales, CAUTION the Public that Pianofortes are being sold bearing the name of "Erard" which are not of their manufacture. For information as to authenticity apply at 18, Great Marlborough-st., where new Pianos can be obtained from 50 guineas.

ERARDS' PIANOS.—COTTAGES, from 50 guineas.
OBLIQUES, from 85 guineas.
GRANDS, from 125 guineas.

PIANOFORTES for HIRE or for SALE, from 25 guineas upwards.—JOHN BROADWOOD and SONS, 33, Great Pulteney-street, Golden-square, W. Manufactory, 45, Horseferry-road, Westminster, W.

P. J. SMITH AND SONS'
IRON-STRUTTED PIANOS.
"The best and most substantial instrument produced."
3 and 4, PRINCES-STREET, OXFORD-STREET, W.

MUSICAL BOX DEPÔTS, 22, Ludgate-hill, & 56, Cheapside, London.—Nicole's celebrated Musical Boxes, playing best secular and sacred music. Prices £4 to £200. Snuff-boxes from 18s. to 60s. Largest stock in London. Catalogue gratis and post-free. Apply to WALES & M'CULLOCH, as above.

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS' Newly-Patented SOSTENENTE GRAND and UPRIGHT PIANOS have gained the two First Prizes and only Special Mention above all competitors at the Sydney International Exhibition, 1879-80. Lists free.—18, Wigmore-street, London, W.

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.
PARIS, 1878.

THE HIGHEST HONOURS—
THE CROSS OF THE LEGION OF HONOUR
Also the GOLD MEDAL, &c.,
have been accorded to

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
18, WIGMORE-STREET, LONDON, W.,
For the superiority of their Pianos
exhibited at the
PARIS INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION of 1878.

"There is but one class of Gold Medals for the Exhibition, and the DECORATION OF THE CROSS OF THE LEGION OF HONOUR
CONSTITUTES A SUPERIOR RECOMPENSE."
Extract from the Special Report signed by M. A. PETIT, Official Reporter.
The value of this Award is still further enhanced by the fact that the Decoration was CONFERRED ON NO OTHER British Pianoforte Manufacturer.

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.
The principal of the previous honours gained by the BRINSMEAD PIANOS are:—
THE DIPLOMA OF HONOUR and GOLD MEDAL, South Africa, 1877.
THE GRAND MEDAL OF HONOUR and DIPLOMA OF MERIT, Philadelphia, 1876.
THE DIPLOMA OF HONOUR, Paris, 1874, and the HONORARY MEMBERSHIP OF THE NATIONAL ACADEMY OF FRANCE.
THE GOLD MEDAL, Paris, 1870.
THE DIPLOMA OF EXTRAORDINARY MERIT, Netherlands International Exhibition, 1869.
THE MEDAL OF HONOUR, Paris, 1867.
THE PRIZE MEDAL, London, 1862, &c.

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
SOSTENENTE PIANOS,
for Extreme Climates,
With the Perfect Check Repeater Action,
Patented 1862, 1868, 1871, 1875, and 1879,
throughout Europe and America.

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.
"Paris, Nov. 4, 1878.
"I have attentively examined the beautiful pianos of Messrs. John Brinsmead and Sons that are exhibited at the Paris International Exhibition of 1878. I consider them to be exceptional in the ease with which gradations of sound can be produced, from the softest to the most powerful tones. These excellent pianos merit the approbation of all artists, as the tone is full as well as sustained, and the touch is of perfect evenness throughout its entire range, answering to every requirement of the pianist.
"CH. GOUNOD."

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.
"Paris, Sept. 8, 1878.
"We, the undersigned, certify that, after having seen and most conscientiously examined the English Pianos at the Universal Exhibition of 1878, we find that the palm belongs to the Grand Pianos of the house of Brinsmead.
"NICOLAS RUBINSTEIN,
"D. MAGNUS,
"Chevalier ANTOINE DE KONTSKI, Court Pianist to the Emperor of Germany."

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.
"We, the undersigned, certify that, after having seen and most conscientiously examined the English Pianos at the Universal Exhibition of 1878, we find that the palm belongs to the Grand Pianos of the house of Brinsmead.
"NICOLAS RUBINSTEIN,
"D. MAGNUS,
"Chevalier ANTOINE DE KONTSKI, Court Pianist to the Emperor of Germany."

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.
"Illustrated London News."
"The French papers have been unanimous in their expressions of admiration of these splendid instruments. The grands especially have enchanted the Parisian professors and amateurs of music by their noble sonority their enormous power, and the sympathetically voice-like quality of tone. The touch is so beautifully light, elastic, and certain, that many pianists of every nation, from the Abbe Liszt downwards, who have tried these instruments, have highly complimented the enterprising manufacturers on their success."

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.
"Daily Chronicle."
"In tone the instrument is exceedingly rich and sweet, and in touch the very perfection of lightness. Messrs. Brinsmead may certainly be congratulated upon their success."

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.
"Morning Advertiser."
"The Legion of Honour, in addition to the other distinctions awarded to Messrs. John Brinsmead and Sons at the Paris Exhibition of 1878, the founder of the firm has been created Chevalier of the Legion of Honour."

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PATENT SOSTENENTE PIANOS.
"Daily News."
"A new Pianoforte, recently manufactured by Messrs. John Brinsmead and Sons, claims notice, not only on account of its beauty and richness of tone, but specially for some ingenious mechanical novelties, the most important being the addition of a third pedal, by means of which the sound of any note or notes may be almost indefinitely prolonged at the will of the player. Thus bass notes may be sustained after being struck by the left hand, which may then be taken away, and, with the right hand, may execute the most brilliant staccato passages, thus giving almost the effect of four hands. The patent 'check-repeater-action,' a speciality of Messrs. Brinsmead, enables the performer to command with ease the most rapid reiteration of the same note; the facility of the key-movement in general being such that glissando passages can be executed with such perfect ease as to render them practicable with the lightest touch. The volume of tone is intensified by a peculiar construction of the sounding-board; another improvement being the system of bridging, by which the vibrations are increased and rendered sympathetic. The Pianoforte is capable of all degrees of delicacy and power, its massive structure rendering it less liable to get out of tune than usual; and the instrument is altogether calculated to extend the reputation of its makers."

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS'
PIANOS
may be obtained of all the principal Musicsellers.
Prices from 35 guineas to 350 guineas.
18-20, WIGMORE-STREET, LONDON, W.,
and
THE "BRINSMEAD WORKS,"
GRAFTON-ROAD, KENTISH TOWN, N.W.

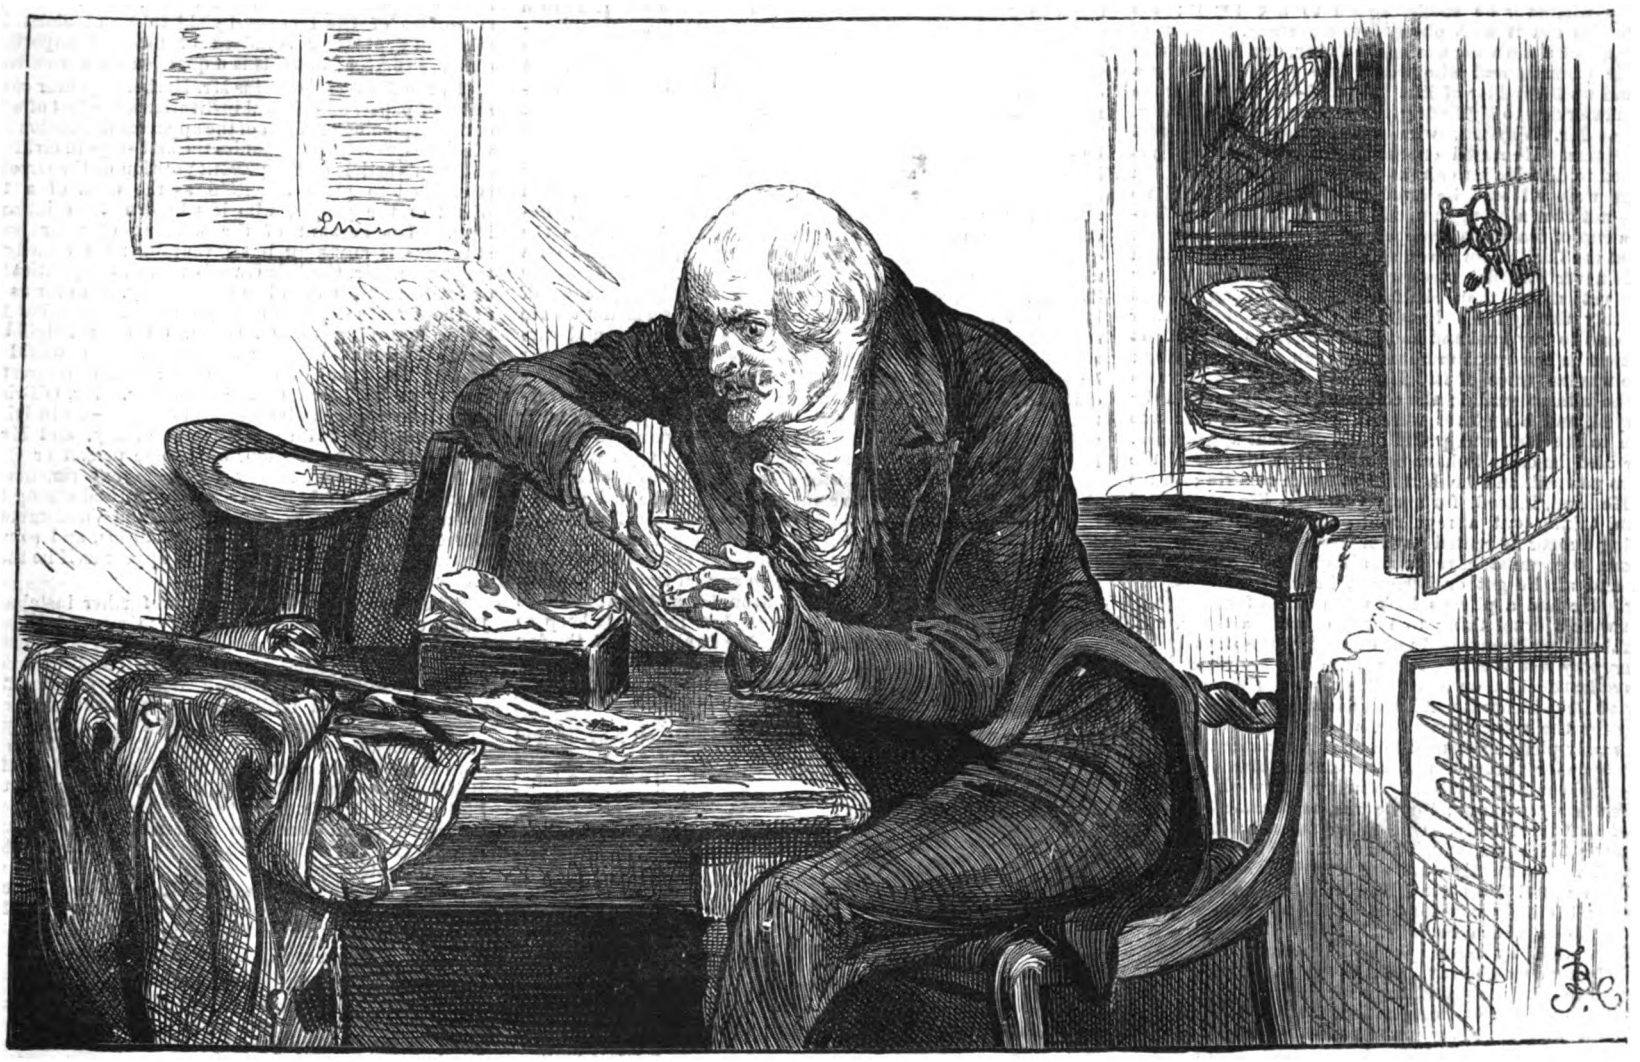
LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by GEORGE C. LEIGHTON, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1880.

Digitized by Google

PEOPLE I HAVE MET.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "THAT ARTFUL VICAR."

No. XIV.—THE SPENDTHRIFT.



No man under the rank of a sovereign prince was ever born into the great world of England with more advantages than Mr. Richard Grandison. He was heir to one of the greatest of our historic dukedoms, and to large estates in each of the three kingdoms. He was the hope of a powerful connection which commanded an important section of steady voters in the House of Lords, and the family numbered no less than six collateral peerages. For more than half a century they had divided the chief offices of State among themselves; and they had intermarried with families so illustrious that they were entitled to quarter the Royal arms upon their escutcheon. Moreover, if anything had been wanting to their good fortune, they belonged in an especial manner to the Court party, and had ranked among the personal friends of their sovereign for several generations.

Some fairy in a good humour seemed to have been godmother to Mr. Grandison. He was, physically, as fine a specimen of the Anglo-Norman race as ever stepped. He had a frank and handsome face, with large, bold eyes, and a winning smile. He was six feet high, with the proportions of an athlete, and could have held his own at any game of strength or skill. His mind, too, was of the same manly and vigorous character as his body. He had been educated in the best manner of the young noblemen of his time. He could write Latin verses as well as another, and quote Horace readily enough to bring down cheers from all his contemporaries at Eton in the House of Commons. He could talk French enough to read the "menu" of a dinner without stumbling over it, and he knew enough of Italian to understand the libretto of an opera. What more could he have desired? He had, of course, that hereditary talent for politics and governing which we have long agreed to consider as a part of the birthright of high descent, and he made so prominent a figure in Parliament that the certainty of his becoming a Cabinet Minister was only a question of time and circumstance. Any Government would have been glad to have him, only the policy and traditions of his family put it out of his power to join any Government. He must either make his own Government, or a Cabinet must be specially formed for him before he could well take a seat in it.

He had but one misfortune. It was that he had been born ruined, and that neither he himself nor any of his connections had the smallest idea of this great fact. The rent-roll of the Grandison estates might be roughly estimated at a hundred thousand a year, but the claims and charges on them were enormous. The Dukes of Midland had always been magnificent characters, and had taken no account of the cost when they wanted anything. Some of their grand parties in the shooting season had been famous in memoirs and diaries for at least a century. One Duke had paid a fortune to a songstress who sang before Louis XVIII., when he came over from Hartwell to hear her in his exile. Another had welcomed his own monarch, who visited him in state, with extraordinary splendour. Their fine house in the country was one of the marvels of England. Guide books and county chroniclers were always busy with it, and whole volumes had been written

"Whenever handsome Charley was seen on the shady side of Piccadilly or Pall-mall, he had a Lord arm-in-arm with him; and there was a bailiff round the corner."

"His only pleasure seemed to be mooning about in a disconsolate manner through the bare rooms of his deserted palace, especially during the week when he commanded the yeomanry. One thing seemed dear to him also; it was a black box which he kept at the depôt carefully locked."

Digitized by Google

to describe the stateliness of its architecture and the beauty of its gardens. It contained one of the most notable collections of art in Europe—books of rare editions, unique manuscripts, pictures of inestimable value, prints of great price, medals, coins, arms, vases, tapestry, were all there—and the mere catalogue of the Grandison treasures filled costly folios.

The trouble was that the Dukes of Midland had no money, and that they spent a great deal. When their eldest sons came of age they resettled their estates, raised the sums that were immediately required from them, and by-and-by all, and more than all, was replaced by a fortunate marriage. They had a knack of making fortunate marriages, and the Mr. Grandison now in question took to himself an heiress, as he thought, at the usual time, which was soon after his majority, and the little transaction with his family solicitors about the Midland entail already mentioned. He was then Marquis of Brentford, his grandfather having deceased shortly before; and in due season he became Duke of Midlands, when his father died also.

Meantime he had never wanted money. Through all the expense and waste of contested elections no sum, however large, had ever cost him more than a signature; and he had fought Parliamentary contests without number. Not for himself; his own seat and some eleven others were quite secured to the Grandison interest; but now and then there was a brisk political fight on the outskirts of his estates, and then he threw his heart and soul into it. He was always a fine, high-spirited nobleman, who would have his own way, if he could get it, and paid liberally for it. Why should he have done otherwise? He had not the smallest notion of the value of money. For all the experience he had ever had, it might have been a thing that came from lawyers when they were ordered to bring it, and was given in exchange for stripe of sheepskin and blotches of sealing-wax. The lawyers were quite satisfied with the case—and so was he.

The difficulty his Grace sometimes experienced about contested elections, especially in his own neighbourhood, first set him thinking, and he thought to such purpose that he conceived of the bold idea of buying up the county in which he resided. Accordingly he set to work in his own grand way, and it was soon known to all the farmers within twenty miles round his principal estate that the Duke would purchase all the land that came into the market. Of course there was often a keen competition, and the local quidnuncs said that his Grace was borrowing money at sixty per cent to make investments which paid him two and a half. However, they surmised that dukes could afford anything; and this axiom would have been perfectly true had his Grace's heir followed the immemorial example of his illustrious race. Lord Brentford had, indeed, joined in another resettlement of the Midland estates, as he was bound in honour to do, and the usual sum had been raised upon them to meet the requirements of the tenant in possession; but when the time came for his Lordship to marry an heiress who had been kept waiting for him, in order to rehabilitate the family fortunes, it turned out that the noble Marquis had unluckily espoused his scout's daughter at Oxford.

The Duke of Midlands felt naturally much aggrieved at this catastrophe, but it did not alter either his views of life or his scale of expenditure, and he was never more astonished in his life than when his solicitor assured him that the freehold of every rood of land he possessed in the world was very far from equal to the extent of his liabilities. There was also a bill of sale on the furniture and art-collections at his ancestral palace rather over the full value of it. The lease of his town house had been sold to a club, and they were about to enter on possession of it. The Duchess's portion had already been twenty years in Chancery. His Grace at first heard the lawyer speak these dreary words as though they in no sense could possibly concern him; and the whole affair remained, he said, as great a mystery to him as it was before, though a strange look of fear and horror came suddenly into his countenance.

A Duke of Midland could not be bankrupt like a common person. Everybody thought there must be some mistake, which would soon right itself. Indeed, his Grace felt no ill effects from his position. His friends and connections lent him money whenever he condescended to ask for it; his tradesmen also did it with obsequious eagerness, gliding in something about a son who was in the Army, or a brother who was in the Church, and who would like to be helped by a potent hand up the ladder of life. By-and-by, too, the Duke granted an interview to Mr. Sadrig, the eminent bill discounter, and also to Mr. Whyfuss, who was in the same cheerful line of business. He raised enormous sums in this way, yet they seemed to dissolve into air as he touched them. When his houses were all sold he lived at an hotel, and had no expenses—not even a brougham. He breakfasted in the coffee-room off a cup of tea and a crumpet, which cost half a crown; he dined at the Carlton for seven shillings. He never touched a card; he never owned a racehorse; he neither hunted nor yachted; yet more than half a million sterling glided imperceptibly through his hands in this way long after he had ceased to buy land and had bid farewell to politics. It was said that he had spent more money than any man living; but there was no trace of it. His dress in his latter years came to be almost sordid; the collar of his shirt would be often frayed, and his gloves were in holes; though he was handsome to the last, and proud of his personal appearance. Before he died he came to have nothing: even his star of the Garter was pawned, and he had not so much as a ring on his finger. He lived, indeed, for many years the life of a small tradesman, taking out a regular license to deal in game, and making a moor he rented pay for itself and leave a profit. His income, too, must have been always large from other sources; and all he got or borrowed he kept, never paying anything. He had a piteous look when asked for money, as though it were a cruel thing to speak of such a thing, and, as he could neither be arrested nor coerced in the days before the Bankruptcy Act affecting Peers, even Mr. Sadrig and Mr. Whyfuss at last decided on leaving him alone. He came to be the spirit of Debt incarnate. All London wondered at him, and felt a pity for the ruined magnate, a pity which was akin to awe. His only pleasure seemed to be mooning about in a disconsolate manner through the bare rooms of his deserted palace in the country, especially during the week when he commanded his yeomanry; for he was, as became his rank, Colonel of that loyal body. One thing seemed dear to him also: it was a black box, which he kept at the dépôt carefully locked, and he constantly wore the key of it attached to a strong chain round his neck. He died at an inn, very poor and forlorn; his body was stopped on its way to the grave, and the tomb in which he slept his last sleep was afterwards desecrated by sacrilegious hands, the very sword at his side being carried away. But the present Duke was too well advised to institute proceedings which would have placed him possibly under cross-examination, for in the black box, and in other hiding-places in the rooms his father haunted when alive, he found precisely six hundred thousand pounds sterling in bank-notes. Every shilling which the dead man had borrowed for years he had hoarded up untouched. The day that the lawyer had told him of his ruin, and when the strange look of horror had come into his face, had made him a monomaniac; ever since he had cherished a morbid dread of poverty.

Another spendthrift of a very different order was a man who had been a Colonel in the Guards, and was known about town as "handsome Charley." He never had possessed a guinea of his own at any period of his life, yet he had always lived on equal terms with the richest men in the kingdom, sometimes in the Bench and sometimes out of it, the Bench, or King's Bench as it should have been properly called, being a place of incarceration for insolvent debtors till imprisonment for debt by summary process was abolished. Handsome Charley was known and liked as much as it was in their nature to like anything, by all the best fellows of his day. He was welcome as healthy weather at castles and parks, whose owners might have enriched him by a word; yet none of them ever thought of doing him any serious good. They dined him, and mounted him, and betted with him, and got amusement out of his blithe, dashing ways, and that was all. Whenever handsome Charley was seen on the shady side of Piccadilly or Pall-mall, he had a Lord arm-in-arm with him, a high-stepping horse or perhaps a pair following him; and there was a bailiff round the corner waiting till he was at leisure to be served with a writ. Even the Sheriffs' officers liked him, and would not break in rudely on his conversation with a nob; besides, Charley never ran away, and they always knew where to have him. There were high times, too, in Coper's spunging-house when handsome Charley was there. Miss Judith and Miss Rachael Coper, both ladies of the showiest sort, would have him to dine with them, and Solomon Sloper himself would drive them in his four-wheeler to have tea and watercresses at Jack Straw's Castle. Charles might have done worse than marry Miss Rachael, but he was not that kind of man. He had sold himself one morning without the smallest concern to a cousin of his who had only a thousand pounds, because he wanted it to take up an I.O.U. that bothered him. It was wonderful to think how they lived afterwards; but they did live, having a bijou house in a pretty street leading out of Park-lane, and two or three carriages, with all the best things from the best tradesmen. On an occasion when handsome Charley was before the Court of Bankruptcy he had so fine an antique ring upon one of his fingers that Mr. Commissioner Wigsby raised his eyebrows in a fit of austere morality; but Charley had his eye on him, and was possessed of a winning knack of doing little things gracefully. So he drew off the jewel and laid it down before him, as though he gave it up there and then to his creditors, whereat Mr. Commissioner smiled grimly; and the trustee in bankruptcy courteously requested Charley to retain it for the present. There was also applause in court. Indeed, handsome Charley was not a rogue. To the last he was more of a pigeon than a hawk. None of his tradesmen lost much by him, if they lost at all, for Charley had such crowds of friends, he was so elegant and so much envied, aped, and eyed by the guardsmen and stockbrokers who make up a great deal of the golden youth of London, that a West-End shopkeeper would not have been far out in his calculation if he had paid handsome Charley to call upon him on any afternoon towards three o'clock during the height of the season. His fiat was supreme on all points of dress or personal ornament. His taste in equipages, dinners, breakfasts, garden-parties, picnics, balls, and private theatricals was perfect. He could confer celebrity on an artist; he could make almost any poor man rich but himself.

As for expensive tastes, as far as he himself was concerned, however, he had none save an unconquerable love for horses and gigs, of which he must have possessed an astonishing variety during his lifetime. He never could resist buying a horse or a carriage, even half an hour after he had just bought one or more, so that horse or carriage was worth buying. Nor would he have done so badly could he have made a reasonable trade of the business, for no better judge of horseflesh was to be found at Hyde Park-corner when Messrs. Tattersall receive the British aristocracy and its belongings on their convenient premises. But Charley never had any ready money, so that he was obliged to pay in bills and notes of hand, which had to be discounted under such hard conditions that all possible gilt which might have stuck to his gingerbread was rubbed off. He would have a score of horses and a dozen phaetons, curricles, tilburys, stanhopes, broughams, and drags about at different livery stables while he was in durance at Cursitor-street, and when he came out all the horses had eaten their heads off, and all the carriages had to go to the hammer for what they would fetch. Then he began again, living at Long's or Limmer's Hotel till he could find a good house; or perhaps he was at Long's and his wife at the Star and Garter, Richmond. He had running accounts at all the best inns in town and country, and none of the landlords were sorry to see him again, because of the company he kept. He himself, too, was the quietest of guests. A pale, soft-spoken man, who dined on a rice-pudding and a lettuce, drinking no wine. He might have lived for sixpence a day if he could have only kept clear of hoofs and wheels. As it was, he spent, or seemed to have spent, an amazing sum of money, for he had horses and carriages to the last, and dropped them about in pawn wherever he went, whether paid for or not. Even after his decease they clung to his memory; and on the day of his funeral advertisements might have been seen in the morning papers giving notice that unless handsome Charley took away an equipage he had left at this or that place it would be sold to pay expenses.

I have met with yet another spendthrift, who got through thousands as other men give out pence. But he had method in his prodigality, and his profuseness brought him fine profits. He was a Government contractor, and hand in hand with influential people. He chartered steamers to take his friends on pleasure trips. He rode about in special trains. He lent houses, moors, yachts, and money uncounted and in abundance to the back-stairs ushers of his time. But he had to keep so many useful fellows company in tippling at all hours in the day that he ended by fuddling his wits with champagne, and so got lost in the law courts. He died poor.

A grand bazaar is to be held in Chesterfield on Nov. 16 and the next two days towards clearing off a debt of £1000 incurred in building the Stephenson Memorial Hall. There is a large and influential array of patronesses; and the Marquis of Hartington, who laid the foundation-stone of the building in 1877, has been requested to open the bazaar. On Nov. 19 there will be, for the same object, a ball, which bids fair to be a brilliant gathering. The Duke of Sutherland and others have promised contributions to the fund.

A special messenger arrived at the Mansion House last week with a handsome monster bouquet, sent by the President and members of the Municipal Council of Paris as a present to the Lord Mayor. The bouquet measured 8 ft. 6 in. in circumference, and represented the arms of the City of Paris in flowers of the proper heraldic colours, with the motto, "Fluctuat nec mergitur," formed of damask rosebuds. Two broad tricolour ribbons with heavy gold fringe were suspended from the bouquet, and, in letters of gold, they bear the inscription, "Au Lord Maire, 26th Oct., 1880."

THE MAGAZINES.

"Washington-square" is concluded in the Cornhill in the manner logically involved in the conception of the story—that is, the heroine's life is blighted, and the reader parts from the other personages with a feeling of intense dissatisfaction at the mischief they have severally occasioned by their whims or their worldliness. At the same time, their development is severely consistent, the incidents are as natural as the dialogue is brilliant, and the art displayed in keeping up so moving a tale with so few situations and only four characters is nothing short of marvellous. Mr. James has written no abler stories, though many pleasanter. The miscellaneous articles are singularly good this month. The writer of "Social Life Amongst the Ancient Greeks" captivates us from the first by the pleasant audacity with which he throws his reading upon the subject into the form of a traveller's tale, feigns himself to have just returned from a trip to Attica in B.C. 423, and talks of Professors Jebb and Mahaffy as voyagers who have preceded him by a few years. His description, moreover, is remarkably vivid and picturesque. A still better paper is the sketch of the thoroughly national Spanish humorist Quevedo, whose life and works are equally rich in interest. Some adaptations of his ballads to the English style are remarkably successful examples of transplantation, rather than translation. A paper on the Burmese gives a pleasing account of this light-hearted and good-natured, but, unfortunately, not very hardy or intellectual people. "My Faithful Johnny," is a pleasing story, in genuine Cornhill style.

Twenty-seven pages of Macmillan are given up to Mr. James's "Portrait of a Lady," which are rather too many considering Mr. James's habitual paucity of incidents, although his writing is as clever as usual. There are consequently but few other contributions to the number. The most important is a weighty essay by Professor Seeley on "Political Somnambulism," by which he understands alike the disposition to accept picturesque views of men and things instead of those based upon sober historical investigation, and the indisposition to resort to the lessons of the past as the criterion of the present. Dr. Hueffer's essay on "Troubadours Ancient and Modern" criticises the recent adaptations of Provençal metrical forms to our language. Ingenious as many of these are, Dr. Hueffer is right in classing them with elegant play-things. Mrs. Edwards's Cingalese ghost-story hardly redeems the promise of the introduction.

Blackwood commences a new tale, "The Private Secretary," the opening of which is very promising. A young gentleman, advertising for a secretary, is led to accept the services of a young lady, a situation obviously fertile in possibilities of all descriptions, a mine which promises to be abundantly worked out. The present instalment of Mr. Trollope's "Dr. Wortle's School" is also remarkably good. "Voyages in the P. and O." contains some pathetic sketches of the separation of families, which is the greatest drawback to Anglo-Indian life. "The Close of the Afghan Campaign" is an able, although inevitably partisan summary of the recent operations, military and political.

Lord Sherbrooke's essay on "Legislation for Ireland" in the Nineteenth Century, besides its application to the important subject of which it treats, is interesting as an expression of the views of that school of jurists who regard law rather as an instrument for introducing certainty into the dealings of mankind than one for regulating these dealings by the principles of natural justice. Lord Sherbrooke's advice to the Government to restore order before resorting to legislation is excellent; but it is pretty certain that any satisfactory legislation must make much larger concessions to the feeling of natural equity than Lord Sherbrooke would approve. The other chief articles are disappointing. Professor Tyndall's discourse on the Sabbath is the report of a lecture; Mr. Ruskin loses himself in extravagances about Venice; and Mr. Harrison seems to think it possible to restore, in an age when everyone thinks, the unanimity of ages in which no one thought at all. Mr. Sydney Buxton questions the efficacy of disfranchisement as a cure for bribery at elections. The dread of it, he thinks, operates to prevent the truth coming out. He would prefer the appointment of a public prosecutor for such cases. Major Hallett's statement of the increased yield to be obtained by sowing wheat in September is indeed of national importance if his data are correct; but this is a question for agriculturists.

In the Fortnightly Review Mr. Herbert Spencer commences a series of papers on political institutions, the first of which treats of the perplexing problem of the apparent declension in morality which frequently accompanies the first steps in civilisation. Mr. Stillman's article on the present position of the Greek kingdom is entitled to great attention as the work of a thoughtful friend of the people, who has known them intimately and long. His account of the working of their political institutions is anything but favourable; his remedy is decentralisation. Mr. Cunliffe Owen's view of the political prospects of Switzerland is even less satisfactory, in so far as the future of the Greeks depends mainly on themselves; but that of the Swiss, according to Mr. Owen, on their neighbours. He seems to doubt whether Swiss patriotism would hold out against the dread of damage to material interests. It is greatly to be hoped that he is wrong. Mr. O'Brien records some interesting and successful experiments in Irish peasant proprietorship; but these all cost money, and Mr. O'Brien omits to face the question, what sane person or Government will lend the Irish money for more experiments after the doctrines which have been recently preached among them. Mr. Cromie's article on Jomini, Moreau, and Vandamme is full of interest, but disfigured by colloquialisms, and so negligently written that the writer is made to appear as if he thought that Hohenlinden was in Italy.

The Contemporary Review has a further instalment of the Duke of Argyll's essays on the "Unity of Nature." His Grace now treats of the relationship of animal instinct to the functions of the mind of man. The Land Question is discussed by Mr. Alfred Russell Wallace, propounding a vast scheme of gradual multiplication of small freeholds; and, secondly, by Professor Aldis, with a view to the prospects of the landlord interest. The Rev. J. Baldwin Brown discourses with earnest and temperate zeal of the "Relation of Christian Belief to National Life." "Party Politics in the United States," with reference to the Presidential election, are explained by an American statesman. On the other hand, Mr. W. Clarke furnishes his reasons for believing that Canada will ultimately join the great Federal Republic of North America, though at present indisposed to that connection. Sir Rutherford Alcock contributes an interesting sketch of the recent political and social revolution in Japan.

Other Magazines will be noticed next week.

The arrivals at Liverpool last week of live stock and fresh meat from the United States and Canada were greatly below those of the preceding week, and were the smallest recorded to have arrived this year; the total being 334 cattle, 417 sheep, 153 pigs, 4162 quarters of beef, 250 carcases of mutton, and 204 dead pigs.

Digitized by Google

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

ITALY.

The Official Gazette publishes a decree summoning the Chambers to meet on Nov. 15.

Garibaldi was received on his arrival at Milan last Monday by a vast crowd of people, and the deputations of Artisans' Societies accompanied him to his hotel.

The Pope has written an important letter to Cardinal Guibert, the Archbishop of Paris, on the subject of the March Decrees and their enforcement.

Vesuvius is very active. Lava continues flowing from the crater, and present indications point to the probability of increased eruptive energy.

SWITZERLAND.

The nation has by a plébiscite rejected the proposed revision of the Federal Constitution by a majority of two thirds.

The Federal Council has decided that 20f.-pieces to the amount of 5,000,000f. shall be struck by the Mint.

GERMANY.

The Prussian Diet was opened on Thursday week in the White Hall of the Royal Castle by the Vice-President of the Ministry, Count Stolberg-Wernigerode, in the name of the Emperor. The Speech from the Throne, which the Vice-President read, dealt exclusively with matters of domestic interest. It stated that the financial position of the country showed a change for the better, and that the estimates for 1881 promised a surplus.

On Friday the Lower House elected Herr von Koeller (German Conservative) President; Dr. Benda (National Liberal), First Vice-President; and Herr Stengel (Free Conservative), upon a second ballot, Second Vice-President.

Herr Bitter, Minister of Finance, presented his Budget on Monday, announcing that there was a deficiency this year of 5,000,000 marks, which would have to be covered by a loan; and on Tuesday the debate on the Budget began.

The Standard correspondent at Berlin states that there is great jubilation among the Guelphs in Germany in consequence of the birth of a son to the Duke of Cumberland. The party hail the advent of an heir to the Royal House of Hanover.

A monument to the memory of the late Field Marshal von Wrangel was unveiled on Monday in Berlin. An address to the Emperor William, who was present, was read by General von Kameke, the Minister of War, thanking his Majesty in the name of the German army for the gift of the memorial.

Storms are reported from all parts of Germany, and serious floods have occurred in Wurtemberg.

AUSTRIA-HUNGARY.

An autograph letter from the Emperor Francis Joseph to M. Tisza is published, in which his Majesty announces that he has conferred upon the Hungarian Premier the Grand Cross of the Order of St. Stephan, in recognition of his zealous and eminent services and in token of the Emperor's confidence.

An important step was taken in the Austrian Delegation sitting at Pesth on Thursday week. The Minister of War asked for an extraordinary grant for the purpose of at once strengthening the Galician fortresses. The Government also contemplate strengthening the naval port of Pola as well as the frontier of the Tyrol.

AMERICA.

On Tuesday the popular vote by which the President and Vice-President of the United States are practically chosen was taken throughout the Union, the choice falling on the Republican candidates, General Garfield and Mr. Chester A. Arthur.

The Presidential proclamation appointing Thanksgiving Day says:—"The country never had such abundant and universal reasons for thanksgiving, inasmuch as health and prosperity exist throughout our borders; we have peace and friendship with all the world, and the great body of the people firmly adhere to the principles of liberty and justice."

Serious election disturbances are reported. During a Republican meeting at St. Louis, on Saturday night, a fight took place between the negroes and whites, in which one of the former was killed, and a number of persons were more or less injured. At Denver City, Colorado, the Chinese quarter of the town was attacked by the mob, who destroyed several houses and killed two Chinamen, besides injuring some others. Many negroes were also assaulted. One thousand armed citizens have enrolled themselves as police to prevent further rioting. Thirty of the principal rioters have been arrested.

From the decennial Catholic census for 1880, just issued, we find that the Roman Catholic population in the United States amount to 6,143,222. There are 67 archbishops and bishops and one cardinal, 5989 priests, and 5606 churches and chapels. There are 400,000 Catholic children in the schools, and 375 charitable institutions exclusively devoted to Catholics.

The emigrants arrived in the United States during July, August, and September were 154,832, against 68,651 for the same months last year.

An official report issued at Washington shows that 3,353,651 letters and packages were received at the Dead Letter Office during the fiscal year ended June last, of which, in round numbers, 2,700,000 were sent thither from the local post-offices because unclaimed, 290,000 were held for postage, 202,000 were misdirected, 36,000 bore fictitious addresses, and over 9000 were not addressed at all. The receipts at the Dead Letter Office also included about 56,000 letters returned from hotels, the persons addressed having left for other places, and 94,000 letters and packages were returned from foreign countries. The great mass of the letters and packages contained nothing of value, and over 2,000,000 of this description were destroyed, the senders not being found. Of the remainder, 21,974 contained draughts, cheques, notes, &c., to the amount of 1,526,217 dols., and 26,264 contained money amounting to 49,438 dols. Most of the property has been returned to the owners. About 806,000 letters were opened and returned to the writers, and 364,000 were returned without opening, in consequence of the names or addresses of the senders appearing on the envelopes. A comparison of these figures with the statistics of former years shows that the percentage of undirected, misdirected, and unstamped letters are almost exactly the same each year. The Postmaster-General has issued an order directing that all magazines, pamphlets, and other like reading matter received at the Dead Letter Office shall hereafter, instead of being sold for waste paper, be distributed to charitable and reformatory institutions in and around the national capital.

CANADA.

It is stated in a telegram from Ottawa that Princess Louise will not return to Canada this winter.

The Hon. L. F. G. Baby, the Minister of Inland Revenue, has resigned in order to accept a judgeship, and is succeeded in the Ministry by Mr. Carron.

SOUTH AFRICA.

A telegram from Durban which the Times published yesterday week announces that Colonel Clarke's forces have captured the stronghold of Lerothodi, the eldest son of Letsea, the head and front of the rebellion. The Basutos seem to have been totally routed and driven out of the village with considerable losses, while the Colonial troops are said to have had only one man killed and ten wounded.

The Standard correspondent at Cape Town telegraphs that a serious outbreak has taken place in the Transkei. When they received news of the fighting at Maseru the Basutos rose and threatened an irruption into Kaffraria, where there were no troops to oppose them. In the expectation that his men would fight for the British, Mr. Hope, a magistrate, applied to a Pondomese Chief, and at his suggestion furnished arms to the tribe, who then held a grand war dance, in the course of which they suddenly fell on Mr. Hope and his two clerks and killed them. Another magistrate and four missionaries are also reported to have been murdered.

A proclamation has been issued offering protection to the Mafeteng rebels who surrender their arms and ammunition to the authorities. A thousand additional Burghers have been called out.

The following telegraphic message from the officer administering the Government of the Cape was received by the Secretary of State on the 31st ult.:—

Oct. 29.—Present position critical. All Basutos on east side of Drakensberg and both sections Pondomese tribe under Umhlonhlo and Umgitshwa have joined rebellion. Griquas in Griqualand East and Bacas have not joined. Umquiliso Pondo Chief very doubtful. Umquikela paramount Pondo Chief shown signs either way. Gungelizwa paramount Chief Timbuland professes loyalty, but many of minor chiefs under him in open rebellion. Country between Kei and Bashee, magistrates at Isola and Gatberg in imminent danger. Colonial Government raising irregular corps to meet this emergency, numbering 500, and 3500 burghers. Clarke gone to Wepener and returned to Mafeteng with 150 waggons unopposed. Leribe district of Basutoland unsettled, but no fighting yet.

The following further telegram from the Governor of Natal to the Secretary of State was received at the Colonial Office on Monday:—

Nov. 1.—Report received from Kokstad that Tembus have risen, though Umquiliso remains friendly. Welsh still unrelieved. Baker's Horse have nearly reached Mount Frere.

The Viceroy left Simla on Thursday week for Lahore.

The mediation of the United States between Chili and Peru is said to have led to no result.

A new Servian Ministry has been formed, with M. Pirotschunatch as President of the Council and Minister of Justice.

Princess Olga, the youngest daughter of the King of the Hellenes, died on Monday afternoon, after a few days' illness.

Madame Adelina Patti, accompanied by Signor Nicolini, has arrived at Berlin to perform a series of engagements at the Royal Opera.

Colonel Charles E. Oldershaw, C.B., R.A., leaves England to-day (Saturday) in the screw-steamer Strathleven for Bombay, to assume command of the Royal Artillery at Mhow.

Lieutenant-General Sir Frederick Roberts, V.C., G.C.B., embarked on board the Peninsular and Oriental steam-ship Peshawur, at Bombay, yesterday week, for passage to England, viâ Brindisi.

The following appears in the Gazette:—The Queen has been pleased to appoint Charles D. Field, Esq., of the Bengal Civil Service, to be a Judge of the High Court of Judicature at Fort William, in Bengal, in the place of Sir Louis Stewart Jackson.

The ship Glamis, 1150 tons, Captain Roll, chartered by the Agent-General for New South Wales, has sailed from Plymouth for Sydney with 376 emigrants, under the supervision of Dr. Dawes as surgeon-superintendent, with Miss Chicken in charge of the single women.

MEASURING SUNSHINE AT GREENWICH.

Some Illustrations of the meteorological apparatus at the useful national establishment on the hill in Greenwich Park have appeared in our Journal. "Measuring the Wind," by means of the self-recording anemometer in one of the two turrets which distinguish the quaint north front of the old seventeenth-century building, was shown in our Engraving published on Jan. 31 this year.

The apparatus shown in our present Illustration is a comparatively simple affair, contrived as an easy means of recording the more or less interrupted continuance of sunshine throughout the day. It does not indicate the intensity of the sunlight, but merely shows how long and how often the sun has been unclouded in the sky. It is fixed up on the flat roof of the Magnetic Observatory building, in the rear of the Astronomical Observatory. The other structures which appear in the background of our view, looking northward in the direction of Greenwich Hospital and the Thames, belong to the last-mentioned department. They are the huge cylindrical case which contains the Great Equatorial Telescope, and a small domed edifice in which the lesser Equatorial is kept; but these have been described on former occasions. Beyond them, to the left hand, is seen the north-east turret of the front buildings with its vane and the sliding ball that falls at one o'clock daily, being connected with the meantime clock in the north dome, and with which the chief post-offices of England and Scotland keep time by electric communication. In the left hand corner are the two anemometers, Osler's and Robinson's, erected upon the north-west front turret and the leads of the old Octagon Room, of which we gave a precise account nine months ago. All the meteorological apparatus, as well as that which is devoted to terrestrial magnetism, in the sunk basement here, is placed in charge of Mr. W. Ellis, Superintendent of the Magnetic Observatory. Thermometers of different kinds, some of them with their bulbs sunk in the ground to different depths, to indicate the variations of atmospheric and terrestrial temperature, with means of self-registration, are arranged in sheds in the court-yard behind the Magnetic Observatory. Here are to be found also the barometers for meteorological service, the rain-guages, and other important apparatus; the photo-heliograph, above named, by which the spots on the sun are delineated, is situated in this part of the Observatory premises.

The contrivance for simply indicating the continuance or interruption of sunshine is a solid glass ball, of four inches diameter, placed in the centre of a bowl which is marked round the rim like a sun-dial; the ball is supported at an inch distance apart from the bottom and interior sides of the bowl; and a narrow strip of mill-board, made black with stencil-ink, is laid all round inside the bowl, so as to be everywhere equidistant one inch from the glass. Whenever the sun is shining, the glass ball acts as a burning-glass, and burns a reddish mark along the black band, which is just within its focus. If the sunshine be intermittent, this line becomes fragmentary, so that, at the end of the day, when the strip of mill-board is removed for examination, there is a record of the greater or less amount of clear sunshine. This apparatus was invented by Mr. J. F. Campbell, in 1876, and was presented by him to the Royal Observatory. In our Engraving will be remarked, on the same platform, a chimney-shaped upright cylinder of small dimensions: this is one of the ordinary rain-guages.

THE LATE STORMS AND WRECKS.

The violent storm of wind and rain that visited all parts of Great Britain on the Wednesday and Thursday of last week caused an immense amount of mischief, not only by great and sudden floods of the inland districts, but also by shipwrecks both on the east and south-west coasts. A hundred and sixty vessels were lost on the shores of the British islands during the week. The loss of life from these vessels has not been very great, thanks to the exertions of the life-boat, coast-guard, and rocket men; but at Wells, on the Norfolk coast, there was a sad disaster on the Friday; the life-boat there was capsized in a heavy sea, and eleven of the crew were drowned, including Mr. Robert Elsdon, the captain, who was also harbour-master.

At Scarborough, about six o'clock on the Thursday morning, several vessels were driven into the North Bay, and were in imminent danger of being wrecked on the rocks at the foot of the Castle Hill. They weathered that point, but one of them, after passing close by the Outer Pier, stranded on the sands facing King's Cliff. She was the Mary, of South Shields, in ballast, with a crew of five men and a boy. The Scarborough life-boat went out and saved them; but the sea very soon washed over the vessel, breaking her masts, and she became a complete wreck. By ten o'clock that morning the Spa promenade and other places on shore were crowded with thousands of spectators. Another vessel, the Black-eyed Susan, schooner, of Bideford, bound from Runcorn to Newcastle, in ballast, went aground in front of the Spa wall, four or five hundred yards distant from shore. This happened at a quarter past ten o'clock in the morning. The rocket apparatus was placed on the Spa promenade, and three rockets with lines were shot out, the third line falling over the stern of the vessel, but the crew were unable to avail itself of it. After some little delay the life-boat, in charge of Mr. John Owston, the coxswain, went out and rescued the crew of the Black-eyed Susan, one of whom had a broken leg. There were other wrecks near Scarborough that day, and the life-boat went out six times. A large laden brig, the Lily, of Guernsey, from London to Shields, in ballast, had lost both masts, and in the afternoon came drifting in towards the rocks, two hundred yards south of "the Children's Corner," at the end of the Spa. Her crew of eight men were saved, after repeated attempts, by a rocket-line thrown out to her, but the mate had his leg broken. It was by this time dark, but there was more work to be done that evening; the life-boat went out again at seven o'clock, and the coastguard men, under Captain Evans, R.N., were on the alert all night. Two other wrecks occurred on the Friday morning, but the crews were rescued. At Filey, Whitby, and other places on that coast, there were similar disasters. Our Illustrations of the life-boat and rocket services at Scarborough are from sketches by a local correspondent.

In Plymouth Sound, between three and six o'clock on the Thursday morning, the violence of the gale had great effect in the eastern anchorage ground, occupied by merchant-vessels, while the part allotted to ships of the Royal Navy was tolerably safe. Four merchant-vessels were torn from their anchorage, and were cast ashore in Batten Bay, notwithstanding the newly-constructed Batten Breakwater, which is said to be rather a hindrance to vessels getting into the Catwater. Among those wrecked were the John May, brig, of Shoreham, 224 tons burden, laden with phosphate; the schooner Thetis, of London, 107 tons, bound for Dublin with a general cargo; and another Thetis, of Carnarvon, going from Glasgow to Faversham. The John May, which had come from America, and was going to a Baltic port, had called at Falmouth on entering the Channel, and took shelter from the gale in Plymouth Sound. She had a crew of seven, besides the master, Captain John Mitchell, and his young wife, to whom he had been married only a twelvemonth. In entering the Sound, this vessel got her rigging entangled with another, but no damage was done by the collision. The crew of the other vessel, however, were struck with panic, and four of them leaped on board the John May, leaving but one man in charge of their own craft, then lying at anchor. When the John May ran aground, though the tide was low, the heavy sea caused the vessel to rock and roll so violently that Captain Mitchell feared she would soon be broken to pieces. He was therefore unwilling to wait for the rocket-line to be thrown out to him from shore. He managed to cast a line of his own upon the Batten breakwater, where it was seized and made fast by the solitary watchman there. By means of this rope, Captain Mitchell endeavoured to get himself ashore, in order that he might then procure and direct further operations for the landing of his wife, of the crew, and of the four other men aboard his vessel. He climbed up the rope to the top of the pier or breakwater, but its rounded shape at the top gave him no firm grasp, and the man above was not strong enough to help him up. After hanging a few minutes, in sight of his distracted wife and of his shipmates, Captain Mitchell fell into the sea and was drowned. The others were all landed in safety by the coast-guard men using the rocket and line apparatus. Mrs. Mitchell was kindly taken care of in the cottage of Mr. John Hart, the chief boatman of the coastguard. The schooner Thetis, of London, drove aground near the outer angle of the breakwater with the shore; and her crew were likewise saved by the coastguard with the rockets and lines, under command of Captain F. M. Ommanney, R.N., with Mr. Philip Mann in charge of the apparatus. Mr. John Hoskins, of the Bovisand station, also rendered assistance.

Last Sunday the twenty-first annual collection in aid of the local medical charities was made in the various churches and chapels of Birmingham, the proceeds being devoted this year to the General Hospital. The receipts in most cases showed a slight falling off as compared with those of the two previous years.

At a meeting of the central executive committee of the St. John Ambulance Association, held at St. John's-gate yesterday week, the deputy chairman, Major F. Duncan, reported that during the last fortnight he had been on a tour of inspection of many of the Northern, Midland, and Western centres, most of which were evincing great enthusiasm in the renewal of work for the winter session. In this tour Major Duncan opened new centres at Beighton, Durham, Bearpark, Brancepeth Colliery, Carlisle, Whitehaven, Hawkshead, and Ulverston (Carnforth). In London much activity is being shown in the City, and another district has been formed, which will include Holborn, Chancery-lane, the Strand, and Charing-cross; and classes will shortly be started at the Birkbeck Institution. An advanced course for certificated female pupils is being conducted at the Royal Hospital for Children and Women, Waterloo Bridge-road, where, after each lecture, the students are taken round a ward and given practical hints on nursing and the treatment of the sick.—Major Duncan opened with a free lecture last Saturday evening the course of lectures to be delivered at the Birkbeck Literary and Scientific Institution, Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane, on First Aid to the Injured.

Digitized by Google

1. Wrecks ashore at Scarborough ; the life-boat going out for the sixth time.

2. The Scarborough life-boat going to the rescue of the crew of the Black-Eyed Susan : Morning.

THE LATE STORMS AND WRECKS AT

Digitized by Google

ocket-line at Scarborough taking crew off the Lily, of Guernsey: Night.

4. Wreck of the John May, of Shoreham, and the Thetis, of London, alongside the Batten Breakwater at Plymouth.

CARBOROUGH AND PLYMOUTH.—SEE PAGE 459.

Digitized by Google

OBITUARY.

THE RIGHT HON. RICHARD MORE-O'FERRALL.

The Right Hon. Richard More-O'Ferrall, P.C., J.P. and D.L., of Balyna, in the county of Kildare, died on the 27th ult., at the Royal Marine Hotel, Kingstown. He was born in 1797, the eldest son of Mr. Ambrose O'Ferrall, of Balyna, by Anne, his wife, only child of Mr. John Bagot, of Castle Bagot, in the county of Dublin. Mr. More-O'Ferrall, who held for many years a prominent position as a member of the Whig Administrations, sat in Parliament for the county of Kildare from 1830 to 1847, for the county of Longford from 1851 to 1852, and again for the first-named county from 1859 to 1865. He held office successively as a Lord of the Treasury, 1835 to 1839, Secretary of the Admiralty, 1839 to 1841, of the Treasury, 1841, and as Governor of Malta, from 1847 to 1851. He married, Sept. 28, 1839, the Hon. Matilda Southwell, third daughter and coheiress of Anthony, third Viscount Southwell, K.P., and leaves one daughter, Maria Anne, Lady Nugent, wife of Sir Walter George Nugent, Bart., of Donore, and one son, Ambrose Richard O'Ferrall, now of Balyna, who served as High Sheriff of the county of Kildare, 1876. He is married to Jessie Frances, second daughter of Mr. Patrick Gordon R. Canning, of Hartpury Court, Gloucestershire.

SIR FRANCIS LYCETT.

Sir Francis Lycett, formerly one of the Sheriffs of London, died on the 29th ult., aged seventy-seven. He was the son of Mr. Philip Francis Lycett, of Worcester, and started life in his father's glove manufactory. Thence he was engaged in the well-known glove firm of Dent and Allcroft, of which he became a partner. He was elected Sheriff of London and Middlesex in 1866, and the following year received the honour of knighthood in recognition of the hospitable reception accorded by the Corporation of London to the Sultan and to the Viceroy of Egypt. Sir Francis contested unsuccessfully three constituencies—viz., Liskeard in 1869, St. Ives in 1874 and 1875, and Worcester in 1878. He married, 1836, Emily Sarah Amelia, daughter of Mr. John Vanderpant, of Utrecht.

SIR THOMAS BOUCH.

Sir Thomas Bouch, the eminent Civil Engineer, whose death is announced, was born in 1822, son of Mr. William Bouch, of Cumberland. Sir Thomas was projector and engineer-in-chief of the Tay Bridge, the scene of the terrible catastrophe some months since. He was knighted by her Majesty at Windsor Castle last year. He married, in 1853, Margaret Ada, daughter of Mr. Thomas Nelson.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL T. B. HACKETT.

Lieutenant-Colonel Thomas Bernard Hackett, V.C., J.P., of Riverstown, in the county of Tipperary, died recently at Arrabeg. He was born June 15, 1836, the second son of Mr. Thomas Hackett, of Moor Park, King's County, and Riverstown, High Sheriff of the former county, 1844, by Jane Bernard, his wife, youngest daughter of Mr. Bernard Shaw, of Monkstown Castle, in the county of Cork, and niece of Sir Robert Shaw, Bart., of Bushey Park, and was thus brother of Colonel Simpson Hackett, now of Moor Park, King's County. Colonel Thomas Hackett, whose decease we record, entered the 23rd Regiment in 1854, and was at Sebastopol, for which he had a medal and clasp and the Turkish Medal. He also served in the Indian campaign, including the relief and capture of Lucknow, and was awarded the Victoria Cross for his gallantry in the Mutiny. He married, in 1874, Josephine, eldest daughter of the late Rev. Joseph Marshall, of Baronne Court, in the county of Tipperary.

MAJOR GAVIN.

Major George O'Halloran Gavin, J.P. and D.L., of Kilpeacon House, in the county of Limerick, died there recently, in his seventy-fourth year. He was son of Mr. Michael Gavin, of Limerick, by Margaret, his wife, daughter of Mr. O'Halloran, of Melton House, in the county of Limerick. He entered the Army in 1827, and served with the 16th Lancers in India, at the siege and capture of Ghuznee, and the battle of Maharajpore. He retired in 1850. Major Gavin sat as M.P. for Limerick, in the Liberal interest, from February to May, 1858, and from 1859 to 1874, when he did not offer himself for re-election. He was High Sheriff of the county in 1857. He married, 1855, Jane, daughter of Mr. Montiford Westropp, of Mellon House, in the county of Limerick.

MR. EYTON OF EYTON.

Mr. Thomas Campbell Eyton of Eyton, in the county of Salop, J.P. and D.L., died there on the 25th ult., aged seventy-one. He was son of Thomas Eyton of Eyton, High Sheriff of Shropshire in 1840, by Elizabeth, his wife, eldest daughter of Major-General Donald Campbell, was educated at St. John's College, Cambridge, and was formerly an officer in the South Salop Yeomanry Cavalry. He was a member of several learned societies, and was author of works on historical subjects and on ornithology, of which his large private museum contained many of the rarest specimens. Mr. Eyton married, in 1835, Elizabeth Frances, eldest daughter and coheiress of Mr. Robert Aglionby Slaney, of Walford Manor, Salop, M.P., which lady died in 1870. His eldest son, Mr. Thomas Slaney Ruxton, is J.P. and D.L. for Shropshire. The Eyton's of Eyton are of very ancient lineage, standing foremost in that respect among the great families of Shropshire.

We have also to record the deaths of—

The Rev. T. Frederic Parry-Hodges, D.C.L., Fellow of Winchester College and Vicar of Lyme Regis, on the 27th ult., aged eighty.

Mr. Acton Tindal, Clerk of the Peace for the county of Buckingham, on the 26th ult., at the Manor House, Aylesbury, in his seventieth year.

Mr. James Bentley, J.P., formerly Treasurer of St. Bartholomew's Hospital, on the 26th ult., at Woodgreen Park, Cheshunt, in his ninety-fifth year.

Mr. Charles Harcourt, the actor, long associated with the London stage, from the effects of a fall while engaged in rehearsal at the Haymarket Theatre.

The Hon. Mrs. Macleod (Louisa Barbara), wife of Mr. Norman Macleod of Macleod, on the 27th ult., in St. George's-place, aged sixty-two. She was the only (and posthumous) daughter of St. Andrew, thirteenth Lord St. John, by Louisa, his wife, daughter of Sir C. W. Rouse-Boughton, Bart.

Commander Hastings St. John de Robeck, R.N., on the 17th ult., at Malta, aged forty-eight. He was son of the late Baron de Robeck, by his second wife, Emily Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Mr. John Joseph Henry, and niece of the Duke of Leinster. He married, at Graham's Town, South Australia, Mary Catherine, eldest daughter of W. G. Atherstone, M.D.

The Hon. Mrs. Charles Thesiger (Charlotte Elizabeth), wife of Colonel the Hon. Charles Wemyss Thesiger, at Hordle Cliff, Lymington, on the 29th ult. She was the daughter of the Hon. George Handcock (son of Richard, second Lord Castlemaine), and sister of the Hon. Mrs. Alfred Thesiger, widow of the Lord Justice of Appeal. Thus, within the brief period of nine days, Mrs. Alfred Thesiger has lost her husband and sister.

CHESS.

B G L (Islington).—The two-move position appears below, and the mate in four moves shall not be forgotten.

F S V (Southsea).—A drawn game, in our judgment. Even if Black should win the Pawns, he cannot, we think, force any of the known positions in which King and two Bishops win against King and Knight. We give you one of these for your guidance in case you desire to further examine the end-game:—White: K at K B 6th; B's at K B 8th and Q B 6th. Black: K at K R 2nd; Kt at K Kt 3rd. White wins by 1. B to K 4th, K to Kt sq; 2. B to Q 6th, Kt to R sq; 3. B to Q B 5th, Kt to B 2nd; 4. B to Q 5th, &c.

Hereward (Oxford).—Surely mate in two is mate in "few."

W G (Whitby).—The game is the one referred to. The problem is excellent, and is very welcome. Thanks.

A C P (Bletchley).—We are glad to hear from you again. A neat problem, and, we believe, sound. It shall appear next week.

A C (Abergavenny).—Your solution of Mr. Taylor's problem is correct.

L E J (Westminster).—The "Mortimer" variation of the Evans' Gambit is noticed in all the recent works upon the subject of chess theory. We have not space for analysis of that or any other openings.

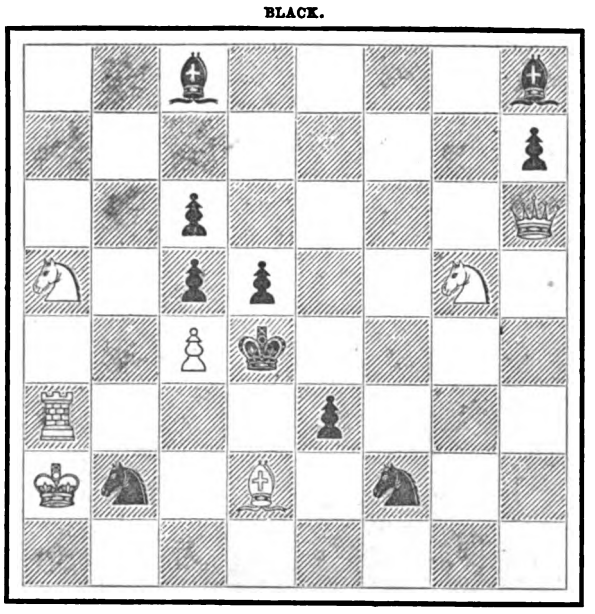
G H T (Rajahmundry).—The problems received, viâ Hastings. You shall have an early report upon them. We shall inquire about the diagrams.

T R R (Munich).—Neat enough; but, for a two-move problem, lacking in variety and point. We shall be glad to hear from you again.

Dr F St.—Thanks. It shall be carefully examined.

H H (Broadmoor).—Supposing the problem to be correct, the solution is altogether too obvious and commonplace. Three checks in a three-move problem!

Correct Solutions of Problem No. 1912 received from Norman Rumbelow, H Hampton, James Atkinson, E P Vulliamy, T Guest, R H Brooks and F E Purchas.



Correct Solutions of Problem No. 1913 received from E Casella (Paris), Ch Pompe, H de Groot (Groningen), L Falcon (Antwerp), H Hampton, James Atkinson, A R, Ferdinand, A Snellen, T R Rapp (Munich), L Chapelle (Malta), J Bumstead, J Glossop, C R F, Otto Fulder (Ghent), F E Purchas, Alfred W Hale, J W Waugh, Jane Nepveu, and Theodosia M Spencer.

Correct Solutions of Problem No. 1914 received from H B, Hereward, Alpha Cant, East Marden, A Kentish Man, C C E, Chessophile, R Oswald, One of Them, E Elsbury, N Cator, L Chabot, C S Coxe, D Templeton, H Blacklock, C Darragh, Ben Nevis, S Farrant, Elsie, F R Jeffrey, G Fosbrooke, An Old Hand, G L M, Helen Lee, R Ingersoll, Otto Fulder (Ghent), T Barrington, D W Kell, W Warren, R Jessop, Shadforth, E Louden, Norman Rumbelow, J G (Luton), T Guest, E P Vulliamy, Lulu, R H Brooks, W D Jones, Julia Short, Dr F St, J Glossop, James Dobson, E R Prentice, T Greenbank, B L Dyke, F E Purchas, and Jane Nepveu.

Solution of Problem No. 1913.

WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Q to Q 7th	Any move
2. Mates accordingly.

PROBLEM No. 1916.
By B. G. Laws.
BLACK.

WHITE.
White to play, and mate in two moves.

Game played, in a match between the clubs of Liverpool and Manchester, by Messrs. Schull and E. H. Wood.
(Philidor's Defence.)

WHITE (Mr. S.)	BLACK (Mr. W.)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th
2. Kt to K B 3rd	P to Q 3rd
3. P to Q 4th	P takes P
4. Q takes P	B to Q 2nd
5. B to K Kt 5th	P to K B 3rd

Inferior, we think, to 5. Kt to K B 3rd. If White exchanges the pieces, Black can speedily castle on the Queen's side with a fair game.

6. B to K 3rd	Kt to Q B 3rd
7. Q to Q 2nd	K Kt to K 2nd
8. Kt to Q B 3rd	Kt to Kt 3rd
9. B to Q B 4th	Kt to R 4th
10. B to Q 3rd

It would have saved time and deferred Black's castling if he had retreated the Bishop to K 2nd at once.

10.	B to K 2nd
11. Castles (K R)	Castles
12. B to K 2nd	B to K 3rd
13. Kt to Q 4th	B to B 2nd
14. Kt to Q 5th.	Kt to B 3rd
15. Kt to B 5th	R to K sq
16. B to Q 4th	Kt takes B
17. Q takes Kt	B to B sq
18. Kt to B 6th (ch)

Very cleverly conceived.

18.	P takes Kt
19. Kt takes P (ch)	Q takes Kt

Black gets, perhaps, a more defensible game by this alarming sacrifice than if he had given up only the exchange.

20. Q takes Q	B to Kt 2nd
21. Q to B 3rd	B to K 4th
22. P to K Kt 3rd	R to K 2nd
23. P to B 3rd	K to R sq
24. Q to Q 3rd	R to K Kt sq
25. K to R sq	B to Kt 2nd
26. P to K B 4th	Q R to K sq
27. B to B 3rd	B to K 3rd
28. K R to K sq	B to Q 2nd
29. R to K 3rd	B to Q B 3rd
30. Q R to K sq	B to K B 3rd
31. P to Q Kt 4th	P to Q R 3rd
32. P to Q B 4th	P to Q Kt 4th
33. P to Q B 5th	R to Q 2nd
34. P takes P	R takes P
35. Q to Q Kt 3rd	B to Q 5th
36. K R to K 2nd	Q R to Q sq

Black plays this uphill game with great perseverance, but there is no resource in the position to help him against White's superior forces

37. P to K 5th	B takes B (ch)
38. Q takes B	R to Q 4th
39. R to Q sq	P to Q B 3rd
40. K R to Q 2nd	Kt to K 2nd
41. Q to K 4th	B to B 6th
42. R to Q 3rd	R takes R
43. R takes R	R takes R
44. Q takes R	B takes P
45. P to Q R 3rd	B to B 4th
46. P to B 5th	Kt to Q 4th
47. Q to B 2nd	B takes P
48. Q takes P	Kt to K 2nd
49. Q to K 8th (ch),	and Black resigned.

A match between the Bermondsey and Shaftesbury Chess Clubs, nine competitors on each side, was played on Monday last. It was a very close affair, Bermondsey winning by one game only. The score was five to four.

When, in our last Number, we referred to Count Pongracz, of Hungary, as a skilful constructor of self-mates, we omitted to mention that his regular problems rank among the finest compositions of our time. As a specimen of his style we give here a position, which, although it has been published before, will probably be new to the present generation of problem solvers:—

White: K at K Kt sq; Q at K B 7th; Kt at K 3rd; B at Q R 7th; Pawns at K Kt 5th and Q B 4th.
Black: K at Q 3rd; Pawn at K Kt 3rd.
White to play, and mate in three moves.

The Chesseplayers' Chronicle for November has an article, by Mr. W. T. Pierce, on the law which, at certain stages of a game, empowers a player to call upon his adversary to win in fifty moves or consent to a draw. There are, besides, several games from the Brunswick and Graz tournaments, the news of the month, and some excellent problems.

At the City Chess Club on Monday last Mr. Blackburne played twenty-four adversaries simultaneously, and, as usual with him, won a large majority of the games. We have not much love for these so-called "simultaneous games." The play, on either side, is never particularly instructive, because the superior player cannot afford more than a few seconds to the consideration of his move, and he is usually opposed by amateurs who have little knowledge to impart to others. It must be owned, however, that these performances appear to give a great deal of pleasure to young players who, without some such contrivance, would have no opportunity of measuring their force against such a master as Mr. Blackburne. An exceptionally strong team put in an appearance on this occasion, and most of the games were well fought.

Design and Work, a London publication, the chess department of which is conducted by Mr. W. R. Bland, offers a number of prizes for a tourney in which competitors are required to contribute two problems in three moves, or two in two moves. Each competition is distinct from the other, so that any composer may enter either or both. The prizes will be awarded by Mr. W. T. Pierce, and they range in value from £2 to 6s.

The Liverpool Argus, a weekly paper devoted to the cause of temperance and kindred subjects, commenced a chess column last week. It opens with a fine three-move problem, by Mr. H. E. Kidson, a gentleman whose compositions are well known to the readers of this column.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will (dated Sept. 20, 1878) with a codicil (dated July 20, 1880) of the Right Hon. Margaret, Dowager Baroness Willoughby de Broke, late of Plasnewydd, in the parish of Llanedwin, Anglesey, who died on Aug. 3 last, was proved on the 25th ult. by Edmund Peel, Salusbury Kynaston Mainwaring, and John Martin, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £120,000. The testatrix bequeaths £1666 13s. 4d. Reduced Three per Cent Annuities upon trust to apply the dividends towards the support of the Bodelwyddan National Schools so long as they are conducted according to the Protestant principles of the Church of England as now by law established, and if the said schools should hereafter become vested in a School Board under the Elementary Education Act the trust is to cease and the money is to go over to other purposes; to her nephew, Robert Ap Hugh Williams, £7000; to her brother, William Williams, and to her nieces, Mary Lucy Charlotte Williams and Arabella Antonia Williams, £5000 each; to Elizabeth Fontaine an annuity of £100; to her late maid, Ellen Skipworth, an annuity of £30; and many other legacies, pecuniary and specific, to her sisters, nephews, nieces, chaplain, executors, and servants. The residue of her real and personal estate she leaves to her nephews, the Rev. Herbert Watkin Williams, Robert Ap Hugh Williams, Owen John Williams, and Charles Henry Bennett Williams. The deceased was the widow of Henry, eighth Lord Willoughby de Broke.

The will (dated May 6, 1880) of Mr. Francis Dukinfield Astley, late of No. 33, Princes-gardens, South Kensington, who died on Aug. 2 last, at the river Natasquam, British North America, was proved on the 25th ult. by Alexander Charles Boyd, the acting executor, the personal estate in the United Kingdom being sworn under £70,000. The testator bequeaths to Alexander Charles Boyd and to the Hon. Charles Harbord, the executors named in his will, whether they prove or not, £1000 each; and to his old and valued friend John Walklake, his coachman, an annuity of £25. He devises all his freehold estates, except his heritable property in Scotland, to his executors upon trust to raise £25,000 for each of his sisters, Constance Charlotte Astley and Beatrice Emma Astley, and subject thereto he devises the said freehold estates, and gives all his copyhold and leasehold estates and the residue of the personalty to his eldest sister, Gertrude Susan Astley.

The will (dated Aug. 11, 1876) of Mr. George Sinclair Brodie, formerly of Melbourne, Australia, but late of No. 22, Pembridge-square, Bayswater, who died on Sept. 13 last, at Cary-crescent, Torquay, was proved on the 25th ult. by David Aitchison and John Chester Jervis, the acting executors, the personal estate being sworn under £70,000. The testator leaves to his wife, Mrs. Jane Deere Brodie, in addition to the money secured to her by settlement, all the cash in the house in notes and coin and £200, and his residence, with the furniture and effects, for life or widowhood; and subsequently the said residence and furniture are to go to his daughter, Helen Sinclair Brodie; he also leaves to his wife the income of £12,000 for life or widowhood, with a power of appointment over £2000; to his said daughter, £100 and two estates in Victoria; to Margaret Bruce, an old servant, £100; to his executors, 100 guineas each; to his son David, an estate in Bourke county, Victoria; to his son Richard Sinclair, £6000; to his sons James Mackenzie and Charles Burchett, £3000 each; to his daughter Mrs. Catherine Mackenzie Scott, certain estates in Australia; to his daughters Mrs. Jessie Jane Hurst and Mrs. Isabella Williamson Wilson, £8000 each; to the children of his late daughter Mrs. Mary Ann Berryman, £8000; and the residue of his real and personal estate to his sons Richard Sinclair and David, his daughters Helen Sinclair, Mrs. Scott, and Mrs. Wilson, and the children of his deceased daughter Mrs. Berryman.

The will (dated July 12, 1873) with a codicil (dated July 6, 1877) of Colonel David Ewart, late of No. 50, Lancaster-gate, Hyde Park, who died on Aug. 26 last, at Terregles, Kirkcudbright, was proved on the 25th ult. by Mrs. Anne Finlay Anderson Ewart, the widow, Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. Robert Anderson Ramsay, and John Ewart, the nephew, the executors, the personal estate in the United Kingdom being sworn under £45,000. The testator gives to his wife his carriages, horses, plate, linen, china, books, pictures, wines, household furniture, and effects, and £1000; to his executors £100 each; and the residue of his property upon trust for his wife for life, and then for his daughters, Mary Ramsay Ewart and Jessie Louisa Anne Ewart.

The will (dated Aug. 30, 1878) of Mr. Alfred Filmer, late of Guildford, ironmonger, who died on June 18 last, was proved on the 15th ult. by Henry Sharp Taylor, George Lissant Jacobs, and George James Jacobs, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £45,000. The testator leaves to his wife his furniture, pictures, and household effects, £100, and an annuity of £450; to his executors £1000 each; and the residue of his property, real and personal, to all his children in equal shares.

The will (dated Feb. 12, 1878) of Mr. Thomas Hedges Graham, late of Abingdon, Berks, solicitor, who died on Aug. 20 last, was proved on the 20th ult. by Thomas Edmund Graham and Robert Philip Graham, the sons, Francis Cadwallader Adams, and Charles Glanville, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £30,000. With the exception of legacies to an old nurse and to his executors, Mr. Adams and Mr. Glanville, the provisions of the will are wholly in favour of testator's wife and children.

The will (dated July 26, 1880) of Mr. Thomas Gee, late of Hanley Castle, Worcestershire, who died on Aug. 3 last, has been proved by Mrs. Elizabeth Gee, the widow and acting executrix, the personal estate being sworn under £25,000. The testator leaves all his property upon trust for his wife for life, but a fixed annuity is substituted for such life interest in the event of her marriage again, and, subject thereto, for his seven children.

The will (dated July 1, 1863) of Mr. Francis Du Cane, formerly a Major in the Royal Engineers, but late of No. 12, Hardwick-road, Eastbourne, who died on the 4th ult., was proved on the 27th ult. by Mrs. Louisa Frances Maria Du Cane, the widow and sole executrix, to whom he gives and devises all the real and personal estate he may die possessed of or which he can dispose of by will for her own use absolutely. The personal estate is sworn under £12,000.

The will (dated May 28, 1877) of Miss Margaret Lindsay, late of No. 14, Cloudesley-street, Islington, who died on Aug. 15 last, was proved on the 19th ult. by Michael Grayhurst Hewat and Alexander Christie, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £12,000. The testatrix bequeaths to her nieces, Janet and Mary Scott, all her household furniture and effects; to her executors, £50 each; and the residue of her property upon trust for her said nieces.

The will of Mr. Edward Samuel Snell, of 27, St. George's-road, Eccleston-square, has been proved under £30,000.

The Staffordshire Advertiser announces the grant of a charter for separate Quarter Sessions for the borough of Hanley.

Digitized by Google

CHLORODYNE.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S

COUGHS, ASTHMA,
COLDS, BRONCHITIS, &c.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE.

This wonderful remedy was discovered by Dr. J. Collis Browne, and the word Chlorodyne coined by him expressly to designate it. There never has been a remedy so vastly beneficial to suffering humanity, and it is a subject of deep concern to the public that they should not be imposed upon by having imitations pressed upon them on account of cheapness and as being the same thing. Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne is a totally distinct thing from the spurious compounds called Chlorodyne, the use of which only ends in disappointment and failure.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S

CHLORODYNE.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the inventor of Chlorodyne; that the whole story of the defendant was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See the "Times," July 13, 1864.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S

CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages pain of every kind, affords a calm and refreshing sleep without headache, and invigorates the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE is the GREAT SPECIFIC for CHOLERA.

DYSENTERY,

DIARRHŒA.

Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla to the effect that cholera had been raging fearfully, and that the only remedy of any service was Chlorodyne.—See "Lancet," Dec. 31, 1864.

The General Board of Health, London, reports that it acts as a charm. One dose generally sufficient.

Dr. Gibbon, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states:—"Two doses completely cured me of diarrhœa."

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE
rapidly cuts short all attacks of

EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC,

PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE
is the true palliative in

NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER,

TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

From Dr. B. J. Boulton and Co., Horncastle.

"We have made pretty extensive use of Chlorodyne in our practice lately, and look upon it as an excellent direct sedative and anti-spasmodic. It seems to allay pain and irritation in whatever organ, and from whatever cause. It induces a feeling of comfort and quietude not obtainable by any other remedy, and it seems to possess this great advantage over all other sedatives, that it leaves no unpleasant after effects."

IMPORTANT CAUTION.

The immense sale of this remedy has given rise to many unscrupulous imitations.

N.B.—Every bottle of genuine Chlorodyne bears on the Government stamp the name of the inventor.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE.

Sold in Bottles, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d.

J. T. DAVENPORT,
33, Great Russell-street, W.C., Sole Manufacturer.

HOOPING COUGH.
ROCHE'S HERBAL EMBROCATION.

THIS celebrated effectual Cure without internal medicine. Sole Wholesale Agents, W. EDWARDS and SON, 157, Queen Victoria-street (formerly of 67, St. Paul's-churchyard), London, whose names are engraved on the Government stamp.

Sold by most Chemists. Price 4s. per Bottle.

ALLAN'S ANTI-FAT.

Purely vegetable, perfectly harmless; will reduce from two to five pounds per week; acts on the food in the stomach, preventing its conversion into fat. Sold by Chemists. Send stamp for pamphlet.—BOTANIC MEDICINE COMPANY, 493, Oxford-street, London, W.C.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

CLARKE'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE is warranted to cleanse the Blood from all impurities, from whatever cause arising. For Scrofula, Scurvy, Skin and Blood Diseases, its effects are marvellous. In Bottles, 2s. 6d. each, and in cases, containing six times the quantity, 11s. each, of all Chemists. Sent to any address for 30 or 132 stamps, of the Proprietor, F. J. CLARKE, Chemist, Lincoln.

COLDS CURED BY

DR. DUNBAR'S ALKARAM, or
Anti-Catarrh Smelling-Bottle.

ALKARAM. COLDS.
ALKARAM. COLDS.
ALKARAM. COLDS.

IF inhaled on the first symptoms, ALKARAM will at once arrest them, and cure severe cases in half an hour. Sold by all Chemists, 2s. 9d. a Bottle. Address, Dr. Dunbar, care of Messrs. F. Newbery and Sons, 1, King Edward-st., E.C.

FER BRAVAIS (Bravais' Dialysed Iron).

used in every Hospital. Recommended by all Physicians. For Anæmia, Chlorosis, Debility, Exhaustion, &c. FER BRAVAIS (liquid iron in concentrated drops) is the only one entirely free from acid; it is without smell, tasteless, and produces neither constipation, diarrhœa, inflammation, or fatigue in the stomach; it is besides the only iron that never blackens the teeth. It is the Cheapest of all Ferruginous Compounds, as a bottle of it lasts a month. General Depôt in Paris, 15, Rue Lafayette (near the Opera); and at all Chemists. Beware of dangerous imitations, and see that the Trade Mark is on every Bottle, which can be had of all Chemists in the United Kingdom. Sold also at 8, Idol-lane; and Messrs. Barclay and Sons', 95, Farringdon-street, London, where the Pamphlet on "Anæmia and its Treatment" can be obtained.

THROAT IRRITATION.—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice. For these symptoms use EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES. Glycerine, in these agreeable confections, being in proximity to the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of sucking, becomes actively healing. Sold only in Boxes, 7½d. and 1s. 1½d., labelled "James Epps and Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London." A letter received:—"Gentlemen,—It may, perhaps, interest you to know that, after an extended trial, I have found your Glycerine Jujubes of considerable benefit (with or without medical treatment) in almost all forms of throat disease. They soften and clear the voice. In no case can they do any harm.—Yours faithfully, Gordon Holmes, L.R.C.P.E., Senior Physician to the Municipal Throat and Ear Infirmary."

TOOTH-ACHE.

INSTANT CURE.

FORMS A STOPPING.

SAVES THE TOOTH.

J. Hounsell, Esq., Surgeon, Bridport, writes:—"I consider HUNTER'S NERVINE a specific for Toothache. Very severe cases under my care have found instantaneous and permanent relief."

Of Chemists, 1s. 1½d. per Packet.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.—CONSUMPTION, BRONCHITIS, and ASTHMA. A certain method of cure has been discovered for these distressing complaints by a physician, who is desirous that all sufferers may benefit from this providential discovery. It is beyond all doubt the most remarkable remedy of the age. Full particulars will be sent by post, free of charge.—Address: Mr. WILLIAMS, 10, Oxford-terrace, Hyde Park, London.

ALFRED B. PEARCE, 39, Ludgate-hill,

INVITES INSPECTION of all that is new and beautiful in useful and ornamental CHINA and GLASS, including

	s.	d.
Dinner Services ("Cottage"), 50 pieces	13	6
Dinner Services for 12 persons (108 pieces)	35	0
China Dessert Services for 12 persons, Gilt, 17s., Ungilt	14	0
Gilt China Tea Services, 40 pieces, 12s. .. .. 23 pieces	8	6
China Breakfast Ser for 6 persons 11s. .. for 4 persons	7	0
Toilet Services (for washstands), 6s. 6d., 8s. 6d., .. and	3	9
White Stone Jugs, "The Grecian," set of three	1	3

All really excellent patterns.

Quart Decanters, good cut glass, 5s. per pair .. .. plain	4	0
Claret Decanters (with handle), 4s. each .. .. and	7	0
Plain light Claret Glasses, well made, 6s. per doz. and	4	6
Wine Glasses, plain or cut, Ports and Sherries, per doz.	1	9
Engraved Wine Glasses do. do, do.	3	6
Hock Glasses, ruby bowl, 6s. per doz. .. green bowl	3	0
Tumblers, cut, 3s. 3d.; plain, 2s. 9d. moulded, per doz.	1	6
Plain light Finger-Glasses, taper shape .. per doz.	6	6

Other articles proportionately cheap.
Descriptive Catalogue post-free.

ALFRED B. PEARCE, 39, LUDGATE-HILL. Established 1760.

NOTICE.—SILVER and ELECTRO-PLATE.—ELKINGTON and CO., Manufacturing Silversmiths and Patentees of the Electro-Plate. Revised Illustrated Pattern-Book of New Designs in Table Plate of all kinds, and new qualities in Spoons and Forks, forwarded free by post on application. Testimonial Plate in Solid Silver, in great variety, always in stock; and Committees provided with Designs and Photographs to suit all occasions.

Address—Elkington and Co., 22, Regent-street, London; or 42, Moorgate-street, City.

GARDNER'S DINNER and TABLE GLASS SERVICES. Free, graceful, and original designs, of unequalled value. Dinner Services, from 21s. Table Glass Services, of the best Crystal, for twelve persons, complete, 65s. Cash discount, 15 per cent. Coloured Photographic Sheets and Illustrated Glass Catalogues post-free.

453 and 454, West Strand, Charing-cross.

VISITORS TO LONDON are invited to inspect OETZMANN and CO.'S vast display of ARTISTIC FURNITURE, CARPETS, CURTAINS, PICTURES, CLOCKS, BRONZES, TABLE LAMPS, ELECTRO-PLATE, CUTLERY, DINNER, DESSERT, TEA, and BREAKFAST SERVICES, TABLE GLASS, VASES, and every kind of artistic furnishing items, arranged in separate Show-Rooms. OETZMANN and CO., having purchased largely during the recent depression, are enabled to offer these goods considerably below present value.

OETZMANN and CO.

FURNISH THROUGHOUT.

SUBSTANTIAL ARTISTIC FURNITURE (Regd.)

OETZMANN & CO.,

HAMPSTEAD-ROAD,

NEAR TOTTENHAM-COURT-ROAD.

FURNISH THROUGHOUT.—OETZMANN and CO., 67, 69, 71, 73, 77 and 79, HAMPSTEAD-ROAD, near Tottenham-court-road. Cabinet Factory, Albion Works, Drummond-street; Bedding Factory, Eagle-place, London, N.W. CARPETS, Furniture, Bedding, Drapery, Furnishing Ironmongery, China, Glass, Paper Hangings, Pictures, Bronzes, Clocks, Pianos, &c., and every other requisite for completely furnishing a house throughout. Lowest prices consistent with guaranteed quality.—OETZMANN and CO.

THE "CANTERBURY" EBONIZED CHIPPENDALE DRAWING-ROOM SUITE, SIXTEEN GUINEAS, consisting of a handsome Cabinet, with two bevelled plates in backs, and decorated panel on door; an Octagon Centre Table; Six Chairs and Two Arm-Chairs, with circular cushioned seats, covered in Silk Plush, Roman Satin, or Tapestry. Illustrations post-free on application.

OETZMANN and CO.

THE EASIEST OF EASY-CHAIRS.

OETZMANN and CO.'S Club, Divan, or Dining-Room Easy-Chair, as used in the principal West-End Clubs. The most comfortable Easy-Chair extant, spring seat and back, upholstered very soft and comfortable, all hair, in best morocco leather, and finished in the best manner, 8 guineas. A large stock of Easy-Chairs in the Show-Rooms from 1 guinea upwards.—OETZMANN and CO.

CARPET DEPARTMENT.—Stout Tapestry Brussels Carpet, 1s. 3½d.; handsome pattern ditto, from 1s. 9d. to 2s. 5d. per yard. Good Brussels, new designs, from 2s. 4d. upwards. Good Axminster, from 4s. 9d. Good Wilton, super quality, from 5s. 11d. per yard. These prices are much below value. Kidderminster Carpet, all wool, 1s. 11d. per yard. Patent Rock-Dye Felt Carpeting, handsome designs, double-width, 1s. 9d. per yard. Excellent Stair Carpet, from 6d. per yard; all-wool ditto, 1s. per yard.—OETZMANN and CO.

THE ABBOTSFORD TAPESTRY CURTAINS.—Artistic, Conventional Designs, with double borders and rich decorated dado in Black and Gold, Dull Red, Sage Green, and Peacock Blue in the dead shades of colour so much in vogue; very stout quality; pattern is reversible, requiring no lining; size, 3¼ yards long by 54 in. wide, 37s. 6d. per pair.—OETZMANN and CO.

DOWN QUILTS.—OETZMANN and CO.'S EIDER and ARCTIC Down Quilts and Clothing combine the greatest amount of warmth attainable, with the least possible weight, and are warranted pure. O. and Co. sell only the best make—BOOTH and FOX'S. See Trade Mark on each article. Prices will be found below those usually charged. Reduced Price-Lists post-free.—OETZMANN and CO.

TABLE LAMPS.—OETZMANN and CO. A large assortment of Table, Reading, and other Lamps for the present season in Bronze, Brass, Ormolu, Terra-Cotta, Royal Dresden, and other China, of the newest designs, in great variety, fitted with the improved Duplex, Silber, Moderator, and other burners. Patent Duplex Lamp complete, 10s. 6d. Handsome ditto from 18s. 9d. to 6 guineas.—OETZMANN and CO.

POSTAL ORDER DEPARTMENT. OETZMANN and CO.—Orders sent per post, whether large or small, receive prompt and careful attention. Those residing at a distance, or any to whom a personal visit would be inconvenient, desirous of leaving the selection to the firm, may rely upon a faithful attention to their wishes and interest in the selection. This department is personally supervised by a member of the firm, and O. and Co. continually receive numerous letters expressing the greatest satisfaction with the execution of orders so entrusted. Persons residing in Foreign Countries and the Colonies will find great advantages by entrusting their orders to O. and CO. For further particulars please see page 379 in Catalogue, sent free on application.—OETZMANN and CO.

DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE, post-free.

OETZMANN & CO.,

HAMPSTEAD-ROAD.

D. HULETT.—GASELIERS in CRYSTAL GLASS and ORMOLU or BRONZE. Mediæval Fittings. A large Stock always on View. Every article marked with plain figures.—Manufactory, 55 and 56, High Holborn.

DUPLEX LAMPS.—The New Patterns. The light of twenty-four sperm candles at a cost of less than one farthing per hour; a pure and healthy flame, not injuring the choicest works of art. Engravings post-free.

Drawing-room Lamps, China and Glass, £6, 7s., 63s., £7 3s., 40s. Dining-room Lamps, Bronze and Ormolu, 40s., 35s., 28s., 22s. Cheap Table Lamps, 10s. 6d., 14s. 6d., 18s., 19s. 6d., 22s.

Reduced Rock Oil supplied by Dean and Co., 14d. per gallon. DEANE and CO., 46, King William-st., London-bridge. A.D. 1700.

WILLS' "THREE CASTLES" TOBACCO.
In 1 oz., 2 oz., and 4 oz. Packets, lined with tinfoil.

WILLS' "THREE CASTLES" TOBACCO.

"There's no sweeter Tobacco comes from Virginia, and no better brand than the 'THREE CASTLES.'"—Vide "The Virginians." Only in Packets and Cigarettes, protected by the Name and Trade-Mark.

WILLS, W. D. and H. O.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON,
FOR CONSTIPATION,
BILE,
HEADACHE.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON,
A LAXATIVE AND REFRESHING
FRUIT LOZENGE,
UNIVERSALLY PRESCRIBED BY THE FACULTY.

TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON.
2s. 6d. per Box, stamp included.
Sold by all Chemists and Druggists.
Wholesale—E. GRILLON, 69, Queen-street, London, E.C.

NOTICE.—For PETER ROBINSON'S Court and General Mourning Warehouse.

"REGENT-STREET" is the only one address.

FAMILY BEREAVEMENTS.

UPON RECEIPT OF LETTER OR TELEGRAM, PETER ROBINSON'S Experienced Dressmakers and Milliners Travel to all parts of the COUNTRY, FREE OF EXPENSE to purchasers, with Dresses, Millinery, and a full assortment of made-up Articles of the BEST and most suitable description. Also materials by the Yard, and supplied at the SAME PRICES as if purchased at the Warehouse in Regent-street.

Mourning for Servants at unexceptionably low rates, at a great saving to large or small Families.

Funerals conducted in Town or Country at stated charges.

Address ONLY to 256 to 262, REGENT-STREET, LONDON. PETER ROBINSON'S.

WARM and SEASONABLE DRESSES.

Nancine Cloth, all wool, excellent wear, 1s. per yard.
Vigogne, extra wide (47 inches), beautifully soft, 2s. 9d.
Cachemire, 47 inches wide, 1s. 11d.; well worth 2s. 6d.
English Wool Poplin, 8½d., 1s., and up to 2s. 6d.
Flannel Serge, 1s. 4½d. to 3s. 6d.
Stout, Warm, Charity Homespun, 9½d., 1s., 1s. 2½d.
Damassé, new patterns (Silk and Wool), 2s. 6d.
Indian Cachemire, very soft, light, and warm, 2s. 6d. to 9s. 6d.
Velveteens (rich fast pile), 2s. 11d., 3s. 6d. up to 5s. 11d.
Patterns free.—Address as follows—
PETER ROBINSON, 256 to 262, REGENT-STREET, LONDON, W.

FOR 3 GUINEAS, 3½, 4, AND 5 GUINEAS.

FASHIONABLE, WARM, BLACK COSTUMES, in Indian Cachemire, beautifully warm and soft; Vigogne, Double Cashmere, and Velveteen (fast pile).

FOR 39s. 6d. AND 2½ GUINEAS.

USEFUL BLACK SERGE COSTUMES, well cut and handsomely Trimmed, Braided, &c. Sketches free.
WARM PETTICOATS, 5s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. 6d., 12s. 6d.
Address as follows—
PETER ROBINSON, 256 to 262, REGENT-STREET.

EVENING DRESSES.

A New and very Choice Collection for this Season, at 1 guinea and up to 7 guineas.
Illustrations and Descriptions, with Patterns, sent on application.
Address only to 256 to 262, Regent-street.
PETER ROBINSON'S.

BLACK SILKS.
DURING THIS MONTH,
we shall sell

Messrs. BONNET et CIE. and JAUBERT et CIE.
BLACK SILKS
at Manufacturers' prices,
and Cheaper than they have ever before been supplied.

Bonnet's..	No. 1	Quality, 4s. 3d.	from 1s. 6d. to 4s. per yard under fair value.
..	No. 2	,, 5s. 3d.
..	No. 3	,, 6s. 0d.
..	No. 4	,, 7s. 0d.
Jaubert ..	No. 1	Quality, 3s. 3½d.	from 1s. to 4s. per yard under their fair value.
	No. 2	,, 3s. 11d.
	No. 3	,, 4s. 9d.
	No. 4	,, 5s. 3d.
	No. 5	,, 6s. 0d.

To be obtained only at
PETER ROBINSON'S
REGENT-STREET SHOP,
Nos. 256 to 262, Regent-street.
For Patterns please be careful in the address.

NEW FRENCH MILLINERY.

SPECIAL NOVELTIES IN BONNETS, HATS, CAPS, &c., have been imported from Paris.
Our Show-Rooms were never more attractive than now.
Photographs will be sent by return, on application to
PETER ROBINSON, of REGENT-STREET,
Nos. 256 to 262.

"THE LADIES' GAZETTE OF FASHION" for October, 1880, says:—
The warm reception accorded to the

LOUIS VELVETEEN

in Paris—that City of the fashionable—is enough to ensure it of success, even were its own intrinsic merits of colour, fineness, lightness, and excellent wearing qualities to constitute an insufficient recommendation.

"LOUIS." It was, indeed, a "happy thought" of its manufacturers to stamp it with its own name on every yard, for, having once made a trial of it, we shall not desire to become the purchasers of any other, and there are so many new kinds in the market that there is plenty of competition. Many ladies have adopted the in place of real velvet, for evening wear, and the list of colours in which it is manufactured is so long that every purchaser can suit her own complexion.

LOUIS VELVETEEN,

Ladies are respectfully informed that on and after this date all Louis Velvetees, both "LOUIS." Black and the New Autumn and Winter Colours, have stamped on the back plain instructions for removing all creases, folding-marks, &c., made in conveyance by rail, post, or other causes.

WHOLESALE AGENTS,

who will send on inquiry, post-free, the names of the nearest Drapers from whom the genuine "LOUIS" VELVETEEN can be obtained:—

"LOUIS." J. H. FULLER, 92, Watling-street, London, E.C.
JOHN FREEMAN, 20, Wicklow-street, Dublin.
WILLIAM FIFE, 52, Glassford-street, Glasgow.

INDIAN EMBROIDERY of the most Elegant and Fashionable Designs—viz., Christening Robes, 21s. and 42s. each; Ladies' Handkerchiefs, 35s. and 45s. the half dozen; Babies' Bibs, 20s. the dozen; Children's Frocks, 15s. each; Petticoats, large size, 28s. each; Ladies' Necktics, 29s. the dozen; Children's Capes, 12s. 6d. each; Narrow Edging, 1s. per yard; Ditto, Wide, 3s. 4d. per yard. The above sent post-free to any address in Great Britain, the United States, and Canada. Remittances to be crossed "Agra Bank," and made payable to J. KENYON and CO., 19, Strand, Calcutta, East Indies.

TO LADIES.—THE SHREWSBURY WATERPROOF TWEED CLOAKS, SKIRTS, and JACKETS, in every variety of shape and colour, are supplied by the original Makers, E. W. and W. PHILLIPS, 37, High-street, Shrewsbury. Patterns and Prices on application.

WINTER DRESSES—THE BEST VALUE IN LONDON.—Vecuna Foule Serges, the Fashionable Material for the Season. Price 9½d. per yard. Patterns free.
JOHN HOOPER, 32, Oxford-street, W.

ARRASENE.
A New Material in Silk and Wool,
for Artistic Embroidery.
Can be used also with Crewels and Embroidery Silks.
Can be procured of Berlin Wool Repositories.
Wholesale only, R. G. GEACH, 137, Cheapside.

THE LONDON GLOVE COMPANY'S GLOVES.

Ladies 2 Button Kid Gloves from		6s. 0d.	per half-dozen.
,, 4	,,	8s. 6d.	,,
,, 6	,,	10s. 6d.	,,
Gentlemen's Kid Gloves		6s. 0d.	,,

Single Pairs Sold.
Detailed list of all Makes post-free.
THE LONDON GLOVE COMPANY, 45A, Cheapside, E.C.

AEGIDIUS.—The only non-shrinking Flannel Shirt. Warm as wool, soft as silk, and very elastic. Patterns and self-measure free.
R. FORD, 41, Poultry, London.

PRETTY FLOWERS.—Bridal Bouquets, Bridesmaids' Bouquets, Baskets of Flowers, Funeral Wreaths. Prices on application.
WILLIAM HOOPER, 32, Oxford-street, W.

SUN FIRE OFFICE.
Threadneedle-street, E.C., Charing-cross, Oxford-street (corner of Vere-street), W.
Established 1710.
Home and Foreign Insurances Effected.
Sum insured in 1879, £262,492,461.
FRANCIS B. RELTON, Secretary.

WOOD PAVING.—NOTICE.—Messrs. HARVEY, NICHOLS, and CO. (Limited) respectfully announce that, during the repair of the Knightsbridge-road, Carriages may conveniently set down at their Side Entrance in Charles-street, Lowndes-square: and also in Sloane-street.

AN old and important firm in Bordeaux, having branch establishments in Paris and the colonies requires AGENTS and TRAVELLERS for the sale of wines and spirits. Excellent terms would be made with travellers having an established connection. Useless for any to apply without first-class references.—Address to the Agents, Messrs. MARC and and CO., Bordeaux, France.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

DUC DE MONTEBELLO'S EXTRA CUVÉE CHAMPAGNE.—At the competitive tastings recently held at the Wine and Spirit Exhibition in the Agricultural Hall, 20 samples of the leading brands were tasted by 41 members of the Wine Trade, and the above was adjudicated the FINEST. Calculations checked and vouched for by A. B. INGRAM, Chartered Accountant, 2, Gresham-buildings.

This identical Wine, at 70s. per Doz., can be obtained of T. W. STAPLETON and CO., Wine Merchants, 203, Regent-street, W.

HORNIMAN'S TEA for Forty Years has commanded a large sale, because it can always be relied on for strength, flavour, and cheapness. It is the best tea imported. Sold only in Packets.

GOLD MEDAL, PARIS, 1878.

FRY'S COCOA. FRY'S CARACAS COCOA.
A choice prepared Cocoa, most delicious and valuable article."—Standard.

GUARANTEED PURE.

FRY'S COCOA. FRY'S COCOA EXTRACT.
Pure Cocoa only, the superfluous oil extracted.
J. S. FRY and SONS.

EPPS'S CHOCOLATE ESSENCE.

Product of a special refining process, it is Chocolate devoided of its over richness and substantiality. Sugarless, and, when made, of the consistence of coffee. An afternoon Chocolate. Sold only in packets labelled JAMES EPPS and CO., Homœopathic Chemists, 48, Threadneedle-street, London.

BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR
IS A WORLD-WIDE NECESSARY.

BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR
FOR THE NURSERY.

BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR
FOR THE FAMILY TABLE.

BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR
FOR THE SICK-ROOM.

BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR
HAS A WORLD-WIDE REPUTATION.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT. The Pills purify the blood, correct all disorders of the liver, stomach, kidneys, and bowels. The Ointment is unrivalled in the cure of bad legs, old wounds, gout, and rheumatism.

BLAIR'S GOUT PILLS,
THE GREAT
REMEDY FOR GOUT AND RHEUMATISM.
Sold by all Chemists, at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. per Box.

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES
CURE COUGHS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.
Medical testimony states that no other medicine is so effectual in the cure of these dangerous maladies. One lozenge alone gives ease. They contain no opium nor any violent drug. Sold by all Chemists, in Tins, 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d.

ELECTRICITY IS LIFE.

GALVANISM, NATURE'S CHIEF RESTORER of IMPAIRED VITAL ENERGY.—A PAMPHLET on Self-Applicable Electricity, demonstrating the most effectual, rational, and simple Galvanic Treatment of Nervous and Rheumatic Pains, Debility, Indigestion, Nervousness, Paralysis, Neuralgia, Epilepsy, Cramp, Functional Disorders, &c., as realised exclusively by the use of PULVERMACHER'S IMPROVED PATENT GALVANIC CHAIN-BANDS, BELTS, and SELF-RESTORABLE POCKET BATTERIES, &c. Approved by the Académie de Médecine, Paris; the Royal College of Physicians, London, &c.; substantiated by medical reports and authenticated testimonials, including Sir C. Locock, Bart., M.D., Sir William Fergusson, Bart., Sir J. R. Martin, Bart., M.D., Dr. A. Clark, Physician to the London Hospital. This Pamphlet (sent post-free) treats "why and wherefore" these galvanic arrangements have proved most efficacious, even in cases where other electrical apparatus and ordinary medical treatment have been tried in vain, especially in those ailments resulting from deficiency of Vital Electricity in the affected organs. Apply to

J. PULVERMACHER, GALVANIC ESTABLISHMENT,
194, REGENT-STREET, LONDON, W.

HIS GRACE

THE DUKE OF NORTHUMBERLAND,

a most distinguished authority, when addressing the students of the Newcastle College of Medicine, particularly impressed the following upon their minds:—

"Be patient of NEW ideas and NEW doctrines, prove before you condemn, avail yourselves of NEW discoveries, and recollect it is not HOW, but WHETHER, you CURE your patients."

THE HOLMAN LIVER PAD

is a new application of a very old idea—viz., that of curing disease through the medium of the pores of the skin.

THE HOLMAN LIVER PAD.

is worn upon the pit of the stomach, its healing, purifying, and tonic properties being absorbed therein.

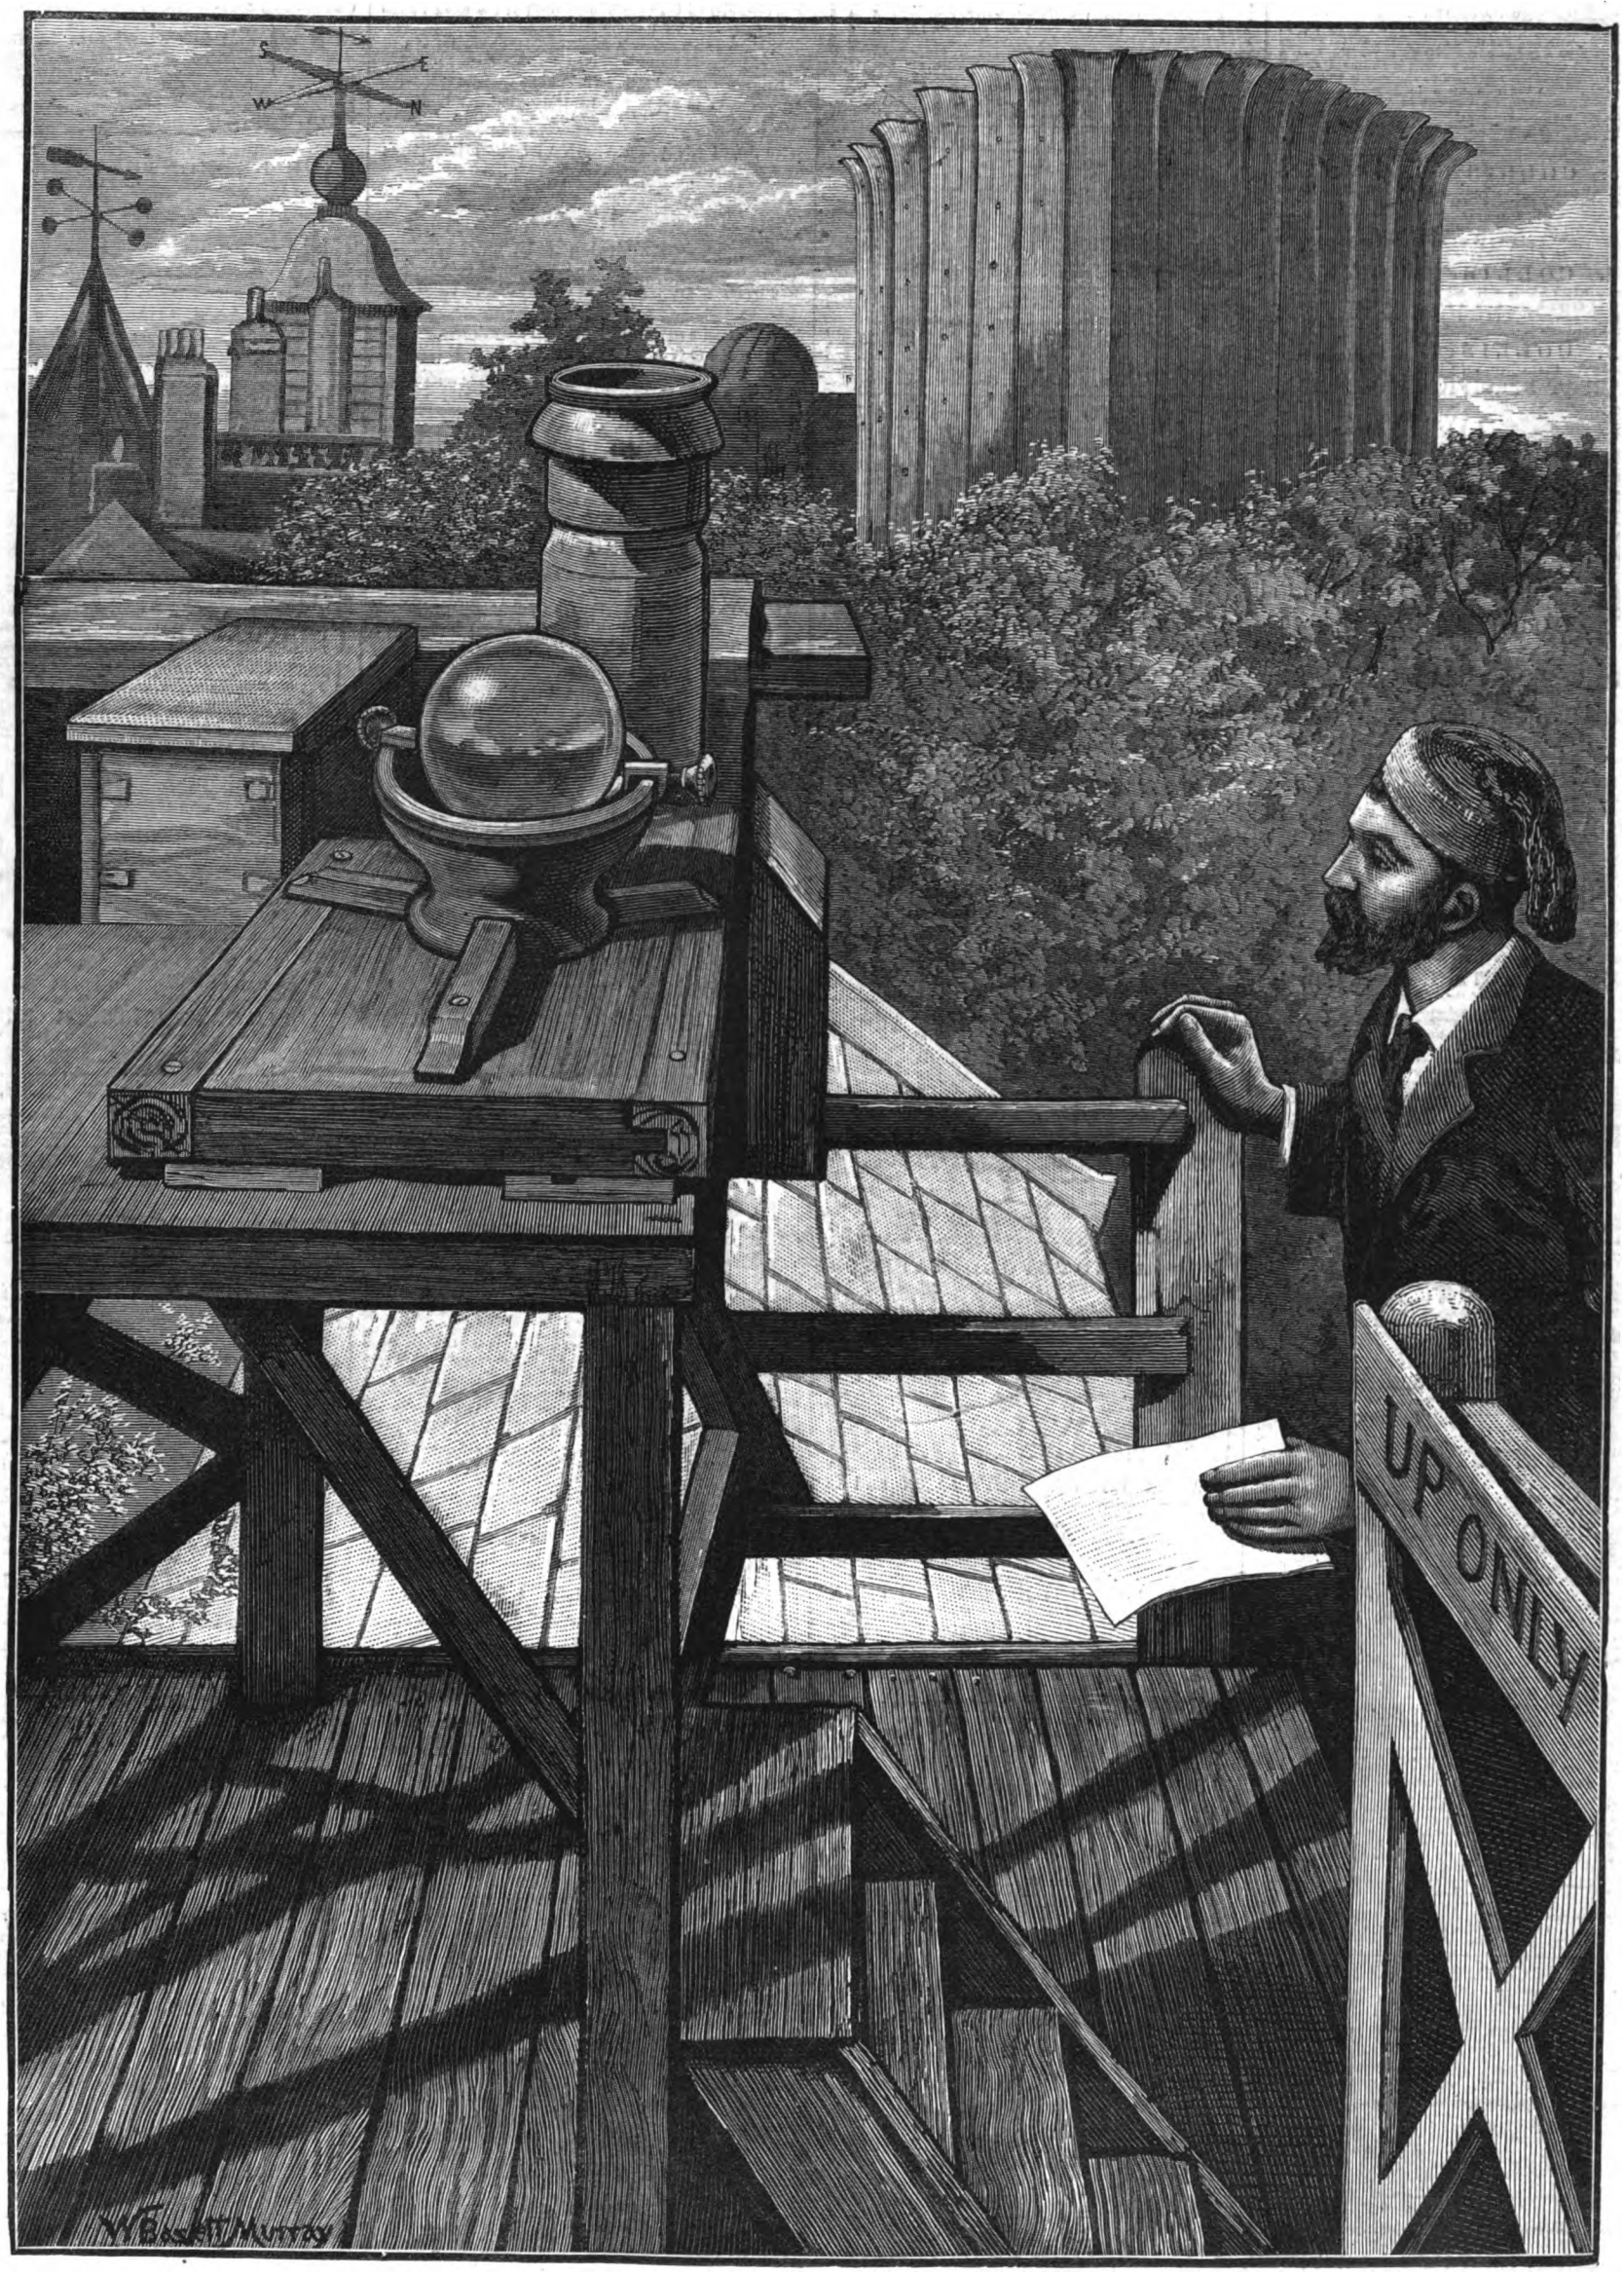
THE HOLMAN LIVER PAD

acts most beneficially upon the liver. We quote from one of our correspondents, who has derived great benefit from the use of the pad:—"My liver now not only never troubles me, but appears to me to act as a medicimer, by a spontaneous passing of superfluous bile."

We submit the following testimonial, and shall be pleased to forward many others, with full information, free by post:—

CAPT. H. C. COTTON writes to a friend as follows:—

"The Hall, Wem, Shropshire.



"I have been staying with a cousin of mine, who was in Norway this autumn, and came back very ill. He consulted all sorts of Physicians, but without effect, when a friend of his said, 'Why don't you try this new treatment by absorption—the Holman Liver Pad?' At first he laughed at the idea; but, being unable to eat or sleep, he thought he might as well try anything likely to do him good. He sent for one of these Pads, and in a few days felt so much better that he could eat anything, and has been perfectly well ever since. He has also persuaded other people to try the Pad, and with the same success. I therefore send you the address of the Proprietor in London of the Holman Pad, and I strongly advise you to try this valuable treatment, which will give you no trouble and requires no medicine."

Children's Pads, 7s. 6d.; regular size, 10s.; special size, 15s. For sale by all Chemists, or sent post-free to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of stamps or P.O. Order, payable to CHARLES CRISTADORO, Vere-street, Post-Office, W.

THE HOLMAN LIVER PAD CO.,
10, Argyll-street, Regent-street, W.
Paris Agency: Beral, 14, Rue de la Paix.

PRATT'S WATER PAD TRUSSES are the
MOST EFFECTUAL CURE FOR RUPTURES.
PRATT'S ELASTIC STOCKINGS,
for VARICOSE VEINS, &c.
J. F. PRATT,
Surgical Mechanician to St. Bartholomew's Hospital,
420, OXFORD-STREET, LONDON.

Digitized by Google

THE ROYAL OBSERVATORY, GREENWICH: MEASURING THE SUNSHINE.—SEE PAGE 459.

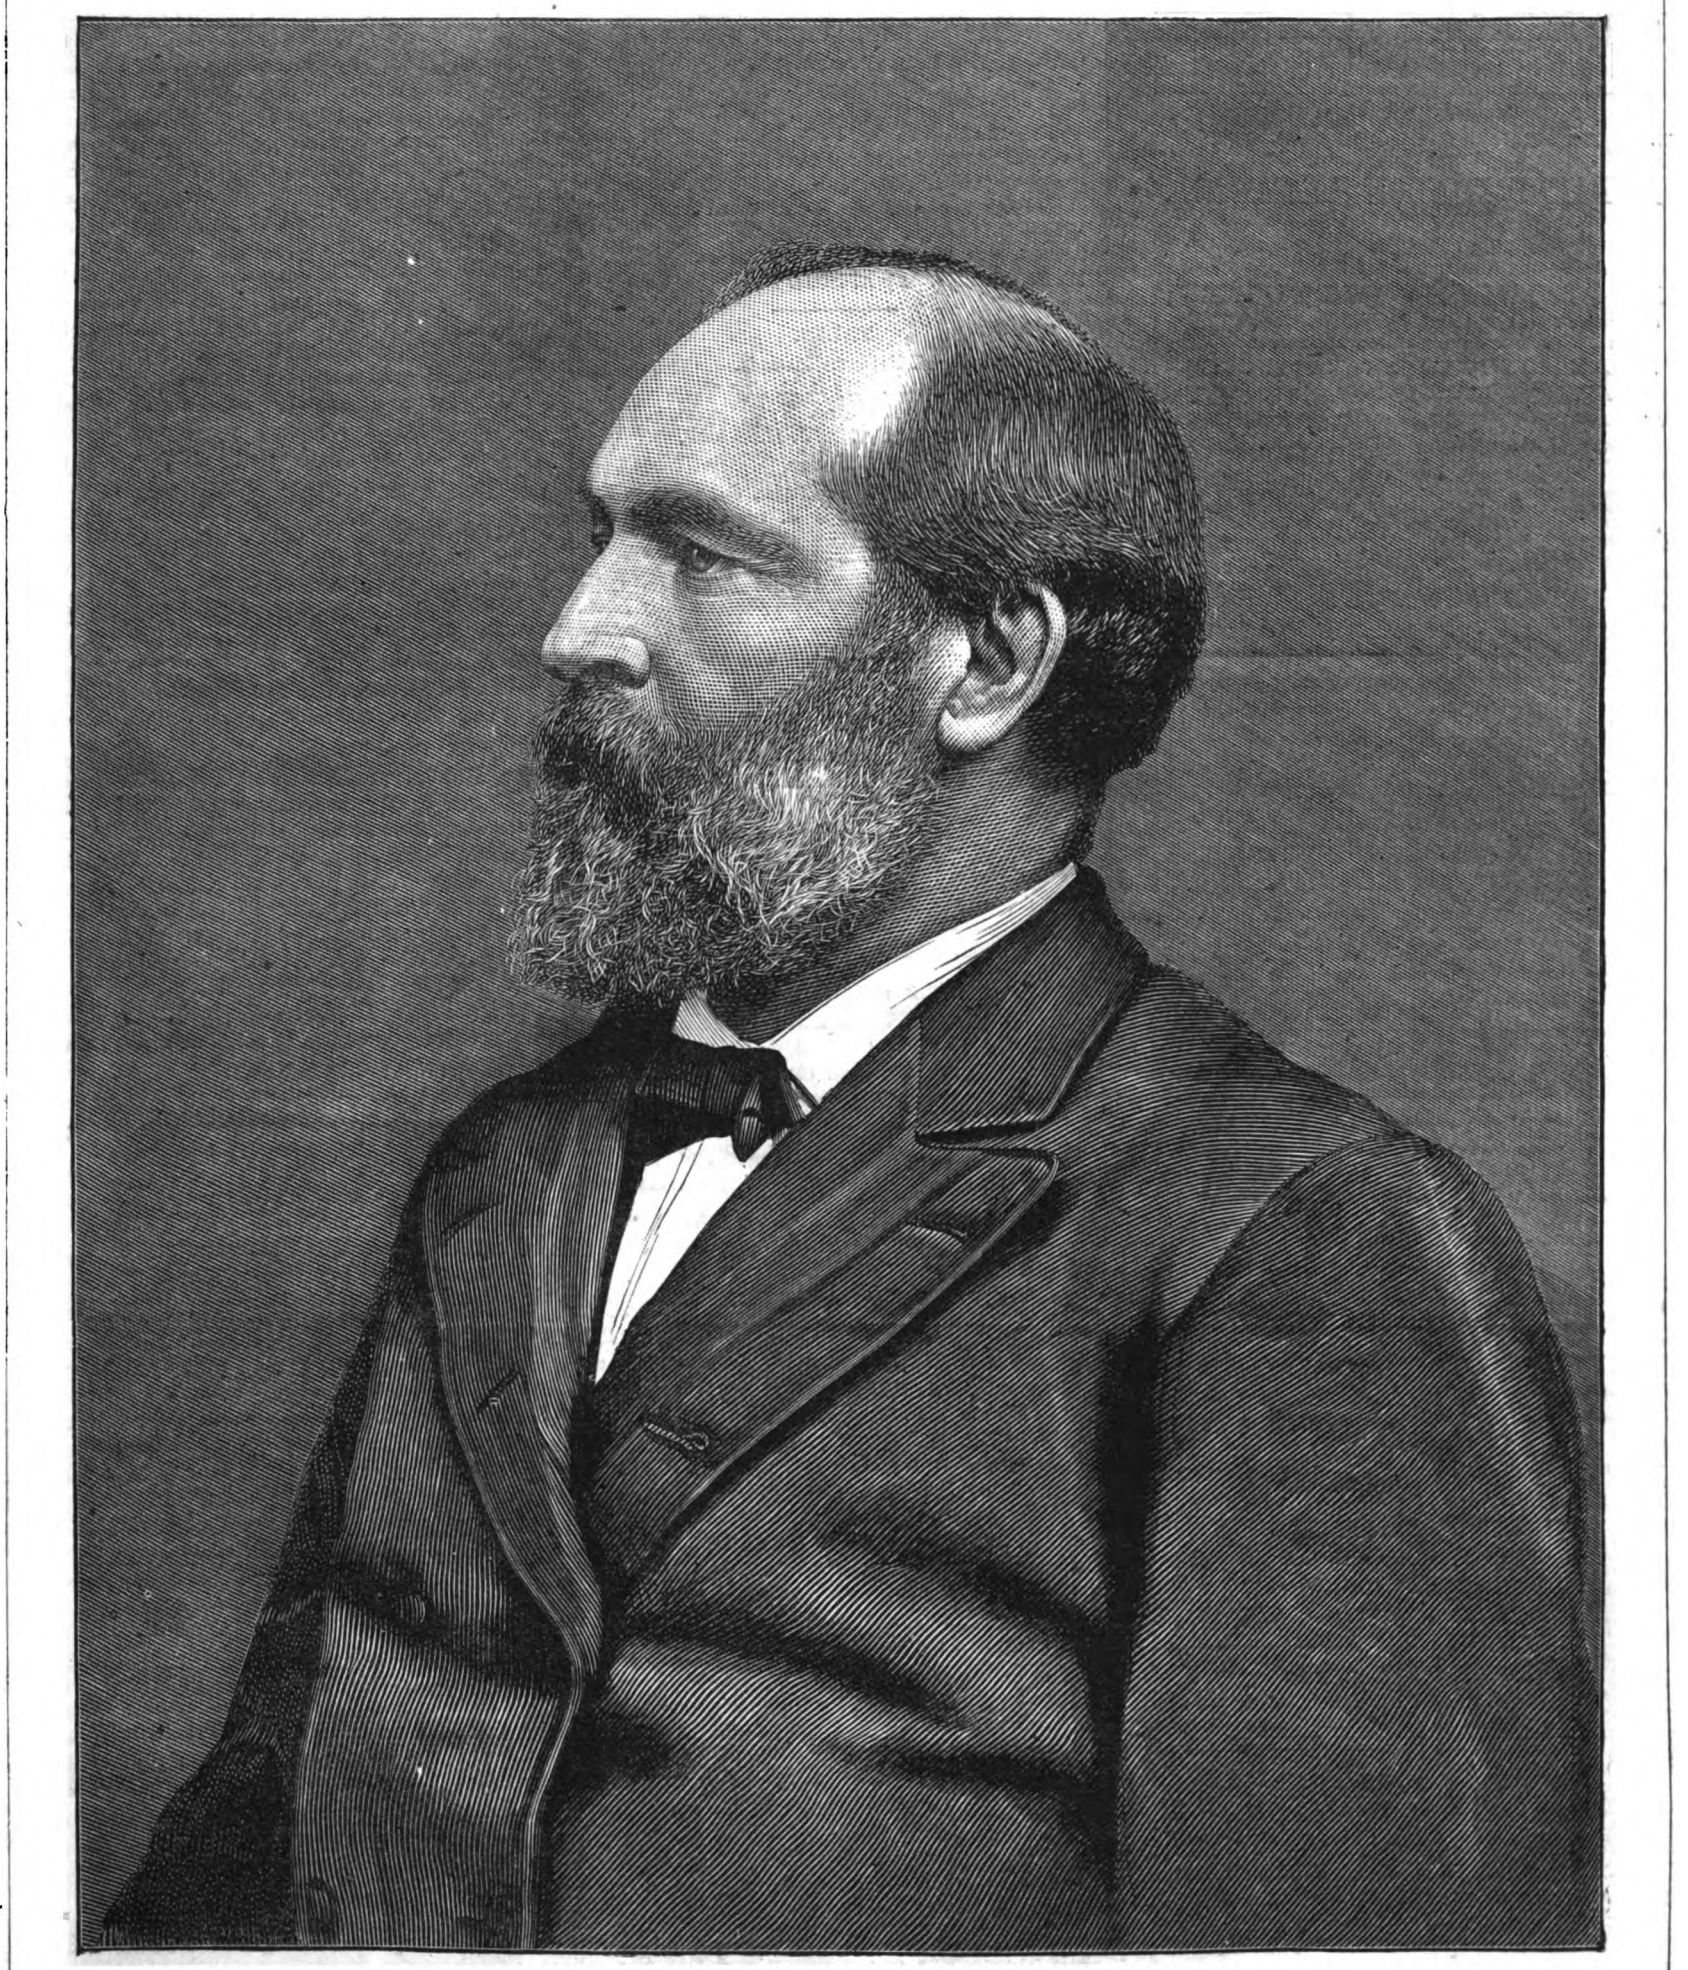
Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

LIFE-BOAT SERVICE ON THE LINCOLNSHI

Digitized by Google

COAST: THROWING THE HAND ROCKET.



Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

REGISTERED AT THE GENERAL POST-OFFICE FOR TRANSMISSION ABROAD.

No. 2163.—VOL. LXXVII. SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1880. WITH TWO SUPPLEMENTS } SIXPENCE. By Post, 6½D.

GENERAL J. A. GARFIELD, THE PRESIDENT ELECT OF THE UNITED STATES.—SEE PAGE 470.

Digitized by Google

BIRTH.

On the 2nd inst., at 4, Upper Grosvenor-street, the Duchess of Roxburghe, of a son.

MARRIAGES.

On Sept. 30, at Trinity Church, Westmorland, Jamaica, by the Rev. J. S. Vaughan, assisted by the Rev. Henry Clarke, Thomas Stewart McNeal, only son of the late Thomas McNeal, of Caledonia, Jamaica, to Fanny Anglin Whitelocke, second daughter of the late Hugh Anthony Whitelocke, of Bulstrode Park, Westmorland, Jamaica.

On the 3rd inst., at St. Mary's, Eastbourne, by the Rev. — Woodward, Edward Longworth Lister, only son of Edward Lister, Esq., of Cefn Ila, Monmouthshire, to Lyda, sixth daughter of Lord Dunsandle and Clanconal, County Galway, Ireland.

On the 2nd inst., at the British Embassy, Paris, by the Rev. Cuningham Geikie, D.D., F. A. R. Isherwood, Esq., to Anna, Countess von Bülow.

On the 4th inst., at St. Thomas's, Marylebone, J. Milner Fothergill, M.D., to Adelaide Beatrice, younger daughter of Wm. H. Hammersley, Esq., of Bridge House, Staffordshire.

On the 5th inst., at St. Peter's Church, South Croydon, by the Rev. F. A. S. Reid-Irving Montagu, of Haverstock-terrace, Hampstead, to Cecilia Laura, daughter of F. A. Borrell, of Croydon.

DEATHS.

On the 5th inst., at Harpole Hall, Northamptonshire, after a very short illness, Elizabeth, the dearly-loved wife of Robert Oldrey, deeply regretted.

On the 6th inst., at Escrick Park, Lord Wenlock, aged 62.

On the 4th inst., at 13, Manson-place, Queen's-gate, General Thomas Brooke, Colonel 28th Regiment, second son of the late Sir Richard Brooke, Baronet, of Norton Priory, Cheshire, aged 64.

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, or Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE
FOR THE WEEK ENDING NOVEMBER 20.

Sunday.		Monday.		Tuesday.		Wednesday.		Thursday.		Friday.		Saturday.
M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A
h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m
—	0 7	0 30	0 50	1 15	1 35	1 53	2 10	2 30	2 47	3 3	3 20	3 37	3 55

NOW READY,
PRICE ONE SHILLING (INLAND POSTAGE, 2½d.),
THE
ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK
FOR
1881,
CONTAINING
SIX COLOURED PICTURES;
PRINTED BY LEIGHTON BROTHERS' CHROMATIC PROCESS,
FROM ORIGINALS BY EMINENT ARTISTS.
TWELVE FINE-ART ENGRAVINGS;
ASTRONOMICAL PHENOMENA;
TWELVE DIAGRAMS OF THE DURATION OF MOONLIGHT;

The Royal Family of Great Britain; the Queen's Household; her Majesty's Ministers; Lists of Public Offices and Officers; Bankers, Law and University Terms; Fixed and Movable Festivals; Anniversaries; Acts of Parliament passed during the Session of 1880; Revenue and Expenditure; Obituary of Eminent Persons; Christian, Jewish, and Mohammedan Calendars; Tables of Stamps, Taxes, and Government Duties; Times of High Water; Post Office Regulations; together with a large amount of useful and valuable information, which has during the past thirty-eight years made the ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK the most acceptable and elegant companion to the Library; whilst it is universally acknowledged to be by far the cheapest Almanack ever published.

The unprecedented demand for the ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK year after year stimulates the Proprietor to still greater exertions to secure for this Almanack a reception as favourable as that which has hitherto placed its circulation second only to that of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

The ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK is inclosed in an elegant cover, printed in colours by the same process as the COLOURED PLATES, and forms a useful and pleasing ornament to the drawing-room table.

The SHILLING ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK is published at the Office of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, 198, Strand, and sold by all Booksellers and Newsvenders.

THE BRIGHTON SEASON.
Frequent Trains from Victoria and London Bridge.
Also Trains in connection from Kensington and Liverpool-street.
Return Tickets, London to Brighton, available for eight days.
Weekly, Fortnightly, and Monthly Tickets, at Cheap Rates.
Available to travel by all Trains between London and Brighton.
Cheap Half-Guinea First Class Day Tickets to Brighton
Every Saturday, from Victoria and London Bridge.
Admitting to the Grand Aquarium and Royal Pavilion.
Cheap First Class Day Tickets to Brighton every Sunday.
From Victoria at 10.45 a.m., and London Bridge at 10.35 a.m.
Pullman Drawing-Room Cars between Victoria and Brighton.
Through Bookings to Brighton from principal Stations
On the Railways in the Northern and Midland districts.
A Special Train for Horses, Carriages, and Servants.
From Victoria to Brighton, at 11.15 a.m. every Weekday.

GRAND AQUARIUM AND PAVILION.—Military and other Concerts EVERY SATURDAY AFTERNOON, for which the above Saturday Cheap Tickets are available.

NEW ROUTE to WEST BRIGHTON by the DIRECT LINE, PRESTON PARK to CLIFTONVILLE.
A Morning Up and Evening Down Fast Train Every Weekday between London Bridge and West Brighton.

PARIS. — SHORTEST, CHEAPEST ROUTE. — Via NEWHAVEN, DIEPPE, and ROUEN.
CHEAP EXPRESS SERVICE Every Week Night—First, Second, and Third Class.
From Victoria 7.50 p.m., and London Bridge 8.0 p.m.
Fares—Single, 33s., 24s., 17s.; Return, 55s., 38s., 30s.
Powerful Paddle-steamers, with excellent cabins, &c.
Trains run alongside Steamers at Newhaven and Dieppe.
SOUTH OF FRANCE, ITALY, SWITZERLAND, &c.—Tourists' Tickets are issued enabling the holder to visit all the principal places of interest.
HAVRE.—Passengers booked through by this route every week night from Victoria and London Bridge as above.

TICKETS and every information at the Brighton Company's West-End General Offices, 28, Regent-circus, Piccadilly; and No. 8, Grand Hotel Buildings, Trafalgar-square; also at the Victoria and London Bridge Stations. (By Order) J. P. KNIGHT, General Manager.

THE SIXTH GRAND ANNUAL FANCY DRESS POLO AND UNITED COUNTIES' HUNT BALL.
The ANNUAL FANCY DRESS POLO AND HUNT BALL, under most noble and distinguished patronage, will be held in the ROYAL PAVILION, BRIGHTON, on WEDNESDAY, NOV. 24, and the GRAND INTERNATIONAL CONCERT in the DOME, on the following day.
The whole suite of rooms in the Pavilion will be elaborately decorated, and a CHAMPAGNE SUPPER of a most recherché description provided.
Vouchers may be obtained from any of the Lady Patronesses, Stewards, or Members of the International Gun and Polo Club, but without the production of a voucher no ticket can, under any circumstances, be issued.
Vouchers will be exchanged for Tickets on Saturday, Nov. 20, and on Monday and Tuesday in the week of the Ball, between One and Five, at the Bedford Hotel.
Ball programmes, showing complete list of Stewards, forwarded on application to the Secretary, 173, Piccadilly, also book containing the list of Members of the International Gun and Polo Club, on receipt of twelve stamps.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry Irving.—THE CORSICAN BROTHERS Every Night at 8.30—Louis and Fabien dei Franchi, Mr. Irving. At 7.30, BYGONES, by A. W. Pinero. Doors open at 7. Special Morning Performances of THE CORSICAN BROTHERS, Saturdays, NOV. 13 20, and Wednesday, Nov. 17, at 2.30. Box Office (Mr. Hurst) open 10 to 5 daily. Seats booked by letter or telegram.

BERLIOZ'S FAUST.—Mr. CHARLES HALLÉ'S performance of Berlioz's Dramatic Legend in four parts, FAUST, on SATURDAY EVENING NEXT, NOV. 20, in ST. JAMES'S HALL. Vocalists: Margaret, Miss Mary Davies; Faust, Mr. Edward Lloyd; Mephistopheles, Mr. Santley; Brander, Mr. Lesaft. Band and Chorus of 300 performers. Conductor, Mr. Charles Hallé. Conductor of the Chorus, Mr. Frantzen. To commence at Eight. Sofa stalls, 10s. 6d.; balcony, 5s.; back of Area, 3s.; Gallery, 1s. Tickets at Chappell and Co.'s, 50, New Bond-street and 15, Poultry; at Austin's, St. James's Hall; and the usual Agents'.

MDLLE. JANOTHA will give a RECITAL of PIANOFORTE MUSIC, in ST. JAMES'S HALL, on WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON, NOV. 24, to commence at Four o'Clock. Sofa Stalls, 7s. 6d.; Balcony, 3s.; Admission, 1s. Tickets at Chappell and Co.'s, 50, New Bond-street, and 15, Poultry; and at Austin's, 2, Piccadilly.

MR. and MRS. GERMAN REED'S ENTERTAINMENT. THE TURQUOISE RING, Mr. Corney Grain's New Musical Sketch, THE HAUNTED ROOM and A FLYING VISIT. Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday Evenings at Eight; Thursday and Saturday Afternoons at Three. Admission, 1s., 2s.; Stalls, 3s. and 5s.—ST. GEORGE'S HALL, Langham-place.

THE CHRISTMAS NUMBER
OF
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS,
1880
WILL CONTAIN
A LARGE COLOURED PICTURE, ENTITLED
"IN WONDERLAND,"
From a Painting by FRANK HOLL, A.R.A.;

With a Seasonable Article by GEORGE AUGUSTUS SALA;
AND
FOUR COLOURED ILLUSTRATIONS:
FIRST STEPS, THE EVENING PARTY, ROSES AND LILIES, by KATE GREENAWAY;
And THE FANCY-DRESS BALL, by HARRY FURNISS.

ENGRAVINGS.
Catarina. By Luke Fildes, A.R.A.
Winter. By L. Rossi.
The Rival Suitors (Two Pages). By F. Barnard.
The Vicar's Daughters. By A. Hunt.
In Sight of Home on Christmas Morning. By A. Emslie.
Games for Old and Young. By G. Cruikshank.
Hark! the Herald Angels Sing. By A. Hunt.
Woodleigh Grange. By S. Read.
The Careless Nurse. By M. E. Edwards.
Dick's Dilemma. By A. Hunt.

TALES.
Fernande. By M. Betham-Edwards.
At the Twelfth Hour. By R. E. Francillon.
The Little Town by the Seine. By Katharine S. Macquoid.
Margaret Donnan. By Mrs. J. H. Riddell.

AND VERSES
By William C. Bennett, Savile Clarke, John Latey, Edward Rose, Clement Scott, George R. Sims, J. Ashby-Sterry, Byron Webber, and others.

The whole will be inclosed in a Handsome Coloured Wrapper, and published apart from the Ordinary Issue.

Price One Shilling: Postage Threepence.

TO ENSURE A SUPPLY, ORDERS SHOULD BE GIVEN AT ONCE.

No more Advertisements for this Christmas Number can be received.

OFFICE, 198, STRAND, W.C.

THE SIXTEENTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION of WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS is NOW OPEN, at THOMAS McLEAN'S GALLERY, 7, Haymarket, next the Theatre. Admission, including Catalogue, One Shilling.

DORÉ'S GREAT WORKS.—"ECCE HOMO" ("Full of divine dignity."—The Times) and "THE ASCENSION;" "CHRIST LEAVING THE PRETORIUM;" "CHRIST ENTERING JERUSALEM," with all his other Great Pictures.—DORÉ GALLERY, 35, New Bond-street. Daily, 10 to 6. 1s.

ARTHUR TOOTH and SON'S ANNUAL WINTER EXHIBITION of high-class PICTURES, by British and Foreign Artists, is NOW OPEN at 5, Haymarket, opposite Her Majesty's Theatre. Admission, One Shilling, including Catalogue.

THOROUGH CHANGE OF PERFORMANCE
ST. JAMES'S HALL, PICCADILLY.
THE NEW PROGRAMME PRESENTED BY
THE MOORE and BURGESS MINSTRELS
on the 1st inst. having been received with the warmest marks of approbation BY CROWDED AUDIENCES EVERY NIGHT DURING THE PAST WEEK, will be repeated
EVERY NIGHT, at EIGHT, and on MONDAY, WEDNESDAY, and SATURDAY, at THREE and EIGHT.
The new Songs and the new Musical and Terpsichorean Sketch entitled,
THE OLD KENTUCKY HOME,
have proved the greatest successes of the season.
The inimitable MOORE, together with the powerful phalanx of Comedians, Charles Sutton, Walter Howard, John Rouble, Sully, Cheevers, Ernest Linden, all take part in the New Programme.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON: SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1880.

England, not to say Europe, is just now rounding a point, supposed to command the approaches to several great issues. Not one of the Great Powers but has upon its hands some question of vital importance to the development of its future interests. Each of them is intent upon some problem, or problems, the solution of which, within the next few months, will greatly alter the tone and direction of its history. France, Germany, Austria, Italy, Russia, and, we may add, Turkey, are passing, like the United Kingdom, a crisis unusually solemn in its aspect, and far reaching in its effects; while, in the Western Hemisphere, the American Republic, by its election of a new President, promises to enter upon a fresh career of political activity. It is an imposing spectacle—one which asks to be contemplated with calm impartiality—one that suggests many deep reflections and needs to be studied without disturbance from party passions. "The ends of the world," it is true, have not come upon us. There are no obvious signs, as yet, of a general political cataclysm. Public affairs a hundred years hence will probably present to our posterity many of the salient features which it now presents to us, modified, of course, by some changes, but essentially the same as those of our own times. Meanwhile, however, it cannot be denied that many of the questions which are now pressing upon the minds of statesmen for practical treatment are of urgent importance.

The reassembling of the French Chambers, on Tuesday, will probably initiate a long period of vehement and stormy discussion. The March decrees for the dispersion of unauthorised religious houses have been put into execution during the late recess, rather with a view, we suspect, to immediate and party ends, than to the permanent stability of Republican institutions. The question dealt with by the French Government is a wide one, involving abstract principles about which, no doubt, much may be said on both sides. It is almost impossible to draw rigid conclusions without taking into consideration past and passing circumstances. Liberty of conscience has now come to be recognised as a political axiom in Europe, but the precise limitations under which it may be applied depend upon other considerations besides those evolved from its own impulses. Into this sphere of investigation, however, we refrain from intruding, for the present. It may be sufficient to judge what has been done upon mere grounds of political expediency. Public opinion in Europe does not appear to regard the Crusade of the present French Government against unauthorised religious houses as a policy justified by State necessity. It has been carried out with some tact and with unwavering determination. It has been followed by no irresistible outburst of popular reprobation. It will possibly prove to be an irreversible step. It has brought about, in an over hasty fashion, results which might have been safely left to the natural action of many indirect destructive agencies. But it has put the Republican Government into a false position—a position to which the old adage applies, "Qui s'excuse s'accuse." It will tend, in the long run, to throw the sympathies of no inconsiderable section of the French people into the moral support of that very Clericalism which it was meant to weaken. It will not satisfy the section of the Extreme Left. It will probably increase their demands upon the Government, and it will prolong, as well as intensify, that antagonism between the authority of the Church and of the State which runs through and divides the entire French community. There are questions enough yet unsettled in France which might opportunely employ the energies of the French Government. These have unwisely been set aside in order to make room for more purely controversial struggles; and should the solidity of Republican institutions be seriously shaken at the next General Election, the deplorable event will be owing, in great part, to the course recently pursued by the Government of M. Jules Ferry.

Nor is the German Empire, under the guiding authority of Prince Bismarck, in a state which will warrant all freedom from anxiety as to her future. The great statesman has gained no credit by the contest he has waged with the authority of Rome, and he is now venturing upon a new and even a more dangerous experiment. He is studying the condition of the working classes in that country, with a view to bring them under some system which may largely alienate, if it cannot extirpate, the miseries to which they are exposed. It would be premature to conclude that it is impossible to organise that class of the German people upon a better basis than that of Trade Unionism in this country. The attempt, however, is full of peril. It will, in all probability, quicken aspirations and encourage hopes which it cannot satisfy. It can hardly be placed upon a secure footing without sensibly trenching upon the domain of civil and personal liberty. No attempt of the kind, hitherto, has succeeded; and every failure, whether in the Old or the New World, has rendered it more difficult to raise the Working Classes by means of artificial combinations presided over by State authority.

What shall we say of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland? It, too, is passing through a crisis, both as to foreign policy and as to domestic affairs. It has been our lot to speak of both repeatedly in these columns. There is no material change of facts to note, notwithstanding all that was said at the Lord Mayor's Dinner, and it is by facts that National Policy is ultimately shaped. For our part, we do not despair. We have seen much more menacing times than those we have now under review—greater perils abroad, more severe embarrassments at home. But the policy that we now require should be germinant, or, in other words, it should look for the realisation of its aims rather in the future than in the present. What it does within the next few months it should do, not for the mere gratification of this or that class of her Majesty's subjects, but for the progressive benefit of all classes. Not primarily loyalty to a creed, or fidelity to a party tradition, but an adaptation of laws to incontestable facts, should be the aim of the statesmen to whom has been committed in trust the management of our public affairs. They are called upon to act, in the name and on the behalf of the British Empire, not only with a watchful eye to its immediate interests, but with a comprehensive regard to its ulterior destinies.

Mr. R. N. Fowler, M.P., and Mr. H. Waterlow, the new Sheriffs of London and Middlesex, gave their opening banquet yesterday week at Stationers' Hall.

Digitized by Google

ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

"Peace! Peace!" were the last words of the illustrious patriot, Lucius Cary Lord Falkland, as he was borne, expiring, from the battle-field of Newbury. To my humble thinking, it is ample time that a cheerful Treaty of Peace were concluded between the Press, as representative of Public Opinion, and the City Lands Committee of the Corporation of London in the matter of the Temple-Bar "Memorial." For the sake of Peace, I am quite prepared to accept the Memorial as a sweet boon and an architectural and statuesque ornament to the metropolis. We have lost the Lion that used to wag his tail on the summit of the defunct Northumberland House (he wags it still, it is to be hoped, at Isleworth); let us be grateful for the Griffin—I beg pardon, the Dragon—in Fleet-street.

It is clear that the press—to say nothing of the distinguished architect of the New Law Courts—have been completely worsted by the wire-pullers of the Corporation; and the best thing that the journals can do is to withdraw, while there is yet time, with dignity from the strife. You remember how, under somewhat analogous circumstances, Sir Christopher Wren was utterly routed and discomfited by the Commissioners for rebuilding St. Paul's Cathedral. The Commissioners wished the sky-line of the magnificent basilica to be surmounted by a balustrade. Sir Christopher was strongly opposed to any such excrescence as the one proposed. But in the end the Commissioners triumphed, and the great architect endured the "snub contumelious." "Ladies," he observed disdainfully, "think nothing complete without an edging. Let them have their balustrade."

Besides: the public have another cause for gratitude. It is only a Griffin—I mean a Dragon—that has been hoisted up to his equivocal eminence in Fleet-street. Consider this. It might have been a Wangdoodlum, or a Bonassus, or the Great Rypophagon, or even that dread Californian monster the Prox. Did you ever hear of the Prox? It is a beast exceptionally endowed with the faculty of raising its three legs on one side simultaneously, so as to enable it, with greater facility, to run with the other three along the sandhills of the Golden State. Take him for all in all, I consider Mr. Birch, A.R.A., to be a very merciful sculptor. He has only capped the Memorial with a diverting hybrid—"an amoosin' cuss," as poor Artemus Ward used to say—whereas he might have afflicted us and frightened all the female bookbinders and folders from the courts behind Fleet-street out of their wits with a counterfeit presentment of the Awful Rumtifoozle himself—that fearsome monster from the Wilds of Africa, "two of which came over in three ships," which has two thousand spots on his body, no two alike, which "grows a hinch and a 'arf every hanimal year, and has never yet come to his full growth."

Finally, good manners should warn us to cease from girding at the Memorial. It has been inaugurated by Royalty; and we have now the authority of H.R.H. Prince Leopold for saying that the proportions of Mr. Horace Jones's structure are "handsome," and that the erection is fully worthy of public admiration. The best plan to adopt by those who have been "convinced against their will," and are of "the same opinion still," is, if the disagreeable topic be mentioned in a mixed company, to follow Lord Chesterfield's advice. "Bow, and change the conversation."

Mr. Samuel Carter Hall has retired from the editorship of the Art-Journal (formerly the Art-Union), having held that post for forty-two years; and he has published some very touching valedictory words in taking farewell of his readers. Forty-two years of Art-Journal editorship! From 1839 to 1880. The period covers nearly all the years of her Majesty's reign; and I suppose that, nationally, Art was never at a lower ebb than it was when Queen Victoria ascended the throne. Benjamin Robert Haydon was vainly importuning the Government to establish Schools of Design, and was being icily repulsed by the Duke of Wellington and Sir Robert Peel; the National Gallery was little more than an embryo. South Kensington was undreamt of. We made about the ugliest earthenware, glass-ware, carpets, curtains, and paper-hangings possible to conceive; and the art-studies of English womankind were of the most ridiculously restricted nature. Do you remember that well-meaning but deleterious creature, the drawing master to ladies' boarding schools? For full three weeks before the Midsummer and Christmas holidays he used to be almost incessantly occupied in "touching up" the feeble little landscapes in black lead pencil, the smudgy "flower pieces," the lumbering heads in chalk "from the antique" (the Apollo Belvedere usually looked like a sweep, and Pallas Athené like a fireman) executed by his fair pupils, whose parents, when they inspected their daughters' drawings, were really surveying those of the drawing master. He was a "Dear old Thing;" but he was a "Fraud" nevertheless. Is he quite extinct, I wonder?

Mr. S. C. Hall is perfectly justified in the complacency with which, in his valedictory address, he remarks, "I do not think the history of literature supplies a parallel case—that of an editor commencing a publication, continuing to edit it during forty-two years, and retiring from it when it had attained vigorous age, its value augmented and not deteriorated by time." Indeed, a glance at Mr. S. C. Hall's own literary "record" will prove his to have been one of the longest and brightest in English journalism. Fifty-three years ago he established the annual called The Amulet. Fifty years ago he succeeded the poet Campbell as editor of the New Monthly Magazine; and, apart from his continuous literary and journalistic labours, he has been instrumental in founding many excellent London charities, such as the Hospital for Consumption, the Governess's Institution, and the Pensioners' Employment Fund.

The following anonymous communication has reached me:—

G. A. S. can scarcely be more distressed at the imprisonment of a clergyman for a spiritual offence than are the whole Council of the Church Association. If G. A. S. would, therefore, use his pen to procure such an alteration of the law that clergymen who have contracted to teach one set of doctrines, and actually by word and action teach the very opposite, shall have their contract annulled, and be dismissed, he would earn the thanks of the community.

But I have no ambition to earn the thanks, or, much more probably, the furious animadversions of this or that section of the community by mixing myself up in a matter which does not concern me. Doctrinally, I have nothing whatever to do with this sorry litigation. Still, one cannot be a dumb dog when harsh things are done; and it was within my province, as a mere spectator of things as they go, to say that I was sorry to see a clergyman who had not done any shameful thing incarcerated in a criminal gaol. And I am as sorry for the Rev. Pelham Dale as ever; and I hope he will get out of prison quickly.

Has it occurred to anybody interested in education or in the management of juveniles that there seems to be something of the nature of an epidemic just now among schoolteachers for cuffing, buffeting, and punching small children about the head? I have counted no less than seven cases during the last fortnight in which schoolmasters guilty of this peculiarly brutal offence have been summoned for assault. The two most recent and most flagrant ones are reported, first, from the Durham City Sessions, where a schoolmaster was fined five pounds for not only thrashing a little truant of twelve years with a cane, but also blackening his eyes with blows from his fist. The child became ill through this violence, and the Bench said that the defendant's conduct was "brutal and disgraceful."

The last case was at Bradford, where the head teacher of a Board School was fined twenty shillings and costs for striking a girl nine years of age several blows on the side of her head with his fist; the result being that the poor little thing was confined to the house for several days, suffering from incipient concussion of the brain. Leaving the question of the expediency or otherwise of corporal punishment in schools entirely out of the question, is it right, is it tolerable, that brawny adults, seemingly of savage disposition, should be allowed to maul young children about the head with their fists, at the very possible risk of bringing on vertigo, deafness, or even concussion of the brain? Surely, even such a fine as five pounds does not meet the gravity of the misdeed. These acts of ferocity should be treated as aggravated assaults, punishable with imprisonment and hard labour, without the option of a fine. You may object that such a punishment for a person who has "only lost his temper" would permanently degrade him in his position as a schoolmaster. I answer that a man who bangs the skulls and blackens the eyes of small children has no right to be a schoolmaster at all. He should turn professor of boxing or wrestling. I do not say that the profession of a waggoner or a cab-driver would suit him, because, in that case, he would probably ill-treat his horse.

I remember the Hon. Grantley Berkeley saying, many years ago, that, as a rule, he objected to Game Law prosecutions, and that the best way to deal with a poacher was to give him "a punch on the head." School teachers may hold the same opinion regarding little boys and girls. After all, stupidity quite as much as savagery is at the bottom of this system of "head-punching." "A smack on the chops," "a spank by the side of the head," a "cuff over the mazzard," a "box on the ear," a "clout of the pate," are all immemorially ancestral English terms. There is scarcely among the Latin races a precise equivalent for the very old British threat of "I'll break your head for you." In the Paston Letters (those priceless pictures of mediæval manners) a young lady is mentioned whose speedy marriage is mercifully counselled, seeing that her mother has twice beaten her in the course of one week, and "broken her head" into the bargain. We have always been a remarkable people. It was very well, perhaps, for Captain Fluellen to break Antient Pistol's head; but the schoolmaster at Bradford was not a Welshman, and the little girl whose head he "whacked" had not, presumably, said anything derogatory to the fair fame of the Principality.

Mr. James Russell Lowell, the American Minister, has delivered a thoughtfully eloquent address at a dinner of the directors of the Edinburgh Philosophical Institution, on the genius and literary influence of Thomas Carlyle. It is especially interesting to learn from Mr. Lowell's discourse that while he was at college the perusal of "Sartor Resartus" (which was republished in the United States so far back as 1836) "produced in his young mind as great a ferment as it did among all his contemporaries." He further mentioned that the Chairman of the Edinburgh Philosophical Institution had told him in the course of the evening that when "Sartor Resartus" began to appear in the columns of Fraser's Magazine the Editor received two letters, one from an Irishman, saying that if that particular kind of "stuff" was to be continued he would wish his subscription to be stopped. The other letter was from an American, saying that if the writer in Fraser had written anything else he would wish it all to be sent to him! The second writer was a man whom Mr. Lowell knew very well—Mr. Ralph Waldo Emerson, indeed.

Still I am unable implicitly to accept the nationality of the gentleman who qualified "Sartor Resartus" as "stuff." When Mr. Carlyle was writing those weird papers in Fraser two of the most brilliant Irishmen of the century were constant contributors, under the pseudonyms of "Father Prout" and "Sir Morgan O'Doherty," to the magazine edited by "Oliver Yorke." Would a true Irishman be content to part with such delightful company as that of Francis Mahony and William Maginn merely because he thought the lucubrations of Professor Teufelsdreckh, of the University of Weissnichtwo, to be "stuff." Surely he could have skipped it.

It is not always the lot of genius and learning, wisdom and humour, to command immediate popularity. The first monthly numbers of "Vanity Fair" hung fire mournfully; and when Mr. Thackeray had become famous, and eighty thousand readers dwelt monthly on his slightest utterances, he owned to me that those readers failed to appreciate as they should have done the late Mr. George H. Lewes' admirable "Studies in Animal Life." Later, Mr. Ruskin's "Unto This Last" raised quite a ferment of discontent among the subscribers. I am always reminded, in cases of Wisdom crying in the wilderness and no man regarding it, of the story of the illustrious Dr. Jenner narrowly escaping being blackballed at a convivial club in the provinces, and only being admitted on his entering into a solemn undertaking not to say, at any time, anything about Vaccination. In point of humour this story runs parallel with that of the old Westmorland dame, who remarked that "Mr. Wordsworth, the stamp distributor, was a' vera weel, when he was not gangin' aboot booin' his pottery." For "pottery" read poetry.

This is for "Rinaldo," and other students of Tasso. "P. J. A." writes from Inverness that there are more English versions of the "Gerusalemme Liberata" than are dreamt of in Rinaldo's philosophy. He names Carew (1594), Brooke (1738), Hooke (1738), Bent (1856), and an anonymous version published in 1774. But why so few, if any, in the whole course of the seventeenth century? "P. J. A." kindly adds that information touching the English versions of Tasso is to be found in the Quarterly Review, XXXIV., p. 1; in the Westminster Review, VI., p. 404; and in the Retrospective Review, III., p. 32. "P. J. A." can only further suggest that "Rinaldo" should carefully examine all the catalogues of the secondhand booksellers, of whom a list is given in Power's "Book about Books."

I daresay. That way lie bankruptcy and despair. The secondhand booksellers are good enough to send me their catalogues by the score, every month; by the hundredweight, so to speak, every year. Those who govern me (under the crafty pretext of my governing them) keep these catalogues from me, to as great extent as they possibly can. They say that the catalogues are only circulars—such as touching pronunciamientos in favour of the "Vino Cockalorum" (a Natural Sherry), or the announcement of Messrs. Tag, Ragg, and Bobtail's "Latest Autumnal Novelties" in mantles and jackets. My administrators know that if I get hold of the catalogues I am a lost man. They are wonderfully good reading to begin with; and you gloat over the rare books and scarce editions enumerated just as the ladies gloat over the diamonds and emeralds in Mr. Benson's shop window in Bond-street.

And the prices seem so moderate, too! Only four pounds ten for a copy of Ackermann's "Microcosm of London." An invaluable work. Only twelve guineas for a tall copy, large paper, uncut, of the "Decameron," five volumes, full of lovely line engravings; only five-and-twenty shillings for the first edition of Leigh Hunt's "Jar of Honey from Mount Hybla," with its two score delicious little vignettes by "Dicky" Doyle. You begin to think about how much ready money you have. Then you ask yourself whether it is absolutely necessary to settle with the confiding gas-fitter or the ingenious tradesman who framed and hung those last proofs before letters for you. "Let Gerridge wait; and who ever heard of a frame-maker being paid until he most desperately duns for his account?" Thus the Evil Counseller. "Pay up, like a man," interposes Conscience. Gerridge has a wife and six young fishtail-burners to maintain; and the frame-maker made a wofully bad debt lately through young Aureolin Sparkle Smudge, who, disgusted at the unanimous refusal of the Council of the Royal Academy, the Proprietor of the Grosvenor Gallery, the Committees of the Dudley Gallery and the Society of British Artists (I will say nothing about an organised conspiracy against Smudge on the part of the art-patrons and the picture-dealers), went off last month to British Columbia with all his pictures and all their unpaid-for frames. Secondhand booksellers' catalogues had best be kept away from indigent men of letters greedy to add to their shelves.

Mr. Burnand, whose spirited and vivacious editorship of Punch has quite transformed the face of that always pictorially excellent, but of late years somewhat (in a literary sense) solemn periodical, seems to be slightly exercised over the origin of the line "the Dead Travel Fast," used by Mr. Irving as Fabien de' Franchi in the last act of the "Corsican Brothers." A paragraph in Notes and Queries, commenting on Mr. Burnand's perplexity, states that in "another version" of the "Corsican Brothers," produced in 1852, Fabien says to Chateau Renaud, "You forget the ballad of Bürger, Monsieur, 'The Dead Travel Fast.'" But, asks Mr. Burnand, this week, commenting on the Notes and Queries paragraph, whose was the other version? I gravely suspect that it was mine own; and my suspicion is strengthened by the circumstance that, some time before my brother and I translated "Les Frères Corses" for the Surrey, I had made a number of tiny drawings on wood illustrative of each and every stanza of "Lenore," for the version of Bürger's ballad, by Albert Smith, in a collection called "A Bowl of Punch," published by Mr. David Bogue, of Fleet-street.

I am unable, at this moment, to put my hand on Sir Walter Scott's version of "Lenore;" but in Albert Smith's rendering the expression runs—

> Dearest! Dost Fear? The Moon is High!
> Hurrah! the Dead can Swiftly Fly!
> Dost Fear the Dead, My own Love!
> Ah! leave the Dead alone, Love.

On the other hand, it is extremely probable (if "the other version" is mine) that I merely translated the French text "Les Morts vont vite." No lettered Frenchman would say "Les Morts voyagent vite"—the Dead travel fast—when he had in "Les Morts vont vite" a thoroughly French locution, which was possibly popular in France long before Bürger's ghastly ballad was written.

G. A. S.

Digitized by Google

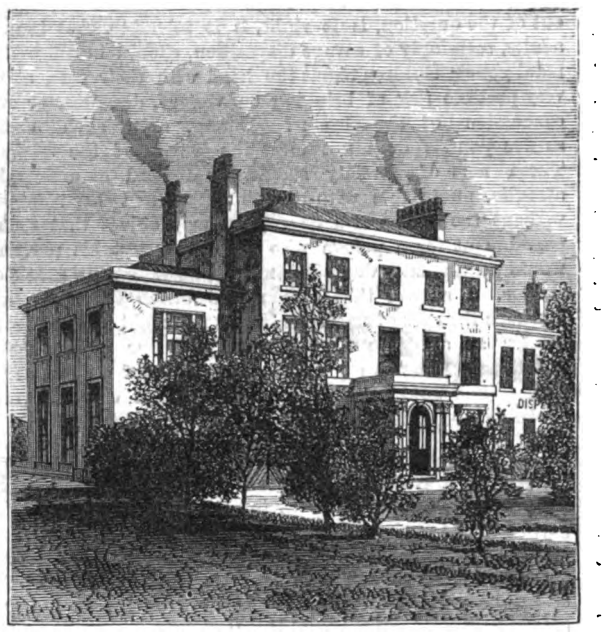
OFFICERS KILLED AT MAIWAND.

The defeat of General Burrows by the Afghans, on July 27, at Maiwand or Khushk-i-Nakhud, forty miles west of Candahar, cost the lives of many brave English officers and soldiers. Portraits of three of these appear in this week's publication.

Lieutenant-Colonel James Galbraith, commanding the 66th Regiment, was fifth son of the late Mr. James Galbraith, of Clanabogan, County Tyrone, Ireland. He was born in 1833, entered the Army as Ensign in that regiment in 1851, and became Captain in 1856, Major in 1869, and Brevet-Lieutenant-Colonel in 1877. He was highly esteemed and much liked by men of all ranks in the service. A brother officer, Major Oliver, writing from Candahar on Sept. 13, has borne testimony to the gallant behaviour of Colonel Galbraith in the action where he fell. His body was afterwards found on the spot, with a number of his men around him; they seem to have been charged by the enemy on three sides, and none of them escaped. Colonel Galbraith was unmarried. He was a large landed proprietor in Galway, and a magistrate, and had been High Sheriff of that county.

Captain Ernest Stephen Garratt, of the 66th, was son of the Rev. Samuel Garratt, Vicar of St. Margaret's, Ipswich. He was thirty-five years of age; he entered the Army in June, 1865, and became Lieutenant in July, 1867, and Captain in March, 1870.

Lieutenant Thomas Rice Henn, of the Royal Engineers, who had also been acting as Brigade Major on the staff, was a son of Mr. Thomas Rice Henn, Q.C., of Paradise Hill, county Clare, by Jane Isabella, second daughter of the late Right Hon. Francis Blackburn, and was born about the year 1850. He entered the corps of Royal Engineers in July, 1869, and had for some time been officiating Quartermaster at Kirkee of the Bombay Sappers and Miners. In the battle of Maiwand, he commanded the small detachment of Sappers, forty in number, being the only officer with them. They were in the thickest of the fight, and thirty of them fell dead on the field, while nine others were wounded, only one escaping unhurt. The conduct of Lieutenant Henn is described as heroic.

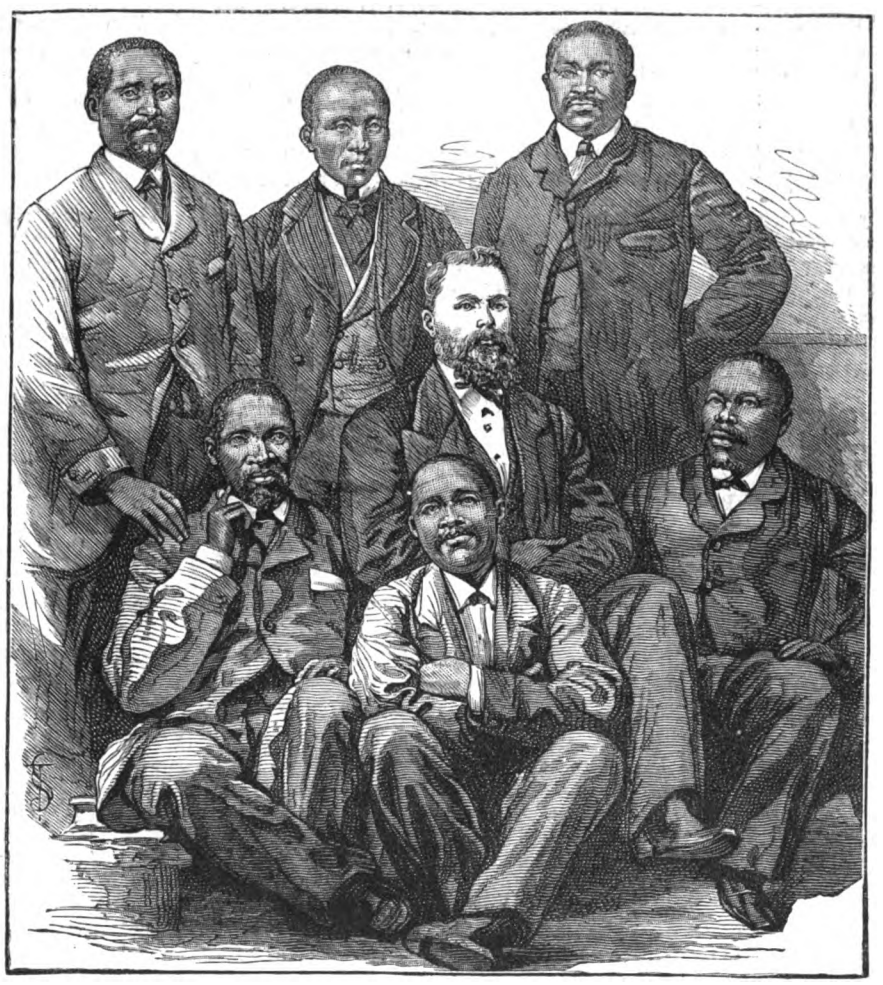


CAPTAIN E. S. GARRATT, 66TH REGIMENT,
KILLED AT THE BATTLE OF MAIWAND.

LIEUTENANT T. R. HENN, ROYAL ENGINEERS,
KILLED AT THE BATTLE OF MAIWAND.

THE LATE SIR THOMAS BOUCH, C.E.
SEE NEXT PAGE.

BOLINGBROKE HOUSE PAY HOSPITAL,
WANDSWORTH COMMON.



LIEUTENANT-COLONEL GALBRAITH, 66TH REGIMENT,
KILLED AT THE BATTLE OF MAIWAND.

The Times of last Monday, by telegraph of the preceding day from Calcutta, gives some passages of General Primrose's despatch to the Indian Government, just now officially published, with particulars of the determined stand made by the 66th at Maiwand. The total numbers of the regiment that day were, with the fighting line, 15 officers, 364 men; with the baggage-guard in the rear, 4 officers, 63 men; with the smooth-bore battery, 1 officer, 42 men; sick, 32 men. Of this number, 275 were killed, while 2 officers and 30 men were wounded. General Primrose notices the manner of the deaths of several officers. Colonel Galbraith was last seen on the nullah bank kneeling on one knee, colour in hand, officers and men rallying round him, and on that spot his body was found. Captain W. Hamilton M'Math, a gallant soldier, fell in the same place; Second-Lieutenant Barr was shot dead over the colours; close by, Captains Garratt and Francis Cullen were killed on the field in front of the nullah, up to the last moment commanding their companies, and giving orders with as much coolness as if on parade. Captain Walter Roberts was mortally wounded in the garden where the last stand was made. There also fell Captain C. V. Oliver, Lieutenants Maurice Rayner, Richard Trevor, Chute, and Honywood. The two last-named officers were seen holding up the colours, the pole of one of which had been shattered to pieces, and Lieutenant Honywood was shot while holding the colours high above his head, shouting to the men, "What shall we do to save this?" Sergeant-Major Cuppage was shot outside the garden while carrying the colours. Many other non-commissioned officers and men died in the attempt to save the colours. There also fell with the band who made the last effort Major Blackwood, R.H.A., and Lieutenant Henn, R.E., whose portrait we have engraved.

BOLINGBROKE HOUSE PAY HOSPITAL.

This institution, on Wandsworth-common, offers to sick persons who are able to pay, wholly or partially, for their support, the advantages of hospital treatment, with the comfort and privacy of home. It has been established by a subscription amounting to £5000. It is not opened as a financial speculation, but to give well-to-do artisans and middle-class people an opportunity of obtaining treatment, during sickness, without that loss of self-respect which must result from their resorting to one of the general hospitals as objects of charity. It is believed that the institution will also be useful in the case of accidents, as it is situated in the centre of a great and growing middle-class population, four miles distant from the nearest general hospitals. The freehold of the house has been purchased, and it has been properly fitted for receiving patients. It is a spacious and conveniently arranged mansion, standing in pleasant grounds, on the verge of Wandsworth-common, within a short distance of Clapham Junction, and therefore easy of access from almost every point. In the house itself baths have been added, and new drainage and other sanitary arrangements have been thoroughly provided. Patients are required to pay weekly, in advance, an agreed fee, in accordance with their position and ability; and to observe all the rules and regulations of the establishment. Members of provident dispensaries or benefit clubs will be received on specially advantageous terms. Personal inquiries should be made at Bolingbroke House; but all written communications are to be addressed to the honorary secretary, Mr. J. S. Wood, at his residence, Woodville, Upper Tooting. The Rev. Canon Erskine Clarke, Vicar of Battersea, is president of the institution.

BASUTO DEPUTATION TO THE CAPE GOVERNMENT.

A BASUTO DEPUTATION IN CAPETOWN.

The Basutos, against whom the Colonial Government of the Cape, disregarding the advice of her Majesty's Government, is now waging war, have been loyal and faithful subjects during thirty years past. They have repeatedly done willing service to British authority in various South African wars, as in the Zulu war, the capture of Secocoeni's stronghold in the Transvaal, and that of Moirosi's mountain fortress in Basuto Land. These people, who are not Kaffirs, but Bechuanas, are superior to all other native African races in their capacity of learning and practising the arts of civilisation; they wear European clothes, build substantial houses, cultivate profitable farms, make good roads, keep horses, send their children to school, support mission chapels, and many of them can read and write. Their principal chief, Letsea, as well as his late father, Moshesh, has always been most friendly to the English, and very docile to their instructions. It is his son, Lethorodi, with his uncle, Masupha, not a convert to Christianity, who has resisted the enforcement of the recent official order that the natives should give up all their firearms—an order which seemed to them particularly harsh when they had just been using those weapons, at their own cost, in the voluntary and unpaid service of the British Government. They believe, indeed, and perhaps with some reason, that it is intended to be preliminary to the confiscation of large tracts of their land for the profit of the colonists.

Digitized by Google

THE RECENT STORMS: WRECK OF A BARQUE AT BALITHAM, NEAR PLYMOUTH.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

A deputation of Basutos was sent to Capetown, some months ago, to entreat the Colonial Government not to insist upon this arbitrary measure, which had been sanctioned by Sir Bartle Frere, but which was afterwards disapproved by the Colonial Office in London. Sir Garnet Wolseley had also warned the Cape Government that it would provoke a fresh native war all over the eastern parts of South Africa; but Mr. Gordon Sprigg, the Prime Minister of the Colony, refused to listen to any remonstrance. It is understood that he has promised not to ask for any military assistance from the Imperial Government. Our Illustration of the Basuto deputies, accompanied by M. Couchette, a French Catholic missionary, acting as their interpreter, is supplied by a photograph taken by Mr. S. B. Barnard, of Capetown.

We have received also the weekly edition of the Cape Argus, published Oct. 12, which is accompanied with a large map, lithographed, of Basuto Land and the adjacent south-eastern territories—namely, East Griqua Land, Tembu Land, the Trans-Kei districts, and Pondo Land, extending to the shores of the Indian Ocean. There is great fear, indeed, that the insurrection so rashly provoked by the Capetown Government will spread over the whole of those populous countries, where Sir Bartle Frere's annexation policy had an apparent temporary success, while it was supported by the presence of a large force of regular troops from England. The Colony has not yet contributed any share of the costs incurred by this country in the Zulu and Transvaal wars, and has rejected all the proposals of confederation for its future defence.

Digitized by Google

The present active warfare is confined to a few places on the border, not of the English settlements, but of the Dutch Orange River Free State, which remains neutral, but allows the passage of English Colonial troops. The stations of Mohali's Hoek, Matefeng, and Maseru, the residences of colonial magistrates appointed to superintend the Basuto tribes, have been the scenes of much sharp fighting, in the past six weeks, but with varying success. The most recent news is of very uncertain purport.

THE LATE SIR THOMAS BOUCH, C.E.

The death of this eminent civil engineer, who had long practised at the head of his profession in Edinburgh, was recorded a few days since, and has called forth some expressions of sympathy. He had gained much distinction by several great works, especially in the construction of the North British Railway; but the disastrous fall of the Tay Bridge at Dundee, to whatever faults—probably not wholly mistakes of the designer—it may be justly ascribed, is thought to have cast a gloom over the end of his career. The Builder has offered some considerate and feeling remarks upon this occasion, from which a sentence or two may here be quoted:—"In this nineteenth-century tragedy we find a General in the army of labour, fighting in a noble cause, who has fallen a victim to the inexorable watchfulness of natural laws that are ever ready to revenge themselves upon mistakes. Let us, then, so think of Sir Thomas Bouch and of the Tay Bridge. He did his best, in circumstances surrounded by trial and difficulty, to make it secure. In his battle with the elements, it was at least his sincere wish to succeed in the interests of progress and civilisation. Even those who were ready to quote the sad death of the sufferers from the accident as a ground for indictment are silenced by the mournful event that has followed. Sir Thomas has died of a broken heart, and gone to join the multitude of labourers whose lives, in the great vortex of modern civilisation, have met with an untimely end. In spite of the sad termination to his career, we can still look back on his previous work and deplore the loss of a great builder."

The Portrait is from a photograph by Mr. J. Moffat, of Prince's-street, Edinburgh.

THE NEW AMERICAN PRESIDENT.

The Republican party having gained the requisite majority of votes in the elections of Nov. 2, by which the delegated electors of all the States, for the purpose of choosing the new President, were themselves chosen, it follows that General Garfield, the Presidential candidate of that party, will come into office, after completing the further electoral formalities, and will be duly installed at Washington in the month of March next year.

James Abram Garfield, lawyer, soldier, member of Congress, and Senator, was born in November, 1831, at a small village called Orange, in the north-eastern part of Cuyahonga county, Ohio, a village at that time of but a few score inhabitants. His parents were only able to provide him with a rudimentary education, and at an early age he commenced life as a day labourer. After following this occupation for some time he became a driver, and then a boatman on the Pennsylvania and Ohio Canal, and in 1849, with the object of improving his education, attended an academy, and studied with such success that the following winter he undertook the teaching of a district school. Several years later he, having in the meantime made much progress, was appointed teacher of languages in the Eclectic Institute at Hiram, Ohio, the following year becoming president of that institution, which office he held till 1861. In the meantime, in 1859, he had been elected a member of the Senate of his native State, and in 1860 was admitted to the Bar. An ardent supporter of the Union, after the War of Secession had commenced he raised, in the autumn of 1861, the 42nd Regiment of Ohio Volunteers, of which he was made Colonel, and dispatched to Eastern Kentucky, where with his own regiment, in conjunction with the 40th Ohio Regiment, he defeated Humphrey Marshall. He was subsequently created a Major-General "for gallant and meritorious services in the battle" (Chickamauga), and with this rank his military career shortly after came to an end. In October, 1862, Mr. Garfield was elected to Congress from the nineteenth district of Ohio, which he has continued to represent till the present time, though at the recent Senatorial election he was returned as a Senator from his native State.

The Portrait of General Garfield is engraved this week for our front page. It is from a photograph with which we have been favoured by Mr. B. E. Huntley, of Chiswell-street, and of Lockport, New York.

AN INCIDENT OF THE LATE SHIPWRECKS.

During the violent storm that raged on the south-west coast, about Plymouth, as well as on the eastern shores of England, on Thursday, the 28th ult., the men of the Coast Guard Service, under command of Captain Ommaney, assisted by Mr. John Hoskins, Mr. Philip Mann, and others, saved many lives of shipwrecked seamen by the use of rockets and lines to help them ashore. A singular and lamentable accident occurred in one of these operations, which is illustrated by the aid of a Sketch we have received from Mr. Frederick Elton, R.N. One of the crew of a barque that got aground at Bulitham, while he was being passed along the rope stretched across from the stranded vessel to the summit of the cliff, where the Coast Guard men were hauling him in, lost his hold of the rope, and fell headlong into the sea, where he instantly perished. Great praise is due to the officers and men of the Coast Guard service at this and other parts of the coast for their indefatigable exertions in the late furious storms to rescue human life.

ROYAL NATIONAL LIFE-BOAT INSTITUTION.

A meeting of this institution was held on the 4th inst. A grant of £1000 was made in aid of the fund for the relief of the widows and orphans of the eleven brave life-boatmen who were lost from the Wells life-boat on the 29th ult. During recent storms the life-boats of the institution have contributed to the saving of 113 lives from different wrecks. On these occasions the boats were manned by 500 persons, without any accident whatever, except that at Wells, notwithstanding that some of the life-boats—like those at Whitby and Scarborough—went out four or five times in succession, while the wind was literally blowing a hurricane, accompanied by mountainous seas. For these and other services rewards amounting to £640 were granted by the institution to the crews.

The second service clasp was also voted to Mr. Henry Freeman, coxswain of the Whitby life-boat, in acknowledgment of his determined conduct in putting off four times on the previous Thursday to the rescue of shipwrecked crews. The silver medal was granted to Mr. N. G. Hatch, chief officer of the ship Berkshire, of London; the thanks of the institution, inscribed on vellum, to Captain Richard Sheris, harbour-master at Falmouth, and £5 10s. to their boat's crews, for saving the master and two of the crew of the brig Marys, of Whitby, which was wrecked on the Black Rock, at the entrance to Falmouth Harbour, during a heavy gale and high sea.

Other rewards were granted to the crews of shore-boats for saving life from wrecks on our coasts. Payments amounting to £1480 were likewise made on some of the 270 life-boat establishments of the institution.

A contribution of £2000 has been received from Mr. Charles Arkcoll, to defray the cost of a life-boat establishment in memory of his late father.

Reports were read from the five district inspectors of life-boats on their recent visits to life-boat stations.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

The racing season is dying very hard, and every available day during the present month is appropriated by one enterprising lessee or another. A very pleasant meeting was held at Brighton last week, and no one felt inclined to grumble at the cold, as the fine bright weather was such a welcome change after the plague of rain from which we have recently suffered. Rhidorroch (8 st. 12 lb.) cut a poor figure in the Autumn Handicap, in spite of having Archer's assistance in the saddle, but the pace was not good enough to allow such a slow, muddling horse to show to any advantage. Wainwright accomplished a wonderfully plucky performance in the Bevindean Nursery Handicap, as, after having a bad fall and dislocating one of his shoulders, he remounted La Paume, and won the race in a canter. Dunmow, who has proved a very disappointing horse this season, managed to come in first for a welter race, and War Paint followed up her Newmarket success by running away with the Bristol Mile Nursery, the unlucky John Ridd adding one more to his long list of seconds. Lewes was also favoured with fine weather, and backers had matters pretty much their own way during the two days of the meeting. The greatly-improved Reefer (8 st. 12 lb.) beat four moderate opponents in the Lewes Autumn Handicap, and Mr. T. V. Morgan, whose colours are so seldom sported now, landed a couple of events on the second day. The Lincoln meeting was, however, about the best of the week. Pelleas (6 st. 4 lb.), who finished fourth in the Cambridgeshire, proved equal to winning the Great Tom Stakes, though the head verdict was only gained after a desperate struggle with Concord (7 st 11 lb). The smart Lizzie Long frightened away nearly all opposition in the Chaplin Stakes, and Madame du Barry easily disposed of her seven opponents in the Queen's Plate, and this is the largest field that has started for one of Her Majesty's gifts during the season. The Worcester Meeting, postponed on account of the floods, was successfully brought off at the end of last week.

A rather tame start was made with the Liverpool Meeting on Tuesday, though some fair sport is promised before the end of the week. Rowlston was not long in getting back the money that was paid for him at the recent sale of Lord Rosebery's horses, and at last Mazurka, who has been very unlucky hitherto, managed to win a good race, in which she conceded 19 lb. to Medina, who came from Ireland with a good reputation, and who also beat Sir Marmaduke out of a place. Thanks mainly to Fordham's brilliant riding, Pride of the Highlands just won the Liverpool Leger, and the great jockey, who only accepted two mounts during the day, was successful on each occasion.

There was an immense attendance at Albert Gate on Monday last, when Messrs. Tattersall disposed of twenty-three horses belonging to the Duke of Westminster. The highest price was realised by the two-year-old Thora (1000 gs.), who has shown pretty good form this season, and, considering the more than doubtful state of her fore-legs, Dourance (800 gs.) did not do badly. Blanton purchased Evasion (750 gs.) for a brood mare, and, oddly enough, Maximilian (410 gs.) made exactly one tenth of the sum that the Duke paid for him as a yearling. If he will only stand training, Muncaster (220 gs.) was the cheapest horse sold during the afternoon, though we believe great things are expected of Peregrine (700 gs.), and Meteora (420 gs.) should also be a profitable purchase.

On Saturday last Elias C. Laycock and J. H. Riley, of Saratoga, sculled over the championship course for £200 a side. Odds of 5 to 2 were freely laid on the former, and we fancy that he had matters pretty much his own way from start to finish. Riley took the lead as soon as the signal was given, and once in the first mile was fully three lengths in front. From the Soapworks to Hammersmith Bridge, however, Laycock gradually got nearer to him, and, as they approached Chiswick Eyot, shot to the front, and sculled the rest of the course at his leisure, eventually winning by three lengths, in 25 min. 4 sec. To-day (Saturday) Laycock will meet John Hawden, of Delaval, over the same course. On Monday, the first match between Trickett and Hanlan for the championship of the world will take place; and, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday next, will be occupied with the decision of the Hop Bitters Regatta.

William Cook and Joseph Bennett played for the championship at Billiards, held by the former, at St. James's Hall, on Monday evening, and, after a most exciting game, the long odds laid on Cook were upset, and Bennett secured the much-coveted title. Cook made one very brilliant break of 107, but we have often seen him play better, and, when it came to a close finish, his nerve appeared to desert him, though at one time his victory looked a certainty, as his score was 938 against Bennett's 864. The latter played a consistently good game throughout. His best break was a finely-played 77; but he never failed to take full advantage of every opportunity, and of the good luck that certainly favoured him, more especially in the earlier part of the match. He really seemed to improve when things were going badly, and, at the most critical part of the game, when all appeared lost, ran up 136 while Cook was making eleven. The champion has already been challenged by Taylor, and we hear that Shorter means to play the winner of that match.

The victory of Rowell in the six days' race at the Agricultural Hall last week was a foregone conclusion at the end of the third day, and, though his score of 566 miles is the best on record, there is no doubt that he could have travelled upwards of 600 miles if necessary. Littlewood was second with 470 miles, and Dobler just completed the 450 miles required to entitle him to participate in a share of the gate money, a very game performance, as he suffered terribly from a swollen knee. The attendance was not very good, and we doubt if American pedestrians will care to visit this country again, as the expenses they necessarily incur are too heavy to make the trip a paying one.

The entries for the forthcoming Cattle Show of the Smithfield Club were tested yesterday week, and have been ascertained to be quite equal in point of numbers to those of last year. The prizes will be of the aggregate value of over £300. The show will be divided into eighty classes.

PARISIAN SAYINGS AND DOINGS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Paris, Tuesday, Nov. 9.

Ah! the strange week that has just passed and the strange revelations! Who would have thought that the peaceful monks, who pass their lives in prayer and works of charity, and their hours of relaxation in manufacturing generous cordials, would have given proof of the possession of military qualities worthy of the Knights of Rhodes and the Templars of old? In the art of fortification, of raising defences, of consolidating doors, and constructing barricades they have displayed qualities of the highest order. In military engineering they have nothing to learn. Indeed, it is to be regretted that in exempting them from military service the State has hitherto deprived them of the opportunity of exercising such rare and precious talents. At Nantes the monks offered a sturdy resistance to the siege laid by the military and the fire brigade; at Tarascon the Prémontrés Fathers stood a siege of four days' duration in their turreted and battlemented abbey of Le Frigolet. The abbey is situated on the crest of a barren and rocky hill, full of ravines. The troops blockaded the fortress-monastery, and it was only yesterday that they took the place by assault and turned out the monks. Thus ended this siege pour rire, to which the clerical journals have attempted to give epic proportions. Thus ends the clerical comedy. The hostilities were begun last Friday all over France, and, except at Tarascon, they were finished between six and nine o'clock in the morning. At Paris, as in the provinces, the monks of the unauthorised congregations, acting at the instigation of the Jesuits and their Legitimist and Reactionary friends, offered a resistance to the officers of the Government, the only object of which was to produce disorder and riot and civil strife. In some of the fanatical provinces of Brittany, La Vendée, and of the South, they succeeded, to a certain extent, in creating disorder, but by no means to such an alarming degree as the clerical journals have tried to make out. At Paris the convents had to be broken into by the firemen with axes and crowbars. A few persons gathered in the streets, uttered seditious cries, and insulted the police. These were invited to repair to the police stations, and on Saturday the Tribunal sentenced them to short terms of imprisonment and fines. It is not my business, as a mere recorder of events, to discuss the policy of the religious decrees or to blame or approve the manner in which they have been carried out. I state the fact that they have been carried out, and at the same time the fact that the incidents attending their execution have been singularly exaggerated, not only by French clerical and party journals, but by the correspondents of English and other foreign journals. This being said, I will ask those who feel strongly on this question of the expulsion of the unauthorised religious congregations to remember that it was by refusing to fulfil a formality of a demand of authorisation, by attempting, in short, to set themselves above the law of the land, that they forced the Government to the necessity of a rigorous application of the religious decrees; that this refusal was prompted by the Ultramontane party; that the absurd resistance of the monks has been organised by the Ultramontane party who took advantage of this opportunity to excite religious passions in the country. The matter is one which must be considered from other points of view than that of mere sentiment.

On Friday last, after a two-days' audience, the Tribunal des Conflits, a Court which decides in matters where the judicial and administrative authorities come into conflict, decided in favour of the Government in the case of legal proceedings instituted by the Jesuits of Lille and Avignon, in consequence of their recent expulsion.

The Senate and the Chamber of Deputies met to-day for the first time after the recess. There was a large attendance. M. Jules Ferry read the declaration of the Government, in the course of which he stated that the Cabinet did not intend to apply the decrees to the congregations of women. Amongst the first laws which the House would have to consider M. Ferry mentioned those relative to education, the reform of the magistrature, and the laws on the press and the right of public meeting. The declaration of the Government was received with applause from the Left, and laughter from the Right, when M. Ferry pronounced the name of liberty. After the reading of this declaration a Parliamentary inquiry into the conduct of General Cissy while Minister of War was called for, and urgency was demanded for the motion. This was opposed by the Government, but they were defeated by 263 to 108. The settling of the business on the paper was then looked on as a test vote of confidence, and on this Ministers were outvoted by 200 to 166. After this double defeat M. Jules Ferry went to the Elysée, and for himself and colleagues tendered their resignations. M. Grévy, however, begged them to reconsider their decision. And thus the matter stands.

The civil marriage of Prince Roland Bonaparte and Mdlle. Marie Félix Blanc, daughter of Monaco Blanc, took place last Saturday at the Mairie of Saint Germain l'Auxerrois. Prince Roland is the son of Prince Pierre Bonaparte, who, by the way, is on the brink of the grave.

Last Thursday the Tribunal confirmed the judgment condemning Félix Pyat to 1000f. fine and two years imprisonment on account of the Berezowski subscription. Félix Pyat did not appear to support his appeal. The Commune has ceased to appear, the sleeping partner having withdrawn the caution money, and all the staff have passed over to the Marseillaise. And now Félix Pyat has retired to Brussels, where he can scoff with impunity at the threats of an oppressing power.

Madame Edmond Adam, a lovely and opulent blue-stocking, whose main object in life is to get herself talked about in the newspapers, intends this winter to make her salon a rival of the Salle des Conférences. Next Sunday a gentleman will deliver there a lecture on the Japanese Stage, and another gentleman will illustrate it simultaneously on the black-board. The critics are invited, and Madame Adam expects the feuilletonistes to notice her entertainments in the newspapers of the following morning. I notice this instance of thirst for publicity as a sign of the times. It was in Madame Adam's salon that M. Déroulède's "Moabite" was read. This play is to be produced at Brussels. Erckmann-Chatrian's prohibited piece, "Les Fiancés," will also be produced at Brussels. The events of the theatrical season in store are, at the Français, a three-act comedy by Dumas the younger, called "Lionette," the rehearsals of which will begin next week, and at the Odéon a piece by Alphonse Daudet, taken from his novel "Jack."

This morning Louise Michel, the Communist, arrived at the Gare Saint Lazare from New Caledonia, viâ London and Newhaven. Some five thousand people collected round the station to receive her. Amongst the number were MM. Louis Blanc, Clémenceau, Rochefort, Alphonse Humbert, Tony Révellon, and a large number of amnistiés and deputations from Socialist societies and clubs. MM. Humbert and Cypriani were arrested and sent to the dépôt for insulting the police and trying to force their way into the railway station.

T. C.

Digitized by Google

THE PLAYHOUSES.

The new Princess's Theatre, under the management of Mr. Walter Gooch, opened on Saturday night last with the tragedy of "Hamlet," the part of the Prince of Denmark being performed by the famous American tragedian Mr. Edwin Booth, of whom his countrymen are justly much prouder than in the last generation they were proud of Edwin Forrest, a vigorous but too vociferous actor, and altogether more of the strongly emphasised type of Gustavus V. Brooke than the more refined and subdued one of Macready and Charles Kean. Comparisons may be odious; but I must venture upon one when I say that Mr. Edwin Booth in Hamlet, while he is diametrically the opposite to such ranting tragedians as Forrest and G. V. Brooke, reminded me far less either of Macready or of Charles Kean than of another actor upon whom, I daresay, Mr. Edwin Booth never set eyes, but whom his father must have known very well. I mean the late Charles Mayne Young. Lest when I make this statement my readers should be induced to think that my years are those of Old Parr, I may be allowed to explain that Mr. Young retired from the stage, with a competent fortune, at a comparatively early age; that he survived his retirement and was a brilliant ornament to society for many years, and that he was an intimate friend of my family. I have read to him, under his guidance and correction, such "pieces" from the "Speaker" as "Cicero against Verres" and "Chatham against the employment of Indians in the American War" over and over again; and I have repeatedly listened—with rapt ears—to the Shakespearean readings with which he occasionally favoured private society. It was in "Coriolanus" and in "Hamlet" that I was most especially struck by the exquisite accuracy of his delivery, the sonorousness of his periods, and the purity and sweetness of his intonation. Curiously, when he was not reciting blank verse, his pronunciation was marked by a slight lisp—just as that of Charles Dickens was; but when he was on the stage, or reading, this lisp entirely disappeared—or, in greater probability, seemed to disappear. The whole time that Mr. Edwin Booth was on the stage at the Princess's on Saturday night the tall lithe form of Charles Mayne Young seemed, to my mind's eye, to stand by the figure of the American tragedian.

The performance, from a popular point of view, was a most brilliant success. The pit and gallery, who seemed to have their Shakspeare by heart and to love him as heartily as the French working classes used to love their Béranger, listened to Mr. Edwin Booth with almost religious attention, judiciously refraining from applauding him at inopportune moments; but when the right time came they launched upon him a perfect torrent of enthusiastic cheers. For such enthusiasm—enhanced, as it was, by repeated calls for Mr. Booth before the curtain—there were, I take it, two very good and sufficient reasons. In the first place, Mr. Booth, albeit of old English parentage, is an American citizen, and in that capacity he was certain of a hearty welcome from an English audience. We have thus welcomed half a dozen first-rate Transatlantic actors and actresses during the past season, and we are prepared to welcome others. The more of them the merrier; and confusion catch the malevolent creatures on either side the "big pond" who would insinuate that there now remains the slightest tinge of animosity or jealousy on the part of John Bull towards his American cousins. In the next place, Mr. Edwin Booth gives us a Hamlet that can be thoroughly "understanded of the people." That people like to hear all and every one of Hamlet's "lines," be they broad or be they narrow, because they are Shakspeare's. They listened patiently to the long-drawn scene, so frequently omitted, of Claudius's tardy but prayerful remorse, and Hamlet's curious desisting from slaying him, because just then he is in a fit and proper state to go to his Account—one of the most extraordinary imaginings of purely revengeful feeling that, perhaps, ever crossed a poet's brain; and their patience was simply due to their Shakspearean loyalty. And so it was from first to last. They let no word of Mr. Edwin Booth escape appreciation; and he gave them not one clipped sentence: not one slurred or enervated line. His performance of Hamlet was throughout a triumph of refined and scholar-like elocution, of the very highest kind.

But, as a work of picturesque art, the triumph was not so complete. There were critics (I do not mean professional ones) present who thought Mr. Booth's elocution generally too sententious and too didactic. His gesticulation in soliloquies seemed too monotonous, consisting usually in an upturning of the head and an upcasting of the hands in the attitude described by Virgil as that of Æneas in the storm, and known to critics of antique sculpture as the "attitude of Adoration." His action, again, in combination with the other characters, was so precise and measured as to resemble that of clockwork. He moved hither and thither, appeared and reappeared at different entrances with the mechanical exactitude of the figures of Saints and Apostles on the dial of a mediæval clock. In brief, I may say that I never wish to hear the "To Be or Not to Be" more finely recited. The "Get Thee to a Nunnery" scene with Ophelia was exceedingly tender and natural. The action in the play-scene, on Mr. Booth's part, was deficient in physique; but he was superb in the Closet scene. All his scenes with the Ghost were good. In the churchyard scene, he was at first somewhat unimpressive; but from the point "'Tis I, Hamlet the Dane!" he was grandly forcible. The fencing scene was poor; and he did not make a very good end of it. I went away with the conviction that I had seen a very conscientious, a very refined, a very appreciative, but a somewhat old-fashioned Hamlet:—strong in all the dignified parts of the character, but weak in the interpretation of eccentricity, and especially of sarcastic humour. The badinage with Polonius went for nothing.

Mr. Swinbourne was a respectable and experienced Claudius; and Mr. John Ryder as the Ghost did excellently well what, probably, he has done as excellently many hundreds of times before. Excepting the Queen and Ophelia, Mr. Ryder, in his time, must have sustained every part in the tragedy, from the Prince of Denmark and Horatio to Rosencrantz and Guildenstern and both the Gravediggers. Mr. Beauchamp was a manly Horatio; but Mr. William Farren, with his ringing, clear-cut enunciation, was scarcely senile enough as Polonius. He was white-bearded and yet too rabid in manner. Mr. Leathes' Laertes was, in parts, unpleasant. His manner towards Ophelia was more that of a lover than a brother; but this subsequently was atoned for by his very dramatic acting in the fourth and fifth acts. Mrs. Hermann Vezin played the Queen superbly; and Miss Gerard as Ophelia, who was somewhat staid and unimpassioned in the earlier scenes, awakened genuine enthusiasm by her splendid acting in the mad-scene. The tragedy was excellently mounted, and the stage management was perfect.

If continuous and clamorous cachinnation and boisterous applause from a crowded audience are to be considered as the criterion of a theatrical success, then "Billee Taylor," a new and original nautical comic opera, in two acts, the libretto written by Mr. H. Pottinger Stevens, and music composed by Mr. Edward Solomon, which was recently produced at the Imperial Theatre, must be pronounced completely and legitimately successful. With the old ballad of "Billy Taylor," which the late George Daniell asserted to have been written by Richard Brinsley Sheridan (although there is no trustworthy evidence to fix the authorship on the writer of the "School for Scandal)" Mr. H. P. Stevens has taken considerable liberties—not greater, however, than were taken by Mr. J. B. Buckstone in the burlesque-extravaganza more than half a century since, and by my brother and myself in our pantomime at the Princess's nearly thirty years ago. William Taylor is common property, like Don Juan and Doctor Faustus. There has even been a "Military Billy Taylor," a burlesque by Mr. Burnand.

At the Imperial, Taylor is a virtuous gardener and a hypocritical sneak. Phœbe is a beauteous, demure, and artful charity girl, not averse from having two strings to her bow or two beaux to her string. In due time, just before his projected marriage with Phœbe, the "maiden fair and free," who has been brought up at St. Vitus's charity school, is duly seized, at the instigation of a villainous schoolmaster named Crab (who stalks through the South Coast brandishing a monstrous birch rod), by a press-gang commanded by a bluff boatswain named Ben Barnacle. Phœbe assumes male attire, and follows her affianced not to sea, but to the jetty at Portsmouth, "under the name of Richard Carr;" while Miss Arabella Lane, daughter of Sir Mincing Lane, a "self-made man," who has long been enamoured of Taylor, and has not scrupled to apprise him of the circumstance in approved Leap-Year fashion, accompanies him to the naval rendezvous and becomes the "lady gay" with whom the culpable Taylor is dancing "so early in the morning," when the betrayed and exasperated Phœbe, alias Richard Carr, calls for "sword and pistol," which come "straight at her command," and forthwith "shoots her Billy Taylor, with his lady in his hand." He comes to life again; and, it being discovered that he is a rank coward, who has behaved shamefully in action, he is degraded from the rank to which, with surprising rapidity, he has been promoted, and the lovely Phœbe, alias Richard Carr, is appointed by Captain the Hon. Felix Flapper, R.N. (who is a gallant gay Lothario, and has been making love to the ladies all round) to be first lieutenant of "the Gallant Thunderbomb."

Mr. Edward Solomon's music is light, sparkling, and joyous. It is not suggestive of plagiarism; but it is equally unsuggestive of original invention of the tuneful sort. There was a French photographer once who advertised a portrait at fifteen francs as a "ressemblance garantie;" one at ten francs as a "ressemblance respectable;" and one at five francs as possessing an air de famille. Mr. Edward Solomon's lyrical numbers have a "family likeness" to the productions of several composers whose names it would be invidious to mention. But he is a young maestro; and when Rafaelle was young he imitated Perugino; even as his pupil, the youthful Giulio Romano imitated Rafaelle. Mr. Solomon's instrumentation is very skilful and varied. He should try to cultivate the art, if he be not naturally endowed with the gift of melody. Miss Kathleen Corri made a very sprightly Phœbe. She has a fresh young voice, but it was too severely taxed by the vasty proscenium and rumbling auditorium of the theatre, which is more suitable for the performance of an oratorio than of an opera bouffe. Miss Emma Chambers was really very fascinating as Arabella Lane, and sang the numbers apportioned to her with much taste, purity, and spirit; and the by-play of Miss Harriet Coveney as Eliza Dabsey, an old inamorata of Mr. Boatswain Barnacle, was admirable. Mr. Fleming Norton as Captain Flapper was painstaking, but scarcely droll; and Mr. Frederick Rivers was altogether too cold and demure both as an actor and a vocalist, as Billee Taylor. Mr. J. D. Stoyle was a very gruff boatswain, and sang a very gruff song with a very shrill chorus, to the refrain of "All on account of Eliza." Christopher Crab, the villainous schoolmaster with the monstrous birch, found an adequate representative in Mr. F. A. Arnold; and Mr. Arthur Williams was amusing as Sir Mincing Lane, the "self-made man." A capital chorus and dance of charity girls, in the first act, was deservedly encored.

Douglas Jerrold's veritable drama of "Black-Eyed Susan; or, All in the Downs," and Carey's quaint old burlesque of "Chrononhotonthologos," were reproduced at the Gaiety on Wednesday; but, as that happens to be the day when, in the interests of journalism, I am at my desk from eight in the morning until eight in the evening (no intervals for refreshment. You can lunch very well from a chair at your side; only be careful not to put the sandwiches in the inkstand, nor to dip your pen in your coffee-cup), I was unable to attend the performance at the Gaiety, which was an afternoon one. We shall have forenoon performances some of these days, or daybreak ones.

I read in, and am glad to extract the following from, the World:—

> Miss Eva Sothern, the young and pretty daughter of the well-known actor, who is to make her début at Mr. Colman's benefit at the Gaiety, is a ward of the Court of Chancery, and an application is now pending before the Master of the Rolls for his sanction to allow the young lady, who is scarcely eighteen, to follow the profession of an actress. I understand that her guardians offer no opposition to her strongly-expressed desire to do so.

Miss Eva Sothern will, I understand, have a fellow débutant in the person of a son of Mr. Dion Boucicault. The conjunction of two such bright stars in the Zodiacal House of Hollingshead should be pleasant to the paternal planets. What saith Zadkiel?

MUSIC.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

The specialty of last week was the début of Madame Giannoni Zacchi, which occurred too late for notice until now. The lady just named made her first appearance in England on Thursday week as Valentina in "Les Huguenots," and met with a deservedly favourable reception. She is an experienced actress, as was specially proved in the conspiracy scene and the following great duet with Raoul, with which fine climax the opera now generally terminates. Her voice is a genuine soprano, of considerable power, and reaching to C in alt. In the duet with Marcello, in the scene of the Pré aux Clercs, and particularly in the final scene with Raoul, Madame Zacchi sang with great effect, both in the pathetic and the declamatory passages; and the impression produced was such as to promise a competent representative, both vocally and dramatically, of characters in romantic and tragic opera which have scarcely been adequately filled since the death of Mdlle. Titiens. The next part assigned to Madame Zacchi was Lucrezia Borgia, on Thursday. In the performance of "Les Huguenots," just referred to, Mdlle. Bressolles sang the florid music of Margherita di Valois with much fluent grace, the co-operation of Madame Trebelli, as the Page, Urbano, having been, as often before, a valuable feature in the cast. Signor Vizzani, as Raoul, made his best effect in the great duet with Valentina, some passages in which he gave with earnest expression and powerful declamation. Signori Antonucci, Bonetti, and Quintili-Leoni were, respectively, the representatives of Marcello and the Counts di Never and San Bris.

On the following evening Signor Manfrini made his first appearance in England as Fernando in "La Favorita," the cast of which was otherwise the same as recently. The new tenor gave some signs of vocal merit, but was so evidently under the influence of indisposition and fatigue (having been travelling from Italy until within a few hours of his appearance), that fresh opportunity must be awaited for judging of his powers.

Mdlle. Rosina Isidor made her fourth appearance here on Saturday; and, in another character, still further improved in the success which she at once made in her first performance a fortnight before. The opera was "La Traviata," and the lady's singing and acting as Violetta were distinguished by special grace and refinement. In the opening "Brindisi" the following scena, "Ah! fors' è lui," in the duets with Alfredo and his father, Mdlle. Isidor produced a very marked impression, which was quite sustained by her rendering of the music of the final dying scene, in which quiet pathos and subdued anguish were admirably realised, with an avoidance of exaggeration which is not always the case in this situation. Signor Aldighieri was the elder Germont, and his performance—vocal and dramatic—was even better than in his first appearance here as Rigoletto, successful as that was. His impressive acting, his fine voice, and cultivated style were displayed with special success.

This week's announcements included Madame Zacchi's appearance as Lucrezia on Thursday, "Il Barbiere di Siviglia" yesterday (Friday); "Il Trovatore" being promised for this (Saturday) evening, with Madame Zacchi as Leonora.

THE MONDAY POPULAR CONCERTS.

The twenty-third season of these excellent performances opened this week, with a programme of strong and varied interest. The concert began with Mozart's serenade in E flat, for two oboes, two clarionets, two horns, and two bassoons, given for the first time here, and admirably played by Messrs. Dubmecq, Horton, Lazarus, Egerton, Mann, Standen, Wotton, and Haveron. Mendelssohn's variations in E flat, for pianoforte solo, and the same composer's cappriccio in E minor—in answer to an encore—were finely rendered by Mdlle. Janotha, who was associated with Mr. Lazarus and Signor Piatti in Beethoven's Trio in B flat, op. 11. Madame Koch-Bossenberger produced a marked impression by her brilliant delivery of Mozart's aria, "Ach! ich liebte," from "Die Entführung," and her singing in the same composer's song, "Das Veilchen" and Rubinstein's "Es blinkt der Thau." Mr. Zerbini was an efficient accompanist of the vocal music, and of Locatelli's sonata in D, for violoncello, the solo portion of which was admirably played by Signor Piatti. The first of the afternoon performances takes place to-day (Saturday).

The first of a series of Wednesday evening Popular Concerts—organised by Messrs. J. B. Cramer and Co.—took place this week in the new Townhall, Kensington. Attractive programmes, well rendered, and moderate prices of admission, can scarcely fail to realise success in so large a suburban quarter. The music at the first concert consisted of three divisions—classical, ballad, and operatic.

We have already given an outline of the arrangements for the tenth season of the Royal Albert Hall Choral Society, which opened on Thursday evening, again under the direction of Mr. Barnby. Handel's "Judas Maccabæus" was performed with the orchestral effects reinforced by the band of the Coldstream Guards. The solo singers announced were Miss A. Williams, Miss M. Williams, Madame M. Cummings, Mr. E. Lloyd, Mr. T. Hanson, and Signor Foli. Dr. Stainer continues his co-operation as organist.

This (Saturday) evening the first of a series of four weekly concerts will take place at St. James's Hall, conducted by Mr. F. H. Cowen. The programmes will include several important new instrumental works by English composers; and during the series some eminent solo vocalists and instrumentalists will appear. Of the first concert we shall have to speak next week.

Mr. Samuel Hayes's Promenade Concerts at Covent Garden Theatre closed on Saturday evening, when the programme included a selection from the popular songs of Henry Russell. Among the recent specialties at these concerts was a Balfe night, when some interesting music by that eminent composer was given, comprising pieces from two of his many successful operas, "Satanella" and "The Enchantress," the overture to the latter having been re-scored by Balfe since its production at Drury Lane Theatre, nearly thirty-five years ago.

The Brixton Choral Society, conducted by Mr. W. Lemare, gave a performance of Haydn's "Creation" on Monday evening. The principal vocalists announced were Madame Clara Suter, Mr. Dudley Thomas, and Mr. Thurley Beale.

Mr. Sims Reeves, whose retirement from public life as an artist is to take place in 1882, writes that as some little testimony of gratitude for the unfailing kindness of the public in the past, and as a humble token to promote the true interests of British art, he would gladly devote some three or four hours daily to the work of vocal instructor at the projected Royal College of Music. He entirely repudiates the notion of there being any want of natural musical ability on the part of Englishmen and Englishwomen, and says that in no country, save perhaps Italy, are children gifted with sweeter voices or a better ear.

Mr. Ernst Pauer began a course of six lectures on the History of Pianoforte-playing in the lecture theatre, South Kensington Museum, yesterday (Friday) afternoon. His next lecture (on Mozart, Clementi, and John Field) will take place on Friday, the 19th inst.

The English version of "Les Mousquetaires," recently brought out at the Globe Theatre, is really an opéra-bouffe, as the piece was originally entitled on its production at the Bouffes Parisiens (in March). Its English adaptation has been made by Mr. H. Farnie. The adventures of two military officers disguising themselves as monks and entering a convent to rescue two young ladies (with whom they are in love) from becoming nuns, with comic incidents resulting therefrom, form the basis of a piece, written by MM. Prevel and Frevier, having much analogy with burlesque. The music, like the drama, is a joint production—MM. Varney and Mansour—none of these names being as yet familiar here. There is nothing calling for critical comment in a musical sense; the style, although lively, not being marked by any distinguishing individuality. The co-operation of so good an artist as Mr. F. H. Celli, as Captain Brissac, is an important feature in the cast, which includes Miss Alice May, Mesdames M. Davis, E. Moore, K. Aubrey, Graham, and Sylvia; Mr. Harry Paulton, and Messrs. C. Ashford, M. Marchant, J. Vivian, &c. The burlesque is admirably placed on the stage, and is proving attractive.

Digitized by Google

"DOT," AT THE FOLLY THEATRE.

